

Flygtningenævnets baggrundsmateriale

Bilagsnr.:	340
Land:	Uganda
Kilde:	28 Too Many
Titel:	Uganda: The Law and FGM
Udgivet:	Maj 2018
Optaget på baggrundsmaterialet:	23. April 2019

THOMSON REUTERS
FOUNDATION

UGANDA: THE LAW AND FGM

May 2018

In Uganda, the prevalence of FGM in women aged 15–49 is 0.3%.

It is mostly practised by the Sabinu and the Pokot.

The highest prevalence is in the Karamoja region in the north-east.

- Girls are typically cut at age 10 and older.
- The Sabinu primarily practice Type II; the Pokot, Type III.
- FGM is performed by older women called ‘surgeons’, but they have no medical training.
- More than 80% of Ugandan women think the practice should be stopped.

Source of data: Uganda Bureau of Statistics (UBOS) and ICF (2018) Uganda Demographic and Health Survey 2016, p.162. Kampala, Uganda and Rockville, Maryland, USA: UBOS and ICF. Available at <https://dhsprogram.com/pubs/pdf/FR333/FR333.pdf>.

For further information on FGM in Uganda see <https://www.28toomany.org/country/uganda/>.

Domestic Legal Framework

Overview of Domestic Legal Framework in Uganda
The Constitution explicitly prohibits:
✓	Violence against women and girls
✓	Harmful practices
X	Female genital mutilation (FGM)
National legislation:
✓	Provides a clear definition of FGM
✓	Criminalises the performance of FGM
✓	Criminalises the procurement, arrangement and/or assistance of acts of FGM
✓	Criminalises the failure to report incidents of FGM
✓	Criminalises the participation of medical professionals in acts of FGM
✓	Criminalises the practice of cross-border FGM
✓	Government has a strategy in place to end FGM

What is The Law Against FGM?

An overview of the international and regional treaties signed and ratified by Uganda can be found in Appendix I of this report.

Uganda has a mixed legal system of English common law and customary law.¹

The Constitution of the Republic of Uganda (1995)² protects women and their rights under Article 33 and specifically prohibits under 33(6) 'Laws, cultures, customs or traditions which are against the dignity, welfare or interest of women or which undermine their status . . .' Further, Article 44 states that no person shall be subjected to any form of 'torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment'.

The main law criminalising FGM in Uganda is the Prohibition of Female Genital Mutilation Act 2010 (the FGM Act 2010).³

In 2010, just prior to the introduction of the FGM Act 2010, the organisation Law and Advocacy for Women in Uganda filed a petition in the Constitutional Court⁴ seeking declarations that the custom and practice of FGM is inconsistent with the Constitution of Uganda (1995) and violates various articles therein and, as such, should be declared unconstitutional. The petition was successful and uncontested. The responsibility of the judiciary in upholding the law and eliminating FGM formed part of the judgement and concluded, 'The judiciary being part of the State machinery is enjoined to address this issue aggressively whenever it comes before court by involving innovative and progressive interpretation of the laws. Failure to do so would be tantamount to a breach by the State of its international obligations.'

What The Law Covers

The FGM Act 2010 is a comprehensive piece of legislation that sets out the offences and punishments for FGM in Uganda. It defines FGM as 'all procedures involving partial or total removal of the external female genitalia for non-therapeutic purposes.'

Part II (The Offence of Female Genital Mutilation) of the FGM Act 2010 outlines the criminal offences related to the following aspects of FGM:

- Section 2 – carrying out FGM;
- Section 3 – aggravated FGM, whereby (a) the offence results in death of the victim, (b) the offender is a parent, guardian or has authority over the victim, (c) the victim suffers a disability, (d) the victim is infected with HIV as a result of the FGM, or (e) FGM is carried out by a health worker;
- Section 4 – carrying out FGM on oneself;
- Section 5 – attempts to carry out FGM;
- Section 6 – procuring, aiding or abetting FGM; and
- Section 7 – participating in any event that leads to FGM.

Part II also states that neither consent (under Section 9) nor any culture, custom, ritual, tradition or religion (under Section 10) is a defence to the crime of FGM in Uganda. Sections 11 and 12 provide protection to women and girls who have not undergone FGM, together with their husbands, parents or relatives, from discrimination when engaging and participating in any economic, social, political or other activities in the community.

Part III (Court Orders and Jurisdiction) grants a magistrate's court the authority, under Section 14, to issue protective orders if they are satisfied that a girl or woman is likely to undergo FGM. If the application is in respect of a child, the Family and Children Court has authority to issue appropriate orders for the child as it deems necessary.

Part IV (Duty to Report) sets out the duty to report FGM to the police or another authority for appropriate action. Section 16 requires any person to report any awareness of FGM, whether the procedure is in progress, has occurred in the past or is planned. It is illegal not to report such knowledge to the police or another authority within 24 hours. It is also a criminal offence to threaten, harm or inhibit anyone who is reporting or planning to report FGM.

The following Ugandan laws also address harm caused by the practice of FGM:

- Section 6 of the Children Act 1997 (as amended by the Children (Amendment) Act 2016) (amending Section 7 of 1997 Act)⁵ prohibits and punishes harmful customary or cultural practices as follows: 'A person shall not expose a child to any customary or cultural practice that is harmful to his or her health, wellbeing, education or social-economic development.'
- The Penal Code Act 1950 (the Penal Code)⁶ also provides under Section 219 that any person who unlawfully does grievous harm to another commits a serious crime subject to punishment.

Medicalised FGM

Data readily available for Uganda does not give any indication of the number of women or girls who may have been subjected to FGM by a health worker.

Section 3 (Aggravated female genital mutilation) of the FGM Act 2010 states that, if FGM is carried out by a 'health worker', it is classified as 'aggravated FGM' and the perpetrator is liable on conviction to life imprisonment. 'Health worker' is defined as a person qualified in the promotion of health, the prevention of disease and the care of the sick and who is registered and enrolled under the Medical and Dental Practitioners Act⁷, the Nurses and Midwives Act⁸ or the Allied Health Professionals Act⁹.

The lack of data on medicalisation could indicate that the classification of FGM performed by a health worker as 'aggravated' has prevented medicalised FGM from becoming prevalent in Uganda. However, the lack of information could also indicate under-reporting for a variety of reasons, including the perception that the medicalised form of FGM is 'safe' or that the repercussions are too severe for practitioners or individuals to come forward and report.

Cross-Border FGM

In some countries where FGM has become illegal, the practice has been pushed underground and across borders to avoid prosecution. Uganda shares borders with other countries where the existence and enforcement of laws varies widely, including Kenya, South Sudan and Tanzania. The movement of families across borders to perform FGM remains a complex challenge for the campaign to end FGM in East Africa, and girls living in border communities, such as the Pokot and Sabiny communities on the eastern border with Kenya, are particularly vulnerable.

Recent reports have suggested that uncut, married women in Uganda are under increasing pressure to undergo FGM from their husbands and society because they are not allowed to participate in community life, such as serving elders, collecting food and attending traditional meetings, despite the protections set forth in Section 12 (Protection of persons whose wives, daughters or relatives have not undergone female genital mutilation) of the FGM Act 2010. The strength of the law in Uganda may therefore be undermined by women crossing, or being taken across, the border into Kenya to be cut in secret.¹⁰

Section 15 (Extra-territorial jurisdiction) of the FGM Act 2010 criminalises cross-border FGM by stating that the offences and punishments set out in the act apply equally when 'committed outside Uganda where the girl or woman upon whom the offence is committed is ordinarily resident in Uganda.' Therefore, Ugandan nationals who are members of these border communities and who cross the national boundary for FGM are subject to punishment under the FGM Act 2010.

Penalties

The penalties for offences set out under Part II of the FGM Act 2010 reflect both the perpetrator of the crime and the degree of harm caused:

- Section 2 – a person who performs FGM is liable on conviction to imprisonment of up to ten years;
- Section 3 – a person committing aggravated FGM is liable on conviction to life imprisonment;
- Section 4 – carrying out FGM on oneself carries a punishment of up to ten years in prison;
- Sections 5, 6 and 7 – anyone who attempts to carry out, procure, aid or abet FGM, or participates in any event leading to FGM is liable on conviction to imprisonment of up to five years;
- Section 8 – where the offender who attempts, procures, aids or participates in any event leading to FGM is the parent, guardian, husband or a person having authority or control over the victim, the offender is liable on conviction to imprisonment of up to eight years; and
- Sections 11 and 12 – any person who discriminates against a woman or girl who has not undergone FGM or their husbands, parents or relatives is liable on conviction to imprisonment of up to five years.

Following conviction under the FGM Act 2010, under Section 13 the court may also order the offender to pay compensation to the victim of an amount considered by the court as just, having regard to the injuries suffered by the victim and their medical and other expenses.

Anyone failing to report FGM or threatening, harming or in any way inhibiting someone who is reporting or planning to report FGM under Section 16 is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding twelve currency points¹¹ (approximately US$65.00)¹² or imprisonment of up to six months, or both.

Anyone found guilty of exposing a child to any customary or cultural practice under Section 7 of the Children Act 1997 is liable on conviction to imprisonment of up to seven years or a fine not exceeding 168 currency points¹³ (approximately US$910)¹⁴, or both.

Any person who unlawfully does grievous harm to another under Section 219 of The Penal Code Act 1950 is liable to imprisonment for seven years.

Regional FGM Law

In 2016 the East Africa Community (including Kenya, South Sudan, Tanzania and Uganda) enacted the East African Community Prohibition of Female Genital Mutilation Act (EAC Act)¹⁵ to promote cooperation in the prosecution of perpetrators of FGM through harmonisation of laws, policies and strategies to end FGM across the region. The EAC Act aims to raise awareness about the dangers of FGM and provide for the sharing of information, research and data.

The EAC Act defines FGM at Article 2 as ‘all procedures that involve partial or total removal of the external female genitalia, or other injury to the female organ for non-medical reasons’ and sets out its objectives in Article 3, which include (a) prohibiting FGM as a ‘trans-national crime’ across member states, (b) setting minimum penalties for FGM, (c) establishing institutions to foster co-operation and (d) developing and harmonising policies, laws, strategies and programmes to prosecute offenders, prevent FGM and provide services to victims and girls at risk of FGM.

The regional law has content similar to the FGM Act 2010 and sets out the following penalties in Part II (Female Genital Mutilation and Related Offences):

- Article 4(1) – Performance of FGM carries a punishment of a minimum of three years’ imprisonment;
- Articles 4(2) & (3) – ‘Aggravated’ FGM carries a punishment of imprisonment for life. ‘Aggravated’ FGM occurs if the procedure results in the death or disability of the victim, or if she is infected with HIV, or if the perpetrator is a parent/guardian or health worker;
- Article 10 – Anyone using derogatory or abusive language or ridiculing a woman (or her male partner) for undergoing or not undergoing FGM will be imprisoned for a minimum of six months; and
- Article 11 – Imprisonment for a minimum of three years or a fine of not less than US$1000, or both, applies to anyone procuring, aiding or abetting the practice of FGM (under Article 5), participating in cross-border FGM (under Article 6), using premises for FGM (under Article 7), possessing cutting tools or equipment (under Article 8) or failing to report FGM that has taken place, is taking place or is planned (under Article 9).

Further protective measures are set up in Article 12, which states that compensation may be sought from the perpetrator for the victim of FGM, and in Article 13, under which, if EAC state members are satisfied that a girl or woman is at risk of undergoing FGM, they may issue protection orders.

Part IV (Miscellaneous Provisions) of the EAC Act requires member states to adopt comprehensive FGM laws and include in their national budgets resources to protect women and girls from FGM, provide support services to victims and undertake public education and sensitisation programmes on the dangers of FGM. A regional database on cross-border FGM will be established and supported by exchange of criminal intelligence, training of key personnel and strengthening of cross-border security. Finally, the law states at Article 16 that ‘This Act shall take precedence over other Partner State laws to which its provisions relate’ (i.e. the penalties may be higher than those that currently exist in member states).

Implementation of The Law

Cases

While some arrests have been made and cases brought to court in Uganda since the FGM Act 2010 was introduced, generally, implementation of the national law and its enforcement remain a challenge. The practice continues in very remote rural areas where support for the practice remains strong, and FGM has increasingly been performed in secret.

Media reports over the last few years suggest there have been many arrests, but few actual prosecutions in Uganda. Isolated cases have been reported, such as these from 2014:

- Two women were charged under the FGM Act 2010 for procuring and participating in the practice on seven girls in Moroto District. They were sentenced to between three and ten years in prison.¹⁶
- Five men and women were sentenced to four years in prison for performing, procuring and aiding FGM in Kapchorwa District.¹⁷

It is not known if there were appeals in these cases or whether these sentences were followed through.

The most recent report published by the UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme listed 32 reported cases and six arrests, but none brought to court in Uganda during 2016.¹⁸

Relevant Government Authorities and Strategies

Work to end FGM in Uganda is overseen by the Ministry of Gender, Labour and Social Development. Together with the Ministry of Health and the National Population Council, it works in cooperation with national law enforcement, justice bodies and district governments and receives policy and programme advice from the National FGM Alliance.¹⁹ Strategies to tackle gender-based violence, including FGM, are set out in The National Policy on Elimination of Gender Based Violence in Uganda (2016) and its National Action Plan 2016–2021.²⁰

In 2009, Uganda also joined the list of countries under the UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme to end FGM. Supported programmes include high-level engagement in parliament and among church leaders around FGM and the enforcement of the law, sensitisation campaigns through the media, cross-border advocacy meetings and targeted interventions in schools.

Civil Society Observations

Although recent data has suggested a decline in FGM prevalence in Uganda following efforts by the Government and development partners, prevalence among practising communities in the eastern and north-eastern regions remains high. Among members of civil society, concerns remain about the limited effectiveness and implementation of the Ugandan law in these areas. Ongoing challenges include:

- police access to remote communities where the continuation of FGM is fiercely protected by traditional groups;
- a high turnover of police officers and the need for ongoing high-quality training;
- poor awareness of the content and meaning of the law in practising communities;
- women and girls being cut in secret in hidden and remote locations to avoid prosecution;
- difficulties in collecting evidence, including medical, to support prosecutions;
- an increasing number of girls running away from home to avoid FGM and seeking shelter and protection; and
- traditional cutters continuing their trade despite the law, as it is their primary source of income.

The uncontrolled movement across national borders for FGM also remains a significant challenge undermining efforts to end the practice in the region. Observations of Ugandans crossing into Kenya with no fear of arrest continue, as the Kenyan ban on FGM is allegedly not enforced in these areas.²¹

Conclusions and Suggestions for Improvement

Conclusions

- The FGM Act 2010 in Uganda is a comprehensive law against FGM. It clearly defines FGM and criminalises the performance, procurement, attempting, aiding and abetting of all forms of the practice. Both medicalised FGM and cross-border FGM are criminalised and punished under this legislation.
- The FGM Act 2010 also addresses the failure to report FGM and protects uncut women and their families from discrimination. Penalties reflect both the perpetrator and the severity of the crime.
- The FGM Act 2010 has not been strictly enforced in rural areas where prevalence remains highest, and few successful cases have been through the courts since the legislation was introduced.
- The uncontrolled movement across national borders to avoid prosecution remains a significant challenge.

Suggestions for Improvement

National Legislation

- As a member of the East African Community, Uganda should fully implement the detailed legislation incorporated in the EAC Act to tackle cross-border FGM and facilitate regional cooperation.

- The national law itself should be strengthened by reflecting in full the detailed content of the EAC Act. It should also ensure that victims who are pressured by society into agreeing to FGM are not subject to further punishment.
- Laws need to be made accessible to all members of society and easy to understand in all local languages.

Implementation of the Law

- Adequate monitoring and reporting of FGM cases in Uganda would improve efficiency and inform policy makers, the judiciary, the police, civil society and all those working to implement and enforce the law.
- Improved procedures for collecting evidence in FGM cases would also contribute to successful prosecutions.
- Anti-FGM programmes, particularly those focussed in high-prevalence areas, should disseminate clear, easy-to-understand and accurate information around the law.
- It would be beneficial to focus on further strengthening partnerships across borders, as set out under the EAC Act, where illegal activity continues to take place.
- It would be beneficial to increase involvement of local and religious leaders in education around the law, including their responsibilities and the importance of the law in protecting women and girls in their communities.
- Judges and local law enforcers need further support and training around the law and should be encouraged to fully apply the sentences provided for by the legislation.
- Tribunals could be encouraged to make sure any prosecutions relating to FGM are clearly reported, including through local media, such as community radio, and made available in local languages.
- Increased support and protection for victims and witnesses in FGM cases is needed.
- Where literacy rates are low, information around the law needs to be made available through different media channels and resources.
- Mandatory reporting and recording of instances of FGM by medical staff in hospitals and health centres could be considered.
- Where they are currently unavailable and a need is identified, appropriate protection measures (for example, emergency telephone helplines or safe spaces) should be put in place for girls at risk of FGM.

Appendix I: International and Regional Treaties

UGANDA	Signed	Ratified	Acceded	Reservations on reporting?
International
International Covenant on Civil & Political Rights (1966) (ICCPR)			✓ 1995
International Covenant on Economic, Social & Cultural Rights (1966) (ICESCR)			✓ 1987
Convention on the Elimination of All forms of Discrimination Against Women (1979) (CEDAW)	✓ 1980	✓ 1985
Convention Against Torture & Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (1984) (CTOCIDTP)			✓ 1986
Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989) (CRC)	✓ 1990	✓ 1990
Regional
African Charter on Human & Peoples' Rights (1981) (ACHPR) (Banjul Charter)	✓ 1986	✓ 1986
African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child (1990) (ACRWC)	✓ 1992	✓ 1994
African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights on the Rights of the Women in Africa (2003) (ACHPRRWA) (Maputo Protocol)	✓ 2003	✓ 2010

'Signed': a treaty is signed by countries following negotiation and agreement of its contents.

'Ratified': once signed, most treaties and conventions must be ratified (i.e. approved through the standard national legislative procedure) to be legally effective in that country.

'Acceded': when a country ratifies a treaty that has already been negotiated by other states.

1 Note: customary law is in effect only when it does not conflict with statutory law.

2 Constitution of the Republic of Uganda (1995) Available at http://www.statehouse.go.ug/sites/default/files/attachments/Constitution_1995.pdf.

3 The Prohibition of Female Genital Mutilation Act (2010) Available at http://www.africanchildforum.org/clr/Legislation%20Per%20Country/Uganda/uganda_fgm_2010_en.pdf.

4 Law & Advocacy for women in Uganda v. Attorney General (Constitutional Petition No. 8 of 2007) (2010) UGCC 4, Uganda: Court of Appeal/Constitutional Court, 28 July 2010. Available at http://www.refworld.org/cases/UGA_CC,4cf3a53f2.html.

5 The Republic of Uganda (2016) The Children (Amendment Act), 2016. Available at <https://www.bettercarenetwork.org/sites/default/files/Children%20%28Amendment%29%20Act%202016.pdf>.

6 The Penal Code Act (1950) Available at <http://www.icla.up.ac.za/images/un/use-of-force/africa/Uganda/Penal%20Code%20Act%20Uganda%201950.pdf>.

- 7 The Medical and Dental Practitioners Act (undated) Available at https://www.cephurd.org/wp-content/uploads/downloads/2011/10/medical-and-dental-practitioners-act-Chapter_272.pdf.
- 8 The Nurses and Midwives Act (undated) Available at https://www.cephurd.org/wp-content/uploads/downloads/2011/10/nurses-and-midwives-act-Chapter_274.pdf.
- 9 The Allied Health Professionals Act (undated) Available at <http://www.ahpc.ug/Allied%20Health%20Professionals%20Act,%20Cap%20268.pdf>.
- 10 David Mafabi (2018) 'Married Women Now Undergoing Circumcision', Daily Monitor, 19 January. Available at <http://www.monitor.co.ug/News/National/Married-women-now-undergoing-circumcision-FGM/688334-4269400-k8b075/index.html>.
- 11 One currency point is the equivalent of 20,000 Uganda Shillings.
- 12 Value date of 30 March 2018, Bloomberg Generic Composite rate UGX:USD.
- 13 One currency point is act as the equivalent of 20,000 Uganda Shillings.
- 14 Value date of 30 March 2018, Bloomberg Generic Composite rate UGX:USD.
- 15 Hon. Dora Christine Kanababita Byamukam (2016) The EAC prohibition of Female Genital Mutilation Bill, 2016. Available at <http://www.eala.org/documents/view/the-eac-prohibition-of-female-genital-mutilation-bill2016>.
- 16 URN (2014) FGM Surgeons Jailed in Moroto, 18 July. Available at <https://ugandaradionetwork.com/story/fgm-surgeons-jailed-in-moroto>.
- 17 Agence France-Presse in Kampala (2014) 'Uganda jails five over FGM', The Guardian, 21 November. Available at <https://www.theguardian.com/world/2014/nov/21/uganda-jails-five-female-genital-mutilation>.
- 18 UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme on Female Genital Mutilation/Cutting (2017) 2016 Annual Report of the UNFPA-UNICEF Joint Programme on Female Genital Mutilation/Cutting: Accelerating Change, p.70. Available at https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/UNFPA_UNICEF_FGM_16_Report_web.pdf.
- 19 Ibid.
- 20 Ministry of Gender, Labor and Social Development (2017) 16 Days of Activism Campaign Against Gender Based Violence. Available at <http://www.faweuganda.org/index.php/cedaw-project/367-16-days-of-activism-campaign-against-gender-based-violence>.
- 21 NTV (2017) Ugandan officials blame Kenyan leaders for frustrating fight against female genital mutilation. Available at <http://www.ntv.co.ug/news/local/17/apr/2017/ugandan-officials-blame-kenyan-leaders-frustrating-fight-against-female#sthash.Ltq2Xccj.dpbs>.

Cover image: Papa Bravo (2016) Portrait of unidentified children belonging to the Ruhija tribe of Uganda on June 5, 2016 in Ruhija, S. Uganda. Ruhija is close-to-last living mountain gorillas habitat. Shutterstock photo ID: 569468893.

Please note that the use of a photograph of any girl or woman in this report does not imply that she has, nor has not, undergone FGM.

This report was prepared in collaboration with TrustLaw, the Thomson Reuters Foundation's global, legal pro bono service that connects law firms and legal teams to NGOs and social enterprises that are working to create social and environmental change.

The information in this report has been compiled in cooperation with Shearman & Sterling LLP from documents that are publicly available and is for general information purposes only. It has been prepared as a work of legal research only and does not represent legal advice in respect of any of the laws of Uganda. It does not purport to be complete or to apply to any particular factual or legal circumstances. It does not constitute, and must not be relied or acted upon as, legal advice or create an attorney-client relationship with any person or entity. No contributor to this report accepts responsibility for losses that may arise from reliance upon the information contained herein, or any inaccuracies, including changes in the law since the research was completed in May 2018. Neither 28 Too Many, Shearman & Sterling, the Thomson Reuters Foundation nor any other contributor to this report accepts responsibility for losses that may arise from reliance upon the information contained herein, or any inaccuracies, including changes in the law since the research was completed in May 2018. No contributor to this report holds himself or herself out as being qualified to provide legal advice in respect of any jurisdiction as a result of his or her participation in this project or contribution to this report. Legal advice should be obtained from legal counsel qualified in the relevant jurisdiction/s when dealing with specific circumstances. It should be noted, furthermore, that in many countries there is a lack of legal precedent for the penalties laid out in the law, meaning that, in practice, lesser penalties may be applied.

Acknowledgements:

Shearman & Sterling LLP
ENSAfrica Advocates | Uganda

© 28 Too Many 2018
Registered Charity No. 1150379
Limited Company No. 08122211
Email: info@28toomany.org