Protests against pension reform

On 02 September 2018 thousands took to the streets nationwide, such as in Moscow and in Vladivostok, to protest against the raising of the pension age. In Moscow about 6,000 people attended a rally organized by the Communist Party and about 1,500 one organized by the 'Just Russia' party. These manifestations had been allowed by the authorities, whereas those of opposition groups are usually denied because of the restrictions of the right of assembly.

The plans for the pension reform had been announced shortly after the start of the football World Championship in June 2018 and have meanwhile been approved in the first reading by the Duma. The retirement age shall be 63 years for women in the future, instead of 55 and for men 65 instead of 60. In view of an average life expectancy of 67 years for men and 78 for women many Russians are very upset by this move. Western Balkans

Increasing number of visa applications

Under the so-called Western Balkans arrangement people from the Western Balkans can apply for a work visa with the local German embassies, if they have a binding job offer and the Federal Employment Agency consents. Meanwhile the number of applications has risen dramatically. Although twice as many visas were processed in the first six months of 2018 (52,000) than in the same period in 2015, waiting times at the embassies are still very long because of the high number of applications, even, if the Federal Employment Agency's consent has been given. Between November 2015 and September 2017 128,000 declarations of consent and 38,000 visas were issued.
