A. INTRODUCTION

Musawah, the global movement for equality and justice in the Muslim family, submits this Thematic Report¹ on Article 16 and related concerns for consideration by the CEDAW Committee in its review of the Government of Morocco, reporting before the 82nd CEDAW Session in June 2022. In particular, this report examines Morocco's laws and practices that enforce de jure and de facto discrimination against women in the following areas: child and forced marriage, guardianship and custody, division of property, nationality and inheritance law.

We hope that the CEDAW Committee will utilize this report as a key resource during its Constructive engagement with the State party. In particular, we hope the Committee will use the recommendations, outlined in grey boxes within the text, to identify follow-up issues in its Concluding Observations.

B. BACKGROUND AND LEGAL FRAMEWORK

- ❖ Country Background: The official religion of Morocco is Islam.² More than 99 percent of the population is Sunni Muslim, and less than 0.1 percent is Shia Muslim. Groups together constituting less than 1 percent of the population include Christians, Jews, and Baha'is.³
- ❖ Equality in the Constitution: According to the Constitution, Islam is the official religion of the State. Morocco's Constitution provides for equality between men and women in a number of provisions, including:
 - The Preamble, which commits the State to prohibit and combat discrimination against anyone on several bases, including sex;
 - Article 6, which guarantees equality before the law regardless of gender;
 - Article 19, which provides for the equal enjoyment of civil, political, economic, social, cultural and environmental rights and freedoms by both men and women; and
 - Article 32, which states that the family is founded on the legal ties of marriages and declares family as the basic unit of society.
- ❖ The Family Code (Moudawana): The Family Code (Moudawana)⁴ is the primary codified law that governs marriage and family relations of the predominantly Muslim population in Morocco, regardless of their sect. In the absence of codified laws that sufficiently address a particular matter of personal status of Muslims, reference may generally be made to rules of Maliki jurisprudence (fiqh) and to judicial reasoning (ijtihad) that "strive to fulfil and enhance Islamic values, notably, justice, equality and amicable social relations".⁵ The Family Code provides for a marital framework that is based on equality between the two spouses:⁶
 - Article 4 defines marriage as a "legal contract", the purpose of which is "fidelity, virtue and the formation of a stable family under the supervision of both spouses";
 - Article 51 stipulates the mutual rights and duties between spouses, which include: (i) cohabitation, mutual respect, affection and the preservation of the family interest; (ii) both spouses assuming the responsibility of managing and protecting household affairs and the children's education; (iii) consultation on decisions concerning the management of family affairs;
 - Article 52 states that when either spouse continually fails to fulfil his or her obligations in marriage, the other spouse may compel the spouse to execute the obligation or seek divorce for irreconcilable difference.

¹ Musawah would like to acknowledge the inputs provided by the Fédération des Ligues des Droits des Femmes (FLDF) and other national advocates in the preparation of this report.

⁵ Family Code, art. 400.

⁶ Family Code, arts. 4, 51, 52.

According to the current family law, the husband is obligated to financially provide for the family while “women can choose to contribute as their abilities allow”.⁷

❖ Analysis of Legal Framework:

- According to Fatima Sadiqi, the family code “does not adequately address the problems of single women and the non-Moroccan wives of Moroccan men”.⁸
- Many feminist activists report that the Family Code was deemed “revolutionary” in 2004 but is “outdated” in 2021⁹. They point out the inconsistencies and demand a revision of all discriminatory policies and legislations to be in line with the constitution and Morocco's international obligations.¹⁰

C. KEY ISSUES AND RECOMMENDATIONS

1. CHILD AND FORCED MARRIAGES

ARTICLE 16

Legal Background

The minimum legal age for marriage is 18 for females and males.¹¹ However, the Family Affairs Judge in charge of marriage may permit girls and boys below 18 to marry “in a well-substantiated decision explaining the reasons justifying the marriage”, after having heard the parents or legal guardian of the minor with the assistance of medical expertise or after having conducted a social enquiry.¹² Such a decree is not subject to appeal.¹³ This provision creates a legal loophole preventing the eradication of child marriage in Morocco.

The marriage of a minor is contingent upon the consent of minor's legal guardian. Should the guardian refuse, the Family Affairs Judge may rule on the matter.¹⁴ The law does not stipulate an absolute minimum age below which a marriage may not be authorised.¹⁵

Prevalence of Child Marriage:

Despite the increase in the minimum age of marriage in 2004 from 15 to 18 through the enactment of the Family Code, various sources indicate that the prevalence of child marriages in Morocco is relatively high, and authorization by judges of marriages to minors continue to be rampant:

- In Morocco, the Ministry of Justice registered 25,514 child marriage cases in 2018, corresponding to a prevalence rate of 9 percent.¹⁶
- According to UNICEF's 2016 State of the World's Children Report, 16 percent of women aged 20-24 in Morocco were first married by 18 and 3 percent by 15.¹⁷

¹⁷ “The State of the World's Children 2016”, UNICEF, Table 9, pp. 150-153, https://www.unicef.org/publications/files/UNICEF_SOWC_2016.pdf

- Recent statistics from Morocco's Ministry of Justice demonstrate that during 2019, out of 32,000 requests for marriage to minors, Moroccan courts issued authorizations for 81 percent or 25,920 cases.¹⁸
- Nearly 85 percent of such applications filed between 2011 and 2018 were authorized, and involved, in their vast majority, girls (94.8 percent of the total minors married).¹⁹ These statistics do not include informal marriages ("Al-Fatiha", "by Contracts") nor those established through the procedure of recognition of marriage (Article 16 of the Family Code) which alone represent 15 percent of marriages of minors concluded between 2015 and 2019.²⁰

Reasons for Prevalence of Child Marriage:

According to reports by the National Human Rights Council of Morocco, the World Bank and civil society groups, as well as academic research, the reasons for the high prevalence of child marriages in Morocco include:²¹

- Entrenched patriarchal attitudes, along with poverty and lack of education;
- High and increasing number of petitions for authorisation of child marriages and high rates of approval, as discussed above;
- Under-implementation of the law:
 - The marriage of minors subject to authorization by a judge after medical examination or social investigation is also under-implemented. In practice, only 12.42 percent of married minors received an investigation by a social worker, while 87.56 percent were only heard by a judge.²²
 - Judges often issue an authorisation to marry minors based on their own visual examination of the minor girl's physical appearance and determination that she is capable of assuming "marital responsibilities", rather than resorting to the required expertise. Reasons provided by judges for authorising underage marriage include saving family honour, avoiding scandal, protecting the girl's chastity and preventing her from debauchery. Some cite marriage as a solution to poverty. At times judges do not even substantiate their decisions in writing;
 - Alleged corruption among public actors and the ease by which medical certificates attesting to a minor girl's "maturity" can be obtained.

MUSAWAH JUSTIFICATION FOR REFORM

Attempts to set and strictly enforce the minimum age of marriage at 18 for both men and women are often met with resistance from conservative religious authorities, who claim that this is 'un-Islamic.'

NEW HISTORICAL EVIDENCE NOW AVAILABLE

- Commonly, the example of the Prophet Muhammad's marriage to Aishah is used to justify child marriage. The marriage was supposedly consummated when Aishah was nine years old.
- However, there are new studies asserting that Aishah was likely to have been 19 at the time of her marriage (source: <http://www.sistersinislam.org.my/news.php?item.997.41>).
- The question arises as to why the Prophet's marriage to Aishah is used as a model, while his marriage to Khadijah, a widow 15 years older than him, or his marriage to other widows and divorcees, are ignored as exemplary practices.

QUR'AN STATES CONDITION OF PERSON FIT FOR MARRIAGE

- While the Qur'an does not provide any specification for the age of marriage, Surah an-Nisa' 4:6 requires that orphans should be of sound judgment before they marry.
- This indicates that a person must have sufficient judgment and maturity to marry.
- Equating the age of majority with the age of puberty and/or rationality (baligh), as is traditionally done, forces adulthood on children under 18, even onto those who start menstruating at the age of nine.
- The onset of puberty is no indication of sufficient maturity for marriage.

CHILD MARRIAGE

POSITIVE DEVELOPMENTS IN MUSLIM FAMILY LAWS

EGYPT

The minimum age for marriage is 18 for both females and males.

The registration of the marriage of a person below 18 is prohibited and penalised.

PAKISTAN: SIND PROVINCE

The minimum age for marriage is 18 for both females and males.

The law criminalises and penalises the following:
 (i) males over 18 who contracts a child marriage;
 (ii) whoever performs, conducts or directs a child marriage; and
 (iii) parents or guardians who promote a child marriage, permit it to be solemnised or negligently fail to prevent it from being solemnised.

KENYA

The minimum age for marriage is 18 for both females and males, regardless of religion.

Any person who marries or knowingly celebrates or witnesses the marriage of a person below 18 commits an offence and will be liable to a penalty (imprisonment, fine or both).

RECOMMENDATIONS

We recommend the CEDAW Committee urge the State Party to:

- Ensure that government passes and enacts legislation to raise the minimum age to 18 without any exception of judicial permission.
- Ensure data collection of the number of cases of child and forced marriages and number of prosecutions and penalties imposed on persons responsible for child and forced marriages; also continue to ensure data collection of the number of exceptions granted by the judiciary in the past five years, as well as the specific criteria considered by the judges when granting such exceptions.

2. GUARDIANSHIP AND CUSTODY OF CHILDREN

ARTICLE 16

Legal Background:

Under Moroccan law, the father is the legal guardian of a child,²³ and Moroccan women can only exercise guardianship over their children under restrictive conditions, including death, absence, or loss of capacity.²⁴ Even though the family code stipulates that “where the father is totally or partially unable to provide for his children, and the mother is well off, she shall pay alimony”,²⁵ this material responsibility does not give her the right of guardianship over her children.

During the marriage, both parents have custodial rights over their children.²⁶ Upon a divorce, a mother has priority right of physical custody of her children (followed by the father and then maternal grandmother) until the children reach the age of 15. Thereafter, the child may choose either the mother or father to be his or her custodian.²⁷

However, a mother risks losing custody of her child if she remarries, and her new husband is not a close blood relative of the child or the child’s legal representative.²⁸ No such restriction exists for the father.

Public Opinion:

In 2021, Moroccan human rights advocates and mothers launched a campaign on social media under the slogan “I am a Moroccan mother in 2021” to demand changes to chapters in the Family Code that limit the mother’s guardianship of her children. This slogan is backed up by statements including “I am not allowed to make decisions about my children’s education, extracurricular activities, and medical treatment. I’m not allowed to give them a passport, set up a savings account, and go on a trip without permission” and “When I pay for medical consultations, the father is compensated. When I contribute more than 50 percent of the household expenses, it is the father who receives the family compensation.”²⁹

Regarding custody, in 2021, the Democratic Association of Moroccan Women (ADFM) stated in materials about revising the family code that depriving the woman of the right of custody after remarrying perpetuates discrimination against women.³⁰ A number of feminist activists were surveyed and declared that the provision in which a divorced mother loses custody of her child when she remarries does not apply to the father since he "can remarry without fear of losing the custody".³¹

Custody & Guardianship

POSITIVE DEVELOPMENTS IN MUSLIM FAMILY LAWS

Equal right to child custody:
Bangladesh, The Gambia, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Kenya, Pakistan, Qatar, Senegal, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Tunisia, Turkey:
Child custody is determined by the courts on the basis of the best interests of the child. This has led to an expansion of mothers' rights, as compared to more conservative interpretations of Muslim laws.

Equal right to guardianship of children:
Indonesia, Turkey, Kenya, Singapore:
Ultimately, guardianship of children is determined by the courts on the basis of the best interest of the child.

RECOMMENDATIONS

We recommend the CEDAW Committee urge the State Party to:

- Amend Article 175 of the Family Code 2004 to not deprive the woman of the right of custody upon remarriage.
- Amend Article 236 and 238 of the Family Code to grant women the same rights of guardianship of children as men, and to provide for recourse to be made to the best interests of the child in the event of a dispute.

3. DIVISION OF PROPERTY IN A MARRIAGE

ARTICLE 16

Under Moroccan law, spouses may, through a written document separate from a marriage contract, agree on the investment and distribution of assets acquired during the marriage.³²

However, in 2019, only 0.25 percent of marriages were accompanied by such a contract³³ due to the lack of information or to the refusal of families to establish such an agreement at the time of marriage.

In the absence of such an agreement, 'recourse is made to general standards of evidence, taking into consideration the work of each spouse, the efforts made as well as the responsibilities assumed in the development of the family assets'.³⁴ This ambiguous wording allows the judge to require tangible proof of the wife's financial contribution and, as shown by several decisions of the Court of Cassation, to disregard her contribution through her domestic and care work.³⁵

³⁴ Family Code, art. 49.

³⁵ ADFM CEDAW Submission 2022, para. 64.

Division of matrimonial assets after divorce:

Malaysia

The court may order the division of matrimonial assets (harta sepencarian) acquired through the parties' joint efforts, having regard to the extent of contributions made by each party towards acquiring the assets, debts owed by the parties and the needs of minor children to the marriage.

For assets acquired by the sole efforts of a party, the court may order division of the assets having regard to the other party's contributions towards looking after the home or caring for the family, though the party by whose efforts they were acquired shall receive a greater proportion.

Even though a woman may not have contributed financially to the acquisition of the marital assets, her role as wife and mother are considered as indirect contributions and she is usually granted at least a third of the share of assets.

Indonesia:

- Property acquired during the marriage are considered joint property of the husband and wife.
- Matrimonial assets may be tangible or intangible.
- Upon divorce, each party has the right to receive half of the matrimonial assets unless they had agree otherwise in the marriage contract.

RECOMMENDATIONS

We recommend the CEDAW Committee urge the State Party to:

- Take measures to inform the public on the usage of the written agreement for the division of property and to remove barriers that cause lack of such information, particularly to women from disadvantaged social backgrounds.
- Amend Article 49 of the Family Code to also take into account domestic and care work by courts while adjudicating on the division of marital property upon divorce in the absence of a written agreement.

4. NATIONALITY LAW

ARTICLE 9

While the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child welcomed the 2007 changes in the Nationality Code enabling women to transmit their nationality to their child at birth³⁶, it expressed concern that, in 2014, rural women remained unaware of their right to transmit Moroccan nationality to their children, while 14 percent of births were still unregistered.

Discrimination between men and women in relation to transmission of nationality to spouses still remains.³⁷ Foreign spouses of Moroccan men are automatically entitled to Moroccan citizenship. However, Moroccan women must initiate complicated administrative procedures to pass nationality to their foreign spouses, creating a unique burden on them versus Moroccan men married to non-Moroccan women. Without going through this process, foreign spouses of Moroccan women face obstacles related to residency in Morocco and access to employment and public services.³⁸

NATIONALITY	POSITIVE DEVELOPMENTS IN MUSLIM FAMILY LAW GLOBALLY
TRANSMISSION OF CITIZENSHIP TO FOREIGN-BORN HUSBANDS	AFGHANISTAN, ALGERIA, INDONESIA, IRAQ, KENYA, SINGAPORE, SENEGAL, SOUTH AFRICA, SRI LANKA, TURKEY: A woman married to foreign-born husband can transmit her citizenship to him.

RECOMMENDATIONS

We recommend the CEDAW Committee urge the State Party to:

- Amend the Nationality Code to allow women to transmit nationality to their foreign spouses.
- Take measures to inform the public and create awareness of women's right to transmit Moroccan nationality to their children.

5. INHERITANCE LAW

ARTICLE 16

The inheritance law states that women can inherit only half the share of men who have the same degree of relationship to the deceased.³⁹ In 2004, Morocco removed the inequality between grandchildren who would be excluded from an inheritance of a grandparent because their parent had died; at present, a bequest is obligatory for grandparents in favour of their grandchildren not only via the son, but also via the daughter.⁴⁰

The World Bank reported that "Women's legal inability to inherit equally to men can significantly undermine their economic security and independence, as well as their access to economic opportunity".⁴¹ The USAID/Morocco Gender Analysis Final Report pointed out that customs and traditions denying women any rights to inheritance may be enforced by violence, with women pressured to renounce their rights or threatened to be evicted from the home.⁴²

In December, the Socialist Union of Popular Forces, a political party in Morocco, demanded the repeal of laws that discriminate against women and called for a national debate on the inheritance law. Although their message stirred some controversy, no national or legislative debate ensued.⁴³ While the Family Code is based on traditional interpretations of inheritance law in Islam, a representative of Mobilizing for Rights Associates, a nongovernmental organization based in Morocco, stated in 2014 that “Islam allows for reinterpretation, and it is time for radical decisions to protect women.” She stated that “this law of inheritance was based on the fact that men were the head of the households, which is not the case anymore as many women are the ones who provide for the family or at least contribute in a significant manner.”⁴⁴

Inheritance Rights

POSITIVE DEVELOPMENTS IN MUSLIM FAMILY LAWS

Equal right to inheritance

Turkey

Inheritance law does not discriminate on the basis of gender.
Equal division of property and assets acquired during the marriage is the default property regime.

Divisions of property through bequests, agreement etc.

Jordan, Tunisia:

Bequests can be made in favour of an heir and beyond the one-third limit if other heirs agree to it.

Malaysia:

Division of the deceased's property can be changed in whatever manner if all heirs agree to such division.

RECOMMENDATIONS

We recommend the CEDAW Committee urge the State Party to:

- Amend the relevant law to grant women the same rights as men in matters of inheritance in conformity with Article 16 of CEDAW.

⁴⁴ Ibid.
