United Nations A/HRC/24/42/Add.1

Distr.: General 30 July 2013

Original: English

Human Rights Council

Twenty-fourth session Agenda item 3 Promotion and protection of all human rights, civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, including the right to development

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the promotion of truth, justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence, Pablo de Greiff

Addendum

Mission to Tunisia (11–16 November 2012)*

Summary

Since January 2011, Tunisia has rapidly undertaken a multiplicity of transitional justice initiatives, mainly related to truth-seeking and reparations. While successive Governments have commendably striven to respond expeditiously to emerging claims from victims, there is an urgent need to place the largely unrelated and ad hoc measures taken to date in a comprehensive framework.

The transitional justice measures adopted in Tunisia have been mainly designed with an "event-based" or "period-based" approach, which has led to the creation of different categories of victims of past gross human rights violations and, as a result, to a serious fragmentation among those groups, as well as within society itself. The central means to reversing this trend consists in the adoption of a human rights perspective that treats gross violations of certain types of rights as the sole factor giving access to redress and other transitional justice measures, regardless of the event or period when the violation occurred, the cause to which the victims may have adhered or the group to which the victim belongs.

With human rights at the core of the transitional justice agenda, more headway needs to be made urgently in the areas of guarantees of non-recurrence and prosecutions. The establishment of effective institutions, mechanisms and procedures is central to the prevention of the recurrence of similar gross human rights violations. This chiefly includes legal,

Please recycle

^{*} The summary of the present report is circulated in all official languages. The report, which is annexed to the summary, is circulated in the language of submission, Arabic and French only.

institutional and personnel reforms in the crucial areas of justice and security. Lack of reform in these areas coupled with the persisting failure to bring alleged perpetrators of gross violation to justice might in the long term lead to a situation where trust of the population in State institutions is virtually impossible to re-establish.

Prosecutions and trials, besides aiming at establishing a chain of command leading up to the actual gross violation, should abide by international human rights standards and allow for effective victim participation. Only transitional justice measures that are designed and implemented in a manner compliant with the rule of law and centred on the notion of human rights will be sustainable and effective in enhancing and protecting human rights, reversing the fragmentation process and furthering reconciliation as a final objective.

Annex

[Arabic, English and French only]

Report of the Special Rapporteur on the promotion of truth, justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence (11–16 November 2012)

□ontents

			Paragraphs	Page
	ntr	oduction
	□or	te□t of the visit
	\Box .	Political conte ☐t
	□.	□ontinuing and new human rights obligations
	□no	lerlying challenges to the transitional justice process
	□.	Proliferation of event-based redress initiatives and the displacement of human rights
	\Box .	Privileging financial compensation
	□.	□he continuing challenges of inclusiveness
	□.	□chieving a comprehensive transitional justice strategy through a truth commission
	\Box .	□neven prosecutions and concerns about the use of military justice
	Д	Insufficient progress in guarantees of non-recurrence
	\Box .	□ational collaboration and international coordination
\square .	□or	clusions and recommendations
	\Box .	□onclusions
	□.	□ecommendations.

I. Introduction

□ Pursuant to □uman □ights □ouncil resolution □□□, the Special □apporteur on the promotion of truth, justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence, Pablo de □reiff, conducted an official visit to □unisia from □□ to □□ovember □□□, at the invitation of the □overnment.
□ he purpose of the visit was to assess the measures taken by the □overnment in the areas of truth-seeking, justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence, and to advise the authorities and society on finding sustainable ways in the process of transitioning to an order based on the rule of law.
□ □ uring his visit, the Special □ apporteur met with the □ inister for □ uman □ ights and □ ransitional □ ustice, the □ inister for □ ustice, the □ eputy Secretary of State of the □ inistry of □ inance, the □ eputy □ hief of □ abinet at the □ inistry of □ oreign □ ffairs and the □ ights and Liberties □ ommission of the □ ational □ onstituent □ ssembly. □ e also held meetings with the □ ourt of □ assation and the □ irectorate of □ ilitary □ ustice. □ hile in □ unis, he conducted meetings with the □ echnical □ ommittee on □ ransitional □ ustice, the □ ational □ act-□ inding □ ommission and the □ ational □ ommission of □ investigation on □ orruption and □ mbe □ lement. □ e also travelled to Sidi □ ou □ d, where he met the □ overnor and the chiefs of police and of the national guard. □ □ afsa, the Special □ apporteur met with the □ egional □ echnical Subcommittee on □ ransitional □ ustice. □ uring his mission, he met with a large number of victims and a wide range of civil society and professional associations in □ unis, Sidi □ ou □ d and □ edeyef. □ e also held meetings with the □ nited □ ations country team and the diplomatic corps. □ e thanks everyone who shared their valuable and important e □ periences and insights.
□ □ he Special □apporteur thanks the □overnment for the invitation and the cooperation e tended to him throughout his visit. □ e also e □ presses his appreciation to the Office of the □nited □ations □igh □ ommissioner for □ uman □ights □ □ □ □ □ □ □ unisia for its support in the preparation of and during the visit.

II. Context of the visit

A. Political context

□ □ collowing the events that occurred between □ □ ecember □ □ and □ □ anuary □ and the fall of President □ en □ li, □ unisia was ruled by successive interim □ overnments until the political party □ nnahda formed a ruling coalition with two other parties □ known as the □ troika □ following the elections held on □ October □ □ □
\square he Special \square apporteur conducted his visit at a critical time, when the constitutional drafting process by the \square ational \square onstituent \square ssembly was under way and the country was in the midst of efforts to move from a regime marred by repression and corruption to a society based on the rule of law. \square ork on a bill on transitional justice had progressed to a point that the technical committee of the recently established \square inistry of \square uman \square ights and \square ransitional \square ustice had already produced a first version. On \square \square anuary \square the bill was submitted by the \square inistry to the \square ational \square onstituent \square ssembly.
□ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □

□oreign □ffairs. В. Continuing and new human rights obligations Prior to the uprising, Dunisia was party to the International Dovenant on Divil and Political □ights, the International □ovenant on □conomic, Social and □ultural □ights, the □onvention against □orture and Other □ruel, Thuman or □egrading □reatment or Punishment, the International Donvention on the Dimination of Dll Dorms of Dacial □iscrimination, the □onvention on the □ights of the □hild and the two Optional Protocols thereto, the □onvention on the □limination of □ll □orms of □iscrimination against □ omen and the Optional Protocol thereto, and the □onvention on the □ights of Persons with □isabilities and the Optional Protocol thereto. □ollowing the ousting of President □en □li, □unisia acceded to the Optional Protocol to Donvention against Dorture, the first Optional Protocol to the International □ovenant on □ivil and Political □ights, and the International □onvention for the Protection of \square ll Persons from \square nforced \square isappearance. \square October \square the \square overnment issued a decree withdrawing all previous reservations made with regard to the □onvention on the □limination of □ll □orms of □iscrimination against □ omen. □he State also ratified the □ome Statute of the International □riminal □ourt. III. Underlying challenges to the transitional justice process Proliferation of event-based redress initiatives and the displacement of human rights Since anuary unisia has rapidly undertaken a multiplicity of transitional justice initiatives, mainly related to truth-seeking and reparations. Such initiatives are interpreted by the Special Dapporteur as a commendable indication of the interest on the part of the \(\subseteq \) overnment and of the determination of civil society to take seriously the issues of concern to his mandate. □ central characteristic shared by all the initiatives is that they are designed around specific events or periods of time rather than on types of human rights violations. In the present report, the Special □apporteur will elaborate on the significance of this choice. National Fact-Finding Commission One of the first initiatives was the establishment in \(\text{per} bruary \) \(\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\tinx}\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\tinx}\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\tinx}\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\ti}\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\texi}\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\text{\texi}\text{\text{\texi}\text{\texitil{\tex{\texitil{\text{\texi}\text{\text{\text{\tiintert{\texicl{\tiint □act-□inding □ommission. □he □ommission was mandated by decree-law □□□□□ to investigate abuses and violations that occurred in the period of uecember until the accomplishment of the ommission objectives. The ommission hairman was appointed by decree, and he in turn selected the other \square \square ommission members from among independent competent national personalities, including nine women, following consultations with civil society. □he □ommission did not dispose of subpoena or sei □ure powers, but gathered information by means of interviews with families of those deceased during the period under investigation and with injured persons in all regions of the country. It also paid in situ visits to venues where the alleged violations had been committed. In addition, the □ommission visited the general prosecutor's office, military courts and various administrative services. If also conducted interviews with physicians at hospitals and visited prisons.

affiliation to the posts of the Dinister for Dustice, for the Interior, for Defence and for □ □ hile struggling with the lack of precise regulations regarding the procedures to be employed, the unclear time frame of the mandate and insufficient financial means to accomplish its objectives, the □ommission contributed significantly to the ongoing truth-seeking process. □he report of the □ommission, □ issued in □ ay □□□ and more than □□□ pages long, documented □□□ deaths and the wounding of □□□□ people during the period from □□□ ecember □□□□ to □□ October □□□□, and affirmed that □□□ persons had been killed and □□□ injured in the period between □□□ ecember □□□□ and □□□ anuary □□□□ □ he names of the deceased or injured victims were listed in the anne□to the report. □ccording to the □ommission, □□ per cent of those killed had died from gunshot wounds. □n addition, it found that □□ per cent of fatalities and □□ per cent of those injured were younger than □□ years of age, and that □□ per cent of all victims were male. □n its report, the □ommission indicated that institutional responsibilities for the violence lay with the Presidency and the □ inistries of the □nterior, □efence, □ealth and □ommunication. □f also found that police forces appeared to have been responsible for □□ per cent of the violations between □□ □ ecember □□□ and □□ □ anuary □□□ investigated by the □ommission. □fter that date, the military, having assumed some internal order functions, was considered responsible for □□ per cent of violations.

☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐
□□ □ n the discussion with the Special □apporteur, the members of the □ommission indicated that they had not been informed about the steps that the □overnment had taken following the submission of the □ommission report, and how the □ommission work would feed, or has fed, into any official actions taken. □he □ommission noted the discrepancy between the numbers of victims listed in the anne□to the report and the lists of victims drawn up by other entities. Some members pointed to the deteriorating situation of a large number of victims owing to the absence of official rehabilitation programmes, and noted that assistance was mainly provided by private associations. Specifically, the members mentioned the concern to reintegrate victims into society, which they considered particularly important given that the majority of the victims were under □ years of age. □earing in mind the wealth of information accumulated by the □ommission, the Special □apporteur finds it disappointing that the □ommission seems not to have been involved in discussions on the overall transitional justice strategy.
Reparation and amnesty for former political prisoners
On pebruary pitch the first interim povernment issued a decree-law granting amnesty to more than political prisoners of the former regime, most of whom had been convicted or were facing charges under the counter-terrorism law. Tricle of the decree-law stipulated that all those concerned by the amnesty also had a right to be reintegrated into their previous employment and could request reparation. hile prisoners have been released and some of them reintegrated, lack of action on reparation has led to protests and discontent.
□vailable in □rabic from www.tunisienumeri □ue.com wp-content □uploads □□□PPO□□-□□□□□□□□pdf.

2.

3.	Financial compensation for victims of the revolution
	ccording to the information received, the interim authorities governing until October provided relatives of those killed during the uprising with financial compensation of two instalments of purpose unisian provided relatives of those killed during the uprising with financial compensation of two instalments of purpose and pecember provided respectively. The persons received two instalments of purpose unisian provided in appears, however, that no clear criteria were defined to determine who had been injured as a result of expressive use of force by the State. Furthermore, the beneficiaries seem to have not been informed about the rationale for and amount of compensation. The Special provided requirements of purpose and revelation of the truth others are still waiting to receive the compensation promised.
4.	Reparation for "martyrs" and their families
	On □ October □□□, decree law □o. □ on reparation for the families of the martyrs□ and wounded persons of the revolution was promulgated. □ artyrs□ were defined as □persons who risked their lives for the revolution, died or were victims of physical harm causing them an infirmity, during the period e□tending from □□ □ ceember □□□ to □□ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □
	□ □ he decree-law provided for compensatory measures for victims and families of martyrs, including a monthly pension, free medical care in public hospitals and free public transport. □ hile free medical care in public hospitals was offered, the injuries of some victims re uipment and or treatment that the public facilities did not have or could provide. □ ccording to the information received, medical care did not e tend to psychosocial treatment.
	Other measures contained in the decree-law were of symbolic character, such as the construction of a monument paying homage to the martyrs and other victims of the revolution, the establishment of a museum for the preservation of national memory, the naming of streets and public scuares after martyrs and the annual celebration of the anniversary of the revolution. The decree-law also provides for the incorporation of a chapter on the struggle of human rights defenders during the revolution in school programmes. This hile the renaming of places and streets seems to be ongoing, the Special apporteur was not able to ascertain the progress made in relation to changes made to curricula in public education.
5.	Displacement of a human rights-based approach and social fragmentation
	□ □ he measures mentioned were initiated in an ad hoc manner and designed to provide redress to victims of specific events or periods of time. □ hile the Special □apporteur commends the willingness of the □overnment to undertake such initiatives, an □event-based□approach inevitably has serious conse□uences, the main one being that it gives rise, by its very nature, to different categories of victims and, ultimately, that it both manifests and results in the displacement of the notion of human rights. □ ith an event-based approach, access to the various initiatives for redress is triggered not by rights but by affiliation or some other reason, thereby defeating one of the fundamental aims of transitional justice measures, which is to strengthen human rights regimes.

^{□ □□□□□□ □.□□□□□□,} paras. □-□□

□ □ he measures taken to date have come with conditions, being associated with a specific event or period of time. □ ith no such affiliation, no redress is available. □his concern was specifically raised in meetings that the Special □apporteur held with victims and civil society in the region of □afsa, and particularly in □edeyef, where an uprising in □□□□ led to gross human rights violations that, at the time of the visit, remained unaddressed, given that these events were not on the list of events covered by a specific initiative. Since then, access to some of the measures has been granted to some of these victims through their integration into an initiative covering another event. □he disparities in treatment for victims, however, only highlight the complications engendered by the event-based approach.
□□ □he Special □apporteur stresses that, from a human rights standpoint, the violation of a right is a proper and sufficient reason to establish and secure access to redress mechanisms, including truth, justice, reparations and guarantees of non-recurrence. In this connection, he e□presses the hope that the centrality of the category of □martyrs□ in discussions about transitional justice in □unisia does not obscure the fact that considerations such as the antecedent behaviour of the victim, desert or the identity of the perpetrator are not relevant when justifying the provision of redress. □gainst this background, the Special □apporteur stresses that the obligations concerning justice, truth, reparations and guarantees of non-recurrence are a matter of human rights and of universal entitlement, and not dependent upon praiseworthy behaviour, having made a contribution to any given cause, having a particular affiliation or having participated or not in a particular set of events.
□ □ he Special □apporteur emphasi es that the creation of different categories of victims through the establishment of initiatives dedicated to the redress of the victims not of human rights violations in general but of a particular set of events constitutes the most serious challenge facing the transitional justice process in the country. Such classification has rapidly evolved into a fragmentation among different categories of victims, and raises the □uestion of e□uality of treatment not just among the different categories thus generated but, even more fundamentally, among them and victims who have suffered gross violations of a similar kind, e□cept not during events periods that have been the subject of one of the initiatives. □his further undermines the idea that transitional justice measures are both the means to and manifestations of strengthening human rights regimes.
Privileging financial compensation
□ □ nother conse □ uence of adopting an event-based approach to redress is the tendency to over-emphasi □ the reliance on reparation □ and indeed, on monetary compensation □ perhaps to the detriment of other transitional justice dimensions. □ hile acknowledging that the needs of victims is urgent and that addressing them is something that cannot be postponed, the Special □ apporteur warns that reparations, particularly in the form of financial compensation, without systematic truth-seeking, justice and the various aspects of institutional reform, as well as other guarantees of non-recurrence, risk compromising their character as justice measures and may become, in the eyes of many, tokens of compensation distributed in order to gain the ac □ uiescence of victims. □ his view was reflected in the opinions of victims brought to his attention who had refused to accept financial compensation in the absence of any actual prospect of discovering the truth of the violations endured.
☐ In the above connection, the Special ☐apporteur emphasi ☐es that the four elements of transitional justice are interrelated and reinforce each other. ☐ach of the measures on its own has a limited reach and will not be able to deliver justice to the victims and society, as spelled out previously by the Special \square apporteur. \square \square is therefore necessary that the measures be conceived and implemented as part of an integrated policy.

B.

C.	The continuing challenges of inclusiveness
	\square n an effort to address the shortcomings of ad hoc transitional justice initiatives, the authorities have taken some noteworthy steps whether these measures are also sufficiently human rights-centred to confront the problem addressed above is an independent \square uestion, the answer to which is pending \square
1.	Ministry for Human Rights and Transitional Justice
	On anuary in the overnment, by decree stablished the inistry for uman lights and ransitional fustice, tasked to develop strategies to address human rights violations committed in the past on the basis of the pursuit of the truth, judgement and reconciliation in accordance with the principles of transitional justice as adopted at the national level, in order to reinforce the democratic transition and to contribute to national reconciliation, as well as guaranteeing and promoting human rights. The Special apporteur notes the concerns expressed by various stakeholders that the inistry may limit the role played by civil society and its involvement in the deliberations regarding the overall transitional justice framework. The hether their concerns are valid depends much on the openness that the inistry shows to civil society. This has been been been been unavoidable, it seems that, in practice, the inistry has yet to allay the apprehensions of civil society.
2.	National consultations insufficient to mend the fragmentation of society
	☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐
	☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐
	☐ ☐ meetings the Special ☐apporteur held in different parts of the country, ☐uestions were repeatedly raised about whether the consultations had elicited the views of a sufficiently broad range of stakeholders and, more specifically, about the criteria used for selecting participants in them. The view that political affiliation was used in a way that

^{□ □□□□□□□□□,} paras. □→□□
□ □uman □ights □ouncil resolution □□□, preamble.

D.

1.

resulted in the overrepresentation of supporters of the governing party was fre uently e pressed. Durthermore, the voices of women, so crucial in the deliberations of a country on how to move ahead, were not sufficiently represented. In conversations held, and in particular in those held outside the capital, the Special apporteur learned that the consultations had been unable to bridge the gap between the urban coast and the interior of the country. □s such, they seem to have tracked the status Quo ante that the very transitional justice process is intended to address. Lastly, and with an eye to both the future of the esperience in sunisia and further consultation efforts elsewhere, the Special □apporteur takes the opportunity to emphasi □e that, regardless of how ambitious and well-intended the structure of formal dialogues are, consultations should not be conceived of as one-off instances.

—apturing with sufficient sensitivity and efficacy the views of individuals and civil society about transitional justice re uires the establishment of ongoing mechanisms of consultation. This is particularly important in contects where at least in some areas and with respect to some topics individuals have been given few reasons to think that they are entitled to raise claims based on rights, so their views about Questions of justice are developing over time and, it is hoped, aided by the transitional justice processes themselves. Achieving a comprehensive transitional justice strategy through a truth commission One suitable opportunity to place the ad hoc transitional justice initiatives into a comprehensive framework was provided by the work on the draft basic law on the foundations and fields of transitional justice. The Special Tapporteur commends the technical committee and the inistry for their efforts to create a legal framework that refers to the four elements of transitional justice and provides for the possibility of adopting a more systematic approach to transitional justice. □he Special □apporteur would like to briefly make his main observations and e press his concerns regarding the bill of anuary and a first general observation, it should be noted that the bill is more e pansive with regard to the definition of terms and internal functions than overall strategy. Indeed, the bill is more a law establishing a truth commission albeit one with a broad set of functions, to be discussed below than a law on transitional justice e pressing a truly comprehensive approach to the issue. □ or instance, the bill is short on Questions of institutional reforms and criminal prosecutions. Mandate and functions of the commission In addition to the function of investigating and disclosing the truth concerning human rights violations familiar from truth commissions worldwide, the bill assigns to the commission notably ambitious functions on reparations and issues relating to corruption. irst, it would be responsible not merely for making recommendations concerning reparations but also for administering a reparations programme of its own creation. Second, the bill attributes to the commission broad powers to deal with the issue of corruption, to both recommend institutional reforms and address individual corruption cases through an arbitration and reconciliation committee. This is a novel esperiment that, predictably, will pose significant challenges, not the least given the range of competencies called for by the commission different functions. Truth commissions with simpler attributions have already faced challenges in meeting their goals. The Special Tapporteur stresses that some of the functions that the bill assigns to the commission, for eTample, the administration of reparations and the work on corruption cases, will very likely overburden the commission and, as a conseTuence, distract it from its very core functions as a truth commission.

[□] he Special □apporteur will share a more detailed analysis of the bill in his ongoing bilateral e□changes with the □overnment of □unisia.

Specifically, the work on financial files, which will, in accordance with the bill, give the commission arbitration functions with an eye to the settlement of cases, will not only bring an enormous administrative burden but also carry significant reputation and credibility risks, given that arbitration in matters of corruption is likely to be controversial. Settling individual cases of corruption will require quasi-judicial procedures in order to guarantee minimal fairness in decisions that cannot be appealed a huge workload is therefore to be espected. Settling cases by arbitration will involve a significant likelihood of defeating the espectations of the public, which is likely to have masimalist aspirations of recovery and punishment, even when the main parties to arbitration find the outcome acceptable shence the reputation and credibility risks.
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐
Selection of commission members
□ he seriousness of the transitional justice efforts made by the □overnment will be judged as initio by the political will to establish a selection mechanism that allows for the appointment of truly impartial and independent commissioners. □ccording to articles □ to □, the bill leaves the responsibility for selecting the members of the independent truth and dignity commission to a political body, the □ational □onstituent □ssembly, and, in first instance, to a committee composed of the President or □ice President of the □ssembly and the presidents of the parliamentary blocs. Leaving the selection of commissioners to a political body is not objectionable□in the given circumstances, however, and in the light of recent political tensions and the above-mentioned social fragmentation, the authorities may well consider the establishment of additional procedural safeguards to ensure the commission □s independence in both its functioning and appearance. Such safeguards could include a clearer nominating process, which would encourage greater involvement of civil society in proposing candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hearings with and about at least a short list of candidates □re □uiring the □ssembly to hold public hea
Uneven prosecutions and concerns about the use of military justice
Scope, systematic nature and impartiality of prosecutorial efforts unisia has prosecuted and tried alleged perpetrators of gross human rights

2.

E.

1.

level. In the Le
☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐
\Box \Box uring his visit, the Special \Box apporteur heard accounts of the above-mentioned types of criticism, among others. \Box he fact that some trials have been held and that they have included high-ranking members of the previous regime is noteworthy. \Box t is nonetheless evident that a significant number of perpetrators alleged to have been involved in the commission of gross violations during the uprising have not yet been prosecuted or tried.
□ □ ven setting aside reservations regarding in absentia trials, ultimately, the sincerity of criminal justice efforts cannot be asserted merely by the willingness to open prosecutions or even try cases of members of a previous regime not only wholly discredited but largely on the run. □he real test will rather be whether the criminal justice system is both allowed and enabled to operate wherever the evidence leads it, and on the basis of clear and deliberate investigatory and prosecutorial strategies that reflect a commitment to attaining a full picture of the entire chain of command that made the violations possible, and to holding to account those responsible, regardless of all other considerations, including their current status or past political affiliations. □s argued by the Special □apporteur in his report submitted to the □eneral □ssembly, criminal prosecutions that are not derailed by the positions of power of alleged perpetrators or influenced by political considerations are an effective way of signalling a commitment to the idea that the law applies e□ually to everyone, a basic dimension of the rule of law.□
\Box othing in the visit persuaded the Special \Box apporteur that a comprehensive prosecutorial strategy to deal with alleged cases of gross human rights violations had been set in place. Investigations, prosecutions and trials against perpetrators of alleged gross human rights violations committed prior to the uprising, in particular during the administration of \Box en \Box li, as well as those relating to the uprising itself, have been conducted to date in what appears to be an ad hoc manner, despite the fact that the cases involve violations that include torture and other forms of ill-treatment, secret detention and widespread prolonged arbitrary detention \square in other words, the sort of system crimes that re \square ire comple \square and relatively stable structures, the dismantlement of which re \square ires deliberate and comprehensive prosecutorial strategies. \square

^{□ □□□□□□,} paras. □-□□

2. Use of military courts

\square \square ccording to article \square of the Law on \square ternal Security \square orces, military courts have the competence for offences committed by members of the security forces in the course of duty, regardless of the identity of the victim. \square s a result, all complaints against law enforcement officers, including those relating to gross human rights violations, are tried before military courts in \square unisia.
□ □ ccree-law □ o. □ of □ □ amending the □ ilitary □ ustice Law of □ introduced new elements aimed at providing attributions of independence to the military justice system. □ he main changes included the removal of the obligation of the general prosecutor to inform and receive confirmation from the □ inister for □ efence prior to criminal proceedings □ the revocation of the power of the □ inister for □ efence to suspend the e □ ccution of convictions issued by military courts □ the creation of a two-tier jurisdiction structure headed by the □ ourt of □ assation □ mi □ ed composition of military courts, securing the participation of both military and civilian judges □ and the establishment of a military judicial council in charge of appointments, promotions and disciplinary measures.
□ hile appreciating the various reforms steps taken, the Special □apporteur notes that the institutional independence of military judges remains □uestionable by the fact that the □ inister for □efence presides over the above-mentioned military judicial council. □urthermore, military judges are appointed by decree following the proposal by the □ inister further to a decision of the said council □civilian judges are appointed by decree following a proposal by the □ inister for □ustice and the □ inister for □efence.
□ □ he Special □ apporteur would like to note positively that law □ o. □ of □ □ □ ly □ □ entitles victims to be a partie civile in proceedings before military courts and to make claims for reparation for the harm suffered on the basis of the rules applicable in the ordinary criminal procedure code. □ hile this judicial route should have been possible for victims having participated in proceedings before military courts after □ □ □ ly □ □ including the Le □ ef and □ unis trials, the Special □ apporteur was not in a position to ascertain the practical impact that this new provision has on victims, and particularly the effectiveness of their rights to justice and reparation. □ e nonetheless takes this opportunity to stress the importance of victims □ participation in such trials, particularly given that they relate to alleged gross human rights violations.
☐ In discussions with various stakeholders, the Special ☐ apporteur learned that a large proportion of the population sees the military courts as being more independent than the civilian justice courts. ☐ e associates this perception with the important reforms undertaken in the area of the military justice system and the special role played by the military during the period from ☐ ecember ☐ to ☐ anuary ☐ both of which need to be acknowledged. ☐ lack of measureable progress in reforming the civilian court system is, however, also inevitably behind this widespread perception. ☐ fact that citi ☐ ens consider military courts to be more effective in securing their rights than civilian courts speaks to the challenges that

One of the cases relating to the \Box en \Box li era is that of \Box arraket \Box ssahel, in which \Box members of the military were arrested on the accusation of having prepared a coup d \Box tat in \Box a large number of whom were subse \Box uently subjected to torture and other ill-treatment. \Box he former President was sentenced to five years of imprisonment in \Box other high-level officials received between two to five years \Box aising additional \Box uestions with regard to proportionality between crime and sentence \Box the judicial system in \(\subseteq\) unisia currently faces. Obviously, the solution cannot consist merely in a decision to move to unreformed civilian courts\(\subseteq\) such a solution also lies in an earnest and systematic effort to improve their reliability.

	☐ In discussions held with the ☐ irectorate of ☐ ilitary ☐ ustice, the Special ☐ apporteur learned of plans to speciali ☐ the military justice system further in order to minimi ☐ the appearance of civilians before military courts. ☐ this regard, the Special ☐ apporteur highlights the need to shift the competence to try members of security and military forces for human rights violations to the civilian justice system, a process that should be pursued alongside comprehensive reform of the civilian judiciary, to guarantee its full independence and impartiality.
F.	Insufficient progress in guarantees of non-recurrence
	☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐ ☐
1.	Strengthened human rights protection
	Since October , the ational onstituent seembly has been working on a new draft onstitution. he Special apporteur notes the catalogue of rights and freedoms enshrined in articles to of the third draft. he initiative to establish an independent constitutional court with which individuals may directly file complaints on alleged violations of their constitutional rights and freedoms is a commendable project. Urthermore, he also took note of the plans to establish an authority of good governance and anti-corruption as an action following up on the suggestions made by the ational ommission of investigation on orruption and ombediement.
	□ □urthermore, a number of key pieces of legislation central to the right of citi ens to participate in political life, including laws on political parties, freedom of association, assembly and e pression, and press and media freedom have been adopted following respective draft legislation prepared by the □igh □ommission for the □eali ation of □evolution Objectives, Political □eforms and □emocratic □ransition.
2.	Justice sector reform
(a)	Judicial system under the former regime
	□ □ he judicial system under the previous regime was characteri do by a judiciary that was heavily influenced by the elecutive. he majority of members of the former ligh udicial ouncil came from the elecutive branch or were magistrates appointed by the overnment. Only a minority of members was elected. Inder the former onstitution, the ouncil was in charge of the appointment, promotion and transfer of and disciplinary measures against magistrates. We was the elecutive branch, however, that played the decisive role in appointments. The majority of magistrates were appointed by presidential decree on the proposal of the light udicial ouncil, while higher-level judicial positions were directly filled by the elecutive branch. Udges who had the courage to speak out against the misuse of the judiciary for political interests were often arbitrarily transferred to distant regions without their consent.

¹⁴

	against any failure by a magistrate in duties, honour or dignity before the sisciplinary council of the sigh sudicial conducting the procedure. In the absence of a code of ethics defining the rules of judicial conduct and the elements that constitute a disciplinary offence, the sinistry and the council were able to initiate proceedings without the minimal constraints afforded by a precise definition of the relevant failures on make matters worse, after start was no judicial recourse possible before an administrative court against the disciplinary decision. Instead, the concerned judge had to address the memedy commission of the very same sigh sudicial council.
	\square Public prosecutors worked under the hierarchic control of their respective chiefs and the authority of the \square inistry of \square tstice. \square his arrangement, combined with the discretionary power of the prosecutor to assign files to an investigating judge of his or her choice, led to a lack of effective investigations and prosecutions into gross human rights violations.
(b)	Status of reform initiatives
	□ □ he above-mentioned situation reflects a dire need for reform. □oo little progress, however, has been made, indeed even initiated, in structural terms, in particular as the uprising occurred almost two and a half years ago. □he strategic plan for □□□□□□ prepared by the □ inistry of □ustice mainly contains reform initiatives aimed at moderni □ng the □ inistry and strengthening the administration of the judiciary and judicial processes. □he institutional reforms includes the creation of a □judicial pol□attached to the court of first instance of □unis, in charge of corruption cases. □he plan also envisages legislative revisions strengthening the autonomy of prosecutors and ensuring that lawyers have access to detained persons from the time of arrest. □he plan does not, however, contain major proposals for structural reforms ensuring the independence and self-regulation of the judiciary.
(c)	Absence of a functioning high judicial council
	□ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □ □
(d)	Arbitrary dismissals
	□□□ □uring his visit, the Special □apporteur learned about several dismissals of judges, including the decision by the □ inistry of □ustice, published in □uly □□□□, to dismiss several do□en magistrates two months earlier. □ his discussion, the □ inister for □ustice noted that due process re□uirements had been afforded to the magistrates concerned. □onetheless, the □ inister failed to provide the Special □apporteur with concrete figures or with detailed information. □rom several other meetings that the Special □apporteur held, it appeared that the decisions had been made without ade □uate respect for due process guarantees, including for the right to be informed about the specific reasons for one □s dismissal. □nstead,

□ Law □o. □→□, art. □□□riminal Procedure □ode, art. □□

3.

(a)

decisions were reportedly founded on broad, generali ded allegations of corruption and of doyalty to the former regime decision declared a strike were the persons concerned granted the right to appeal to an administrative court. In undetermined but small number of the judges dismissed have reportedly been reinstated.
□ □ hile highlighting that the vetting of members of the judiciary is a re□uirement for effective guarantees of non-recurrence, the Special □apporteur underscores the fact that such initiatives should not be conducted in an arbitrary and piecemeal fashion, but rather as part of an overall strategy, and that dismissals can only follow procedures that are respectful of the re□uirements of the rule of law and international human rights standards. It is in this connection that he takes note of the draft organic law of □□□ pertaining to the vetting of the judiciary and legal profession. □ccording to the draft, a committee is be established, comprising □□ members elected by an absolute majority of the □ational □onstituent □ssembly from among judges, attorneys at the □ourt of □assation and academia speciali ed in law to investigate e□ officio cases of financial corruption of members of the judiciary, cases pertaining to the rendering of illegal judgements, and other crimes committed within the framework of defending the former regime in the period from □ovember □□□ to □□ anuary □□□□ □ he decisions of the committee are to be appealable before the competent administrative court. □he Special □apporteur would like to stress that the draft Organic Law is, on the one hand, severely underdeveloped, even in terms of definitions and institutional set-up and procedures and, on the other, overambitious in that it includes in its purview the vetting of lawyers in private practice. □e insists on the importance of guaranteeing that vetting processes comply with international due process standards.
\square s an e ample of the need to view the different elements of transitional justice in a comprehensive manner, it should be noted that, without an actual vetting of the judiciary it is unlikely that the cases that the aruth and signity commission will forward to the judiciary for prosecution in accordance with article \square of the draft law could be dealt with in a reliable way.
Security sector
Security sector under the previous regime
□ □ he opacity of the structure of and procedures followed within the internal security sector under the former President and the secrecy of large parts of the relevant legislation make a detailed description difficult. □he internal security services, consisting of the national police, the national guard, the civil protection force and prison guard functioned under the direct control of the President.
□ □ he intelligence apparatus was characteri ed by an absence of any publicly accessible regulation of its role and functions. □ he □ irectorate of State Security, with its Police judiciaire , which has been abolished in the meantime, largely misused legislation through an overly broad definition of terrorism. □ his unjustifiably restricted the enjoyment of human rights pertaining to the e □ ercise of peaceful activities, including dissent and political opposition through legitimate associations. □
☐ ☐ s concluded by the Special ☐ apporteur on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment following his mission to ☐ unisia in ☐ ☐ the systematic practice of torture and ill-treatment was deeply entrenched and institutionali ☐ within the security sector, with torture being practised and abetted by law enforcement officials, the former State Security \square epartment, the personnel of the \square inistry of the \square interior and prison staff, with complete impunity. \square □□□ □uring his visit, the Special □apporteur held several meetings with victims of torture and other gross human rights violations and or family members. □iven the gross and systematic nature of the violations, which in their viciousness defy the notion that this is what a legitimate system of law would have re□uired from its officers, the victims and their families understandably fail to see any justification for the continued membership of so many alleged perpetrators of torture or other gross violations in the security services. □he family members of several victims referred to the difficulties of seeing those responsible for the torture or death of loved ones still wearing a uniform and performing official functions. □hese family members reported instances of repeated imprisonment and torture that, in several cases, led to death □n at least one case, insanity came first□ □n almost all cases, family members and direct victims referred to the disruptive impact on the employment and livelihood of the families that resulted not only from prolonged imprisonment and its natural conse □uences but also from the active efforts of security services to prevent victims □even post-release□ from holding jobs by means of draconian administrative control measures.

See also Dalla Dalla Dalla Dalla Dara.

	☐ ☐ Contrast to the internal security services, the military forces e perienced rather limited political influence from the previous regime. ☐ The population remains grateful to the military for its refusal to follow the orders of the former President to shoot at demonstrators during the uprising. ☐ This is also one of the reasons for which the military is generally perceived as a mostly apolitical force focused on the defence of the country.
(b)	Status of reform initiatives
	□ □ he information gathered by the Special □ apporteur would indicate that there has been no progress in the reform of the internal security forces. □ his concern does not regard so much the completion of structural security sector reforms, which is, admittedly, a comple □ and challenging undertaking, but rather the lack of any serious reform initiatives. □ his state of affairs is apparently due to the fact that several supporters of the former regime remain within the □ inistry of the □ therior, including in high-level positions.
	□□□ hile a number of high-level officials allied to the former regime were dismissed from the □ inistry of the □ interior in □□□□, the dismissal in □□□□ of key figures allegedly involved in gross human rights violations during the uprising was heavily opposed by the staff of the □ inistry, including at high levels, and was eventually reversed. One high-level official in the □ inistry suspected of involvement was promoted following an unsuccessful attempted dismissal.
	Similarly, no apparent progress has been made in reforming the legislation of the security sector much relevant legislation indeed remains unpublished. his situation is an obstruction to the process of transition. In this connection, the Special papporteur reiterates his view that legislative and structural reforms concerning the security sector, including the vetting of members of the security service, require a framework applicable to all, without discrimination, and should comply with international human rights standards.

(c)	Calls by police for neutrality
	□ □ he newly formed police associations have become vocal advocates for security sector reform. One of the main demands raised in conversations with the Special □ apporteur was ensuring that the principle of neutrality of the security services was enshrined in the new □ onstitution, in order to prevent any political instrumentali □ ation of the internal security forces by the e □ ecutive branch. □ e was also informed that the associations had submitted their own proposals for a reformed legal framework, including with regard to recruitment, promotions, training, remuneration and the preparation of a code of ethics.
(d)	Need for urgent institutional restructuring and inquiry mechanisms
	□ □ ransparency, oversight and accountability should be the guiding principles in the urgent institutional restructuring of the security sector. □he establishment of effective mechanisms to enforce those principles, coupled with institutionali □ed vetting procedures that respect human rights standards, is a priority. □ffective dialogue to this end of the authorities with civil society, including with relevant professional associations, should be the first step in this endeavour.
	Past practices of torture and ill-treatment within the security sector should be investigated urgently and in an independent, impartial and epeditious manner, and the perpetrators found to be involved should be prosecuted and sanctioned in proportion to the violations committed. The cycle of impunity urgently needs to be broken. The easures for the prevention of similar gross violations should be put in place to ensure their non-recurrence, together with effective complaint procedures accessible to all. Tor example, safeguards during arrest and detention must be guaranteed in law and in practice, and a national preventive mechanism against torture should be established.
	□ □ he Special □apporteur warns that failure to address impunity would send a negative signal to □unisian society. □he lack of any visible reform coupled with the deep mistrust of the population in internal law enforcement bodies could in the long run lead to a situation where confidence in these institutions will be virtually impossible to re-establish.
G.	National collaboration and international coordination
	□ □ stablishing effective measures on truth-seeking, justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence re □uires deliberately designed institutional coordination mechanisms. □ he four transitional justice areas straddle the competencies of not only the □ inistries of □ustice, the □nterior and □uman □ights, but also of □nance, □ducation, □ealth, and Social, □amily and □ender □ffairs, as well as others. □ hey necessarily re □uire their close and transparent collaboration. □ his discussions with several ministries, the Special □apporteur noted a limited awareness of the importance of effective collaboration and the significant effort called for in the implementation of relevant measures. □ e therefore reiterates that inter-agency collaboration is crucial to address the important challenges that lie ahead and to guarantee ade □uate service delivery to victims.
	☐ International cooperation could actually benefit from some coordination of its own, given that a multitude of donors, each with their own preferred project, interests, approach and set of re☐uirements, can easily lead to an overload of projects without sufficient focus. ☐ oherent reforms re☐uire an ongoing process of consultations and coordination among agencies interested in supporting the various areas of transitional justice, together with the ☐ unisian authorities, to agree on an efficient division of labour and thus ensure that the country does not lose sight of its core objectives.

IV. Conclusions and recommendations

Conclusions A.

В.

The Special Rapporteur calls on the Tunisian authorities and society to place human rights at the centre of all transitional justice efforts. In this spirit, he makes the recommendations below.

☐ In the area of a comprehensive transitional justice strategy, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the authorities:

- (a) Ensure that the notion of human rights guides the design and implementation of all transitional justice measures; in particular, guarantee that the violation of human rights is a sufficient reason for access to redress measures rather than other considerations relating to affiliation with or contribution or opposition to any given cause, or any other contingent factor;
- (b) Ensure that a truly comprehensive policy, involving the four elements of transitional justice truth, criminal justice, reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence is effectively adopted, avoiding overreliance on any element to the exclusion of others;
- (c) Ensure that the draft law on transitional justice, currently long on definitions but short on specifying functions, clearly establishes how the four different elements will be effectively adopted;
- (d) Ensure effective victim participation in all areas of transitional justice while providing for adequate protection schemes;
- (e) Find ways to ensure that the voices of society, and particularly victims, are taken into account in ongoing manner;
- (f) Take effective efforts to remedy shortcomings in consultations, such as by reaching out to all sectors of society in a non-discriminatory manner, including women, thereby bridging the gap between the urban coast and the country's interior. Inclusive consultations are a precondition for reversing the trend of social fragmentation.

 \square In the area of truth-seeking, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the authorities:

- (a) Transparently present the actions taken and planned in response to the reports published by the National Fact-Finding Commission and the National Commission of Investigation on Corruption and Embezzlement, and explain how their findings and recommendations have been taken into account during the elaboration of the overall transitional justice strategy, and effectively incorporate the expertise and information of the two commissions in ongoing efforts;
- (b) Revisit the suggested competences, functions and responsibilities of the new Truth and Dignity Commission to ensure it delivers on its core objective.

 $\hfill \square$ In the area of justice initiatives, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the authorities:

- (a) Facilitate the adoption of a coherent and systematic prosecution strategy that does not lend itself to charges that it is too narrow, ad hoc or politically biased; the strategy should aim at establishing the full chain of command for gross violations during the uprising and preceding periods;
- (b) Conduct prosecutions and trials in compliance with international human rights standards, and allow for the effective participation of victims in proceedings while affording adequate protection;
- (c) Adopt legislation and guarantee in practice that the investigation and jurisdiction of cases involving gross violations of human rights, including those with the alleged involvement of military and security forces, are transferred from military courts to the ordinary civilian justice system, and ensure that the jurisdiction of military tribunals is limited to military personnel who have committed military offences (assuming demonstrable progress by civilian courts);

- (d) Consider the possibility of retrials or review of cases, conducted in accordance with international fair trial standards, in ordinary civilian courts, including the proposed constitutional court, for cases involving gross human rights violations previously tried before military courts.
- $\hfill \square$ With regard to reparation, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the authorities:
 - (a) Take a human rights-based approach when designing and implementing reparation schemes; the same type of violations should trigger the same possibilities and equivalent forms of redress;
 - (b) Ensure that there is no gender discrimination in relation to the provision of reparation, including financial compensation;
 - (c) Ensure that reparations include the provision of free medical and psychosocial assistance, on a continuing basis if warranted by the harm suffered, and measures that further the rehabilitation and reintegration of the victim and/or their family into society;
 - (d) Given the devastating effect of decades of deliberate marginalization of entire areas of the country, include collective reparations in such reparation schemes, in addition to and distinct from regional development initiatives.
- $\hfill \Box$ With regard to guarantees of non-recurrence, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the authorities:
 - (a) Adopt strong institutional and procedural provisions for human rights protection, and reform the public education system by:
 - (i) Considering extending planned individual complaints procedures before the proposed constitutional court to all violations of constitutional rights resulting from the unconstitutional implementation of any acts of public authority;
 - (ii) Strengthening the competences and role of the Higher Committee for Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms;
 - (iii) Revising the curricula of the public education programme to reflect historical changes, the importance of the rule of law in practice and the role that human rights defenders play in the transitional process.
 - (b) In the area of judicial reform, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the authorities:
 - (i) Adopt constitutional guarantees and legislation providing for the independence of the judiciary, and guarantee the conditions of service, appointment, mandate, promotion and discipline of magistrates in accordance with international standards;
 - (ii) Guarantee in law and in practice the self-regulation of the judiciary, including by putting an end to all forms of control and influence retained by the Minister for Justice;
 - (iii) Prioritize the establishment and functioning of a permanent, independent high judicial council in charge of administering the judiciary, including appointments, promotions and disciplinary procedures;

- (iv) Define standards of misconduct that would trigger disciplinary action, adopt an ethical code for the judiciary and ensure that the high judicial council is the body responsible for the initiation and conduct of any disciplinary proceedings, in compliance with international human rights standards;
- (v) Gradually establish security of tenure guaranteeing the irremovable status of judges, coupled with vetting initiatives, applied in a systematic manner and compliant with international human rights standards of due process;
- (vi) Guarantee, in law and in practice, the impartiality of the Office of the Public Prosecutor, thereby ending the authority and control exercised by the Minister for Justice.
- (c) In the security sector, the Special Rapporteur recommends that the authorities:
- (i) Clearly define the competences of the different internal security forces, including intelligence services, ensuring that there is no overlap of competences; and also, at the constitutional level, the function of the military in external defence;
- (ii) Guarantee, in law and in practice, the neutrality of the internal security forces, to prevent them from being unduly instrumentalized by the executive branch;
- (iii) Establish effective oversight mechanisms to ensure transparency and accountability of the internal security forces, coupled with institutionalized vetting procedures that respect human rights standards;
- (iv) Break the cycle of impunity and promptly investigate past practices of torture and ill-treatment, and other gross human rights violations, in an independent, impartial and expedient manner, and prosecute all allegedly involved perpetrators and sanction them, if found guilty, in a way commensurate with the violations committed;
- (v) Effectively involve civil society, including victims and associations of law enforcement bodies, in deliberations on the design of security sector reform initiatives.

The Special Rapporteur suggests that the Government establish an inter-agency coordination body to lead collaboration efforts on the implementation of the various transitional justice measures.
☐ Lastly, the Special Rapporteur suggests that efforts be made to coordinate international assistance on transitional justice to guarantee that different initiatives reinforce one another, avoid working at cross-purposes or overloading capacities for change. Such a coordination mechanism can take many different shapes. The Ministry of Human Rights and Transitional Justice, together with OHCHR in Tunis, for example, could play a facilitating role in this effort.