Political Parties of Georgia

DIRECTORY

Tbilisi, 1998

INTRODUCTION

This directory was created prior to local, self-government elections for the purpose of providing a complete spectrum of Georgian political parties. Therefore, it was decided to include in this directory, not only the parties participating in local elections, but all registered political parties.

According to the Ministry of Justice of Georgia, as of September 26, 1998, there are 79 political parties registered in Georgia. In order to collect the material for this directory, ICCC distributed questionnaires to all 79 registered parties. 73 parties have been included in the directory, 6 parties failed to return the questionnaire. Some claimed they didn't have adequate time to respond, others just refused.

The directory consists of three sections. The first section includes information about the 17 parties and blocks participating in the November 15th local, self-government elections. In this section of the directory the parties are organised in the same order as they are to appear on the ballot.

Local self-government elections will be held on two levels. On the first level, elections will be conducted in all municipalities. Elections will be held to elect 1,037 councils (sakrebulo). In 654 cities, towns, villages and communities, where the number of voters is less than 2,000, elections are held by majoritarian system. The remaining 377 local councils (sakrebulo), where the number of voters is more than 2,000, councils will be elected by proportional system. On the second level, there will be 65 district (rayon) council elections, where all will be elected by proportional system.

SECTION III

The Role of Women in the Political Parties of Georgia

While working on this party directory we have attempted to determine the level of women's participation in the political parties of Georgia. There is currently no research available on the subject of women in Georgian politics. In order to gather information on the role of women, we developed a list of specific questions and made them a part of the questionnaire that we submitted to the parties.

After reviewing the responses from the parties, we determined the following :

- ⇒ Some parties failed to respond to the section of the questionnaire concerning women.
- ⇒ In responding, the parties mainly had difficulties providing the exact number of women members. They noted that they did not keep records of their members by gender and therefore, the exact number of women members is not available. However, most parties estimated the number of women in their organization. Generally, the most typical answer to the question: "how many women are there in your party?", was one-third, nearly 20 parties gave that same response.
- ⇒ There are three parties with the highest percentage of women members: the Christian-Conservative Party of Georgia, Society of Saint Iliia the Righteous and Society of Khevan the Martyr, all three claim 60% female membership. The party with the least percentage of women in their party was the Athletics

Union of Georgia, about 0-5% of their organization is made up of women. Finally, the average number of women members of all parties responding is 28%.

The percentage of women participating in the central governing bodies of their parties is about 9%. Only four parties have women leaders :

- National-Democratic Party – Irina Sarishvili-Chanturia;
- People's Democratic Union / Christian Democrats – Nestan Kiradze;
- Society of Khevan the Martyr – Isolda Chikadze;
- Union of Women Protection – Nargisi Gvaila.

Responses to the question : "Do you take into account women's problems while developing your party's pre-electoral program?", might be organized in several groups :

- ! Ten parties directly pointed out that, while developing and elaborating their programs, they do not pay attention to women's problems.
- ! Six parties simply answer that, while they do take into account women's issues, they do not state concretely, what specific problems they would address.
- ! Four parties do not regard women's issues as a serious problem, due to the other major problems in Georgia today. For example, "human rights are absolutely broken in Georgia, men and women are equally vulnerable and have no rights. Discussing women's issues separately would be absurd today", and "the share of social-economical problems in Georgia is so high, that stressing women's problems is nonsense at this stage".
- ! Seven parties declared that they do not acknowledge issue differences between men and women, and therefore, do not separate out women's issues. Therefore they, "take into account women's problems to the extent to which they are citizens of Georgia". These parties consider women's problems in general, in the context of rights, freedom, obligations and responsibility of a human being and a citizen.

Twenty one parties have concretely named women's problems while developing pre-electoral programs. Among those: protection of women's rights, improvement of women's working conditions, women's employment, improvement of women's social conditions, support of mothers with many children and single mothers. The most frequently named issue is support of a woman as a mother. Some typical examples, "proper conditions should be created for a woman as a main means of national reproduction", and "continuation of traditions of a woman as a symbol of a Georgian family".

The remaining parties did not answer this question at all.
