[983] Ecuavaisa, "Unos 40 colectivos marcharon en respuesta a una sentencia de la Corte Constitucional sobre una niña trans" (Around 40 groups marched in response to a Constitutional Court judgment on a transgender girl), February 22, 2025; El Comercio, "Sentencia de menor discriminada en Salinas causa reacciones de grupos LGBTI y religiosos" (Judgment on discrimination against minor in Salinas sparks reactions from LGBTI and religious groups), January 17, 2025.

[984] El Comercio, "Daniel Noboa firmó acuerdo sobre ideología de género con lideres religiosos" (Daniel Noboa signed an agreement on gender ideology with religious leaders), March 11, 2025.

[985] Expreso, "'Cambio de género' de José Arroyo reaviva debate sobre uso indebido de derechos trans" (José Arroyo's "gender change" reignites debate on misuse of trans rights), August 8, 2025.

[986] Republic of Ecuador, Memorandum No. MREMH-DSI-2025-0525-M, September 3, 2025, p. 34; Permanent Mission of Ecuador to the OAS, Note No. 4-2-208/2025. On IACHR's files.

[987] Ibid.

[988] Ibid.

[989] Latin American Council of Social Sciences (CLACSO), "Denuncia por criminalización del Estado ecuatoriano contra pueblos indígenas y personas con discapacidad" (Complaint against the State of Ecuador for the criminalization of indigenous peoples and persons with disabilities), September 30, 2025.

430. With respect to human trafficking, the Action Plan against Human Trafficking and the Protocols on Comprehensive Care for Victims were updated to ensure that they were aligned with the Organic Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants.[990] The ECU 911 Integrated Security Service and the Decentralized Autonomous Municipal Government of the Canton of Cuenca issued a resolution to regulate the interoperability of local platform systems for the provision of emergency services, among others, to victims of human trafficking.[991] Despite this, migrants with cognitive and sensory disabilities have been victims of smuggling and trafficking on the Colombian-Ecuadorian border, where they have been reportedly forced to engage in illegal activities by criminal organizations.[992]

431. Concerning persons in the context of human mobility, there has been a reported increase in the number of migrants and internally displaced people, as well as an increase in the number of people arriving in Ecuador seeking international protection. In addition, the Commission was informed about irregular migration and limited access to integration mechanisms, while humanitarian aid systems continue to be under strain and face difficulties in responding to the needs of the population in the context of mobility.

432. Nevertheless, according to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), in 2025 the State carried out reforms to manage these flows of people.[993] In this regard, the Organic Law on Public Integrity was passed in July, which introduced reforms to the Comprehensive Organic Criminal Code (COIP), among other changes. The aforementioned legislation incorporated Article 61.1 into the COIP, which authorizes the State —if an internal armed conflict is declared— to deport any migrant deprived of liberty and ban them from entering Ecuadorian territory for 40 years. Moreover, in the event of non-compliance with this prohibition and if the internal armed conflict persists, the regulation allows such foreigners to be considered a military target.[994] According to available information, over 800 persons deprived of liberty have been deported to Colombia on the basis of this provision.[995]

433. In addition, by means of Decree No. 123 of September 12, 2025, the Office of the President of Ecuador denounced the entire content of the Migration Statute between the Republic of Ecuador and the Government of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, signed on July 6, 2010. This document established a simplified migration regularization procedure for Venezuelan nationals and their family members residing in Ecuador.[996]

434. Meanwhile, internal displacement continues to be on the rise in Ecuador.According to the UNHCR, in June the number of displaced Ecuadorian families amounted to 150,000, which translates to approximately 300,000 people.[997] The previous year, it was estimated that 101,000 new people were internally displaced in Ecuador as a result of conflict and violence.[998]

---

[990] Report submitted by the Republic of Ecuador in response to the IACHR's request for information for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, September 3, 2025.

[991] Republic of Ecuador, Servicio Integrado de Seguridad ECU 911, Resolución de Interoperabilidad (ECU 911 Integrated Security Service, Interoperability Resolution), April 4, 2025.

[992] El Tiempo, "Aberrante caso de tráfico de migrantes con personas en situación de discapacidad en la frontera con Ecuador" (Abhorrent case of migrant smuggling involving persons with disabilities on the border with Ecuador), March 28, 2025.

[993] UNHCR, Ecuador: Operational Update N.7, July 2025.

[994] Republic of Ecuador, Ley Orgánica de Integridad Pública (LOIP) (Organic Law on Public Integrity), Third Supplement of the Official Gazette No. 68, June 26, 2025.

[995] DW, "Ecuador deporta a más de 800 presos colombianos" (Ecuador deports over 800 Colombian inmates), July 26, 2025; Infobae, "Ecuador deportó a más de 800 presos colombianos en un operativo que tensó la relación entre los gobiernos de Noboa y Petro" (Ecuador deports over 800 Colombian inmates in an operation that strains relations between the Noboa and Petro administrations), July 26, 2025.

[996] Republic of Ecuador, Decreto Ejecutivo No. 123 (Executive Decree No. 123), September 12, 2025; La República, "Noboa firma decreto que pone fin a acuerdo migratorio con Venezuela" (Noboa signs decree ending immigration agreement with Venezuela), September 13, 2025.

[997] UNHCR, Tendencias nacionales. El desplazamiento forzado en Ecuador 2025 (2025 national trends on forced displacement in Ecuador), June 20, 2025, p. 13.

[998] Internal Displacement Monitoring Center, 2025 Global Report on Internal Displacement, May 13, 2025, p. 79.

435. With regard to the rights of older persons, the State offered a course titled "National Specialized System for the Comprehensive Protection of the Rights of Older Persons" (SINEPIDPAM), which was attended by 3,500 technical personnel nationwide. Comprehensive care services for older persons living in poverty, vulnerable situations or in a state of neglect were strengthened by means of new residential nursing homes, day care centers and socialization spaces, as well as home care programs aimed at promoting active and healthy aging.[999] In addition, the Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion (MIES) set up state brigades in commemoration of the World Elder Abuse Awareness Day to promote the respect for and the protection of the rights of older persons.[1000]

436. In terms of social welfare, retirees demanded an increase in their pensions, which currently ranges from 225 US dollars to 450 US dollars per month, while the basic food basket in Ecuador reportedly amounts to 800 US dollars.[1001] Still, the Ecuadorian Social Security Institute (IESS) ruled out the possibility of raising the retirement age.[1002]Reports also indicate high levels of poverty and informality affecting older persons, especially in urban areas such as Quito, where many continue to work in precarious or informal conditions to complement their income.[1003]

437. With respect to persons deprived of liberty, a polyclinic was opened in the Guayas No. 1 Detention Center in Guayaquil, which houses almost 20 percent of the country's detainees.[1004]

438. In terms of challenges, according to official data, as of July 25, 2025, Ecuador recorded 36,161 persons deprived of liberty, while its official prison capacity is 26,818 inmates,[1005] which means that overcrowding reaches 34.8 percent.[1006] The most critical situation is that at the Guayas No. 1 Detention Center, which has a 64 percent rate of overcrowding[1007] and hundreds of cases of tuberculosis.[1008]

439. The Commission noted with concern the numerous deaths of persons in custody. In this regard, in a press release of November 26, it condemned the deaths of at least 663 persons deprived of liberty

[999] Permanent Mission of Ecuador to the OAS, Note No. 4-2-208/2025 and Memorandum No. MREMH-DSI-2025-0525-M, September 3, 2025, pp. 27–32.

[1000] MIES, "Con brigada de servicios estatales, MIES conmemora la importancia de la toma de conciencia del abuso y maltrato en la vejez" (With a state brigade, MIES commemorates the importance of raising awareness about elder abuse and ill-treatment), June 10, 2025.

[1001] La Hora, "La mayoría de jubilados en Ecuador recibe menos de 450 al mes y se exige aumento de pensiones" (Most retirees in Ecuador earn less than 450 US dollars per month; pension increases are being demanded), July 2, 2025.

[1002] La Hora, "IESS asegura que no subirá edad de jubilación en Ecuador, mientras pensiones consumen el 70% de su presupuesto" (IESS assures that it will not raise the retirement age in Ecuador, while 70 percent of its budget is allocated to pensions), July 3, 2025.

[1003] El Comercio, "Ser adulto mayor en las calles de Quito sin pensión ni ingreso fijo: 'Si no vendo, no como'" (Being an older person in the streets of Quito without a pension or fixed income: "If I don't sell anything, I don't eat"), June 22, 2025.

[1004] National Service for Comprehensive Care for Adults Deprived of Liberty and Adolescent Offenders (SNAI), "SNAI inaugura policlínico en el CPL Guayas Nro. 1, el más poblado del país" (SNAI opens polyclinic at Guayas No. 1 Detention Center, the most populous penitentiary in the country), June 6, 2025.

[1005] World Prison Brief, Institute for Crime & Justice Policy Research, World Prison Brief data - Ecuador, 2025, accessed on September 10, 2025.

[1006] The calculation was made by the IACHR based on available information; see: El Diario, "Hay más de 36 mil presos en Ecuador, algunas cárceles registran hacinamiento, según reportes del SNAI" (There are over 36,000 inmates in Ecuador, with some prisons experiencing overcrowding, according to SNAI's reports), September 9, 2025; Sí se puede Ecuador, "Hay más de 36 mil presos en Ecuador, algunas cárceles registran hacinamiento" (There are over 36,000 inmates in Ecuador, with some prisons experiencing overcrowding), September 10, 2025; and La Marea, "Hay más de 36 mil presos en Ecuador, algunas cárceles registran hacinamiento, según reportes del SNAI" (There are over 36,000 inmates in Ecuador, with some prisons experiencing overcrowding, according to SNAI's reports), September 10, 2025.

[1007] The calculation was made by the IACHR based on available information; see: El Diario, "Hay más de 36 mil presos en Ecuador, algunas cárceles registran hacinamiento, según reportes del SNAI" (There are over 36,000 inmates in Ecuador, with some prisons experiencing overcrowding, according to reports from the SNAI), September 9, 2025; Sí se puede Ecuador, "Hay más de 36 mil presos en Ecuador, algunas cárceles registran hacinamiento" (There are over 36,000 inmates in Ecuador, with some prisons experiencing overcrowding), September 10, 2025; and La Marea, "Hay más de 36 mil presos en Ecuador, algunas cárceles registran hacinamiento, según reportes del SNAI" (There are over 36,000 inmates in Ecuador, with some prisons experiencing overcrowding, according to SNAI's reports), September 10, 2025.

[1008] SINAI, "Se fortalece el Plan de Atención de Salud con el traslado de 401 internos del CPL Guayas" (Healthcare Plan strengthened with the transfer of 401 inmates from Guayas Detention Center), August 1, 2025.

in violent incidents between January 2020 and November 9, 2025, 72 of which occurred in 2025.[1009] It also condemned the deaths of 14 people in a riot in Machala on September 22, 2025,[1010] and of 17 people in the Esmeraldas massacre on September 25.[1011] In addition, the Commission noted that the civil society recorded 590 deaths due to health problems at the Guayas No. 1 Detention Center, which is also known as the "Penitenciaria del Litoral." The cause of this phenomenon is allegedly linked to deficient medical assistance, a lack of health measures to prevent the spread of diseases and extremely poor nutrition.[1012]

440. To address the crisis of violence within prisons, the executive branch issued decrees, in particular Decree No. 599 of April 12 and Decree No. 23 of June 10, authorizing military intervention in detention centers.[1013] However, in this landscape, there have been reports of human rights violations against persons deprived of liberty during the militarization of prisons. According to data submitted by the civil society, the Guayas No. 1, Esmeraldas and Cotopaxi detention centers give out insufficient food, present obstacles to accessing reinsertion programs and visits, and provide restricted health services, which includes delays in inmate transfers for medical appointments and to hospitals during emergencies.[1014] There have also been reports of violence against prison officers: at least eight officers were reportedly shot in 2025, five of whom died.[1015]

XV. EL SALVADOR

- General considerations

441. With regard to progress, the Commission highlights efforts made by the Republic of El Salvador (hereinafter, "El Salvador") to promote accessibility and inclusion within democratic institutions, such as measures aimed at facilitating voting by persons with disabilities, protocols to prevent political violence, and the application of a minimum 30 percent quota for women candidacies. It also notes actions aimed at recognizing the right to receive and provide care under conditions of equality and dignity, and at reducing gender gaps by means of co-responsibility for care and the economic empowerment of women. In addition, the Commission commends the development of the Protocol on Care of Women and Children Victims of Violence

[1009] IACHR, Press Release No. 12/25, IACHR urges Ecuador to take effective action to end ongoing prison violence, January 14, 2025.

[1010] IACHR [@CIDH], (September 23, 2025), #Ecuador: #CIDH condena la muerte de al menos 14 personas, entre ellas un guardia penitenciario, en el contexto de un motín ocurrido en la cárcel de #Machala de la provincia #ElOro el #22Sept, que también resultó en decenas de personas fugadas (…) (#Ecuador: The #IACHR condemns the death of at least 14 people, including a prison guard, in the context of a riot that occurred at the #Machala prison in the province of #ElOro on #SEPT22, which also resulted in dozens of fugitives […]) [X post], X, https://x.com/cidh/status/1970497035674542179?s=43.

[1011] France 24, "Un segundo motín carcelario en Ecuador deja al menos 17 muertos en Esmeraldas" (A second prison riot in Ecuador results in at least 17 dead in Esmeraldas), September 25, 2025; DW, "Al menos 17 muertos deja nueva masacre en cárcel de Ecuador" (At least 17 die in new massacre at a prison in Ecuador), September 25, 2025; SWI swissinfo.ch, "Las masacres en cárceles vuelven a sacudir a Ecuador con más de 30 muertos en tres días" (Prison massacres shake up Ecuador once again, with more than 30 dead in three days), September 26, 2025.

[1012] Alianza por los Derechos Humanos Ecuador, Statement: We demand an end to the latent prison massacre perpetuated by the Ecuadorian State in the Penitentiary of the Litoral, November 20, 2025.

[1013] United Nations Committee against Torture, Information received from Ecuador on follow-up to the concluding observations on its eighth periodic report, CAT/C/ECU/FCO/8, September 8, 2025, paras. 25 and 41; also see: Republic of Ecuador, Consultas de Decretos (Decree searches), 2025.

[1014] Permanent Committee for the Defense of Human Rights [@CDHGYE], (September 15, 2025), #Pronunciamiento CDH denuncia 394 personas privadas de libertad fallecidas en cárceles de Guayaquil durante el 2,025 resultado de la ocupación militar (#Statement. The CDH reports that 394 persons deprived of liberty died in Guayaquil prisons during 2025 as a result of the military intervention) [X post], X, https://x.com/CDHGYE/status/1967586679197491694/photo/1; Committee of Relatives for a Dignified Life, Information received by the IACHR via email, September 16, 2025.

[1015] Primicias, "Guía penitenciaria fue asesinada cuando salía de la cárcel de Guayaquil, el 17 de septiembre" (Prison guard murdered as she leaves the Guayaquil prison on September 17), September 17, 2025; El Universo, "Guía penitenciaria fue asesinada a tiros frente a cárcel de Guayaquil" (Prison guard shot dead outside the Guayaquil prison), September 17, 2025; El comercio, "Guía penitenciaria fue asesinada en Guayaquil mientras esperaba un bus" (Prison guard murdered in Guayaquil while waiting for the bus), September 17, 2025.

established by the Supreme Court of Justice (CSJ). The Commission further acknowledges the sustained significant reduction in the country's homicide rate.

442. With regard to the challenges, the Commission observes the excessive prolongation of the state of emergency, which has led to more than 88,000 detentions and mass claims of human rights violations. It also notes the approval of constitutional reforms enabling indefinite presidential reelection, as well as restrictions on civic space stemming from the detention of human rights defenders and the passing of the Foreign Agents Law. Access to justice for persons deprived of liberty and the conditions of their detention remain a concern, along with new allegations of torture and deaths of persons under state custody. The Commission also notes legislative reforms under which minors can be transferred to adult prisons.

443. On September 8, 2025, the State submitted its response to the Commission's request for information to prepare this chapter.[1016]

- Specific issues

444. With regard to democratic institutionality, the State reported that, since January, the Supreme Electoral Tribunal (TSE) has advanced on the planning of the 2027 elections with instruments such as the General Elections Plan, the Institutional Strategic Plan and the Special Extraordinary Elections Budget.[1017] The TSE also adopted measures aimed at improving accessibility and promoting the inclusion of historically excluded groups, including the development of materials in accessible formats; training targeted at electoral personnel; preferential assistance for vulnerable groups; oversight of adaptations to polling stations for persons with disabilities; application of a minimum 30 percent quota for women candidacies; together with the implementation of protocols to prevent political violence. In addition, it reported efforts to strengthen the transparency and legitimacy of the electoral process, such as receiving international electoral observation missions.

445. On July 31, 2025, the Legislative Assembly of El Salvador passed and ratified a constitutional reform to lift the prohibition on presidential reelection, remove the loss of citizenship for those in favor of reelection, extend the presidential term to six years as of the next term, eliminate the second electoral round even without having an absolute majority of votes in the first round, and bring forward the end of the current presidential term to June 1, 2027.[1018] The Commission warned that altering the presidential term length, combined with enabling indefinite reelection, represents a serious setback for democracy and the Rule of Law in the country —not only due to the reform's content, but also due to the accelerated adoption of said reform without legislative debate or public consultation. In this regard, the State expressed that the possibility of reelection does not suppress power alternation, nor does it impose continuity, since it grants the Salvadoran people freedom to decide at the ballot box whether to continue or not with a particular political project.[1019] This constitutional reform followed ratification of another reform that enables approval and ratification of amendments to the Constitution within the same legislative period, whereas in the past said changes had to be processed within two different periods.[1020]

446. With regard to human rights institutions, the State of El Salvador reported several advances including the evaluation of the 2021–2025 National Equality Plan and the Action Plan for a Life Free of Violence, [1016] Republic of El Salvador, Diplomatic Note No. MPOEA-OEA-104/2025, September 8, 2025, Annex: Report submitted by the State of El Salvador in response to the request for information of the IACHR for the preparation of Chapter IV of the 2025 Annual Report (hereinafter, "Report of the State of El Salvador"), September 8, 2025. On IACHR´s files.

[1017] Republic of El Salvador, Report submitted by the State of El Salvador, September 8, 2025, pp. 1 and 2. On IACHR´s files.

[1018] Legislative Assembly, Legislative Decree No. 371, To ratify Constitutional Reform Agreement No. 3, dated July 31, 2025, published on the Official Gazette No. 143, Volume No. 448, of the same date, which includes amendments to Articles 75, 80, 152 and 154 of the Constitution of the Republic of El Salvador, July 31, 2025.

[1019] Republic of El Salvador, Diplomatic Note No. MPOEA-OEA-082/2025, August 6, 2025.

[1020] Amnesty International, El Salvador: Ratification of the constitutional reform deepens the risk of human rights abuses, February 6, 2025; Legislative Assembly, Legislative Decree No. 197, To ratify Constitutional Reform No. 1, dated April 29, 2024, January 29, 2025.

conducted in collaboration with several institutions and civil society organizations.[1021] It noted the implementation of public policies such as the 2022–2030 National Policy on the Co-responsibility for Care and MERCAMUJER (itinerant market to promote businesses created by Salvadoran women and contribute to their economic autonomy) as an economic empowerment strategy. In terms of training activities, the State held sessions for judges and magistrates to train them in evaluating evidence from a human rights perspective, as well as programs on the rights of women by the Salvadoran Institute for the Development of Women targeted at public officials and the general population. In addition, the State noted the holding of the First Global Summit on Human Rights in September 2025.

447. As for citizen security, the State indicated that it has achieved unprecedented progress, consolidating a structural transformation with a drastic reduction in criminality since 2019 and the strengthening of the justice system with a human rights approach.[1022] It highlighted that the homicide rate has dropped from 35.8 per 100,000 inhabitants in 2019 to 1.9 in 2024, and noted an investigative effectiveness rate of above 98 percent in case resolution. The State affirmed that this transformation relies on its Territorial Control Plan and the state of emergency, along with innovative tools such as the Homicide Resolution Protocol, which reportedly allow for case resolution in less than 72 hours. It indicated that these achievements also translate into tangible economic benefits for the population. The State further reported other measures such as strategic operations to capture those responsible for homicides and gang leaders, the seizure of tons of drugs, and cooperation with the United States for the deportation and detention of gang members. It also noted efforts related to prevention and victim care, such as those implemented by the Specialized Units for Women and Human Rights of the National Civil Police.

448. In addition, the Commission reiterated its concern over the excessive and indefinite prolongation of the state of emergency declared on March 27, 2022. According to the State, the measure continues to be justified to neutralize the persistence and reorganization of criminal structures, prevent recruitment of minors on social media, address transnational criminal networks and consolidate advances in security and the historic reduction in homicides.[1023] In this regard, the Commission recalled its recommendation to end the suspension of rights and guarantees restricted under the state of emergency and to develop and implement an evidenced-based, comprehensive, multisectoral citizen security policy addressing the causes and consequences of criminality with a human rights perspective. The Commission also noted that, as of August, more than 88,000 people[1024] had been detained in that context, with approximately 7,000 claims of human rights violations due to arbitrary detentions, torture and the deaths of more than 400[1025] persons deprived of liberty.[1026] It also voiced its concern over the application of provisions of the state of emergency and the fight against organized crime to situations unrelated to the grounds alleged by the State, including the detention of human rights defenders and their continued pretrial incommunicado detention.

[1021] Republic of El Salvador, Report submitted by the State of El Salvador, September 8, 2025, pp. 3–5. On IACHR's files.
[1022] Ibid., pp. 11-12.
[1023] Legislative Assembly, Legislative Decree No. 439, To extend up to December 1, 2025 the provisions of Decree Law 333/22 by means of which the state of emergency was established, to continue with the restoration of order, citizen security, and territorial control, October 29, 2025; Legislative Assembly, Legislative Decree No. 372, To extend up to September 2, 2025 the provisions of Decree Law the provisions of Decree Law 333/22 by means of which the state of emergency was established, to continue with the restoration of order, citizen security, and territorial control, July 31, 2025.
[1024] According to public information, that figure had exceeded 89,000 people by November 2025. See: SWI, "Víctimas de la 'guerra' antipandillas piden el fin del régimen de excepción en El Salvador" (Victims of the anti-gang 'war' call for end to state of emergency in El Salvador), November 12, 2025; Diario El Mundo, "Villatoro dice tienen '89,000 registros de detenciones' en el régimen de excepción" (Villatoro says they have 89,000 detention records under the state of emergency), August 27, 2025.
[1025] As indicated below, according to information from the organization Socorro Jurídico Humanitario (SJH), as of October 31, a total of 450 people had reportedly died under state custody. See: La Prensa Gráfica, "148 privados de libertad tuvieron muerte violenta en el marco del régimen, según informe de SJH" (148 persons deprived of liberty suffered violent deaths under the regime, according to SJH report), November 4, 2025.
[1026] Human Rights Watch, "El Salvador: Police Officers Speak Out About Abuses," June 27, 2025; Passionist Social Service (SSPAS), Human Rights Institute of the Central American University José Simeón Cañas (IDHUCA), Center for the Study of Sexual and Gender Diversity (AMATE), Salvadoran Network of Women Human Rights Defenders, Foundation for Law Application (FESPAD), Azul Originario Association, Bilbao, Community Development Association (ADECO), Tres años de régimen de excepción: tortura sistemática en las cárceles de El Salvador (Three years of state of emergency: systematic torture in El Salvador's prisons), March 2025.

449. With regard to access to justice and judicial independence, the State listed the efforts made by several institutions.[1027] The CSJ created the Specialized Coordination Unit on Cases Involving Groups in Situations of Vulnerability and Hate Crimes in the Criminal Chamber to ensure a gender-sensitive analysis. It is also developing an artificial intelligence tool to systematize case-law, implementing a platform to help optimize procedural management. It is conducting multiple training sessions for justice operators on topics such as gender-based reparations and due diligence in forced disappearance cases. In addition, the CSJ developed a Protocol on the Care of Women and Children Victims of Violence to reduce secondary victimization, standardize services, and strengthen institutional coordination, with a focus on equality and trauma-informed care.

450. With regard to the investigation of crimes, the Office of the Attorney General of the Republic (FGR) reported that, to fight impunity and safeguard victims' rights, it had initiated 68,634 investigations as of August, out of which 19,078 had been brought to court.[1028] It noted that the Technical Working Group of the Office of the Deputy Prosecutor Office for Women, Children, Adolescents and Other Vulnerable Groups is a monthly coordination space targeted at heads of units and prosecutorial personnel to improve victims' care and investigative effectiveness. It also mentioned the implementation of specialized instruments with a gender and intersectional perspective, in addition to existing specialized units with multidisciplinary teams within the FGR.

451. Additionally, the Office of the Public Defender of the Republic reported the specialization of its services to provide differentiated assistance to historically excluded groups.[1029] It indicated that, as of June, 3,253 women had received services from the specialized units for women; that the specialized units for children and adolescents had provided direct assistance services in 6,593 cases and had offered legal advice in 10,139 legal cases; that the Integrated Center for Psychosocial Care for Children and Adolescents had carried out 174 legal representations and 36 visits to care homes; that it had supported families in cases involving irregular land parcels; and that, as of August, it had undertaken 498 administrative actions in support of victims of the massacre of El Mozote and surrounding areas. Additionally, it reported the use of technology to bring its services closer to the population, eliminating geographic and economic barriers,[1030] as well as the implementation of mediation and conciliation as key tools for conflict resolution.

452. In turn, during a hearing held in March 2025, the participant organizations reiterated to the Commission the deterioration of judicial independence taking place in the country, marked by arbitrary transfers, disciplinary sanctions, political pressures and the co-optation of key bodies such as the National Council of the Judiciary, which has had a direct impact on access to justice.[1031] They indicated that these interferences have led to the widespread use of pretrial detention in merely formal judicial hearings and the failure to execute release orders, particularly affecting people detained under the state of emergency and those reporting state abuses. According to the information presented, the lack of effective judicial oversight and the inability to challenge arbitrary actions have consolidated a system of selective impunity, in which cases against state agents fail to progress, whereas proceedings against human rights defenders, community leaders and government critics move forward rapidly and without guarantees.

453. There is also concern about the measures adopted to address the overload of the justice system in the country. According to public information, the Supreme Court of Justice has taken up to three years to resolve habeas corpus petitions filed during the state of emergency.[1032] In addition, the Attorney General of the Republic (FGR) has publicly stated that 291 employees of the FGR are responsible for investigating more

[1027] Republic of El Salvador, Report submitted by the State of El Salvador, September 8, 2025, pp. 12–16. On IACHR's files.
[1028] Ibid., pp. 3–5.
[1029] Ibid., pp. 12–16.
[1030] In particular, it listed the Virtual Care Center, which provides legal guidance and advice without requiring people moving; the nationwide free and specialized Public Criminal Defense Unit service, operating continuously; and the Mobile Services Unit, which brings legal and psychosocial assistance to rural and hard-to-reach communities, benefiting 1,045 people in 2025.
[1031] IACHR, thematic hearing "El Salvador: Status of judicial independence," 192nd regular period of sessions, March 4, 2025.
[1032] La Prensa Gráfica, "Corte Suprema de Justicia tarda tres años en responder habeas corpus en favor de capturados del régimen de excepción" (Supreme Court of Justice takes three years to respond to habeas corpus petitions for those detained under the state of emergency), September 28, 2025.

than 82,000 people, resulting in an average of 282 accused people per staff member.[1033] In that context, the Commission is alarmed by the adoption of Legislative Decree No. 383, which once again extends criminal investigation and pretrial detention periods, allowing the FGR to file charges against persons detained due to alleged organized crime-related offenses until 2027.[1034] Moreover, with respect to the criteria established on criminal prosecution that put together hundreds of persons in mass trials based on factors such as place of residence at the time of arrest, the Commission warns of the need to respect the presumption of innocence, due process and judicial guarantees of the accused.[1035]

454. According to official information, as of August 14, a total of 88,750 persons were deprived of liberty during the regime.[1036] Based on civil society estimates, which show a total of 100,812 persons deprived of liberty —accounting for nearly 2.6 percent of the total adult population deprived of liberty— El Salvador's incarceration rate stands at 1,824 detainees per 100,000 inhabitants.[1037] This positions it as the country with the highest incarceration rate in the world.[1038] Furthermore, according to the World Bank, of the total incarcerated population, only 23 percent have been convicted, while the remaining 77 percent are awaiting charges or trial.[1039]

455. In addition, the Commission reiterates its concern over the deplorable conditions of detention, characterized by a severe overcrowding rate of 269.5 percent —taking into account the actual number of detainees against the established capacity of 27,280 people.[1040] Testimonies from people who has been released gathered by the civil society and the press describe unsanitary conditions in prisons; exposed toilets in cells; poor or no ventilation or natural light; lack of beds or mattresses; shortage of water for consumption and hygiene; decomposed food; denial of medical care and systematic use of torture.[1041] Some of these conditions pose serious risks to the lives and integrity of those detained and have even caused deaths. In this

[1033] La Prensa Gráfica, "Hay 291 fiscales para 82,078 procesados durante régimen de excepción en El Salvador" (There are 291 prosecutors in charge of the cases of 82,078 people prosecuted during state of emergency in El Salvador), October 21, 2025.

[1034] Legislative Assembly, Legislative Decree No.° 383, Amendments to Law against Organized Crime, August 15, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "Asamblea aprueba reformas a la Ley contra el Crimen Organizado" (Assembly passes reforms to Law against Organized Crime), August 15, 2025; SWI, "Aprueban una reforma para ampliar el tiempo de la detención provisional en El Salvador" (A reform to extend the pretrial detention period in El Salvador was adopted), August 15, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "Capturados en régimen de excepción quedan en incertidumbre tras finalización del Decreto 803 y reforma a Ley de Crimen Organizado" (Detainees under state of emergency left in uncertainty after expiration of Decree 803 and amendment to Law against Organized Crime), August 25, 2025.

[1035] La Prensa Gráfica, "MOVIR muestra preocupación por juicios masivos que podrían durar meses en El Salvador" (Movement of Victims of the Regime (MOVIR) expresses concern over mass trials that could last months in El Salvador), October 3, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "Capturados en régimen de excepción comienzan a ser agrupados por ubicación geográfica" (Detainees under state of emergency begin to be grouped by geographic location), October 31, 2025.

[1036] Legislative Assembly, Government of El Salvador, "Pleno aprueba reformar Ley Contra Crimen Organizado para ampliar plazos de detención" (Plenary Assembly passes reform to Law against Organized Crime to extend detention periods), August 15, 2025; and "Reforma a la Ley Contra Crimen Organizado ampliaría plazos de detención" (Reform to the Law against Organized Crime to extend detention periods), August 14, 2025. According to public information, that figure had exceeded 89,000 people by November 2025. See: SWI, "Víctimas de la 'guerra' antipandillas piden el fin del régimen de excepción en El Salvador" (Victims of the anti-gang 'war' call for end to state of emergency in El Salvador), November 12, 2025; Diario El Mundo, "Villatoro dice tienen '89,000 registros de detenciones' en el régimen de excepción" (Villatoro says they have 89,000 detention records under the state of emergency) August 27, 2025.

[1037] Azul Originario, AMATE, FESPAD, IDHUCA, Salvadoran Network of Women Human Rights Defenders and SSPAS, Tres años de régimen de excepción: Tortura sistemática en las cárceles de El Salvador (Three years of state of emergency: systematic torture in El Salvador's prisons), March 2025, p. 35.

[1038] World Prison Brief, Institute for Crime & Justice Policy Research, Birkbeck at University of London, Highest to Lowest - Prison Population Rate – Entire world, 2025.

[1039] Azul Originario, AMATE, FESPAD, IDHUCA, Salvadoran Network of Women Human Rights Defenders and SSPAS, Tres años de régimen de excepción: Tortura sistemática en las cárceles de El Salvador (Three years of state of emergency: systematic torture in El Salvador's prisons), March 2025, p. 35.

[1040] Ibid.

[1041] Ibid., pp. 57, 58, 59, 63, 64, 90; La Prensa Gráfica, "'Bienvenidos al cementerio de hombres vivos': la brutalidad en la megacárcel de Bukele que denuncian 8 de los venezolanos deportados por EUA a El Salvador" ("Welcome to the cemetery of living men": brutality in Bukele's megaprison reported by eight Venezuelans deported by the United States to El Salvador), August 18, 2025; BBC, "'We lived through hell,' say Venezuelans released from mega-prison in El Salvador," July 25, 2025; and El salvador.com, "Venezuelan prosecutor's office opens investigation against Bukele for possible torture of migrants at CECOT," July 21, 2025; see also: El tiempo, "'De aquí no van a salir nunca, solo en bolsas negras': venezolanos relatan cómo es la cárcel de máxima seguridad de El Salvador tras ser liberados" ("You will never get out of here, only in body bags": Venezuelans describe El Salvador's maximum security prison after being released), July 27, 2025.

scenario, as of October 31, 450 people had reportedly died under state custody since the beginning of the regime,[1042] including at least 25 women.[1043]

456. In relation to the allegations of torture, the Commission condemns the extremely violent practices documented by civil society organizations and the press, based on testimonies from survivors who had been detained at the CECOT. According to available information, practices at the CECOT included daily and constant beatings; asphyxiation using water tanks; sexual violence (rape, forced oral sex, forced nudity, and intrusive body searches), the use of pepper spray, rubber bullets, psychological abuse, placement in isolation and punishment cells without access to ventilation or natural light; and permanent exposure to intense artificial lighting.[1044]

457. For their part, women held in detention reportedly face several forms of abuse, exploitation, and sexual violence, including the extortion and rape by prison guards against those who had no assistance from their families. These women were forced to engage in sexual acts in exchange for sanitary towels, toilet paper, or other hygiene items.[1045] In addition, the civil society have reported burial pits in the Izalco and Apanteos prison facilities where fetuses from women who suffered miscarriages —allegedly due to inadequate conditions to sustain their pregnancies— are buried; some of those pregnancies reportedly resulted from rape.[1046]

458. In addition to the foregoing, the Commission is concerned about the fact that families of persons deprived of liberty under the state of emergency regime are not informed on their relative's detention, their place of confinement and the conditions of detention. This occurs in a context in which persons held at the CECOT face an absolute prohibition of contact with the outside world.[1047]

459. In addition, according to its Annual Report, between May 2024 and April 2025, the Office of the Prosecutor for the Defense of Human Rights (PDDH) conducted 419 inspections of prison facilities, centers for children and adolescents, detention centers, and hospitals holding persons deprived of liberty. It also recorded that 7,915 people requested its intervention to learn about the situation of persons deprived of [1042] La Prensa Gráfica, "148 privados de libertad tuvieron muerte violenta en el marco del régimen, según informe de SJH" (148 persons deprived of liberty suffered violent deaths under the regime, according to SJH report), November 4, 2025.

[1043] El Mundo, "Al menos 25 mujeres han muerto en las cárceles durante el régimen de excepción, según organizaciones feministas" (At least 25 women have died in prisons during the state of emergency, according to feminist organizations), March 8, 2025.

[1044] Information provided to the IACHR by civil society organizations in the context of a meeting, August 27, 2025; Azul Originario, AMATE, FESPAD, IDHUCA, Salvadoran Network of Women Human Rights Defenders and SSPAS, Tres años de régimen de excepción: Tortura sistemática en las cárceles de El Salvador (Three years of state of emergency: systematic torture in El Salvador's prisons), March 2025, pp. 62, 63, 64, 90; Human Rights Watch, "'You Have Arrived in Hell' Torture and Other Abuses Against Venezuelans in El Salvador's Mega Prison," November 12, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "'Bienvenidos al cementerio de hombres vivos': la brutalidad en la megacárcel de Bukele que denuncian 8 de los venezolanos deportados por EUA a El Salvador" ("Welcome to the cemetery of living men": brutality in Bukele's mega-prison reported by eight Venezuelans deported by the United States to El Salvador), August 18, 2025; BBC, "'We lived through hell,' say Venezuelans released from mega-prison in El Salvador," July 25, 2025; El salvador.com, "Venezuelan Prosecutor's Office opens investigation against Bukele for possible torture of migrants in the CECOT," July 21, 2025; see also: El tiempo, "'De aquí no van a salir nunca, solo en bolsas negras': venezolanos relatan cómo es la cárcel de máxima seguridad de El Salvador tras ser liberados" ("You will never get out of here, only in body bags": Venezuelans describe El Salvador's maximum security prison after being released), July 27, 2025.

[1045] Azul Originario, AMATE, FESPAD, IDHUCA, Salvadoran Network of Women Human Rights Defenders and SSPAS, Tres años de régimen de excepción: Tortura sistemática en las cárceles de El Salvador (Three years of state of emergency: systematic torture in El Salvador's prisons), March 2025, p. 62; Elementos, "Juzgado liberó a militar que usaba régimen de excepción para chantajear sexualmente a mujeres" (Court frees soldier who used state of emergency to sexually extort women), September 24, 2025; Human Rights Watch, "El Salvador: Police officers speak out about abuses," June 27, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "Piden investigar agresiones sexuales contra mujeres privadas de libertad en El Salvador" (Calls made to investigate sexual assaults against women deprived of liberty in El Salvador), October 4, 2025; El Salvador.com, "Custodians demand sex in exchange for sanitary napkins, according to organizations," April 15, 2025; SSPAS, Tres años de régimen de excepción: tortura sistemática en las cárceles de El Salvador (Three years of state of emergency: systematic torture in El Salvador's prisons), March 2025.

[1046] Human Rights Observatory of the Central American University José Simeón Cañas, El Salvador's Press Archive, April 4, 2025; El Diario de Hoy, "Abogada denuncia que han enterrado fetos en fosas clandestinas en las prisiones" (A lawyer reports burial of fetuses in clandestine pits in prisons), April 4, 2025; El Salvador.com, "Lawyer reports that fetuses have been buried in clandestine graves in prisons," April 4, 2025; and La Prensa Gráfica, "Documentan abusos contra bebés y mujeres en prisión durante régimen de excepción" (Abuses against babies and women in prison were documented during the state of emergency), April 7, 2025.

[1047] Information provided to the IACHR by civil society organizations during a meeting, August 27, 2025.

liberty.[1048] According to the head of the office, in October no complaints of torture in places of deprivation of liberty had been received.[1049] Human rights organizations and families of detainees under the state of emergency reacted by pointing to previously filed complaints and by submitting new complaints regarding various violations of human rights, including cases of torture.[1050]

460. As for the rights of children and adolescents, the Commission voiced its concern over the legislative reforms affecting the rights of this population. In February 2025, legislation authorizing the transfer of people under 18 facing criminal charges to adult prison facilities, albeit in separate modules, was adopted. This law contravenes international juvenile justice standards.[1051] In this regard, in a joint statement, the Committee on the Rights of the Child, UNICEF, the OHCHR office in El Salvador and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) warned that the reforms violated international human rights instruments and standards, such as the Beijing Rules.[1052]

461. During 2025, there were alarming reports on the detention of human rights defenders and the passing of the Foreign Agents Law, which could restrict the legitimate operation of civil society organizations and the civic space in the country.

462. In this regard, the Commission expressed its concern over the detention of lawyer Enrique Anaya, which took place on June 17 in Santa Tecla, where he is reportedly being accused of money laundering.[1053] The Commission granted precautionary measures in his favor, considering that there is a serious risk to his rights to life, health, and personal integrity, given the impossibility of knowing about his health condition as a result of the fact that he has been detained incommunicado since his transfer to La Occidental Prison for Persons Deprived of Liberty, Foreigners and Officials.[1054]

463. In addition, the Commission voiced its deep concern over allegations of short-term forced disappearance of human rights defender Ruth López, a member of the CRISTOSAL organization, who was detained by state security forces on May 18 by means of an administrative order issued by the Office of the Attorney General.[1055] Subsequently, the Commission learned that on June 2, the Office of the Attorney General filed formal charges against her for the crime of illicit enrichment. On June 4, the human rights defender was [1048] Diario El Mundo, "Casi 8,000 personas pidieron intervención de PDDH para conocer la condición de sus familiares en prisión" (Nearly 8,000 people requested intervention from the PDDH to know about the condition of their relatives in prison), September 3, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "Procuraduría de Derechos Humanos realizó 199 inspecciones menos en centros penales entre 2024 y 2025" (The PDDH conducted 199 fewer inspections of prison facilities between 2024 and 2025), August 28, 2025.

[1049] El Diario de Hoy, "MOVIR llama a recibir al nuevo titular de la PDDH con denuncias de violaciones a derechos" (MOVIR calls upon welcoming the new head of the PDDH with complaints of human rights violations), October 14, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "Procuradora de Derechos Humanos afirma no haber recibido denuncias de torturas en cárceles" (Prosecutor for the Defense of Human Rights claims not having received complaints of torture in prisons), October 6, 2025.

[1050] La Prensa Gráfica, "Organizaciones desmienten a procuradora de derechos humanos de El Salvador por denuncias en régimen de excepción" (Organizations refute El Salvador Prosecutor for the Defense of Human Rights' claims on state of emergency complaints), October 7, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "MOVIR presenta 150 denuncias ante PDDH por capturas arbitrarias, torturas y falta de atención médica durante régimen de excepción" (MOVIR files 150 complaints with the PDDH over arbitrary detentions, torture and lack of medical care during state of emergency), October 21, 2025; Diario El Mundo, "85 personas del Movir presentan denuncias ante la PDDH y piden verificaciones médicas a detenidos" (85 MOVIR members file complaints with the PDDH and request medical checks for detainees), October 24, 2025.

[1051] Legislative Assembly, Legislative Decree No. 225, Amendments to the Juvenile Criminal Law, February 12, 2025; Human Rights Watch, "El Salvador: Children to be moved to adult prisons," February 24, 2025; Amnesty International, "El Salvador: Criminal law reforms exacerbate human rights violations against children and adolescents," February 26, 2025.

[1052] UNICEF, "Joint Statement by CRC, OHCHR, UNICEF and UNFPA on reforms to the Juvenile Penal Law and Penitentiary Law in El Salvador," February 13, 2025.

[1053] La Prensa Gráfica, "Detienen al abogado Enrique Anaya" (Lawyer Enrique Anaya arrested), June 7, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "'Estamos peor que al inicio. No sabemos dónde está': Se desconoce paradero de Enrique Anaya" ("We are even worse than at the beginning: We don't know where he is." Enrique Anaya's whereabouts unknown), June 8, 2025.

[1054] IACHR, Resolution No. 67/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 929-25, Salvador Enrique Anaya Barraza regarding El Salvador, September 22, 2025.

[1055] El Diario de Hoy, "Capturan a Ruth López, abogada y directora área jurídica de Cristosal" (Ruth López, lawyer and Cristosal legal director arrested), May 18, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "Expertas de la ONU piden proteger a Ruth López, quien ya cumplió 12 días detenida" (UN experts call to protect Ruth López, detained for 12 days) May 30, 2025.

ordered provisional detention for six months and the case is under seal.[1056] In September 2025, the Commission granted precautionary measures in her favor in light of information received on possible irreparable risks to her life and personal integrity, as she is held in incommunicado detention, without certain and sufficient information about her conditions of detention or the possibility to verify her current situation after her transfer to the Granja de Izalco Women's Penitentiary.[1057]

464. Other cases include the detention of Fidel Zavala, which took place on February 25, and the issuance of arrest warrants against Ivania Cruz and Rudy Joya, defenders of the Human and Community Rights Defense Unit (UNIDEHC).[1058] In addition, the Commission learned of the detention of Félix Ángel López Cañas in February, without an administrative or judicial order, as an attempt to intimidate his father, Félix López, a labor defender of former public officials who had been dismissed.[1059] The Commission expressed concern over the application of state of emergency provisions and other measures to fight against organized crime to situations that bear no relation to the grounds alleged by the State, as in the cases noted above.[1060]

465. Moreover, at the public hearing "Consequences of the closure of civic space for human rights defenders in El Salvador," civil society organizations reported to the Commission on the State's continued use of social media to stigmatize human rights defenders, as well as the use of the state of emergency to criminalize them, with at least 34 cases recorded. They highlighted the impact that stigmatization, persecution and the risk of criminalization have had on human rights advocacy, noting that at least 130 people have left the country, out of which 33 are human rights defenders.[1061] Further attacks and threats against women human rights defenders and journalists were also reported.[1062]

466. In addition, the Commission also expressed its concern regarding the passing of the Foreign Agents Law, which sets forth obligations on natural or legal persons, whether national or foreign, whose activities in El Salvador are funded with funds coming from abroad, including their mandatory registration in a registry at the Ministry of Government and a 30 percent withholding tax on all funds received.[1063] Failure to comply may result in fines ranging from 100,000 to 250,000 US dollars, suspension or cancellation of their legal personality or their authorization to operate, as well as administrative or criminal liability. The Commission considers that the established taxation scheme may render organizations and alternative or community media outlets that defend human rights and depend on international cooperation funds financially unsustainable.

467. The Commission expressed its concern upon learning of the closure of CRISTOSAL's operations in El Salvador due to the criminalization of its members and the imposition of the Foreign Agents

[1056] Amnesty International, "El Salvador: Amnistía Internacional declara a Ruth Eleonora López, a Alejandro Henríquez y a José Ángel Pérez como personas presas de conciencia en un contexto de creciente represión" (El Salvador: Amnesty International declares Ruth Eleonora López, Alejandro Henríquez and José Ángel Pérez prisoners of conscience amid growing repression), June 30, 2025; France 24, "La abogada salvadoreña Ruth López continuará en prisión tras la audiencia inicial de su proceso penal" (Salvadoran lawyer Ruth López to remain in prison following initial hearing), June 5, 2025.

[1057] IACHR, Resolution No. 66/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 667-25, Ruth Eleonora López Alfaro regarding El Salvador, September 22, 2025.

[1058] Amnesty International, El Salvador: Fidel Zavala, human rights defender, at risk of torture and other ill-treatment, April 8, 2025; International Federation for Human Rights (FIDH), "El Salvador: Intimidación y traslado de Fidel Zavala a Centro Penal La Esperanza (Mariona) y cargos judiciales contra miembros de UNIDEHC" (El Salvador: Intimidation and transfer of Fidel Zavala to La Esperanza Prison (Mariona) and judicial charges against UNIDEHC members), April 29, 2025.

[1059] La Prensa Gráfica, "Denuncian captura arbitraria de hijo de defensor de derechos laborales" (Arbitrary arrest of labor rights defender's son is reported), February 20, 2025; El Salvador, "Denuncian que hijo de defensor de DDHH fue detenido sin orden judicial" (Son of human rights defender detained without judicial order), February 20, 2025.

[1060] IACHR, Press Release No. 162/25, IACHR reiterates concern over prolonged and improper use of state of emergency in El Salvador, August 14, 2025.

[1061] IACHR, thematic hearing "El Salvador: Consequences of the closing of civic space for human rights defenders," 193rd regular period of sessions, July 23, 2025.

[1062] YSUCA, "Fiscalía modifica acusación contra periodistas y se niega a proporcionar información sobre el caso" (Office of the Attorney General modifies charges against journalists and refuses to provide information on the case), January 21, 2025; World Organization Against Torture (OMCT), "El Salvador: Expresamos preocupación ante la CIDH por la delicada situación que están enfrentando defensoras y defensores de derechos humanos" (The Organization expresses concern to IACHR over the serious situation faced by human rights defenders), July 23, 2025; Revista la Brújula, "Cuando la verdad se paga con la libertad: el relato de Mónica Rodríguez" (When truth is paid for with liberty: the story of Mónica Rodríguez), September 3, 2025.

[1063] Legislative Assembly, Legislative Decree No. 308, Foreign Agents Law, May 20, 2025.

Law, which would prevent them from continuing their work freely. It recalled that while States have the authority to regulate the registration, supervision and oversight of civil society organizations under their jurisdiction, the right to free association requires that legal requirements do not obstruct, delay or restrict the creation or operation of such organizations. Furthermore, States must promote and facilitate human rights organizations' access to national and foreign financial cooperation funds and refrain from restricting their sources of funding.[1064] In addition, and in connection with the enactment of the Foreign Agents Law, in September the Commission learned of the closure of Foundation for Law Application (FESPAD) after nearly 37 years of operation, as well as the announcement of the dissolution of the Foundation for the Development of Social Sciences (FUDECSO) after 33 years of work in the country.[1065]

468. With regard to persons in the context of human mobility, the Commission learned that El Salvador signed an agreement with the United States whereby El Salvador agreed to receive up to 300 people identified by U.S. authorities as members of the Tren de Aragua organization for a one-year period, with the possibility of extending such term.[1066] In exchange, El Salvador would receive a financial stipend. According to public information, on March 17, 2025, under this agreement, the U.S. government reportedly deported 261 Venezuelan and Salvadoran nationals to El Salvador.[1067]

469. In response to this situation, the Commission requested information from the State of El Salvador regarding the scope of the signed agreement, confirmation of the total number and the identity of the people deported to El Salvador, the legal basis for their detention at the CECOT, actions to ensure due process of law guarantees in detention procedures, as well as measures to guarantee access to healthcare, medication, humanitarian assistance, and communication with family members and legal representatives.[1068]

470. In its response, the State indicated that its role was limited to facilitating the use of prison infrastructure for the "reception, safeguarding, and custody" of these people. It added that jurisdiction and legal responsibility lay exclusively with the United States authorities, in line with international agreements and the principles of sovereignty and international cooperation in criminal matters. On that basis, it argued that it could not provide information or make observations with regard to: i) the decisions or actions of another State; ii) agreements with another State without that State's consent; iii) the application of specific legislation by third States; iv) the identification or registration by a State of people as belonging to groups classified as terrorist; v) the judicial proceedings by means of which a person's deprivation of liberty is ordered and which have been heard by or depend on decisions by authorities of another State; and vi) the information mechanisms that another State establishes for the relatives of detainees.[1069]

471. In July, the Commission learned of the Salvadoran government's decision to send back the detained Venezuelan nationals from the CECOT to Venezuela.[1070] The Commission has no information on [1064] IACHR, Segundo informe sobre la situación de las defensoras y defensores de derechos humanos en las Américas (Second report on the situation of human rights defenders in the Americas), OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 66, December 31, 2011, paras. 163 and 179.

[1065] FESPAD, "Fespad cierra operaciones como fundación" (FESPAD closes operations as foundation), September 4, 2025; Swissinfo.ch, "La ONG Fudecso anuncia su disolución en El Salvador ante la actual situación política" (FUDECSO NGO announces dissolution in El Salvador amid current political situation), September 8, 2025.

[1066] U.S. Department of State, United States, Qualifying Non-binding instruments. Case Act Reporting, May 2025, n/d. IACHR, Press Release No. 065/25, IACHR concerned over United States' measures that impact the effective exercise of human rights, March 31, 2025.

[1067] The White House [@WhiteHouse], (March 17, 2025), Press Secretary Karoline Leavitt Briefs Members of the Media [X post], X, https://x.com/WhiteHouse/status/1901683343697072328.

[1068] IACHR, Letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights, CIDH/SE/ART.41/05-2025/544 regarding the situation of people deported to El Salvador, May 12, 2025. On IACHR´s files.

[1069] Republic of El Salvador, Diplomatic Note No. MPOEA-OEA-043/2025– Annex: Response by the State of El Salvador to the IACHR to communication CIDH/SE/ART.41/05-2025/544 regarding the situation of people deported to El Salvador, May 27, 2025, p. 2. On IACHR´s files.

[1070] BBC News, "Bukele devuelve a Caracas a los migrantes deportados por EE.UU. a El Salvador a cambio de la liberación de 10 estadounidenses y decenas de presos venezolanos" (Bukele returns to Caracas migrants deported by the U.S. to El Salvador in exchange for release of 10 Americans and dozens of Venezuelan prisoners), July 18, 2025. El País, "El Gobierno de Bukele devuelve a los venezolanos deportados a cambio de presos políticos y estadounidenses detenidos en Venezuela" (The Bukele administration returns Venezuelans who were deported in exchange for political prisoners and U.S. citizens detained in Venezuela), July 18, 2025. DW, "Bukele entrega 'todos' los venezolanos presos en El Salvador" (Bukele handed over "all" Venezuelan nationals detained in El Salvador), July 18, 2025.

compliance with due process guarantees in the procedures leading to their deportation to Venezuela. Moreover, it took note of allegations of possible acts of torture, as well as other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.[1071] Information from civil society organizations[1072] and media outlets[1073] indicates that these people had no contact with their families or access to legal representation during their detention in El Salvador. Nor were they reportedly notified of the reasons for their detention or of the possibility to resort to judicial remedies to review it.

472. With regard to human trafficking, the Commission takes note of actions carried out in February and March by the Office of the Attorney General[1074] and the Second Court against Organized Crime of San Salvador. These actions led to the dismantling of a human trafficking network for aggravated sexual exploitation, as well as the detention and initiation of an investigation against the members of said criminal structure, in accordance with the evidence presented by the Office of the Attorney General.[1075]

473. As for internal displacement, figures from the Internal Displacement Monitoring Center, published in May 2025, indicate that by the end of 2024, 39,000 displacements related to conflict and violence and 5,500 displacements related to disasters were recorded.[1076]

474. In relation to the human rights of women, the Women Peacebuilders Project was launched to develop the technical capacity of women leaders as community mediators, thereby helping prevent violence and conflict.[1077] Additionally, between June 2024 and May 2025, the FGR recorded 82 femicides and 8,038 cases of sexual violence, the leading form of gender-based violence reported, accounting for 42 percent of all the complaints.[1078] Civil society organizations registered 16 femicides between January and August 2025, nine of which were committed by the victim's partner.[1079] These figures align with the high number of comprehensive services provided by specialized units for women victims of violence. Between January and July 2025, the National Police's UNIMUJER (unit specialized on women care) offered comprehensive care to 2,139 victims, 2,625 legal consultations and 1,150 protection measures,[1080] while the Specialized Centers for Women reported it had provided assistance in 3,253 cases.[1081] Physical assaults, threats, harassment, stalking, and even extortion and sexual aggression against women sex workers were also reported.[1082]

[1071] Human Rights Watch, "'You Have Arrived in Hell' Torture and Other Abuses Against Venezuelans in El Salvador's Mega Prison," November 12, 2025.

[1072] Ibid.; Global Strategic Council Litigation, "Coalition Demands Action as New Evidence Reveals Abuses of Migrants in El Salvador's CECOT Prison," August 1, 2025.

[1073] BBC, "'Bienvenidos al cementerio de hombres vivos': la brutalidad en la megacárcel de Bukele que denuncian 8 de los venezolanos deportados por EE.UU. a El Salvador" ("Welcome to the cemetery of living men": brutality in Bukele's mega-prison reported by eight Venezuelans deported by the United States to El Salvador), August 18, 2025

[1074] Office of the Attorney General of the Republic, "Fiscalía desarticula red de trata de personas y lavado de dinero que operaba en zona aledaña al centro de San Salvador" (Office of the Attorney General dismantled a human trafficking and money laundering network operating in areas near downtown San Salvador), February 25, 2025.

[1075] Office of the Attorney General of the Republic, "Estructura dedicada a la trata de personas en modalidad de explotación sexual continuará en detención provisional" (Structure dedicated to human trafficking for sexual exploitation to remain in pretrial detention), March 14, 2025.

[1076] Internal Displacement Monitoring Center, Global Report on Internal Displacement 2025, May 13, 2025, p. 110.

[1077] Office of the Public Defender of El Salvador, [@PGR_SV], (February 5, 2025), Con el objetivo de acreditar a #MediadorasComunitarias, el @ProcuradorGral de la República, René Escobar, inauguró el Proyecto Mujeres Constructoras de Paz (To accredit #CommunityMediators, the Public Defender of the Republic, René Escobar, launched the Women Peacebuilders Project) [X post], X, https://x.com/PGR_SV/status/1887194274870988821; Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), Responses by El Salvador to the list of issues and questions on the 10th periodic report, March 25, 2025, para. 4.

[1078] Office of the Attorney General of the Republic El Salvador, Informe de labores 2024-2025 (2024–2025 Report), July 31, 2025, p. 151.

[1079] Observatory of Violence against Women (ORMUSA), "16 feminicidios en El Salvador entre enero/agosto 2025" (16 femicides in El Salvador between January and August 2025), September 11, 2025.

[1080] Republic of El Salvador, Report submitted by the State of El Salvador, September 8, 2025, p. 12. On IACHR's files.

[1081] Ibid., p. 15.

[1082] Asociación Las Guerreras Salvadoreñas, Network of Women Sex Workers of Latin America and the Caribbean (RedTraSex), et al., Request for thematic hearing "Violence and rights of women sex workers in El Salvador," 193rd regular period of sessions, April 23, 2025, p. 3, on IACHR's files.

475. Additionally, adolescent pregnancies and early unions persist, mainly in rural and hard-to-reach areas. Data indicates that 3.5 percent of girls and adolescents aged 10 to 19 are mothers, and one in 10 adolescents aged 15 to 19 is in an early union.[1083] Moreover, the criminalization of women facing obstetric emergencies continued, with the Supreme Court of Justice recording proceedings against six women for abortion between 2023 and 2025.[1084] In that regard, the Commission voices concern that the Protocol for Women's Care during Prenatal, Childbirth, and Postpartum Periods and Newborn Care fails to include guidelines prioritizing hospital care in obstetric emergencies, unlike its previous version.[1085]

476. Concerning the rights of LGBTI persons, there is a widespread lack of data on violence, discrimination or the recognition of rights of this population in the country during 2025. In March, information became known about the case of Andry Hernández Romero, a gay man of Venezuelan origin and an asylum seeker in the United States, who was deported to El Salvador and held at the CECOT.[1086] In July, Hernández Romero was returned to Venezuela and reported having been the victim of sexual abuse by Salvadoran authorities.[1087] Likewise, the Commission learned that, in October, the Minister of Education issued instructions to prohibit the use of inclusive language in the country's schools.[1088]

477. In this context, LGBTI human rights defenders underscored the need to guarantee basic rights. Among their main demands are laws aimed at reducing discrimination and violence, including violence perpetrated by public officials.[1089] They also expressed concern that non-governmental organizations defending their rights may disappear as a result of the recently adopted Foreign Agents Law. In addition, they denounced the lack of action by the Legislative Assembly to allow for name changes and the recognition of the gender identity of trans persons, despite a 2022 ruling by the Constitutional Chamber.[1090]

478. With regard to the rights of indigenous peoples, the results of the Seventh Population Census and Sixth Housing Census were published, showing that the indigenous population accounts for 1.1 percent of [1083] UNFPA, Mapa de Embarazos en niñas y adolescentes El Salvador 2025 (2025 Map of pregnancies in girls and adolescents in El Salvador), June 24, 2025, pp. 7 and 28.

[1084] Human Rights Council, Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, April 4, 2025, para. 124; Focos, "El régimen de excepción se usa para encarcelar a mujeres por emergencias obstétricas en El Salvador" (The state of emergency has been used to imprison women for obstetric emergencies in El Salvador), October 7, 2025.

[1085] Ministry of Health, Protocolo para la atención de la mujer en los períodos prenatal, parto, puerperio y atención del recién nacido (Protocol for Women's Care during Prenatal, Childbirth, Postpartum Periods and Newborn Care) July 7, 2025; Ministry of Health Protocolo para el abordaje de atenciones en el periodo preconcepcional, prenatal, parto, puerperio y emergencias obstétricas desde una perspectiva de derechos humanos (Protocol for the management of care during the preconception, prenatal, childbirth, postpartum periods, and obstetric emergencies with a human rights perspective), November 29, 2022.

[1086] Democracy Now, "Secuestrado: hablamos con la familia de Andry Hernández Romero, quien lleva más de cien días desaparecido en una megaprisión salvadoreña" (Kidnapped: We spoke with the family of Andry Hernández Romero, who has been missing for over one hundred days in a Salvadoran mega-prison), June 27, 2025; El Diario, "De EEUU a la cárcel en El Salvador: Andry Hernández, el maquillador al que Trump deportó por sus tatuajes de coronas" (From the US to jail in El Salvador: Andry Hernández, the makeup artist whom Trump deported for his crown tattoos), April 4, 2025.

[1087] El País, "La vida de Andry Hernández tras dejar la cárcel del terror de Bukele: 'Nuestros cuerpos están en libertad, pero nuestras mentes siguen allá'" (Andry Hernández's life after leaving Bukele's prison of terror: "Our bodies are free, but our minds are still there"), August 24, 2025; CNN, "'Bienvenidos al infierno del Cecot': el maquillador venezolano Andry Hernández relata el día a día preso en El Salvador" ("Welcome to the hell of Cecot": Venezuelan makeup artist Andry Hernández recounts his daily life as a prisoner in El Salvador), July 27, 2025; Reuters, "Venezuelan makeup artist returns home, describes torture during El Salvador detention" July 23, 2025; NBC News, "Venezuelans describe being beaten, sexually assaulted and told to 'commit suicide' during El Salvador detention" July 28, 2025; Swissinfo, "Venezuela denuncia golpizas y abusos a migrantes en la megacárcel salvadoreña" (Venezuela denounces beatings and abuses against migrants in El Salvador's megaprison), July 22, 2025.

[1088] DW, "El Salvador: Gobierno prohíbe lenguaje inclusivo en escuelas" (El Salvador: Government bans inclusive language in schools), October 3, 2025; El País, "Bukele prohíbe el lenguaje inclusivo en las escuelas de El Salvador," (Bukele bans inclusive language in Salvadoran schools) October 3, 2025; Nayib Bukele [@nayibbukele], (October 3, 2025), "Desde hoy queda prohibido el mal llamado 'lenguaje inclusivo' en todos los centros educativos públicos de nuestro país." (From today, the so-called "inclusive language" is prohibited in all public educational centers in our country) [X post], X, https://x.com/nayibbukele/status/1973908544065057000.

[1089] La vanguardia, "Con miedo pero en resistencia, la comunidad LGTBI salvadoreña marcha en el Día del Orgullo" (With fear but in resistance, the Salvadoran LGBTI community marches on Pride Day), June 29, 2025; Infobae, "La comunidad LGTBI de El Salvador reitera llamado a erradicar los tipos de discriminación" (The LGBTI community of El Salvador reiterates its call to eradicate all forms of discrimination), May 19, 2025.

[1090] El Salvador.com, "Población LGBTI denuncia que sigue desacato de Asamblea por ley de identidad" (LGBTI community denounces continued disregard by Assembly for identity law), May 17, 2025.

the country's total population.[1091] This figure indicates that the indigenous population recorded in the census increased fivefold compared to the last census conducted 17 years earlier. [1092] As a result, it was identified that indigenous women, particularly in rural areas, experience higher levels of illiteracy and lower levels of schooling than the national averages. Among women over 60 years of age, illiteracy reaches 60 percent, and 93 percent did not complete more than the sixth grade. Likewise, the persistence of early pregnancy among indigenous adolescents was observed, as 18 percent of those surveyed under 18 years of age reported having their first pregnancy at the age of 15.[1093]

479. The State reported progress in the recognition of the rights of Afro-descendants through institutional, regulatory and cultural initiatives. At the local level, the Municipality of La Unión Sur adopted an ordinance granting official recognition to the Afro-descendant population, while, at the regional level, El Salvador participated in the Project for the Safeguarding of Afro-descendant Intangible Cultural Heritage within the Central American Integration System and Cuba.[1094] The State also reported developments in the cultural sphere, including actions to document and promote Afro-descendant culture,[1095] and cultural organizations and entities reported an increase in initiatives aimed at promoting Afro-descendant recognition and memory, which contribute to combating racism and strengthening identity.[1096]

480. The Office of the Prosecutor for the Defense of Human Rights participated in regional initiatives to strengthen statistical production on Afro-descendants.[1097] However, gaps persist in official records and in indicators disaggregated by race/ethnicity in areas such as health, education, employment, housing, justice and prison population, which limits the design and evaluation of targeted public policies.[1098] Likewise, the Commission takes note of the recommendation made in the framework of the Universal Periodic Review to adopt a national strategy to combat discrimination against Afro-descendants.[1099]

481. With regard to the processes of memory, truth and justice, United Nations experts called on the State to implement the transitional justice agenda related to the armed conflict.[1100] Civil society organizations reported obstructions by the Legislative Assembly in processing the third transitional justice bill submitted in 2019 by victims of crimes against humanity and human rights organizations.[1101] In May 2025, one year had elapsed since both the shelving of the bill on this matter and the initiative proposing the creation of a system for the search for disappeared persons.[1102] Furthermore, the Commission values the extension, for an additional three years, of the validity of the law establishing the registry of victims and family members of the [1091] Central Reserve Bank of El Salvador, "Censo de Población y Vivienda El Salvador 2024" (2024 Population and Housing Census El Salvador).

[1092] El Mundo, "Censo 2024: población indígena crece cinco veces y destaca el resurgir del pueblo Nahua Pipil" (2024 Census: Indigenous population grows fivefold and highlights the resurgence of the Nahua Pipil people), October 12, 2025.

[1093] Indigenous Women's Observatory Sijsihuat Mejtzaly, Informe Anual. Situación de los Derechos de las Mujeres Indígenas (Annual report. Human rights situation of indigenous women), National Indigenous Coordinating Council of El Salvador (CCNIS) and UN Women, 2025, pp. 16-19.

[1094] Republic of El Salvador, Note Verbale No. MPOEA-OEA-104/2025, in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH) No. 349-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, August 5, 2025, p.11. On IACHR's files.

[1095] Republic of El Salvador, Note Verbale No. MPOEA-OEA-104/2025, in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH) No. 349-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, August 5, 2025, p.11. On IACHR's files.

[1096] Spanish Cultural Center in El Salvador(CCE-ES), "Conversatorio Hacedoras de memorias" (Conversation: Memory makers), July 24, 2025; La Prensa Gráfica, "El Teatro Poma continúa su temporada con "Negra me dicen" esta semana en cartelera" (Teatro Poma continues its season with "Negra me dicen", a tribute to Afro-descendants), May 27, 2025.

[1097] Network of National Human Rights Institutions of the Americas (RINDHCA), "La RINDHCA aprueba el plan de trabajo del grupo sobre derechos humanos y población afrodescendiente"(RINDHCA approves the work plan of the group on human rights and the Afro-descendant population), June 4, 2025.

[1098] El Diario de Hoy, "Promueven derechos y cultura de 25,690 afrodescendientes en el país" (Rights and culture of 25,690 Afro-descendants are promoted in the country) August 9, 2025; Office of the Attorney General, "Estadísticas" (Statistics), 2025; General Directorate of Penitentiary Centers, "Estadísticas Penitenciarias: 2020" (Prison Statistics: 2020), January 6, 2021.

[1099] Permanent Mission of the Bahamas in Geneva, "Bahamas Statement on the UPR of El Salvador," January 20, 2025.

[1100] United Nations, Multiple Mechanisms, "Press release: El Salvador: Experts call for implementation of transitional justice agenda related to armed conflict," January 14, 2025.

[1101] SWI, "ONG de DDHH acusan a Congreso salvadoreño de obstaculizar justicia para víctimas de guerra," (Human rights NGOs accuse Salvadoran Congress of obstructing justice for war victims) January 15, 2025.

[1102] La Prensa Gráfica, "Leyes para justicia transicional y búsqueda de desaparecidos llevan un año en archivo en El Salvador" (Laws for transitional justice and the search for the disappeared have been shelved in El Salvador for a year), May 12, 2025.

massacre of El Mozote and surrounding areas.[1103] The Commission also takes note of the judgment issued by the Trial Court of Dulce Nombre de María, in Chalatenango, which sentenced three retired members of the Salvadoran armed forces to up to 60 years of imprisonment for the murder of four Dutch journalists in 1982.[1104]

482. With regard to the rights of older persons, the State informed the Commission of general actions aimed at strengthening institutions and guaranteeing rights, including the implementation of accessibility measures and preferential attention for older persons at polling stations, as well as the application of criminal prosecution policies with a focus on vulnerable populations, including older persons. The State also highlighted the continuity of the 2022–2030 National Policy on the Co-responsibility for Care, aimed at guaranteeing the right to receive and provide care under conditions of equality and dignity.[1105]

483. In addition, media outlets reported delays in the payment of pensions under the program for older persons, a situation that reportedly affected thousands of pensioners.[1106] It was also reported that the solidarity pension program for older persons reduced its number of beneficiaries from nearly 38,000 to just over 30,000.[1107] In this regard, there have been debates concerning the sustainability of the system and the need for a new pension reform, requested by the International Monetary Fund for 2026, which would seek to guarantee the system's viability and improve retirement conditions.[1108]

484. With regard to the rights of persons with disabilities, the State incorporated disability as a priority axis in the 2022–2030 National Policy on the Co-responsibility for Care. Likewise, it promoted inclusion through preferential attention to persons with disabilities as a vulnerable group by the TSE. Inclusive voting measures were implemented, such as the use of braille and tactile envelopes, and the National Council for the Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities was strengthened, with the aim of guaranteeing accessibility and the adequacy of polling stations, thereby promoting more equitable electoral participation that respects the rights of this population.[1109]

485. With regard to challenges, civil society organizations reported human rights violations against persons with disabilities deprived of liberty in the context of the ongoing state of emergency. A total of 175 arbitrary detentions of persons with disabilities were recorded, of which 148 (84.6 percent) correspond to men and 27 (15.4 percent) to women. The most recurrent disabilities were physical (49 percent), cognitive (37 percent) and sensory (11 percent). Likewise, the lack of adequate medical care and the death of at least seven people in penitentiary centers were reported: three people with cognitive disabilities, two with physical disabilities and two with epilepsy, evidencing serious shortcomings in the protection of their rights and in the conditions of detention.[1110]

[1103] Legislative Assembly, "Buscan ampliar vigencia de ley para registro de víctimas y familiares de masacre de El Mozote" (Legislative Assembly seeks to extend the validity of the law for the registration of victims and relatives of the El Mozote massacre), June 23, 2025; El Diario de Hoy, "Asamblea prorroga vigencia de ley para registro de víctimas y familiares de masacre de El Mozote" (Assembly extends validity of law for registration of victims and relatives of the El Mozote massacre), June 24, 2025.

[1104] AP News, "Dan 60 años de prisión a 3 militares salvadoreños en retiro por asesinatos de periodistas holandeses" (Three retired Salvadoran military officers sentenced to 60 years in prison for the murders of Dutch journalists), July 3, 2025; DW, "El Salvador: condenan exmilitares por crimen de neerlandeses" (El Salvador: Former military officers sentenced for the murder of Dutch citizens), July 4, 2025.

[1105] Republic of El Salvador, Report of the State of El Salvador, September 8, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1106] La Prensa Gráfica, "Gobierno salvadoreño paga con retraso pensiones de adultos mayores" (The Salvadoran government is late in paying pensions to senior citizens), June 6, 2025.

[1107] La Prensa Gráfica, "Programa de pensión solidaria para el adulto mayor se redujo en 7.000 beneficiarios"(The solidarity pension program for the elderly was reduced by 7,000 beneficiaries), August 27, 2025.

[1108] La Prensa Gráfica, "Qué debe contener la próxima reforma de pensiones que pide el FMI para 2026" (What should be included in the next pension reform that the IMF is calling for in 2026?), July 2, 2025.

[1109] Republic of El Salvador, Report of the State of El Salvador, September 8, 2025, pp. 2 and 4. On IACHR's files.

[1110] Cristosal, Invisibles, olvidadas y torturadas: la realidad de las personas con discapacidad en El Salvador (Invisible, forgotten and tortured. The reality of persons with disabilities in El Salvador), December 2024, published on August 12, 2025, pp. 9-11; SWI, "ONG recibe 175 denuncias de personas con discapacidad detenidas en El Salvador por régimen" (NGO receives 175 complaints from persons with disabilities detained in El Salvador by the regime), August 13, 2025.

XVI. GRENADA

- General considerations

486. As it relates to progress, the IACHR notes efforts by the State to reform its Constitution. Moreover, the Commission welcomes the passage of legislation aimed at protecting the rights of children and adolescents. Additionally, the IACHR takes note of measures taken by the State to strengthen the legal framework for the protection women.

487. As it relates to challenges, the Commission notes some concerns on the use of force by the police service. Likewise, the IACHR also notes the continued high prison occupancy rates and the retention of laws which criminalize same-sex relationships between consenting adults.

488. The State did not respond to the request for information for the preparation of this chapter.

- Specific issues

489. With regards to democratic institutionality, the IACHR notes constitutional reform efforts by the State. In particular, the State enacted the Oath of Allegiance Acts No. 1 and No. 2 which amends the oath of allegiance prescribed in the Constitution, removing references to "His Majesty King Charles, the Third, His heirs and Successors" and replacing them with "Grenada." According to official information, this amendment represents a major step in its constitutional development and national identity and aims to ensure that public officials and high functionaries swear allegiance to Grenada and the people of Grenada on their assumption to high public office.[1111]

490. In relation to human rights institutions, the State has an Office of the Ombudsman, which is a member of the Caribbean Ombudsman Association and the Commonwealth Forum of National Human Rights Institutions.[1112] The functions of the Office include investigating complaints relating to administrative action of any public authority, however, its jurisdiction does not extend to the investigation of human rights violations.[1113] While the State has yet to establish a National Human Rights Institution (NHRI), it has an expressed an intention of implementing a hybrid model of an NHRI by extending the jurisdiction of the Office of the Ombudsman.[1114]

491. Regarding citizen security, according to public information, the State recorded 7 homicides as of July.[1115] This represents a homicide rate of 5.97 per 100,000 inhabitants for that period in 2025.[1116]

492. Concerning the rights of children, in July, the State introduced several Bills to Parliament aimed at protecting the rights of children and adolescents. These Bills included the Status of Children Bill, the Age of Civil Legal Responsibility (Amendment) Bill and the Marriage (Amendment) Bill.[1117] The Status of Children Bill aims to remove discriminatory approaches to birth status by ensuring that all children, regardless of the marital status of their parents, are treated equal under the law.[1118] With regards to the Age of Civil Legal Responsibility (Amendment) Bill, the amendment seeks to vest full legal capacity in persons aged 16 years or older to consent to and access sexual or reproductive health treatment and care, without the need for parental [1111] Government of Grenada, Government of Grenada introduces key legislation in Parliament, July 23, 2025; Now Grenada, Governor-General assents bill to change Oath/Affirmation of Allegiance, August 1, 2025.

[1112] Caribbean Ombudsman Association, Members, 2025; Commonwealth Forum of National Human Rights Institutions, Grenada, 2025.
[1113] Laws of Grenada, Ombudsman Act, 2007, section 20.
[1114] Human Rights Council, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Grenada, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GRD/1, February 18, 2025.
[1115] Now Grenada, 22-year-old man charged in fatal stabbing of Kimani, July 4, 2025.
[1116] The IACHR calculated the homicide rate based on the State's population of 117,207 according to data from The World Bank. The World Bank, Population total – Grenada, 2024.
[1117] Government of Grenada, Government of Grenada introduces key legislation in Parliament, July 23, 2025.
[1118] Parliament of Grenada, Status of Children Bill, 2025, July 18, 2025.

consent.[1119] Whereas, the amendments to the Marriage Act will increase the minimum age from 16 to 18 years for marriage, in an effort to protect children and adolescents from early marriages.[1120] Subsequently, after its passage in Parliament in November, the Commission welcomed the approval of the amendment to the Marriage Act. The IACHR noted that its amendment strengthened protection for children and aligned national legislation with international human rights standards and called on States to adopt measures to end child, early and forced marriages and unions.[1121]

493. Moreover, in May, the Criminal Justice Reform Committee in Grenada published a brochure to raise awareness of sex-related crimes, notably those involving children, with the aim of preventing persons from becoming victims or perpetrators.[1122]

494. Regarding the rights of women, the Commission notes measures taken by the State to strengthen the legal framework for the protection women. In July, two Bills were introduced in Parliament for first reading: the Marriage Amendment Bill, which raises the minimum age for valid marriages to 18 years, and the Age of Civil Legal Responsibility Amendment Bill, which grants minors aged 16 years and older full legal capacity to consent to any sexual or reproductive health treatment without parental or guardian authorization.[1123] In addition, in June, the Cabinet approved the development of legislation addressing gender gaps in the care of children and the elderly, including provisions of maternity and parental leave, child benefits for low-income families, and legal protections for domestic and care workers, among others.[1124]

495. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, Grenadian authorities participated in regional and international forums demanding reparatory justice for descendants of enslaved persons.[1125] Grenada's Prime Minister urged the President of the European Commission to apologize and advance reparations, framing slavery as a crime against humanity and linking reparatory justice to non-repetition.[1126] Additionally, the IACHR takes note of cultural-rights practices that preserve Afro-descendant heritage, safeguarding traditions and the intergenerational transmission of Afro-Caribbean knowledge.[1127]

496. Relating to challenges, the Royal Grenada Police Force reported an investigation into a shooting incident in Victoria, St. Mark in which four men were injured, raising concerns about compliance with international standards on the use of force and the need to prevent racial profiling.[1128]

497. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, the Commission underscores the persistence of laws which criminalize same-sex relationships between consenting adults. Grenada remains as 5 out of 13 countries in the English-Speaking Caribbean which continue to maintain these laws.[1129]

498. As for persons deprived of liberty, the Commission takes note of the announcement of measures aimed at improving the prison system, including the strengthening of human resources in the police [1119] Parliament of Grenada, Age of Civil Legal Responsibility (Amendment) Bill, 2025, July 18, 2025.

[1120] Parliament of Grenada, Marriage (Amendment) Bill, 2025, July 18, 2025.
[1121] IACHR [@CIDH], (November 13, 2025), IACHR welcomes the approval of amendments to the 1966 Marriage Act, which raise the legal marriage age to 18 and remove provisions allowing parental or guardian consent for children to marry. This reform, approved on November 4, strengthens protection for children and aligns national legislation with international human rights standards, [X post], X, https://x.com/CIDH/status/1989096824896942109.
[1122] The New Today, Move afoot to deal with sex-related offences against minors, May 17, 2025.
[1123] Grenada Parliament, Age of Civil Legal Responsibility (amendment) Bill, 2025, accessed on October 7, 2025; Marriage (amendment) Bill, 2025, accessed on October 7, 2025; Now Grenada, Government introduces key legislation in Parliament, July 23, 2025.
[1124] UN Women Caribbean, UN Women to Assist Grenada Government in Revising Legislation and Benefits for Child and Elder Care, June 24, 2025.
[1125] WLRN, Descendants of slave owners and enslaved people in the Caribbean call for reparations at the UN, April 21, 2025.
[1126] Reuters, Caribbean leader tells EU chief: Apologise and pay reparations for slavery, February 20, 2025.
[1127] Government Information Service (GIS Grenada), The community of River Sallee celebrates Saraka 2025, April 24, 2025; OurCarriacou.com, Maroon & String Band Music Festival, April 25, 2025.
[1128] NOW Grenada, 4 men sustained injuries in police shooting in St Mark, April 28, 2025; NOW Grenada, Police investigate shooting incident at Victoria, St Mark, April 28, 2025.
[1129] Grenada Parliament, Criminal Code 1987, section 431.

and prison services and reforms to address deficiencies in the correctional system.[1130] However, it expresses its concern on the overcrowding of His Majesty´s Prison where, according to official data, as of January 2025, there were 377 inmates while its capacity only allows for 185–200 inmates.[1131]

499. In relation to the death penalty, the IACHR takes note of the State's statement before the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, in which it announced its intention to repeal the death penalty from its domestic legislation, subject to a process of public consultation.[1132] In addition, it values the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the highest Appellate Court of Grenada, which held that the mandatory death penalty is unconstitutional. However, Grenada maintains a de facto moratorium since the last execution that was carried out in 1978.[1133] The Commission reiterates its concern about the only one prisoner on death row.[1134]

XVII. GUATEMALA

- General considerations

500. With regard to progress, the Commission values the willingness of the Republic of Guatemala (hereinafter, "Guatemala") to remain open to international scrutiny and, in particular, highlights the announcement of the establishment of a Special Mission for the Strengthening of Democratic Institutions of the Organization of American States to monitor the electoral processes scheduled for 2026. The Commission also welcomes the adoption of the 2025–2035 Public Policy for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders.

501. With regard to challenges, the Commission observes the persistent use of criminal law for political purposes, as well as for the criminalization of human rights defenders, journalists and justice operators, some of whom remain arbitrarily deprived of liberty. The Commission is also concerned about regressive decisions in emblematic cases of the internal armed conflict and the continuation of patterns of harassment, transfers and unfounded complaints by the Office of the Public Prosecutor and other actors, directed against those who promote accountability or access to justice in Guatemala.

502. On October 10, 2025, the State submitted its response to the Commission's request for information to prepare this chapter.[1135]

- Specific issues

503. In the area of democratic institutionality, the State of Guatemala reported that, in 2025, it promoted actions to strengthen institutions through the implementation of the 2024–2028 General Government Policy. It also noted that the Congress of the Republic passed decrees on budgetary, criminal, penitentiary and intercultural recognition matters;[1136] however, it acknowledged that parliamentary work

[1130] Ministry of Finance, Government of Grenada, Budget Statement 2025, March 7, 2025.
[1131] Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, Human Rights Council, United Nations, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GRD/1, February 18, 2025, par. 89.
[1132] Now Grenada, Grenada tells UPR Working Group it intends to repeal death penalty, May 14, 2025.
[1133] Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, Human Rights Council, United Nations, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GRD/1, February 18, 2025, par. 128.
[1134] World Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Grenada, May 23, 2023; last visited: September 2025.
[1135] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025.
[1136] In particular, the State highlighted the approval of Decree No. 1-2025, related to the Expansion of the General Budget of Income and Expenditures of the State for Fiscal Year 2025; in the area of criminal justice, Decree No. 2-2025 introduced reforms to the Criminal Code (Decree 17-73) related to: misuse of personal data, cloning and fraudulent use of debit and credit cards, illegal use of telecommunications networks; in penitentiary matters, Decree No. 3-2025 reformed both the Penitentiary Regime Law (Decree 33-2006) and the Criminal Code (Decree 17-73); finally, Decree No. 4-2025 amended the Law that declares May 19 as the "National Day of the continued to face structural challenges due to the lack of articulation between legislative agendas and international human rights commitments. With regard to the fight against corruption, the State reported on the work of the National Commission against Corruption and on reforms aimed at preventing illicit practices, strengthening public integrity and promoting transparency.[1137] For its part, the Office of the Public Prosecutor reported on the development of investigations into corruption in public administration.[1138] Nevertheless, the executive branch reiterated that concerns persist regarding the improper use of criminal law that may limit democratic exercise and political participation, "which requires strengthening oversight, accountability and cooperation with international bodies to guarantee transparent processes that respect human rights."[1139]

504. During 2025, the Commission received information on the persistent instrumentalization of criminal law to challenge the results of the 2023 elections and prosecute people linked to the incumbent party.[1140] In this context, on October 24, Judge Freddy Orellana, at the request of the Office of the Special Prosecutor against Impunity, promoted new actions against the Movimiento Semilla party and ordered the Congress of the Republic and the Registry of Citizens of the Electoral Tribunal to enforce the annulment of the political party, as a way to call into question the popularly elected positions obtained in 2023.[1141] In the face of these threats to the constitutional order, the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States (OAS) reaffirmed the importance of preserving the functioning of democratic institutions in accordance with the Constitution and the Rule of Law, as well as of respecting the will of the Guatemalan people, who elected Bernardo Arévalo as constitutional president.[1142] On November 5, 2025, the Permanent Council of the OAS adopted the resolution entitled "Support for Democracy and the Constitutional Order in Guatemala," in which it reiterated the importance of respecting the sovereign will of the people, expressed through free, fair and transparent elections, and welcomed the General Secretariat's designation of a Special Mission for the Strengthening of Democratic Institutions in Guatemala.[1143]

505. As for human rights institutions, the State highlighted that, through the Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), it maintains an open-door policy with international human rights mechanisms.[1144] In this context, in 2025, Guatemala hosted the 176th regular period of sessions of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights. Likewise, it received the visit of the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, as well as the visit of the Special Rapporteur on adequate housing as a component of the right to an adequate standard of living.[1145] The State also indicated that the Inter-American Commission carried out a visit to strengthen the capacities of members of civil society organizations and of COPADEH officials in relation to the mechanism of precautionary and provisional measures of the inter-American system, as well as to hold bilateral and working meetings on the follow-up to such measures. [1146] On December 1, 2025, the Commission presented in Guatemala the report on the in loco Guatemalan Midwife" (Decree 22-2022), increasing the economic stipend for registered midwives to Q4,000 annually, payable in two installments per year. Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025, pp. 7-11.

[1137] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025, p. 6.

[1138] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025. Annex SAIC/G 2025-000856/mfrc/mica from the Secretariat of International Affairs of the Office of the Public Prosecutor.

[1139] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025, p. 6.

[1140] OAS, "Statement from the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States on the Situation in Guatemala," October 26, 2025.

[1141] Prensa Libre, "Juez Fredy Orellana ordena la nulidad de Movimiento Semilla y emplaza al Registro de Ciudadanos para que cumpla" (Judge Fredy Orellana orders the annulment of the Movimiento Semilla political party and summons the Citizens Registry to comply with it), October 24, 2025.

[1142] OAS, "Statement from the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States on the Situation in Guatemala," October 26, 2025.

[1143] OAS, Permanent Council, Resolution CP/DEC. 87 (2569/25), Support for democracy and the constitutional order in Guatemala, approved in the regular meeting held on November 5, 2025.

[1144] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025, p. 28.

[1145] Ibid.

[1146] Ibid.

visit it had conducted in 2024 and highlighted the government's openness to comply with the report's recommendations.[1147] In particular, the signing of the agreement that will allow for the holding of the 195th Period of Sessions of the IACHR in Guatemala in March 2026 is highlighted.

506. With regard to citizen security, the State reported that the Ministry of the Interior and the National Civil Police continue to implement actions aimed at strengthening crime prevention, improving the operational capacity of security forces and guaranteeing an effective response to emergency situations.[1148] In 2025, these efforts focused on reducing crime rates and restoring public trust in public security institutions.[1149] The State highlighted preventive actions carried out by the National Civil Police, through the General Under-directorate for Crime Prevention, within the framework of the Institutional Crime Prevention Strategy, structured around three axes: school prevention, community prevention, and ongoing training and capacity-building. This strategy is aligned with the National Policy on the Prevention of Violence and Crime, Citizen Security and Peaceful Coexistence, which allows for the coordination of actions at the national level.[1150] Finally, the State provided information on police operations, arrests and strategies to combat organized crime, indicating that the National Civil Police, through the General Under-directorate for Criminal Investigation and its specialized divisions, conducted investigations and case follow-ups that resulted in the apprehension of individuals, the execution of investigative measures and the dismantling of criminal structures.[1151]

507. With regard to judicial independence and access to justice, the State informed the Commission that the criminal justice system has been used for purposes of political persecution and retaliation in three areas: i) the weakening of judicial independence, through criminal charges brought against former prosecutors and former judges who promoted cases against corruption or against parallel power structures; ii) restrictions on freedom of expression and of the press; and iii) the repression of community leaders and human rights defenders, through charges related to offenses such as usurpation, coercion, incitement to commit crimes or criminal association, used to curb social protest and the defense of land and territory.[1152] COPADEH reported that, in 2025, it learnt of cases of criminalization against human rights defenders, journalists and justice operators, including José Rubén Zamora Marroquín; Eduardo Masaya, a lawyer prosecuted in the context of the elections to the Board of Directors of the Guatemalan Bar Association; Héctor Chaclán, a community leader of the 48 Cantons of Totonicapán, and Luis Pacheco, also a member of that organization and Vice Minister of Energy and Mines, both prosecuted for their participation in the 2023 electoral process; Leocadio Juracán, a human rights defender prosecuted for the offense of usurpation; Claudia González, a former prosecutor of the International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala, facing criminal charges for her work in the investigation of cases of corruption and organized crime; and Stuardo Campo, a former anti-corruption prosecutor.[1153]

508. The State of Guatemala indicated to the Commission that these cases reflect the instrumentalization of the criminal justice system, institutional fragility and the persistence of practices contrary to international human rights standards.[1154] It further warned that the improper use of criminal law generates negative impacts on the country's political and democratic context, particularly due to its potential influence on the electoral processes scheduled for 2026, including the election of justices to the Constitutional Court and the Supreme Electoral Tribunal, as well as the appointment of the heads of the Office of the Attorney General and the Office of the Public Prosecutor.[1155] Finally, the State indicated that the government of President Bernardo Arévalo has expressed its rejection of any form of political persecution or undue criminalization and [1147] Guatemalan News Agency (AGN), "Presidente Arévalo recibe informe sobre derechos humanos de la CIDH" (President Arévalo receives IACHR report on human rights), December 2, 2025.

[1148] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025, p. 92.
[1149] Ibid.
[1150] I*bid.*, p. 94 and sqq.
[1151] Ibid.
[1152] Ibid., p. 105.
[1153] Ibid., p. 106.
[1154] Ibid., p. 107.
[1155] Ibid.

recognizes that the continuation of these practices represents a threat to democratic consolidation and the respect for human rights.[1156]

509. In this context, following her visit to Guatemala in 2025, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers confirmed the existence of an alarming pattern of criminalization in the country.[1157] Accordingly, she urged the State to adopt all necessary measures to put an end to this practice and emphasized that judges must identify cases that evidence criminalization, assess them independently and impartially, and resolve them in accordance with the law, the Constitution and human rights standards.[1158] She also underscored the growing perception of the urgent need to reform the system for appointing high-level judicial authorities, highlighting the relevance of 2026, when Guatemala is required to appoint new members to the Supreme Electoral Tribunal, the Constitutional Court and the position of Attorney General and the head of the Office of the Public Prosecutor.[1159]

510. In the report Situation of Human Rights in Guatemala, published in 2025, the Commission concluded that criminalization has become a widespread practice. In particular, it warned that, since 2017, it has been used as retaliation against justice operators and former officials of the International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala whose actions affected the interests of groups and elites seeking to promote impunity. However, this practice has extended to lawyers providing legal defense to criminalized people, indigenous and peasant communities, trade union leaders, journalists, students and academic staff, public officials, including justice operators, the former Human Rights Ombudsperson, and even the President and Vice President of the Republic. The Commission further noted that the instrumentalization of criminal law has been possible due to the collusion of particular interests with the Office of the Public Prosecutor and sectors of the judiciary. Finally, the Commission issued a set of 43 recommendations to the State and reiterated its commitment to supporting Guatemala in the restoration of democratic institutions.[1160]

511. With regard to the situation of human rights defenders, the State reported that one of the most significant advances promoted by COPADEH is the joint formulation, together with the Ministry of the Interior, of the 2025–2035 Public Policy for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders in Guatemala, which seeks to comply with the judgment of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in the case Human Rights Defender et al v. Guatemala.[1161] In November 2025, the Commission welcomed the official presentation of this policy and recognized that its development included the active participation of civil society organizations and of the petitioning parties in the case before the Court, as well as the technical assistance of the OHCHR in Guatemala.[1162]

512. For its part, the Commission observed that the defense of human rights took place in a hostile environment, stemming from the continued instrumentalization of the criminal justice system against human rights defenders. In this regard, civil society organizations informed the Commission of the criminalization of indigenous peoples, community leaders and social movements through charges allegedly based on weak evidence, dubious testimonies or police reports riddled with inconsistencies, with the aim of silencing and demobilizing communities that demand the protection of their legitimate rights.[1163]

[1156] Ibid.

[1157] Special Rapporteur on the Independence of judges and lawyers, Visit to Guatemala, 12 to 23 May 2025 - Preliminary Observations, March 23, 2025.

[1158] Special Rapporteur on the Independence of judges and lawyers, Visit to Guatemala, 12 to 23 May 2025 - Preliminary Observations, March 23, 2025.

[1159] Special Rapporteur on the Independence of judges and lawyers, Visit to Guatemala, 12 to 23 May 2025 - Preliminary Observations, March 23, 2025.

[1160] IACHR, Situación de los derechos humanos en Guatemala (Situation of human rights in Guatemala), OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 227/25, November 2, 2025, para. 611 and sqq.

[1161] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Note Verbale OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights (COPADEH), Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025, p. 28.

[1162] Ministry of Government, "Política Pública de Protección de Personas Defensoras de los Derechos Humanos en Guatemala 2025-2035" (Public Policy for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders in Guatemala 2025-2035), November 13, 2025.

[1163] IACHR, thematic hearing, "Guatemala: Situation of human rights defenders and justice operators," 193rd regular period of sessions, July 22, 2025.

513. The Commission learned of the detention of Leocadio Juracán, a former member of Congress and Maya Kaqchikel peasant leader of the Committee of Highland Peasant Unity, on August 13. He was subsequently brought to trial on the alleged offense of aggravated usurpation at the initial hearing before the Plural Criminal Trial Court of Puerto Barrios, Izabal, and was granted alternative measures to detention.[1164] Since its 2017 country report, the Commission has warned of a sustained practice by Guatemalan authorities of bringing criminal charges against community leaders, accusing them of crimes such as usurpation and aggravated usurpation.[1165]

514. In addition, the Commission warned of the criminalization of indigenous authorities who led the 2023 social protests in defense of the presidential elections. In particular, it learned of the detention of Luis Haroldo Pacheco—former President of the Board of Directors of the 48 Cantons of Totonicapán and current Vice Minister of Energy and Mines—and Héctor Manuel Chaclán—former Treasurer of that Board of Directors—on April 23, who were charged with the crimes of criminal association, sedition, terrorism, obstruction of criminal prosecution and obstruction of justice.[1166] As of August 2025, these indigenous leaders remained in pretrial detention, with the proceedings against them under seal.[1167]

515. Subsequently, on August 28, Esteban Toc Tzay, former Deputy Mayor of Sololá, was arrested and charged with the offenses of sedition, terrorism, criminal association and obstruction of criminal prosecution and justice by the Office of the Special Prosecutor against Impunity.[1168] According to public information, on September 6, he was formally charged with the aforementioned crimes and was granted alternative measures to detention.[1169]

516. On November 10, 2025, lawyer Ramón Cadena, a beneficiary of precautionary measures granted by the Commission, was arrested and placed in pretrial detention after voluntarily appearing before the Tenth Criminal Trial Court in compliance with an arrest warrant issued against him in 2023. The lawyer is accused of the crimes of sedition, criminal association and damage to cultural heritage in the context of the investigation known as "USAC Takeover: Political Spoils." His detention would constitute a reprisal for his work in the defense and legal counsel of students and academic staff of the University of San Carlos.[1170]

517. Additionally, the Commission learned of the murder of two environmental human rights defenders. On May 9, 2025, environmental defender Marco Antonio Zuleta was murdered in Usumatlán, [1164] Resumen Lationamericano, "Guatemala. Un finquero y la PGN detrás de la criminalización de Leocadio Juracán" (Guatemala. A landowner and the Office of the Attorney General are behind the criminalization of Leocadio Juracán), August 20, 2025; Prensa Libre, "Juez liga a proceso al exdiputado Leocadio Juracán por usurpación agravada y le otorga arresto domiciliario" (Judge formally charges former congressman Leocadio Juracán with aggravated usurpation and grants him house arrest), August 18, 2025; PBI Guatemala, "Paquete de Información Mensual de Guatemala, Número 263" (Guatemala Monthly Information Package No. 263), August 2025.

[1165] IACHR, Situación de los derechos humanos en Guatemala (Situation of human rights in Guatemala), OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 208/17, December 31, 2017, para. 218.

[1166] IACHR, Press Release No. 80/25, IACHR condemns criminalization of Indigenous leaders who defended democracy in Guatemala, April 26, 2025.

[1167] La Hora Gt, "«Han pasado cuatro meses y seguimos privados de libertad»: Luis Pacheco y Héctor Chaclán se pronuncian desde prisión" ("Four months have passed and we are still deprived of our freedom": Luis Pacheco and Héctor Chaclán speak out from prison), August 26, 2025; Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA), "Exigimos la libertad de Luis Pacheco y Héctor Chaclán" (We demand freedom for Luis Pacheco and Héctor Chaclán), August 25, 2025; Resumen Lationamericano, "Guatemala. Organizaciones sociales e indígenas exigen la libertad de Luis Pacheco y Héctor Chaá" (Guatemala. Social and indigenous organizations demand the release of Luis Pacheco and Héctor Chaán), August 26, 2025.

[1168] PBI Guatemala, "Paquete de Información Mensual de Guatemala, Número 263" (Guatemala Monthly Information Package No. 263) August 2025; Prensa Libre, "Alcaldía Indígena de Sololá manifiesta por captura de Esteban Toc y denuncia persecución contra líderes" (The Indigenous Mayor's Office of Sololá speaks out against the capture of Esteban Toc and denounces the persecution of its leaders), September 5, 2025

[1169] Committee for Human Rights in Latin America (CDHAL), "Jueza liga a proceso a Esteban Toc por cinco delitos y le otorga libertad condicional" (Judge formally charges Esteban Toc with five crimes and grants him conditional release), September 9, 2025; Prensa Comunitaria, "Jueza liga a proceso a Esteban Toc por cinco delitos y le otorga libertad condicional" (Judge formally charges Esteban Toc with five crimes and grants him conditional release), September 6, 2025.

[1170] OMCT, "Guatemala: Detención arbitraria del abogado Ramón Cadena" (Guatemala: Arbitrary detention of lawyer Ramón Cadena), November 12, 2025; Prensa Comunitaria, "Detención de Ramón Cadena incurre en graves violaciones al debido proceso, denuncian organizaciones internacionales" (International organizations denounce the detention of Ramón Cadena, which involves serious violations of due process), November 12, 2025.

department of Zacapa. According to the information available, he had filed a complaint with the Office of the Public Prosecutor after receiving death threats by telephone. On May 14, Misael Mata Asencio was murdered in Livingston, Izabal. He defended his territory and participated in the anti-mining resistance formed by 54 communities of the Sierra de Santa Cruz, where the mining company Río Nickel S.A. seeks to operate.[1171]

518. The State of Guatemala highlighted the actions implemented by COPADEH as the coordinating entity for public policies on memory, truth and justice.[1172] It reported the implementation of 790 training activities on human rights, a culture of peace and the promotion of dialogue, reaching 59,953 people, of whom 39 percent were public officials. This constituted a strategy to strengthen democratic institutions and promote a state culture based on respect, equality and social justice. In the area of reparations, the State reported that the National Plan for the Dignification and Reparation of Victims is structured around three axes: i) comprehensive reparation for civilian victims of the internal armed conflict; ii) the search for disappeared people, including the creation of a national registry and a program to locate graves and burial sites; and iii) democratic memory, aimed at recognizing the diversity of memories and promoting historical reflection. With regard to the search for disappeared persons, the State reported on the formulation of the National Search Plan, which included eight consultations with family members and organizations, the signing of international cooperation agreements with Colombia and Chile, as well as of a letter of understanding with the International Committee of the Red Cross, and the holding of technical meetings with the Guatemalan Forensic Anthropology Foundation to advance on specific cases.

519. Nevertheless, at a public hearing held in March 2025, civil society organizations reported to the Commission regressive decisions in emblematic cases related to the armed conflict.[1173] They also reiterated the existence of systematic patterns of transfers, harassment and criminalization used by the Office of the Public Prosecutor and private entities against justice operators, victims and organizations. These consisted of mainly unfounded complaints, threats and barriers of access to relevant archives aimed at promoting impunity for the violations committed during the armed conflict. In this regard, the Commission is concerned about the decision issued ex officio by the current composition of the First Chamber of Appeals on April 11, 2025, which granted an alternative measure to imprisonment to a former military officer convicted in 2018 after having been responsible for the forced disappearance of Marco Antonio Molina Theissen.[1174] This measure was denounced by the victims' representatives in the aforementioned case as an infringement of their right of access to justice and was brought to the attention of the Inter-American Court.[1175] Likewise, in the case concerning the "Diario Militar", the Office of the Public Prosecutor requested the provisional dismissal of the case, reversing its previous position in favor of proceeding to trial, which led to strong criticism among the victims and complainants.[1176]

520. With regard to the human rights of women, the Commission highlights that measures were adopted to strengthen the normative and institutional framework on the protection against gender-based violence and on the promotion of gender equality. At the legislative level, the Penitentiary Regime Law and the [1171] PBI Guatemala, Paquete de Información Mensual de Guatemala Número 260 (Guatemala Monthly Information Package No. 260) May 2025; Mongabay, "Guardianes de los bosques y el agua están siendo asesinados en Guatemala: estas son las historias de Marco Zuleta y Misael Mata" (Guardians of the forests and water are being murdered in Guatemala: these are the stories of Marco Zuleta and Misael Mata), June 20, 2025; Telesur, "Denuncian asesinato de defensores ambientales en Guatemala" (Environmental defenders murdered in Guatemala), May 21, 2025.

[1172] Government of the Republic of Guatemala, Diplomatic Note OEA-M4-NV-260-2025, October 10, 2025, Attachment: Presidential Commission for Peace and Human Rights, Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October, pp. 28-29. On IACHR's files.

[1173] IACHR, thematic hearing, "Guatemala: Impunity and obstacles to the search for memory, truth and justice," 192nd regular period of sessions, online, March 4, 2025.

[1174] Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Molina Theissen v. Guatemala, Request for Provisional Measures and Monitoring Compliance with Judgment. Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of July 1, 2025, para. 6.

[1175] Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Molina Theissen v. Guatemala, Request for Provisional Measures and Monitoring Compliance with Judgment, Order of the President of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of May 16, 2025.

[1176] Prensa Comunitaria, "Querellantes del caso del Diario Militar dicen que el MP busca garantizar impunidad de militares" (Complainants in the "Diario Militar" case say the Office of the Public Prosecutor is seeking to guarantee impunity for military personnel), October 7, 2025; Prensa Comunitaria, "Representantes de las víctimas piden apartar a los fiscales del caso Diario Militar" (Representatives of the victims are asking for the prosecutors to be removed from the "Diario Militar" case), October 14, 2025.

Criminal Code were amended to prevent and punish the trafficking of girls and adolescents within the penitentiary system.[1177] The guidelines for the implementation of the normative and policy framework for the prevention, care, punishment and dignified reparation of victims and survivors of violence against women were adopted,[1178] and an increase in the economic incentive for midwives across the country was approved, thus establishing it as a permanent and annual expenditure in the budget.[1179]

521. At the institutional level, the coverage of the Comprehensive Support Centers for Women Survivors of Violence (CAIMUS) was expanded in Sacatepéquez, Zacapa, San Juan Alotenango and Alta Verapaz.[1180] In the department of Guatemala, the opening of five new offices of the Office for the Defense of Indigenous Women was announced.[1181] Likewise, the National Policy for the Promotion and Comprehensive Development of Women (PNPDIM)[1182] is in the process of being updated, as is the creation of the Multisectoral Roundtable for the Rights of Domestic Workers, Household Workers and Private Household Workers.[1183]

522. Despite these efforts, the alarming rates of violence against women, girls and adolescents persist. In this regard, the National Civil Police recorded 266 violent deaths of women between January and August.[1184] As of October 2, 2025, the National Institute of Forensic Sciences had conducted 5,610 medical examinations for sexual offenses, 3,214 for injuries compatible with abuse, and 223 assessments within the framework of the "Isabel Claudina" alert system, aimed at the search for women reported as missing.[1185] Similarly, the rates of pregnancy among girls and adolescents remain high.[1186] Between January and August alone, 36,126 pregnancies were recorded among adolescents between 15 and 19 years of age, and 1,439 among girls between 10 and 14 years of age.[1187] This situation occurs within a generalized context of sexual violence

[1177] Congress of the Republic of Guatemala, Decreto 3-2025 (Decree 3-2025), March 3, 2025.

[1178] Presidential Secretariat for Women (SEPREM), "Lineamientos para la implementación del marco normativo y político de víctimas y sobrevivientes de VCM" (Guidelines for the implementation of the regulatory and political framework for victims and survivors of gender-based violence), March 31, 2025; SEPREM, "Lineamientos para la implementación del marco normativo y político de víctimas y sobrevivientes de VCM, sector salud" (Guidelines for the implementation of the regulatory and political framework for victims and survivors of gender-based violence, health sector), April 1, 2025; SEPREM, "Seprem impulsa lineamientos para fortalecer la prevención y atención de la violencia contra las mujeres en el ámbito local" (SEPREM promotes guidelines to strengthen the prevention and care of violence against women at the local level), July 30, 2025.

[1179] Congress of the Republic, Apoyo económico para las comadronas, Decreto 4-2025 (Financial support for midwives, Decree No. 4-2025), issued on March 10, 2025

[1180] Ministry of Government, "Apertura de centro integral para fortalecer atención a mujeres sobrevivientes de violencia" (Opening of a comprehensive center to strengthen care for women survivors of violence), August 22, 2025; AGN, "Inauguran Caimus como un brazo de apoyo para mujeres zacapanecas" (Comprehensive Support Center for Women Survivors of Violence (Caimus) opens to support women from Zacapa), March 10, 2025; Office of the Public Prosecutor of Guatemala, "Ministerio Público inaugura Centro de Apoyo Integral para Mujeres Sobrevivientes de Violencia en San Juan Alotenango" (Office of the Public Prosecutor opens Comprehensive Support Center for women survivors of violence in San Juan Alotenango), June 19, 2025; Municipality of Tactic, "Municipalidad de Tactic inaugura oficina de atención integral para mujeres sobrevivientes de violencia" (Municipality of Tactic opens comprehensive care office for women survivors of violence), September 23, 2025.

[1181] AGN, "Defensoría de la Mujer Indígena inaugurará cinco nuevas sedes regionales" (Office of the Indigenous Women's Ombudsman to open five new regional headquarters), September 5, 2025.

[1182] SEPREM, "SEPREM impulsa en Santa Rosa la participación de organizaciones de mujeres en la actualización de la PNPDIM" (SEPREM promotes the participation of women's organizations in the updating of the National Policy for the Promotion and Comprehensive Development of Women in Santa Rosa), October 3, 2025; SEPREM, "En El Progreso, SEPREM escucha las voces de las mujeres en la actualización de la PNPDIM 2026-2041" (In El Progreso, SEPREM listens to the voices of women in the updating of the PNPDIM 2026-2041), October 2, 2025.

[1183] SEPREM, "Firma del Convenio para la Mesa Multisectorial de Derechos de las Mujeres Trabajadoras Domésticas, del Hogar y de Casa Particular" (Signing of the Agreement for the Multisectoral Roundtable on the Rights of Domestic Workers, Household Workers and Private Household Workers), March 25, 2025.

[1184] Diálogos, Informe sobre violencia homicida (Report on homicidal violence), August 2025, p. 4.

[1185] National Institute of Forensic Sciences of Guatemala, "Evaluaciones Médico Legales" (Medicolegal Assessments), consulted on October 6, 2025.

[1186] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IVa, March 26, 2025, para. 479.

[1187] Observatory of Reproductive Health, "Registros de nacimientos de madres entre 10-19 años – Año 2025" (Birth record of mothers aged 10-19 – Year 2025), October 6, 2025.

against this population and limited access to sexual and reproductive health services, including therapeutic abortion.[1188]

523. With regard to the rights of children and adolescents, the Commission takes note of actions aimed at addressing chronic child malnutrition, which affects more than 46.5 percent of children under five years of age in Guatemala. In particular, the Commission highlights the implementation of the project Crecer Sano (Growing Healthy) through which, as of May 2025, 90 health posts had been built or renovated, expanding access to basic health services for nearly 300,000 people, with an emphasis on primary care and prevention in early childhood. These health posts help monitor children's weight and height, detect diseases and provide guidance to mothers on nutrition, breastfeeding, early stimulation and family planning.[1189]

524. Nevertheless, the Commission notes with concern the persistence of cases of sexual violence affecting girls and adolescents in the country. Information from the civil society published in February documented challenges in registration systems and institutional coordination, as well as obstacles preventing girl survivors from accessing essential services in the areas of health, education, social protection and justice. According to that report, between January 2018 and June 2024 the National Institute of Forensic Sciences conducted 27,660 forensic examinations related to sexual violence or pregnancy involving children up to 14 years of age, of which 24,441 involved girls. Records from the National Registry of Persons indicate that, between 2018 and 2024, a total of 14,696 girls up to 14 years of age gave birth.[1190]

525. Likewise, the Commission takes note of the judgment issued in August 2025 by the Seventh Criminal Court in relation to the fire that occurred at the Virgen de la Asunción Safe Home in March 2017, in which 41 girls died and another 15 were seriously injured. In that ruling, six former officials were sentenced to prison terms ranging from 6 to 25 years for the crimes of abuse against minors, breach of duties, abuse of authority and negligent homicide.[1191]

526. With regard to the rights of LGBTI persons, progress was reported in the investigations and proceedings concerning the deaths of Eldin Choc and Milton Santamaría, who were allegedly victims of torture and prejudice-motivated extrajudicial executions while deprived of their liberty in San Andrés Itzapa, Chimaltenango, in April 2024.[1192]

527. Between January and May, the civil society recorded 39 incidents of violence against trans persons, five of which were murders.[1193] In June, the Constitutional Court admitted a provisional writ of amparo filed against the Pride march in Guatemala City.[1194] Although the writ of amparo allowed for the exercise of the rights of peaceful assembly and association, it called on the authorities to ensure both the rights of those participating in the march and the rights of those who wished to express their views regarding the freedoms

[1188] Human Rights Committee, Views adopted by the Committee under article 5 (4) of the Optional Protocol, concerning communication No. 3629/2019, July 11, 2025; Human Rights Watch, "Guatemala: Failed Response to Sexual Violence Against Girls," February 18, 2025; Human Rights Watch, ""Forced to Give Up on Their Dreams". Sexual Violence against Girls in Guatemala," February 18, 2025.

[1189] World Bank, "When Health Arrived: Hope for the Guatemalan Highlands," July 2, 2025.

[1190] Human Rights Watch, ""Forced to Give Up on Their Dreams". Sexual Violence against Girls in Guatemala," February 18, 2025.

[1191] Casa Centroamerica, "Condena histórica en el caso Hogar Seguro" (Historic sentence in the "Hogar Seguro" case), August 12, 2025.

[1192] Plaza Pública (@PlazaPublicaGT), (June 19, 2025), "#Ahora El exjefe policial Edy Vásquez Rabanales enfrentará juicio (…)" (Former police chief Edy Vásquez Rabanales to face trial...) [X post], X, https://x.com/PlazaPublicaGT/status/1935771061162828078; La Hora, "Caso Itzapa: Los gritos de Eldin Choc, su llamado de auxilio y dos policías que podrían enfrentar juicio" (Itzapa Case: The cries of Eldin Choc, his call for help, and two police officers who may face trial), June 13, 2025; Plaza Pública, "El último crimen de la subestación 73-15" (The latest crime at substation 73-15), March 6, 2025.

[1193] Agencia Ocote, "Orgullo LGBTIQ+ 2025 en Guatemala" (2025 LGBTIQ+ Pride in Guatemala), June 28, 2025; Chapin TV, "Organizaciones trans exigen acceso a salud y anticonceptivos en Guatemala" (Trans organizations demand access to healthcare and contraceptives in Guatemala), June 19, 2025.

[1194] TN23, "CC emite resolución respecto a desfile de la diversidad sexual" (Constitutional Court issues ruling regarding the sexual diversity parade), June 27, 2025.

promoted or the ideas expressed during the parade. It also urged that "the spiritual and moral values of society be protected, especially those of children and adolescents (…)".[1195]

528. Regarding advances in the rights of indigenous peoples, the Ministry of the Environment and Natural Resources revoked ten mining exploitation licenses in Sierra Santa Cruz, Izábal, following the identification of irregularities and the protests carried out by 54 indigenous communities, affecting 64,320 hectares.[1196]

529. The Inter-American Commission took note of the judgment against three former Guatemalan paramilitaries, who were sentenced in May 2025 to 40 years of imprisonment for sexual violence acts committed in 1983 against six indigenous Achí women during the internal armed conflict. The court found them guilty of crimes against the duties of humanity for sexual violence, based on witness testimony, expert reports and historical documentation. The judgment recognized the systematic use of sexual violence as a war weapon against indigenous women within a context of structural racism and persistent impunity in the country.[1197]

530. At the community level, Kaqchikel authorities in Chimaltenango reported new detentions and attacks against community leaders and mobilized to resist state criminalization, reaffirming their autonomy and reporting the structural racism that restricts their political participation.[1198]

531. As for the situation of Afro-descendants and the fight against racial discrimination, the State reported on awareness-raising and training actions addressing racial discrimination against Garífuna people,[1199] as well as measures reflecting governmental commitment to the Garífuna and Creole peoples, including a diagnostic assessment to implement recognition and safeguarding actions in Izábal, encompassing both the Creole and the Garífuna communities.[1200] It also reported progress in incorporating the variables "Afro-descendant/Creole/Afro-mestizo" into policy instruments and into the 2024 National Report on the Montevideo Consensus, including guidelines for ethnic disaggregation and the provision of services.[1201]

532. Similarly, local authorities and public entities reported affirmative actions in Izábal, a department with a significant Garífuna population, incorporating a gender perspective and promoting the economic inclusion of Garífuna women. Among these actions were dialogue sessions on economic [1195] Republic of Guatemala, Constitutional Court of Guatemala, Case File No. 4505-2025, June 26, 2025.

[1196] Mongabay, "En Guatemala, las comunidades indígenas que luchan por liberar a sus ríos de la minería obtuvieron una victoria en Izabal" (In Guatemala, indigenous communities fighting to free their rivers from mining secure a victory in Izábal), August 28, 2025.

[1197] El País, "Tres exparamilitares, condenados a 40 años de cárcel en Guatemala por violar a mujeres indígenas" (Three former paramilitaries sentenced to 40 years in prison in Guatemala for raping indigenous women), May 30, 2025.

[1198] Observatory on Economic, Social, Cultural and Environmental Rights (DESCA) and Public Policies, Rafael Landívar University, Informe sobre el Monitoreo de Medios sobre las Incidencias 'DESCA' en Guatemala de junio a julio de 2025 (Media monitoring report on ESCER incidents in Guatemala, June to July 2025), 2025.

[1199] State of Guatemala, Ministry of Economy, Taller "Respeto a la Dignidad y Derechos Humanos" en conmemoración del Día Internacional de la Eliminación de la Discriminación Racial y la Semana de Solidaridad (Workshop "Respect for Dignity and Human Rights," held in commemoration of the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and the Solidarity Week), March 27, 2025; State of Guatemala, Ministry of Culture and Sports, 21 de febrero: Día Nacional de los Idiomas Indígenas (February 21: National Day of Indigenous Languages), February 21, 2025; AGN, "Codisra realiza taller sobre los derechos de los pueblos indígenas en Izabal" (CODISRA holds workshop on the rights of indigenous peoples in Izábal), April 7, 2025.

[1200] AGN, "Gobierno del presidente Arévalo reafirma compromiso con los pueblos indígenas" (Government of President Bernardo Arévalo reaffirms its commitment to indigenous peoples), April 23, 2025; State of Guatemala, Ministry of Culture and Sports (MCD), "Diagnóstico situacional como ruta para implementar acciones de reconocimiento" (Situational diagnosis as a pathway for implementing recognition actions), July 25, 2025.

[1201] State of Guatemala, Secretariat of Planning and Programming of the Presidency (SEGEPLAN), National Report on the Montevideo Consensus 2024, June 6, 2025.

development[1202] and a technical roundtable aimed at strengthening technical and vocational training.[1203] In addition, multisectoral initiatives were reported to mitigate pollution affecting Caribbean livelihoods, including improvements to basic services and infrastructure,[1204] as well as sanitation actions targeting the Motagua river.[1205]

533. Nevertheless, the Inter-American Commission was informed of persistent challenges. The absence of statistical data continues to affect access to rights and the development of differentiated policies targeted at Garífuna and Xinka peoples.[1206] At the legislative level, the Commission on Indigenous Peoples kept the Bill on the Recognition of the Afro-descendant Creole People on its agenda, which has not been adopted yet.[1207] Civil society organizations reported that mining activities in Izabal are conducted with "lack of transparency and corruption," lack of prior consultation, and environmental risks to water sources.[1208] For its part, the State announced the revocation of ten mining licenses.[1209] National and international media highlighted the chronic pollution of the Las Vacas and Motagua rivers, as well as cultural extinction risks, and pressures affecting migration and food security.[1210] The OHCHR reported on missions to Livingston and Puerto Barrios that identified negative impacts on the rights of Garífuna women, including gender-based violence,[1211] who continue to experience political invisibilization.[1212]

534. With regard to persons in the context of human mobility, the Inter-American Commission learnt of the launch of the Plan Retorno al Hogar (Return Home Plan) in February 2025, aimed at the sustainable reintegration of returned Guatemalan nationals. This plan consists of three phases: consular assistance, humanitarian assistance, and intermediation and referral to state programs.[1213] In addition, the Commission also took note of the Protocol for the Care of Persons in Mixed Migration Flows, adopted in June, with the aim of strengthening the State's capacity to effectively and humanely address the challenges of human mobility. This protocol includes differentiated procedures to assist persons in situations of vulnerability, such as asylum [1202] Municipality of Livingston, "Mujeres Garífunas reciben capacitación sobre derechos humanos en Livingston" (Garífuna women receive human rights training in Livingston), July 11, 2025; Municipality of Livingston, "Conversatorio con Mujeres Garífunas aborda avances y retos del desarrollo económico" (Dialogue with Garífuna women addresses progress and challenges in economic development), July14, 2025; AGN, "Guatemala celebra el Día Nacional de la Mujer Garífuna", (Guatemala celebrates the National Day of Garífuna Women) July 25, 2025.

[1203] State of Guatemala, Office oi the Prosecutor for Human Rights (PDH), "Mesa técnica en Puerto Barrios busca fortalecer la formación técnica y ocupacional para pueblos indígenas y afrodescendientes" (Technical roundtable in Puerto Barrios seeks to strengthen technical and vocational training for indigenous and Afro-descendant peoples), July 16, 2025.

[1204] Municipality of Livingston, "Municipalidad entrega 89 pilas a familias de aldea La Pintada" (Municipality delivers 89 water tanks to families in La Pintada village), August 1, 2025; Municipality of Livingston, "¡Importante jornada de limpieza en las playas de Livingston!" (Major beach clean-up day in Livingston), April 1, 2025.

[1205] El País CR, "Guatemala anuncia que frenó contaminación arrastrada por río Motagua hacia el mar Caribe" (Guatemala announces it has halted pollution flowing from the Motagua river into the Caribbean Sea), July 21, 2025; World Economic Forum (WEF), "Latin America's plastic pollution problem: How innovations are tackling waste from the Motagua River to the Galápagos Islands", September 18, 2025.

[1206] International Work Group for Indigenous Affairs (IWGIA), "The Indigenous World 2025: Guatemala, April 25, 2025.

[1207] State of Guatemala, Congress of the Republic, Commission on Indigenous Peoples, Iniciativa 5133 "Ley de Reconocimiento del Pueblo Afrodescendiente Creole en Guatemala" (Bill No. 5133, "Law on the Recognition of the Afro-descendant Creole People in Guatemala"), n/d.

[1208] Prensa Comunitaria, "Actividad minera en Livingston, Izabal evidenció opacidad y corrupción" (Mining activity in Livingston, Izabal, shows lack of transparency and corruption), August 1, 2025; Prensa Comunitaria, "Más sectores se suman a las comunidades de Livingston para detener minería en Sierra Santa Cruz" (Additional sectors join Livingston communities in efforts to stop mining in Sierra Santa Cruz), May 24, 2025.

[1209] Municipality of Livingston, "Comunidades de Livingston celebran cancelación de 10 licencias mineras con acto de agradecimiento a Dios" (Livingston communities celebrate the revocation of ten mining licenses with a thanksgiving ceremony to God), August 4, 2025.

[1210] El País, "Los garífunas de Guatemala luchan por preservar su lengua frente a la migración y el abandono: 'Nuestros libros son las canciones'" (Garífuna people in Guatemala struggle to preserve their language amid migration and neglect: "Our books are songs"), February 24, 2025; El País, "La pesadilla del río Las Vacas, uno de los más contaminados por plásticos del mundo" (The nightmare of the Las Vacas river, one of the world's most plastic-polluted rivers), August 10, 2025; Interamerican Association for Environmental Defense (AIDA), Motagua River: A Story of Contamination and a Call for Justice, June 2, 2025.

[1211] OHCHR, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/58/22, January 21, 2025.

[1212] Prensa Comunitaria, "Iveth Morales: 'Las mujeres negras tenemos que hacer un doble esfuerzo para estar en todos los espacios'" (Iveth Morales: "Black women have to make a double effort to fit in across all spaces," July 25, 2025.

[1213] Government of Guatemala, Plan Retorno al Hogar (Return Home Plan), February 26, 2025.

seekers, refugees, and regional and extra-regional migrants, with clear operational mechanisms, early warning systems, and inter-institutional response mechanisms.[1214]

535. Data from the Guatemalan Migration Institute shows that, between January 1 and August 25, 2025, Guatemala received a total of 29,951 deported persons from the United States and Mexico.[1215] This figure reflects a decrease of approximately 52 percent compared to 2024, when, as of September 30, 2024, the return of 61,892 people had been recorded.[1216]

536. Additionally, the Inter-American Commission warned that the Guatemalan State entered into an agreement with the United States to "transfer nationals of Central American countries to Guatemala." According to official information,[1217] both States agreed that each would comply with its international obligations, national constitutions, laws, regulations, and immigration and visa policies, including Guatemala's consideration of asylum or equivalent temporary protection applications submitted by nationals of Central American countries. The Inter-American Commission does not have information on the implementation of this agreement.

537. With regard to internal displacement, information from the National Statistics Institute (INE) released in September 2025 indicates that the 2023 National Survey of Living Conditions (ENCOVI) revealed that Guatemala reportedly has around 1,200,000 internally displaced people, accounting for 7 percent of the country's total population. Of those displaced, 47 percent are men and 53 percent are women. ENCOVI data indicates that women face greater exposure to internal displacement and are displaced more often than men.[1218] Figures from the Internal Displacement Monitoring Center (IDMC), published in May 2025, allegedly place Guatemala among the countries with the highest numbers of internally displaced persons by the end of 2024. According to the IDMC, 550 conflict- and violence-related displacements and 81,000 disaster-related displacements occurred in 2024.[1219]

538. With regard to persons deprived of liberty, the Inter-American Commission welcomes the implementation of the General Intimate Visit Protocol in detention centers under the responsibility of the General Directorate of the Penitentiary System (DGSP), and it also values the announcement of infrastructure improvements to be carried out in three centers.[1220] The Inter-American Commission also takes note of the opening of the Coatepeque Pretrial Detention Center in Quetzaltenango, together with the transfer of its administration from the National Civil Police (PNC) to the DGSP.[1221] In addition, the Commission acknowledges an 18-point reduction in the rate of pretrial detention, which, according to official data compiled by Colectivo Artesana, stood at 29 percent as of August 29. However, the Commission reiterates its concern over the [1214] AGN, "Protocolo de Atención a Personas en Flujos Migratorios Mixtos fortalecerá los desafíos de la movilidad humana" (Protocol for the Care of Persons in Mixed Migration Flows to Strengthen Responses to Human Mobility Challenges), July 24, 2025. IMO Guatemala, "Guatemala presenta Protocolo de Atención a Personas en Flujos Migratorios Mixtos" (Guatemala launches Protocol for the Care of Persons in Mixed Migration Flows), June 23, 2025.

[1215] Guatemalan Migration Institute, Guatemala, Informe de guatemaltecos retornados 2025 (2025 Report on Guatemalan returnees),n/d., p. 2. Accessed on August 26, 2025.

[1216] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A. Situation of Human Rights in the Region, May 8, 2025, para. 489.

[1217] National Archives, Federal Register, United States, Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Guatemala Relating to the Transfer of Nationals of Central American Countries to Guatemala, July 7, 2025.

[1218] INE, Guatemala, Internal Displacement in Guatemala, n/d. On IACHR´s files. Vice Presidency of Guatemala [@ViceGuatemala], (September 1, 2025), Guatemala cuenta ahora con evidencia sólida sobre el desplazamiento interno (Guatemala now has solid evidence on internal displacement) [X post], X. https://x.com/ViceGuatemala/status/1962682621558677999.

[1219] Internal Displacement Monitoring Center, Global Report on Internal Displacement 2024, May 13, 2025, pp. 73 and 110.

[1220] Government of Guatemala, Diplomatic Note No. OEA-M4-NV-260-2025 – Annex: Annual Report of the State of Guatemala to the IACHR, October 10, 2025, pp. 117 and 119.

[1221] Ministry of the Interior, Government of Guatemala, "Centro de Detención Preventiva fortalece gestión penitenciaria" (Pretrial detention center strengthens penitentiary management), July 1, 2025.

persistence of severe overcrowding in centers of deprivation of liberty. According to the same data, overcrowding reached 23 percent as of the indicated date.[1222]

539. In addition, the Inter-American Commission took note of reports of repeated incidents of violence in various Guatemalan prisons. Through a statement issued on May 30, it expressed deep concern over the death of four people deprived of liberty at the Pavoncito Prison on May 23, and recalled the State's duty to protect the life and security of people under its custody.[1223] In addition, the Inter-American Commission condemned the violence that occurred on July 17 at the Puerto Barrios Rehabilitation Center, which resulted in the death of two persons deprived of liberty.[1224]

540. In addition, alarm has been raised over riots recorded over the year in various detention centers, led by organized crime groups in response to the transfer of five members of the Pandilla 18 / Barrio 18 street gang and five members of the Mara Salvatrucha, who were relocated to the Renovación I Detention Center on July 31, 2025.[1225] In addition, the Commission took note of the escape of 20 detainees allegedly belonging to the Pandilla 18 / Barrio 18 street gang, as announced by the government of Guatemala on October 12.[1226]

541. Lastly, according to information received during its 193rd regular period of sessions, the Commission condemns the alleged practices of sexual violence and trafficking of girls which have reportedly been taking place in Guatemalan prisons for nearly two decades. Additionally, the Commission is concerned that, according to information received on that occasion, detention centers in the country reportedly prohibit visits as a punitive measure and, moreover, they lack adequate conditions to allow visits, for example, due to the absence of emergency exits, unsanitary conditions, and visitor restrooms without doors.[1227]

542. Regarding human trafficking, the Inter-American Commission welcomes the adoption of Decree No. 3-2025, of February 18, 2025, which amends Decree No. 33-2006 of the Penitentiary Regime Law and Decree No. 1773 of the Criminal Code. The decree seeks to: i) protect Guatemalan children from human trafficking within the penitentiary system; ii) establish a system for the registration and monitoring of children and adolescents who enter detention centers as family visitors; and iii) dismantle criminal networks with [1222] Information provided to the IACHR by the organization Colectivo Artesana of Guatemala by electronic means, August 29, 2025; see also: IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A."Situation of Human Rights in the Region", para. 491; and Congress of the Republic, Government of Guatemala, "MESA DISCUTE SOBRE HACINAMIENTO EN LAS CÁRCELES" (Roundtable discusses prison overcrowding), August 19, 2025.

[1223] IACHR [@CIDH], (May 30, 2025), #CIDH expresa su preocupación por la muerte de cuatro personas privadas de libertad en la cárcel de Pavoncito, el 23 de mayo (#IACHR expresses concern over the death of four persons deprived of liberty at the Pavoncito Prison on May 23) [X post], X, https://x.com/CIDH/status/1928526497842868502.

[1224] Guatemalan Penitentiary System [@_SPGuatemala], (July 18, 2025), #ComunicadoOficial (#OfficialStatement) [X post], X, https://x.com/_SPGuatemala/status/1946233907990397106.

[1225] In particular, the riots that occurred on August 12 at the Zone 18 Pretrial Detention Center and at the Fraijanes 2 Detention Center, during which 11 penitentiary guards were taken hostage; on August 22 at the Restauración Constitucional Pretrial Detention Center for Men and the El Boquerón Pretrial Detention Center, during which 13 people, including penitentiary officers and civilians, were taken hostage; and on August 24 at the El Boquerón Pretrial Detention Center, during which its director and warden were taken hostage. Jiménez, Francisco [@FJimenezmingob], (August 12, 2025), Al pueblo de Guatemala le informo: Hoy, las pandillas han dado un paso más en su desesperación. Coordinaron motines en... (To the people of Guatemala, I inform you: Today, gangs have taken a further step amid their desperation. They orchestrated riots in...) [X post], X, https://x.com/FJimenezmingob/status/1955266243482497164; and Guatemalan Penitentiary System [@_SPGuatemala], (August 23, 2025), #ComunicadoOficial #SPenAcción (#OfficialStatement, #SPinAction) [X post], X, https://x.com/_SPGuatemala/status/1959434172918825250; see also: Swissinfo, "Las autoridades liberan a los rehenes tomados por pandilleros en cárceles de Guatemala" (Authorities free hostages taken by gang members in prisons in Guatemala), August 25, 2025; and El Mundo, Liberan a los 11 guardias penitenciarios tomados como rehenes por las pandillas tras amotinarse en dos cárceles de Guatemala (Authorities release 11 penitentiary guards taken hostage by gangs after riots in two prisons in Guatemala), August 13, 2025.

[1226] La Nación, "Recapturan a dos pandilleros fugados de cárcel en Guatemala" (Authorities recapture two gang members who escaped from prison in Guatemala), October 18, 2025; DW, "Guatemala: fuga de pandilleros presos genera crisis política" (Guatemala: Prison escape of gang members sparks political crisis), October 15, 2025; and The New York Times, "Una fuga masiva de reclusos desata crisis de seguridad en Guatemala" (Mass prison escape triggers security crisis in Guatemala), October 14, 2025.

[1227] IACHR, public hearing "Impact of penitentiary policies on children and adolescents with imprisoned relatives," 193° regular period of sessions, July 21, 2025.

access to deprivation of liberty centers.[1228] This decree establishes that visits by children and adolescents may only take place when they are first- or second-degree blood relatives. In addition, the Commission took note of the launch, in the same month, of the National Plan for the Prevention of Sexual Violence, Exploitation and Human Trafficking, as well as the Mobile Units Mechanism for the prevention of this crime.[1229] Both initiatives seek to carry out training and awareness-raising activities to fight against human trafficking and to promote crime prevention through community-based interventions aimed at persons in vulnerable situations.

543. With respect to the rights of persons with disabilities, the INE is conducting a survey aimed at collecting key data on the connection between migration and disability.[1230] In addition, the Office of the Public Defender (PGN) strengthened legal assistance for this population, promoting greater access to justice.[1231] For its part, the State submitted a framework bill on persons with disabilities, which provides for the creation of a specialized presidential secretariat tasked with implementing the model and the national policy for the care and protection of the rights of persons with disabilities, with the aim of ensuring a more comprehensive and coordinated institutional response.[1232] In this regard, the civil society reports a lack of regulations for the provision of differentiated care for persons with disabilities, which would facilitate the issuance of certificates confirming the status of persons with disabilities in the workplace and other sectors.[1233]

XVIII. GUYANA

- General considerations

544. As it relates to progress, the Commission highlights the passage of legislation to increase access and improve the delivery of justice. In addition, the IACHR highlights the passage of child protection legislation, the establishment of a new children's Court and continued efforts to promote equal opportunity and participation of women in economic life. Moreover, the Commission welcomes efforts to address gender-based violence against women.

545. As it relates to challenges, the Commission takes note of the continued delay in the establishment of a Human Rights Commission. Moreover, the IACHR notes with concern that domestic violence–related killings of women remained alarmingly high. Additionally, the Commission notes with concern multiple cases of violence and excessive use of force impacting Afro-descendant communities.

546. On September 3, 2025, the State submitted its response to the request for information for the preparation of this chapter.[1234]

[1228] Government of Guatemala, "Ley Protege a Menores de la Explotación y Trata de Personas" (Law protects minors from exploitation and human trafficking), February 18, 2025.

[1229] Government of Guatemala, "Aumentan las unidades móviles para el interior del país, iniciativa clave para la prevención de la Violencia Sexual, Explotación y Trata de Personas" (Increase in mobile units nationwide, a key initiative to prevent sexual violence, exploitation and human trafficking), February 13, 2025.

[1230] La Red, "INE lanzará encuesta nacional en noviembre y diciembre para medir el impacto de la migración y la discapacidad en Guatemala" (INE to launch national survey in November and December to assess the impact of migration and disability in Guatemala), October 2, 2025

[1231] AGN, "PGN refuerza acciones en defensa de personas con discapacidad" (PNG strengthens actions to defend the rights of persons with disabilities), September 19, 2025.

[1232] Congress of the Republic, "Política de atención y protección a personas con discapacidad" (Policy for the Care and Protection of Persons with Disabilities), April 30, 2025; "Presentan iniciativa de ley marco para personas con discapacidad" (Lawmakers introduce a framework bill on persons with disabilities), August 19, 2025.

[1233] Canal Antigua, Desafíos y avances en materia de discapacidad en Guatemala (Challenges and progress on disability in Guatemala), June 27, 2025.

[1234] The Co-operative Republic of Guyana, Responses by the Government of Guyana to the IACHR Request for Information IACHR Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025. On file at the IACHR.

- Specific issues

547. With regards to democratic institutionality, the IACHR notes that the State held general and regional elections on September 1. According to the official results of the Guyana Elections Commission, the ruling party, the People's Progressive Party/Civic (PPC), won 36 seats in the National Assembly to form a majority government. While We Invest in Nationhood (WIN) gained 16 seats, the A Partnership for National Unity (APNU) gained 12 seats, and Forward Guyana Movement (FGM) gained 1 seat.[1235] The Commission highlights the OAS Electoral Observation Mission Preliminary Report which noted that the election process was conducted efficiently. In addition, the Report recommended restructuring the electoral authority for greater impartiality, ensuring accessible voting for persons with disabilities and establishing measures to prevent and address political violence, particularly against women in politics.[1236]

548. In relation to human rights institutions, the Commission notes with concern public statements made by the government in March which criticized certain civil society organizations. While the government indicated a willingness to support CSOs that contribute "positively to society", it noted that organizations critical of the ruling government would not receive financial support.[1237] The Commission is also concerned about the persistent ineffectiveness of the Office of the Information Commissioner, which, according to civil society, has been under-resourced and has not been operational for long periods. In this context, the IACHR has emphasized that access to information is essential for democratic participation and requires a legal regime in which transparency and the right of access are the general rule.[1238]

549. Moreover, there has been a continued delay in the establishment of a Human Rights Commission. Although the Constitution of Guyana provides for the establishment of a Human Rights Commission to promote respect for and investigate violations of fundamental rights, the State has yet to establish this Commission. Concerning the appointment of a chairperson for the Commission, under the Fourth Universal Periodic Review (UPR), the State reported that the Constitution mandates the President to appoint the Commission's chairperson from a list submitted by the Leader of the Opposition. It was noted that the appointment process will potentially be reviewed during the constitutional reform process.[1239]

550. Harsh criticism of civil society speaking out against State action, the non-functioning Information Commissioner and the delay in establishing a Human Rights Commission are worrying signs of intolerance towards dissent.

551. With regards to access to justice, the Commission highlights the passage of the amendment to the Court of Appeal Act which expanded the Court of Appeal bench with the aim of improving the delivery of justice. According to information provided by the State, seven judges were promoted to the Appeal Court by the Judicial Services Commission in May. The State informed that the Appeal Court is now better resourced to continue reviewing appeals and is better positioned to review appeals efficiently, uphold the rule of law and protect and ensure fundamental human rights.[1240]

552. Concerning the rights of children, the Commission highlights the passage of child protection legislation, the establishment of a children's Court and the State's zero-tolerance policy on sexual abuse and harassment. Regarding the passage of child protection legislation, in August the IACHR congratulated the State on the passage of the International Measures for the Protection of Children (Hague Convention) Act 2025. It was noted that this new law aimed to incorporate into domestic law the 1996 Hague Convention on Jurisdiction, [1235] Department of Public Information, People's Progressive Party/Civic Wins 2025 General and Regional Elections, September 6, 2025.

[1236] OAS, Preliminary Report of the OAS Electoral Observation Mission in Guyana for the 2025 General and Regional Elections, September 5, 2025.
[1237] Kaieteur News, No State funding for NGOs critical of Govt. —Jagdeo tells supporters, March 26, 2025.
[1238] IACHR, Thematic Hearing, Guyana: Impacts of the Freedom of Information Act, 194º Period of Sessions, November 19, 2025.
[1239] Human Rights Council, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, February 17, 2025.
[1240] The Co-operative Republic of Guyana, Responses by the Government of Guyana to IACHR Request for Information IACHR Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025. On file at the IACHR.

Applicable Law, Recognition, Enforcement and Co-operation in Respect of Parental Responsibility and Measures for the Protection of Children. The Commission noted that the passage of this legislation reflected the State's commitment to strengthening international legal cooperation and ensuring effective protection for children in cross-border contexts, such as in situations of custody, visitation, intercountry adoptions and other protection measures.[1241]

553. In addition, according to information provided by the State, in collaboration with UNICEF, it opened a children's Court at the Charity Magistrate's Court in Region Two. This is the third specialized children's Court in the country and is in direct alignment with Juvenile Justice Act of 2018. This Act outlines comprehensive guidelines for the handling of juveniles who come into contact with the law, from arrest and custody to court proceedings and sentencing.[1242]

554. Moreover, within the context of its Fourth UPR, the State informed that it maintained a zero-tolerance policy on sexual abuse and harassment in schools, ensuring prompt investigations into bullying and violence. It further noted that its stance will be strengthened by the Protection from Harassment Bill which is currently under public consultation.[1243] According to the Ministry of Human Services and Social Security there were 4,038 cases of child abuse recorded in 2024 ranging from physical, emotional, sexual, verbal as well as neglect.[1244] In contrast, according to public information there were 275 cases of child abuse recorded as of February 16.[1245]

555. Regarding the human rights of women, the budget allocated to the Women and Gender Equality Commission in 2025 increased by 10.5% compared to the previous year's budget, and by 42.3% compared to 2020.[1246] The State also continued efforts to promote equal opportunity and participation of women in economic life by expanding their access to higher education,[1247] new markets and entrepreneurial training.[1248] There is also a growing level of women's participation across both the public and private sectors. As of July, women represent over 60% of the judiciary,[1249] 39% of the National Assembly[1250]– of whom 39% are indigenous women[1251]-, and at least one-third of party candidates which contested the 2025 General and [1241] IACHR, Press Release No. 161/25, IACHR Welcomes Guyana's Legislative Progress in Protecting Children's Rights, August 14, 2025.

[1242] The Co-operative Republic of Guyana, Responses by the Government of Guyana to the IACHR Request for Information IACHR Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025. On file at the IACHR.

[1243] Human Rights Council, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, February 17, 2025.

[1244] Department of Public Information, CPA working overtime to tackle child abuse reports, February 18, 2025.

[1245] Kaieteur News, 275 cases of child abuse recorded in 2025 – Min. Persaud, February 16, 2025.

[1246] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, p. 6, on IACHR files; HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, p. 208.

[1247] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, pp. 9-10, on IACHR files; Guyana Times, Over 70% of GOAL scholarship beneficiaries are women – Ali, January 29, 2025; Stabroek News, Seventy percent of GOAL's latest graduates are women, June 10, 2025.

[1248] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, pp. 8-10, on IACHR files; Department of Public Information, Fifth edition of WE LIFT Expo a success, April 14, 2025; HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, p. 126-128.

[1249] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, pp. 6 and 13, on IACHR files; HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, p. 206.

[1250] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, p. 6, on IACHR files; HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, p. 205.

[1251] Prensa Latina, Destaca Guyana avances en derechos de mujeres indígenas, April 22, 2025.

Regional elections.[1252] Women also hold leadership positions in the private sector,[1253] and dominate the teaching and health sectors at high levels.[1254]

556. Concerning efforts to address gender-based violence, the Commission highlights the "Bridging the Gap Policy", a positive initiative that acknowledges men and boys as essential partners in prevention, and emphasizes accountability while supporting healing, self-awareness and positive masculinity.[1255] Survivor's access to support services was also strengthened through the expansion of Hope and Justice Centers and mobile gender-based violence services to remote regions, and the upgrading of the iMatter mobile app.[1256] Additionally, the State informed that the Protection from Harassment Bill and the amendments to the Sexual offences Act will enhance protections for women;[1257] however, both pieces of legislation remain pending since at least last year.[1258]

557. Moreover, domestic violence–related killings of women remain alarmingly high. Civil society organizations have called for an evaluation of the judicial system, particularly the Guyana Police Force, citing numerous cases where authorities failed to act on domestic violence reports, resulting in the murder of victims.[1259] The continued absence of legislation criminalizing femicide[1260] and the lack of systematic data collection on violence against women further hinder the State's ability to prevent such crimes effectively.[1261]

558. In relation to trafficking in persons, the IACHR observes that in July, the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Unit (C-TIP) of the Ministry of Human Services and Social Security launched a series of new tools aimed at enhancing victim protection, increasing public awareness, and encouraging greater community involvement in the fight against human trafficking. These new tools include: comprehensive standard operating procedures for trafficking in persons protection; a child-friendly trafficking in persons storybook for readers seven to 16; four QR codes to allow the public to report trafficking concerns quickly and easily; and a simplified reader-friendly version of the C-TIP Act of 2023, titled "A victim's Guide."[1262]

559. In addition, the IACHR takes note that in April, interagency governmental offices gathered to review progress and align strategic priorities for the comprehensive New Action Plan which outlines targeted

[1252] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, p. 7, on IACHR files.

[1253] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, p. 7, on IACHR files.

[1254] HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, p. 207.

[1255] Permanent Mission of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana to the Organization of American States, Note No. 115/2025 – Annex: Responses by the Government of Guyana to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Annual Report 2025, September 3, 2025, p. 9, on IACHR files.

[1256] HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, p. 210; dpi.gov.gy, Guyana consults on key reforms to Sexual Offences Act, April 9, 2025.

[1257] HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21* Guyana, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, p. 195 and 203.

[1258] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IV.a, March 26, 2025, p. 496.

[1259] Stabroek News, Cummings Lodge woman slain after frequent physical abuse, September 4, 2025; Stabroek News, Maline LaCruz videos for help from domestic violence didn't prevent her murder, May 6, 2025; Stabroek News, We are outraged at the continued lack of accountability and failure of the justice system to protect women and girls from violence, May 3, 2025; Stabroek News, Ministry should listen and learn as survivors of gender-based violence and their families explain their problems, February 21, 2025; Stabroek News, Failure to systematically collect and disseminate data is hampering fight against sexual and gender-based violence, February 9, 2025.

[1260] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IV.a, March 26, 2025, p. 496.

[1261] HRC Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, Summary of stakeholders' submissions on Guyana*, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/3, January 17, 2025, p. 48; Stabroek News, Failure to systematically collect and disseminate data is hampering fight against sexual and gender-based violence, February 9, 2025.

[1262] Government of Guyana, C-TIP Unit launches vital anti-trafficking tools to strengthen victim support, raise awareness, July 30, 2025.

interventions for the prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnership pillars of Guyana's anti-trafficking efforts. The Action Plan ensures alignment with the best international practices to combat trafficking.[1263]

560. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, the State reported that, in 2025, the Ethnic Relations Commission, together with other national human rights institutions, received a 51% increase in its budget allocation compared to 2020, which strengthened its institutional capacity to fulfill their respective mandates.[1264]

561. Likewise, the IACHR received information about multiple incidents of violence and excessive use of force impacting Afro-descendant communities. Media reported that, in April, a man was shot dead by police in Linden,[1265] and during subsequent protests another man died from police gunfire.[1266] Further, the death in custody of another man was recorded,[1267] as well as a person seriously wounded by police gunfire in Wismar.[1268] In Georgetown, police shot and killed another man while responding to a robbery,[1269] and in July, two people were killed in Buxton by unknown assailants.[1270] The Commission also notes that, in response to the Linden incident, authorities reported that regional police-oversight agencies arrived in the country and completed investigations into the lethal events, resulting in the criminal charging of a sergeant.[1271] It also recorded investigative progress in other cases.[1272] Also, in July, a High Court judge sentenced a former SWAT officer to 25 years in prison for the 2021 death of Orin Boston, in a fatal police incident in a majority Afro-Guyanese community.[1273] The Commission observes a pattern of racial profiling practices in the country.[1274]

562. With respect to the rights of LGBTI persons, civil society hosted a town hall with political leaders, ahead of the 2025 elections, addressing LGBTI issues such as workplace discrimination, anti-bullying in schools, and legal reform. Some representatives stated that their party does not support LGBTI discrimination with one party even promising to establish a state funded LGBTI commission if elected.[1275] In this context, the IACHR notes that Guyana continues to have laws which criminalize same-sex relationships between consenting adults.

563. With respect to the rights of indigenous peoples, the Government shared with the Kapohn community the economic benefits derived from the sale of carbon credits. Nonetheless, the way this measure was implemented did not adhere to the community's own practices, timelines, and customary decision-making processes, leading to rushed and insufficiently informed choices regarding the use of the funds.[1276]

564. On the matter of persons deprived of liberty, the Commission welcomes the introduction of the Prison Bill 2025, which seeks to modernize the legal framework by emphasizing rehabilitation and [1263] Government of Guyana, Ministerial Taskforce Advances New Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons, April 25, 2025.

[1264] State of Guyana, Note No. 115/2025 in response to the Request for Information letter pursuant to Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (ACHR) No. 368-25/IACHR/SE/MPCT-IA, August 5, 2025, pp. 5–6, IACHR archives.
[1265] Stabroek News, Linden wanted man fatally shot by cop, April 8, 2025.
[1266] Stabroek News, Protester shot dead in Linden, President appeals for calm, April 8, 2025; Guyana News, No update on probe into Keon Fogenay's shooting death – family members, August 3, 2025.
[1267] News Room Guyana, After beaten and left unattended, block maker dies in Police custody, April 16, 2025.
[1268] Stabroek News, Family seeks help for emergency surgery overseas for Linden father of two shot in eye by police, May 5, 2025.
[1269] Stabroek News, Man fatally shot by cop on Camp and Quamina during robbery, April 29, 2025.
[1270] Stabroek News, Two shot dead in Buxton, five injured, July 16, 2025.
[1271] News Room Guyana, RSS team in Guyana to investigate Linden fatal shootings, April 12, 2025; Stabroek News, Probe into police fatal shooting of Ronaldo Peters has concluded, April 22, 2025; Stabroek News, Police sergeant charged with murder of Linden man, April 26, 2025.
[1272] Stabroek News, DPP to receive file on death of Delon Lawrence in police custody, June 15, 2025.
[1273] Stabroek News, Police constable gets 25 years for killing Dartmouth businessman, 10 de julio de 2025; News Room Guyana, SWAT officer gets 25 years for killing Orin Boston during unlawful raid, July 10, 2025.
[1274] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IV-A, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26 2025, para. 503; UN, Human Rights Committee, Concluding observations on the third periodic report of Guyana, CCPR/C/GUY/CO/3, May 3, 2024, para. 14.
[1275] Newsroom Guyana, Elections 2025: Political parties oppose LGBTQ+ discrimination at town hall, July 30, 2025; HGPTV, Political Parties Face Questions On LGBTQ+ Rights At 2025 Elections Town Hall, July 30, 2025.
[1276] Agencia Publica, A new mall for the village: How carbon credit dollars affect Indigenous people in Guyana, January 13, 2025.

reintegration.[1277] Additionally, the IACHR values that, according to the State information presented before the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review in 2025, since 2021, Guyana has undertaken 39 major reconstruction and expansion project at prison facilities to combat overcrowding and improve conditions, ensuring they are more humane, accessible and accommodating for persons with disabilities.[1278]

565. On the other hand, it also observes the initiatives to reduce recidivism to 14%, the lowest rate within the Caribbean Community (CARICOM), through vocational training, labor market integration, and community-based support programs.[1279] In addition, the IACHR notes the commissioning of new headquarters for the Guyana Prison Service in Lusignan, East Coast Demerara, intended to improve prison management, rehabilitation, and the environment for inmates and staff.[1280]

566. In relation to the death penalty, the IACHR observes that Guyana is the only country in South America that retains the death penalty as a punishment, although it maintains a de facto moratorium on this penalty, with no executions since 1997.[1281]

XIX. HAITI

- General considerations

567. As it relates to progress, the Commission highlights the Conseil Électoral Provisoire's (CEP) submission of a full calendar regarding upcoming elections. In addition, it notes the role played by Haitian authorities in the creation of a new Multinational Gang Suppression Force (GSF) and the United Nations Support Office for Haiti (UNSOH). Also, significant institutional and legislative measures were taken this year to address gender-based violence and discrimination, notably with the creation of two specialized judicial units against mass crimes and sexual violence. The Commission further notes Haiti's commitment to reducing insecurity which led to the adoption of the Roadmap for Stability and Peace in Haiti by the OAS General Secretariat. Lastly, the Commission takes note of the establishment of the National Security Council (CNS).

568. Regarding challenges, the Commission reiterates once again its concern regarding the upsurge in violent attacks and persistent gender-based violence. Additionally, the IACHR notes with concern the rise of armed citizen brigades participating in violent confrontations. The Commission further reiterates its concern about the persistent increase in the number of internally displaced persons in the framework of the Haitian multidimensional crisis.

569. The State did not respond to the request for information to draft this chapter.

- Specific issues

570. Regarding democratic institutionality, the Commission highlights the submission by the CEP to the Transitional Presidential Council (CPT) of a full electoral calendar, setting the date of August 30, 2026, for the first round of elections. The proposed timeline outlines a 41-step plan through February 2027. The Commission values that the CEP, the organ responsible for upcoming elections, has already taken several actions with regards to preparing the electoral vote, such as registering more than 200 political parties,

[1277] Ministry of Legal Affairs, Government of Guyana, Guyana moves to replace 1957 Prison Act with modern rehabilitation-focused law, 10 September 2025.
[1278] Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, Human Rights Council, United Nations, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, para. 100.
[1279] Department of Public Information, Government of Guyana, Guyana leads recidivism efforts within CARICOM, July 14, 2025.
[1280] Department of Public Information, Government of Guyana, $447M Prison Headquarters Commissioned at Lusignan, August 25, 2025.
[1281] Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, Human Rights Council, United Nations, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21, A/HRC/WG.6/49/GUY/1, February 17, 2025, para. 8.

assessing voting centers and recruiting members of the Departmental Electoral Offices.[1282] However, at the time of drafting this Report, there was no public information regarding electoral candidates lists, campaign guidelines, observers' accreditations or measures to include vulnerable populations.[1283]

571. Likewise, the Commission takes note of the replacement of Fritz Alphonse Jean by businessmen Laurent Saint-Cyr at the rotating presidency of the CPT in August. This rotation is part of a built-in mechanism changing the presidency every five months. The CPT is a temporary body established by the March 11, 2024 political agreement brokered by CARICOM to assume interim presidency over Haiti until a new President may be sworn in or until February 7, 2026, whichever comes first.[1284]

572. On the other hand, the Commission notes that the CPT proposed a referendum for a new Constitution to be held in 2025 in order to address governance challenges, even as Haiti's 1987 Constitution explicitly prohibits referendums as a means of amendment. In light of this situation, there were concerns regarding the legitimacy of such an operation as well as the level of security needed to ensure a reliable voting process.[1285] Also, in response to the CEP President's request for opinion, the Venice Commission of the Council of Europe stated in June 2025 that a climate of security is essential if elections are to comply with international standards and commented that recent developments were not reassuring in this aspect.[1286] Finally, on October 9, 2025, the CPT terminated the mandate of the steering committee in charge of the referendum, effectively abandoning the initiative.[1287]

573. Regarding human rights institutionality, the Commission notes Haiti's contribution in the adoption and implementation of the OAS' Roadmap for Stability and Peace, which offers a "political and operational framework to coordinate concrete solutions with the Haitian authorities and align efforts among multilateral and regional partners". This initiative is focused on: i) immediate measures to secure key corridors and infrastructure, rebuilding the Haitian National Police, reforming the justice system, and dismantling transnational criminal economies; ii) addressing the need for political legitimacy alongside security; iii) supporting the CEP and the National Identification Office (ONI) to guarantee free, fair, and transparent elections; iv) delivering life-saving aid in food, water, health, education, and shelter; and v) restoring basic services, promoting climate-resilient agriculture, strengthening micro, small and medium enterprises (MSMEs), expanding infrastructure, and fostering social protection systems. [1288]

574. However, as Haiti faces a worsening humanitarian crisis, its capacity to guarantee the effective enjoyment of basic human rights is hindered by funding insufficiency, as it was operating with only 9% of the 908$ million required for its humanitarian needs as of July 2025, according to OCHA.[1289] Thus, the effective enjoyment of human rights remains challenged by the context of generalized violence.

575. Regarding citizen security, the Commission notes the instauration of the National Security Council (CNS) in December 2024, aimed at addressing security needs and fulfilling Haiti's obligations following the ratification of the "Accord Politique for a peaceful and organized transition" of April 3, 2024.[1290] The [1282] The Haitian Times, Inside Haiti's road to the 2026 elections: CEP sets Aug. 30 as tentative voting date, November 17, 2025; and The Haitian Times, Security Council warns Haiti's leaders: Time running out to restore security and hold elections, October 23, 2025; and L'actualité, L'ONU presse les dirigeants haïtiens d'organiser des élections avant la date limite, October 23, 2025.

[1283] The Haitian Times, Dans un contexte de méfiance croissante, le conseil électoral d'Haïti bloque le référendum et les plans électoraux, July 22, 2025.

[1284] OAS, Special report on the situation of press freedom in Haiti, May 2025, p. 11.

[1285] United Nations, Security Council, United Nations Integrated Office in Haiti - Report of the Secretary-General, S/2025/641, October 14, 2025; and The Haitian Times, Haiti's upcoming constitutional referendum: A controversial process amid political and security crisis, April 1, 2025; and United Nations, ASG Jenča warns of deepening crisis in Haiti, urges urgent international action to prevent collapse of state authority, July 2, 2025.

[1286] European Commission for Democracy through Law (Venice Commission), Haiti opinion on the draft referendum decree, June 6, 2025.

[1287] Miami Herald, Haiti's transitional leaders end controversial effort to rewrite 1987 constitution, October 10, 2025; and Haitian Times, Security Council warns Haiti's leaders: Time running out to restore security and hold elections, October 23, 2025.

[1288] OAS, Press release No. E-047/25, OAS Secretary General Presents Roadmap for Stability and Peace in Haiti, August 30, 2025.

[1289] OCHA, Haïti : Aperçu de la réponse humanitaire à l'échelle nationale - Rapport de situation No. 19, July 22, 2025.

[1290] Le Nouvelliste, Le CPT publie le cadre légal du Conseil national de sécurité, December 27, 2024.

Commission however notes that, as of November 2025, no members had formally been appointed to the CNS. It further notes the appointment, in August 2025, of a new director-general of the Haitian National Police forces, following the previous director's failure to contain armed gang violence.[1291]

576. However, as it has been expressed in its press releases published in January[1292], March[1293], April[1294] and May[1295], and December [1296]the Commission reiterates its concern regarding the context of insecurity and generalized violence that has deteriorated throughout the year over the country. According to the data published by the Bureau Intégré des Nations Unies à Haiti's (BINUH), the number of people killed in Haiti in the first nine months of the year amounts to 4,384 people.[1297]

577. The BINUH reports indicate that armed gangs expanded their territorial influence in the metropolitan area of Port-au-Prince and its surroundings during the first quarter, particularly in the communes of Kenscoff and Delmas. However, gang territory progression in the capital stalled in the second and third quarters.[1298] Additionally, large-scale attacks in the Centre department were carried out, aiming to gain control of the roads leading to the Dominican Republic.[1299] In this context, through the first three quarters of 2025, the proportion of killings attributable to armed gangs attacks fluctuated from 35 to 24 to 30%, those happening during security operations increased from 56 to 64 before decreasing to 61%, and those attributed to self-defence groups rose from 9 to 12 before returning to 9%.[1300]

578. In December, the IACHR expressed its extreme concern regarding the persistence and worsening of sexual violence against women, girls, and adolescents. Although sexual violence continues to go unreported due to fear of reprisals, at least 1,000 sexual violence cases—including gang rapes and cases of sexual slavery—were documented between January and June 2025, particularly in areas controlled by armed groups. As reported during a thematic hearing on impunity for sexual violence against women and girls in Haiti, these acts occur in contexts characterized by the absence or limited presence of the State; they are deliberately directed against women and girls as an expression of gender discrimination and as a means of territorial and population control, with rape also being used to humiliate the victims.[1301]

579. Also, according to official data published by the BINUH, 20% of the 802 people that were killed during security force operations in the first quarter of the year were struck by stray bullets while on the streets or in their homes. The Commission notes with concern the 124 cases of alleged summary or arbitrary executions committed by police officers, and 28 cases of extrajudicial killings allegedly committed by the government Commissioner of Miragoâne between January and September 2025.[1302] Also noted is the growing use of explosive drone strikes in 2025 by a private military company following the establishment of a Task Force operating under the command of the Prime Minister on March 1st 2025, which killed more than 300 people in the second quarter, accounting for roughly a third of all casualties recorded during security force operations[1303]. Considering this, the IACHR expresses its concerns regarding the risks for the security of the

[1291] Radio-Canada Info, Haïti déclare un état d'urgence de trois mois en raison de la violence des gangs, August 9, 2025.
[1292] IACHR, Press release No. 022/25, IACHR urges the State of Haiti to take measures to prevent massacres, forced displacement and impunity, January 24, 2025.
[1293] IACHR, Press release No. 052/25 - IACHR condemns deteriorating security situation in Haiti, March 12, 2025.
[1294] IACHR, Press release No. 075/25 - IACHR concerned over escalating violence and humanitarian crisis in Haiti, April 17, 2025.
[1295] IACHR, Press release No. R096/25 - The Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression publishes a special report on the situation of press freedom in Haiti, May 9, 2025.
[1296] IACHR, Press release No. 277/25 - Haiti: IACHR expresses concern over persistent sexual violence against women, girls, and adolescents, December 19, 2025.
[1297] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025.
[1298] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025, p. 6.
[1299] BINUH: Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti January-March 2025, May 1, 2025, p.6
[1300] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025, p. 4.
[1301] IACHR, Press Release No. 277/25, Haiti: IACHR expresses concern over persistent sexual violence against women, girls, and adolescents, December 19, 2025.
[1302] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025, p. 3.
[1303] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti April - June 2025, August 1, 2025 ; and The Guardian, 'The ground shook': drone attacks help Haitian government wrest control of capital from criminal gangs, July 2, 2025.

general population, highlighting the deaths of 39 civilians resulting from drone strikes in the third quarter alone, including 20 children.[1304]

580. Likewise, during the first three quarters of 2025, the IACHR followed up the consolidation of a trend that emerged in late 2024 of self-defence groups within the framework of the movement commonly known as "Bwa Kalé", whose actions resulted in the deaths of at least 239 people accused of belonging to gangs or committing ordinary crimes.[1305] Notably, one of those brigades perpetrated a massacre on May 20, 2025, in Préval, in the Artibonite Department, executing at least 55 unarmed civilians.[1306] These groups were first formed in order to resist gangs but they operate outside legal frameworks and fuel illicit arms markets while raising the risk of licit weapons being diverted to criminal groups and further complicate Haiti's security already challenging security situation as the involvement of these groups and joint operations with police personnel blur the line between vigilante and official security forces.[1307]

581. The second and third quarters were marked by a slowdown of criminal gang territorial progression in the capital, where they control an estimated 85-90% of the capital,[1308] but an increase in the Centre and Artibonite departments, leading the Government to declare, in August 2025, a three-month long state of emergency in these regions.[1309]

582. In addition, the Commission expresses its concern regarding the Haitian National Police and Kenya-led MSS mission's struggles with significantly reducing insecurity in the framework of funding uncertainty and lack of adequate equipment. Deployed personnel were far below the 2,500 officers first envisaged, with 1,000 officers on the ground as of July 2025.[1310]According to an Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) report published in March, the lack of law enforcement personnel is exploited by criminal networks as they take advantage of poorly guarded ports, airports and land borders to smuggle illegal firearms into the country, further fuelling the crisis. [1311]

583. Before this situation, the Commission welcomes the adoption of Resolution N. 2793 by the UN Security Council on September 30, which creates the new Multinational Gang Suppression Force (GSF) that will replace the current Kenya-led MSS, as well as the United Nations Support Office for Haiti (UNSOH), which will provide logistical and operational support for the GSF, Haitian National Police (HNP) and the army. The 5,550-strong Force will operate under an initial 12-month mandate and will work with the Haitian National Police (HNP) and the Haitian armed forces to conduct intelligence-led operations to neutralise gangs, provide security for critical infrastructure, and support humanitarian access. [1312]

584. As it relates to access to justice, the Commission notes with interest the adoption, in April, of a decree creating two specialized judicial units against mass crimes and sexual violence, as well as against financial crimes, which were expected to begin operating respectively in September and October 2025. The Commission further notes that 10 Public Prosecutors have been assigned to these units as of this writing, however these prosecutors still await their appointment as the building intended to host them has not yet been acquired.[1313]

[1304] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025, p.12
[1305] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025, p. 10.
[1306] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti April - June 2025, August 1, 2025, p. 12; BINUH, Intensification of criminal violence in lower Artibonite, the Centre department, and regions located east of the metropolitan area of Port-au-Prince, July 2025; Le Nouvelliste, , May 21, 2025 Préval, May 21, 2025.
[1307] Le Nouvelliste, Understanding Vigilance Brigades in the Fight Against Armed Attacks, June 26, 2025.
[1308] BINUH: Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti April-June 2025, August 1, 2025, p. 2.
[1309] United Nations, Security Council, United Nations Integrated Office in Haiti - Report of the Secretary-General. S/2025/641, October 14, 2025, p. 5; and Al Jazeera, Haiti declares three-month state of emergency as gang violence spikes, August 9, 2025.
[1310] United Nations, Security Council, July 2025 Monthly Forecast , June 30, 2025.
[1311] OHCHR, Situation of human rights in Haiti, March 28, 2025, p.6.
[1312] UN news, UN Security Council approves new 'suppression force' for Haiti amid spiralling gang violence, September 30, 2025.
[1313] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025, p. 15; and Haiti Libre, Vers la mise en place des pôles judiciaires spécialisés, July 20, 2025.

585. On the other hand, the Commission notes the absence of progress regarding the cases of the massacres at Grand Ravine (2017), La Saline (2018) and Bel Air (2019), as well as the murder of Monferrier Dorval (2020), the former head of the Port-au-Prince Bar Association. It was also observed that the investigation into the murder of former President Jovenel Moise will have to begin anew as the Government Commissioner at the Court of Appeal requested the appointment of a new investigating magistrate to restart the judicial process.[1314] Furthermore, the investigation into the massacre in Wharf Jérémie (Port-au-Prince), where at least 207 people were killed on December 11 and 12 of 2024, continued with the hearing of approximately 30 victims and 66 witnesses and relatives of the victims by the investigating judge in charge of the case. Furthermore, investigations were opened into 22 incidents resulting in the death and injury of 29 people involving possible unlawful use of force by the police. As of 30 June, no investigation into these cases had been closed.[1315]

586. However, the Commission notes that access to justice continues to face important challenges as the Port-au-Prince Court of First Instance, which closed in February 2023, reopened in April in a new space in Puits-Blain but, according the Institute for Justice and Democracy in Haiti (IJDH), it remains virtually nonoperational because the new location lacks the space, security, and equipment for effective court function. In addition, it is a matter of concern that three of the country's 18 courts of first instance did not hold any criminal hearings in 2024 while severe staffing shortages across the country further strain judicial function, with several courts at risk of having to close entirely and frequent strikes by court personnel exacerbating these shortcomings.[1316]

587. The IACHR further express its concern about the CPT's proposed constitutional amendments that would eliminate term limits for certain judges and limit the power of the judiciary's oversight body, threatening undermine the judicial sector's integrity even further.[1317]

588. Finally, the Commission is concerned about the situation caused by the identity document crisis. Thousands of citizens have fled their homes without identity documents or have lost theirs in fires and access to Government services in charge of delivering said documents has dramatically decreased. Certain citizens have been intercepted without documents by the HNP and self-defence groups and treated as gang members, with public executions by self-defence groups recorded following failure to identify.[1318]

589. Regarding the rights of children, the Commission expresses its deep concern about the impact that the context of generalized violence in the country has had on this population. According to the UNICEF, violence in Haiti pushed more than 680,000 children into displacement and put more than 3.3 million children in need of humanitarian assistance in 2025. About 25% of the children's population experience consistently high levels of food insecurity, with one million children at a crisis level, which requires urgent action.[1319]

590. In addition, it is a matter of concern that children continue to be killed and injured in in gang attacks, police operations and actions carried out by vigilante groups. Through the first half of the year, at least 68 children have been killed or injured, and at least seven children were kidnapped for ransom.[1320] In particular, an explosive drone attack on September 20, 2025, killed at least eight children and injured six others in Cité-Soleil.[1321] Likewise, the IACHR expresses its concern regarding the recruitment and abuse of children

[1314] BINUH, Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti July - September 2025, November 12, 2025, p. 16.
[1315] BINUH: Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti April-June 2025, August 1, 2025, pp. 17-18.
[1316] Institute for Justice and Democracy in Haiti, Human Rights and the Rule of Law in Haiti: Key Recent Developments December 2024 through June 2025, July 2025, p.6.
[1317] Institute for Justice and Democracy in Haiti, Human Rights and the Rule of Law in Haiti: Key Recent Developments December 2024 through June 2025, July 2025, p. 7.
[1318] The New Humanitarian, Haiti in-depth: Why the Kenya-led security mission is floundering, January 13, 2025.
[1319] UNICEF, The polycrisis for children in Haiti, October, 2025, p. 6.
[1320] BINUH: Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti January-March 2025, May 1, 2025; and BINUH: Quarterly report on the human rights situation in Haiti April-June 2025, August 1, 2025.
[1321] AP news, Drone attack in gang-controlled slum in Haiti kills at least 8 children, injures 6 others, September 23, 2025.

by criminal gangs, with UN-verified cases of grave violations against children multiplying by five[1322] and cases of children being recruited, often as young as 10, nearly doubling to 302 between 2023 and 2024[1323], although the real figures are probably much higher.

591. In relation to the right to education, UNICEF reported that, during the school year 2024–2025, more than 1,600 schools were closed as a direct result of violence and 25 were occupied by armed groups, affecting 243,410 students and 7,548 teachers.[1324] The Commission notes with concern that displacement has disrupted education for nearly 500,000 school-aged children, putting at least one in four Haitian children out of school.[1325]

592. Regarding the rights of women, significant institutional and legislative measures were taken this year to address gender-based violence and discrimination. These include: i) the creation of a specialized judicial unit for the prosecution of mass crimes and sexual violence;[1326] ii) the decriminalization of abortion in the new Penal Code up to the twelfth week of pregnancy, and at any time in cases of rape, incest or danger to the woman's physical or mental health;[1327] iii) the establishment of support mechanisms for survivors of sexual violence, such as legal assistance, psychosocial support and medical care, and; iv) the implementation of safe post-abortion care and training for healthcare providers in accordance with WHO standards.[1328] The State also reported ongoing efforts to draft a bill on the prevention, punishment, and elimination of violence against women, and to review the National Reproductive Health Strategic Plan 2019-2023 to develop a new 2025-2030 plan addressing identified gaps.[1329]

593. However, several UN entities have documented a sharp rise in sexual violence against women this year, mainly rape, gang rape and sexual slavery.[1330] In gang-controlled areas, women, girls, and adolescents are subjected to sexual assault in both public and private spaces, often in broad daylight, as well as to kidnappings and killings during gang attacks. Many are also coerced into "relationships" with gang members, subjecting them to sexual exploitation.[1331] Widespread impunity in cases of sexual violence persists, along with limited access to comprehensive support services, including legal, psychosocial, and health services.[1332] Furthermore, cultural and social barriers, resource constraints, and insecurity continue to hinder women's access to reproductive healthcare services.[1333]

594. In relation to the situation of human mobility, the Commission continued to observe the persistent increase in the number of internally displaced persons as a result of the context of generalized

[1322] UNICEF, The polycrisis for children in Haiti, October, 2025, p. 7.
[1323] United Nations, Security Council, Report of the Secretary-General on Children and Armed Conflict, June 17, 2025.
[1324] UNICEF, The polycrisis for children in Haiti, October, 2025, p. 11.
[1325] UNICEF, The polycrisis for children in Haiti, October, 2025, p. 11.
[1326] République d'Haïti, Pacte International Relatif aux Droits Civils et Politiques Deuxième examen, Réponses actualisées d'Haïti à la liste de points concernant son deuxième rapport périodique, Juin 2025, CCPR/C/HTI/RQ/2/Add.1., p. 27
[1327] République d'Haïti, Pacte International Relatif aux Droits Civils et Politiques Deuxième examen, Réponses actualisées d'Haïti à la liste de points concernant son deuxième rapport périodique, Juin 2025, CCPR/C/HTI/RQ/2/Add.1., p. 62.
[1328] République d'Haïti, Pacte International Relatif aux Droits Civils et Politiques Deuxième examen, Réponses actualisées d'Haïti à la liste de points concernant son deuxième rapport périodique, Juin 2025, CCPR/C/HTI/RQ/2/Add.1., p. 63
[1329] République d'Haïti, Pacte International Relatif aux Droits Civils et Politiques Deuxième examen, Réponses actualisées d'Haïti à la liste de points concernant son deuxième rapport périodique, Juin 2025, CCPR/C/HTI/RQ/2/Add.1., pp. 51 and 64.
[1330] ONU News, Haití, al borde del colapso total del Estado frente a la violencia de las pandillas (Haiti on the brink of total state collapse in the face of gang violence), July 2, 2025; Relief Web, Haiti Crisis in Numbers (as of 25 June 2025), July 1st, 2025; Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, UN Special Representative Patten urges for immediate action as sexual violence surges amid gang violence in Haiti, June 4, 2025.
[1331] Human Rights Committee, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Haiti, CCPR/C/HTI/CO/2*, July 29, 2025, p. 20; Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, UN Special Representative Patten urges for immediate action as sexual violence surges amid gang violence in Haiti, June 4, 2025; United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Report of the situation of human rights in Haiti, A/HRC/58/76, March 28, 2025, p. 10 and 17.
[1332] Human Rights Committee, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Haiti, CCPR/C/HTI/CO/2*, July 29, 2025, p. 20; IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IV.a, March 26, 2025, p. 526.
[1333] République d'Haïti, Pacte International Relatif aux Droits Civils et Politiques Deuxième examen, Réponses actualisées d'Haïti à la liste de points concernant son deuxième rapport périodique, Juin 2025, CCPR/C/HTI/RQ/2/Add.1., p. 64; Human Rights Committee, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Haiti, CCPR/C/HTI/CO/2*, July 29, 2025, p. 22.

violence and multidimensional crisis that Haiti is experiencing.[1334] Data from the IDMC, published in May 2025, indicate that criminal violence in Haiti continued to escalate in 2024, leading to a record 889,000 displacements and leaving over one million people internally displaced by the end of 2024. According to the IDMC, this figure is three times higher than the number reported at the end of 2023 and represents a sixfold increase since 2022.[1335] A shift in displacement patterns was also reported compared to previous years, as many people fled from the capital to other provinces in search of safety.[1336] Assessments conducted by IOM suggest that, following the spread of violence in the Central region and its intensification in the Artibonite region, most internally displaced persons in the provinces are no longer those who fled the capital, but rather from other areas within the provinces.[1337]

595. Additionally, the most recent figures from the IOM indicate that, as of June 2025, there were a total of 1,287,593 displaced persons in Haiti, representing 11% of the population in a situation of displacement. This figure reflects a 24% increase compared to the last displacement report[1338] recorded by the IOM in December 2024,[1339] mainly due to the intensification of armed attacks in various parts of the country.[1340] According to civil society organizations, Haiti has emerged as the epicenter of a growing internal displacement crisis and is a clear example of how organized crime can systematically drive displacement and turn it into a mechanism of territorial and social control.[1341]

596. The Commission also observed the effects of internal displacement on the Haitian population. According to the World Food Programme, the latest Integrated Food Security Phase Classification (IPC) report projects that 5.7 million people (more than half of all Haitians) will experience acute food insecurity through June 2025. Of that total, just over two million are projected to face emergency-level hunger, while around 8,400 people will face catastrophe, the most critical level of food insecurity, where people experience an extreme lack of food, severe acute malnutrition, and risk of starvation.[1342]

597. The IDMC also highlighted that the situation of children and adolescents, who represent more than half of the country's internally displaced persons, was particularly alarming. Not only are they being deprived of education, but many are also subjected to forced recruitment, a trend that increased by 70% in 2024. Some estimates indicate that this group represents approximately half of gang members. Families have also been separated in order to protect children and adolescents from criminal violence, even sending them unaccompanied to other provinces.[1343] Within the same context, gender-based violence remained a major concern since most of the identified victims were internally displaced persons, who also faced a heightened risk of intimate partner violence in overcrowded displacement camps and host families.[1344]

598. This adverse context extends to Haitians who have been returned to the country. According to the International Organization for Migration (IOM), deportees —mostly, though not exclusively, from the Dominican Republic— experience high levels of insecurity and violence, with very low perceptions of safety and trust in state and non-state institutions. They face severe economic hardship, marked by high unemployment, limited assets, and weak labor market integration. Deportees also report lower levels of dignity, social and political integration, and mental health, with around half showing symptoms consistent with

[1334] IACHR, Annual Report. Chapter IV.A. Situation of human rights in the region, May 8, 2025, para. 527.
[1335] IDMC, Global Report on Internal Displacement 2024, May 13, 2025, p. 83.
[1336] IDMC, Global Report on Internal Displacement 2024, May 13, 2025, p. 83.
[1337] IOM, Displacement situation in Haiti – Round 10, June 10, 2025, p. 4.
[1338] IOM, Displacement situation in Haiti – Round 10, June 10, 2025, p. 3.
[1339] IOM, Displacement situation in Haiti – Round 9, January 15, 2025, p. 3.
[1340] IOM, Displacement situation in Haiti – Round 10, June 10, 2025, p. 9.
[1341] Global Initiative against transnational organized crime, A strategic tool in criminal hands. The weaponization of displacement by gangs in Haiti should be a warning flare to the international community, 16 de julio de 2025.
[1342] World Food Programme, Persistent violence and displacement lead to record hunger in Haiti as needs skyrocket, April 17, 2025.
[1343] IDMC, Global Report on Internal Displacement 2024, May 13, 2025, p. 83.
[1344] Global Initiative against transnational organized crime, A strategic tool in criminal hands. The weaponization of displacement by gangs in Haiti should be a warning flare to the international community, July 16, 2025. See also: IDMC, Global Report on Internal Displacement 2024, May 13, 2025, p. 83.

depression or anxiety. Those who experienced greater harm during deportation are more likely to feel unsafe and to rely on negative coping mechanisms.[1345]

599. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, at the regional level, CARICOM reiterated that reparations for Haiti remain central to its reparatory-justice agenda given the economic retaliation that followed the Haitian Revolution and Haiti's history of economic exploitation.[1346]

600. With regard to persons deprived of liberty, the Commission reiterates its concern over the severe overcrowding, the excessive use of pretrial detention, and the deplorable conditions of detention. In particular, according to information from the BINUH, as of April 2, 2025, when there were 7,045 individuals detained, the prison occupancy rate stood at 281%.[1347] The IACHR notes that, as of June 30, this percentage was even higher, considering that the same source recorded 7,163 persons deprived of liberty, 82% of whom were being held in pretrial detention.[1348] In this context, Haiti continues to be the country in the region with the highest percentage of persons held under this measure, and the third highest in the world.[1349]

601. With respect to detention conditions, according to various sources, including BINUH, Haitian detention centers are characterized not only by overcrowding but also by the lack of drinking water, food, medical care, and hygiene, which facilitates the transmission of contagious diseases.[1350] These conditions were the cause of death in most of the 62 deaths of incarcerated persons recorded during the first half of 2025.[1351] Such deplorable conditions reportedly also prevail in police stations, where persons remain detained for extended periods due to the overcrowding in detention centers.[1352] In addition, according to civil society organizations, women and adolescents continue to be held in the same facilities as adult men, and, in some cases, even in the same spaces as men detained for sexual violence. This places the lives and integrity of women and adolescents at serious risk.[1353]

602. The IACHR also expresses concern regarding the repeated attacks on prisons in the country by organized crime. On March 31, criminal structures carried out a major attack on the commune of Mirebalais, including its hospital, police station, and prison, during which several cells and offices were set on fire. In this context, 516 persons escaped from the prison.[1354] In light of this situation, the IACHR takes note of the plan of [1345] International Organization for Migration (IOM), Study on the reintegration of deported migrants in Haiti. Insights from the first round of panel surveys, August 2025, p. 3.

[1346] Caribbean Community (CARICOM), Secretary-General, Reparations for Haiti continue to be central to CARICOM's reparations claim, April 14, 2025.

[1347] Security Council, United Nations Integrated Office in Haiti - Report of the Secretary-General, S/2025/226, April 14, 2025, par. 32.

[1348] BINUH, Quarterly Report on the Human Rights Situation in Haiti, April – June 2025, 2025, p. 18.

[1349] World Prison Brief, Highest to Lowest - Pre-trial detainees / remand prisoners, 2025.

[1350] BINUH, Quarterly Report on the Human Rights Situation in Haiti, April – June 2025, 2025, p. 18; Provincial Human Rights Forum, Haitian League for Human Rights, LHDH and the Organization of Academics for the Defense of Human Rights, Report on Illegal and arbitrary detention (prolonged pre-trial detention) in civilian prisons: Cap-Haïtien, Grande Rivière du Nord, Fort-Liberté, Gonaïves, Hinche, Mirebalais, Jérémie and Jacmel, March 7, 2025, On IACHR's archive; Institute for Justice & Democracy in Haiti, Human Rights and the Rule of Law in Haiti: Key Recent Developments - December 2024 through June 2025, July 2025; y Prensa Latina, Denuncian horror en las cárceles de Haití (Horror Exposed in Haiti's Prisons), June 2, 2025.

[1351] BINUH, Quarterly Report on the Human Rights Situation in Haiti, April – June 2025, 2025, p. 18.

[1352] Réseau National de Défense des Droits Humains, Promiscuité, insalubrité, propagation de maladies contagieuses : le rnddh exige le respect de la dignité humaine des personnes gardées dans les postes de police, May 30, 2025; Institute for Justice & Democracy in Haiti, cited, July 2025; Telesur, Haití: Denuncian malas condiciones y violaciones de derechos en comisarías convertidas en prisiones, June 3, 2025.

[1353] Institute for Justice & Democracy in Haiti, Human Rights and the Rule of Law in Haiti: Key Recent Developments - December 2024 through June 2025, July 2025, p. 7.

[1354] Security Council, United Nations Integrated Office in Haiti - Report of the Secretary-General, S/2025/226, April 14, 2025, par. 35; UNICEF, Une nouvelle crise se développe dans le département du Centre en Haïti, May 16, 2025; OANUDH, Haiti: UN Human Rights Chief alarmed by widening violence as gangs expand reach, June 13, 2025; IACHR, Press release No. 055/24 - IACHR welcomes the international community's support and calls on Haiti to ensure a peaceful transition, March 21, 2024; y BINUH, Quarterly Report on the Human Rights Situation in Haiti, August 3, 2024.

the Ministry of Justice and Public Security to construct three new detention centers to improve detention conditions, as well as to strengthen prison security in response to the attacks on prisons across the country.[1355]

603. Regarding trafficking in persons, based on information available to the Commission, in the first semester of 2025, there were allegations of children disappearances for child smuggling and organ trafficking.[1356]

604. With respect to the rights of LGBTI persons, Haiti has adopted a new penal code, that according to activists, strips LGBTI persons of protections against discrimination that they would have enjoyed under the previous draft of the law.[1357]

605. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, at the regional level, CARICOM reiterated that reparations for Haiti remain central to its reparatory-justice agenda in favor of Afro-descendants.[1358]

XX. HONDURAS

- General considerations

606. In terms of the progress recorded in the Republic of Honduras (hereinafter, "Honduras") in 2025, the Inter-American Commission welcomed the fact that the electoral process held on November 30 was conducted without any significant incidents of violence. In addition, it also observed that the downward trend in the homicide rate in Honduras continues. Similarly, it took note of the first judgment to include economic compensation in favor of victims of human trafficking.

607. With regard to the challenges, during 2025, the Inter-American Commission observed that the State has maintained the state of emergency as part of its citizen security policy. Additionally, high levels of violence against women and LGBTI persons continued to be reported, especially in the Bajo Aguán region, which resulted in murders and the forced displacement of families.

608. On September 5, 2025, the State submitted its response to the Commission's request for information to prepare this chapter.[1359]

- Specific issues

609. Regarding democratic institutionality, 2025 was an electoral year in the country, during which the authorities of the executive and legislative branches, as well as municipal authorities, were elected. The State reported on various measures adopted by the National Electoral Council (CNE) during the electoral process in preparation for the primary and internal elections, as well as the general elections. These measures included the adoption of a series of regulations to ensure these processes were conducted effectively and properly, together with amendments to the terms of reference aimed at implementing the Preliminary Electoral Results Transmission System (TREP), the general vote count, the dissemination of the results, and the

[1355] BINUH, Quarterly Report on the Human Rights Situation in Haiti, April – June 2025, 2025, p. 18.

[1356] Haitian Times, Haiti's unexplained disappearances: Missing children raise alarm in Ouanaminthe, Abril 10, 2025; Haitian Times, Haiti-Investigation: Child disappearance near border reignites fears of organ trafficking in Haiti ..., July 24, 2025; and Prensa Latina, Investigation underway into possible organ trafficking in Haiti, May 29, 2025.

[1357] Erasing 76 crimes, Erasing 76 crimes, Haiti: Setback for LGBT+ rights in the Caribbean, July 10th, 2025.

[1358] Caribbean Community (CARICOM), Secretary-General, Reparations for Haiti continue to be central to CARICOM's reparations claim, April 14, 2025.

[1359] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025.

procurement of polling equipment. It further noted that on March 8, 2025, primary and internal elections were held to select candidates for the various elective offices of the three political parties that were to participate in the general elections on November 30.[1360]

610. For its part, the Electoral Observation Mission of the Organization of American States (EOM/OAS) in Honduras called on the State to guarantee adequate conditions for the work of electoral authorities and expressed concern over actions initiated by the Office of the Public Prosecutor aimed at undermining the autonomy of the electoral authorities.[1361] In this regard, the Inter-American Commission took note of the Office of the Public Prosecutor's request for the removal of the immunity provisions of two judges of the Electoral Justice Tribunal for the alleged offense of misconduct in public office.[1362] According to public information, on November 10, the Supreme Court of Justice declared the request inadmissible.[1363] Nevertheless, on that same day, the Office of the Public Prosecutor filed a criminal complaint against the two judges, which would be heard by a natural judge.[1364]

611. On November 30, general elections were held to elect the new head of the executive branch, members of the legislative branch and municipal authorities. The Commission has positively noted that elections were held peacefully and without incidents of violence, as well as with high citizen participation.[1365] According to public information, the electoral process was marked by an extremely close race between the candidate of the National Party and the candidate of the Liberal Party, as well as a series of irregularities and delays in the vote count that created significant uncertainty. In this regard, information was received regarding failures in the Preliminary Electoral Results Transmission System operated by a private company contracted for that purpose. This led to the vote count suspension from Friday, December 5, until its resumption on Monday, December 8.[1366] For its part, the EOM/OAS called for expediting the vote-counting process, ensuring traceability measures that provide certainty regarding the results. In addition, it urged electoral authorities to ensure that the subsequent stages of the process were carried out with full transparency and maximum efficiency. These stages included the counting process of the high volume of tally sheets still uncounted, the special count, and the challenge phase, all of which needed to be conducted without delay.[1367]

612. Prior to the general elections, the Inter-American Commission took note of several challenges identified in the context of the primary elections held in March 2025. Various sources, including the National Commissioner for Human Rights (CONADEH) and the National Autonomous University of Honduras (UNAH), identified unjustified delays in the delivery of electoral materials, polling stations that remained closed, and errors in the distribution of electoral kits.[1368] Reports from national election observer missions indicate that

[1360] Ibid, pp. 5–7.

[1361] Organization of American States (OAS), "OAS Electoral Mission in Honduras Calls for Ensuring Adequate Conditions for the Work of Electoral Authorities," November 4, 2025.

[1362] Once Noticias, "Magistrado Mario Flores denuncia 'golpe político' del MP contra el TJE" (Mario Flores denounces a "political coup" by the Office of the Public Prosecutor against the Electoral Justice Tribunal), November 4, 2025; La Prensa, "Magistrado del TJE advierte que se busca asaltar instituciones electorales" (Electoral Justice Tribunal magistrate warns of attempts to attack electoral institutions), November 4, 2025.

[1363] La Prensa, "Poder Judicial notifica inadmisión del antejuicio contra magistrados del TJE" (The judiciary notifies inadmissibility of the request for the removal of the immunity provisions of Electoral Justice Tribunal magistrates), November 10, 2025.

[1364] Proceso Digital, "MP presenta acusación contra dos magistrados del TJE" (Office of the Public Prosecutor files charges against two Electoral Justice Tribunal magistrates), November 10, 2025.

[1365] OAS, Press Release No. C-080/25, OAS Electoral Mission in Honduras Praises Democratic Participation and Will Continue to Observe the Process, December 1, 2025.

[1366] EFE, "Elecciones Honduras: Asfura, el candidato apoyado por Trump, sigue adelante con más del 90 % de las actas escrutadas" (Elections in Honduras: Asfura, the candidate backed by Trump, maintains the lead with more than 90 percent of tally sheets counted), December 8, 2025; Infobae, "Por qué el conteo de votos en Honduras quedó paralizado y cómo se llegó al escenario más tenso desde 2017" (Why Honduras' vote count stalled and how the country reached its most tense moment since 2017), December 8, 2025.

[1367] OAS, Press Release No. C-084-58 OAS Electoral Mission in Honduras Calls to Expedite Tallying and Await Completion of the Vote Count, December 6, 2025.

[1368] El Heraldo, "Observadores demandan al MP deducir responsabilidad por irregularidades en los comicios" (Observers call on the Office of the Public Prosecutor to establish accountability for irregularities in the elections), March 11, 2025; Proceso Hn, Rector de la UNAH advierte irregularidades en proceso electoral y exige explicaciones al CNE (Rector of the National Autonomous University of Honduras warns of irregularities in the electoral process and demands explanations from the National Electoral Council), March 9, 2025;

delays in the arrival of ballot boxes and other electoral materials were recorded at approximately 67 percent of the polling stations, while logistical problems were reported at 33 percent of them, including damaged ballots, opened electoral kits, and, in some cases, missing credentials.[1369] On April 8, 2025, the CNE, by unanimous vote, officially proclaimed the results of the primary elections, in compliance with the deadline established in Honduras' Electoral Law.[1370]

613. Additionally, the Inter-American Commission received information regarding incidents of violence recorded in the context of the electoral process. According to public information, between September 8, 2024, and June 2025, 109 cases of political violence were reported, encompassing a range of aggressions: symbolic violence (17.4 percent), defamation and slander (16.5 percent), physical injuries (12.8 percent), coercion and intimidation (11 percent), attacks (8.3 percent) and homicides (6.4 percent).[1371] At least four people aspiring to or running for office were killed during this process.[1372]

614. In terms of the fight against corruption, the State referred to the launch of the Sistema-130 in December 2024, which allows citizens to report irregularities in public administration, with complaints being handled by the Citizen Complaints Management Unit of the Secretariat of Transparency and Fight against Corruption. In addition, the Office of the Special Prosecutor for Transparency and Fight against Public Corruption of the Office of the Public Prosecutor has filed prosecutorial actions in various cases against people who caused harm to the State of Honduras. The Office of the Special Prosecutor for the Prosecution of Public Officials and Judicial Officers filed seven prosecutorial actions and one request for the removal of immunity provisions in 2025.[1373]

615. With respect to human rights institutions, the State highlighted the submission of a report by the National Commissioner for Human Rights (CONADEH) to the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) of the United Nations system. The State also underscored an increase of more than 70 percent in the budget of the Secretariat of Human Rights (SEDH), which rose from 96,130,113.00 Honduran lempiras (approximately 3,664,600.32 US dollars) in 2022 to 165,218,057.00 Honduran lempiras (approximately 6,300,000 US dollars) in 2025. It also noted that the SEDH has a staff of 205 officials. With regard to the implementation of protection measures, it highlighted that the Directorate of the Protection System has received a budget increase of 20 million Honduran lempiras (approximately 760,000 US dollars).[1374]

616. The State reported that, through the SEDH, it continued to strengthen the capacity of its institutions by means of training activities targeted at 1,743 public officials; 3,756 law enforcement officers; and 1,801 members of the general population. Training was provided to 491 members of the School for Training of the Military Police of Public Order; and 225 candidates of the National Penitentiary Academy. For

EFE Noticias, "Honduras celebra elecciones primarias entre el descontento y denuncias de irregularidades" (Honduras holds primary elections amid discontent and allegations of irregularities), March 9, 2025; CNN Español, "Las elecciones primarias en Honduras quedan marcadas por denuncias de irregularidades y retrasos" (Primary elections in Honduras marked by allegations of irregularities and delays), March 10, 2025; Swissinfo, "Honduras celebra elecciones primarias entre el descontento y denuncias de irregularidades" (Honduras holds primary elections amid discontent and allegations of irregularities), March 10, 2025.

[1369] El Heraldo, "Observadores demandan al MP deducir responsabilidad por irregularidades en los comicios" (Observers call on the Office of the Public Prosecutor to establish accountability for irregularities in the elections), March 11, 2025.

[1370] La Prensa, CNE oficializa candidaturas de Rixi Moncada, Nasry Asfura y Salvador Nasralla (National Electoral Council officially confirms the candidacies of Rixi Moncada, Nasry Asfura, and Salvador Nasralla), April 8, 2025.

[1371] National Autonomous University of Honduras, "A pocos meses de las Elecciones Generales, UNAH alerta sobre aumento de violencia política y conflictividad electoral", (Few months ahead of the general elections, the National Autonomous University of Honduras warns of an increase in political violence and electoral conflict in Honduras), July 10, 2025; Criterio Hn, "Violencia política marca el camino hacia las elecciones en Honduras" (Political violence marks the path to elections in Honduras), July 10, 2025.

[1372] Criterio Hn, "Cuatro candidatos asesinados en 2025: violencia política golpea a todos los partidos en Honduras" (Four candidates killed in 2025: political violence hits all parties in Honduras), September 12, 2025; Diálogo Político, "Elecciones en Honduras: entre el desinterés y la desconfianza" (Elections in Honduras: between disinterest and mistrust), September 24, 2025; Human Rights Watch, "Protect Hondurans' Right to Free, Fair Elections", September 2, 2025.

[1373] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 8.

[1374] Ibid, pp. 7 and 8.

its part, the National Defense Secretariat reported that 8,791 individuals received training during the first quarter of 2025.[1375]

617. Regarding citizen security, the downward trend in homicides continues in Honduras. According to information provided by the State, as of August 24, 2025, a total of 1,491 homicides were recorded in Honduras, with a rate of 15.3 homicides per 100,000 inhabitants.[1376] As reported by the State, this constitutes a 13 percent reduction in homicides nationwide, with 220 fewer cases than in the same period in 2024.[1377] Nevertheless, Honduras remains the country with the highest homicide rate in Central America.[1378] In addition, a high perception of insecurity persists among the population. According to a survey conducted by civil society organizations, 7 out of 10 Hondurans (69.9 percent) perceive that killings have increased. Sixteen percent think that the situation remains unchanged, while 13.6 percent perceive that it has decreased. This means that 9 out of 10 Hondurans consider that the extreme violence affecting people's lives has increased or has remained the same.[1379]

618. In 2025, the state of emergency implemented in December 2022 remained in force in Honduras. Since then, the State has repeatedly extended this measure and expanded its territorial scope to 226 municipalities,[1380] whereas in 2024 it covered 158 municipalities across the country.[1381] Its most recent extension was carried out by means of Executive Decree No. PCM-37-2025, which extended this measure until December 26, 2025.[1382] The Commission notes that several of these extensions have not been ratified by the National Congress.[1383] For its part, the CONADEH indicated that, in the context of the state of emergency, between December 2022 and November 2025, it handled more than 1,000 complaints, within which it identified serious human rights violations, including potential enforced disappearances and extrajudicial executions.[1384] In this regard, it allegedly has ten complaint investigation proceedings concerning possible cases of disappeared persons, allegedly occurring in the context of the state of emergency. One of them is about the alleged disappearance of a trans person, in which agents of the Anti-Gang and Organized Crime Police Directorate (DIPAMPCO), a unit of the National Police of Honduras, were allegedly involved.[1385]

619. Moreover, the Commission also observed an increase in violence in the Bajo Aguán region. According to information from the United Nations, since December 2024, the Quebrada de Arena, Panamá, and Corocito sectors in the Bajo Aguán region have experienced a surge in violence that has affected at least five

[1375] Ibid, pp. 10–12.
[1376] Ibid, pp. 10–12.
[1377] Ibid. pp. 17 and 18.
[1378] CESPAD, Situación de la violencia e inseguridad en Honduras: retos y desafíos en el contexto electoral 2025 (Situation of violence and insecurity in Honduras: challenges of the 2025 electoral context), October 2025, pp. 9 and 10.
[1379] Ibid.; Reflection, Research and Communication Team (ERIC-SJ), Sondeo de Opinión Pública, Edición Número 14, Boletín 2025 (Public Opinion Survey, Issue No. 14, 2025 Report), March 2025.
[1380] La Gaceta, Official Gazette of the Republic of Honduras, Executive Decree No. PCM 258-2025, September 26, 2025.
[1381] La Gaceta, Official Gazette of the Republic of Honduras, Executive Decree No. PCM 18-2024, June 21, 2024.
[1382] La Tribuna, "Honduras extiende el estado de excepción hasta el 26 de diciembre" (Honduras extends the state of emergency until December 26), November12, 2025; Canal 8 Honduras, "Gobierno amplía por 45 días el estado de excepción para combatir el crimen organizado" (Government of Honduras extends the state of emergency for 45 days to fight organized crime), November 12, 2025.
[1383] Amnesty International, "Honduras: progreso insuficiente en derechos humanos: Información para el 50 periodo de sesiones del grupo de trabajo sobre el Examen Periódico Universal, noviembre de 2025" (Honduras: insufficient progress in terms of human rights – Information for the 50th Session of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, November 2025), April 7, 2025, p. 3; Confidencial Hn, "Gobierno de Xiomara Castro extiende por vigésima cuarta vez el estado de excepción sin aval del Congreso" (Xiomara Castro's government extends the state of emergency for the twenty-fourth time without congressional approval), September 27, 2025; Hondudiario, "Estado de excepción es 'totalmente ilegal' por falta de aprobación del Congreso" (The state of emergency is "totally illegal" due to lack of congressional approval), August 18, 2025.
[1384] Canal 6, "Comunicado urgente del CONADEH sobre el estado de excepción sobre el proceso electoral" (Urgent statement by the CONADEH on the state of emergency and the electoral process), November 13, 2024; National Commissioner for Human Rights (CONADEH), "Within the framework of the state of emergency: CONADEH registered more than 800 complaints against agents of the State security forces," May 9, 2025; Proceso Hondudiario, "Conadeh registra más de mil quejas contra cuerpos de seguridad entre 2022 y 2025" (CONADEH records over 1,000 complaints against security forces between 2022 and 2025), August 18, 2025.
[1385] Proceso hn, "CONADEH investiga 10 quejas de posibles casos de personas desaparecidas" (CONADEH investigates ten complaints of possible cases of disappeared persons), September 18, 2025; La Tribuna, "CONADEH investiga posible desaparición de diez personas" (CONADEH investigates possible disappearance of ten people), September 19, 2025; El Heraldo, "Conadeh investiga 10 posibles desapariciones durante el estado de excepción" (CONADEH investigates ten possible disappearances during the state of emergency), September 19, 2025.

agricultural cooperatives and nearby communities, and has resulted in the forced displacement of at least 150 families, as well as threats, unlawful detentions, and robberies.[1386] In this regard, the OHCHR in Honduras expressed its deep concern over the violence that occurred in January 2025 against the Camarones, Tranvío, and El Chile peasant cooperatives in the Bajo Aguán region. According to public information, the perpetrators were reportedly organized crime structures, which further exacerbates the risk for these communities.[1387] Among these acts of violence, the murder of several land defenders stands out; these cases are described in greater detail in the relevant section below.

620. Regarding access to justice and judicial independence, the State reported a 38 percent increase in the budget of the judiciary, from 2.996 billion Honduran lempira (approximately 114.1 million US dollars) in 2022 to 4.146 billion Honduran lempira (approximately 157.9 million US dollars) in 2025.[1388] With regard to the budget of the Office of the Public Prosecutor, the State reported a 19.7 percent increase compared to the budget allocated in 2022, rising from 2,240,683,987.00 Honduran lempira (approximately 85,355,249.84 US dollars) to 2,679,283,987.00 Honduran lempira (approximately 102,035,351.78US dollars) in 2025.[1389] Likewise, it highlighted the advances made by the judiciary of Honduras in the digitalization of case files, particularly with regard to criminal matters.[1390]

621. The State indicated that the Bajo Aguán Violent Deaths Unit (UMVIBA) filed criminal charges against 15 members of a criminal gang for their alleged involvement in a series of violent acts that occurred between December 2024 and February 2025, which forced the displacement of 468 peasant families in the Bajo Aguán region who are members of the Agrarian Platform and the Coordinator of Peasant Organizations of Aguán (COPA).[1391]

622. In terms of memory, truth and justice, approval remains pending for the initiative submitted by the Committee of Relatives of the Disappeared and Detained Persons in Honduras (COFADEH) concerning the Bill on Compliance with International Human Rights Obligations towards Victims of the National Security Doctrine (1980–1993).[1392] In this regard, within the framework of the Universal Periodic Review, various United Nations bodies recommended that Honduras should strengthen its mechanisms for the reconstruction of historical memory, particularly by adopting and implementing this legislative initiative.[1393]

623. With regard to the situation of human rights defenders, the State reported that the draft "Carlos Escaleras Mejía" protocol for the investigation of crimes against human rights defenders is currently [1386] OCHA, "Honduras: Situación de violencia en el Bajo Aguán, Flash Update No. 1" (Honduras: Situation of violence in the Bajo Aguán region. Flash update no. 1), February 13, 2025; IM Defensoras, "HONDURAS / Más de 60 organizaciones regionales e internacionales nos solidarizamos con las comunidades campesinas del Bajo Aguán" (Honduras / Over 60 regional and international organizations express solidarity towards the peasant communities of the Bajo Aguán region), February 18, 2025.

[1387] OHCHR Honduras, "OACNUDH manifiesta preocupación por los hechos de violencia ocurridos en contra de cooperativas campesinas del Bajo Aguán" (OHCHR Honduras expresses concern over violence against peasant cooperatives in the Bajo Aguán region), January 27, 2025.

[1388] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 22.

[1389] Ibid, p. 26.

[1390] Ibid, pp. 22 and 23.

[1391] Ibid, p. 28.

[1392] OHCHR Honduras [@OACNUDHHN], (August 29, 2025), En el Día Internacional de las Víctimas de Desapariciones Forzadas, #OACNUDH y COFADEH realizaron la Jornada de Memoria en el Museo contra el... (On the International Day of the Victims of Enforced Disappearances, United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights in Honduras (OHCHR Honduras) and Committee of Relatives of the Disappeared and Detained Persons in Honduras (COFADEH) held a Memorial Day at the Museum Against…) [X post], X, https://x.com/OACNUDHHN/status/1961539352598626453; United Nations, Human Rights Council, Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, National report submitted pursuant to Human Rights Council resolutions 5/1 and 16/21, Honduras, A/HRC/WG.6/50/HND/1, August 28, 2025, para. 30.

[1393] United Nations, Human Rights Council, Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, Compilation of information prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights – Honduras, A/HRC/WG.6/50/HND/2, August 29, 2025, para. 32.

under review by state authorities, the National Police, the Office of the Solicitor General (PGR), OHCHR Honduras and representatives of the victims in the Carlos Escaleras case.[1394]

624. During 2025, at least six human rights defenders were killed in the Bajo Aguán region.[1395] In this context, the Commission followed up on the precautionary measures granted in favor of members of the organizations Comité Municipal de Defensa de los Bienes Comunes y Públicos de Tocoa and Bufete Justicia para los Pueblos, and determined that the beneficiaries continued to be subjected to threats, surveillance, monitoring, intimidation and violence because of their environmental defense work, and that armed groups were actively operating in the Bajo Aguán area. Moreover, the Commission decided to extend the precautionary measures issued in favor of 13 family members or close associates of human rights defender Juan López, who was murdered in September 2024, given the heightened risk they faced following his killing.[1396] As for the progress achieved in the investigation into the murder of environmental defender Juan López, the State reported that criminal charges had been filed against three individuals alleged to be the material perpetrators of the crime and that, in San Pedro Sula, the Pretrial Court with national jurisdiction over cases involving organized crime had ordered the addition of a charge and the opening of oral and public trial proceedings against the three accused.[1397]

625. Furthermore, the Commission notes incidents of violence against members of the Garífuna communities of Triunfo de la Cruz, Punta Piedra and San Juan, as well as against authorities of the Honduran Black Fraternal Organization (OFRANEH). On April 12, the enforced disappearance of Max Gil Castillo was reported in San Pedro Sula, along with death threats against members and leaders of these communities. According to the information received, Max Gil Castillo, the brother of Tomás Castillo, president of the Punta Piedra Community Council and a recognized leader in the struggle for the restitution of ancestral lands, was

[1394] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 29.

[1395] On July 26, Héctor Otoniel Hernández Castro was murdered in the municipality of Trujillo, Colón. He was a member of the Gregorio Chávez Peasant Enterprise, affiliated with the Agrarian Platform and the Coordinator of Peasant Organizations of Aguán (COPA). For additional information on this case, see: C-Libre, "Asesinato de campesino en el Aguán obedece a una escalada de violencia" (The murder of a peasant in the Aguán is the result of an escalation of violence), July 29, 2025; Reportar sin Miedo, "¿Estado cómplice?: impunidad y asesinatos arrasan al Bajo Aguán" (A complicit State? Impunity and killings devastate the Bajo Aguán), August 6, 2025; InterReligious Task Force on Central America (IRTF), Letter addressed to the National Commissioner for Human Rights, August 28, 2025. On July 17, land defenders Ramón and Carlos Rivas, father and son, were murdered in an ambush while traveling to their workplace in the municipality of Tocoa, department of Colón. Ramón was a member of the La Aurora Peasant Production Association, while Carlos was affiliated with the Gregorio Chávez Peasant Production Enterprise. For additional information on this case, see: C-Libre, "Asesinan a defensores de la tierra tras emboscada en el Bajo Aguán" (Land defenders killed following an ambush in the Bajo Aguán), July 17, 2025; Criterio Hn, "'Seguimos poniendo los muertos': manifiestan campesinos en el Bajo Aguán" ("Our people are still the ones dying," state peasants in the Bajo Aguán), July 17, 2025; CDHAL, "Honduras. Asesinan a Ramón Rivas y su hijo Carlos Rivas, defensores de la tierra del Aguán" (Honduras. Ramón Rivas and his son Carlos Rivas, land defenders from the Aguán region, were murdered), August 7, 2025. On February 2, 2025, José Luis Hernández Lobo and his partner, Suyapa Guillén, were murdered. They were active members of the Gregorio Chávez Cooperative and leaders of the peasant movement. For additional information on this case, see: World Organization Against Torture (OMCT), "Honduras : Stop the violence in Agúan – protect human rights defenders: No more trade with Corporación Dinant!," February 12, 2025; Reportar sin miedo, "¡Emergencia en el Aguán!" (Emergency in the Aguán!), February 13, 2025; IRTF, Letter addressed to the National Commissioner for Human Rights, August 28, 2025. On January 2, 2025, Arnulfo Díaz, a member of the Brisas del Aguán Cooperative, was murdered. For additional information on this case, see: Reportar sin Miedo, "¡Emergencia en el Aguán!" (Emergency in the Aguán!), February 13, 2025; OMCT, "Honduras: Stop the violence in Agúan – protect human rights defenders: No more trade with Corporación Dinant!," February 12, 2025; Avispa Midia, "Bajo Aguán: Recrudecen ataques de grupos armados ligados a industria de palma aceitera" (Bajo Aguán: Escalation of attacks by armed groups linked to the palm oil industry), January 6, 2025.

[1396] IACHR, Resolution No. 37/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 137-23, Identified members of the Comité Municipal de Defensa de los Bienes Comunes y Públicos de Tocoa and Bufete Justicia para los Pueblos regarding Honduras (extension, follow-up and partial lift), May 1, 2025.

[1397] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 27; Office of the Public Prosecutor of Honduras, "Elevan a juicio oral y público el caso de los tres autores materiales de la muerte del ambientalista Juan López" (Case against the three material perpetrators of the murder of environmental defender Juan López is sent to oral and public trial proceedings), September 2, 2025; Hondudiario, "A juicio oral y público tres implicados en la muerte del ambientalista Juan López" (Three suspects in the killing of environmental activist Juan López to stand oral and public trial proceedings), September 2, 2025.

forcibly disappeared by armed men who identified themselves as police officers.[1398] In addition, Miriam Miranda, a woman leader, human rights defender and beneficiary of precautionary measures granted by the Commission, reported new death threats against members of the Garífuna community, including against herself.[1399] Similarly, Garífuna defender Mabel Robledo was victim of an assault and an attempted assassination when unidentified armed men opened fire on her,[1400] followed by police intervention, in the context of ongoing police harassment against the community.[1401]

626. With respect to the disappearance of Alberth Snider Centeno and four other members of the Triunfo de la Cruz community in 2021, the State reported that criminal charges were on January 20 against 16 members of the MS-13 gang and that the case was at the stage of formal indictment.[1402]

627. As for the National Protection System for Human Rights Defenders, civil society organizations reported that the protection mechanism remains ineffective. In particular, they highlighted the implementation of inadequate protection measures, the lack of trust in police officers appointed as protection liaisons and the prioritization of certain cases who will reportedly benefit from protective measures.[1403] According to the OHCHR, the system continues to face persistent challenges affecting its proper operation, including weak interinstitutional coordination, insufficient financial and human resources, frequent staff turnover and the absence of specialized training mechanisms.[1404]

628. In terms of the situation of indigenous persons, the OHCHR reported in 2025 that the Honduran State had granted collective land titles to 27 Miskito and Garífuna communities in the municipality of Juan Francisco Bulnes, in the Gracias a Dios department, covering more than 9,000 hectares and benefiting approximately 23,000 people within the Cultural Zone of the Río Plátano Biosphere Reserve.[1405]

629. Notwithstanding the foregoing, territorial conflict remains a persistent challenge. The CONADEH informed that, between 2016 and May 2025, it received 221 complaints from indigenous persons who reported that they were at risk and had been victims of displacement, with most cases involving threats

[1398] OHCHR Honduras [@OACNUDHHN], (April 15, 2025), OACNUDH urge al Estado de Honduras garantizar la vida, integridad personal y derechos territoriales del pueblo garífuna (The OHCHR urges the State of Honduras to guarantee the life, personal integrity and territorial rights of the Garífuna people) [X Post], X, https://x.com/OACNUDHHN/status/1912242285644808553/photo/1; International Network for Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ESCR-Net), "Human Rights Crisis in Honduras: Enforced Disappearance and Death Threats Shake the Garífuna People," (April 16, 2025); Criterio Hn, "Ocho habeas corpus por Max Gil Castillo, joven garífuna desaparecido hace diez días" (Eight habeas corpus petitions filed in the case of Max Gil Castillo, a young Garífuna man who has been missing for 10 days), April 22, 2025.

[1399] La Prensa Honduras, "Garífunas denuncian amenazas de muerte por defender sus derechos ancestrales" (Garífuna communities report death threats for defending their ancestral rights), April 15, 2025; Swissinfo, "Denuncian nuevas amenazas de muerte en Honduras contra miembros de la etnia garífuna" (New death threats reported in Honduras against members of the Garífuna community), April 15, 2025; Diario El Mundo, "Amenazas de muerte contra Miriam Miranda y líderes de Ofraneh generan alarma en Honduras" (Death threats targeting Miriam Miranda and leaders of the Honduran Black Fraternal Organization [OFRANEH] spark concern in Honduras), April 15, 2025.

[1400] Mesoamerican Initiative of Women Human Rights Defenders (IM-Defensoras), "[Women Human Rights Defenders (WHRD) Alert] HONDURAS / Attempted killing, police violence and arbitrary detention of Garífuna woman defender Mabel Robledo," June 23, 2025; Criterio.hn, "Seguridad estatal agrede a líderesa garífuna defensora de territorio en conflicto" (State security forces assault a Garífuna woman leader defending disputed territory), June 23, 2025; Reportar sin Miedo, "Defensora garífuna sobrevive a ataque armado y detención ilegal" (Garífuna human rights defender survives armed attack and unlawful detention), June 24, 2025.

[1401] Reportar sin Miedo, "Militarizan Punta Izopo: garífunas denuncian hostigamiento" (Punta Izopo militarized as Garífuna communities report harassment), July 7, 2025.

[1402] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 27.

[1403] IACHR, Meeting with civil society organizations during the working visit on precautionary measures held in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, from October 8 to 10, 2025, October 9, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1404] OHCHR Honduras, "Diez años después, el Sistema Nacional de Protección a Personas Defensoras y periodistas enfrenta grandes retos" (A decade later, the National Protection System for Human Rights Defenders and Journalists faces significant challenges), May 22, 2025.

[1405] OHCHR, Situation of human rights in Honduras. Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/58/23, July 9, 2025, para. 9.

and the dispossession of their lands.[1406] The OHCHR identified 34 active territorial conflicts arising from land tenure insecurity and the lack of legal clarity.[1407] The OHCHR further documented 22 forced evictions, several of which were conducted without a warrant and making an excessive use of force, without alternative housing being provided and during climate-related emergencies. These circumstances resulted in the destruction of homes, the loss of crops and increased vulnerability.[1408]

630. In addition, the CONADEH underscored the lack of prior consultation regarding the planned construction of an Emergency Detention Center in the community of Mocorón, in the municipality of Puerto Lempira, noting that several organizations and representatives of the Miskitu people had expressed their opposition to this measure.[1409]

631. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendants and the fight against racial discrimination, the State reported that, between January and August 2025, 7,300 people, including public officials, law enforcement personnel and members of the general population, received training on human rights, intersectionality and nondiscrimination.[1410] Additionally, the Office of the Public Prosecutor delivered training on gender and nondiscrimination to prosecutors from the Unit for the Investigation of Deaths of Persons from Vulnerable Social Groups and, together with the Office of the Special Prosecutor for the Protection of Ethnic Groups and Cultural Heritage (FEP-ETNIAS/PC), trained 65 justice operators on the rights of indigenous and Afro-Honduran persons.[1411] Moreover, the Ministry of Women (SEMUJER) is implementing the 2023–2033 Third Gender Equality and Justice Plan, which incorporates an intercultural approach and specific measures targeted at indigenous and Afro-Honduran women in the areas of education, health, political participation and economic empowerment.[1412]

632. For its part, the Commission noted ongoing tensions in connection with the alleged illegal occupation of ancestral lands by international companies linked to tourism and agro-industrial and media projects.[1413] Protests in defense of territorial rights were followed by renewed acts of intimidation aimed at evicting the Garífuna community of Trujillo.[1414]

633. Additionally, civil society organizations submitted complaints concerning alleged violations of territorial rights in Cayos Cochinos due to the introduction of fishing restrictions and the lack of participation in decision-making, which have adversely affected livelihoods.[1415] Protests were held in Tegucigalpa to demand compliance with the judgments issued by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in Triunfo de la Cruz, Punta

[1406] CONADEH, "Pueblos indígenas, víctimas de amenazas, despojo de tierras y desplazamiento forzado" (Indigenous peoples, victims of threats, land dispossession and forced displacement), August 8, 2025.

[1407] OHCHR, Situation of human rights in Honduras. Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/58/23, July 9, 2025, para. 42.

[1408] Ibid., para. 46.

[1409] CONADEH, "Sobre construcción de cárcel en Mocorón" (Regarding the construction of a prison in Mocorón), January 14, 2025.

[1410] State of Honduras, Note Verbale No. 322-DPM-SRECI-2025, in response to the request for information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention. Letter No. 351-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, August 5, 2025, p. 10. On IACHR's files.

[1411] Ibid., p. 17. On IACHR's files.

[1412] Ibid., pp. 14–15. On IACHR's files.

[1413] Criterio.hn, "Exigen la restitución de tierras garífunas ocupadas ilegalmente por empresario canadiense" (Calls for the restitution of Garífuna lands illegally occupied by a Canadian businessman), March 13, 2025; Contracorriente, "Organizaciones internacionales exigen justicia por la explotación ilegal de tierras garífunas vinculada al canadiense Randy Jorgensen" (International organizations demand justice for the illegal exploitation of Garífuna lands linked to Canadian businessman Randy Jorgensen), March 17, 2025; El País, "Las protestas de los garífunas de Honduras contra 'Supervivientes' caen en saco roto" (Garífuna protests in Honduras against "Survivors" fall on deaf ears), September 25, 2025; OHCHR, "Defendiendo las tierras ancestrales: la lucha garífuna en Honduras" (Defending ancestral lands: the struggle of the Garífuna people in Honduras), February 21, 2025.

[1414] Criterio.hn, "OABI niega desalojo, pero empresa de seguridad contratada ejecutó incursión armada en territorio garífuna" (Office for the Administration of Seized Assets [OABI] denies eviction as private security forces conduct armed incursion in Garífuna territory), May 14, 2025.

[1415] Contracorriente, "Estado hondureño acusado de violar derechos territoriales de la comunidad garífuna en Cayos Cochinos" (Honduran State accused of violating the territorial rights of the Garífuna community in Cayos Cochinos), May 22, 2025.

Piedra and San Juan.[1416] Following calls by the OFRANEH regarding the inaction of the High-Level Intersectoral Commission for Compliance with International Judgments (CIANCSI), state authorities announced plans to convene meetings to reactivate the mechanism.[1417]

634. The final dismissal of charges against five OFRANEH human rights defenders from the community of Santa Fe, Colón, was reported. These individuals had been accused of forced displacement and aggravated usurpation.[1418] Nevertheless, the Commission also became aware of multiple ongoing judicial proceedings against Garífuna leaders, which communities perceive as acts of persecution.[1419] In this context, international organizations held meetings with the Office of the Public Prosecutor to demand an end to the criminalization of Garífuna defenders.[1420]

635. With regard to the rights of women, the State informed that it has taken measures aimed at mainstreaming a gender perspective and strengthening the institutional framework for the prevention of and response to violence. Said measures include: i) the adoption of Decree No. 4-2025, which allocates specific resources for the creation of gender units in all public institutions; ii) the signing of Agreement No. 124-2025, which introduced a gender budget classifier into the 2025 General Budget;[1421] iii) advancements in the design of a gender-sensitive statistical subsystem within the judiciary; iv) the development of a diagnostic assessment for the reform of the Law Against Domestic Violence;[1422] v) the launch of the National Information System and Observatory on Human Trafficking;[1423] and vi) the opening of a vulnerability assistance desk in Tegucigalpa to provide information and guidance to women victims of violence.[1424]

[1416] Proceso Digital, "Garífunas se movilizan en Tegucigalpa a INA y Casa Presidencial exigen cumplimiento de sentencias de la Corte IDH" (Garífuna communities mobilize in Tegucigalpa, marching to the National Agrarian Institute [INA] and the Presidential Palace to demand compliance with Inter-American Court rulings), April 10, 2025.

[1417] Criterio.hn, "Tras funeral simbólico de la CIANCSI por el pueblo garífuna, gobierno promete revivirla" (Following a symbolic funeral held by the Garífuna people, the government pledges to reactivate the High-Level Intersectoral Commission for Compliance with International Judgments [CIANCSI]), April 10, 2025.

[1418] ESCR-Net, "Judicial Victory for the Garífuna People in Honduras: a Step Against Criminalization," August 19, 2025; OHCHR Honduras, "OACNUDH saluda el sobreseimiento definitivo dictado por el Juzgado de Letras de Trujillo a favor de cinco personas defensoras del pueblo Garífuna" (The OHCHR welcomes the final dismissal ruling issued by the Pretrial Court of Trujillo in favor of five Garífuna human rights defenders), August 20, 2025.

[1419] IM-Defensoras, "Amenazas y agresión armada contra Centro de Saberes Ancestrales 'Hachari Wayúnagu'" (Threats and armed attack against the "Hachari Wayúnagu" Ancestral Knowledge Center), May 19, 2025; Criterio.hn, "Despojo, criminalización y desaparición: la situación actual del pueblo garífuna en Honduras" (Dispossession, criminalization and disappearance: the current situation of the Garífuna people in Honduras), May 29, 2025; Red Nacional de Defensoras de Derechos Humanos en Honduras, "#AlertaUrgente | Hombres armados hostigan y amenazan reocupación Wamua Le, Triunfo de la Cruz, Tela" (#Urgent | Armed men harass and threaten the Wamua Le reoccupation in Triunfo de la Cruz, Tela), September 24, 2025; Criterio.hn, "Garífunas de Santa Fe enfrentan proceso penal por defensa de territorio" (Members of Garífuna community of Santa Fe face criminal proceedings for defending their territory), August 11, 2025; Criterio.hn, "Garífunas de Santa Fe exigen que caso por usurpación se resuelva por la vía civil, no penal" (Garífunas in Santa Fe demand that land usurpation case be handled through civil courts, not criminal prosecution), August 11, 2025.

[1420] Reportar sin Miedo, "Alerta internacional por violencia y despojo contra pueblo garífuna" (International concern over violence and land dispossession against the Garífuna people), August 16, 2025; Proceso Digital, "Exigen a Fiscalía de Honduras justicia y fin de criminalización contra el pueblo garífuna" (Organizations demand that the Office of the Public Prosecutor of Honduras ensure justice and put an end to the criminalization of the Garífuna people), August 15, 2025; Hondudiario, "Exigen a Fiscalía de Honduras justicia y fin de criminalización contra el pueblo garífuna" (Organizations demand that the Office of the Public Prosecutor of Honduras ensure justice and put an end to the criminalization of the Garífuna people), August 15, 2025.

[1421] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 14.

[1422] Ibid., p. 23.

[1423] Inter-Institutional Commission against Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking of Honduras (CICESCT), "CICESCT, con apoyo de UNODC y UNICEF, presenta el Sistema Nacional de Información sobre Trata de Personas" (CICESCT presents the National Information System on Human Trafficking with the support of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime [UNODC] and UNICEF), April 30, 2025.

[1424] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 24.

636. However, delays persist in the approval of the Comprehensive Law on Violence against Women, the Purple Alert Law for the search of missing women[1425] and the Law on Political Violence against Women.[1426] Reports of femicides and sexual, domestic and political violence against women also remain a concern.[1427] According to information provided by the State, as of August 24, 157 violent deaths of women had been recorded.[1428] Civil society organizations had reported 190 cases as of October 5, most of which had taken place in public spaces.[1429] Some of these murders were allegedly preceded by disappearance reports.[1430] In addition, between January and May, the Office of the Public Prosecutor recorded 368 complaints of sexual violence,[1431] and, between January and July, the National Emergency System (911) received 26,519 reports of domestic violence and 30,820 reports of family violence.[1432]

637. Cases of political violence against women were also reported during the electoral process, particularly targeting those who currently hold public office.[1433] These incidents included threats (primarily through digital platforms) as well as attacks, intimidation and stigmatizing accusations intended to undermine their legitimacy.[1434] Furthermore, according to public information, an armed attack against Mabel Robledo, a Garífuna leader and defender of territorial rights, was allegedly perpetrated by police officers who fired at her vehicle and physically assaulted her while she was in custody.[1435]

638. In terms of sexual and reproductive rights, Honduras continues to report one of the highest regional rates of pregnancies among girls and adolescents in the region, with 97 births per 1,000.[1436] However, the implementation of a regulatory framework for the inclusion of comprehensive sex education into school curricula remains pending.[1437] Access to sexual and reproductive health services also continue to be limited, [1425] Government of Honduras, Third periodic report of the State of Honduras under the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, July 3, 2025, para. 60; Criterio Hn, "Ley de Alerta Morada podría no ser aprobada por retrasos de la CSJ" (Purple Alert Law may not be enacted due to delays at the Supreme Court of Justice), June 24, 2025.

[1426] Criterio Hn, "Ley contra la violencia política hacia las mujeres sigue estancada en pleno año electoral" (Law addressing political violence against women remains stalled during the election year), May 22, 2025; IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A, March 26, 2025, para. 563; IACHR, 2023 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A, December 31, 2023, para. 494.

[1427] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A, March 26, 2025, para. 564; Centro de Derechos de Mujeres, Informe sobre la situación de derechos humanos de las mujeres en Honduras, cuarto ciclo del Examen Periódico Universal (Report on the human rights situation of women in Honduras, fourth cycle of the Universal Periodic Review), february 2025, p. 9; Criterio Hn, "Francisco Morazán concentra 83% de los incidentes de violencia política en Honduras" (Francisco Morazán accounts for 83 percent of political violence incidents in Honduras), September 12, 2025.

[1428] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, para. 56.

[1429] Criterio Hn, "Feminicidios y políticas estancadas: la crisis silenciosa que afrontan las hondureñas" (Femicide and stalled policies: the silent crisis facing women in Honduras), October 7, 2025; Centro de Derechos de Mujeres, Violencias contra las mujeres en Honduras-2025 (Violence against Women in Honduras - 2025), August 31, 2025.

[1430] Criterio Hn, "Ley de Alerta Morada podría no ser aprobada por retrasos de la CSJ" (Purple Alert Law may not be enacted due to delays at the Supreme Court of Justice), June 24, 2025.

[1431] Government of Honduras, Input submitted by the State of Honduras in response to the IACHR questionnaire on the situation of the sexual and reproductive rights of women, girls and adolescents in Honduras under Article 41 of the American Convention, June 2025, p. 2. On IACHR's files.

[1432] Centro de Derechos de Mujeres, Violencias contra las mujeres en Honduras-2025 (Violence against Women in Honduras - 2025), August 31, 2025.

[1433] Women's Political Observatory, Primer boletín sobre violencia política de género (First Bulletin on Gender-Based Political Violence), July 2025.

[1434] El Heraldo, "Denuncian ante el Conadeh violencia social y política contra las consejeras del CNE" (Complaints filed with the CONADEH over social and political violence against CNE councilwomen), March 25, 2025; Criterio, "Violencia política de género en Honduras: un juego de poder patriarcal" (Gender-based political violence in Honduras: a patriarchal power struggle), July 9, 2025; Proceso Digital, "Violencia digital, el mayor flagelo de mujeres en la política hondureña" (Digital violence, the greatest threat facing women in Honduran politics), July 24, 2025; Criterio Hn, "Violencia política de género sigue en aumento en la antesala de las elecciones generales" (Gender-based political violence continues to rise ahead of the general elections), July 24, 2025.

[1435] Criterio Hn, "Seguridad estatal agrede a líderesa garífuna defensora de territorio en conflicto" (State security forces assault a Garífuna woman leader defending disputed territory), June 23, 2025.

[1436] UNFPA, Consecuencias socioeconómicas del embarazo adolescente en Honduras (Socioeconomic consequences of teenage pregnancy in Honduras), September 25, 2025; IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A, March 26, 2025, para. 565.

[1437] United Nations, Committee on the Rights of the Child, Concluding observations on the combined sixth and seventh periodic reports of Honduras, CRC/C/HND/CO/6-7, February 26, 2025, para. 35.

including access to the emergency contraceptive (EC) pill,[1438] whose legality remains contested,[1439] as well as mammograms and Pap smears.[1440] In addition, cases of obstetric violence have been reported, particularly affecting women living with HIV, some of whom have allegedly been subjected to forced sterilization.[1441] Finally, the absolute ban on abortion and the criminalization of those suffering from obstetric emergencies persist.[1442]

639. As for the rights of LGBTI persons, the State reported the development of a training course for prison personnel on how to support LGBTIQ+ persons deprived of liberty, aimed at identifying specific needs and reducing risks related to gender identity, gender expression and sexual orientation. In addition, the Office of the Special Prosecutor for Crimes against Life is working on an investigation protocol for crimes against LGBTIQ+ persons, as well as a database to accurately record such crimes, in accordance with the judgment of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in Vicky Hernández v. Honduras.[1443] Moreover, the authorities of the National Registry of Persons reported progress in the creation of a protocol to allow trans persons to change their name based on their gender identity.[1444]

640. However, between 2024 and 2025, the CONADEH received 165 complaints of discrimination against LGBTI persons, primarily involving the Ministry of Health and the Police.[1445] According to civil society organizations, at least 15 LGBTI persons had been killed as of mid-2025,[1446] with more than 565 murders recorded over the past decade.[1447] In March, civil society organizations denounced discrimination against diverse families and underscored its impact on children and adolescents during a public hearing before the Commission.[1448] In addition, LGBTI human rights defenders reported shortcomings in the protection

[1438] OHCHR, Situation of human rights in Honduras. Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/58/23, July 9, 2025, para. 69.

[1439] Criterio Hn, "Legalidad de la PAE se mantiene en juego por demanda de organización antiderechos" (Legal status of emergency contraceptive [EC] pill remains uncertain amid lawsuit filed by anti-rights group), May 27, 2025.

[1440] Centro de Promoción en Salud y Asistencia Familia (CEPROSAF), Llaves, Lawyers without Borders Canada, Request for a thematic hearing during the 194th regular period of sessions "Access to health and sexual and reproductive rights of women living with HIV in Honduras," August 22, 2025, paras. 18–20. On IACHR's files.

[1441] CEPROSAF, Llaves, Lawyers without Borders Canada, Request for a thematic hearing during the 194th regular period of sessions "Access to health and sexual and reproductive rights of women living with HIV in Honduras," August 22, 2025, paras. 15-24. On IACHR's files; Llaves, "Mujeres con VIH en Honduras siguen enfrentando esterilización forzada y violaciones a sus derechos reproductivos: nuevo estudio urge cambios en la atención en los servicios de salud" (Women living with HIV in Honduras continue to face forced sterilization and violations of their reproductive rights: new study calls for changes in healthcare services), September 24, 2025.

[1442] Criterio Hn, "Aborto en Honduras: de la denuncia internacional al estigma nacional" (Abortion in Honduras: between international scrutiny and national stigma), September 26, 2025; Government of Honduras, Input submitted by the State of Honduras in response to the IACHR questionnaire on the situation of the sexual and reproductive rights of women, girls and adolescents in Honduras under Article 41 of the American Convention, June 2025, p. 2. On IACHR's files.

[1443] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025.

[1444] Expediente público, "Personas trans en Honduras: 'Vivimos como ilegales en nuestro propio país'" (Trans persons in Honduras: "We live as if we were illegal in our own country"), January 16, 2025; Colectivo Gama, "Honduras aprobará un protocolo para el cambio de nombre registral" (Honduras to approve a protocol for legal name changes), August 8, 2024.

[1445] CONADEH, "Desmedida discriminación e impunidad pone en riesgo la vida e integridad de personas LGBTI" (Rampant discrimination and impunity put the lives and integrity of LGBTI persons at risk), July 15, 2025.

[1446] Tiempo, "Comunidad LGBTIQ exige fin de la violencia y reconocimiento legal en Honduras" (LGBTIQ community demands an end to violence and legal recognition in Honduras), July 12, 2025; La Vanguardia, "Colectivo LGBTIQ pide en Honduras fin de 'crímenes de odio' y ley de identidad de género" (LGBTIQ organizations in Honduras demand an end to "hate crimes" and the enactment of a gender identity law), July 12, 2025.

[1447] Swissinfo, "Persiste la violencia y discriminación contra personas LGTBI en Honduras, con 565 muertes" (Violence and discrimination against LGBTI people persist in Honduras, with 565 deaths), June 28, 2025; Efeminista, "Persiste la violencia contra las personas LGTBI+ en Honduras, con 565 asesinatos" (Violence against LGBTI+ people persists in Honduras, with 565 murders), February 26, 2025; KAI+ Observatory on Violence against LGBTI+ Persons in Honduras, Informe Anual 2024, sobre la situación de derechos humanos y discriminación hacia las personas LGBTI+ de Honduras (2024 Annual Report on the situation of human rights and discrimination against LGBTI+ persons in Honduras), 2025, pp. 39–41.

[1448] IACHR, thematic hearing "Honduras: Impact of the lack of recognition of same-sex marriage on the rights of children and adolescents," 192nd regular period of sessions, March 5, 2025.

mechanism, delays in the adoption of an anti-discrimination law and persistent discriminatory practices within the health system.[1449]

641. With respect to the situation of persons in the context of human mobility, the Honduran State reported that, by means of Executive Decree PCM-08-2025, it established the National Emergency Strategy for the Assistance of Honduran Migrants and implemented the "Hermano, hermana, vuelve a casa" (Brother, sister, come home) program, aimed at receiving migrants who returned from the United States and promoting actions to support their reintegration.[1450]

642. The Commission continued monitoring the return of Honduran nationals. As of August 12, 2025, the National Institute of Migration (INM) had received 24,207 returnees, primarily from Guatemala, Mexico and the United States.[1451] Civil society organizations and academic institutions underscored that returns resulting from changes in migration policies and the termination of protection statuses in other countries of the region could pose additional challenges in terms of humanitarian assistance, labor reintegration and educational and psychosocial support.[1452]

643. In addition, by means of Executive Agreement No. 13-DGAJTC-2025, Honduras and the United States agreed that the former would receive persons transferred from the latter and provide them with access to a protection determination mechanism or its equivalent. Under this agreement, Honduras will not return or expel any person transferred until a final administrative decision has been issued regarding their request for protection. To this end, Honduras will examine, in accordance with its protection determination framework, the application of any person who has arrived at a port of entry or attempted to cross a border between ports of entry of the United States upon entry into force of the agreement. In cases where the United States identifies unaccompanied children or adolescents, the United States will remain responsible for determining the outcome of the protection request.[1453] In addition, Honduras signed the Joint Implementation Plan, a technical and operational instrument that describes the procedures and mechanisms established in the agreement and includes the Action Plan for the Joint Implementation of the Protection Agreement (APRO), which regulates the reception, admission and processing for protection or voluntary return of transferred persons.[1454] The Commission has not received any information regarding the implementation of said agreement.

644. Furthermore, INM records show that, between January 1 and August 12, 2025, 22,261 persons had entered the country irregularly. The main nationalities identified were Cuban (13,150 persons), Haitian (3,025), Venezuelan (1,443), Ecuadorian (589) and Chinese (516).[1455] This figure represents a decrease of approximately 92.3 percent compared to 2024, when, as of August 31, 290,902 irregular entries had been recorded.[1456] In this context, the CONADEH indicated that, although Honduras remains a transit country, an [1449] Expediente público, "Personas trans en Honduras: 'Vivimos como ilegales en nuestro propio país'" (Trans persons in Honduras: "We live as if we were illegal in our own country"), January 16, 2025.

[1450] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 31.

[1451] National Institute of Migration of Honduras (INM), Honduran returnees, n/d., accessed on August 26, 2025.

[1452] Observatory on International Migration in Honduras, Migración: Contexto, impacto y desafío en Honduras 2025 (Migration: context, impact and challenges in Honduras [2025]), n/d.

[1453] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 32; National Archives, Federal Register, United States of America, Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Honduras for Cooperation in the Examination of Protection Requests, July 8, 2025.

[1454] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, p. 32.

[1455] INM, Irregular migration flows, n/d., accessed on August 26, 2025.

[1456] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A, May 8, 2025, para. 566.

increasing number of persons are seeking to return to their countries of origin and are requesting assistance to do so.[1457]

645. In terms of internal displacement, the figures published in May 2025 by the Internal Displacement Monitoring Center (IDMC) place Honduras among the countries with the highest number of internally displaced persons by the end of 2024, with 101,000 people in said situation. This total includes 4,300 displacements related to conflict and violence, and 20,000 related to disasters that took place during 2024.[1458]

646. With regard to human trafficking, the Commission welcomes the first court ruling in Honduras that includes reparation for victims of human trafficking. In this case, one individual was convicted of the crimes of sexual exploitation and child pornography, and ordered to pay financial compensation to each of the victims, including three children and one woman.[1459] In addition, the Commission was informed that, in March, the State undertook actions to consolidate alliances and promote joint strategies between the Inter-Institutional Commission against Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking of Honduras (CICESCT) and sectors such as the hotel industry,[1460] healthcare staff[1461] and academia,[1462] with the aim of strengthening initiatives for the prevention and identification of victims of human trafficking.[1463]

647. As for the rights of children and adolescents, the State highlighted the publication of the First National Report on Risks in Social Media for Children and Adolescents, which identifies the risks faced by this population, including cybercrime, recruitment for trafficking purposes, online harassment and the so-called "digital addictions." The State also reported on the establishment, in the city of Comayagüela, of the first Comprehensive Early Childhood Care Center (CAIPI), aimed at providing services to children between 0 and 6 years of age.[1464] The Commission was also informed that the Temporary Protection Families Program was launched in March, with the purpose of providing safe environments for children and adolescents in situations of vulnerability or who have been separated from their family environment as a result of violence.[1465]

648. Furthermore, the Commission notes that at least 60 children and adolescents were killed in the country between January and July 2025, according to the figures published by the UNHCR.[1466] These incidents of lethal violence take place within a context still marked by the presence of armed groups, risks of recruitment and impacts associated with displacement and human mobility, which further exacerbate the

[1457] CONADEH, "Disminuye la migración de personas en tránsito por territorio hondureño" (Transit migration through Honduras shows a decline), April 10, 2025.

[1458] Internal Displacement Monitoring Center, Global Report on Internal Displacement 2024, May 13, 2025, pp. 73 and 110.

[1459] Proceso Digital, "Honduras logra por primera vez una sentencia con reparación del daño a víctimas de trata de personas" (Honduras achieves first court ruling granting reparations to victims of human trafficking), October 28, 2025; Canal 8, "Honduras obtiene primera sentencia que ordena reparación del daño a víctimas de trata" (Honduras issues its first judgment ordering reparations for victims of trafficking), October 28, 2025.

[1460] Government of Honduras, "CICESCT Fortalece Alianzas con el Sector Hotelero para Prevenir la Trata de Personas" (The CICESCT strengthens cooperation with the hotel sector to prevent human trafficking), March 31, 2025.

[1461] Government of Honduras, "CICESCT Capacita a Personal de Salud, en la Identificación y Prevención de la Trata de Personas" (The CICESCT provides training to health sector personnel on the identification and prevention of human trafficking), March 25, 2025.

[1462] Government of Honduras, "CICESCT firma convenio con la Universidad de San Pedro Sula para fortalecer la prevención de la trata de personas y la explotación sexual comercial" (The CICESCT signs agreement with the University of San Pedro Sula to strengthen the prevention of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation), March 31, 2025.

[1463] The IACHR welcomes initiatives such as the "Wings of Resilience" activity organized in August by the CICEST with the support of UNICEF, which brought together 22 survivors of trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation, including men, women, children and adolescents to empower them and provide them with the tools necessary to participate in the forthcoming CICESCT Victims Advisory Council.

[1464] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, paras. 104–105.

[1465] El Mundo, "Honduras lanza programa 'Familias de Protección Temporal' para niños en situación vulnerable" (Honduras launches the "Temporary Protection Families" program to support children in vulnerable situations), March 14, 2025; Swissinfo, "Honduras lanza un programa de protección para niños vulnerables" (Honduras launches protection program for vulnerable children), March 14, 2025.

[1466] UNHCR, Honduras - Operational Update - August 2025, September 29, 2025.

vulnerability of children and adolescents in various regions of the country.[1467] The Commission also regrets that, in August, the National Congress of Honduras failed to approve the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child concerning a communications procedure, an important international instrument for the protection of children and adolescents.[1468]

649. Regarding persons deprived of liberty, the State reported that, as of May 2025, it had a total of 4,245 prison officers and 58 penitentiary officials trained in human rights, command, management and prison security.[1469] Honduras also informed that the Rehabilitation, Reeducation and Reintegration Program (3Rs Program) was still under implementation in 17 penitentiary centers. This program consists of seven modules and 42 courses and, as of May 2025, 2,708 persons deprived of liberty had enrolled. In addition, the Addictions Program is being implemented to prevent substance use and strengthen abstinence among this population. During the first quarter of 2025, 111 persons received training in the detention centers of El Progreso, Olanchito and the National Women's Penitentiary for Social Rehabilitation (PNFAS).[1470]

650. Furthermore, the Commission notes that, in the context of the extension of the state of emergency in force since 2022, an Intervening Commission of the National Penitentiary System (SPN) was appointed and entrusted with authority and control over the system, as well as with its management and administration The security and control of prisons was also delegated to the Military Police of Public Order of the Armed Forces (PMOP).[1471] The Commission further notes that the Intervening Commission was instructed to present a transition plan and timetable so that all institutions within the SPN would eventually be led by career officials of the Penitentiary Service. For that purpose, the continuation of training for managerial, technical, administrative and security personnel was ordered.[1472] In this context, on August 15, the Ministry of National Defense (SEDENA) signed a Framework Cooperation Agreement with the National Penitentiary Institute to strengthen the operational capacities of the SPN.[1473]

651. With regard to the detention conditions faced by persons deprived of liberty in Honduras, according to information published by the CONADEH, more than 80 percent of the penitentiary centers in the country are operating under overcrowded conditions. The facilities in Puerto Lempira, Danlí, El Porvenir and Olanchito are among the most affected, with overcrowding levels exceeding 150 percent.[1474] In response to this situation, the State has reportedly taken measures to enable new detention modules, build a new penitentiary facility and classify and transfer detained persons.[1475]

652. With respect to the classification and transfer of incarcerated persons, the OHCHR voiced its concern regarding human rights violations arising from these measures, including, among others, the lack of

[1467] United Nations, Committee on the Rights of the Child, Concluding observations on the combined sixth and seventh periodic reports of Honduras, CRC/C/HND/CO/6-7, February 26, 2025; OHCHR, "UN Child Rights Committee publishes findings on Ecuador, Eritrea, Gambia, Honduras, Peru, Saint Kitts and Nevis, and Slovakia," February 6, 2025.

[1468] La Prensa, "Qué es el Protocolo Facultativo de la Convención sobre los Derechos del Niño que el Congreso no ha logrado ratificar" (What is the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child that Congress has failed to ratify?), August 26, 2025; Swissinfo, "Lamentan que Parlamento de Honduras no haya aprobado protocolo sobre derechos de la niñez" (Concerns raised over the Honduran Congress's failure to approve the protocol on children's rights), August 22, 2025.

[1469] Government of the Republic of Honduras, Electronic Communication No. 1117-DPM-SRECI-2025, Input sent by the State of Honduras for the preparation of the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, Chapter IV, Section "A", Official Letter No. SEDH-1208-2025, September 5, 2025, para. 34.

[1470] Ibid., p. 34.

[1471] Official Gazette of the Republic of Honduras, Executive Decree No. PCM 41-2024, December 30, 2024, Articles 1–4.

[1472] Ibid.

[1473] Agencia Hondureña de Noticias, "Honduras refuerza cooperación penitenciaria con acuerdo institucional" (Honduras strengthens penitentiary cooperation through institutional agreement), August 16, 2025.

[1474] CONADEH, "Hacinamiento afecta a más del 80% de los centros penitenciarios del país" (Overcrowding affects over 80 percent of the country's prison facilities), June 26, 2025.

[1475] Canal 8, "INP y organismos de derechos humanos abordan medidas de seguridad para reclusos" (National Penitentiary Institute [INP] and human rights organizations discuss security measures for inmates), April 21, 2025; La Tribuna, "Interventora del INP anuncia medidas de seguridad en cárceles" (INP intervening authority announces security measures in prisons), April 23, 2025; Hondudiario, "INP anuncia distribución de estructuras criminales en centros penitenciarios" (INP announces redistribution of criminal groups within penitentiary centers), May 19, 2025.

individualized assessments, the absence of mechanisms to challenge transfers and the failure to provide prior notification to detained persons, their families and their legal representatives.[1476]

653. In addition, the CONADEH reported that, during 2024, it addressed at least 437 complaints related to violations of the right to health, alleging torture and ill-treatment, acts or omissions in cases involving disciplinary measures or solitary confinement, and death threats, among other issues.[1477] Moreover, according to information from the Center for the Prevention, Treatment and Rehabilitation of Victims of Torture and Their Families (CPTRT), as reported by the press, at least 139 detainees were allegedly subjected to torture during the first half of 2025, and suffered beatings, punches, pushing, falls from a second floor, kicks during searches, isolation and invasive searches, among other practices.[1478] In this context, the Commission was informed of cases of physical, sexual and psychological abuse suffered by adolescents held at the Jalteva Nuevo and Jalteva Viejo Juvenile Detention Centers, allegedly perpetrated by other adolescents in a context of negligence, acquiescence and tolerance by the authorities of those facilities.[1479]

654. As for the rights of persons with disabilities, the civil society reported setbacks and exclusion in the electoral processes. According to public information, more than 200,000 persons with disabilities could be excluded from the upcoming elections due to the lack of support measures and reasonable accommodations, as well as the absence of interpreters and accessible materials, thereby limiting the exercise of their political rights.[1480] In addition, more than 50 organizations of persons with disabilities responsible for implementing public policies are at risk of being suspended or closed as a result of insufficient state budget allocations,[1481] which would impact the services provided to at least 60,000 persons with disabilities.[1482]

XXI. JAMAICA

- General considerations

655. As it relates to progress, the IACHR takes note of the State's advancement in achieving constitutional reform and a significant reduction in homicides. The Commission also notes the launch of a legal information portal to improve public access to Jamaica's and welcomes the launch of an initiative to establish the first shelter dedicated to supporting boys who are victims of human trafficking.

656. As it relates to challenges, the IACHR notes with concern the Special Investigative Report on Planned Police Operations published by the Independent Commission of Investigations which highlighted a notable increase in police related fatalities. Moreover, the Commission takes note of the passage of legislation

[1476] OHCHR, "OACNUDH expresa su preocupación ante los traslados masivos de personas privadas de libertad, realizados por el INP como parte del plan de clasificación" (The OHCHR expresses concern over the mass transfers of persons deprived of liberty carried out by the INP as part of the classification plan), June 10, 2025; CONADEH, "CONADEH solicitará ante la CIDH medidas cautelares para las personas privados de libertad" (The CONADEH will request precautionary measures from the IACHR for persons deprived of liberty), June 6, 2025.

[1477] CONADEH, "Hacinamiento afecta a más del 80% de los centros penitenciarios del país" (Overcrowding affects over 80 percent of the country's prison facilities), June 26, 2025.

[1478] Criterio Hn, "Violaciones de derechos humanos aumentaron en los centros penitenciarios bajo el control militar" (Human rights violations increased in penitentiary centers under military control), July 16, 2025.

[1479] El Heraldo, "Un niño, seis violadores: cuatro noches de terror en Jalteva Viejo" (One boy, six rapists: four nights of horror in Jalteva Viejo), February 3, 2025; El Heraldo, "Agresiones físicas y psicológicas contra menores en Jalteva" (Physical and psychological aggression against minors in Jalteva), February 4, 2025.

[1480] Criterio Hn, "Piden al CNE garantizar derecho al voto de la población con discapacidad" (The CNE urged to guarantee voting rights for persons with disabilities), August 6, 2025.

[1481] Proceso Digital, "Unas 50 organizaciones de personas con discapacidad a punto de cerrar operaciones" (Nearly 50 organizations representing persons with disabilities are at risk of closing), July 12, 2025.

[1482] Hondudiario, "Cerca de 50 organizaciones de discapacitados en riesgo de cierre, señala CONADEH" (The CONADEH reports that nearly 50 organizations serving persons with disabilities are at risk of closing), July 12, 2025.

which seeks to increase the sentences of children convicted of homicide. Finally, the IACHR takes notes of the State practice of collective expulsions aimed at restricting access to asylum procedures.

657. The State did not respond to the request for information to draft this chapter.

- Specific issues

658. With regards to democratic institutionality, the IACHR notes the holding of general elections and the State's advancement in achieving constitutional reform. The State held general elections on September 3 to elect 63 members of its House of Representatives. According to the preliminary results published by the Electoral Office of Jamaica, the ruling party, the Jamaica Labor Party (JLP) received the majority of votes in 34 constituencies, while the People's National Party (PNP), the main opposition party, won the majority of votes in the other 29 constituencies.[1483] The Commission highlights the OAS Electoral Observation Mission Preliminary Report which noted that the election process was conducted calmly and professionally. In addition, the Report recommended conducting a thorough assessment of the Voters' List, a comprehensive revision and reenactment of the legislation governing elections and the codification of specific offences related to gender-based violence against women, including candidates.[1484]

659. In addition, in January 2025, a Joint Select Committee of Parliament was appointed to consider and report on The Constitution (Amendment) (Republic) Act, 2024 which was introduced in the House of Representatives in December 2024. The Committee invited written submissions from the public (in Jamaica and the Jamaican diaspora) to aid in its deliberations on the Bill. However, with the dissolution of Parliament ahead of the 2025 General Election, the Bill lapsed and will need to be reintroduced in the new parliamentary term. As previously noted by the Commission, the Bill seeks to abolish the Constitutional Monarchy and transition Jamaica to a Republic.[1485]

660. In relation to human rights institutions, according to official information, since the Electoral Commission of Jamaica (ECJ) has been entrusted with the functions of the Office of the Political Ombudsman, it has implemented several mechanisms to enhance its role. The Commission notes that a dedicated unit within the ECJ now coordinates activities of the Office and has enhanced the enforcement of the Political Code, streamlined the complaint process, and introduced an accessible platform for the submission of digital complaints.[1486] Nonetheless, civil society actors have raised concerns that combining the Office of the Ombudsman with the ECJ could compromise its impartiality, as four of the eight Commissioners are politically nominated.[1487] In this regard, the Commission highlights the OAS Electoral Observation Mission Preliminary Report which recommends clarifying the mandate and powers of the Office of the Political Ombudsman within the ECJ framework in order to ensure that its role is clearly defined, impartial, and capable of functioning effectively.[1488]

661. Regarding citizen security, according to official information, there was a 43% decrease in homicides during the period January 1 and December 20, 2025. A total of 649 homicides were reported up to December 20, 2025, compared to 1136 homicides reported for the same period in 2024.[1489] This represents a homicide rate of rate of 22.8 per 100,000 inhabitants up to December 2025.[1490]

[1483] Electoral Commission of Jamaica, September 3 2025 Elections Preliminary Results, September 3, 2025.
[1484] OAS, Preliminary Report of the OAS Electoral Observation Mission in Jamaica for the 2025 General Elections, September 4, 2025.
[1485] Parliament of Jamaica, Public Notice, January 2025.
[1486] Electoral Commission of Jamaica, Office of the Political Ombudsman Operational under ECJ since February 2024, May 3, 2025.
[1487] Jamaica Gleaner, CAFFE wants reinstallation of single political ombudsman, April 14, 2025.
[1488] OAS, Preliminary Report of the OAS Electoral Observation Mission in Jamaica for the 2025 General Elections, September 4, 2025.
[1489] Jamaica Constabulary Force, Hundreds of Lives Saved in 2025 – Police Commissioner , December 30, 2025.
[1490] The IACHR calculated the homicide rate based on the State's population of 2,839,175 according to data from The World Bank. The World Bank, Population total - Jamaica, 2024.

662. Moreover, the Commission continues to monitor the State's use of States of Public Emergency (SOE) as a crime suppression mechanism. In particular, it highlights that in May, the Supreme Court of Jamaica ruled that seventeen SOEs declared between 2018 and 2023 in response to heightened violent crime were unconstitutional. The Court noted that the SOEs were invalid as they were not declared for a constitutionally legitimate purpose, were disproportionate within a free and democratic society, and undermined the separation of powers by diminishing parliamentary authority regarding their extensions.[1491] In this context, the Commission notes the continued declaration of SOEs. On January 22, an SOE was declared for four divisions: St Andrew South, St Andrew Central, Kingston Western, and St Catherine South, due to a rise in violent crime. Further, on January 28, another SOE was declared in the St. Catherine North Police Division.[1492] In addition, in June, the House of Representatives approved a 180-day extension of the Zones of Special Operations (ZOSOs) in seven communities across Jamaica.[1493]

663. On the other hand, the IACHR notes with concern the Special Investigative Report on Planned Police Operations published by the Independent Commission of Investigations (INDECOM) in October, which highlighted a notable 591% increase in police related fatalities arising from planned police operations between 2021 to 2024. The report noted that for the first seven months of 2025 there were 97 police related fatalities recorded during planned police operations. In this regard, the Report recommended that all planned operations must adhere to the Police Force's Use of Force and Firearms Policy and must be subject to proper planning and documentation.[1494] Further, civil society has called on the Police Force to implement INDECOM's recommendations and conduct an independent audit to ensure that officers are upholding human rights and accountability standards.[1495]

664. With regards to access to justice, in its 2024 Annual Report,[1496] the Commission noted that the State intended to develop a legal information portal. This portal was launched on July 30 and aims to improve public access to Jamaica's laws and educate the public about all aspects of legal information. According to the Ministry of Legal and Constitutional Affairs, the portal will also serve as a platform for public engagement on law reform issues and assist in shaping legal proposals through citizen input.[1497]

665. Concerning the rights of children, the Commission observes that on January 16, the State opened the St. James Child and Adolescent Wellness Centre to provide critical youth mental health services such as psychotherapy, family therapy, social work, and psychiatric care under a multi-agency Citizen Security Plan. The State noted that this development came at a crucial time, as recent data indicated that 20% of Jamaican children suffer from mental health disorders, including depression, anxiety, attention deficit and hyperactive disorders.[1498]

666. Further, the Commission notes with concern that in April, the House of Representatives passed the Child Care and Protection (Amendment) Bill which seeks to increase the sentences of children convicted of homicide. According to official information, the Bill proposes in cases of children convicted of capital murder, they can be sentenced to life imprisonment or a term not less than 30 years, with eligibility for parole after serving 15 years. Whereas for cases of non-capital murder, convicted children can face life imprisonment or another term as deemed appropriate by the court, with judicial discretion to determine the parole eligibility period.[1499]

[1491] Dayton Campbell v Attorney General of Jamaica CLAIM NO. SU 2023CV00736, May 16, 2025.
[1492] Office of the Prime Minister of Jamaica, State of Public Emergency Declared in St Catherine North Police Division, January 28, 2025; Jamaica Observer, State of Public Emergency declared in four more police divisions, January 22, 2025.
[1493] Jamaica Information Service, House Approves 180-Day Extension of ZOSOs in Seven Communities, June 18, 2025.
[1494] Independent Commission of Investigations, Special Investigative Report: Planned Police Operations, October 2025.
[1495] Jamaicans for Justice, Stand up for Jamaica, Joint Press Statement: Jamaicans for Justice and Stand Up for Jamaica Welcome INDECOM's Special Investigative Report on Planned Police Operations, October 13, 2025, IACHR Archive.
[1496] IACHR, Annual Report Chap IV.A "Jamaica", 2024, para. 580.
[1497] Jamaica Information Service, Jamaica Legal Information Portal Launched, July 31, 2025.
[1498] Jamaica Information Service, Child and Adolescent Wellness Centre Opens in Montego Bay, January 18, 2025.
[1499] Jamaica Information Service, House Approves Bills to Increase Penalties for Murder, May 1, 2025.

667. With regard to persons in the context of human mobility, the IACHR notes with concern the practice of collective expulsions aimed at restricting access to asylum procedures. During the period under review, several Haitian nationals entered Jamaica irregularly, including children and women in an advanced state of pregnancy.[1500] According to available information, these persons were reportedly detained, and due process was not guaranteed in the context of the expulsions; in particular, they did not have access to legal representation or to a fair hearing in order to report their individual situation.[1501]

668. Relating to trafficking in persons, the Commission welcomes the launch of an initiative to establish the first shelter dedicated to supporting boys who are victims of human trafficking. The shelter will function as a safe haven providing specialized support and rehabilitation services to help young male survivors of trafficking to heal, recover, and reintegrate into society.[1502] Likewise, the IACHR takes note that in January, a free online course to strengthen awareness and further educate Jamaicans about human trafficking, was launched. The course will provide better understanding of human trafficking "to not only avoid being trafficked but to identify others who may be trafficked so that it can be reported to the authorities."[1503]

669. With respect to the situation of persons of African descent and the fight against racial discrimination, it was delivered the UNESCO certificate recognizing Revivalism as Intangible Cultural Heritage, in addition to previous inscriptions of the Maroon legacy of Moore Town and reggae.[1504] On the other hand, the IACHR observes with concern the persistence of discrimination on the basis of the skin color.[1505]

670. With respect to the rights of LGBTI persons, Jamaica continues to have laws which criminalize same-sex relationships between consenting adults and remains as one of the five states in the American region which continues to maintain these laws.

671. Regarding persons with disabilities, the State has continued to implement the Disabilities Act, which mandates non-discrimination in education, employment, healthcare, and public facilities.[1506] Despite this advancement, significant challenges remain. Access to essential services continues to be limited for many individuals with disabilities, particularly in rural areas where infrastructure and resources are scarce. As such, civil society organizations have suggested a census specific to the persons with disabilities in order to ensure that they receive services and fair treatment.[1507]

672. With respect to persons deprived of liberty, the Commission values efforts to expand social reintegration opportunities. Particularly, in June, a Memorandum of Understanding was signed by the Ministry of National Security, Department of Correctional Services (DCS) and HEART/NSTA Trust to equip inmates and wards of the State with the skills and training necessary to secure meaningful employment upon release.[1508] Also, in August, 10 inmates completed university programs in partnership with the University of the Commonwealth Caribbean and Stand Up for Jamaica.[1509]

[1500] Caribbean National Weekly, 42 Haitian migrants detained after illegal landing in Portland, Jamaica, May 19, 2025; Jamaica Observer, 21 of 40 Haitian refugees captured after boat arrives in Portland, September 22, 2025.
[1501] The Gleaner, When Haiti knocked, Jamaica barred the door, May 25, 2025.
[1502] Jamaica Information Service,, Gov't to Establish Shelter for Male Victims of Human Trafficking, June 19, 2025.
[1503] Jamaica Information Service, Free Online Course on Human Trafficking Launched, January 11, 2025.
[1504] Jamaica Observer, Minister Grange hands over UNESCO certificate to Revivalists, March 10, 2025.
[1505] Jamaica Gleaner, Kristen Gyles: What mental shackles look like, August 1, 2025.
[1506] Jamaica Information Service, Significant Progress Made Since Implementation of Disabilities Act, February 13, 2025.
[1507] Jamaica Observer, JCPD wants census for people with disabilities, February 18, 2025.
[1508] Jamaica Information Service, MOU Signed To Equip Inmates And Wards With Skills For Reintegration And Employment, June 27, 2025.
[1509] Department of Correctional Services, Government of Jamaica, From Incarceration to University Graduation: Academic Triumphs Behind Bars, August 13, 2025.

673. On the other hand, the Commission expresses concern about persistent challenges related to conditions of detention, including harsh living conditions reported at the St. Catherine Adult Correctional Centre, and the lack of a fit-for-purpose facility for persons with psychosocial disabilities.[1510]

674. In relation to the death penalty, the IACHR notes that there has been no progress with removing this punishment from the statutory books. In addition, it observes that no person has been sentenced to death since the last execution in 1988, and as of May 23, 2023, no one is currently under sentence of death.[1511]

XXII. MEXICO

- General considerations

675. As it relates to progress, the Commission notes that the United Mexican States (hereinafter, "Mexico") has expanded its social policy to promote and guarantee labor, housing, health and culture rights, as well as to foster universal social programs that are targeted at women, youth, indigenous peoples, persons with disabilities and older persons. Noteworthy developments include the creation of the National Care System, an increase in the minimum wage and the creation of new channels for reporting corruption. The Commission also notes the adoption of the Mechanism to Monitor and Evaluate the National Program to Prevent and Punish Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, as well as the measures implemented to prevent human trafficking. Moreover, adjustments have been made to regulations on disappeared persons, with a focus on the operation and interconnection of the various registries on the subject.

676. As it relates to challenges, the Commission is concerned about the low turnout in the elections and the suitability of candidates elected to the judiciary, as well as about the fragmentation of access to information and the protection of personal data following the dismantlement of the National Institute for Transparency, Access to Information and Protection of Personal Data (INAI). Furthermore, the country is still facing a serious humanitarian crisis given the persistent forensic emergency and the number of disappeared persons. The Commission notes the alarming number of reports of femicides, transfemicides and murders of LGBTIQ+ persons, as well as cases of human trafficking and violence against women. Reports of xenophobic and racist practices by authorities against persons in the context of human mobility are also a cause for concern. Moreover, the defense of human rights continues to be a dangerous activity in Mexico since there have been several documented murders and attacks against people who search for disappeared persons, indigenous rights defenders and union leaders.

677. On September 15, 2025, the State submitted its response to the Commission's request for information to prepare this chapter.[1512]

- Specific issues

678. Regarding democratic institutionality, the Commission was informed about a judicial reform achieved by means of an electoral process carried out on July 1, 2025. Said process resulted in the election of 881 federal positions within the judiciary,[1513] following the turnout of 12.57-13.32 percent of the national constituency. Among the most relevant parts of the judicial reform, the State pinpointed the creation of the Judicial Administration Body and the Judicial Disciplinary Court, the professionalization of the judicial career, the drafting of provisions on gender equality, the restriction of access to the judiciary based on merit, [1510] Jamaica Observer, Lack fit-purpose facility mentally ill offenders continues pose challenges, July 7, 2025.

[1511] World Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Jamaica, May 23, 2023; last visited: October 2025.
[1512] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025.
[1513] Elected positions: 9 at the SCJN, 2 at the Superior Chamber of the Electoral Court of the Federal Judiciary (TEPJF), 15 at regional chambers of the TEPJF, 5 at the Judicial Disciplinary Court, 464 at circuit courts and 386 at district courts.

the establishment of nine-year terms for judges and magistrates and the reduction of the Supreme Court of Justice (SCJN) from 11 to 9 members. The State also reported that the candidates to the SCJN were nominated by the three branches of government and were evaluated using technical criteria in a process that was "open to society."[1514]

679. The electoral process was open to international scrutiny. The Electoral Observation Mission of the Organization of American States (EOM/OAS) indicated that there was a peaceful atmosphere during the election day despite delays in setting up polling stations. It also underscored the low voter turnout, the high number of null ballots and the rush to hold the election, which took place in a context of polarization and widespread litigation.[1515] In addition, the media reported on the use of "accordion pamphlets," or voting guides,[1516] which, in the opinion of the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, should be prohibited for the 2027 elections.[1517]

680. The Miguel Agustín Pro Juárez Human Rights Center (PRODH Center) indicated that, due to changes in judicial personnel, significant delays in the handling of cases have been documented —especially those involving deprivation of liberty—, and that many continue to be heard by "faceless judges."[1518]

681. With respect to policies on transparency and access to information, during the instant reporting period, the State dismantled the INAI. At a public hearing on the topic before the Commission, civil society organizations stated that the dissolution of the INAI constituted a structural setback and resulted in an excessive concentration of functions regarding these matters in the executive branch.[1519] The State reported that the functions performed by the INAI were to be assigned to a decentralized administrative body attached to the new Anti-Corruption and Good Governance Secretariat, which was to take on the measures to protect personal data. It also indicated that active transparency actions and the decisions over review remedies were now the responsibility of Transparencia para el Pueblo (Transparency for the People) at the federal level, which operates under the collegiate coordination of the National Council of the National System of Access to Public Information. Although the State pointed out that the National Transparency Platform would continue to operate smoothly,[1520] organizations such as Article 19 expressed concern about its safekeeping.

682. In addition, the Commission warns about the murders of public officials, elected authorities and state security agents. According to public information, at least 20 state officials have been killed recently. Several of these cases are reportedly linked to organized crime and the political or administrative functions that the victims performed.[1521]

[1514] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 3-5.

[1515] EOM/OAS, Preliminary Report of the OAS Electoral Observation Mission for the Elections of the Federal Judiciary in Mexico, June 6, 2025.

[1516] DW, "Los 'acordeones' y la elección judicial en México" (The "accordion pamphlets" and the judicial election in Mexico), June 3, 2025.

[1517] Proceso, "La ONU urge a México evitar para 2027 'acordeones' y otros vicios de la elección judicial" (The UN urges Mexico to refrain from handing out "accordion pamphlets" and from replicating other judicial election irregularities in 2027), September 15, 2025.

[1518] PRODH Center, Follow-up information to Chapter IV.A of the IACHR's Annual Report, September 11, 2025, pp. 14-15.

[1519] IACHR, public hearing "Mexico: Status of the right of access to information and the protection of personal data," 192nd regular period of sessions, March 5, 2025.

[1520] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 7-8.

[1521] El País, "Asesinada en la costa de Oaxaca la regidora Guadalupe Urban Ceballos" (Councilwoman Guadalupe Urban Ceballos murdered on the coast of Oaxaca), November 6, 2025; El Financiero, "PERFIL: ¿Quién fue Carlos Manzo, alcalde de Uruapan que mataron tras pedir ayuda contra el narco?" (PROFILE: Who was Carlos Manzo, the Mayor of Uruapan who was killed after asking for help against drug traffickers?), November 1, 2025; BBC News Mundo, "Asesinan a tiros a la secretaria personal y a un asesor de la alcaldesa de Ciudad de México" (The personal secretary and an advisor to the Mayor of Mexico City are shot dead), May 20, 2025; BBC News Mundo, "Hombres armados asesinan a una alcaldesa dentro del palacio de gobierno en el estado mexicano de Oaxaca" (Armed men murder mayor inside the government palace in the Mexican state of Oaxaca), June 16, 2025; El País, "Asesinada a balazos la alcaldesa de Tepalcatepec junto a su esposo en la puerta de su casa" (The Mayor of Tepalcatepec and her husband were shot dead outside their home), June 17, 2025; El País, "Sicarios irrumpen en un hospital de Teocaltiche y asesinan a una enfermera y regidora" (Hit men storm a hospital in Teocaltiche and

683. With regards to elections, the State announced the creation of the Presidential Commission on the Electoral Reform to modernize the electoral system and strengthen democratic representation by means of participatory public hearings between September and December 2025.[1522]

684. In relation to human rights institutions, the State indicated that, during the instant reporting period, it continued to provide assistance to victims by means of legal services, social work, psychological support and healthcare. Reportedly, 19,075 people were registered in the National Registry of Victims (RENAVI). The State further noted that it guaranteed comprehensive reparation to 864 victims —for a total amount of 387.13 million pesos (approximately 17.5 million US dollars)— by means of 222 resolutions issued by the Executive Commission for Attention to Victims (CEAV) and complementary actions by other state-run institutions.[1523]

685. With respect to the fight against corruption, Mexico reported on the creation of the Anti-Corruption and Good Governance Secretariat and of Transparencia para el Pueblo, an institution whose purpose is to make all public information available to citizens. The State also indicated that it had been promoting the Comprehensive Citizen Complaint System (SIDEC) for administrative offenses committed by public officials, as well as the System of Internal and External Citizen Corruption Whistleblowers.[1524]

686. Regarding the National Human Rights Commission (CNDH), information was submitted on the agreement reached in April 2025 that reportedly limits victims' access to complaint files lodged in the Transparency Unit.[1525] Moreover, in September, the selection process for the new Search Commissioner was completed.[1526]

687. With respect to the country's social security policy, the State reported that, as of July 2025, the welfare programs in place resulted in 16.3 million people receiving direct support by means of pensions and transfers, and that social benefits reached 30 million families. Moreover, it indicated that access to education had been strengthened by means of an increase in scholarships, the creation and expansion of schools and the implementation of measures to prevent school dropout. And regarding the right to housing, murder a nurse and a councilwoman) May 9, 2025; La Jornada, "Matan en Veracruz a director de la policía municipal de Cosolapa, Oaxaca" (Director of the municipal police force in Cosolapa, Oaxaca, killed in Veracruz), September 5, 2025; El Universal, "Asesinan a cuatro personas en distintos hechos en Veracruz; una de las víctimas es agente de tránsito" (Four people murdered in separate incidents in Veracruz; one of the victims was a traffic officer), September 20, 2025; Milenio, "Levantan y asesinan a Juan Alberto Camarillo, jefe regional de la Fiscalía General de Guanajuato" (Juan Alberto Camarillo, Regional Head of the Office of the Prosecutor of Guanajuato, kidnapped and murdered), September 25, 2025; El País, "Asesinado Hossein Nabor Guillén, subsecretario del Bienestar en Guerrero" (Hossein Nabor Guillén, Undersecretary of Welfare of Guerrero, murdered), September 3, 2025; Animal Político, "Matan a Ángeles Ojeda de Jesús, director administrativo de Seguridad Pública de Los Cabos" (Ángeles Ojeda de Jesús, Administrative Director of Public Security in Los Cabos, killed), September 7, 2025; La Jornada, "Asesinan al secretario del Ayuntamiento de Apaseo el Alto, Guanajuato" (Secretary of the City Council of Apaseo el Alto, Guanajuato, murdered), July 5, 2025; Milenio, "Asesinan a Felipe Flores López, funcionario y miembro de la comunidad LGBT en Santiago Maravatío" (Felipe Flores López, official and member of the LGBT community in Santiago Maravatío, murdered), June 30, 2025; Milenio, "Esto sabemos sobre el homicidio del comisario de Seguridad Pública de Salamanca en ataque armado" (This is what we know about the murder of the public security commissioner of Salamanca in an armed attack), January 16, 2025; El País, "Muere el secretario de Seguridad de Tulum, José Roberto Rodríguez, tras recibir seis disparos" (Tulum Security Secretary José Roberto Rodríguez dies after being shot six times), March 22, 2025; El Economista, "Emboscan a alcalde de Oaxaca y lo matan" (Mayor of Oaxaca is ambushed and killed), May 15, 2025; El Sol de México, "Asesinan a alcaldesa de San Mateo Piñas, Oaxaca, junto a otro funcionario" (Mayor of San Mateo Piñas, Oaxaca, and another official, murdered), June 15, 2025; El Financiero, "Asesinan a Juan Pulido Díaz, secretario del Ayuntamiento de Linares, Nuevo León, en ataque armado" (Juan Pulido Díaz, secretary of the City Council of Linares, Nuevo León, murdered in an armed attack), June 7, 2025; Proceso, "Asesinan al secretario general del Ayuntamiento de Teocaltiche, Jalisco" (Secretary General of Teocaltiche City Council, Jalisco, murdered), April 28, 2025; Gente Tlaxcala, "Asesinan a balazos al director administrativo de CECyTE en San Pablo del Monte" (Administrative Director of College of Scientific and Technological Studies in San Pablo del Monte, shot dead), June 4, 2025.

[1522] United Mexican States, Press Release, Tarjeta Informativa 34/2025 (Information Bulletin No. 34/2025), August 2, 2025.

[1523] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 14-15.

[1524] Ibid., pp. 5-6 and 14-15.

[1525] PRODH Center, Follow-up information to Chapter IV.A of the IACHR's Annual Report, September 11, 2025, p. 15.

[1526] El Economista, "Martha Lidia Pérez Gumecindo es la nueva titular de la Comisión Nacional de Búsqueda" (Martha Lidia Pérez Gumecindo is the new head of the National Search Commission), September 11, 2025; Animal Político, "Comisión Nacional de Búsqueda: poner al centro a las víctimas, una deuda que apremia" (National Search Commission: focusing on victims, a pressing obligation), August 14, 2025; PRODH Center, Follow-up information to Chapter IV.A of the IACHR's Annual Report, September 11, 2025, pp. 5–6.

the State noted that it had promoted local infrastructure projects and public spaces to improve living conditions in diverse communities.[1527]

688. As it relates to labor, Mexico promoted labor market integration with a focus on equality by strengthening job placement and training services for marginalized groups. The State also reported that it continued to grant increases in the minimum wage, thus reducing poverty among workers and closing the gender pay gap, and it indicated that retirement benefits equal 100 percent of the last salary each person earned before retirement. Additionally, the State fostered measures and regulation reforms with the aim of promoting the labor inclusion of women and equitable treatment in the workplace.[1528]

689. In relation to health, the State indicated that it was seeking to consolidate a universal public health system that can offer expanded community services, new medical units and sufficient supplies. As it relates to sexual and reproductive health, the State managed to bolster the prevention of teenage pregnancy, access to contraceptive methods and maternity care. Regarding mental health, campaigns, support lines and community services for early detection and assistance have been expanded.[1529]

690. With respect to care, the State indicated that it is currently promoting the development of a gender-sensitive care society, with shared responsibility between the State, families, the community and the private sector. It further noted that it has improved working conditions for caregivers and began developing the National Care System, which includes setting up Child Care and Education Centers (CECI).[1530]

691. With regard to access to justice and judicial independence, according to the 2025 National Survey on Victimization and Perception of Public Security, over 90 percent of crimes are never reported in Mexico. In addition, out of the 33.5 million crimes that occurred in 2024, only 0.8 percent were favorably resolved by the Office of the Public Prosecutor: either the affected property was recovered, the person who committed the crime was brought before a judicial authority, the damage caused was repaired or acquittal was granted.[1531]

692. In this regard, the State referred to the granting of amnesty for ordinary crimes in pursuance with current regulations. It highlighted the passing of 147 favorable resolutions and the issuance of 12 court judgments based on petitions approved by the Amnesty Commission.[1532]

693. For its part, the Inter-American Commission raised concerns about amendments to the Law on the Appeal for Legal Protection and the creation of new barriers of access to justice. According to the information received, the aforementioned amendments restrict the scope of legitimate interest and the concept of suspension, therefore limiting access to justice and the ability of civil organizations to promote collective writs of amparo. The reforms also impose stricter requirements for proving "real and differentiated legal injury," which in turn hinders access to judicial protection in cases of collective harm.[1533]

694. With regard to citizen security, public information shows a decrease in the total number of daily homicides that occurred last year, from 86.9 intentional crimes in July 2024 to 64.9 in July 2025. Between January and July 2025, the states that recorded the highest numbers of homicides were Guanajuato (11.9

[1527] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 18-20, 55–64 and 60–64.
[1528] Ibid., pp. 20-29 and 32–36.
[1529] Ibid., pp. 36-51.
[1530] Ibid., pp. 29-32.
[1531] National Institute of Statistics and Geography (INEGI) of Mexico, Encuesta Nacional de Victimización y Percepción sobre Seguridad Pública del 2025 (2025 National Survey on Victimization and Perception of Public Security), September 2025.
[1532] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 17-18.
[1533] PRODH Center, "Notes on the Reform of the Law on the Appeal for Legal Protection," submitted on October 22, 2025.

percent), Chihuahua (7.2 percent), Sinaloa (7.2 percent), Baja California (7.1 percent), the state of Mexico (6.6 percent), Guerrero (5.9 percent) and Michoacán (5.6 percent).[1534]

695. The State indicated that its security policy is aimed at addressing the structural causes of violence by means of a comprehensive strategy based on respect for human rights and peacebuilding. According to the 2025–2030 National Development Plan and the 2024–2030 National Public Security Strategy, the four main lines of action are: addressing the root causes, strengthening the National Guard, using investigation and intelligence, and coordinating tasks with state and municipal authorities.[1535]

696. The PRODH Center expressed concern about the expansion of the militarized model of citizen security following the enactment of the new National Guard Law on July 16, 2025, which repealed the 2019 law and formalized the full integration of the Guard into the Secretariat of National Defense (SEDENA). According to reports, the reforms consolidated the military nature of the National Guard and expanded the scope of action of the SEDENA to the areas of intelligence and military discipline. Nevertheless, the Commission notes that a lack of civilian controls and the opacity in accountability persist, particularly in cases of use of force.[1536]

697. With regard to torture, the 2025 Global Torture Index classifies Mexico as a country with a considerable risk of torture and ill-treatment. According to data from the Technical Secretariat on the Fight Against Torture under the Federal Institute of Public Defense, 2,881 cases of torture were reported (between 2019 and 2024), which involved a total of 3,506 victims.[1537] The State reported that, within the framework of the National Strategy on the Prevention and Punishment of Torture, it offered five training sessions on the Mechanism to Monitor and Evaluate the National Program to Prevent and Punish Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which were attended by 55 officials and social representatives.[1538]

698. Member organizations of the Observatory against Torture highlighted that, after seven years of inaction by the Office of the Attorney General, the National Program to Prevent and Punish Torture was launched on February 18, 2025 —promoted by the civil society—, in compliance with a judgment by the Tenth Collegiate Court in Administrative Matters of Mexico City.[1539] However, the General Law to Prevent, Investigate and Punish Torture is yet to be harmonized with local legislation in most Mexican states.[1540]

[1534] Secretariat of Citizen Security and Protection of Mexico, 1er Informe de Labores 2024-2025 (First Work Report, 2024–2025), September 24, 2025.

[1535] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 8-9.

[1536] Serious human rights violations were reported during security operations, such as the extrajudicial executions of two girls in Badiraguato, Sinaloa, on May 6, 2025, and of a couple in El Aguajito, Sinaloa, on June 1, 2025, as well as the disappearance of an adolescent during an operation in Guanajuato on June 19, 2025. PRODH Center, Follow-up information to Chapter IV.A of the IACHR's Annual Report, September 11, 2025, pp. 1–4.

[1537] World Organization Against Torture, Global Torture Index 2025: Mexico Factsheet, June 2025.

[1538] Moreover, in June 2025, as part of the commemoration of the International Day in Support of Victims of Torture, the "Mexico Without Torture" campaign was carried out, with the aim of disseminating information on investigations, punishment, assistance and comprehensive reparation for victims. Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 10–11.

[1539] According to the information received, this program sets forth the application of administrative sanctions against judges and public defenders who fail to order investigations into allegations of torture. However, there is concern that the new Judicial Disciplinary Court will sanction, on the grounds of ignorance, justice operators who apply the rule of disregard of confessions obtained by means of torture. United Mexican States, Official Gazette, Acuerdo A/001/2025 por el que se expide el Programa Nacional para Prevenir y Sancionar la Tortura (Agreement A/001/2025 issuing the National Program to Prevent and Punish Torture), February 18, 2025; PRODH Center, "Tribunal colegiado de CDMX reconoce omisión de la FGR y ordena la expedición del Programa Nacional para Prevenir y Sancionar la Tortura (PNT)" (Mexico City Collegiate Court acknowledges omission by the Office of the Attorney General and orders the issuance of the National Program to Prevent and Punish Torture), February 4, 2025.

[1540] Secretariat of the Interior of Mexico (SEGOB), Segundo Informe Anual de Actividades 2024-2025 del Mecanismo de Seguimiento de Casos de Tortura Sexual Cometida contra las Mujeres (2024–2025 Second Annual Activity Report by the Mechanism to Monitor Cases of Sexual Torture Committed Against Women), 2025, pp. 81–82.

699. Concerning disappearances, the National Registry of Disappeared and Unlocated Persons indicated that there are currently 133,601disappeared and unlocated persons.[1541] The states that show the highest figures of disappeared persons are the state of Mexico (14,844), Jalisco (13,635) and Tamaulipas (13,614). Furthermore, although civil society organizations estimate that, as of 2024, there were over 70,000 unidentified bodies, the Inter-American Commission notes that there are no official figures on this matter. According to the organization FUNDAR, the main reason the figures on the extent of the forensic crisis cannot be updated is that there is no data collection method in place to make year-over-year comparisons.[1542]

700. The State reported that between October 2024 and June 2025, over 5,700 search operations were carried out —3,148 to find people that were alive and 2,582 forensic searches— and that 14 meetings were held with families and organizations to discuss the proposed reform to the General Law on Disappearances, which was enacted in July 2025. It also indicated that it had consolidated the National Network of Searchers and held the First National Meeting on Human Identification Processes with the participation of prosecutor's offices, local commissions and international organizations.[1543]

701. Human rights organizations warned that, despite the presidential decree of March 18, 2025, aimed at "strengthening search processes," there has been no evidence of a budget increase or the allocation of sufficient resources to the National Search Commission. Furthermore, they expressed concern about the dismantling of the National Center for Human Identification and the technical limitations of the National Forensic Data Bank. The organizations also indicated that the creation of the Single Identity Platform entailed the elimination of the option to lodge administrative reports of disappearances, a tool for families who fear filing criminal complaints. The Commission issued a press release on the findings of human remains, household items, personal belongings and ammunition casings, among other items, at the so-called "Rancho Izaguirre" (Izaguirre ranch) in Teuchitlán, Jalisco, an alleged operating site of organized crime.[1544]

702. With regard to the rights of indigenous peoples, the government announced the Indigenous Education Program and the creation of the National Institute of Indigenous Peoples.[1545] According to the State, these measures seek to combat education gaps,[1546] which are more prevalent among indigenous populations. In relation to access to land, in Sierra Tarahumara, the Ódami and Guarijó indigenous communities of Chihuahua face a serious wave of armed violence that has triggered mass forced displacement since late 2024. In Cinco Llagas (Guadalupe y Calvo), violence in the context of organized crime forced numerous families to flee,[1547] while in Santa Tulita the community resisted with civilian support, although it remains isolated and lacks security guarantees. In Dolores, hundreds of families abandoned their homes following prolonged shootings, and in early 2025, a priest, a local official and an army general were attacked, which triggered the suspension of classes and religious activities.[1548]

[1541] SEGOB, Registro Nacional de Personas Desaparecidas y No Localizadas (National Registry of Disappeared and Unlocated Persons), accessed on December 15, 2025.

[1542] FUNDAR, Crisis forense en México: presupuesto forense para entidades federativas (Forensic crisis in Mexico: Forensic budget for states), March 2025.

[1543] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025, pp. 9-10.

[1544] IACHR, Press Release No. 61/25, IACHR calls on the Mexican State to increase efforts to investigate events and identify human remains found in Teuchitlán, Jalisco, March 27, 2025.

[1545] United Mexican States, "Presidenta: Vamos a seguir trabajando para que el sistema público de educación en el INBAL sea un espacio para las y los jóvenes de México" (President: 'We will continue working to ensure that the public education system at the National Institute of Fine Arts and Literature is available for young people in Mexico'), March 14, 2025.

[1546] National Council for the Evaluation of Social Development Policy, Pobreza y Población Indígena en México (Poverty and the Indigenous Population in Mexico), March 2025, p. 16.

[1547] Raíchali Noticias, "Salen cientos de familias desplazadas por violencia en Guadalupe y Calvo" (Hundreds of families displaced by violence in Guadalupe y Calvo), December 17, 2024.

[1548] CONTEC, "Desplazamiento forzado en comunidades indígenas de la Sierra Tarahumara" (Forced displacement of indigenous communities in Sierra Tarahumara), published in Debates Indígenas, August 1, 2025.

703. Regarding the human rights of women, some Mexican states passed the "Malena Law," which punishes attacks with acid against women;[1549] criminal legislation was amended to incorporate a gender perspective in the assessment of cases of self-defense;[1550] vicarious violence was classified as a crime;[1551] and abortion was decriminalized in several states.[1552] At the federal level, progress was made in the procedure to pass the "Valeria Bill," which classifies stalking as a crime to be incorporated into the Federal Criminal Code;[1553] professional midwifery was officially recognized within the National Health System;[1554] and the SCJN recognized the parents of victims of femicide as indirect victims with the right to reparation.[1555]

704. At the institutional level, it is worth highlighting that at least 607 LIBRE (Freedom, Equality, Well-being, Networks and Emancipation) Centers were opened in different states across the country, which offer comprehensive and specialized services.[1556] Moreover, the Línea Mujeres 079 (Women's Hotline 079), the Red Nacional de Tejedoras de la Patria (National Network of Weavers of the Homeland)[1557] and the National Network of Lawyers for Women[1558] were set up, while financial support was provided to women aged between 60 and 64 by way of the Pensión Mujeres Bienestar (Women's Welfare Pension).[1559] At the state level, among the initiatives carried out are the creation of the Secretariat of Women Affairs in Guanajuato[1560] and the provision of financial support to women who had faced violence.[1561]

705. Notwithstanding the measures above, alarming figures of gender-based violence against women, girls and adolescents persist.[1562] Between January and August 2025, there were reports of 444 femicides, 341 cases of women trafficking, 13,955 cases of rape, 4,368 cases of gender-based violence, 180,356

[1549] El Heraldo de Chiapas, "Aprueban en Chiapas Ley Malena; en qué consiste y origen del nombre" (Malena Law passed in Chiapas: what is it about and what is the origin of its name?), March 27, 2025; Congress of the State of San Luis Potosí, "Importante aprobación de 'Ley Malena' en San Luis Potosí" (San Luis Potosí passes important "Malena Law"), April 25, 2025.

[1550] Congress of the State of Quintana Roo, Dictamen con proyecto de decreto por el que se adicionan los párrafos tercero, cuarto y quinto, a la fracción II, del apartado B, del artículo 20 del código penal para el Estado libre y soberano de quintana Roo, en materia de legítima defensa con perspectiva de género (Opinion and draft decree adding the third, fourth and fifth paragraphs to Section B, Subsection II of Article 20 of the Criminal Code of the Free and Sovereign State of Quintana Roo, regarding self-defense with a gender perspective), October 17, 2023.

[1551] Congress of the State of San Luis Potosí, "Aprobadas reformas para tipificar como delito la violencia vicaria" (Amendments to classify vicarious violence as a crime adopted), May 13, 2025.

[1552] Animal Político, "Ley Valeria avanza en Diputados: qué es el acecho, cómo se sancionaría y qué sigue para ser delito federal" (Valeria Bill moves forward in the Chamber of Deputies: what is stalking, how would it be punished and what's next for it to become a federal crime?), October 8, 2025.

[1553] United Mexican States, "Nueva Norma Oficial Mexicana NOM-020-SSA-2025 fortalece la atención materna y neonatal en México" (New Official Mexican Regulation NOM-020-SSA-2025 strengthens maternity and neonatal care in Mexico), March 4, 2025.

[1554] SCJN, Amparo en revisión 170/2025 (Writ of amparo under review no. 170/2025), August 22, 2025.

[1555] SCJN, Press Release No.141/2025, "Los padres de las víctimas de feminicidio menores de edad deben ser reconocidas como víctimas indirectas de ese delito y tienen derecho a la reparación integral del daño" (The parents of underage victims of femicide must be recognized as indirect victims and are entitled to full reparation for the damage caused), May 16, 2025.

[1556] United Mexican States, "Gobierno de México invierte 651 millones de pesos en Centros LIBRE, se han inaugurado el 90% de los planeados para 2025" (The Mexican government invests 651 million pesos in LIBRE Centers; 90 percent of centers planned for 2025 have already opened), July 21, 2025; Government of Chiapas, "Se inaugura el Centro LIBRE para las Mujeres en el municipio de Pantelhó" (A LIBRE Center for women opens in the municipality of Pantelhó), October 10, 2025.

[1557] United Mexican States, "Inicia Red Nacional de Tejedoras de la Patria con el objetivo de que las mujeres nos protejamos entre todas: Presidenta Claudia Sheinbaum" (The Red Nacional de Tejedoras de la Patria is launched for women to protect one another — announced by President Claudia Sheinbaum), April 23, 2025.

[1558] United Mexican States, "Red de Abogadas de las Mujeres construyen derechos y justicia: Presidenta Claudia Sheinbaum" (Network of Lawyers for Women advances rights and justice —announced by President Claudia Sheinbaum), July 25, 2025.

[1559] United Mexican States, "Inicia entrega de las tarjetas de la Pensión Mujeres Bienestar a casi 2 millones de mujeres: Ariadna Montiel" (Delivery of Pensión Mujeres Bienestar cards to nearly 2 million women has started —announced by Ariadna Montiel), October 8, 2025.

[1560] Congress of the State of Guanajuato, "Avalan reformas para crear la Secretaría de las Mujeres" (Amendments to create the Secretariat of Women Affairs are passed), May 22, 2025.

[1561] Secretariat of Women Affairs of Mexico City, "Entrega gobierno capitalino 466 apoyos para impulsar la autonomía económica de mujeres en situación de violencia" (The capital city government grants 466 allowances to promote the economic independence of women who have faced violence), June 24, 2025.

[1562] CEDAW, Concluding observations on the tenth periodic report of Mexico, July 10, 2025, para. 27(a); IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A, March 26, 2025, para. 636; International Federation for Human Rights et al., Request for a thematic hearing on the disappearance of and gender-based violence against women and girls in Mexico, 193rd regular period of sessions. On IACHR's files.

cases of domestic violence and 194,801 emergency calls related to incidents of violence against women.[1563] Civil society organizations continue to report cases of vicarious violence against mothers who report domestic violence[1564], as well as multiple forms of violence against women human rights defenders. In this regard, organizations submitted information on threats, attacks, criminalization, harassment, raids, forced displacement, disappearances and even murders, especially against indigenous environmental defenders, journalists and mothers who are searching for disappeared relatives.[1565] According to public information, other types of violence include acts of repression and violence against women who attended the march commemorating International Women's Day in different parts of the country.[1566] In addition, the Commission identified challenges in the access to sexual and reproductive health services in Mexico, particularly for migrant women, who frequently face violence and sexual exploitation.[1567] In relation to this matter, the Commission also condemned the sexual harassment suffered by President Claudia Sheinbaum at a public event.[1568]

[1563] Executive Secretariat of the National Public Security System, Informe de violencia contra las mujeres. Incidencia delictiva y llamadas de emergencia al 911 (Report on violence against women. Crime rates and 911 emergency calls), December 2025, pp. 10, 53, 57, 63, 68 and 75.

[1564] CEDAW, Concluding observations on the tenth periodic report of Mexico, July 10, 2025, para. 27(c); CIMAC Noticias, "Citlalli Hernández, promete justicia a mujeres que buscaron a la CIDH por casos de violencia vicaria" (Citlalli Hernández promises justice to women who resorted to the IACHR for cases of vicarious violence), May 7, 2025; Red Solidaria Década Contra la Impunidad A.C., Request for a thematic hearing on vicarious violence, 193rd regular period of sessions, April 21, 2025. On IACHR's files; Red Solidaria Década Contra la Impunidad A.C., Request for a working meeting on vicarious violence, 194th regular period of sessions, August 15, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1565] CIMAC Noticias, "Amenazan a defensora del Río Sonora. María Auxiliadora contra el Plan Hidráulico del gobierno" (Threats against defender of the Sonora river. María Auxiliadora resists the government's water plan), October 14, 2025; Fray Bartolomé de las Casas Human Rights Center, "Expresamos nuestra indignación y preocupación por el allanamiento del domicilio de la Directora de Centro de Derechos Humanos Fray Bartolomé de las Casas" (We express our outrage and concern over the raid of the home of the Director of the Fray Bartolomé de las Casas Human Rights Center), July 26, 2025; Infobae, "Chiapas y su crisis por violencia contra defensores de DDHH: 156 ataques en año y medio" (Crisis of violence against human rights defenders in Chiapas: 156 attacks in a year and a half), October 8, 2025; Comunicación e Información de la Mujer A.C. (CIMAC), Voces en resistencia (Voices in resistance), April 22, 2025; El Universal, "'Temo por mi vida': dice la defensora indígena Silvia Pérez a un año de su desplazamiento forzoso" ("I fear for my life," says indigenous defender Silvia Pérez one year after her forced displacement), February 27, 2025; IM-Defensoras, "[Alerta Defensoras] MÉXICO / No cesa hostigamiento contra la defensora zapoteca Silvia Pérez e integrantes de CIARENA A.C.: allanan de nuevo las oficinas de la organización, en el estado de Oaxaca" ([Defenders Alert] MEXICO / Harassment continues against Zapotec defender Silvia Pérez and members of CIARENA A.C.: the organization's headquarters in the state of Oaxaca were raided once again), June 26, 2025; CEDAW, Concluding observations on the tenth periodic report of Mexico, July 10, 2025, para. 55; Amnesty International, Disappearing Again: Violence and Impacts Experienced by Women Searchers in Mexico, July 8, 2025; IM-Defensoras, "[Alerta Defensoras] MÉXICO / La defensora buscadora María Ángeles Valenzuela está desaparecida después de que sujetos armados la privasen de su libertad en Mazatlán, Sinaloa" ([Defenders Alert] MEXICO / Human rights defender María Ángeles Valenzuela disappears after armed individuals kidnap her in Mazatlán, Sinaloa), October 15, 2025; Article 19, "Asesinan a madre buscadora Aida Karina Juárez Jacobo" (Searching mother Aida Karina Juárez Jacobo, murdered), August 29, 2025; Infobae, "Estela Hernández, defensora otomí, denuncia tortura tras detención arbitraria en Querétaro" (Estela Hernández, Otomí activist, reports torture after arbitrary detention in Querétaro), June 5, 2025.

[1566] IM-Defensoras, "[Alerta Defensoras] MÉXICO / Durante 8M registramos represión, ataques y detenciones arbitrarias contra manifestantes en al menos once Estados de la República" ([Defenders Alert] MEXICO / On March 8, we recorded repression, attacks and arbitrary detentions against protesters in at least 11 states), March 10, 2025; Entre Semana, "Derechos Humanos de Yucatán condena violenta represión contra manifestantes del 8M en Mérida" (The Human Rights Commission of Yucatán condemns violent repression against March 8 protesters in Mérida), March 10, 2025; Human Rights Commission of Yucatán, Comunicado (Press Release), March 9, 2025; Proceso, "Golpes, gases y detenciones arbitrarias en protestas de 8M en Pachuca" (Beatings, tear gas and arbitrary detentions during March 8 protests in Pachuca), March 8, 2025.

[1567] Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, Concluding observations on the fourth periodic report of Mexico, May 20, 2025, para. 49; El Universal, "Despenalización del aborto no mejoró acceso a la salud de las mujeres: UNNA; advierte aumento de violencia y maltrato" (Decriminalization of abortion did not improve women's access to healthcare: UNNA warns of increase in violence and abuse), May 1, 2025; La Silla Rota, "Mujeres migrantes son víctimas de trata y violencia extrema en Hidalgo: Centro de Justicia" (Migrant women are victims of trafficking and extreme violence in Hidalgo, according to the Justice Center), June 16, 2025; Office of the Attorney General of the state of Quintana Roo, "Rescatan FGE Quintana Roo y Guardia Nacional a 26 mujeres víctimas de trata de personas en Benito Juárez" (Office of the Attorney General of the state of Quintana Roo and National Guard rescue 26 women victims of human trafficking in Benito Juárez), May 10, 2025; DW, "Rescatan en México a 16 extranjeras que eran prostituidas" (Sixteen foreign women who were being forced into prostitution rescued in Mexico), April 13, 2025.

[1568] IACHR [@CIDH], (November 6, 2025), #México: #CIDH condena el acoso sexual y la violencia contra la presidenta de la República @Claudiashein que tuvo lugar el 4 de noviembre en público y exige que se investigue y castigue este acto. Todas las mujeres están expuestas a la violencia de género y su prevención debe ser una prioridad (#Mexico: The #IACHR condemns the act of sexual harassment and violence against the President of the Republic @Claudiashein that took place on November 4 in public and urges that it be investigated and punished. All women are vulnerable to gender-based violence and preventing it must be a priority) [X post], X, https://x.com/CIDH/status/1986588116530946091.

706. Regarding the guarantee of the rights of children and adolescents, in May, the Executive Committee of the National Strategy on the Prevention of Teenage Pregnancy reported a 30 percent reduction in the adolescent fertility rate and a 21 percent reduction in forced pregnancies among girls under the age of 15.[1569] The State reported that between October 2024 and June 2025, 453,393 adolescents received information on topics such as unintended pregnancy prevention, the use of contraception after medical consultation and methods to prevent sexually transmitted diseases.[1570] During said period, 3,352 state groups created to prevent teenage pregnancy were reportedly reestablished in Veracruz and Mexico City and over 3,000 Servicios Amigables para Adolescentes (Adolescent-Friendly Services) were put in operation, by means of which 278,619 young people between the ages of 10 and 19 received assistance. The online chat service ¿Cómo le hago? (What should I do?) was used to assist 23,747 adolescents and young people, who were able to access information on contraceptive methods, menstrual management, legal termination of pregnancy and gender-based violence.[1571]

707. Furthermore, the Commission notes with concern the persistent recruitment of children and adolescents by organized criminal groups. According to official information, people as young as six years old were recruited on social media platforms, video games and by family members, and then forced to engage in criminal activities. It is estimated that currently around 30,000 children are directly involved in these groups, while over 200,000 are vulnerable to recruitment.[1572]

708. With regard to persons deprived of liberty, the State reported on the engagement of 107,352 inmates in social reinsertion activities, the launch of the Arte por la Libertad (Art for Freedom) brand to market inmates' work and the implementation of the Reconecta con la Paz (Reconnect with Peace) strategy to prevent recidivism.[1573] According to public information, the National Census of State Penitentiary Systems was implemented.[1574] Moreover, the Commission notes the agreement signed by the Government of Tlajomulco and the Jalisco Directorate of Prevention and Social Reinsertion aimed at facilitating the reintegration of released or prereleased inmates[1575] and welcomes the opening of the country's first penitentiary maternity ward at the Women's Social Reinsertion Center of Nuevo León.[1576]

709. Despite the aforementioned efforts, the Commission expresses concern about the entry into force —on January 1— of the amendment to Article 19, paragraph 2 of the National Constitution, which expanded the list of crimes that trigger automatic pretrial detention.[1577] In this context, according to official data as of July 2025, there was an increase in the pretrial detention rate compared to June 2024. In courts of federal jurisdiction, this rate rose from 39.3 percent to 44.6 percent; while in courts of local jurisdiction, it increased from 36.9 percent to 39.2 percent.[1578]

[1569] United Mexican States, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, September 15, 2025, p. 44. On IACHR's files.

[1570] Ibid., pp. 44–45.

[1571] Ibid., pp. 46–47.

[1572] Reuters, "How Mexico's cartels recruit children and groom them into killers," May 28, 2025.

[1573] United Mexican States, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, September 15, 2025, pp. 12–13. On IACHR's files.

[1574] INEGI, Censo Nacional de Sistemas Penitenciarios Estatales 2025 (2025 National Census of State Penitentiary Systems), July 17, 2025.

[1575] Municipal Government of Tlajomulco, "Tlajo firma convenio por la reinserción social y las segundas oportunidades" (Tlajomulco signs agreement in favor of social reinsertion and second chances), July 6, 2025.

[1576] SWI swissinfo.ch, "Una cárcel en México abre el primer espacio de maternidad para los hijos de las reclusas" (A prison in Mexico opens the first maternity ward for the children of women inmates), April 9, 2025; Infobae, "Esta es la cárcel mexicana que abrió el primer espacio de maternidad para hijos de las reclusas" (This is the Mexican prison that opens the first maternity ward for the children of women inmates), April 10, 2025; Efeminista, "Primer espacio de maternidad para hijas e hijos de las reclusas en un penal de México" (First maternity ward for children of women inmates in a Mexican prison), April 23, 2025.

[1577] See: United Mexican States, Official Gazette, Decreto por el que se reforma el párrafo segundo del artículo 19 de la Constitución Política de los Estados Unidos Mexicanos, en materia de prisión preventiva oficiosa (Decree amending Article 19, paragraph 2 of the Political Constitution of the United Mexican States, regarding automatic pretrial detention), December 31, 2025.

[1578] Secretariat of Citizen Security and Protection of Mexico, Cuaderno mensual de información estadística penitenciaria nacional (Monthly compilation of national prison statistics), July 2025, p. 3; also, see: Secretariat of Citizen Security and Protection of Mexico, Cuaderno mensual de información estadística penitenciaria nacional (Monthly compilation of national prison statistics), June 2024, p. 3.

710. With respect to detention conditions, it is concerning that, out of the total 275 penitentiary centers, 138 are overcrowded, especially state centers, which account for 90 percent of the total number of penitentiaries in the country.[1579] In this regard, the Commission notes the strategy implemented by the State to transfer inmates from overcrowded state facilities to federal ones.[1580] The Commission is also concerned that, according to official information, deaths in custody have increased by 11.5 percent due to alleged shortcomings in medical care.[1581] Finally, reports of fights and riots in penitentiaries are noted as well.[1582]

711. With regard to LGBTI persons, according to data published in 2025 by the INEGI, 5.1 percent of the population aged 15 and over identifies as LGBTI.[1583] In May, Mexico City amended provisions of the law on women's access to a life free of violence to also protect the rights of transgender women.[1584] That same month, the SCJN overturned a provision of the Criminal Code of the state of Guerrero that exempted parents or guardians who forced their children to attend conversion therapy from criminal liability.[1585] In June, both the Congress of Chiapas and the Congress of Tamaulipas passed reforms to their respective criminal codes to prohibit "conversion therapy."[1586] In September, a standardized protocol on the investigation of crimes committed against LGBTTTI+ persons was adopted.[1587]

712. Conversely, according to data from the National Observatory on Hate Crimes against LGBT Persons, in the last 10 years and as of early June 2025, the recorded cases of murders and disappearances of [1579] Secretariat of Citizen Security and Protection of Mexico, Cuaderno mensual de información estadística penitenciaria nacional (Monthly compilation of national prison statistics), July 2025, p. 3.

[1580] Publimetro, "Saturación en cárceles de México por estrategia de seguridad, ¿cuáles son los riesgos?" (Overcrowding in Mexican prisons due to security strategy: what are the risks?), August 4, 2025.

[1581] Secretariat of Citizen Security of Mexico City, Sistema penitenciario – Síntesis informativa – Comunicación social (Penitentiary System - Information Summary - Social Communication), June 1, 2025.

[1582] El País, "Un motín en una cárcel de Veracruz deja siete muertos y once heridos" (A riot in a Veracruz prison results in 7 dead and 11 injured), August 3, 2025; Reforma, "Mueren 8 reos en Tuxpan tras motín por extorsiones" (Eight inmates die in Tuxpan after riot over extortion), August 4, 2025; Infobae, "Suman 8 muertos tras riña en penal de Tuxpan, denuncian extorsiones y complicidad de autoridades" (Eight dead after fight in Tuxpan prison; extortion and collusion of authorities reported), August 5, 2025; AP, "Siete muertos y 14 heridos en un motín en cárcel del sur de México, el segundo en menos de dos meses" (Seven dead and 14 injured in a riot at a prison in southern Mexico, the second in less than two months), February 4, 2025; La Voz, "Mueren siete personas en un motín en cárcel del sur de México, el segundo en menos de dos meses" (Seven people die in a riot at a prison in southern Mexico, the second in less than two months), February 4, 2025; CNN en Español, "Incidente en cárcel de Tabasco deja 7 muertos y 14 heridos" (Incident at Tabasco prison results in seven dead and 14 injured), February 4, 2025; Secretariat of Citizen Security of Mexico City, Sistema penitenciario – Síntesis informativa – Comunicación social (Penitentiary System - Information Summary - Social Communication), June 1, 2025; El Comentario, "Riña en penal de Culiacán deja 3 reos muertos" (Fight in Culiacán prison results in three inmates dead), June 27, 2025; Animal Político, "Riña en el penal de Aguaruto en Sinaloa deja tres internos muertos; van cuatro fallecimientos en dos días" (Fight in Aguaruto prison in Sinaloa results in three inmates dead; four deaths in two days), June 27, 2025.

[1583] Infobae, "¿Cuántas personas son de la comunidad LGBT en México? INEGI revela alarmantes cifras de violencia y discriminación" (How many people are members of the LGBT community in Mexico? The INEGI discloses alarming figures on violence and discrimination), May 17, 2025; Expansión, "Así es la comunidad LGBT+ en México" (This is what the LGBT+ community in Mexico is like), June 28, 2025.

[1584] Excelsior, "CDMX reconoce violencia transfeminicida; así quedan las sanciones" (Mexico City incorporates transfemicide into law; here are the penalties), June 25, 2025.

[1585] El País, "La Suprema Corte invalida la norma que le permitía a padres de familia aplicar las terapias de conversión" (The Supreme Court overrides legislation that entitled parents to use conversion therapy), May 21, 2025; Supreme Court of Justice of the Nation [@SCJN], (May 21, 2025), Un artículo del Código Penal de Guerrero permitía a los padres y a quienes ejercen la patria potestad de menores imponer terapias de conversión sin enfrentar consecuencias penales (…) (An article in the Criminal Code of Guerrero entitled parents and guardians of minors to impose conversion therapy without facing criminal consequences [...]) [X post], X, https://x.com/SCJN/status/1925013358039752789.

[1586] El Heraldo de Chiapas, "Chiapas prohíbe las terapias de conversión con reformas al Código Penal" (Chiapas bans conversion therapy via amendments to its Criminal Code), June 4, 2025; Milenio, "Congreso de Chiapas prohíbe las prácticas de las terapias de conversión" (Congress of Chiapas bans conversion therapy practices), June 5, 2025; Congress of Tamaulipas, Press Release No. 7273, "Tipifica Congreso delitos contra la orientación sexual e identidad de género" (Congress classifies crimes against sexual orientation and gender identity), June 17, 2025.

[1587] Debate, "México: Fiscalía aprueba protocolo para crímenes contra comunidad LGBT" (Mexico: Office of the Attorney General adopts protocol on crimes against the LGBT community), September 11, 2025; El Sol de México, "Nuevo protocolo de la FGR busca erradicar la revictimización de la comunidad LGBT+" (New protocol adopted by the Office of the Attorney General seeks to eradicate the revictimization of the LGBT+ community), October 3, 2025.

LGBTI persons amounted to 739.[1588] In 2025 alone, as of May, the Observatory recorded 12 disappearances and 13 murders of LGBTI persons in the country.[1589] Victims of these crimes include political and social leaders of the LGBTI community and LGBTI human rights defenders.[1590]

713. With regard to the situation of Afro-descendants and the fight against racial discrimination, the State reported on progress in various public policies targeted at Afro-Mexicans in the areas of education, protection of vulnerable groups (children, women, youth, persons with disabilities), reinsertion of persons deprived of liberty, promotion of democracy, reduction of historical and structural inequalities and social welfare, with an emphasis on inclusion, justice, socioeconomic development, access to work and the preservation of the memory of disappeared people.[1591]

714. The National Institute of Indigenous Peoples (INPI) promoted activities to appreciate and pay tribute to Afro-Mexican women[1592] and reported on the allocation of resources from the Fund for the Comprehensive Care of Indigenous and Afro-Mexican Peoples and Communities (FAISPIAM) to social infrastructure projects led by Afro-Mexican communities,[1593] although some sectors complained that indigenous and Afro-Mexican communities in Oaxaca were excluded thereof.[1594] Moreover, awareness campaigns against racism were carried out to shed light on and report acts of discrimination.[1595]

715. The Commission also notes affirmative policies and actions implemented with an intercultural approach at the state level.[1596] Nevertheless, research has unveiled the prevalence of structural racism and has

[1588] National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM) Newsletter, "Persisten los crímenes de odio contra comunidad LGBTIQA+ en México" (Hate crimes against the LGBTIQA+ community persist in Mexico), June 9, 2025; La Crónica de Hoy, "Aumentan 176% crímenes contra comunidad LGBT+ en CDMX en 9 años" (Crimes against the LGBT+ community in Mexico City increase by 176 percent in nine years), June 23, 2025.

[1589] Infobae, "Día Contra la LGBTIfobia: entre avances y desafíos para la diversidad sexual y de género en México" (International Day Against Homophobia, Biphobia and Transphobia: progress and challenges for sexually and gender diverse persons in Mexico), May 17, 2025.

[1590] Cases include: La Jornada, "Asesinan a Jesús Laiza, líder LGBT+ de Espacio Hidalgo y a su pareja en Edomex" (Jesús Laiza, LGBT+ leader of Espacio Hidalgo, and partner murdered in the state of Mexico), July 2, 2025; OHCHR Mexico [@ONUDHmexico], (August 18, 2025), Lamentamos profundamente el asesinato de la defensora trans Katia Daniela Medina Rafael, directora del Colectivo Trans Zapotlán (…) (We deeply regret the murder of trans defender Katia Daniela Medina Rafael, director of the Zapotlán Trans Collective […]) [X post], X, https://x.com/ONUDHmexico/status/1957612060788883903; National Observatory on Hate Crimes against LGBT Persons [@ObservatorioCr3], (July 3, 2025), Nos siguen matando (…) (They continue to kill us […]) [X post], X, https://x.com/ObservatorioCr3/status/1940906562362696019; Mexican LGBTTTI+ Coalition [@cmlgbttti], (July 3, 2025), Ni un asesinato más (…) (No more murders […]) [X post], X, https://x.com/cmlgbttti/status/1940918328509583460.

[1591] United Mexican States, Note in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), August 5, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1592] INPI, "Gobierno de México reconoce, visibiliza y honra a mujeres afromexicanas" (Government of Mexico recognizes, appreciates and pays tribute to Afro-Mexican women), July 31, 2025.

[1593] INPI, "Entrega de recursos públicos de manera directa a pueblos indígenas y afromexicanos; un acto de justicia social" (Direct allocation of public resources to indigenous and Afro-Mexican peoples: an act of social justice), July 7, 2025.

[1594] Chamber of Deputies of Mexico, "Denuncia Martha Aracely Cruz exclusión de más de mil comunidades indígenas y afromexicanas del FAISPIAM" (Martha Aracely Cruz denounces the exclusion of over 1,000 indigenous and Afro-Mexican communities from the FAISPIAM), April 1, 2025; La Jornada, "Pueblos indígenas de varios estados denuncian exclusión de fondo para infraestructura" (Indigenous peoples from several states denounce exclusion from fund allocated to infrastructure projects), March 31, 2025.

[1595] COPRED, "Campaña #EsRacismo y un 'Decálogo Para Personas Servidoras Públicas' en el marco de las 'Jornadas Contra el Racismo'" (#ItIsRacism campaign and a "Decalogue for Public Servants" are part of the "Conferences against Racism"), March 21, 2025; INEGI, "Estadísticas a propósito del Día Internacional de la Eliminación de la Discriminación Racial" (Statistics concerning the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination), March 18, 2025; El Universal, "'Lady racista' en CDMX: ¿cómo denunciar un acto racista ante el escándalo de Ximena Pichel?" ("Racist lady" in Mexico City: how to report a racist act in light of the Ximena Pichel scandal?), July 8, 2025.

[1596] Government of Oaxaca, "Con la anfitrionía de las 16 etnias y el pueblo afromexicano inicia julio Mes de la Guelaguetza 2025" (July 2025, the month of Guelaguetza, kicks off with the 16 ethnic groups and the Afro-Mexican community hosting celebrations), July 1, 2025; Government of Guerrero, "La SEDEPIA e INPI pondrán en marcha el proyecto 'Garantizando el derecho a la identidad jurídica de los pueblos indígenas y afromexicanos'" (The Secretariat of Development of Indigenous and Afro-Mexican Peoples and the INPI to launch a project titled "Guaranteeing the right to legal identity of indigenous and Afro-Mexican peoples"), July 23, 2025; Government of Guerrero, "Titular de SEDEPIA presenta ante Gabinete estatal acciones en favor de los derechos de los pueblos indígenas y afromexicanos" (The head of the Secretariat of Development of Indigenous and Afro-Mexican Peoples proposes actions in favor of the rights of indigenous and Afro-Mexican peoples to the state cabinet), June 4, 2025; Mexico City Electoral Institute (IECM), "Avanza Consulta Afromexicana 2025" (2025 pointed out that 3.1 million Afro-descendants suffer from poverty and face challenges in terms of education, health, labor inclusion, infrastructure and the representation of girls and women.[1597]

716. Regarding the rights of older persons, the State announced the continuity and expansion of pension programs for older persons, as well as the launch of new social benefits in 2025, such as the Salud Casa por Casa (Door-to-Door Healthcare) strategy, which provides at-home medical care to the elderly.[1598] Around 8.9 million older persons are reportedly registered under this program. Based on information on each older person, customized healthcare plans will be designed. The State pointed out that the Abriendo Espacios (Opening Spaces) initiative seeks to bring persons in a situation of exclusion, like the elderly, to the labor market. It added that 798 older persons have been placed in the labor market within the reported period.[1599] Furthermore, the Commission gathered information on cases of abuse and neglect at nursing homes in Puebla and San Luis Potosí.[1600]

717. In relation to the rights of persons with disabilities, the State made progress in the consolidation and implementation of plans such as Política Laboral Incluyente (Inclusive Labor Policy), Servicios de cuidado a quienes cuidan (Care Services for Those who Care), Salud Casa por Casa, Programas para el Bienestar (Welfare Programs), Sistema de Salud para el Bienestar (Welfare Healthcare System) and Iniciativas contra el Abandono Escolar (Initiatives against School Dropout), in which persons with disabilities are included as a top priority.[1601] Furthermore, the Supreme Court of Justice of the Nation (SCJN) set a new criterion for exercising the right to prior consultation for persons with disabilities, which will now be analyzed only upon request from the party invoking it.[1602] Civil society organizations have warned that, while this approach allegedly intends to overcome procedural formalities, it could jeopardize the meaningful participation of persons with disabilities, as consultation is left to chance or subjected to contingency.[1603]

718. Concerning the rights of persons in the context of human mobility, official data shows that, between January and July 2025, a total of 124,353[1604] foreigners with an irregular migration status were identified. In January, the State launched the México te abraza (Mexico Embraces You) policy, under which shelters were opened in Mexicali, Baja California; Reynosa and Nuevo Laredo, and Tamaulipas with the aim of Afro-Mexican Consultation moves forward), August 20, 2025; Mexico City Human Rights Commission (CDHCM), Bulletin No. 74/2025, En el marco del Día Internacional de la Mujer Afrodescendiente, CDHCM refrenda compromiso institucional con sus derechos (On the International Day for Women and Girls of African Descent, the CDHCM reaffirms its institutional commitment to their rights), July 25, 2025.

[1597] UNAM Newsletter, "Racismo, una problemática estructural en México" (Racism is a structural problem in Mexico), March 18, 2025; La Jornada, "En México, 31 millones de afrodescendientes sufren pobreza y racismo estructural" (In Mexico, 31 million Afro-descendants experience poverty and structural racism), August 28, 2025; Infobae, "Comunidad afrodescendiente, la más discriminada; le sigue población indígena y migrante" (The Afro-descendant community is the most discriminated against; followed by indigenous and migrant populations), March 23, 2025; Excélsior, "Visibilizar a las niñas y a las mujeres afrodescendientes, pendiente en México" (Making Afro-descendant girls and women visible is a pending issue in Mexico), July 22, 2025; INEGI, "Encuesta Nacional sobre Discriminación (ENADIS) 2022: Resultados" (2022 National Survey on Discrimination [ENADIS]: results), May 2023.

[1598] Government of Mexico, "Gobierno de México pone en marcha programa 'Salud Casa por Casa' para adultos mayores y personas con discapacidad" (Government of Mexico launches Salud Casa por Casa [Door-to-Door Healthcare] program), April 3, 2025.

[1599] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025.

[1600] El Ciudadano, "DIF interviene asilo clandestino en Puebla: abuso y abandono de adultos mayores" (National System for Family Development [DIF] takes action at clandestine nursing home in Puebla: Abuse and neglect of older persons), March 5, 2025; Marca, "Maltrato y abandono de adultos mayores: la otra cara del envejecimiento en México" (Ill-treatment and neglect of older persons: The other side of aging in Mexico), May 16, 2025.

[1601] Permanent Mission of Mexico to the OAS, Annual report on key trends, issues, challenges, developments and best practices regarding civil and political rights and ESCERs, via Diplomatic Note No. OEA2922 4.5.0.1, September 15, 2025.

[1602] Supreme Court of Justice of the Nation, Press Release No. 224, "La nueva Corte protege derechos de las personas con discapacidad y garantiza acceso a información pública" (The new Court protects the rights of persons with disabilities and ensures access to public information), September 22, 2025.

[1603] Human Rights Watch, "Mexico: Supreme Court Risks Weakening Disability Rights," October 2, 2025.

[1604] Unit on Migration Policy, Registry and Identity, Mexico, 2025, Boletín estadístico mensual, "III. Personas en situación migratoria irregular (antes, extranjeros presentados y devueltos)" (Monthly Statistics Newsletter;. III. Persons with an Irregular Migration Status [Before: Foreigners who Appeared before the Authorities and Were Sent Home], 2025, Chart 3.1.

receiving Mexican citizens deported from the United States. These shelters provide services such as food, healthcare and labor reintegration support.[1605]

719. In addition, the United Nations Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families expressed its concern over the lack of data on access to justice, free legal assistance, guarantees of due process in detention or deportation procedures, as well as limited information regarding measures which intend to prevent discrimination.[1606] Moreover, it warned against persistent discriminatory, xenophobic and racist practices by the authorities and private-sector stakeholders, as well as interruptions in the granting of visitor cards for humanitarian reasons since October 2023, which has prevented migrants from having access to key documents that help them exercise their rights.[1607]

720. With regards to the rights of human rights defenders, the civil society has shared figures which indicate that, from 2016 to August 2025, 25 defenders who search for disappeared persons were murdered and seven disappeared, while 37 human rights defenders disappeared, possibly as a result of their advocacy work.[1608] Furthermore, Amnesty International reported that, between February 2011 and May 2025, 30 relatives and close friends of disappeared persons were murdered, of which 16 were women.[1609] Moreover, the Commission gathered information on attacks and homicides against people who search for disappeared persons,[1610] LGBTIQ+ activists[1611] and indigenous and territorial rights defenders committed throughout the

[1605] International Migration Observatory, Mexico, "Personas en situación migratoria irregular entre México y Estados Unidos. La narrativa actual en medios de comunicación" (Persons with an irregular migration status between Mexico and the United States. The current media narrative), January–February 2025.

[1606] Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families (CMW), Concluding Observations in the Fourth Periodic Report of Mexico, CMW/C/MEX/CO/4, May 20, 2025, pp. 2 and 3.

[1607] Ibid., pp. 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 14, and 17.

[1608] Espacio OSC para la protección de personas defensoras y periodistas, "Día Internacional de las Víctimas de Desapariciones Forzadas: exigimos verdad, justicia, protección y aparición con vida de personas defensoras, buscadoras y periodistas" (International Day of the Victims of Enforced Disappearances: We demand truth, justice, protection and the return of defenders, searchers and journalists alive), August 29, 2025.

[1609] Amnesty International, México: informe al Comité para la Eliminación de la Discriminación contra la Mujer 91º período de sesiones, 16 de junio al 4 de julio de 2025 (Mexico: Briefing to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, 91st period of sessions, June 16–July 4, 2025), June 17, 2025, p. 2.

[1610] El Sol de México, "Urge ONU al gobierno mexicano la búsqueda con vida de padre buscador desaparecido en Irapuato" (UN urges the Mexican government to return searcher father alive after his disappearance in Irapuato), June 13, 2025; Infobae, "Secuestran a 'Don Panchito', padre buscador de Irapuato; asesinaron a su hijo frente a él" ("Don Pachito", searchers father from Irapuato kidnapped: his son was killed in front of him), June 11, 2025; El Universal, "Padre buscador José Francisco Arias, es 'levantado' por sujetos armados en Irapuato, Guanajuato; asesinan a su hijo" (Searcher father José Francisco Arias 'taken" by armed men in Irapuato, Guanajuato. His son, killed), June 10, 2025. Artículo 19, "Asesinan a madre buscadora Aida Karina Juárez Jacobo" (Searcher mother Aida Karina Juárez Jacobo killed), August 29, 2025; El País, "Asesinada la madre buscadora Aida Karina Juárez Jacobo tras ser secuestrada en Zacatecas" (Searcher mother Aida Karina Juárez Jacobo killed after being kidnapped in Zacatecas), August 29, 2025; El Universal, "Encuentran sin vida a madre buscadora; fue secuestrada el martes" (Searcher mother found dead: she had been kidnapped on Tuesday), August 29, 2025.

[1611] IM Defensoras, "México: Asesinan a la defensora trans Katia Daniela Medina Rafael en Ciudad Guzmán" (Mexico: Trans defender Katia Daniela Medina Rafael killed in Ciudad Guzmán), Jalisco, August 12, 2025; Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in Mexico (ONU-DH) [@ONU-DH México], (August 18, 2025), "Lamentamos profundamente el asesinato de la defensora trans Katia Daniela Medina Rafael, directora del Colectivo Trans Zapotlán, cuyo cuerpo fue localizado el 9 de agosto en Zapotlán el Grande, #Jalisco. Recordamos la importancia de una investigación pronta y eficaz que considere su labor de defensa de los #DerechosHumanos y permita sancionar a todos los responsables. Expresamos nuestras más sinceras condolencias a su familia y amistades" (We deeply regret the murder of trans defender Katia Daniela Medina Rafael, director of the Zapotlán Trans Collective, whose body was found on August 9 in Zapotlán El Grande, #Jalisco. We recall the importance of a swift, effective investigation that considers her work defending #HumanRights and leads to the punishment of those responsible. We express our deepest condolences to her family and friends), [X post], X, https://x.com/ONUDHmexico/status/1957612060788883903; Latinus, "ONU-DH pide investigar el asesinato de Katia Medina, defensora de los derechos trans en Jalisco" (ONU-DH calls for an investigation into the murder of Katia Medina, trans rights defender from Jalisco), August 18, 2025.

year,[1612] as well as the murder of a trade union leader.[1613] Additionally, the organization Justicia Afirmativa denounced the arrest of a cultural activist, which the organization labeled as arbitrary.[1614]

721. In relation to the Mechanism for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders and Journalists, information provided by the civil society showed that, as of March 2025, a total of 2,011 beneficiaries had been registered.[1615] Furthermore, persistent challenges in its functioning were highlighted, especially with regards to enrollment requests, inter-agency coordination and measure implementation. The civil society pointed out that from January 2023 to July 2025, only 116 out of 361 requests submitted by defenders at risk were admitted (with 67.9 percent being rejected), while just 136 out of 246 requests filed by journalists were approved (with 44.7 percent being rejected).[1616] Information was also received that women searching for disappeared persons were not included in the mechanism because their work as human rights defenders was not acknowledged.[1617]

722. Finally, regarding human trafficking, the State reported that activities were carried out to create coordination mechanisms among federal, public security and justice prosecution authorities to organize joint investigations in the areas of tourism, transport, and night entertainment, as well as strengthen the institutional capacity of 786 public officials in terms of early detection, chain of custody with a victim-based approach, and criminal analysis.[1618] An initiative seeking to amend the Migration Law to prevent human trafficking, among other purposes, stands out.[1619] Likewise, the Commission takes note of the launch of prevention campaigns tailored for different types of audiences.[1620]

XXIII. PANAMA

- General considerations

723. As it relates to progress, the Commission welcomes the implementation by the Republic of Panama (hereinafter, "Panama") of the National Plan to Reduce Overcrowding at Prisons, whose purpose is to bring down the number of incarcerated persons. The Commission also highlights the legislative, preventive and protection measures taken to avoid gender-based violence, such as harsher punishments for rape and other [1612] La Jornada, "En 10 meses hubo dos allanamientos a casas de nuestros integrantes: Frayba" (Two raids on our members' houses in 10 months: Frayba Center), July 25, 2025; Resumen Latinoamericano, "México. Centro Frayba: mensaje del allanamiento" (Mexico. Frayba Center: Message from the raid), July 29, 2025; OSC Space, "Espacio OSC exige garantías de protección para directora del Frayba tras allanamiento" (OSC Space demands protection guarantees in favor of Frayba director after raid), July 25, 2025; UN Human Rights Mexico, "ONU-DH condena los asesinatos del periodista Calletano de Jesús en Edomex y del defensor Sergio Cruz en Puebla" (ONU-DH condemns the murders of reporter Calletano de Jesus in Edomex and defender Sergio Cruz in Puebla), January 20, 2025.

[1613] Infobae, "Cronología del asesinato de Bernardo Bravo Manríquez, líder limonero" (Chronology of the murder of leading lemon producer Bernardo Bravo Manríquez), October 22, 2025.

[1614] Justicia Afirmativa, Press Release, "Sobre la detención arbitraria, desaparición temporal y judicialización del activista cultural y ambiental Isaac Benjamín Cárdenas Valdez" (On the arbitrary detention, temporary disappearance and criminalization of cultural and environmental activist Isaac Benjamín Cárdenas Valdez), November 20, 2025.

[1615] Espacio OSC para la protección de personas defensoras y periodistas, Violencia y discriminación contra mujeres defensoras de derechos humanos y periodistas en México. Informe para el 91° período de sesiones del Comité de la CEDAW (Violence and discrimination against human rights women defenders and journalists in Mexico, Report for the 91st period of sessions of the CEDAW), June 19, 2025.

[1616] Espacio OSC para la protección de personas defensoras y periodistas, "Boletín: La deuda del Estado mexicano con las personas defensoras de derechos humanos: el incumplimiento de las obligaciones estatales a más de cuatro años de la Sentencia de la Corte IDH en el Caso Digna Ochoa" (Bulletin. The Mexican State debt to human rights defenders: breach of state obligations four years after the IAHR Court judgment in the Digna Ochoa case), September 3, 2025.

[1617] Amnesty International, México: informe al Comité para la Eliminación de la Discriminación contra la Mujer 91º período de sesiones, 16 de junio al 4 de julio de 2025 (Mexico: Briefing to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women), 91st period of sessions, June 16–July 4, 2025), June 17, 2025, p. 5.

[1618] Report by the Mexican State, Chapter IV.A, September 15, 2025.

[1619] Government of Mexico, "Iniciativa que reforma los artículos 81, 97 y 98 y adiciona un párrafo tercero al artículo 97 de la Ley de Migración" (Initiative to amend Articles 81, 97 and 98, and add a third paragraph to Article 97 of the Migration Law), March 5, 2025.

[1620] Government of Mexico, "México en marcha con la iniciativa de sensibilización sobre la Trata de Personas de CVSA" (Mexico moves forward with initiative led by the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance to raise awareness about human trafficking), March 17, 2025; United Nations, "UNODC lanza campaña para prevenir la trata de personas en comunidades indígenas y afromexicanas" (UNODC launches campaign to prevent human trafficking in indigenous and African-Mexican communities), August 8, 2025.

crimes related to sexual violence; the incorporation of certain digital crimes; the launch of a project to reinforce primary care in connection with maternal, sexual and reproductive health; and violence prevention through community engagement in the region of Darién and the Emberá Wounaan community.

724. As it relates to challenges, since April, Panama experienced a period of protests and social unrest after the adoption of Law No. 462, which amended the Social Security Fund. In response, the executive branch declared a state of emergency in the province of Bocas del Toro from June 20 through 29, during which abuses in the use of force and arbitrary detentions were denounced, especially those targeting indigenous groups. Additionally, the Commission notes the challenges faced by persons deported from the United States.

725. The State did not respond to the request for information to prepare this chapter.

- Specific issues

726. Concerning democratic institutionality and citizen security, the Commission takes note of a period of social turmoil and protests related to Law No. 462, which modified the Social Security Fund, followed by a declaration of the stage of emergency in the province of Bocas del Toro between June 20 and 29.[1621] The executive branch took this measure because public roads had been blocked in the province, upon breach of agreements undertaken between demonstrators and state authorities, and due to the "criminal and urban terrorist attacks" committed on June 19. During the early days of the state of emergency, habeas corpus remedies were formally suspended. Consequently, the Commission reminded the State that all guarantees and judicial protections had to be safeguarded for everyone and under any circumstance in relation to the deprivation of liberty, including a state of emergency.

727. The Commission also notes the massive deployment of security agents and the arrest of at least 376 people, in addition to reports of human rights violations during operations, which especially affected indigenous peoples.[1622] Indigenous protests were rooted not only in their rejection of the social security reform, but also in the lack of prior, free and informed consultation about extraction projects in their territories.[1623] These events mirror the persistence of structural conflicts over land and natural resources.[1624]

[1621] IACHR, Press Release No. 138/25, IACHR Calls for Continued Dialogue and the respect for rights in the face of Social Conflict and State of Emergency in Panama, July 11, 2025; Cabinet Council, Cabinet Decree No. 27, which declares the state of emergency across the province of Bocas del Toro in the Republic of Panama and temporarily suspends the effects of Articles 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, 29, 37, and 38 of the Political Constitution of the Republic of Panama, as modified by the 1978 Amendment Acts, the 1983 Constitutional Act, Legislative Acts No. 1 of 1993 and No. 2 of 1994, and Legislative Act No. 1 of 2004, June 20, 2025; Ministry of the Presidency, "Extienden cinco días más el estado de urgencia en Bocas del Toro, y se cuadruplica la suma límite en contrataciones y compras para la recuperación de la provincial" (State of emergency renewed for five additional days in Bocas del Toro. Maximum contracting and procurement amounts quadrupled to regain control over the province), June 24, 2025; Republic of Panama, Diplomatic Note No. NV-PANA-OEA-2-257, June 26, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1622] Office of the Ombudsperson, "Nota de Prensa. Defensoría expone Informe preliminar de la situación de derechos humanos en los actos de violencia y Estado de Urgencia en Bocas del Toro" (Press Release: Office of the Ombudsperson shares preliminary report on the situation of human rights amid acts of violence and the state of emergency in Bocas del Toro), July 3, 2025; La Estrella de Panamá, "Defensor del Pueblo: 'ranitas, rapados de cabello y torturas', el balance de las protestas (Ombudsman: "Frog lifts, heads shaved, and torture: the balance of the protests), July 12, 2025; DW, "Panamá reporta más de 300 detenidos en violentas protestas" (Panama reports over 300 detainees in violent protests), June 24, 2025; TRT Español, "¿Qué pasa en Panamá con la provincia Bocas del Toro y por qué se extiende el 'estado de urgencia'?" (What is going on in Panama's Bocas del Toro province and why is the "state of emergency" extended?), June 25, 2025; Anred, "Panamá impone silencio: denuncias de represión, tortura y censura en Bocas del Toro" (Panama imposes silence: Reports of repression, torture and censorship in Bocas del Toro), July 1, 2025; Movement for the Defense of Territories and Ecosystems in Bocas del Toro (MODETEAB), Center for International Environment Law (CIEL), "Pronunciamiento Urgente: Violencia policial ejercida contra comunidades indígenas en Panamá deja a por lo menos dos personas Ngäbe fallecidas y siete personas desaparecidas" (Urgent statement: Police violence against indigenous communities in Panama leaves at least two Ngäbe people dead and seven people disappeared), July 8, 2025. On IACHR's files; MODETEAB, CIEL, "Urgent Pronouncement: MODETEAB Condemns Repression against Indigenous Communities Amid Ongoing Social Mobilization in Panama," June 3, 2025. On IACHR's files; La Estrella de Panamá, "Organizaciones exigen comisión independiente para investigar abusos en Bocas del Toro y Darién" (Organizations demand an independent commission investigate abuse in Bocas del Toro and Darién), July 11, 2025.

[1623] Office of the Ombudsperson, Republic of Panama, "Defensoría expone Informe preliminar de la situación de derechos humanos en los actos de violencia y Estado de Urgencia en Bocas del Toro" (Office of the Ombudsperson shares preliminary report on the situation of human rights amid acts of violence and the state of emergency in Bocas del Toro), July 3, 2025.

[1624] IACHR, Press Release No. 138/25, IACHR Calls for Continued Dialogue and the Respect for Rights in the Face of Social Conflict and State of Emergency in Panama, July 11, 2025.

Several indigenous organizations reported evictions, arbitrary arrests, physical assault and threats against leaders and protesters, in particular in the Arimae community, where law enforcement agents took violent action. The Commission also received information about several negative impacts on the Ngäbe-Buglé, Guna Yala and Arimae communities, as a result of an excessive use of force and the suspension of basic rights during the repression of protests. At a hearing conducted by the Commission in November, participating organizations reiterated to the Commission both their reports of an abusive use of force and the structural deficiencies in prior, free and informed consultation processes, as well as in the implementation of rules and decisions related to territorial recognition.[1625] According to the Office of the Ombudsperson, out of the 186 persons deprived of liberty who were interviewed by such office in Bocas del Toro, 104 accounts revealed typical abuses, such as: arbitrary arrest (92 people), excessive use of force, punches, prolonged cuffing, tear-gas spraying (101 people), cruel and inhuman treatment (99 people), and coercion to induce a confession (26 people). Out of these persons, 99 were identified as members of the Ngäbe Buglé people.[1626]

728. In relation to disturbances and the state of emergency, the Commission also expressed its concern over the evidence gathered by the National Mechanism to Prevent Torture related to the arrest and transfer of individuals to prisons without an order issued by a competent authority, as well as transfers to different geographic areas without the knowledge of detainees' relatives and, presumably, their defense counsel. Such mechanism also featured an allegedly excessive use of force during arrests, transfers and prison entries, the absence of medical care, as well as possible torture and ill-treatment at the Changuinola Police station, even against women, reportedly including threats of sexual abuse and other types of ill-treatment, such as sleep, food, water and restroom deprivation.[1627]

729. In this regard, at a public hearing, the Panamanian State claimed that the use of force was progressive and protocol–compliant.[1628] The State expressed its willingness to look into any reports on an excessive use of force or arbitrary detention, and reiterated its commitment to accountability and the respect for human rights.[1629] Furthermore, the Commission took note of other measures taken, such as the creation of dialogue channels with indigenous peoples and the passing of Law No. 471 on June 16, 2025, which provides for a special labor and social security regime for workers at banana production companies and independent banana producers.[1630]

730. Regarding the rights of human rights defenders, the Commission has learned about the commencement of criminal investigations and the issuance of arrest warrants against the Single Trade Union of Workers in Construction and Similar Industries (SUNTRACS), as possible retaliation for the role played by SUNTRACS during protests.[1631] In this regard, in May, the Office of the Public Prosecutor, together with the

[1625] IACHR, thematic hearing "Panama: Situation of Indigenous Territories," 194th regular period of sessions, Miami, United States of America, November 19, 2025.

[1626] Office of the Ombudsperson, Republic of Panama, "Defensoría expone Informe preliminar de la situación de derechos humanos en los actos de violencia y Estado de Urgencia en Bocas del Toro" (Office of the Ombudsperson shares preliminary report on human rights situation amid acts of violence and the state of emergency in Bocas del Toro), July 3, 2025.

[1627] National Mechanism to Prevent Torture, Preliminary Mission Report on Detainees in the Provinces of Chiriquí and Veraguas Following Disturbances and Declaration of State of Emergency in the Province of Bocas del Toro, received by the IACHR via email, July 9, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1628] IACHR, thematic hearing "Panama: Situation of Indigenous Territories," 194th regular period of sessions, Miami, United States of America, November 19, 2025.

[1629] Republic of Panama, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Permanent Mission of Panama to the OAS, IACHR Press Release, with changes and comments (003), July 9, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1630] IACHR, thematic hearing "Panama: Situation of Indigenous Territories," 194th regular period of sessions, Miami, United States of America, November 19, 2025; Republic of Panama, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Permanent Mission of Panama to the OAS, IACHR Panama Press Release, with changes and comments (003), July 9, 2025. On IACHR's files; National Assembly, Law No. 471, which sets forth a special system for banana production companies and independent banana producers, June 16, 2025.

[1631] SWI, "Detienen a un histórico dirigente sindical en Panamá" (Historic trade union leader arrested in Panama), May 23, 2025; TeleSur, "Suntracs denuncia arresto arbitrario de dirigentes en medio de huelga nacional en Panamá" (Suntracs trade union denounces arbitrary arrest of union leaders amid national strike in Panama), May 12, 2025; DW, "Masiva protesta en Panamá contra detención de sindicalistas" (Massive protest across Panama against arrest of union leaders), May 24, 2025; AP News, "Emiten órdenes de detención contra líderes sindicales de Panamá, ante protestas contra el gobierno" (Arrest warrants issued against Panamanian union leaders amid anti-government protests), May 21, 2025; La Estrella de Panamá, "Allanan a Suntracs: siguen procesos y ordenan captura de sus dirigentes" (Raids on Suntracs: Ongoing proceedings and arrest warrants issued against leaders), May 20, 2025.

National Police, carried out operations and issued arrest warrants against six SUNTRACS leaders for alleged financial crimes. In October, new arrests and raids targeting union leaders and their relatives were carried out.[1632] It also became known to the Commission that the Independent Panamanian Institute of Cooperatives cancelled the legal personality of the union's cooperative as a result of an audit that had begun in 2022. The union challenged the decision for being at odds with due process guarantees. It also questioned the measure's proportionality, purpose and opportunity.[1633]

731. As it relates to human rights institutions, the Commission takes note of the progress made with Bill No. 164, which modifies the law governing the Office of the Ombudsperson (Law No. 7 of 1997) to reinforce its autonomy and capacity to act against human rights violations.[1634]

732. Concerning the situation of persons in the context of human mobility, the Commission visited the country from February 10 to 13, 2025, to observe the transit of persons across Panama, based on a regional approach, and to gather information on the measures adopted to protect the human rights of persons in the context of human mobility. During such visit's follow-up, the Commission published its remarks, in which it highlighted that the Darién route across Colombia and Panama has become one of the main migration routes in the region, characterized by dense forests and difficult ground movement, which makes it hard to provide state and humanitarian assistance in the jungle.[1635]

733. However, since the change in administration in July 2024, Panama adopted new measures in the face of growing migration flows across the Darién, which significantly reduced the transit of people in the area.[1636] In this regard, the most up-to-date data provided by the National Migration Service shows that, as of late August 2025, a total of 2,941 individuals had travelled across the Darien region,[1637] which accounts for a 99-percent reduction in transit, compared to the same period in 2024.[1638]

734. Moreover, the State reported to the Commission that the increase in the number of persons going through the Darién region forced the State to take indispensable measures to assist them, ensuring a balance between the country's safety, orderly and safe transit, and access to humanitarian aid, despite the conditions of the jungle, which make it difficult to maintain state control over such territory. Additionally, the State emphasized the need to find joint solutions together with the other countries included in the migration route to ensure that the rights of the people moving across their territories are protected, under the shared responsibility principle.[1639]

[1632] Telesur, "Denuncian ofensiva represiva del Gobierno de Panamá contra líderes sindicales" (Reports of repressive action by the Panamanian government against union leaders), October 28, 2025; SUNTRACS, "SUNTRACS denuncia persecución judicial contra sus dirigentes y familiares" (SUNTRACS reports judicial persecution targeting union leaders and their relatives), October 29, 2025; La Estrella de Panamá, "Fiscalía informa sobre aprehensión de dos dirigentes del Suntracs durante un allanamiento" (Office of the Attorney General reports arrest of two Suntracs leaders during raid), October 27, 2025.

[1633] Office of the President, "Ipacoop cancela personería jurídica de la cooperativa Suntracs por violar normas financieras y de prevención de blanqueo de capitales" (Independent Panamanian Institute of Cooperatives cancels legal personality of Suntracs Cooperative for having breached financial and money laundering prevention rules), May 20, 2025; La Estrella de Panamá, "Suntracs defiende legalidad de su cooperativa y denuncia persecución política" (Sunracs defends legality of its cooperative and denounces political targeting), May 21, 2025.

[1634] National Assembly, "Nueva Ley del Ombudsman: Una Defensoría del Pueblo más protagonista en la defensa de los derechos ciudadanos" (New Ombudsperson Law: Office of the Ombudsperson with a more prominent role in the defense of citizen rights), April 21, 2025; National Assembly, "A segundo debate Proyecto que refuerza la independencia de la Defensoría del Pueblo" (A second debate on the bill that reinforces independence of the Office of the Ombudsperson), March 26, 2025.

[1635] IACHR, Press Release No. 066/25, IACHR Presents Observations from its Working Visit to Panama on Persons on Human Mobility, April 1, 2025. See also: IACHR, Observaciones visita de trabajo a Panamá (Observations from Working Visit to Panama), OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc.2/25, March 15, 2025.

[1636] Ibid.

[1637] National Migration Service, Republic of Panama, Estadísticas – Tránsito irregular por el Darién 2025 (Statistics – Irregular Transit Across Darién 2025), n/d., accessed on September 22, 2025.

[1638] Ibid.

[1639] IACHR, Press Release No. 066/25, IACHR Presents Observations from its Working Visit to Panama on Persons on Human Mobility, April 1, 2025. See also: IACHR, Observaciones visita de trabajo a Panamá (Observations from Working Visit to Panama), OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc.2/25, March 15, 2025.

735. Furthermore, the Commission notes that, on February 2, 2025, Panama decided to expand a joint program with the United States under which the Panamanian State accepted to receive migrants deported from the United States with the purpose of returning them to their countries of origin.[1640] Pursuant to this agreement, Panama received three flights with a total of 299 people of different nationalities.[1641] With regard to persons deported from the United States into Panama, the Commission received information that these individuals were allegedly detained in isolation under the armed surveillance of the Panamanian government. Their passports were reportedly confiscated by state authorities and they were allegedly prevented from getting legal counsel or communicating with civil society organizations. Also, they were reportedly denied the possibility of seeking asylum. These people were later sent to the San Vicente migration station, in the province of Darién.[1642]

736. Civil society organizations voiced their concerns, stating that, while these persons had temporary stay permits, they were not authorized to carry out paid activities in Panama, which made them dependent on the humanitarian aid provided by civil society organizations. Faced with this scenario, the Commission requested information from the State concerning the measures taken to provide humanitarian aid, ensure access to mental health services, as well as psychological and social support, allow them to conduct paid activities, ensure their right to seek asylum and protect them against forced return, among others.[1643]

737. In its response to the Commission, the State confirmed that, under the framework of the above-mentioned agreement, all people had been transferred to be assessed and included in a voluntary, assisted return program to their countries of origin. However, only 10 of them registered in said program, while 180 people decided to continue with their journey at their own expense. As of the date of the request for information, a total of 49 individuals remained in Panamanian territory, who had been granted a visa for humanitarian reasons for a period of six months. In addition, the State pointed out that civil society organizations and international agencies had provided shelter and food to people who "did not manage to promptly ensure their return to their countries of origin."[1644]

738. On the matter of human trafficking, the Commission takes note that, in April 2025, the Government, Justice and Constitutional Affairs Commission adopted a bill to amend the Procedural Criminal Code and measures, including action against human trafficking, aligning laws with the Constitution and international standards.[1645] Said bill sought to fight transnational organized crime and facilitate the seizure of illegal assets, even if transformed, regardless of their owner or owners' criminal liability. Moreover, the Commission notes that in February, under the auspice of the National Migration Service,[1646] a specialized training course on the adoption of Law No. 458 dated December 3, 2024, which amended Law No. 79 of 2011 on human trafficking and related activities, as well as the Criminal Code, was provided.

739. In relation to the rights of women, measures were taken to prevent and protect women against gender-based violence. In the legislative front, Law No. 474, which sets out harsher punishment for [1640] Library of Congress, United States of America, "Panama-United States: Agreement Reached on Joint Repatriation Program," March 13, 2025.

[1641] Republic of Panama, Diplomatic Note No. A.J - MIRE-2025-050213, Annex: Republic of Panama's Response Report, Situation of Persons in the Context of Human Mobility, July 8, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1642] IACHR, Press Release No. 066/25, IACHR Presents Observations from its Working Visit to Panama on Persons on Human Mobility, April 1, 2025. See also: IACHR, Observaciones visita de trabajo a Panamá (Observations from Working Visit to Panama), OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc.2/25, March 15, 2025.

[1643] IACHR, Letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), June 9, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1644] Republic of Panama, Diplomatic Note No. A.J - MIRE-2025-050213, Annex: Response Report by the Republic of Panama, Situation of Persons in the Context of Human Mobility, July 8, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1645] National Assembly, "Comisión de Gobierno aprueba tres iniciativas en primer debate" (Government commission approves three initiatives in first round of debate), April 30, 2025.

[1646] National Migration Service, "SNM realiza taller de formación especializada en el marco de la promulgación de la ley 458 del 3 de diciembre de 2024, sobre trata de personas y actividades conexas" (National Migration Service holds specialized workshop amid the passing of Law No. 458 of December 3, 2024, on human trafficking and related activities), February 20, 2025.

rape and other crimes related to sexual violence,[1647] and Law No. 478, which incorporates digital crimes, such as the dissemination of intimate images without consent, were enacted.[1648] Additionally, the Creciendo Seguras (Growing Safe) initiative, which focuses on the prevention of physical, psychological and sexual violence against girls and adolescents through training, was launched.[1649] Moreover, the Ministry of Health implemented a project called Reinforcement of Primary Care for Maternal, Sexual and Reproductive Health and Violence Prevention Through Community Engagement in the Darién Region and the Emberá Wounaan Community, whose purpose is to improve access to contraceptives, prenatal care, care during delivery and postnatal medical attention for women and adolescents in overlooked communities.[1650]

740. The Commission regrets the announcement on the discontinuity of the Ministry of Women, which will reportedly be downgraded to a Secretariat under the Ministry of Social Development. This represents a step backwards in the protection of women's rights.[1651] The announcement is framed in a context of persistent gender-based violence.[1652] According to data from the Office of the Public Prosecutor, between January and September 2025, 12 femicides were registered, with nine attempted femicides and 15 violent deaths of women.[1653] Furthermore, from January to August, 4,072 reports for crimes against sexual liberty and integrity were registered, with 10,272 reports on domestic violence[1654] and 303 reports on corruption of minors, commercial sexual exploitation and other crimes.[1655] Incidents of state violence against women and girls, especially indigenous and Afro-descendants, were also documented amid social protests in Bocas del Toro.[1656]

741. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, in a report prepared for the Periodic Universal Review (PUR) Fourth Cycle, Panamanian civil society organizations pointed to problems such as discrimination at state

[1647] National Assembly, "Ley 474 de 24 de junio de 2025 que modifica y adiciona artículos al Código Penal y al Código procesal penal" (Law No. 474 of June 24, 2025, to amend and add articles to the Criminal Code and the Procedural Criminal Code), June 24, 2025.

[1648] National Assembly, "Panameños cuentan con nueva ley internacional en materia penal y ciberdelincuencia" (Panamanians have a new international law on crimes and cybercrimes), June 8, 2025; Ministry of the Presidency, "Presidente Mulino sanciona leyes que fortalecen el marco legal contra la ciberdelincuencia" (President Mulino approves laws that reinforce the legal framework to fight cybercrimes), August 5, 2025.

[1649] Ministry of Women, "Lanzamiento del proyecto creciendo seguras" (Launch of the Creciendo Seguras [Growing Safe] Project), May 29, 2025.

[1650] Ministry of Health, "Minsa fortalece la atención primaria de salud para Darién y Comarca Emberá Wuounaan" (Ministry of Health strengthens primary healthcare for Darién and the Emberá Wuounaan community), April 29, 2025; Pan American Health Organization (PAHO)/World Health Organization (WHO), "Panamá fortalece la salud materno-infantil con capacitación a parteras tradicionales en comunidades de difícil acceso" (Panama reinforces maternal and infant care with training for traditional midwives in communities difficult to access), August 13, 2025.

[1651] Office of the Ombudsperson, "La Defensoría del Pueblo considera un retroceso el posible cierre del Ministerio de la Mujer" (The Office of the Ombudsperson believes that the potential closure of the Ministry of Women is a step backwards), July 9, 2025; OAS, MESECVI, Committee of Experts of the MESECVI Expresses Concern over the Imminent Risk of Discontinuity of the Ministry of Women in Panama, July 24, 2025.

[1652] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IVa, March 26, 2025, para. 664.

[1653] Office of the Public Prosecutor, Cantidad de víctimas de femicidios, tentativas y muertes violentas registrados a nivel nacional, por tipo, según mes (Number of Victims of Femicide, Attempted Femicide and Violent Deaths Registered at a National Level, by Type and Month), October 13, 2025.

[1654] Office of the Public Prosecutor, Cantidad de denuncias registradas por los delitos contra la libertad e integridad sexual, en el sistema penal acusatorio a nivel nacional, por mes, según delito específico (Number of Registered Reports of Crimes against Sexual Freedom and Integrity in the Prosecution Criminal System at a National Level, by Month and Crime Type), August 31, 2025; Office of the Public Prosecutor, Cantidad de denuncias registradas por los delitos contra el orden jurídico familiar y el estado civil, a nivel nacional, por mes, según tipo de delito (Number of Registered Reports of Crimes against the Family Legal Order and Marital Status, at the National Level, by Month and Crime Type), September 15, 2025.

[1655] Office of the Public Prosecutor, Cantidad de denuncias registradas por los delitos contra la libertad e integridad sexual, en el sistema penal acusatorio a nivel nacional, por mes, según delito específico (Number of Registered Reports of Crimes against Sexual Freedom and Integrity in the Prosecution Criminal System at a National Level, by Month and Crime Type), August 31, 2025; Human Rights Council, Summary of Stakeholders' Submissions on Panama, August 12, 2025, paras. 26–28.

[1656] Office of the Ombudsperson, "Defensoría expone Informe preliminar de la situación de derechos humanos en los actos de violencia y Estado de Urgencia en Bocas del Toro" (Office of the Ombudsperson shares preliminary report on the situation of human rights amid acts of violence and the state of emergency in Bocas del Toro), July 3, 2025; OAS, MESECVI, Committee of Experts of the MESECVI Expresses Concern over the Imminent Risk of Discontinuity of the Ministry of Women in Panama, July 24, 2025; UP informa, "La Crisis de Derechos Humanos en Bocas del Toro: Una Herida Abierta en Panamá" (The human rights crisis in Bocas del Toro: an open wound in Panama), October 1, 2025; La Estrella de Panamá, "Nuevo informe advierte de abusos durante estado de urgencia en Bocas del Toro" (New report warns against abuse during state of emergency in Bocas del Toro), September 30, 2025.

institutions; discriminatory practices in access to social security, employment and education; criminalization of LGBTIQ+ persons at state entities; barriers in access to justice; and the absence of legislation against discrimination. Additionally, they underscored the proliferation of hate speech, the lack of measures enabling legal recognition of gender identity for trans persons, and the absence of legal recognition and protection for same-sex couples and the rights of their families.[1657] The Commission has not learned of any progress made in the recognition of this population's rights.

742. In relation to the rights of children and adolescents, the Commission takes note of the training sessions conducted in June, addressed to 26 traditional midwives in the medical regions of Darién and the Emberá-Wounaan community, held by the Ministry of Health in collaboration with the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO) and the Spanish Agency of International Cooperation for Development.[1658] The purpose of this training opportunity was to strengthen traditional midwives' work since they play a paramount role in birth care in remote communities. According to PAHO information, these regions feature higher birth rates than the national average and face significant challenges such as higher infant mortality (17.3 out of 1,000 live births in Darién and 18.3 out of 1,000 live births in the Emberá-Wounaan community) compared to the national average (14.8 out of 1,000 live births).

743. Furthermore, according to UNICEF data published in late 2024, there was a 40-percent reduction in migrant or asylum-seeking children across the Darién region, going from 106,000 in 2023 down to 64,000 in 2024. Meanwhile, UNICEF also registered a 35-percent increase in the number of children and adolescents separated from their families or unaccompanied, going from 3,000 in 2023 up to 4,776 in 2024.[1659] Moreover, the Commission notes that, in August, the Ministry of the Environment published a joint report with UNICEF where it stated that one out of four children and adolescents in Panama live in places with high climate vulnerability, which impacts the enjoyment of rights, such as health, education and food, and exposes them to poverty and the need to mobilize.[1660]

744. On the matter of persons deprived of liberty, the Commission applauds the progress made with the National Plan to Reduce Overcrowding at Prisons, which was adopted in the second half of 2024 to bring down the number of incarcerated persons through the increase and speeding-up of court hearings.[1661] In early 2025, an inter-agency, multidisciplinary team performed a massive review of the files of persons deprived of liberty for classification and review of sentences, especially in the case of inmates who have served two-thirds of their sentence or who suffer from chronic disease.[1662] This led to the release of approximately 6,000 people on August 14.[1663] In addition, the Commission appreciates the implementation, on June 16, of the Plan Libertad (Freedom Plan), whose purpose is to have incarcerated people work on the upgrade of community

[1657] Iguales Foundation, LGBTI+ Litigants Network of the Americas, Sexual Rights Initiative (SRI), "Contribución presentada al consejo de derechos humanos para el cuarto ciclo del examen periódico universal (EPU) de Panamá" (Contribution submitted to the Human Rights Council for the Periodic Universal Review [PUR] Fourth Cycle of Panama), 2025.

[1658] PAHO/WHO, "Panamá fortalece la salud materno-infantil con capacitación a parteras tradicionales en comunidades de difícil acceso" (Panama reinforces maternal and infant care with training for traditional midwives in communities difficult to access), August 13, 2025.

[1659] UNICEF, "Crece el número de niños, niñas y adolescentes que transitan por Darién solos: UNICEF" (Growing number of children and adolescents who travel alone across the Darién region: UNICEF), December 18, 2024.

[1660] UNICEF, "Impacto de la crisis climática, ambiental y energética en el desarrollo y bienestar de las niñas, niños y adolescentes en Panamá" (Impact of the climate, environmental and energy crisis on the development and well-being of children and adolescents in Panama), August 20, 2025.

[1661] Ministry of the Interior, "Plan Nacional de Descongestión Penitenciaria avanza a paso redoblado" (National Plan to Reduce Overcrowding at Prisons moves forward), June 28, 2025; see also: Office of Public Relations of the Ministry of the Interior, "Edición 13 - Mingob con paso firme" (Issue No. 13 - Ministry of the Interior moves forward at a steady pace), July 2025.

[1662] Ministry of the Interior, General Directorate of the Penitentiary System, "Plan de descongestión penitenciaria avanza de manera positiva" (Plan to reduce prison overcrowding takes positive step forward), April 25, 2024; see also: "Avanza el Plan de Descongestión Penitenciaria" (Plan to reduce prison overcrowding moves forward), April 29, 2025.

[1663] Ministry of the Interior, Official Instagram Account, "Más de seis mil personas privadas de libertad fueron liberadas gracias al Plan de Descongestión Penitenciaria y a programas de resocialización" (Over 6,000 persons deprived of liberty released under the Plan to Reduce Prison Overcrowding and social reintegration programs), August 14, 2025.

space infrastructure.[1664] Moreover, the Commission notes the progress made in the construction of Las Esmeralda Women's Detention Center, which has been completed by 63 percent, and the Nueva Esperanza Penitentiary Center, where up to 5.72 percent of works have been completed.[1665]

745. Notwithstanding this, the Commission received information about reports of violations of the rights of persons deprived of liberty at the La Joya, La Joyita, and Mega Joya prison centers. According to inmates' relatives, those facilities present the following challenges: i) inhuman, unhealthy conditions due to overcrowded cells, broken restrooms and spaces without ventilation; ii) obstacles to access drinking water and hygiene products; iii) proliferation of infectious diseases, especially tuberculosis, with no medical protocols or adequate treatment in place; iv) deficient medical attention at Clínica de la Merced; and v) violation of the right to education, given that inmates face challenges when it comes to securing an authorization to participate in education programs.[1666]

746. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendants and the fight against racial discrimination, the Commission received information that the State took affirmative action in this regard, with municipal and national reach. The Office of the Ombudsperson held the 7th National African-Panamanian Conference to drive the implementation of the 2022–2030 Master Plan.[1667] Moreover, the Ministry of Education reported that it had updated a project to incorporate the Afro-descendant history, culture and contributions into the national curricula.[1668] In September 2025, the Ministry of Social Development and the UNFPA presented a demographic analysis based on the 2023 Census, which underscores the need for inclusion and equity policies targeted at Afro-descendant communities.[1669] Additionally, the Commission learned about initiatives led by civil society organizations as well as international agencies with a gender-based and intersectional focus in the country.[1670]

747. As it relates to challenges, organizations and the media pointed to persistent representation breaches and exclusion risks. In this regard, the Commission takes note of information concerning the absence of Afro-Panamanian people in key diplomatic offices. Analyses conducted by the civil society identified stereotypes and obstacles for Afro-descendant women and girls, as well as barriers to entrepreneur projects carried out by Afro-descendants.[1671]

748. Furthermore, challenges disproportionally affecting Afro-descendant urban communities persist, especially in Colón and San Miguelito.[1672] Civil society organizations reported that, in September 2025, [1664] Ministry of the Interior, "Panamá inicia una nueva era penitenciaria con el 'Plan Libertad'" (Panama enters a new prison era with the "Freedom Plan"), June 16, 2025; see also: "Representantes del PNUD destacan la labor del Plan Libertad con personas privadas de libertad en Panamá" (UNDP representatives highlight work done under the Freedom Plan with persons deprived of liberty in Panama), July 9, 2025.

[1665] Ministry of the Interior, "1 Año, haciendo que las cosas sucedan" (One year of getting things done), June 2025; see also: "Inicia construcción de moderno centro de rehabilitación femenino La Perla" (Construction of La Perla Modern Women's Rehabilitation Center begins), January 19, 2024.

[1666] Information provided to the IACHR by families of persons deprived of liberty. Received via email on June 30, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1667] State of Panama, Office of the Ombudsperson, "Defensoría fortalece la lucha por la equidad en el VII Encuentro Nacional Afropanameño" (Office of the Ombudsperson reinforces fight for equity at the 7th National African-Panamanian Conference), June 2, 2025.

[1668] State of Panama, Ministry of Education (MEDUCA), "Proyecto que incluye la cultura y los 'aportes de los 'afro' en el currículo educativo en Panamá" (Project to incorporate culture and "'Afro Contributions" into the education curricula in Panama), July 2, 2025.

[1669] State of Panama, Ministry of Social Development (MIDES), "UNFPA presenta Análisis Demográfico sobre la Población que define los retos y oportunidades para el desarrollo de Panamá" (UNFPA presents Demographic Population Analysis that defines challenges and opportunities for Panama's development), September 10, 2025.

[1670] UNFPA, Latin America and the Caribbean, "Voces que impulsan el cambio: Mujeres afrodescendientes de Panamá que luchan por la igualdad" (Voices driving change: Afro-Descendent women in Panama fighting for equality), July 25, 2025; Afroféminas, "Panamá destaca en un estudio sobre el afroemprendimiento en América Latina" (Panama stands out in a study on African entrepreneurship in Latin America), May 12, 2025.

[1671] La Verdad Panamá, "El Dato de La Verdad Panamá para hoy domingo 15 de junio de 2025" (Fact of the day by La Verdad Panamá on Sunday, June 15, 2025), June 15, 2025; Afroféminas, "Día de las Trenzas en Panamá como acto de resistencia" (Braids Day in Panama, an act of resistance), May 19, 2025.

[1672] National Statistics and Census Institute (INEC), "Población afrodescendiente de 10 y más años de edad en la República, por alfabetismo y sexo, según provincia, comarca indígena, distrito y corregimiento: Censos 2023" (Afro-descendant population aged 10 or above in the Republic, by level of literacy and sex, province, indigenous community, district and municipality: 2023 Census), February 6, 2024.

homicides soared in Colón as a result of gang-related disputes,[1673] while local data portrays a scenario of high labor informality in San Miguelito, with over 240 street stalls registered in 2025.[1674] The Commission also notes the tuberculosis health alerts in Colón, for which the State ordered contention and treatment measures.[1675]

749. Concerning the rights of older persons, the media reported that, between January and April 2025, the Office of the Public Prosecutor recorded 288 reports on ill-treatment to older persons, which is roughly equivalent to one case every 10 hours.[1676] Moreover, the Ministry of Social Development informed about a national supervision and training tour at Comprehensive Healthcare Centers for Older Persons operating in the country aimed at reinforcing the medical attention and care these organizations provide to the elderly at a national level.[1677]

750. In terms of social security, in March 2025, legislation to amend social security laws was passed,[1678] introducing reforms to the retirement system to avoid its financial collapse. However, this reform faced challenges, which included protests demanding that inter-generational solidarity be disregarded and replaced with an individual account scheme.[1679]

751. Finally, the official discount list for health services, medication and private hospitals, among others, in favor of retirees and pensioners was published under the legal framework in force, which constitutes a good practice for community integration and dignified aging.[1680]

752. Regarding processes of memory, truth and justice, the Commission appreciates the submission to the National Assembly of a bill that seeks to declare June 9 as a civic day to pay tribute to the victims of the military dictatorship in Panama.[1681] This initiative, related to the commitment undertaken under a friendly settlement agreement, also includes measures to promote a historical, educational memory regarding that period with a human rights perspective.[1682]

753. In relation to the rights of persons with disabilities, the State moved forward with the adoption of the Program on Unpaid Care Services, Disability and a Gender-Based Transforming Approach[1683] and the 2025–2029 National Strategic Disability Plan.[1684] Moreover, while the Electoral Tribunal implemented

[1673] TVN, "Colón supera los 70 homicidios en 2025: pandillas reavivan guerra por microtráfico" (Over 70 homicides in Colón during 2025: Gangs reignite war over microtrafficking), September 14, 2025.

[1674] La Prensa, "San Miguelito enfrenta expansión del comercio informal, hay más de 240 puestos" (San Miguelito faces expansion of informal trade with over 240 street stalls), June 5, 2025.

[1675] La Prensa, "Cepa de tuberculosis de alta capacidad de transmisión circula en Colón" (Highly contagious tuberculosis strain circulates in Colón), August 15, 2025.

[1676] El Siglo, "Cada 10 horas un adulto mayor es maltratado en Panamá" (An older person is ill-treated every 10 hours in Panama), June 9, 2025.

[1677] MIDES, "MIDES realiza gira de supervisión y capacitación a todos los Centros de Atención Integral para Personas Mayores que operan en el país" (MIDES holds supervision and training tour at Comprehensive Healthcare Centers for Older Persons across the country), February 24, 2025.

[1678] Infobae, "El presidente de Panamá sanciona la ley para reformar la seguridad social" (Panama President approves law to reform social security system), March 18, 2025.

[1679] Prensa Latina, "Nuevo movimiento en Panamá rechaza ley sobre seguro social" (New movement in Panama rejects social security law), January 7, 2025; France 24, "Protestas masivas en Panamá en contra del Gobierno de Mulino: ¿qué exigen los manifestantes?" (Massive protests across Panama against Mulino's administration: What do protesters want?), May 16, 2025; TeleSur, "¿Por qué protestan los pueblos indígenas contra la ley 462?" (Why are indigenous people protesting against Law No. 462?), June 11, 2025.

[1680] Telemetro, "¡Noticia importante para los jubilados y pensionados! Lista oficial de descuentos que reciben en todo el país" (Breaking news for retirees and pensioners! Official list of discounts across the country), May 8, 2025.

[1681] La Prensa, "Proponen declarar el 9 de junio como Día de las Víctimas de la Dictadura Militar en Panamá" (June 9 proposed as Military Dictatorship Victims' Day in Panama), September 18, 2025; Public, "Cancillería respalda creación de Día Cívico de Reflexión por las víctimas de la dictadura" (Ministry of Foreign Affairs backs creation of a civic day to pay tribute to dictatorship's victims), October 27, 2025.

[1682] IACHR, Press Release No. 156/2019, IACHR Applauds the Signing of the Friendly Settlement Agreement for Case 13.017 A - Relatives of Victims of the Military Dictatorship in Panama, June 24, 2019.

[1683] UNDP, "Panamá lanza programa sobre cuidados con apoyo del PNUD" (Panama launches care program with UNDP support), April 22, 2025.

[1684] MIDES, "Junta Directiva del SENADIS presenta pen 2025-2029 y aprueba anteproyecto del presupuesto 2026" (Board of the National Disability Secretariat [SENADIS] presents the 2025–2029 Strategic National Disability Plan and approves 2026 Budget Bill), May 7, 2025.

measures such as early online voting, the sign language interpretation system and the creation of a Voting Accessibility Commission,[1685] civil society organizations have denounced deficiencies. Reportedly, many voting centers fail to meet international accessibility standards, the ballots are allegedly not adapted to the Braille system, and no adequate transition has been made towards online voting to assist persons with sensory disabilities.[1686]

XXIV. PARAGUAY

- General considerations

754. In 2025, advances were recorded in the Republic of Paraguay (hereinafter, "Paraguay") in terms of democratic institutionality and the strengthening of human rights frameworks and public policies, including the continuity of the executive branch's Human Rights Network and the Recommendation Monitoring System (SIMORE) Plus, as well as legislative initiatives to create a national protection mechanism for journalists and human rights defenders.

755. However, challenges persisted in terms of corruption, impunity, judicial independence and civic space. Protests against corruption, along with acts of police repression were noted, while a law restricting access to public information and the work of civil society organizations was passed.

756. On September 8, 2025, the State submitted its response to the Commission's request for information to prepare this chapter.[1687]

- Specific issues

757. As for democratic institutionality, on February 5, 2025, the Superior Tribunal of Electoral Justice (TSJE) adopted, by means of Resolution No. 78/2025, the schedule for the municipal elections for the 2026-2031 period, thus initiating preparations for the local electoral process.[1688] Additionally, the Congress advanced the analysis of a bill to establish a national protection mechanism for journalists and human rights defenders. This responds to international obligations and the judgment in the Leguizamón case.[1689]

758. In 2025, Law No. 7363/24 entered into force and civil society organizations (CSOs) expressed their concern about the risk it posed regarding the persecution of entities deemed critical of the government, with potential impacts on freedom of association and pluralism.[1690] According to these organizations, the law introduces bureaucratic obstacles to the operation of CSOs, with greater impact on smaller ones, and establishes state oversight mechanisms over their main activities.[1691] According to the Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA), this law constitutes one of the most restrictive measures on civic space in the Americas in 2025.[1692] At the same time, the Congress processed a bill on personal data protection which could limit access

[1685] TVN, "Tribunal Electoral refuerza inclusión de personas con discapacidad" (Electoral Tribunal reinforces inclusion of persons with disabilities), July 4, 2025; Verificado Contigo, "Estudio de observación de la accesibilidad al voto en las elecciones de mayo de 2024" (Observation study on voting accessibility in May 2024 elections), August 19, 2025.

[1686] Panamá América, "Accesibilidad para personas con discapacidad: reto pendiente del sistema electoral" (Accessibility for persons with disabilities: An outstanding challenge of the electoral system), May 5, 2025.

[1687] Republic of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/No. 196/205 in response to the request for information of the IACHR for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, sent on September 8, 2025. On IACHR´s files.

[1688] I*bid.*; La Nación, "TSJE lanza calendario electoral para las Municipales 2026" (TSJE launches electoral schedule for the 2026 municipal elections), July 15, 2025.

[1689] ABC Color, "Avanza análisis del proyecto de ley de protección a periodistas" (Analysis on the bill to protect journalist moves forward), October 10, 2025.

[1690] Freedom House, Paraguay: Freedom in the World 2025 Country Report, 2025; CIVICUS Monitor, "President enacts controversial law restricting civil society: land rights protesters face threats," May 21, 2025.

[1691] IACHR, Meeting with civil society organizations of Paraguay, November 6, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1692] WOLA, "Curtailing civic space: Tightening restrictions on civil society in the Americas," June 30, 2025.

to public information.[1693] All this occurred in a backdrop of protests against corruption and impunity, as well as episodes of police repression during the exercise of demonstrators' right to protest.[1694]

759. In the area of human rights institutions, the continuity of the executive branch's Human Rights Network was reported, which has been operating since 2009 under the coordination of the Ministry of Justice. Comprising 20 institutions, the network seeks to coordinate policies, plans and programs. As a result of the greater visibility that human rights had, participating institutions created specific human rights units. On December 2, 2024, the IV Action Plan of the Network was adopted (with technical support from the OHCHR), with the aim of continuing previous plans.[1695] The Commission takes note of the presentation of the Network's 2024–2025 Management Report, which highlights the continuity of plans, as well as training and coordination efforts with OHCHR and the UNDP within the SIMORE Plus program.[1696]

760. As for the SIMORE Plus, the State reported meetings and training sessions held in 2025 aimed at focal points, with a total of 294 people trained. Moreover, it was further reported that a course on international recommendations and observations from UN committees was taught to officials of the Ministry of Justice so as to strengthen capacities and mainstream the human rights approach in institutional management.[1697]

761. In 2025, the Office of the Ombudsperson regained its "A" accreditation from the Global Alliance of National Human Rights Institutions (GANHRI), which formally reinforces its status as a national human rights institution in accordance with the Paris Principles;[1698] resource challenges nevertheless persisted.[1699] The Commission commends the issuance of Decree No. 4061 by the Ministry of the Interior, which creates the Search System for Disappeared Persons and establishes the National Commission for Search and Location of Persons, thus enabling immediate action while a bill on the matter is being processed.[1700]

762. With respect to access to justice and judicial independence, in 2025 the Supreme Court of Justice approved the 2026–2030 Institutional Strategic Plan to strengthen judicial institutionality, access to justice with a human rights approach and conventionality control. The Court also conducted training on the [1693] ABC Color, "Detallan cómo los cambios a ley de protección de datos afectarían a la transparencia" (Details on how changes to data protection law would affect transparency), October 14, 2025; Última Hora, "Datos Personales: Insisten en que se obstaculiza acceso a información" (Personal Data Law: Claims about the law obstructing information persist), October 19, 2025.

[1694] National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture (MNP), "El MNP condena uso abusivo de la fuerza pública durante manifestaciones en Asunción y exhorta al respeto de los derechos humanos" (The MNP condemns the abusive use of public force during demonstrations in Asunción and urges respect for human rights), September 29, 2025; ABC Color, "Marcha 'Gen Z': Policía confirma más de 30 detenidos y fin de la protesta" ("Gen Z" March: The Police confirms more than 30 detainees and end of the protest), September 29, 2025; ABC Color, "Video: Fiscalía explica liberación de detenidos tras marcha de la 'Generación Z'" (Video: Office of the Attorney General explains release of detainees following 'Generation Z' march), September 30, 2025; NODAL, "Paraguay: Movimientos sociales, campesinos y partidos opositores inician semana de protestas contra la corrupción y la impunidad" (Paraguay: Social movements, peasants and opposition parties begin week of protests against corruption and impunity), March 25, 2025.

[1695] Republic of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025 in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), Note No. 355-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, September 8, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1696] Ministry of Justice, "Red de Derechos Humanos del Poder Ejecutivo presentó informe de gestión 2024–2025" (Human Rights Network of the executive branch presented the 2024–2025 management report), October 7, 2025.

[1697] Republic of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025 in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), Note No. 355-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, September 8, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1698] State of Paraguay, Office of the Ombudsperson, "Oficialmente, el día de hoy, Paraguay recupera la Categoría A en Derechos Humanos" (Paraguay officially recovers Category A status in human rights today), March 11, 2025.

[1699] ABC Color, "Paraguay recuperó la categoría 'A' en derechos humanos" (Paraguay recovers Category A status in human rights), March 11, 2025; Última Hora, "Rafael Ávila: 'Vamos por buen camino' tras recuperar categoría A en DDHH" (Rafael Ávila: "We are on the right path" after recovering A category status in human rights), March 23, 2025.

[1700] State of Paraguay, Ministry of the Interior, Decree No. 4061, which regulates Article 6, incision 10 and Article 235, incision 5, of Law No. 7280/2024 "on reform and modernization of the National Police," creates the National System for the Search and Location of Disappeared Persons and adopts regulations for its implementation, June 17, 2025; Última hora, "Ejecutivo crea el sistema de búsqueda de personas desaparecidas sin esperar al Congreso" (The executive branch creates disappeared persons search system without waiting for Congress), June 18, 2025; Agencia de Información Paraguaya, "Senado aprueba la creación del Registro Nacional de Personas Desaparecidas" (Senate approves creation of National Registry of Disappeared Persons), September 18, 2025.

application of the 100 Brasilia Rules.[1701] In addition, the Office of the Public Prosecutor continued its Guidelines on Human Rights and Ethnic Rights, along with specialized programs on human trafficking, sexual exploitation, adolescents in conflict with the law, witness protection, victim care and mediation.[1702] Furthermore, the Office of the Public Defender provided 170,790 legal consultations, assisted 119,298 vulnerable people and strengthened services for women and indigenous people.[1703] With regard to intercultural inclusion, the creation of the National Network for the Rights of Indigenous Peoples was promoted and the Directorate of Defense of the Indigenous Peoples was established, in collaboration with experts in indigenous culture, which assisted 964 people.

763. In terms of challenges, in the legislative branch a bill seeking to reinstate secret voting in the Supreme Court, which reportedly reverses nominal and public vote and limits judicial transparency, advanced.[1704] Incidents of intimidation and political pressure on judges[1705] were also recorded, while the 2025 Report of Freedom House maintained low scores on judicial independence and due process.[1706] At the same time, the procedural fraud scheme known as the "Mafia de los Pagarés" (promissory notes fraud scheme), by means of which false debts were enforced with the support of judicial officials, was uncovered.[1707] The Supreme Court, the Office of the Public Prosecutor, the Congress and Office of the Public Defender adopted intervention, investigation and victim assistance measures.[1708]

764. As for citizen security, the State reported that it continues to use the Manual on the Use of Force and Firearms and the Manual of Obligations and Police Procedures Guide in training sessions delivered with the support of the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Directorate of Human Rights of the Ministry of the Interior. This Directorate also provided support for eviction procedures involving vulnerable groups.[1709] Additionally, the Supreme Court issued a decision upholding the conviction of the former anti-drug prosecutor in the Minotauro case,[1710] along with advances in the capture and conviction of members of criminal organizations, including one of the leaders of the Rotela Clan[1711] and former prison authorities linked to drug trafficking.[1712]

765. However, levels of violence and impunity remain high amid allegations of state corruption. Networks of arms trafficking persist, as do murders and attacks against journalists, especially in border

[1701] Republic of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025 in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), Note No. 355-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, September 8, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1702] Ibid.

[1703] Ibid.

[1704] ABC Color, "Golpe a la transparencia: cartistas y aliados buscan blindar a ministros de la Corte y volver al voto secreto" (Blow to transparency: Cartes supporters and allies seek to shield Supreme Court justices and return to secret voting), October 15, 2025; Última Hora, "Proponen volver al voto secreto de ministros de CSJ y critican maniobra" (Proposal to return to secret voting for Supreme Court justices amid criticism), October 16, 2025.

[1705] ABC Color, "Intentaron obtener datos sobre jueza de causas emblemáticas" (Attempt to obtain data on judge in emblematic cases), October 4, 2025; State of Paraguay, Senate of the Republic, "Senado presentará denuncia ante el JEM contra tres jueces" (Senate to file complaint before Jury for the Prosecution of Magistrates [JEM] against three judges), March 27, 2025.

[1706] Freedom House, Paraguay: Freedom in the World 2025 Country Report, February 26, 2025.

[1707] ABC Color, "Mafia de los pagarés: casi una veintena de remates en juicios espurios" ("Mafia de los pagarés": Nearly twenty auctions in spurious proceedings), October 1, 2025.

[1708] State of Paraguay, Senate of the Republic, "Comisión analiza impacto de la denominada 'mafia de pagarés'" (Commission analyzes impact of so-called "Mafia de los pagarés"), April 8, 2025; Office of the Ombudsperson, "Defensor del Pueblo presentó 129 casos de víctimas de pagarés fraguados a la Defensa Pública" (Ombudsperson submits 129 cases of victims of forged promissory notes to the Office of the Public Defender), April 8, 2025; Office of the Public Prosecutor, "Caso 'Mafia de los pagarés': Fiscalía gestionó el traspaso de expedientes a la Corte Suprema de Justicia" ("Mafia de los pagarés" case: Office of the Attorney General arranges transfer of case files to the Supreme Court of Justice), January 31, 2025.

[1709] Republic of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025 in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), Note No. 355-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, September 8, 2025. On IACHR's files.

[1710] ABC Color, "Minotauro: Corte declara inadmisible recurso del exfiscal Hugo Volpe" (Minotauro: The Supreme Court declares former prosecutor Hugo Volpe's appeal inadmissible), April 21, 2025.

[1711] Última Hora, "Condenan a Armando Javier Rotela por traficar drogas desde Tacumbú" (Armando Javier Rotela convicted for drug trafficking from Tacumbú), March 7, 2025.

[1712] ABC Color, "Corrupción en la cárcel: condenan a 18 años y 9 meses de prisión a exdirector y excoordinador" (Corruption in prison: former director and former coordinator sentenced to 18 years and 9 months in prison), August 12, 2025.

areas.[1713] Several reports point to the presence and influence of Capital's First Command (PCC) and Rotela Clan factions in Paraguay, with impacts on public security, corruption and prison control.[1714] Journalistic investigations describe the infiltration of drug trafficking networks in the Office of the Attorney General and the political sphere, which has interfered with investigations and fostered impunity.[1715] Drug trafficking influence is also reported in communities with low state presence, deterioration of services and limited police response.[1716]

766. With respect to the rights of indigenous peoples, the State closed the Asunción office of the Paraguayan Indigenous Institute (INDI) and arranged for the transfer of its personnel to regional offices. This decision raises concerns due to the lack of prior consultation in the adoption of this measure.[1717] This occurs amid ongoing challenges related to the protection of indigenous ancestral lands, evictions and the right to participation,[1718] as well as various protests led by Bajo Chaco communities, the Ava Guaraní Paranaense people and the Maká people.[1719] The risk of cultural extinction faced by the Ayoreo people, who live in voluntary isolation, due to the deforestation of the Chaco forest was also reported.[1720] Territorial protection shortcomings particularly affect indigenous children and adolescents in urban areas, who face discrimination and barriers to service access.[1721]

767. As for the situation of Afro-descendants and the fight against racial discrimination, the National Afro-descendant Council (CONAFRO) was regulated by means of Decree No. 2915/24, which sets forth the application of Law No. 6940/22 on the national registry, curricular inclusion and sanctions for discrimination.[1722] CONAFRO began activities to coordinate public policies. The National Secretariat of Culture prepared the 2025–2029 Institutional Strategic Plan by means of a participatory process and developed awareness-raising campaigns.[1723] Along with CONAFRO and other institutions, it held an interministerial

[1713] El País, "Armas, contrabandistas y el asesinato de un periodista en la frontera entre Paraguay y Brasil" (Arms, smugglers, and the murder of a journalist on the Paraguayan–Brazilian border), July 10, 2025; State of Paraguay, Office of the Ombudsperson, "Comunicado ante otro atentado contra la libertad de expresión en Paraguay" (Statement on another attack against freedom of expression in Paraguay), October 14, 2025; Agencia EFE, "SIP ve en Paraguay 'persistencia de graves desafíos' para ejercer la libertad de expresión" (Inter-American Press Association (IAPA) sees "persistence of serious challenges" in Paraguay for exercising freedom of expression), October 19, 2025; Organized Crime and Corruption Reporting Project (OCCRP), "Investigations of murdered Paraguayan journalists live on," July 9, 2025; ABC Color, "Alianza Paraguay: por qué Forbidden Stories impulsó una investigación global sobre el crimen organizado" (Alianza Paraguay: Why Forbidden Stories promoted a global investigation into organized crime), July 9, 2025.

[1714] ABC Color, "Después de Brasil, Paraguay es el país con mayor presencia del PCC, según informe"(According to a report, after Brazil, Paraguay has the largest PCC presence), June 25, 2025; Última Hora, "El Estado 'bajó la guardia' y facilitó expansión de grupos criminales, dice el ministro Riera"(The State "dropped its guard" and facilitated expansion of criminal groups, says Minister Riera), June 27, 2025.

[1715] El País, "Cómo el crimen organizado infiltró la Fiscalía en Paraguay: un periodista asesinado y corrupción en el sistema judicial" (How organized crime infiltrated the Office of the Attorney General in Paraguay: a journalist murdered and corruption in the judicial system), July 10, 2025.

[1716] ABC Color, "Inseguridad, microtráfico y abandono: el Estado ausente golpea a Cordillera" (Insecurity, microtrafficking and neglect: absent State hits Cordillera), August 15, 2025; ABC Color, "Detienen a tres hombres y una mujer por microtráfico entre Asunción y Limpio" (Three men and a woman arrested for microtrafficking between Asunción and Limpio), February 28, 2025.

[1717] ABC Color, "Indígenas sostienen que cierre de sede central del INDI viola marco legal" (Indigenous people claim closure of the central office of INDI violates legal framework), September 22, 2025; Information provided by civil society organizations during a meeting regarding the closure of the INDI office, August 7, 2025.

[1718] IWGIA, "The Indigenous World 2025: Paraguay," April 25, 2025.

[1719] ABC Color, "Indígenas anuncian movilización 'Por la vida, la tierra y la dignidad'" (Indigenous people announce demonstration "For life, land and dignity"), September 16, 2025; ABC Color, "Indígenas del Bajo Chaco exigen US$ 42 millones para la compra de tierras" (Indigenous people of Bajo Chaco demand 42,000,000 US dollars for land purchase), October 29, 2025; ABC Color, "Avá guaraní paranaenses pedirán en COP30 restitución de tierras usadas para represa de Itaipú" (Avá Guaraní people to demand restitution of lands used for Itaipú dam at COP30), November 5, 2025.

[1720] The Guardian, "The end of the Ayoreo? The race to find proof of Paraguay's uncontacted people," March 13, 2025.

[1721] Última Hora, "Comunidades reivindican derechos de niños y adolescentes indígenas en zonas urbanas" (Communities claim rights of indigenous children and adolescents in urban areas), October 10, 2025; IWGIA, "The Indigenous World 2025: Paraguay," April 25, 2025.

[1722] State of Paraguay, National Secretariat of Culture, "Primera Reunión del Consejo Nacional de Afrodescendientes (CONAFRO)" (First meeting of the CONAFRO), May 21, 2025; State of Paraguay, National Secretariat of Culture, Tercera Sesión del Consejo Nacional de Afrodescendientes (Publicación en Instagram) (Third session of the CONAFRO [Instagram post]), August 21, 2025.

[1723] Republic of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025 in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), Note No. 355-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, September 8, 2025, p. 7. On IACHR's files.

workshop on the National Human Rights Plan for Afro-descendants.[1724] In March 2025, the Senate adopted a declaration against racial discrimination.[1725] Initiatives on memory,[1726] culture[1727] and youth empowerment with a special focus on Afro-Paraguayan women were also recorded.[1728]

768. Additionally, civil society organizations highlighted persistent challenges and episodes of racism in sports. The Paraguayan Afro-descendant Network reported the normalization of racism and called for the effective application of Law No. 6940/22.[1729] In May, Cerro Porteño football club announced it would identify and sanction an individual who had been involved in racist incidents during an international match[1730] and the South American Football Confederation (CONMEBOL) officially sanctioned Palmeiras football club for discriminating against Cerro Porteño fans.[1731] Furthermore, note is taken of the regional implementation of a system, headquartered in Paraguay, to combat racism and abuses on social media during continental competitions,[1732] as well as operations by the National Police to stop racist chants at football matches, including the referral of identified perpetrators to the Office of the Public Prosecutor.[1733]

769. With regard to the rights of women, measures to strengthen prevention and care in cases of violence against women, as well as to promote gender equality, were implemented. Among these are the launch of several prevention and awareness campaigns, such as "Todos los meses es noviembre" (Every month is November), "Novizago sin violencia" (Dating without violence), and "Lentes lilas" (Purple lenses),[1734] together with the continuation and expansion of the activities of the Ciudad Mujer Móvil (Mobile Women City) program, under which healthcare, legal and social services are provided;[1735] the approval and dissemination of the 2025–2030 Action Plan of the National Care Policy;[1736] and the implementation of the Mujeres que Brillan (Women that sparkle) project, which seeks to promote the economic and social empowerment of rural

[1724] State of Paraguay, National Secretariat of Culture, "Paraguay define acciones para los derechos de afrodescendientes" (Paraguay defines actions for the rights of Afro-descendants), July 17, 2025.

[1725] State of Paraguay, Senate of the Republic, "Senado aprueba declaración en conmemoración al 'Día Internacional contra la Discriminación Racial'" (Senate adopts declaration commemorating the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination), March 26, 2025.

[1726] Última Hora, "Llega 34ª Fiesta Kamba Lázaro Vive" (34th Kamba Lázaro Vive Festival to kick off), January 3, 2025; ABC Color, "Fiestas patrias: estas son las actividades que se ofrecen hoy en el centro de Asunción" (National celebrations: Activities offered today in downtown Asunción), May 14, 2025; UNFPA – Paraguay, "Paraguay, en deuda con la población afrodescendiente" (Paraguay in debt to Afro-descendant population), September 5, 2025; State of Paraguay, National Secretariat of Culture, Nota SNC/SG Nº 22/2025: Remitir la matriz de informe final de Rendición de Cuentas al Ciudadano y Memoria Anual 2024 (SNC/SG Note No. 22/2025: To send the final report matrix of Citizen Accountability and 2024 Annual Report), January 14, 2025; ABC Color, "Altos se prepara para revivir la tradicional fiesta del Kamba Ra'anga" (Altos is getting ready to revive the traditional Kamba Ra'anga festival), June 25, 2025.

[1727] UNFPA – Paraguay, "Estefanía: orgullo, raíces y lucha afroparaguaya" (Estefanía: pride, roots, and Afro-Paraguayan fight), July 23, 2025.

[1728] Republic of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025 in response to the letter requesting information in light of Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights (CADH), Note No. 355-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, September 8, 2025, pp. 5–6. On IACHR's files.

[1729] ABC Color, "'El racismo sigue asolando en las sociedades', sostiene la Red Paraguaya de Afrodescendientes" ("Racism continues to ravage societies," states the Paraguayan Afro-descendant Network), March 21, 2025.

[1730] D10 (Última Hora), "Cerro sancionará al socio o hincha involucrado en hechos de racismo" (Cerro to sanction the member or fan involved in racist acts), May 8, 2025.

[1731] Versus, "Conmebol oficializa el castigo a Palmeiras por actos de racismo contra hinchas de Cerro" (CONMEBOL officially imposes punishment on Palmeiras for racist acts against Cerro fans), May 7, 2025.

[1732] D10 (Última Hora), "Conmebol anuncia sistema para combatir racismo y abusos en redes" (CONMEBOL announces system to combat racism and abuses on social media), August 12, 2025.

[1733] ABC Color, "Paraguay-Uruguay: Policía controlará cánticos racistas" (Paraguay-Uruguay: The Police to control racist chants), June 5, 2025.

[1734] State of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025, Information to prepare Chapter IV, section A and B, Annex II, September 8, 2025. On IACHR's files; Ministry of Women, "Noviazgo sin violencia" llegó a más de 150 estudiantes de colegios de Caaguazú ("Noviazgo sin violencia" reached more than 150 students from schools in Caaguazú), October 16, 2025.

[1735] State of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025, Information to prepare Chapter IV, section A and B, Annex II, September 8, 2025, p. 5. On IACHR´s files; Ministry of Public Health and Social Wellbeing, "En Concepción: más de 750 mujeres fueron beneficiadas en jornada "Ciudad Mujer Móvil" (Concepción: Over 750 women benefited from Ciudad Mujer Móvil activity), April 18, 2025; ADN Digital, "Ciudad Mujer Móvil llega al Alto Paraná con servicios gratuitos e integrales" (Ciudad Mujer Móvil disembarks on Alto Paraná with free and comprehensive services), October 14, 2025.

[1736] State of Paraguay, Note Verbale MPP/OEA/2 No. 196/2025, Information to prepare Chapter IV, section A and B, Annex II, September 8, 2025, p. 8. On IACHR´s files.

women.[1737] Legislative progress was also made to prohibit, without exceptions, the marriage of people under 18 years of age.[1738]

770. In addition, a bill is being processed which, if passed, would eliminate the Ministry of Women by merging it with other ministries, thus weakening the role of this specialized institution for the promotion and protection of the rights of women.[1739] Similarly, a bill aimed at creating specialized courts to handle cases of violence against women was initially amended to create courts specialized in family violence matters —that is, not specialized in gender violence— and was ultimately vetoed by the executive branch.[1740]

771. Those actions are framed within a persistent context of violence against women, girls and adolescents.[1741] According to figures from the Office of the Public Prosecutor, between January and September 2025, 28 femicides were recorded (most of them committed by partners or former partners), 41 attempted femicides[1742] and 28,421 cases of family violence.[1743] At the same time, between January and May, 873 cases of sexual abuse against girls and adolescents were registered.[1744] In this regard, the case of a 13-year-old adolescent who had gotten pregnant as a result of rape and died while giving birth was recorded.[1745]

772. In the area of persons deprived of liberty, the State signed a Framework Agreement between the Ministry of Justice and the Paraguayan Industrial Union (UIP) to implement productive, educational and labor projects in the prison system.[1746] It also presented a project to build new women's detention centers[1747] and adopted a protocol for visits involving children and adolescents.[1748] In August, the State inspected the Emboscada Antigua Penitentiary after unauthorized cell structures were found.[1749] Additionally, 46 judges conducted a judicial census in Tacumbú, reviewing the procedural status of more than 2,100 people.[1750] The [1737] State of Paraguay, Ministry of Women, "MinMujer presentó proyecto "Kuñanguera Omimbiva en Mburuvicha Róga" (The Ministry of Women launches the Kuñanguera Omimbiva in Mburuvicha Róga project), March 31, 2025.

[1738] State of Paraguay, Chamber of Deputies [@DiputadosPy], (June 5, 2025), En audiencia pública debaten proyecto para prohibir el matrimonio infantil (A public hearing is held to debate a bill to ban child marriage) [X post], X, https://x.com/DiputadosPy/status/1930670422082625590.

[1739] State of Paraguay, Chamber of Deputies, "Debaten en audiencia pública proyecto que crea el Ministerio de la Familia" (Public hearing held to debate a bill creating the Ministry of the Family), May 22, 2025; La Tribuna, "Rechazan eliminar Ministerio de la Mujer ante el proyecto del Ministerio de Familia" (The elimination of the Ministry of Women in the face of the creation of the Ministry of the Family is turned down), May 22, 2025.

[1740] State of Paraguay, Chamber of Deputies, Sumario de proyectos de Ley (Summary of bills), September 16, 2025; State of Paraguay, Senate [@SenadoresPy], (July 9, 2025), Inicia el estudio de los puntos del orden del día, mensaje del Poder Ejecutivo, por la cual remite el Decreto N° 4121 (Analysis of the items on the agenda begins, whereby it submits Decree No. 4121, message from the executive branch) [X post], X, https://x.com/SenadoresPy/status/1942961457466937558.

[1741] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IVa, March 26, 2025, para. 691.

[1742] State of Paraguay, Office of the Public Prosecutor, "Feminicidio DA" (Open data on femicides), September 18, 2025.

[1743] State of Paraguay, Office of the Public Prosecutor, "Datos Abierto: La Fiscalía atendió un total de 28.421 víctimas de Violencia Familiar de Enero a Setiembre de 2025. Unas 104 víctimas por día (Open Data: The Office of the Attorney General provides services to a total of 28,421 victims of family violence from January to September 2025 —around 104 victims daily), October 10, 2025.

[1744] State of Paraguay, Office of the Public Prosecutor, "Abuso sexual en niño, niñas y adolescentes de enero a mayo de 2025-total de víctimas 1305" (Sexual abuse of children and adolescents from January to May 2025, 1,305 total victims), May 28, 2025.

[1745] ABC, "Muerte de niña madre: esto dicen desde el hospital donde falleció" (Death of child mother: The version of the hospital where she died), July 14, 2025; Efeminista, "Muere una niña de 13 años en Paraguay al dar a luz tras un embarazo por violación" (A 13-year-old girl dies in Paraguay while giving birth after a pregnancy resulted from rape), July 18, 2025.

[1746] State of Paraguay, Ministry of Justice, "Histórico acuerdo entre el Ministerio de Justicia y la UIP para promover la reinserción penitenciaria" (Historic agreement between the Ministry of Justice and the UIP to promote reintegration of persons deprived of liberty), July 16, 2025.

[1747] State of Paraguay, Agencia de Información Paraguaya, "En 2025, apuntan a la construcción de nuevos centros penitenciarios para mujeres" (In 2025, plans target the construction of new penitentiary centers for women), January 24, 2025.

[1748] State of Paraguay, Agencia de Información Paraguaya, "Socializan protocolo de ingreso de niños y adolescentes a penitenciarías" (Presentation of protocol for entry of children and adolescents into penitentiaries), February 9, 2025.

[1749] State of Paraguay, Ministry of Justice, "El Ministro de Justicia ordena intervención del Penal de Emboscada Antigua" (The Minister of Justice orders intervention at the Emboscada Antigua Penitentiary), August 25, 2025; see also: El nacional, "Justicia ordena intervención en penal de Emboscada" (Justice orders intervention at Emboscada Antigua prison), August 25, 2025; and Última hora, "Frigobar, TV led y otros lujos: Así se ven por dentro las celdas vips del penal de Emboscada" (Frigobar, LED TV and other luxuries: This is what the VIP cells at Emboscada Antigua prison look like), August 25, 2025.

[1750] ABC Color, "Cárcel de Tacumbú: 46 jueces realizan un censo judicial" (Tacumbú Prison: 46 judges conduct a judicial census), October 13, 2025.

Supreme Court extended the use of ankle monitors[1751] and strengthened legal assistance and case management.[1752]

773. Nevertheless, the prison system continues to show high levels of overcrowding which, as of July 31, reached 88 percent. The main reason for overcrowding is linked to the excessive use of pretrial detention, whose rate, on the same date, was 63 percent. In this scenario, Paraguay ranks fourth in the region with the highest percentage of people held preventively.[1753] In this context, the Commission commends the establishment of a working line to facilitate the review of precautionary measures and identify those who could be released.[1754] In view of this, more than 950 people that should be released have been reportedly identified.[1755] Additionally, the Commission notes the transfer, in August, of 500 imprisoned men from an overcrowded prison to the new Minga Guazú center, as part of the Umbral Operation. In this regard, the Commission expresses its concern about images showing hooded and mostly barefoot individuals.[1756]

774. Additionally, regarding detention conditions, according to the MNP, besides overcrowding, the centers show inadequate healthcare services that lead to disease transmission, challenges in food provision and exercise of power by organized crime within the prisons.[1757]

775. With regard to the rights of human rights defenders, the State reported detentions, pretrial detention and house arrest against leading yerba mate producers who reported pollution as a result of mining activities,[1758] in a context characterized by the closure of the civic space, which especially affects peasant and indigenous communities as a result of land conflicts and an agricultural exports and extractivist model that promotes evictions, criminal persecution and harassment.[1759] The Commission also received information on charges for criminal association filed against groups seeking land regularization, despite the fact that the law requires neighborhood commissions to settle his type of matters, together with complaints regarding the use of pretrial detention as a mechanism of pressure against people and collectives resisting the agricultural exports extractivist model.[1760]

[1751] ABC Color, "Corte extiende uso de tobilleras electrónicas a todo el país" (The Supreme Court extends use of ankle monitors nationwide), July 30, 2025.

[1752] Center of Judicial Studies (CEJ), "Corte Suprema y CEJ acuerdan proyecto para fortalecer el acceso a la justicia de personas privadas de libertad" (The Supreme Court and CEJ agree on a project to strengthen access to justice for persons deprived of liberty), October 15, 2025.

[1753] World Prison Brief, Institute for Crime & Justice Policy Research, World Prison Brief data - Paraguay, 2025; and Highest to Lowest - Pre-trial detainees / remand prisoners, 2025.

[1754] State of Paraguay, Agencia de Información Paraguaya, "Ministerio de Justicia y Corte Suprema definen acciones para reducir la sobrepoblación en las cárceles" (The Ministry of Justice and Supreme Court define actions to reduce overcrowding in prisons), March 18, 2025.

[1755] Judiciales.net, "Detectan que más de 950 personas deberían abandonar las cárceles" (Over 950 people identified as eligible to leave prisons), August 5, 2025; and RDN, "Revisión de causas podría liberar a más de 950 reclusos" (A review of cases could free more than 950 inmates), August 13, 2025.

[1756] State of Paraguay, Ministry of Justice, "Traslado masivo de reclusos llega al penal de Minga Guazú en el marco del Operativo 'Umbral'" (Massive transfer of inmates reaches Minga Guazú prison as part of the Umbral Operation), August 6, 2025; MNP, "MNP llama a garantizar derechos y trato digno en traslados de personas privadas de libertad" (MNP calls to guarantee rights and dignified treatment in transfers of persons deprived of liberty), August 6, 2025.

[1757] State of Paraguay, MNP, 2024 Informe de Gestión (2024 Management Report), 2025, pp. 33–39; State of Paraguay, MNP, "Tuberculosis en cárceles: el MNP solicita declarar emergencia sanitaria penitenciaria" (Tuberculosis in prisons: MNP requests penitentiary health emergency to be declared), July 22, 2025; Insight Crime, "Paraguay's endless prison crisis," January 13, 2025.

[1758] ABC Color, "Pobladores de Paso Yobái exigen la liberación de un dirigente de productores de yerba mate" (Residents of Paso Yobái demand the release of leading yerba mate producer), March 28, 2025; Última Hora, "Codehupy denuncia detención arbitraria contra dirigente yerbatero en Paso Yobái" (Codehupy reports arbitrary detention against a leading yerba mate producer in Paso Yobái), March 31, 2025; ABC Color, "Ya son tres los yerbateros con arresto domiciliario tras protesta contra la contaminación de una mina en Paso Yobái" (Three yerba mate producers are now under house arrest following a protest against mining pollution in Paso Yobái), August 7, 2025.

[1759] Coordination of Humans Rights of Paraguay (CODEHUPY), Derechos Humanos en Paraguay 2024 (Human Rights in Paraguay 2024), Asunción: Codehupy, 2024.

[1760] IACHR, Meeting with civil society organizations of Paraguay, November 6, 2025. On IACHR´s files; CODEHUPY, Derechos Humanos en Paraguay 2024 (Human Rights in Paraguay 2024), Asunción: Codehupy, 2024; Business & Human Rights Resource Center, "Paraguay: Indígenas reclaman la protección de sus territorios frente a desalojos que habrían sido promovidos por la agroindustria" (Paraguay: Indigenous peoples demand protection of their territories against evictions allegedly promoted by the agribusiness sector), September 30, 2025.

776. With regard to the rights of LGBTI persons, the Commission notes the demands of the civil society for a comprehensive law against discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity, and specific measures in labor and healthcare contexts, and effective educational policies to prevent violence and harassment.[1761] There has been a constant lack of legal recognition of trans identities, together with hate crimes and barriers to access to justice.[1762] In that context, on October 28, the Juvenile and Family Court of Luque denied a trans student's request to attend school activities wearing the uniform consistent with her gender identity.[1763]

777. With regard to children and adolescents, the Ministry of Childhood and Adolescence (MINNA) launched and expanded protection measures during major events and operations to prevent child labor, sexual exploitation and human trafficking, in addition to announcing the expansion of the coverage of the Dispositivo de Respuesta Inmediata (Immediate Response Initiative).[1764] A joint operation rescued 50 indigenous children and adolescents in situations of extreme vulnerability from a tenement house.[1765] During the Week for Rights, the Office of the Ombudsperson received demands directly made by children and adolescents: access to land, decent work for families, mental health, comprehensive sexual education, participation and protection.[1766] It also reported activities to prevent child sexual abuse in schools and municipalities.[1767]

778. According to data from the National Institute of Statistics, 29.5 percent of children and adolescents live in poverty, which amounts to 544,696 people.[1768] Between January and July 2025, the Office of the Public Prosecutor provided assistance to 12,943 child and adolescent victims, with a predominance of cases of sexual abuse, ill-treatment, rape, and child pornography.[1769] Moreover, civil society organizations noted challenges in the access to food at schools and the implementation of educational inclusion policies.[1770] In addition, a public investigation indicated that more than 10,300 girls and adolescents are married or in civil unions across the country.[1771] Criticism was also recorded regarding the slowness of adoption processes due to formalities that allegedly limit their effectiveness.[1772] In that context, the UN concluded that the State is [1761] ABC Color, "Preocupa postura del Estado en torno a organizaciones LGBTIQ+" (There is concern over the State's stance toward LGBTIQ+ organizations), June 28, 2025; ABC Color (EFE), "Comunidad LGTBI denuncia en marcha del Orgullo que Estado paraguayo no garantiza derechos" (During the Pride parade, the LGBTI community claims that the Paraguayan State fails to guarantee their rights), June 28, 2025; ABC Color, "Coalición TLGBI+ convoca a marcha para enfrentar al autoritarismo" (Coalición TLGBI+ calls for a march to confront authoritarianism), September 26, 2025.

[1762] AP News (AP), "For Paraguay's transgender women, survival often means leaving home," September 30, 2025.

[1763] ABC Color, "Rechazan medida cautelar de alumna trans por discriminación" (Justice rejects precautionary measure of trans student for discrimination), October 28, 2025; Unicanal, "Justicia rechazó pedido de estudiante de defender su proyecto con jumper" (The court rejects a student's request to defend her project wearing a jumper), October 28, 2025; OviedoPress, "Justicia rechaza pedido de estudiante trans para usar jumper en el colegio" (Justice denies a trans student's request to wear a jumper at school), October 28, 2025.

[1764] State of Paraguay, MINNA, "Inicia Operativo de Protección de Niñas, Niños y Adolescentes en el Rally WRC 2025" (Protection Operation for Children and Adolescents is launched at the 2025 WRC Rally), August 28, 2025.

[1765] State of Paraguay, MINNA, "Operativo conjunto protege a 50 niños y adolescentes indígenas en situación de vulnerabilidad" (Joint operation protects 50 indigenous children and adolescents in vulnerable situations), August 22, 2025.

[1766] State Paraguay, Office of the Ombudsperson, "La Defensoría presente en la Semana por los Derechos de niños, niñas y adolescentes" (The Office of the Ombudsperson participates in the Week for the Rights of Children and Adolescents), August 12, 2025; ABC Color, "Semana por los Derechos 2025: niñas, niños y adolescentes presentaron sus demandas al Estado" (During the 2025 Week for Rights: Children and adolescents present their demands directly to the State), August 13, 2025.

[1767] State Paraguay, Office of the Ombudsperson, "Delegados impulsan acciones de protección de derechos en todo el País" (Delegates are promoting actions to protect rights nationwide), June 17, 2025.

[1768] ABC Color, "ONG alerta sobre la situación de pobreza y violencia en niños y adolescentes de Paraguay" (NGO warns of the situation of poverty and violence affecting children and adolescents in Paraguay), August 16, 2025.

[1769] State of Paraguay, Office of the Public Prosecutor, "De enero a julio de 2025, el Ministerio Público atendió un total de 12.943 niños" (Between January and July 2025, the Office of the Public Prosecutor provided assistance to a total of 12,943 children), August 13, 2025.

[1770] Última Hora, "Excluidos: Niños sin escuelas y tampoco alimentos" (Excluded: Children without schools or food), October 14, 2025.

[1771] ABC Color, "Más de 10.300 niñas y adolescentes están casadas o 'unidas' en Paraguay" (More than 10,300 girls and adolescents are married or in civil unions in Paraguay), October 15, 2025.

[1772] ABC Color, "Ministerio de la Niñez insta a adoptar y ciudadanos reclaman años de espera" (MINNA encourages adoption while citizens claim years of waiting), November 7, 2025.

responsible for human rights violations in the death of two 11-year-old girls during a military operation in 2020, which evidences deficiencies in prevention, investigation and accountability.[1773]

779. In terms of efforts towards memory, truth and justice, between January and July, the Directorate of Historical Memory and Reparation conducted 25 investigations into possible unidentified graves, 50 interviews with witnesses and victims of the dictatorship and 31 communications with relatives of disappeared persons. It also carried out explorations in Lambaré and Caaguazú, responded to public information requests, prepared files on disappeared persons and managed the restitution of identified remains.[1774] Apart from organizing its physical and digital archives and coordinating actions with organizations and authorities, the Directorate prepared tributes, cultural activities, publications and the signage of memory sites. Furthermore, it provided economic reparations to the 323 victims recognized under Law No. 838/1996 by means of six rounds of compensations.[1775]

780. In terms of persons in the context of human mobility, Paraguay is experiencing sustained growth in the number of residency applications. According to available information, in the first half of 2025 a total of 20,567 temporary and permanent residency procedures were initiated, which accounted for an increase of 51.1 percent compared to the first half of last year, when 13,611 applications were recorded. Applicants are mainly from Brazil and Argentina.[1776]

781. In August, a memorandum of understanding was signed between the National Commission for Stateless Persons and Refugees (CONARE) of Paraguay and the United States Department of Homeland Security and the United States Department of State regarding cooperation on the analysis of protection claims.[1777] According to government statements, the agreement offers asylum seekers currently in the United States the opportunity to process their protection claims in Paraguay, so as to "share the burden of managing illegal immigration while shutting down the abuse of our nation's [the United States] asylum system."[1778] For its part, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Paraguay highlighted that the instrument would help manage refugee admission processes in accordance with the country's legislation and under the supervision of the CONARE.[1779]

782. In that regard, the CONARE highlighted that the purpose of the memorandum is to ensure that people seeking protection be transferred "in a dignified, safe and timely manner."[1780] Nevertheless, the lack of resources to handle the processing of the respective asylum applications has been noted.[1781] The coherence of the memorandum has also been questioned, given that the United States Department of State reportedly circulated a report criticizing the human rights situation in Paraguay.[1782] At the time of the drafting of this [1773] OHCHR, "Paraguay responsible for grave rights violations over deaths of two young girls, UN committee finds," January 22, 2025.

[1774] State of Paraguay, Diplomatic Note MPP/OEA/2/N°196/2025, Ref.: IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, September 8, 2025, Annex I: Ministry of Justice, Note DG.DDHH/N.º281/25, September 2, 2025, pp. 7–9. On IACHR´s files.

[1775] ABC Color, "MEF estableció calendario de pagos a víctimas de la dictadura" (The Ministry of Economy and Finance [MEF] establishes the payment schedule for victims of the dictatorship), April 4, 2025; Government of Paraguay, "MEF paga hoy indemnización a sexto grupo del 2025 de Víctimas de la Dictadura" (Today the MEF pays compensation to the sixth group of dictatorship victims in 2025), September 19, 2025.

[1776] National Directorate of Migration, "Migraciones registra un aumento sostenido en las solicitudes de residencia en el primer semestre de 2025" (The National Directorate of Migration records sustained growth in residency applications during the first half of 2025), July 20, 2025.

[1777] State of Paraguay, Presidency of the Republic, "Gobierno del Paraguay firma memorándum de entendimiento con los departamentos de Estado y Seguridad Nacional de EE.UU." (The government of Paraguay signs a memorandum of understanding with the U.S. Department of State and Homeland Security), August 14, 2025.

[1778] United States Department of State, "Signing of a Safe Third Country Agreement with Paraguay," August 14, 2025.

[1779] State of Paraguay, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, "Paraguay y EE.UU. avanzan en agenda estratégica con nuevo memorando de entendimiento" (Paraguay and the United States advance their strategic agenda with a new memorandum of understanding), August 20, 2025.

[1780] La Nación, "Paraguay debe garantizar la inclusión social y económica de refugiados, sostiene titular de Conare" (Paraguay must guarantee the social and economic inclusion of refugees, states the head of the CONARE), August 24, 2025.

[1781] El Nacional, "¿Está Paraguay preparado para asumir el rol de 'tercer país seguro'?" (Is Paraguay prepared to assume the role of "safe third country"?), August 31, 2025.

[1782] El Nacional, "Incoherencia: Paraguay firma acuerdo de refugiados mientras es aplazado en derechos humanos" (Incoherence: Paraguay signs refugee agreement while facing setbacks in human rights), August 16, 2025.

report, details of the agreement's comprehensive operational framework remained unknown. The Commission has expressed its concern regarding this type of bilateral agreements, which may be contrary to non-derogable human rights obligations.[1783]

783. With regard to human trafficking, in June the State proceeded with the establishment of the Executive Secretariat for Human Trafficking, which will coordinate strategic, cross-cutting actions for the prevention and fighting of this crime.[1784] At the same time, the Interinstitutional Roundtable for the Prevention of Human Trafficking signed a memorandum of understanding with France and bilateral initiatives with Bolivia, Peru and Brazil to strengthen victim protection and perpetrator accountability.[1785] In addition, the Study on the Characterization of Human Trafficking in Paraguay, published in June 2025 by the Office of the Public Prosecutor and the UNFPA, revealed that 76 percent of the victims in Paraguay are women, 50 percent are under 18 years of age and 91 percent are nationals.[1786]

784. As for the situation of persons with disabilities, the State passed Law No. 7371/2025, which sets forth a comprehensive framework for the protection, inclusion and exercise of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities.[1787] The State moved forward with the development and drafting of Practical Guides on the Application of the Protocol on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities.[1788] Nevertheless, there were complaints regarding the inhuman conditions faced by 14 persons with intellectual disabilities who are serving prison sentences and complying with security measures in psychiatric centers, following an inspection by enforcement judges.[1789]

785. In relation to older persons, the Senate approved the State's adherence to the Inter-American Convention on Protecting the Human Rights of Older Persons, which remains under consideration in the Chamber of Deputies.[1790] The Commission commends this progress and urges the State to complete the treaty adherence procedure, particularly in a context of persistent challenges. In that regard, the MNP warned of the urgent need to strengthen public policies to prevent torture and ill-treatment in homes for older adults,[1791] and the Chamber of Deputies accepted requests for information on ill-treatment in nursing homes.[1792] The Office of the Public Prosecutor reported over 1,000 cases of breach of duty of care affecting older persons and persons with disabilities between 2024 and 2025, predominantly in Central and Asunción.[1793]

[1783] IACHR, Press Release No. 190/25, IACHR and United Nations Experts: States must protect the rights of persons in human mobility, September 18, 2025.

[1784] Government of Paraguay, "Instalación de la Secretaría Ejecutiva de Trata de Personas" (Setting up of the Executive Secretariat on Human Trafficking), June 5, 2025.

[1785] Government of Paraguay, "Mesa Interinstitucional impulsa acciones estratégicas contra la trata de personas" (The interinstitutional roundtable advances strategic actions against human trafficking), May 26, 2025.

[1786] UNFPA, "El 76% de las víctimas de trata en Paraguay son mujeres y la mitad tiene menos de 18 años" (76 percent of human trafficking victims in Paraguay are women and half are under 18 years of age), June 12, 2025.

[1787] State of Paraguay, National Congress, Ley Nº 7371/2025 (Law No. 7371/2025), which guarantees the rights of persons with disabilities, July 1, 2025.

[1788] State of Paraguay, Ministry of Justice of Paraguay, Actions Report by the Ministry of Justice, Note No. 281/25, September 2, 2025, Annex I, p. 3. On IACHR's files.

[1789] El Observador, "Juezas constatan inhumanas condiciones de los reclusos psiquiátricos en Tacumbú" (Enforcement women judges confirm inhuman conditions for psychiatric inmates at Tacumbú), April 7, 2025.

[1790] ABC Color, "Senado aprobó Convención sobre personas mayores" (Senate backs adherence to convention on older persons), September 24, 2025.

[1791] MNP, "Urgente fortalecimiento de políticas públicas de prevención de la tortura y malos tratos en hogares de personas adultas mayores" (Urgent strengthening of public policies to prevent torture and ill-treatment in homes for older persons), July 5, 2025.

[1792] Chamber of Deputies, "Tras denuncia de maltratos a un adulto mayor varias instituciones deberán informar" (Following report of ill-treatment of an older adult, several institutions must provide information), July 11, 2025.

[1793] State of Paraguay, Office of the Public Prosecutor, "Violación del deber de cuidado de adultos mayores: Central y Asunción concentran el 61% de las denuncias ingresadas en la Fiscalía durante el 2024 y 2025" (Breach of duty of care toward older adults: Central and Asunción account for 61 percent of complaints filed with the Office of the Attorney General during 2024 and 2025), June 14, 2025.

XXV. PERU[1794]

- General considerations

786. In 2025, Peru recorded some progress in reducing multidimensional poverty, reflecting government efforts to improve living conditions for people in vulnerable situations. These measures include policies targeting older people and families living in extreme poverty.[1795]

787. However, significant challenges persist in terms of democratic institutions and access to justice that may be attributed to actions by the National Congress, including disqualifications allegedly made on political grounds and the removal of President Dina Boluarte for "permanent moral incapacity," making her the sixth president to be removed from office since 2016. This situation is compounded by the enactment of a law granting amnesty to members of the security forces involved in serious human rights violations committed during the internal armed conflict, creating a blatant shield of impunity. This framework, endorsed by the Constitutional Court, is incompatible with the international obligations of the Peruvian State.

788. In light of the human rights situation in Peru and the challenges identified in this section, on July 29, 2025, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights requested the State's consent to conduct an on-site observation visit.[1796] On February 25, 2026, the State of Peru agreed to the IACHR's request to carry out the visit in the second half of 2026.[1797]

789. On September 17, 2025, the State sent information for the preparation of this section.[1798]

- Specific issues

790. With respect to democratic institutions, on October 9, the National Congress voted to remove President Dina Boluarte from office on grounds of "permanent moral incapacity," based on alleged acts of corruption and dereliction of duty.[1799] The head of state did not participate in the congressional session, and the Speaker of Congress subsequently assumed the presidency. This decision deepened a cycle of political instability marked by repeated recourse to removal from office on grounds of "moral incapacity," which, as the IACHR has noted, lacks a clearly defined list of actions that constitute punishable conduct.[1800] The IACHR also expressed its profound concern regarding the decision of Congress to disqualify Supreme Court Prosecutor Delia Espinoza from the serving in public office for 10 years, following a proceeding that reputedly disregarded the guarantees of tenure and due process applicable to justice operators.[1801] That disqualification, together with other decisions adopted by Congress against prosecutors and members of autonomous bodies, undermines the separation and independence of the branches of government when due process and the principle of legality are not upheld.[1802]

[1794] Commissioners José Luis Caballero and Andrea Pochak approved the report and issued a concurring vote. The vote is presented at the end of this chapter.

[1795] National Institute of Statistics and Informatics (INEI), (2025) Informe de pobreza y desigualdad (Poverty and Inequality Report), Lima, Peru.

[1796] IACHR, Diplomatic Note No. 329-25/CIDH/SE/SEA-MPCT-VIL, July 29, 2025.

[1797] Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Minister's Office, Letter No. 7-3-D/1, February 25, 2026.

[1798] Permanent Mission of Peru to the Organization of American States, Note No. 7-5-M/ 186, October 17, 2025.

[1799] Official Gazette El Peruano, Congressional Resolution No. 001/2025-2026-CR, October 10, 2025.

[1800] IACHR, Press Release No. 212/25, IACHR urges Peru to specify the scope of subjective constitutional tools that continue to destabilize its democracy, October 16, 2025.

[1801] IACHR [@CIDH], #Perú: La #CIDH expresa su profunda preocupación ante la decisión del Congreso de la República de inhabilitar a la Fiscal Suprema Delia… (#Peru: The #IACHR expresses its deep concern over the decision of the Congress of the Republic to disqualify Supreme Prosecutor Delia...) (tweet), X (formerly Twitter), December 6, 2025, 1999619289750389020, available at https://x.com/CIDH/status/1999619289750389020.

[1802] IACHR, Press Release No. 130/24, 2024, available at: https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/jsForm/?File=/en/iachr/media_center/preleases/2024/130.asp.

791. In June 2025, the National Elections Board (Jurado Nacional de Elecciones) ratified two resolutions of the Congress that politically disqualified Martin Vizcarra for alleged conflicts of interest both during his tenure as minister and during his presidential term. These decisions, which prevent him from standing in the 2026 elections, were adopted in a context of increasing concern regarding the possible political weaponization of electoral bodies by Congress.[1803]

792. With regard to access to justice and judicial independence, the Peruvian Congress advanced proposed law No. 7549/2023-CR, which sought to grant amnesty to members of the armed forces, the Peruvian National Police, and the self-defense committees who "took part in the fight against terrorism between 1980 and 2000." Following its approval on first reading by the Plenary in June, the bill was ratified by the Standing Committee on July 9 and received presidential assent on August 13, when it was promulgated as Law No. 32.419.[1804]

793. The law grants amnesty to members of these three groups who have been denounced, investigated, or prosecuted for criminal acts arising from or connected with their participation in the internal armed conflict. In addition, it establishes a "humanitarian amnesty" for members of these groups over 70 years of age who are serving a sentence or have received a final custodial sentence for crimes arising from or connected with their participation in the "fight against terrorism" during that period.[1805]

794. Victims and human rights organizations indicate that the law halts ongoing criminal proceedings and relieves persons convicted of crimes under international law of responsibility, thereby affecting decades of efforts to secure justice. They say that hundreds of individuals investigated, prosecuted, or sentenced for extrajudicial executions, torture, forced disappearances, and sexual violence could benefit, placing in jeopardy more than 156 final judgments and approximately 600 ongoing proceedings.[1806] They further caution that the law could facilitate the release from prison of those convicted in cases such as La Cantuta, Barrios Altos, Accomarca, and Cayara, as well as in the murder of Hugo Bustíos. As of August 25, applications had been filed in at least four cases.[1807]

795. Similarly, the IACHR noted with concern the decision of December 5, 2025, by which the Constitutional Court declared unfounded the actions of unconstitutionality filed by the Lima Bar Association and the Public Prosecution Service against Law No. 32107, also known as the Statute of Limitations Law (Ley de Prescripción). The law passed in contravention of express orders issued in 2024 by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, prompting the IACHR to condemn it.[1808] Civil society organizations rejected the Constitutional

[1803] Portal of the Congress of the Republic, Congreso inhabilita por 10 años al expresidente Martín Vizcarra por cierre del Congreso (Congress disqualifies former President Martín Vizcarra for 10 years for the dissolution of Congress), June 11, 2025.

[1804] Congress of the Republic, , June 12, 2025; Congress of the Republic, , July 10, 2025; Congress of the Republic, Promulgan ley del Congreso que concede amnistía para miembros de FF.AA., Policía y comités de autodefensa (Congressional law enacted granting amnesty to members of the Armed Forces, National Police, and self-defense committees), August 13, 2025.

[1805] Republic of Peru, Law No. 32419 of August 14, 2025.

[1806] Coordinadora Nacional de Derechos Humanos, El Congreso premia a violadores de derechos humanos y niega justicia a las víctimas. Pronunciamiento (Congress rewards human rights violators and denies justice to victims, Public Statement), June 12, 2025; David Velasco, victims' representative, Public Hearing of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, cases of Barrios Altos and La Cantuta v. Peru, August 21, 2025; Coordinadora Nacional de Derechos Humanos, , July 9, 2025; CEJIL, Perú: proyecto de ley de Amnistía representa una seria amenaza al acceso a justicia de víctimas de graves violaciones de derechos humanos (Peru: Amnesty bill represents a serious threat to access to justice for victims of serious human rights violations), June 16, 2025; Ojo Público, July 11, 2025.

[1807] Carlos Rivera, victims' representative, Public Hearing of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, cases of Barrios Altos and La Cantuta v. Peru, August 21, 2025; CEJIL, , August 25, 2025; La República, Poder Judicial: jueces rechazan aplicar ley de amnistía a procesados por la masacre de Chumbivilcas (Judiciary: Judges Refuse to Apply Amnesty Law to Those on Trial for the Chumbivilcas Massacre), September 9, 2025.

[1808] The IACHR followed up on this matter in Chapter IV-A of its 2024 Annual Report. See also IACHR, Press Release No. 206/24, IACHR warns of impacts on access to justice following approval of Peru's law on crimes against humanity, Washington, D.C., United States, September 3, 2024; IACHR, Thematic Hearing, "Peru: Impunity for serious human rights violations during the 1980–2000 armed conflict," 190th session, July 10, 2024; X, CIDH [@CIDH], #Perú: #CIDH manifiesta preocupación por la aprobación en primera votación del Pleno del @congresoperu del Proyecto de Ley 6951/2023-CR, que establece la prescripción de todos los delitos de lesa humanidad y de guerra cometidos antes de 1 de julio de 2002, fecha de la entrada en vigor del Estatuto de Roma en el país. La iniciativa es contraria al derecho internacional y desobedece abiertamente sentencias emitidas por la @CorteIDH y otros instrumentos internacionales, incluido el Estatuto

Court's ruling, stating that it confirmed the Peruvian State's unwillingness to comply with the judgments of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights and favored impunity for serious human rights violations.[1809]

796. In connection with judicial independence, on June 12, 2025, the National Board of Justice (Junta Nacional de Justicia – JNJ), with its new membership, unanimously adopted resolution No. 231-2025-JNJ, declaring null and void the disciplinary proceedings that had culminated in the dismissal of Patricia Benavides. The decision also provided for her reinstatement not only as Supreme Court Prosecutor, but also as Attorney General, even though the Constitution confers that authority on the Board of Supreme Court Prosecutors (Junta de Fiscales Supremos).[1810] The decision, adopted without public consultation and on legal grounds considered insufficient by experts, was widely questioned by human rights organizations and constitutional law experts, who characterized it as interference in the functional autonomy of the Public Prosecution Service and as a worrying precedent for institutional independence.[1811]

797. Subsequently, in September 2025, the JNJ provisionally suspended Attorney General Delia Espinoza for her alleged refusal to comply with the reinstatement of Benavides; this measure was confirmed in October.[1812] Espinoza sought judicial relief, arguing that the JNJ lacked constitutional authority to appoint Benavides as Attorney General. On November 10, 2025, the Ninth Constitutional Court of Lima ordered Espinoza's immediate reinstatement as Attorney General.[1813] Judicial officials and civil society organizations informed the IACHR that the actions of the JNJ were intended to sow division within the Public Prosecution Service and pave the way for Congress to push through a reform that would weaken its functional autonomy and its capacity to combat corruption.[1814]

798. With respect to citizen security, in 2025, Peru recorded its highest levels of violence since 2017, with a sustained increase in homicides. Between July and September 2025, 575 murders were reported—the highest quarterly figure to that point in the year—according to the National Death Information System (Sistema Informático Nacional de Defunciones – SINADEF). That period is already considered the most violent compared with the same period in previous years. Since 2023, the number of homicides has regularly exceeded 400 per quarter, with an average close to 550 over the last six quarters. The escalation in violence reflects a de Roma; por lo que se insta a las personas congresistas a detener el avance del mencionado Proyecto de Ley (#Peru: #IACHR expresses concern over the approval in a first vote by the Plenary of @congresoperu of Bill 6951/2023-CR, which establishes the statute of limitations for all crimes against humanity and war crimes committed before July 1, 2002, the date of the entry into force of the Rome Statute in the country. The initiative is contrary to international law and openly defies rulings issued by the @CorteIDH and other international instruments, including the Rome Statute; therefore, it urges members of Congress to stop the progress of said Bill), June 10, 2024.

[1809] CEJIL, Perú profundiza su incumplimiento internacional: decisión del Tribunal Constitucional favorece la impunidad, pero no afecta la imprescriptibilidad (Peru deepens its international non-compliance: Constitutional Court decision favors impunity but does not affect the non-applicability of statutes of limitations), Press release, available at: https://cejil.org/comunicado-de-prensa/peru-profundiza-su-incumplimiento-internacional-decision-del-tribunal-constitucional-favorece-la-impunidad-pero-no-afecta-la-imprescriptibilidad/.

[1810] Junta Nacional de Justicia, , June 12, 2025.

[1811] CNDDHH, Reincorporación de Patricia Benavides como Fiscal de la Nación es inconstitucional (Reinstatement of Patricia Benavides as Attorney General is unconstitutional), June 16, 2025. See also IDL, IDL presenta el Informe "Esa resolución no existe" sobre la viciada decisión de la JNJ de reincorporar como Fiscal de la Nación a Patricia Benavides (IDL presents the Report "That resolution does not exist" regarding the flawed JNJ decision to reinstate Patricia Benavides as Attorney General), June 26, 2025; LP, Tres irregularidades sobre la supuesta reposición de Benavides como fiscal de la Nación, según Luciano López (Three irregularities regarding the alleged reinstatement of Benavides as Attorney General, according to Luciano López), June 14, 2025; SERVINDI, Califican de inconstitucional reposición de Benavides (Reinstatement of Benavides described as unconstitutional), June 13, 2025.

[1812] Junta Nacional de Justicia, Resolución No. 163-2025-PLENO-JNJ (Resolution No. 163-2025-PLENO-JNJ), October 22, 2025. See also La República, JNJ no repone a Delia Espinoza como fiscal de la Nación y se niega a cumplir fallo del Poder Judicial (JNJ does not reinstate Delia Espinoza as Attorney General and refuses to comply with the Judiciary's ruling), October 22, 2025.

[1813] Infobae, Delia Espinoza vuelve como fiscal de la Nación: PJ advierte incumplimiento por parte de la JNJ y le ordena reponer a fiscal (Delia Espinoza returns as Attorney General: Judiciary warns of non-compliance by the JNJ and orders the prosecutor's reinstatement), November 10, 2025.

[1814] Meeting with the Attorney General of Peru, June 23, 2025.

worsening problem that warrants urgent attention, and pending data could confirm that 2025 will be the deadliest year in Peru's recent history in terms of homicides.[1815]

799. With regard to the situation of human rights defenders, in April 2025, the Peruvian State enacted Law No. 32301 and its implementing regulations, which significantly altered the operating framework of the Peruvian Agency for International Cooperation (Agencia Peruana de Cooperación Internacional – APCI). The reforms established stricter controls over civil society organizations receiving international funding, including prior authorization requirements, mandatory activity reporting, and comprehensive sanctions.[1816]

800. The reforms establish severe sanctions—including the suspension or cancellation of organizations that fail to comply with the rules governing the use of international funds—and criminalize the use of such resources to pursue judicial or administrative actions against the State. According to several organizations, this has had an intimidating effect, as the APCI has carried out inspections and issued formal requests to civil society organizations, affecting the work of human rights defenders and restricting access to international justice.[1817]

801. At a public hearing held during its 193rd session, the Inter-American Commission received information from civil society organizations warning of the impacts of this law. They include the fact that the law promotes a climate of self-censorship and fear among organizations, prompting many to suspend their participation in public hearings or before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights. According to their testimony, even the mere possibility of being sanctioned for litigating human rights cases constitutes a form of institutional repression and a direct threat to the exercise of the right of defense.[1818]

802. With regard to the rights of women, progress was made with the consideration in the Congress of bills to provide protection against obstetric violence,[1819] as well as of the draft Law to Promote the Social, Economic, and Participatory Empowerment of Rural and Indigenous Women.[1820] The Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations (MIMP) announced the opening of 10 new Women's Emergency Centers (CEM) to provide services in regions with a high prevalence of violence.[1821] The State also reported on measures to address and investigate cases of sexual violence against Indigenous children and adolescents, including the adoption of an emergency decree allocating funds for the implementation of the National Specialized Justice System (SNEJ) in the province of Condorcanqui.[1822] In addition, the opening of three medical [1815] Infobae, Perú registra su nivel más violento desde 2017: homicidios en 2025 podrían marcar un récord histórico, según SINADEF (Peru records its most violent level since 2017: homicides in 2025 could reach an all-time high, according to SINADEF), October 2, 2025.

[1816] Government of Peru, Law No. 32301, Law amending Law 27692 (Law creating APCI), April 15, 2025. IACHR, Peru: IACHR expresses serious concern over articles of the law modifying the international cooperation agency, May 12, 2025. See also Government of Peru, , September 13, 2025.

[1817] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Peru: Impacts of the law modifying the creation of the Peruvian Agency for International Cooperation," 193rd regular session, July 21, 2025.

[1818] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Peru: Impacts of the law modifying the creation of the Peruvian Agency for International Cooperation," 193rd regular session, July 21, 2025; I/A Court H.R., Case of Ramírez Mejía et al. v. Peru, Application of Article 53 of the Rules of Court, Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of July 2, 2025; Case of Mashco Piro, Yora and Amahuaca Indigenous People v. Peru, Application of Article 53 of the Rules of Court, Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of July 2, 2025; Case of Gamboa García et al. v. Peru, Application of Article 53 of the Rules of Court, Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of July 2, 2025; Case of Ramos Durand et al. v. Peru, Application of Article 53 of the Rules of Court, Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of May 2, 2025.

[1819] Proposed law prevent and eradicate institutional violence against women during gynecological and obstetric care. Congress of the Republic of Peru, Proyecto de ley N°11982/2024-CR, July 25, 2025; Proposed law to protect pregnant women against abuse and violence in reproductive health services, with special emphasis on gynecological and obstetric care. Congress of the Republic of Peru, Proposed law No. 12910/2025-CR, October 21, 2025.

[1820] Congress of the Republic of Peru, Propose law No. 04382/2022-CR, August 19, 2025.

[1821] Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations, MIMP anuncia nuevas medidas para frenar la violencia contra mujeres y proteger a poblaciones vulnerables (MIMP announces new measures to curb violence against women and protect vulnerable populations), September 8, 2025.

[1822] Government of Peru, Note No. 7-5 M/186, Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, IACHR archive, September 17, 2025, p. 24; Government of Peru, Emergency Decree No. 005-2025, May 9, 2025; Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations, MIMP refuerza and legal units and two specialized prosecution units for violence against women and family members in Yutupis and Huampami was announced to investigate complaints against teachers.[1823] In this context, as of March 2025, 616 teachers and 52 administrative staff members had been reported for sexual violence.[1824]

803. In addition, based on the information provided by the State, the IACHR notes an alarming persistence of violence against women, girls, and adolescents.[1825] Between January and September 2025, Women's Emergency Centers (CEM) handled 107,524 cases of violence against women.[1826] The MIMP reported 114 cases with characteristics of femicides, most committed by the victim's partner or former partner;[1827] 211 attempted femicides;[1828] 44,805 cases of psychological violence;[1829] and 22,620 cases of sexual violence, the majority involving girls and adolescents.[1830] In addition, the Office of the Ombudsperson reported a 13 percent increase in alerts about missing women and girls during the first half of 2025, compared to the same period of the previous year,[1831] while the PNP recorded 6,177 reports of missing women of all ages.[1832]

804. Reports were also received of harassment, threats, and physical and sexual violence against migrant domestic workers—particularly of Venezuelan nationality[1833]—and against sex workers,[1834] as well as of obstacles to accessing services and protection mechanisms. The former were reportedly subjected to such violence by employers and landlords, while the latter suffered abuse at the hands of agents of the security forces, criminal groups, and private individuals. There were also reports of repression and physical violence perpetrated by security forces against demonstrators during marches commemorating International Women's Day.[1835]

acciones en Amazonas para enfrentar la violencia contra niñas y mujeres (MIMP strengthens actions in Amazonas to confront violence against girls and women), May 7, 2025.

[1823] Public Prosecution Service, Office of the Attorney General, Fiscalía Especializada en Violencia Contra la Mujer llegará a comunidad awajún en Río Santiago (Specialized Prosecutor's Office for Violence Against Women to reach Awajún community in Río Santiago), August 31, 2025; Official Gazette El Peruano, Crean Fiscalías Especializadas en Violencia contra la Mujer y los Integrantes del Grupo Familiar de Río Santiago - Yutupis y de Huampami - Cenepa, así como las Unidades Médico Legales I Santa María de Nieva, Yutupis y Huampami (Creation of Specialized Prosecutor's Offices for Violence Against Women and Family Members in Río Santiago - Yutupis and Huampami - Cenepa, as well as Legal Medicine Units I in Santa María de Nieva, Yutupis, and Huampami), July 1, 2025.

[1824] Ministry of Education, 616 docentes y 52 administrativos han sido denunciados por violencia sexual en Condorcanqui (616 teachers and 52 administrative staff have been reported for sexual violence in Condorcanqui), March 13, 2025.

[1825] Government of Peru, Note No. 7-5 M/186, Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, IACHR archive, September 17, 2025, p. 37. IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.A, March 26, 2025, para. 720; Committee on the Rights of the Child, Concluding observations on the combined sixth and seventh periodic reports of Peru, January 31, 2025, para. 24; Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Concluding observations on the fifth periodic report of Peru, March 27, 2025, para. 36.

[1826] National Program Warmi Ñan, Statistical Portal, Características de los casos del CEM (Characteristics of Women's Emergency Center (CEM) cases) accessed October 21, 2025.

[1827] National Program Warmi Ñan, Casos con características de feminicidio, Enero-septiembre 2025 (Cases with characteristics of femicide, January-September 2025, accessed on October 21, 2025.

[1828] National Program Warmi Ñan, Casos de tentativa de feminicidio, Enero-septiembre 2025 (Cases of attempted femicide), accessed on October 21, 2025.

[1829] National Program Warmi Ñan, Casos de violencia psicológica, Enero-septiembre 2025 (Cases of psychological violence, January-September 2025), accessed on October 21, 2025.

[1830] National Program Warmi Ñan, Casos de violencia sexual, Enero-septiembre 2025 (Cases of sexual violence, January-September 2025), accessed on October 21, 2025; National Program Warmi Ñan, Casos de violación sexual, Enero-septiembre 2025 (Rape cases, January-September 2025), accessed on October 21, 2025.

[1831] Office of the Ombudsperson of Peru, Defensoría del Pueblo advierte incremento de feminicidios y desaparición de mujeres en primer semestre de 2025 (Ombudsman's Office warns of increase in femicides and disappearance of women in the first half of 2025), July 31, 2025.

[1832] Office of the Ombudsperson, Reporte Igualdad y No Violencia, ¿Qué pasó con ellas? (Equality and Non-Violence Report: What happened to them?) June 2025.

[1833] Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Peru,* 23 January 2025, paras. 51 and 67.

[1834] RedTrasex Perú et al., 193rd regular session, Request for Hearing on the Rights of Sex Workers in Peru, IACHR archive, April 23, 2025, p. 4; Corresponsables Clave, Nos están dejando solas": trabajadoras sexuales denuncian abandono en Lima y Callao ("They are leaving us alone": sex workers denounce abandonment in Lima and Callao), June 9, 2025; InSight Crime, Las mujeres que trabajan en la calle (Women working on the streets), February 13, 2025.

[1835] Infobae, Violencia y detenciones en el 8M: PNP reprime con gas pimienta y golpes a manifestantes en la Plaza San Martín (Violence and arrests on 8M: PNP represses protesters with pepper spray and physical force in Plaza San Martín), March 8, 2025.

805. In this context, initiatives continue to be promoted that seek to dilute the specialized approach required to combat violence and discrimination against women.[1836] For example, a bill was introduced to transfer Women's Emergency Centers (CEM) and their budget—currently under the MIMP—to the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, and to rename them Emergency Women and Family Centers (CEMF).[1837] In addition, the initiative entitled "New Law on Equal Opportunities between Women and Men" was introduced, which would replace the gender-based approach with a concept of equal opportunities based solely on sex.[1838] Similarly, bills were presented to criminalize alleged "false complaints" and the "simulation of aggression" in family violence proceedings.[1839] The IACHR emphasizes that such initiatives presuppose a biased assessment of survivors' credibility and may discourage them from seeking judicial protection, thereby leaving them in a situation of heightened vulnerability. Furthermore, information has been received concerning cases of judicial harassment against women who reported gender-based violence.[1840]

806. During the first half of 2025, 90 cases of maternal death among girls and adolescents were recorded.[1841] These figures occurred in a context of limited access to sexual and reproductive health services, including family planning methods, emergency oral contraception, gynecological and obstetric care, and postabortion care, especially for irregular migrants and other vulnerable groups.[1842] Furthermore, although the Technical Guide on Therapeutic Abortion was modified to include the consent of adolescents for the procedure and to govern the conscientious objection of medical personnel,[1843] the previous amendment that eliminated the grounds related to the mental health of the pregnant woman in cases of pregnancies resulting from rape or fetal malformations incompatible with life remains in force.[1844]

807. With respect to LGBTI persons, in 2025 the judiciary convicted an individual of the crime of discrimination against an LGBTI person, imposing a sentence of two years' imprisonment and the payment of civil reparations.[1845] In addition, the State reported the approval of the "Guide for the Use of Inclusive Language in Public Entities," adopted by Ministerial Resolution No. 125-2025-MIMP and published on April 2, 2025. The [1836] Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations, ¿Sabías que los Centros Emergencia Mujer (CEM) ahora se llaman Centros Emergencia Mujer y Familia? (Did you know that the Women's Emergency Centers (CEM) are now called Women and Family Emergency Centers?]), September 21, 2025; Infobae, Ministra de la Mujer anuncia que se cambiará de nombre el Centro de Emergencia Mujer "para atender también a la familia" (Minister of Women announces the renaming of the Women's Emergency Center "to also serve the family"), September 11, 2025.

[1837] Congress of the Republic of Peru, Proposed law 7466/2023-CR April 15, 2025; Infobae, Congreso aprueba traslado de los CEM al Ministerio de Justicia: alertan riesgo para víctimas de violencia de género (Congress approves the transfer of CEMs to the Ministry of Justice: experts warn of risks for victims of gender-based violence), May 22, 2025.

[1838] Congress of the Republic of Peru, Committee on Women and the Family, Opinion on Proposed law No. 8731/2024-CR, proposing, with a substitute text, the "New Law on Equal Opportunities between Women and Men," IACHR archive, October 2025, pp. 2 and 3; Caretas, Congreso avanza con nueva ley de igualdad entre mujeres y hombres (ongress advances with a new law on equality between women and men), October 5, 2025.

[1839] Congress of the Republic of Peru, Proposed law No. 11561/2024-CR June 12, 2025; Congress of the Republic of Peru, Proposed law No. 11786/2024-CR, June 30, 2025.

[1840] Proyecta Igualdad et al., 193rd regular session, Request for a thematic hearing titled "Abuso de herramientas judiciales contra víctimas y denunciantes de violencia de género" (Misuse of judicial mechanisms against victims and persons reporting gender-based violence), IACHR archive, April 22, 2025.

[1841] Committee on the Rights of the Child, Concluding observations on the combined sixth and seventh periodic reports of Peru, January 31, 2025, para. 34; Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Concluding observations on the fifth periodic report of Peru, March 27, 2025, para. 50; Office of the Ombudsperson, Huánuco: Defensoría del Pueblo exige atención urgente y coordinación eficaz tras muerte de adolescente que dio a luz en su Vivienda (Huánuco: Ombudsman's Office demands urgent attention and effective coordination following the death of an adolescent who gave birth at home), August 8, 2025; Ministry of HealthSalud, Situación de la mortalidad materna 2025 (Situation of maternal mortality 2025), June 28, 2025.

[1842] Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Peru,* 23 January 2025, para. 47; Infobae, Juez prohíbe abortar a menor de 16 años y dicta medidas de protección para feto: padre del nonato presentó denuncia (Judge prohibits 16-year-old minor from having an abortion and orders protection measures for the fetus: the unborn's father filed a complaint), April 4, 2025.

[1843] Ministry of Health, Ministerial Resolution No. 427-2025-MINSA, June 28, 2025.

[1844] National Maternal and Perinatal Institute, Resolución Directoral N.° 200-2025-DG/INMP, June 5, 2025; Infobae, Guía de aborto terapéutico es modificada en Perú: estos son los cambios que preocupan a expertos (Therapeutic abortion guide is modified in Peru: these are the changes that concern experts), June 27, 2025.

[1845] Infobae, Exintegrante de Zaperoko cumplirá condena por discriminar a un miembro de la comunidad LGBT (Former member of Zaperoko to serve sentence for discriminating against a member of the LGBT community), March 19, 2025; El Popular, Exintegrante de Zaperoko es CONDENADO por DISCRIMINACIÓN contra un miembro de la comunidad LGBT (Former member of Zaperoko is CONVICTED for DISCRIMINATION against a member of the LGBT community), March 19, 2025.

guide establishes guidelines for public entities to adopt language that makes women and historically excluded groups visible, thereby promoting institutional communication with a gender and diversity perspective. The resolution abrogates previous versions and provides that the MIMP (Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations) will supervise its implementation.[1846]

808. At the same time, in January the "Muñante" bill was introduced to eliminate the term "gender" from legislation, restricting its meaning to the biological difference between men and women and excluding interpretations based on gender identity or sexual orientation.[1847] In May, Law No. 32331 was enacted, prohibiting transgender persons from using public restrooms in accordance with their gender identity.[1848] That same month, Congresswoman Susel Paredes, an openly lesbian woman, reported having been verbally abused for promoting the rights of transgender persons. The Ethics Committee approved the opening of an investigation against her for advocating that transgender persons be allowed to use bathrooms in accordance with their gender identity.[1849] In addition, civil society organizations reported that official medical protocols continue to promote irreversible and non-consensual genital surgeries on intersex children.[1850] There were also reports of shortages of antiretroviral drugs, which disproportionately affect people living with HIV.[1851]

809. Regarding the rights of persons with disabilities, the Peruvian State reported progress in mainstreaming the disability perspective in public and private entities in order to provide comprehensive care to this population.[1852] Information was also provided on the modification of the Guía Técnica para el Trato Adecuado a las Personas con Discapacidad (Technical Guide for the Appropriate Treatment of Persons with Disabilities), incorporating concepts from the social model of disability, universal accessibility, and specific guidelines for people with deafblindness.[1853] The State also completed consultation processes for the implementation of the System of Supports and Safeguards for the Exercise of Legal Capacity and the Strategy for the Deinstitutionalization of Social Protection Services, ensuring the direct participation of organizations of persons with disabilities.[1854] In addition, the State reported on the activities of the National Council for the [1846] Republic of Peru, Note No. 7-5 M/186, Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the annual report, 344-25/CIDH/SE/MPCT-IA, IACHR archive, September 17, 2025.

[1847] PL-10082-2024-CR, Law interpreting the fifth paragraph of Article 191 of the Political Constitution of Peru regarding the term "gender," submitted on January 30, 2025; IDEHPUCP, Proyecto Muñante: Los riesgos de eliminar el término "género" de la legislación peruana (The Muñante Bill: The risks of eliminating the term "gender" from Peruvian legislation), March 4, 2025; Infobae, "Que 'género' se use solo para hombre y mujer": Presentan proyecto de ley para interpretar término en la Constitución ("Let 'gender' be used only for man and woman": A bill is introduced to interpret the term in the Constitution), February 4, 2025.

[1848] Presentes, En Perú prohíben a personas trans usar baños públicos acordes a su identidad de género: «Es una ley transfóbica» (In Peru, trans people are prohibited from using public bathrooms according to their gender identity: "It is a transphobic law"), May 15, 2025; Infobae, Congreso aprueba norma que atenta contra el derecho de las personas trans a usar baños públicos (Congress approves a rule that threatens the right of trans people to use public bathrooms), February 20, 2025.

[1849] AVT, Comisión de Ética aprueba investigar a Susel Paredes por promover que personas transgénero usen baño de mujeres (Ethics Committee approves investigation of Susel Paredes for promoting transgender people's use of women's bathrooms), May 13, 2025; Infobae, Susel Paredes es denunciada ante la Comisión de Ética por permitir el uso de baños de damas por personas trans (Susel Paredes is denounced before the Ethics Committee for allowing the use of ladies' restrooms by trans people), April 12, 2025.

[1850] Presentes, Perú promueve la mutilación a infancias intersex (Peru promotes the mutilation of intersex children), June 19, 2025; Infobae, Perú promueve que infancias intersexuales sean sometidas a mutilaciones, denuncian activistas y expertos (Peru promotes that intersex children undergo mutilations, activists and experts denounce), June 18, 2025.

[1851] Infobae, Alerta por desabastecimiento de medicamentos contra el VIH: "Están quemando etapas del tratamiento antirretroviral" (Alert over HIV medication shortages: "They are burning through stages of antiretroviral treatment"), January 22, 2025; Infobae, Desabastecimiento de retrovirales en Perú: más de 150 personas con VIH denuncian vulneración a su derecho a la salud (Retroviral shortage in Peru: more than 150 people with HIV denounce the violation of their right to health), July 15, 2025.

[1852] Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, p. 36. Permanent Mission of Peru to the Organization of American States, Note No. 7-5-M/186, September 17, 2025. IACHR archive.

[1853] Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, p. 26. Permanent Mission of Peru to the Organization of American States, Note No. 7-5-M/186, September 17, 2025. IACHR archive.

[1854] Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, p. 26. Permanent Mission of Peru to the Organization of American States, Note No. 7-5-M/186, September 17, 2025. IACHR archive.

Integration of Persons with Disabilities (CONADIS), which conducted research and technical oversight regarding access to the disability certificate.[1855]

810. In terms of challenges, recent research has found that 77 percent of persons with disabilities are unable to access formal employment due to the persistence of social, physical, and attitudinal barriers that limit their full participation in the labor market.[1856] Furthermore, concern was expressed regarding new amendments to the General Law on Persons with Disabilities, which tends toward the institutionalization of this population through the establishment of specialized temporary and permanent shelters.[1857]

811. Regarding the situation of persons in the context of human mobility, on September 15, 2025, the Superintendencia Nacional de Migraciones (Migration Authority) initiated a migrant regularization process. The process will run until the end of 2025 and targets migrants who have overstayed their authorized period of stay, but it does not apply to those who entered the country irregularly.[1858] According to public information, the program could benefit 480,000 people residing in Peru with expired residence permits.[1859]

812. In addition, in the course of the year regulatory reforms were adopted that impact the rights of migrants. In June, Law No. 32.372 was enacted, amending the Criminal Code and the Code of Criminal Enforcement to facilitate expulsion procedures. In particular, the law limits guarantees of due process and access to justice, authorizes the director of the penitentiary facility to expel migrants deprived of liberty, and allows the confiscation of assets or the extinction of ownership of the assets of the expelled migrant for the purpose of civil reparation.[1860]

813. Likewise, the Nationality Law (No. 32.421), published in August, made it harder to obtain Peruvian nationality through naturalization.[1861] The regulation increases the required period of residence from two to five years and requires both general knowledge and language tests. In addition, applicants must demonstrate annual income equivalent to ten tax units (UIT). According to available information, this amount is equivalent to four minimum monthly wages, and no technical criteria have been identified to justify this requirement.[1862]

814. In the area of human trafficking, the State reported that, in the first half of 2025,[1863] activities such as a virtual course on human trafficking and cybercrime, and the publication of the Operational Guide for the Investigation of the Crime of Human Trafficking 2025 were carried out; both reached 3,512 public servants.

[1855] Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report, p. 23. Permanent Mission of Peru to the Organization of American States, Note No. 7-5-M/186, September 17, 2025. IACHR archive.

[1856] PUC, El 77% de personas con discapacidad en el Perú no accede a puestos de trabajo (77% of people with disabilities in Peru do not have access to Jobs), August 9, 2025.

[1857] Human Rights Watch, New Peru Legislation Threatens Disability Rights April 24, 2025.

[1858] Peruvian State platform, Migraciones inicia proceso de formalización migratoria: no aplica para extranjeros con ingreso irregular (Migraciones begins migration formalization process: does not apply to foreigners with irregular entry), September 2, 2025.

[1859] SwissInfo, Perú busca regularizar a 480.000 extranjeros que viven en el país con permisos vencidos (Peru seeks to regularize 480,000 foreigners living in the country with expired permits), September 15, 2025; Infobae, Formalización de extranjeros: Migraciones inició proceso para migrantes que ingresaron al Perú de manera regular (Formalization of foreigners: Migraciones began process for migrants who entered Peru regularly), September 16, 2025.

[1860] Official Gazette El Peruano, Law No. 32.372 que modifica el Código Penal, Decreto Legislativo 635, y el Código de Ejecución Penal, Decreto Legislativo 654, para facilitar la expulsión de extranjeros y fortalecer la seguridad ciudadana (Law No. 32.372 amending the Penal Code, Legislative Decree 635, and the Penal Execution Code, Legislative Decree 654, to facilitate the expulsion of foreigners and strengthen citizen security), June 7, 2025.

[1861] Official Gazette El Peruano, Ley No. 32.421 de Nacionalidad (Nationality Law No. 32.421), August 15, 2025.

[1862] Infobae, Ley de nacionalidad peruana: extranjeros deberán ganar cuatro sueldos mínimos al mes para naturalizarse (Peruvian Nationality Law: foreigners must earn four minimum wages per month to naturalize), August 27, 2025; Instituto de Democracia ya Derechos Humanos PUCP, Nancy Arellano: "la migración es una lupa: revela las contradicciones que también viven los peruanos" (Nancy Arellano: "migration is a magnifying glass: it reveals the contradictions that Peruvians also experience"), August 19, 2025.

[1863] Republic of Peru, Report of the Peruvian State in response to the request for information from the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for the preparation of the 2025 Annual Report.

The Commission also takes note of the establishment of bilateral commitments with Ecuador[1864] and Bolivia[1865] aimed at enhancing the capacities of justice operators and judicial personnel, and strengthening strategies for criminal prosecution, as well as the protection, assistance, and reintegration of victims. At the same time, the IACHR welcomes the approval, in February, of the Annual Operational Plan 2025 of the Regional Government of Arequipa,[1866] which establishes actions focused on the prevention of human trafficking, the protection of victims, and support for witnesses.

815. In relation to the rights of indigenous peoples, the Commission recognizes the efforts undertaken to carry out the Fourth Census of Indigenous Communities in order to update and expand available statistics.[1867] However, indigenous organizations reported the lack of participation of their representatives in the multisectoral commission responsible for ensuring a culturally appropriate methodology.[1868]

816. The Commission is also concerned about the continued occurrence of conflicts arising from the expansion of extractive activities and their environmental impact, particularly the contamination of drinking water sources used by communities. The Commission took note of the strike and blockade organized in Loreto by the peoples of Bajo Tigre due to the presence of mercury in the Tigre River as a result of illegal mining;[1869] and of the modification of the environmental impact assessment submitted by the company Petrotal for the expansion of operations in Block 95, without conducting processes of prior, free, and informed consultation to obtain the consent of the communities concerned.[1870]

817. According to data from the National Penitentiary Institute (INPE), as of June 2025 there were 102,787 persons deprived of liberty housed in facilities with a combined capacity of 41,764. These figures indicate an overcrowding rate of 146 percent, an increase of 11 percentage points over the rate documented at June 2024.[1871] In this context, the Constitutional Court issued a ruling on May 23, 2025, extending until 2030 the deadline for adopting measures to overcome the unconstitutional state of affairs regarding the "permanent and critical overcrowding of penitentiary establishments."[1872] For its part, the State announced the continuation of the construction of a penitentiary facility in the district of Santiago, Ica, which will have capacity for more than 3,000 inmates.[1873]

818. In addition, in its most recent annual report the National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture (MNPT) indicated that structural corruption persists in Peruvian prisons, combined with the internal exercise of power by some detainees. In this context, decisions to place persons in isolation reportedly lack legitimacy in many cases, and individuals who are perceived as troublesome by pavilion representatives are reportedly kept there. In addition, these spaces, known as "latas" (cans), lack beds, have poor infrastructure [1864] Government of Peru, Poderes Judiciales de Perú y Ecuador unen fuerzas contra la trata de personas (Judicial branches of Peru and Ecuador join forces against human trafficking), April 26, 2025.

[1865] Government of Peru, Perú y Bolivia renuevan compromiso de lucha contra la trata de personas (Peru and Bolivia renew commitment to the fight against human trafficking), April 28, 2025.
[1866] Government of Peru, Aprueban plan de trabajo 2025 para combatir la trata de personas en Arequipa (2025 work plan approved to combat human trafficking in Arequipa), February 13, 2025.
[1867] National Institute of Statistics and Informatics, En el año 2025 el INEI ejecutará los Censos Nacionales XIII de Población, VIII de Vivienda y IV de Comunidades Indígenas (In 2025, INEI will conduct the XIII National Population, VIII Housing, and IV Indigenous Communities Censuses), June 25, 2024.
[1868] Servindi, Pueblos indígenas excluidos del Censo 2025 (Indigenous peoples excluded from the 2025 Census), March 25, 2025.
[1869] Infobae, Loreto: comunidades indígenas del río Tigre reportan heridos en paro indefinido contra minería ilegal (Loreto: indigenous communities of the Tigre River report injuries in an indefinite strike against illegal mining), August 28, 2025; Office of the Ombudsperson of Peru, Reporte de conflictos sociales N° 258 (Social Conflicts Report No. 258), August 2025.
[1870] Information provided to the IACHR by indigenous organizations, IACHR archive; Office of the Ombudsperson of Peru, Reporte de conflictos sociales N°258 (Social Conflicts Report No. 258), Augst 2025.
[1871] National Penitentiary Institute – Prison Statistics Information System (SIEP), Government of Peru, Población Penal – Situación Actual de la Capacidad de Albergue y Sobrepoblación (Prison Population – Current Status of Housing Capacity and Overcrowding), June 2025; and Población Penal – Situación Actual de la Capacidad de Albergue y Sobrepoblación (Prison Population – Current Status of Housing Capacity and Overcrowding), June 2024.
[1872] Constitutional Court, Government of Peru, Exp. No. 05436-2014-PHC/TC, Judgment of May 23, 2025.
[1873] Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, Government of Peru, MINJUSDH presentó ante empresas proyecto para continuar construcción del Megapenal de Ica (MINJUSDH presented project to companies to continue construction of the Ica Megaprison), June 12, 2025.

and hygiene conditions, and ventilation is almost nonexistent. Another area of concern is the lack of attention to the specific needs of women. This is reflected, among other practices, in stricter requirements for conjugal visits, as well as in the provision of social reintegration opportunities, which are limited to activities associated with roles traditionally assigned to women.[1874]

819. Cases identified by the Office of the Ombudsperson in 2025 reflect delays by the National Police in transferring to the competent courts persons held at judiciary jails, which are intended for temporary custody of up to 48 hours. It was even documented that a group of persons had not been brought before the authorities for more than 50 days, as a result of which their legal situation had not been resolved.[1875]

820. As of September 7, the Office of the Ombudsperson had assisted more than 26,000 minor children of persons deprived of liberty through its "Rompiendo Cadenas" program, aimed at ensuring the rights of children and adolescents whose parents, guardians, or caregivers are in prison.[1876] This has enabled their inclusion in social programs, health services, and education.[1877] However, the Commission notes with concern that, as documented by that body, children living with their mothers in prison face challenges in terms of access to health care, food, early stimulation, and adequate spaces for their development. In response to this situation, in August an interinstitutional working group was established with the participation of various ministries and the Office of the Ombudsperson.[1878]

XXVI. SAINT KITTS AND NEVIS

- General considerations

821. As it relates to progress, the IACHR highlights the State's success in the reduction of homicides and the passage of new legislation to further suppress criminal activity. In addition, the IACHR takes note of the amendment of legislation to strengthen good governance. Moreover, the Commission welcomes legislation passed by the State which seeks to improve efficiency within the criminal justice system. The IACHR also notes the State's ratification the Inter-American Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities and the Inter-American Convention on Protecting the Human Rights of Older Persons.

822. As it relates to challenges, the persistence of corporal punishment against children, as a lawful practice in the State; and notes that the minimum age of criminal responsibility is not aligned with international standards.

[1874] National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture, Government of Peru, Noveno Informe Anual (Ninth Annual Report), May 2025.

[1875] Office of the Ombudsperson, Government of Peru, Loreto: Defensoría del Pueblo exige que personas detenidas en carceleta del Poder Judicial sean trasladadas a juzgados que ordenaron sus detenciones (Loreto: Ombudsman's Office demands that persons detained in the Judicial Power's lockup be transferred to the courts that ordered their detentions), July 15, 2025.

[1876] Office of the Ombudsperson, Government of Peru, Defensoría del Pueblo y Cuna Más evalúan situación de niñas y niños de 0 a 3 años que viven con sus madres en centros penitenciarios (Ombudsman's Office and Cuna Más evaluate the situation of children aged 0 to 3 living with their mothers in penitentiary centers), August 18, 2025; see also, Defensoría del Pueblo alerta sobre precarias condiciones de niños que permanecen con sus madres en Establecimiento Penitenciario de Mujeres en Huanta (Ombudsman's Office alerts about precarious conditions of children staying with their mothers in the Women's Penitentiary Establishment in Huanta), March 4, 2025.

[1877] Office of the Ombudsperson, Government of Peru, Defensoría del Pueblo: programa "Rompiendo Cadenas" logra importantes avances a dos años de su implementación para abordar derechos de sectores más vulnerables (Ombudsman's Office: "Rompiendo Cadenas" program achieves significant progress two years after its implementation to address the rights of the most vulnerable sectors), September 7, 2025.

[1878] Office of the Ombudsperson, Government of Peru, Defensoría del Pueblo y Cuna Más evalúan situación de niñas y niños de 0 a 3 años que viven con sus madres en centros penitenciarios (Ombudsman's Office and Cuna Más evaluate the situation of children aged 0 to 3 living with their mothers in penitentiary centers), August 18, 2025; see also, Defensoría del Pueblo alerta sobre precarias condiciones de niños que permanecen con sus madres en Establecimiento Penitenciario de Mujeres en Huanta (Ombudsman's Office alerts about precarious conditions of children staying with their mothers in the Women's Penitentiary Establishment in Huanta), March 4, 2025.

823. The State did not respond to the request for information to draft this chapter.

- Specific issues

824. With regards to democratic institutionality, the IACHR notes that in February, the Parliament passed the amendment to the Integrity in Public Life Act which seeks to strengthen good governance, transparency and accountability in the State by improving the consistency, and functionality in all State bodies and offices. This amendment includes refined definitions, strengthened requirements for financial disclosure by public officials, and extended discretion of the Integrity Commission to grant deadline extensions under justified circumstances.[1879]

825. Regarding human rights institutions, according to official information, the Attorney General's Office, in partnership with the Caribbean Community Regional Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, hosted a training workshop for State attorneys to build capacity in integrating international human rights standards into their prosecutorial and civil advisory practice. The workshop focused on upholding legal safeguards during arrest and pre-trial procedures, ensuring fair trial rights and prosecutorial accountability, and maintaining the independence of justice actors.[1880]

826. Regarding citizen security, the IACHR notes that as of December 18, 2025, the State had recorded six homicides, representing a 78% decrease compared to the 28 homicides recorded during the same period in 2024.[1881] According to official sources, this reduction has been linked to the State's public health approach to crime and violence adopted in 2024, which focuses on the root causes of crime such as poverty, lack of education and mental health and treats crime as a symptom of deeper social imbalances rather than relying on punitive measures.[1882]

827. In addition, in relation to crime suppression measures, the State passed the Gang (Prohibition and Prevention) (Amendment) Bill, 2025 to further address the threat of organised crime violence. According to official information, the legislation seeks to strengthen the existing legal framework by expanding definitions, increasing penalties, introducing new offences, and clarifying procedures to combat gang-related crime. New offences under the Bill include impersonating a law enforcement officer and retaliating against those cooperating with authorities. The State emphasised that while the Bill introduces firm legal consequences, its focus is also preventative and rehabilitative.[1883]

828. With regards to access to justice, the Commission notes the passage of the Plea Negotiations and Agreements Bill, 2024, which seeks to improve efficiency within the criminal justice system. According to the State, this legislation prescribes a structured legal framework for just unbiassed plea negotiations and expedited case resolutions.[1884] Moreover, in July, the State successfully passed the amendment to Judge Alone Trials Act, which seeks to further modernize and strengthen its justice system. Among the key changes to the legislation is the clarification of procedures regarding when judge alone trials are mandatory and the expansions of the scope for either the prosecution or the defense to request a judge alone trial in non-scheduled

[1879] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service, Federal Parliament Passes Integrity In Public Life (Amendment) Bill, 2025, to further strengthen Good Governance in Saint Kitts and Nevis, March 21, 2025.
[1880] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service, Justice Ministry Builds Momentum on Human Rights-Based Justice Reform with UN Training for Crown Counsels, July 29, 2025.
[1881] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service, Homicides in Saint Kitts and Nevis Fall Sharply as Public Health Approach to Crime Takes Hold, December 18, 2025.
[1882] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service, Significant Reduction in Crime and Homicides in Saint Kitts and Nevis, July 7, 2025; IACHR, Annual Report Chap IV.A "St. Kitts and Nevis", 2024, para. 739.
[1883] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service, Prime Minister Dr. Terrance Drew urges Youth to choose a Better Path, as Government passes Stronger Anti-Gang Legislation, July 24, 2025.
[1884] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service, Plea Negotiations and Agreements Bill, 2024, Successfully Passed Into Law, January 30, 2025.

matters, based on specific conditions such as the risk of jury tampering, undue trial delays, or case complexity.[1885]

829. With respect to the rights of children, the Commission takes note of the observations made by the Committee on the Rights of the Child regarding the persistence of corporal punishment as a lawful practice in St. Kitts and Nevis. The Committee recommended updating the national strategy and adopting an Action Plan to prevent and eradicate this form of violence. It also recommended strengthening prevention and care mechanisms to ensure protection against sexual abuse. Furthermore, the Committee expressed concern about the minimum age of criminal responsibility, which allows for the prosecution of children as young as 10 years old in cases of serious crimes, and urged the State to raise this age to at least 14, in line with international standards.[1886]

830. Regarding women's human rights, the State reinforced its commitment to strengthening judicial response to cases of gender-based violence. Efforts are being made to encourage reporting, provide comprehensive support to survivors across legal, social and health dimensions, and promote unbiased trauma-informed approaches through gender-sensitive training for police, judicial officers and prosecutors.[1887] At the same time, the IACHR shares the Committee on the Rights of the Child's concern over ongoing challenges to adolescent health, particularly the limited availability of age-appropriate sexual and reproductive health services and education, the high incidence of early pregnancy, the criminalization of abortion, and limited access to contraceptives.[1888]

831. Regarding trafficking in persons, the IACHR takes note that in May, the State took steps toward modernizing its border management system with the passage of the Advance Passenger Information and Passenger Name Bill of 2025. The Bill aims to enhance national security, meet global aviation standards and facilitate international cooperation in areas such as human trafficking prevention.[1889]

832. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, according to available data, the State took steps to deepen Africa–Caribbean cooperation and to modernize security and mobility systems with potential benefits for Afro-descendant communities. In particular, the Government signed a Memorandum of Understanding with Nigeria on cultural exchange and to facilitate direct Africa–Caribbean trade.[1890] Also, Parliament passed the Industrial Designs Bill 2025, replacing a 1930 colonial law and creating local intellectual property protection to empower creators.[1891]

833. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, in a study on Police Interactions with LGBTI+ Persons in the Eastern Caribbean, with some respondents from St Kitts and Nevis, highlighted that some officers appeared to view LGBTI+ individuals as less deserving of protection, leading to mistrust and avoidance of law enforcement. The study also disclosed a lack of any formal LGBTI+ training programs for law enforcement officers, relying instead on generalized diversity training that does not address specific challenges faced by LGBTI+ persons.[1892]

[1885] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service, Parliament passes Judge Alone Trials (Amendment) Bill, 2025, to Strengthen Justice System, July 24, 2025; Judge Alone Trials (Amendment) Bill, 2025, July 8, 2025.

[1886] UN Committee on the Rights of the Child, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Saint Kitts and Nevis*, CRC/C/KNA/CO/2, February 26, 2025.

[1887] Ministry of Social Development and Gender Affairs, in response to article 18 letter "REF: Situation of access to justice with a gender perspective. Regional study", submitted electronically on May 2025, p. 30, 35, 39 and 41. On IACHR´s files.

[1888] Committee on the Rights of the Child, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Saint Kitts and Nevis*, CRC/C/KNA/CO/2, January 31, 2025, p. 48.

[1889] Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis, St. Kitts and Nevis Strengthens Border Security with Passage of ETA Amendment Bill, May 22, 2025.

[1890] SKNIS, Saint Kitts and Nevis strengthens ties with Africa through landmark MoU with Warri Kingdom, April 7, 2025; SKNIS, Saint Kitts and Nevis signs MOU with Nigeria's Green Economic Zone to establish African-Caribbean Atlantic Cooperation, April 2, 2025.

[1891] SKNIS, Historic Industrial Designs Bill 2025 passed to empower creators and align Saint Kitts and Nevis with global IP standards, July 31, 2025.

[1892] ECADE in partnership with Caribbean Development Research Services, Police Interactions with LGBTQ+ Persons in Barbados and the Eastern Caribbean: A Comprehensive Analysis (2024-25), April 25, 2025.

834. With respect to persons with disabilities, Saint Kitts and Nevis made significant progress in advancing the human rights of this population following its ratification of the Inter-American Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities.[1893] Additionally, a new Disabilities Bill is in the process of drafting, with both the policy and legislation expected to be completed by December 2025. This initiative aims to strengthen protections and empower persons with disabilities, addressing the unique challenges they face.[1894]

835. Regarding the rights of older persons, Saint Kitts and Nevis became a State Party to the Inter-American Convention on Protecting the Human Rights of Older Persons in 2025 by depositing its legal instrument of ratification on May 28.[1895] Further, on the International Day of Older Persons, commemorated on October 1, State authorities highlighted older persons' contributions to national development by driving local and global action. The State noted that it continues to heavily invest in the well-being of older citizens, through strengthened health care services, senior recreational programs, and targeted social support to ensure that every older person enjoys a life of comfort, dignity, and respect.[1896]

836. With respect to persons deprived of liberty, the Commission values the partnership between His Majesty's Prison and the St. Kitts and Nevis Defence Force, which provides inmates with training in automotive mechanics, welding, and agriculture, and includes supervised construction projects.[1897] The IACHR also welcomes the initiative of the Ministry of Justice and Legal Affairs and the Office of the Attorney General, which in July organized a two-day training workshop for prison officers on international standards and best practices regarding the rights of persons deprived of liberty. As part of the program, site visits were carried out to Her Majesty's Prison in St. Kitts and the Prison Farm in Nevis to assess current conditions and challenges in the facilities.[1898]

837. Regarding the death penalty, the IACHR notes that it remains a lack of progress related to the removal of the mandatory death penalty, despite the fact that no executions have been carried out since 2008. In addition, there is no person awaiting execution currently, and no new sentences of death have been imposed.[1899]

XXVII. SAINT VINCENT AND THE GRENADINES

- General considerations

838. As it relates to progress, the Commission notes the launch of an initiative to improve child protection and mental health in schools nationwide. In addition, the IACHR takes note of the implementation of the agreement on the free movement of persons with specific countries of the Caribbean Community. Moreover, the Commission welcomes the proposed establishment of a dedicated Disability Unit and the implementation of a mental health program within His Majesty's Prison.

839. As it relates to challenges, the IACHR takes note that a National Human Rights Institution has yet to be established. Moreover, the Commission also highlights alleged incidents of excessive use of force by [1893] IACHR, Press release No. 117, IACHR welcomes St. Kitts and Nevis' ratified two key Conventions on human rights on older persons and persons with disabilities, June 10, 2025.

[1894] Embassy of St. Kitts and Nevis to the USA and Permanent Mission to the OAS, Saint Kitts and Nevis Accedes to Key Inter-American Conventions on Rights of Persons with Disabilities and Older Persons, May 29, 2025.
[1895] IACHR, Press Release, No. 177/15, IACHR welcomes St. Kitts and Nevis' ratified two key Conventions on human rights on older persons and persons with disabilities, June 10, 2025.
[1896] WINN FM, NIA Health Minister says Older People Drive National Development in address, October 3, 2025.
[1897] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service , Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis, HMP and SKNDF Partnership Strengthens Inmate Rehabilitation Through Skill Training, June 6, 2025.
[1898] St. Kitts and Nevis Information Service – Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis, Justice Ministry Champions Human Rights with Site Visits and Training for Prison Officers, July 25, 2025.
[1899] World Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Saint Kitts and Nevis, May 23, 2023; last visited: October 2025.

police. Likewise, the IACHR notes with concern the retention of laws which criminalize private consensual same-sex conduct amongst adults.

840. The State did not respond to the request for information to draft this chapter.

- Specific issues

841. With regards to democratic institutionality, the IACHR notes that the State held general elections on November 27 to elect 15 members of its House of Assembly. According to the official results of the Electoral Office, the main opposition party, the New Democratic Party (NDP), won 14 of the 15 seats to form a new majority government. While the incumbent Unity Labour Party's (ULP) secured 1 seat.[1900]

842. Moreover, the IACHR observes that the State is a party to the Inter-American Convention against Corruption. In this context, the State has developed a draft Integrity of Public Life Act 2004,[1901] which would establish an Integrity Commission and require designated public officials to disclose their financial interests. However, as of the date of this report, there is no information to indicate that this draft legislation has been enacted. Additionally, the State has prepared a draft Prevention of Corruption Act 2004,[1902] which would establish mechanisms for preventing corruption in public office in line with the Inter-American Convention against Corruption. To date, there is no information available to indicate that this draft legislation has been adopted.

843. In relation to human rights institutions, the Commission highlights that while the State has a National Human Rights Monitoring and Reporting Mechanism,[1903] a National Human Rights Institution has yet to be established in accordance with the Paris Principles.

844. In relation to citizen security, according to public information, 26 homicides were reported as of September 10.[1904] This represents a homicide rate of 22.1 per 100,000 inhabitants up to May 2025.[1905]

845. Concerning the rights of children, the IACHR notes that in May, the Ministry of Education in partnership with UNICEF, launched the national "Safe Schools, Initiative". According to public information, this initiative aims to strengthen school infrastructure to meet modern safety standards, provide training for educators and staff on child protection and mental health and to create secure, supportive and inclusive learning environments for children that are free of violence, abuse and neglect.[1906]

846. With regard to persons in the context of human mobility, the IACHR notes the progress achieved in the implementation of the agreement on the free movement of persons signed together with Barbados, Belize, and Dominica within the framework of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM).[1907] According to available information, the agreement, which has been in force since October 1, guarantees the right of nationals of the four States to enter, move freely and reside in each other's territories, while ensuring equal access to economic, social and cultural rights in the host State, including the right to work.[1908] In this context, [1900] Electoral Office of St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Elections Dashboard, 2025.

[1901] Laws of St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Integrity in Public Life Act, 2004.
[1902] Laws of St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Prevention of Corruption Act, 2004.
[1903] IACHR, Annual Report Chap IV.A "St. Vincent and the Grenadines", 2023, para. 739; Annual Report, Chapter IV.A "Saint Vincent and the Grenadines", 2022, para. 711.
[1904] iWitness News, Woman's death takes SVG's homicide count to 26, September 10, 2025.
[1905] The IACHR calculated the homicide rate based on the State's population of 100,616 according to data from The World Bank, Population total – St. Lucia, 2024.
[1906] St. Vincent Times, Minister Commits to Strengthening Child Protection Policies, May 5, 2025; NBC SVG, Government reaffirms commitment to child safety with launch of Child Month Activities, May 6, 2025.
[1907] Caribbean Community (CARICOM), Barbados, Belize, Dominica and St. Vincent and the Grenadines ready for full free movement on 1 October 2025, September 30, 2025.
[1908] Caribbean National Weekly, Barbados, Belize, Dominica and St. Vincent finalize systems for full free movement, September 20, 2025.

the IACHR emphasized that States should strengthen cooperation on human mobility and promote regular migration channels to prevent the risks and vulnerabilities exacerbated by irregular migration.[1909]

847. In relation to trafficking in persons, the Commission takes note that in May and June the Royal Saint Vincent and the Grenadines Police Force (RSVGPF) completed a training program in human trafficking[1910] and launched the annual 2025 Annual Summer Program, respectively. Both activities, provided specialized training on human trafficking, and educated youth during the academic-vacation period about human trafficking, child trafficking, and child labor. [1911]

848. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, the State reported advancements in cultural-rights and memory initiatives linked to Garifuna heritage. The state-owned utility VINLEC themed its 2025 calendar "We are Garifuna."[1912] Schools in Fancy incorporated daily Garifuna-language learning. [1913] Also, the State announced the purchase of the island of Baliceaux, a site historically central to the Garifuna people, with plans for preservation and recognition of its memory. In response, Garifuna leaders welcomed the step and expressed expectations of lasting heritage protection.[1914] Additionally, the tourism authority promoted actions recognizing Garifuna cultural heritage.[1915]

849. Regarding challenges, the IACHR received information that accountability concerns persisted regarding alleged excessive use of force by police, with a request being lodged to prosecute a police officer for an allegedly malicious shooting of a civilian.[1916]

850. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, civil society organizations held LGBTI pride events for a third consecutive year. The events included in-person and virtual activities, and represent a significant advancement in the visibility of sexual and gender diversity in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines. Human rights defenders called for the government to repeal the laws under the criminal code that criminalise private consensual same-sex conduct amongst adults and to create laws that explicitly protect LGBTI persons from discrimination in areas such as employment, education, housing, health and goods and services.[1917]

851. Regarding the rights of persons with disabilities, the State demonstrated its commitment to advancing the rights of persons with disabilities by establishing a dedicated Disability Unit within the Ministry of National Mobilization to address their specific needs.[1918]

852. On the matter of persons deprived of liberty, the Commission notes the implementation of a mental health program at His Majesty's Prison led by the Ministry of National Security in September. The initiative seeks to address the mental health needs of persons deprived of liberty through structured interventions within the correctional system. In this framework, 42 inmates participated in the first activity, which included therapeutic techniques, group sessions for stress management and problem-solving, and supervised medication adjustments.[1919]

[1909] IACHR [@CIDH], (October 10, 2025), #IACHR welcomes the launch of the Enhanced Cooperation Protocol on free movement, which expands the #CARICOM Single Market and Economy programme. The Protocol, in force since last October 1, guarantees the right of nationals of the four States to enter, move freely, and reside in each other's territories, extending these rights to spouses, children, and dependent parents, while ensuring equal access to economic, social, and cultural rights in the host State, including the right to work. [X], X, https://x.com/CIDH/status/1976684951509549388.

[1910] Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, RSVGPF Officers Complete Specialized Training in Human Trafficking, Drug Trafficking, and Marksmanship, May 10, 2025.

[1911] Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, RSVGPF launches 2025 Annual Summer Programs, June 20, 2025.

[1912] Searchlight, Searchlight drone shot helping educate on Garifuna — VINLEC 2025 calendar, January 7, 2025.

[1913] Searchlight, Students of Fancy Government School now learning things Garifuna, January 10, 2025.

[1914] The Guardian, St Vincent and the Grenadines buys island central to Garifuna culture, March 6, 2025; Searchlight, Garifuna applaud Government of St Vincent & the Grenadines, March 13, 2025.

[1915] Searchlight, Tourism Authority launches Heroes & Heritage Month programme 2025, February 28, 2025.

[1916] iWitness News, Lawyer asks DPP to allow prosecution of cop who shot man 'maliciously', February 2, 2025.

[1917] Asberth News Network, Vincentians Celebrate Pride SVG for a 3rd Straight Year, July 10, 2025.

[1918] NBC Radio, Government to create disability unit to support Persons with Disabilities, March 21, 2025.

[1919] SEARCHLIGHT, Inmates with mental health issues grateful for new programme, September 26, 2025.

853. In relation to the death penalty, IACHR remains concerned with the State's lack of progress in abolishing this punishment. Although no executions have taken place since 1995 and no new death sentences have been imposed in recent years, one individual still remains on death row at least as of 2021.[1920]

XXVIII. SAINT LUCIA

- General considerations

854. As it relates to progress, the IACHR takes note of the continued anti-corruption efforts of the State. Additionally, the Commission notes a reduction in the number of homicides and legislative amendments which seek to increase the efficiency of the justice system and address the backlog of cases. Moreover, the IACHR notes the efforts taken by the State to develop and adopt a new framework for a national migration policy. Furthermore, the Commission highlights the landmark judgment which declared unconstitutional the criminalization of private consensual same sex relations.

855. As it relates to challenges, the IACHR notes the lack of establishment of a national human rights institution for the promotion and protection of human rights.

856. The State did not respond to the request for information to draft this chapter.

- Specific issues

857. With regards to democratic institutionality, the IACHR notes the holding of general elections and continued anti-corruption efforts. The State held general elections on December 1 to elect 17 members of its House of Assembly. According to the preliminary results published by the Electoral Commission of St. Lucia, the ruling party, the Saint Lucia Labour Party (SLP) received the majority of votes in 14 constituencies, while independent candidates won in two constituencies and the main opposition party, United Workers Party (UWP), secured one constituency.[1921] The Commission highlights the OAS Electoral Observation Mission Preliminary Report which noted that the election process proceeded in a generally orderly and peaceful manner. In addition, the Report recommended developing regulations for preventing and punishing political violence against women, establishing legal standards and practices to govern political electoral financing and assessing the potential benefits of expanding the membership of the Electoral Commission in order to strengthen institutional capacity.[1922]

858. Within the context of its second UN Convention Against Corruption review, the State revealed that it had already developed an anti-corruption policy through the collaboration of key stakeholders, including the Police Force, various government departments, and the Integrity Commission and is now finalizing witness protection legislation. The draft legislation was already circulated for stakeholder feedback, with public consultations to follow afterwards.[1923] In this regard, the Commission highlights the recommendations of the Review Group which include, developing a more comprehensive policy for the prevention of corruption; periodically evaluating relevant legal instruments and administrative measures against corruption; strengthening the independence and capacity of the Integrity Commission; and adopting legislative and administrative measures relating to campaign financing.[1924]

[1920] World Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, May 23, 2023; last visited: October 2025.
[1921] Saint Lucia Electoral Department, Saint Lucia General Elections 2025, December 2025.
[1922] OAS, Preliminary Report of the OAS Electoral Observation Mission in St. Lucia for the 2025 General Elections, December 3, 2025.
[1923] Government of St. Lucia Information Service, Saint Lucia undergoes UNCAC review to strengthen anti-corruption measures, March 5, 2025.
[1924] Conference of the States Parties to the UNCAC, State of implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption Executive summary, CAC/COSP/IRG/II/2/1/Add.39, July 1, 2025.

859. In relation to human rights institutions, the State has a Parliamentary Commissioner established under the Constitution. This Commissioner has similar authority and investigatory powers of an Ombudsman and is a member of the Caribbean Ombudsman Association and the Commonwealth Forum of National Human Rights Institutions.[1925] The functions of the Commissioner include investigating administrative and corruption complaints against government departments and public authorities. It is noted that the Commissioner is not barred from investigating complaints relating to fundamental rights and freedoms as enshrined under the Constitution.[1926] The State has yet to establish a National Human Rights Institution in accordance with the Paris Principles.

860. In relation to citizen security, according to public information, 28 homicides were reported between January and June, compared to 40 homicides for the same period in 2024.[1927] This represents a 30% reduction in the number of homicides and a homicide rate of 10.01 per 100,000 inhabitants up to June 2025.[1928]

861. With regards to access to justice, the Commission notes the passage of legislation in the State's Parliament for the introduction of judge-alone trials. In March, the State amended its Criminal Code and Supreme Court Act to provide for judge-alone trials where an accused person so elects, where the prosecution makes an application on specific grounds or when a judge so rules.[1929] According to the State, the amendments seek to increase the efficiency of the justice system and address the backlog of cases by permitting expedited hearings.[1930]

862. Concerning the rights of children, the Commission highlights the refurbishment and relaunch of the Learning Resource Center at the New Beginnings Transit Home for Children. According to the State, the modernized facility is designed to protect and empower the most at-risk children across Saint Lucia by providing a safe, technology-enabled, and inclusive space dedicated to supporting the educational development of children in transitional care. The Centre will function as a hub for academic support, digital literacy training and will assist in bridging the learning gaps for children in State care.[1931]

863. Regarding the human rights of women, steps have been taken to strengthen the response to violence against women. At the end of 2024, with the support of UN agencies, the Government launched the National Inter-Agency Task Force on Gender-Based Violence, aimed at institutionalizing coordination and partnerships across sectors to address this issue.[1932] In May, a training workshop was held for key representatives from government agencies, civil society, and healthcare institutions to build national capacity on gender equality, social inclusion, and gender-based violence in the context of emergencies and climate-related disasters. During this workshop, Saint Lucia's Clinical Management of Rape Protocol was officially validated.[1933]

864. With regard to people in the context of human mobility, the IACHR notes the efforts taken by the State to develop and adopt a new framework for a national migration policy. In this regard, a training workshop for frontline officials has been carried out, among other measures, with the aim of improving migration and border governance.[1934] According to available information, with a view to achieving a comprehensive document, this migration policy will be developed through a consultative process which

[1925] Caribbean Ombudsman Association, Members, 2025; Commonwealth Forum of National Human Rights Institutions, St. Lucia, 2025.

[1926] Laws of St. Lucia, Constitution of St. Lucia, 1978, sections 112, 113.

[1927] The Voices, Police investigate homicide and intercept alleged drug traffickers, July 2, 2025.

[1928] The IACHR calculated the homicide rate based on the State's population of 179,744 according to data from The World Bank. The World Bank, Population total – St. Lucia, 2024.

[1929] Laws of St. Lucia, Criminal Code (Amendment) Act, 2025; Supreme Court (Amendment) Act, 2025.

[1930] Government of St. Lucia Information Service, Parliament debates introduction of judge-alone trials, March 14, 2025.

[1931] Saint Lucia Ministry of Equity, Social Justice and Empowerment, Renovated Learning Resource Center Opens at New Beginnings Transit Home, April 17, 2025.

[1932] The Voice, Saint Lucia Advances Gender-Based Violence Response, June 6, 2025; United Nations, Barbados and the Eastern Caribbean, Saint Lucia Launches First-Ever National Inter-Agency GBV Task Force, December 17, 2025.

[1933] Web Portal of the Government of Saint Lucia, Saint Lucia advances Gender-Based Violence response, June 5, 2025.

[1934] International Organization for Migration (IOM), Government of Saint Lucia and IOM Partner to Develop, March 7, 2025.

involves government actors, ministries, civil society organizations, representatives of the diaspora and international agencies.[1935]

865. In relation to trafficking in persons, the IACHR takes note that in May, the State in partnership with the Caribbean Community Implementation Agency for Crime and Security, hosted the CARICOM Standing Committee of Chiefs of Immigration and Comptrollers of Customs to strengthen regional leadership, innovation, and collaboration in border security against trafficking in persons, among others areas of interest.[1936]

866. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, in August the Eastern Caribbean Supreme Court declared sections 132 and 133 of the Criminal Code criminalizing Buggery and Gross indecency are inconsistent with various Constitutional Rights protected under the Bill of Rights of the Constitution of Saint Lucia. With this decision, Saint Lucia joins other nations whose courts have struck down criminalization provisions as human rights violations. In welcoming the decision, the IACHR noted that legislative provisions that criminalize private consensual same sex relations are against international human rights standards, as they violate human dignity, privacy, and freedom of expression and called upon States of the region that still maintain criminalizing legislation to repeal the laws.[1937]

867. Regarding the rights of persons with disabilities, in October, the State began a series of national consultations to gather public feedback on the Draft National Policy for Persons with Disabilities. According to the State, the draft policy envisions "an inclusive and accessible Saint Lucia where persons with disabilities can participate fully in every aspect of national life." It is guided by principles of dignity, equality, autonomy, and participation, outlining clear goals to protect human rights, eliminate discrimination, and expanding equitable access to services, employment, and justice. The national consultations aim to engage persons with disabilities, their families, representative organisations, and other stakeholders to shape a more inclusive and equitable national framework for disability rights and empowerment.[1938]

868. On the matter of persons deprived of liberty, the Commission takes note of the inauguration of the Centralized Community Safety Centre in Castries in May. According to official information, the new facility includes eight modern detention cells designed for short-term custody. This measure seeks to reduce overcrowding in police stations, standardize conditions of detention, and improve the treatment of persons held in provisional custody.[1939]

869. In relation to the death penalty, the IACHR notes that no progress has been made towards its abolition, even though no executions have been carried out since 1995, and nobody is currently on death row.[1940]

XXIX. SURINAME

- General considerations

870. As it relates to progress, the IACHR welcomes the election of the first female President of the Republic. It also notes that the State launched the Children's Ombudsman Institute and established a National [1935] IOM, Saint Lucia Strengthens Border Capacity Ahead of First National, 22 September 2025.

[1936] CARICOM, Strengthening Regional Border Security, May 13, 2025; CARICOM, CARICOM IMPACS convenes 28th CICC Meeting, May 13, 2025.
[1937] IACHR, Press release No. 160/25, IACHR welcomes decision to decriminalize consensual sexual relations between same sex adults in Saint Lucia, August 12, 2025; The Guardian, Caribbean LGBTQ+ activists celebrate as court strikes down colonial-era laws, August 1, 2025.
[1938] St. Lucia Times, National Consultations Begin on Draft Policy for Persons with Disabilities, October 13, 2025.
[1939] Ministry of Home Affairs – Government of Saint Lucia, Centralized Community Safety Centre opens, May 25, 2025.
[1940] World Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Saint Lucia, May 23, 2023; last visited: October 2025.

Commission on the Elimination of Child Labor. Moreover, the Commission highlights the presentation by the government of the Draft Law on the Collective Rights of Indigenous and Tribal Peoples. Additionally, the Commission takes note of the inauguration of the Central Resocialization Center for the benefit of persons deprived of liberty.

871. As it relates to challenges, the Commission notes the concerns raised by Indigenous peoples regarding the lack of adequate protection for their rights and the exacerbation of social and economic inequalities. In addition, the IACHR takes note of the presence of structural racial discrimination which continues to negatively affect people of African descent.

872. The State did not respond to the request for information to draft this chapter.

- Specific issues

873. With regards to democratic institutionality, the State held general elections in May to elect 51 members of the National Assembly (DNA). According to the official results of the Central Polling Station, the National Democratic Party (NDP) won 18 seats, while the incumbent government under the Progressive Reform (VHP) secured 17 seats.[1941] This was the first general election after reforms were made to the Constitution and the Electoral Regulations in 2023, which amended the manner of electing members of DNA from a 10-constituency system to a system of proportional representation. As reported by the Commission, this reform followed a decision by the Constitutional Court in 2022 that ruled that the previous regulations violated the constitutional principles of equality and non-discrimination.[1942]

874. In addition, the IACHR notes the recommendations of the Preliminary Report of the OAS Electoral Observation Mission which welcomed the electoral reform advancements undertaken by the State but also stressed the need for: i) devising a clear procedure for the presentation and investigation of complaints for election law violations; ii) enacting legislation on the financing of political parties and campaigns to include clear limits on campaign spending and the prevention of anonymous donations; and iii) adopting a legal and institutional framework to prevent, monitor and sanction political violence, with specific provisions addressing violence against women in politics, including online violence.[1943]

875. In relation to human rights institutions, in April, the State launched the Children's Ombudsman Institute (KOS) aimed at protecting children's rights in Suriname. According to the State, the independent institute will ensure that children's rights are guaranteed and respected. The Institute will conduct awareness campaigns in the districts and conduct independent research on request and on its own initiative. Further, it will also be empowered to make recommendations to government and social organizations about how best children's rights can be protected in Suriname.[1944] In addition, the Committee takes note of the concerns raised by civil society with regard to the Constitutional Court. According to public information, the terms of office of the President, the Registrar and several members of the Tribunal expired in May 2025 and had not been renewed, leaving the Tribunal without functions. At the time of writing, the Tribunal's executive had not yet been appointed.[1945]

876. Concerning the rights of children, the IACHR takes note of the establishment of the National Commission on the Elimination of Child Labor (NCUK) in May. According to official information, in line with Suriname's international human rights obligations, this Commission was established to develop interdepartmental policies to combat child labor, with special attention to eliminating the most severe forms of child labor in the State. This Commission includes representatives from various ministries, each responsible

[1941] Central Electoral Bureau, CHS stelt verkiezingsuitslag vast, June 11, 2025.
[1942] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV.A "Suriname", 2024, paras. 765 – 767.
[1943] OAS Electoral Observation Mission, Preliminary Report of the OAS Electoral Observation Mission in Suriname for the 2025 General Elections, May 27, 2025.
[1944] Office of the President, Kinderombudsinstituut Suriname gelanceerd; betere behartiging kinderrechten, April 22, 2025.
[1945] Suriname Herald, Parlement luidt noodklok over vrijwel verlamd Constitutioneel Hof, November 21, 2025; ABC Surinam, SOVA vraagt wederom om invulling Constitutioneel Hof, October 6, 2025.

for parts of youth policy. It was emphasized that the creation of this Commission represents the State's ongoing commitment to actively pursuing policies to eradicate child labor in all forms.[1946]

877. Regarding women's human rights, Jennifer Geerling-Simons was historically elected as the first woman President of the Republic of Suriname, the highest office in the country.[1947] In addition, an internal Commission on Violence and Sexual Harassment was established within the Ministry of Labor, Employment & Youth Affairs to formulate policy and establish a clear complaint procedure.[1948]

878. Regarding the rights of indigenous peoples, the Government presented the Draft Law on the Collective Rights of Indigenous and Tribal Peoples as a step toward the recognition of such rights.[1949] However, civil society organizations expressed their concern regarding the inadequate characterization of ancestral territories and of Indigenous Peoples as a legal and cultural concept, as well as the absence of processes to ensure free, prior, and informed consultation and consent in the drafting of the law.[1950]

879. Additionally, the IACHR held a thematic hearing on extractive projects in Suriname, within the framework of its 192nd Period of Sessions. On this occasion, Indigenous representatives denounced the lack of adequate protection for their rights, noting that mining operations have resulted in land dispossession, contamination of rivers, and the exacerbation of social and economic inequalities. They underscored the urgent need to guarantee free, prior, and informed consent (FPIC) in all decisions affecting their territories. The State reiterated its willingness to cooperate with Indigenous communities to address longstanding challenges and described measures aimed at strengthening participation in decision-making processes. In this regard, the IACHR reminded States of their international obligations to protect Indigenous rights, lands, and territories and offered to collaborate with the State and communities to address human rights challenges.[1951]

880. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, Suriname recorded normative and cultural advances with potential positive impact on the collective rights and visibility of Afro-descendant tribal peoples (Maroons). The State announced the review of land concessions and its intention to permanently protect 90% of the forests and has pledged to update conservation laws in order to reduce deforestation and protect the ancestral lands of indigenous peoples and Maroons.[1952]

881. Likewise, the Commission notes the official standardization of orthographies for Sranan, Sarnami, Okanisi (Ndyuka), and Saamaka, which marked a milestone in the recognition and standardization of Suriname's four national languages.[1953] Moreover, organizations and international partners announced support for territorial protection, through Tenure Facility funding for community associations,[1954] trainings for community demarcation,[1955] and regional articulation via a joint manifesto with the Sarayaku people.[1956] Likewise, actions of memory and recognition were recorded.[1957]

[1946] Ministry of Labor, Employment and Youth Affairs, AWJ installeert commissies tegen kinderarbeid en seksueel molest, May 5, 2025.

[1947] Reuters, Suriname parliament elects Simons as first female president, July 6, 2025.

[1948] Republic of Suriname, AWJ installeert commissies tegen kinderarbeid en seksueel molest, May 5, 2025.

[1949] Office of the President, Regering levert historische bijdrage aan ontwikkelingen van grondenrechten, February 18, 2025.

[1950] Forest Peoples Programme, VIDS repudiates government U-turn in amended draft law for Indigenous and Tribal Peoples' rights (Suriname), February 24, 2025.

[1951] IACHR, 192 Period of Sessions, Suriname: Indigenous peoples' rights in the face of extractive projects (Ex Officio), March 5, 2025.

[1952] Waterkant, Minister Soeropawiro van GBB: "Wie recht heeft op grond zal recht gedaan worden", August 20, 2025. Associated Press (AP), Suriname pledges to shield 90% of forests, far beyond global conservation goal, September 27, 2025.

[1953] Suriname Herald, Officiële spelling Sranan, Sarnami, Okanisi en Saamaka overhandigd aan minister Ori, May 14, 2025.

[1954] De Ware Tijd, U$ 1,4 miljoen voor VIDS en VSG voor behoud traditionele leefgebieden, May 15, 2025.

[1955] Suriname Herald, VIDS-project ondersteunt strijd voor erkenning inheemse landrechten, 12 May 2025.

[1956] Suriname Herald, VSG ondertekent manifest met Sarayaku in Ecuador voor bescherming inheemse rechten, 29 May 2025.

[1957] State of Suriname, Statement President Chandrikapersad Santokhi ter gelegenheid van Dag der Vrijheden 2025, 1 July 2025; Suriname Herald, President Santokhi op Keti Koti: Laat de geest van onze voorouders ons vandaag inspireren, 1 July 2025; Suriname Herald, Suriname presenteert 'Gron Nyan' op Wereldexpo in Japan, 20 June 2025.

882. However, structural racial discrimination continues to affect people of African descent—particularly Maroon, Creole, and Afro-Surinamese communities. The visit by the UN Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent (WGEPAD) documented persistent gaps in education, health, water and sanitation, employment, and political participation, as well as enduring stereotypes and a lack of social recognition.[1958]

883. On the other hand, organizations and media highlighted persistent risks regarding territorial recognition and non-discrimination. Despite the submission of a bill to the legislature, Suriname still lacks a law to formalize territorial rights of indigenous and Maroon communities, with controversies over extractive plans without adequate consultation.[1959] Saamaka leaders and other traditional authorities rejected "deep" changes to the grondenrechten draft due to lack of consultation and potential weakening of collective property rights.[1960]

884. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, the Constitutional Court of Suriname ordered the government to register the marriage of two same-sex couples in the registers of the Central Bureau for Civil Affairs (CBB). The Court found that to refuse to register same-sex marriages violates international treaties to which Suriname is a party. The Court also ordered the state to work on amending Surinamese legislation on this matter.[1961]

885. Relating to the rights of persons with disabilities, in April, the National Policy Plan for Persons with Disabilities 2025–2030 was presented to the Government. The policy, created in collaboration with United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), focuses on the implementation of sustainable policy until 2030 for the benefit of people with disabilities including, making government buildings accessible, adjustments to traffic, and facilities for the reception and guidance of people with disabilities. The plan also includes the establishment of an authority to supervise its implementation at both national and international levels.[1962]

886. Regarding the rights of older persons, based on public information, the Commission notes that Suriname raised the basic old-age pension (AOV) to SRD 2,250 (approx. USD. 60.00) per month in March. People 60 and older also get "KKV", an additional allowance paid separately from the AOV, intended to cushion living-cost pressures. At the same time, media and older persons' groups have voiced concerns that, despite the increase, the AOV may still be insufficient to keep up with living costs, in part because the KKV is a separate payment, which can be eliminated, rather than part of the pension.[1963]

887. In relation to the right to care and dignified living conditions in old age, monitoring for this year underscored the need for adequate oversight of long-term care facilities. In this context, residents of Suriname's Ashiana home described serious infrastructure problems earlier in the year, including leaking roofs, damaged ceilings, clogged drains, and unusable toilets; by late August the facility reported that residents were "living again in a dignified environment," indicating that repairs had restored habitability and hygiene standards.[1964]

888. With respect to persons deprived of liberty, the Commission takes note of the inauguration of the Central Resocialization Center under the Ministry of Justice and Police in April. According to available information, the center coordinates reintegration programs including internships, financial education, anger

[1958] United Nations, News Release: End of mission statement by the United Nations Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent following its country visit to Suriname, April 2, 2025.
[1959] Dagblad Suriname, Quorum, politiek draagvlak en tijdsgebrek belemmerend bij behandeling wetproducten DNA, 3 January 2025; Mongabay, What's at stake for the environment in Suriname's upcoming elections?, May 23, 2025.
[1960] De Ware Tijd, Verbazing, afschuw en woede om ingrijpend gewijzigd wetsontwerp grondenrechten, 24 February 2025; Mongabay, Land rights bill in Suriname sparks outrage in Indigenous communities, February 28, 2025.
[1961] DWT Online, Rechterlijk vonnis: Staat moet homohuwelijk accepteren, February 14, 2025.
[1962] Office of the President, President Santokhi ontvangt Nationaal Beleidsplan voor Mensen met een Beperking, April 2025; UNICEF, UNICEF and Government of Suriname Advance Disability Inclusion, April 17, 2025.
[1963] Suriname Nieuws Centrale, President Santokhi blijft ouderen steunen – AOV-uitkering vijf keer verhoogd in 4,5 jaar, March 22, 2025; SRNieuws, Ouderen maken zich zorgen over ontoereikende AOV-uitkering, March 25, 2025.
[1964] SRNieuws, Senioren Huize Ashiana wonen weer in menswaardige omgeving, August 25, 2025.

management, and psychological support, as part of bilateral cooperation with the Netherlands through the Makandra Fund and operates in collaboration with the national penitentiary service.[1965]

XXX. TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO

- General considerations

889. As it relates to progress, the Commission highlights efforts by the State to fight corruption and notes a decrease in homicides. Additionally, the IACHR welcomes the launch of the Central Registry on Gender-Based Violence's Umbono System and the National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security.

890. As it relates to challenges, the Commission notes with concern the State's continued reliance on States of Emergency as a crime suppressing measure and high levels of domestic violence and femicide. Further, the IACHR observes with concern the situation regarding the right to education of migrant children, especially of Venezuelan nationality and a proposed "mass deportation" directive issued by the government. In addition, regarding LGBTI rights, the Commission notes the overturning of the 2018 judgment which had declared unconstitutional the criminalization of consensual sexual conduct between adults.

891. The State did not respond to the request for information to draft this chapter.

- Specific issues

892. With regards to democratic institutionality, the IACHR notes that the State held general elections on April 28 to elect 41 members of its House of Representatives. According to the official results of the Elections and Boundaries Commission, the main opposition party, the United National Congress (UNC), won 26 of the 41 seats to form a new majority government. While the People's National Movement (PNM) secured 13 seats and the Tobago People's Party (TPP) won 2 seats.[1966]

893. Regarding human rights institutions, the State has an Office of the Ombudsman, which is a member of the Caribbean Ombudsman Association, the Commonwealth Forum of National Human Rights Institutions,[1967] and the International Ombudsman Institute.[1968] Further, the Integrity Commission of Trinidad and Tobago is a member of the Commonwealth Caribbean Association of Integrity Commissions and Anti-Corruption Bodies.[1969] In its 2024 Annual Report, published in June 2025, the Integrity Commission highlighted its ongoing efforts to fight corruption. It noted that as of December 2024, 78% of public officials had submitted their required financial declarations, an improvement of 17% compared to the same period in the previous year. These declarations are a legal requirement that every public official is required to abide by and are aimed at ensuring transparency in government.[1970]

894. With regards to citizen security, the IACHR notes that according to publicly available information, there were 349 homicides reported as of December 16, 2025, which represented 40.7% decrease [1965] Ministerie van Justitie en Politie, Regering van Suriname, Centraal Resocialisatiecentrum biedt nieuwe kansen voor gedetineerden, April 28, 2025.

[1966] Election and Boundaries Commission, Parliamentary Elections 2025, April 30, 2025.
[1967] Commonwealth Forum of National Human Rights Institutions, Trinidad and Tobago, 2025.
[1968] International Ombudsman Institute, Members, 2025.
[1969] Commonwealth Caribbean Association of Integrity Commissions and Anti-Corruption Bodies, Members, 2025.
[1970] The Integrity Commission of Trinidad and Tobago, 37th Annual Report 2024, June 16, 2025.

from the 589 homicides recorded over the same period in 2024.[1971] This represents a homicide rate of 25.5 per 100,000 inhabitants for the period.[1972]

895. Moreover, in its 2024 Annual Report, the Commission noted the declaration of a State of Emergency (SOE) in December 2024.[1973] In this context, in March 2025, the IACHR requested information regarding that SOE, particularly concerning the alleged detention of children. However, no information has been provided.[1974] The SOE came to an end on April 14, 2025 and resulted in 14 persons being charged under the Anti-Gang Act. According to publicly available information, 53 people in total were detained in connection with suspected gang activity and of those detained, 39 were released hours before the end of the SOE.[1975]

896. Furthermore, once again in July 2025, the State declared an SOE following the revelation of a coordinated and dangerous criminal network operating from within the nation's prison system.[1976] Under the SOE, freedom of speech was restricted, bail provisions were suspended and members of the police service had the authority to arrest without warrant persons on suspicion of involvement in illegal activities.[1977] According to public information, up to October 7, the Police Service had conducted a total of 5,828 operations which resulted in the arrest of 2,589 people and seizure of 154 firearms.[1978] On October 31, the SOE was extended for a further period of three months and will come to an end in January 2026.[1979]

897. On the other hand, the IACHR notes with concern states of emergency and increased police lethality affecting communities that are predominantly Afro-descendant. In 2025, The Police Complaints Authority (PCA) warned, in July, about the increase in deaths in police-involved shootings since the declaration of the SOE, expressing concern about the use of force and the need for effective investigations.[1980] In that regard, a 133% increase in deaths from police intervention was documented as of March 2025,[1981] with multiple lethal incidents under investigation.[1982]

898. In relation to access to justice, the Commission takes note of the intention of the State to establish the office of Lord Chancellor of the Judiciary. According to public information, the Lord Chancellor will be responsible for overseeing the daily logistics and functioning of the judiciary and it is hoped that the office will assist in combatting the current backlog of cases. Further, the State intends to conduct nationwide consultations to garner public feedback on the establishment of the office.[1983]

899. Concerning the rights of children, the Commission observes that in April 2025, civil society, in collaboration with UNICEF, assisted 149 Venezuelan children born in Trinidad and Tobago in receiving their birth certificates, thereby giving them legal identity and access to essential State services. UNICEF stressed the importance of legal identity and noted that without a birth certificate, children may be denied access to [1971] Trinidad and Tobago Guardian, TTPS: Homicides down by 66% in PoS division, December 16, 2025.

[1972] The IACHR calculated the homicide rate based on the State's population of 1,368,333 according to data from The World Bank. The World Bank, Population total - Trinidad and Tobago, 2024.
[1973] IACHR, Annual Report Chap IV.A "Trinidad and Tobago", 2024, para. 790.
[1974] IACHR, Trinidad and Tobago – State of Emergency, Article 18 IACHR Statute, March 3, 2025, IACHR Archive.
[1975] Trinidad and Tobago Guardian, Gonzales, Benjamin say SoE was a 'success', April 15, 2025.
[1976] Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, Legal Notice No. 240, July 18, 2025.
[1977] Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, Legal Notice No. 241, July 18, 2025.
[1978] Trinidad and Tobago Express, Decrease in SoE arrests, seizures, October 12, 2025.
[1979] Parliament of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, Extension of state of public emergency for a further period of three months, October 31, 2025.
[1980] Trinidad and Tobago Guardian, PCA raises alarm over increase in police killings since SoE, July 24, 2025.
[1981] Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Police killings up by 133% in 2025, March 21, 2025.
[1982] Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Marabella man shot dead by police, family wants answers, February 15, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, 2 killed in police-involved shootings, March 16, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Three killed by police in shootout in Tunapuna, March 20, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Family of Chaguanas farmer killed by cops: 'Why they kill Boyie?', May 25, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Shootout between men and police leaves 1 dead, 2 injured, May 27, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Alleged contract killer fatally shot in stand-off with police in Marabella, May 30, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Laventille man dead, another wounded in police-involved shooting, August 4, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Man hospitalised after police-involved shooting in Claxton Bay, August 21, 2025.
[1983] Trinidad and Tobago Guardian, Govt to introduce Lord Chancellor of the Judiciary post, July 8, 2025.

education and healthcare, face greater risks of poverty and exploitation, and become vulnerable to statelessness.[1984]

900. Regarding women's human rights, in April two women were elected to occupy top governmental offices: Kamla Persad-Bissessar as Prime Minister, and Pennelope Beckles-Robinson as Leader of the Opposition in the House of Representatives.[1985] Other positive developments include the launch of the Central Registry on Gender-Based Violence's Umbono System, which tracks the survivor's journey through the judicial system and facilitates referrals to relevant organizations;[1986] and the National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security, which provides a strategic framework to address the impact of armed violence, organized crime and gender-based violence.[1987]

901. However, domestic violence and femicide figures remain concerning.[1988] According to publicly available information, between January and July, at least 26 women were killed, many in horrifying circumstances.[1989]

902. With regard to persons in the context of human mobility, the IACHR observes with concern the situation regarding the right to education of migrant children, especially of Venezuelan nationality. In this regard, these children have faced difficulties in accessing the education system due to barriers, particularly relating to admission criteria which requires the possession of certificates translated into English, including birth and vaccination certificates.[1990] According to available information, this situation has led to an increase in illiteracy and child labor in the State.[1991]

903. Further, the Commission notes with concern a policy directive issued by the Ministry of Homeland Security which instructs the Immigration Division to ensure that all "illegal" migrants detained are held at the Immigration Detention Center until repatriation. In this regard, the directive reportedly prohibits the issuance of Orders of Supervision, which allows migrants to reside outside detention facilities, as the government considers a possible mass deportation exercise for all "illegal" migrants.[1992]

904. In addition, the Commission notes with concern the 82% reduction in work permit exemptions granted to Venezuelan migrants. According to publicly available information, the Ministry of Homeland Security decreased the number of work permit exemptions issued to Venezuelans from 4,275 permits in 2024 to 757 in 2025.[1993] These work permit exemptions allows holders to legally work in Trinidad and Tobago for a maximum period of 1 year for any employer.[1994]

905. With respect to trafficking in persons, the Commission takes note of efforts carried out by the Ministry of Homeland Security's Counter Trafficking Unit (CTU) in July and August which resulted in the disruption of two crime syndicates involved in human trafficking. In June, Operation G-Ride resulted in the detention of 45 persons across Trinidad and the recovery of 17 individuals: 12 women aged 18-26, two men, [1984] UNICEF, Securing every child's right to legal identity in Trinidad and Tobago, April 30, 2025.

[1985] Ministry of Foreign and CARICOM Affairs, The Prime Minister of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, n/d, accessed on October 8, 2025; Parliament of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, The Honourable Pennelope Beckles-Robinson, n/d, accessed on October 8, 2025.
[1986] Who's who in Trinidad & Tobago Business, Minister Launches the Umbono System to Address Gender-Based Violence , January 22, 2025; TTT.Live, 'Umbono' System Unveiled To Combat Gender-Based Violence In T&T, January 8, 2025.
[1987] United Nations in the Caribbean, Trinidad and Tobago becomes first Caribbean nation to launch a National Action Plan on Women, Peace, and Security, March 26, 2025.
[1988] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IV.a, March 26, 2025, p. 796.
[1989] Trinidad Express, Stacy Gopaulsingh's husband charged with murdering her, January 13, 2025; Newsday, Man, 65, kills wife, then himself, at Williamsville home, January 27, 2025; Guardian, IWRN wants urgent action as 26 women killed so far this year, July 18, 2025.
[1990] UN News, Young Venezuelan refugees have a fresh start in schools in Trinidad and Tobago, January 3, 2025.
[1991] Swissinfo, Venezuelan children face exploitation and low schooling in Trinidad and Tobago, October 9, 2025.
[1992] Trinidad and Tobago Guardian, PM on "mass deportation": Only those in detention to be sent home, October 28, 2025.
[1993] Trinidad and Tobago Guardian, Govt cuts 3,518 Venezuelan work permits, November 2, 2025.
[1994] UNHCR, Trinidad and Tobago – Asylum Seeker Rights, 2025.

one 16-year-old girl, and to babies.[1995] While in August, Operation Triple Knock, rescued 13 females, one a 13-year-old girl, from two spa facilities.[1996]

906. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, the IACHR takes note of memory and recognition initiatives and decisions by local authorities to homage Pan-Africanist leaders.[1997]

907. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, civil society organizations hosted TT PRIDE parade 2025 where activists called on leaders in Trinidad and Tobago to pay attention to LGBTI persons.[1998] In addition, on March 25 a decision of the Court of Appeal overturned the 2018 ruling by the High Court in the case of Jones v. Trinidad and Tobago, which had declared Sections 13 and 16 of the Sexual Offences Act unconstitutional, illegal and of no effect insofar as they criminalized consensual sexual conduct between adults.[1999] As such, the crime of "buggery" is now punishable by up to five years' imprisonment, and gross indecency by up to two years' imprisonment.[2000] Trinidad and Tobago remains one of the few states in the American region which maintain criminalizing laws against LGBTI persons.

908. Regarding persons with disabilities, Trinidad and Tobago made notable progress by introducing the Persons with Disabilities Bill, which aims to ensure national inclusion, equality of opportunity, freedom from discrimination, and respect for diversity. The Bill is reportedly in its final stages of approval.[2001]

909. With respect to persons deprived of liberty, the Commission takes note of the proposal to decommission the Port of Spain Prison after 268 years of operation. The closure, to be implemented in phases, responds to judicial findings that the facility was unfit to house inmates and had generated significant judicial action which resulted in numerous judgments awarding compensation to affected inmates. In this context, inmates will be transferred to the Maximum-Security Prison, with plans for a modern facility focused on rehabilitation and restorative justice.[2002]

910. Regarding the death penalty, the IACHR observes that no progress has been made in eliminating the death penalty from the country's statutes, even though the last known execution took place in 1999. According to most recent data, 48 individuals remain on death row.[2003]

XXXI. UNITED STATES

- General considerations

911. As it relates to progress, the Commission takes note of the passage of legislation prohibiting the distribution of intimate images without consent and highlights the launch of the Access to Justice Prize aimed at fostering innovative solutions to address critical gaps in access to justice. Moreover, the Commission takes note of legislation passed to close gaps that may allow human trafficking to persist in government contracting. In addition, there were positive judicial rulings in several states regarding LGBTI rights against regressive [1995] Government of Trinidad and Tobago, Operation G-Ride, July 25, 2025.

[1996] Government of Trinidad and Tobago, Counter Trafficking Unit Launches Coordinated Raids on Trafficking Network Hidden Behind Spa Fronts, August 4, 2025.
[1997] Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Kambule festival looks at 'Africa in the Carnival', January 14, 2025. Trinidad and Tobago Newsday, Columbus statue to be removed from PoS square, street to be renamed, August 1, 2025.
[1998] Trinidad and Tobago Newsday. Lively turnout for TT Pride parade 2025. July 20, 2025; Trinidad and Tobago Guardian Newspaper, Pride TT calls for legislative reform to protect LGBTQI, June 28, 2025.
[1999] The High Court of Trinidad and Tobago, Jason Jones v The Attorney General of Trinidad and Tobago, April 12, 2018.
[2000] IACHR, IACHR urges Trinidad and Tobago to respect LGBTI persons' rights and guarantee non-discrimination May 9, 2025.
[2001] CNC3, Cox clears path for Persons with Disabilities Bill, March 22, 2025.
[2002] TTT News, Port of Spain Prison To Be Decommissioned After 268 Years, September 4, 2025.
[2003] World Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Trinidad and Tobago, May 23, 2023; last visited: October 2025.

measures implemented by the federal government including to allow access to gender-affirming medical care for trans persons.

912. As it relates to challenges, the IACHR raised its concern over lethal operations against non-state vessels in the Caribbean Sea and the Eastern Pacific Ocean which have allegedly resulted in the deaths of at least 80 people. In addition, the IACHR observed with concern a series of measures and practices adopted by the United States throughout the year that have significantly impacted the rights of migrants, asylum-seekers, refugees, and stateless persons. Moreover, the Commission notes changes in the federal budget for human rights protection programs and the reduction of personnel in offices dedicated to the protection of civil rights. The Commission also notes the withdrawal of guidance by the federal government designed to protect the rights of persons with disabilities.

913. The State did not respond to the request for information for the drafting of this chapter.

- Specific issues

914. In terms of democratic institutionality, the Commission observed the issuance of a series of executive orders that introduced reforms with potential implications for civil and political rights, due process guarantees, citizen security, and access to justice. In particular, widespread and retrospective inquiries were mandated that could be construed as targeting political opponents. The inquiries would dive into the activities of law-enforcement and intelligence agencies and determined the revocation of security clearances for former government officials accused of improperly influencing the 2020 electoral process and disclosing sensitive information.[2004]

915. In 2025, the United States witnessed a renewed wave of redistricting efforts raising deep concerns over the integrity of electoral representation. The President's push for new congressional maps has prompted Republican-led redraws in states such as Texas, Missouri, and Indiana, among others.[2005] In Texas, a map adopted in August and signed into law would have increased the Republican-favored congressional seats, but a federal court blocked its implementation for the 2026 elections.[2006] The state's new map has nonetheless been reinstated by the U.S. Supreme Court via a stay on the lower court ruling.[2007] Meanwhile, in states like Wisconsin and Indiana, newly proposed congressional maps have triggered lawsuits and required judicial panels to evaluate challenges to their constitutionality.[2008]

916. In California voters approved Proposition 50, a constitutional amendment that temporarily bypassed the usual independent redistricting commission and authorized the state legislature to draw new congressional district boundaries. The re-drawn map is projected to shift as many as five House seats toward the Democratic Party and significantly reshape several competitive districts.[2009] However, the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) joined a federal lawsuit filed by California Republicans, arguing that the new map is a violation of the Constitution and the Voting Rights Act.[2010] As of late 2025, this litigation is pending before a three-judge panel in the United States District Court for the Central District of California.

917. With respect to human rights institutions, the Commission expresses concern over changes in the federal budget for human rights protection programs and the reduction of personnel in some offices of [2004] The White House, Ending the Weaponization of the Federal Government, January 20, 2025; The White House, Holding Former Government Officials Accountable for Election Interference and Improper Disclosure of Sensitive Governmental Information, January 20, 2025.

[2005] AP News, Trump urged GOP-led states to redraw US House districts. Now other states also are gerrymandering, November 18, 2025. State Court Report, The Next Round of Partisan Gerrymandering Fights, September 25, 2025.

[2006] The Texas Tribune, Federal court blocks Texas from using new congressional gerrymander in 2026 midterms, November 18, 2025.

[2007] The Texas Tribune, Supreme Court lets Texas keep new congressional map while legal battle continues, December 4, 2025.

[2008] Democracy Docket, Indiana House Committee Advances Map, Despite Racial Gerrymandering Allegations, December 2, 2025. Wisconsin Examiner, Wisconsin Supreme Court says 3-judge panels will decide redistricting cases, November 25, 2025.

[2009] CalMatters, California voters approve Prop. 50, redrawing congressional maps to favor Democrats, November 4, 2025.

[2010] PBS, DOJ sues to block California map that could tip control of Congress to Dems, November 13, 2025.

the Department of Justice dedicated to the protection of civil rights. The Commission also notes with concern the elimination of diversity, equity, and inclusion programs in government agencies. In a press release issued in March the Commission urged the State to adopt all necessary measures to guarantee the full and effective enjoyment of human rights for all persons under its jurisdiction. This includes protecting freedom of expression, guaranteeing equal treatment before the law, safeguarding due process, ensuring dignified treatment for all persons, and respecting the right to seek international protection.[2011]

918. The Commission also notes with concern the withdrawal of the United States from multilateral organizations dedicated to protecting human rights, including the withdrawal from the United Nations Human Rights Council, the World Health Organization, and the Paris Agreement on Climate Change, as well as the review of UNESCO's membership and the imposition of sanctions on judges of the International Criminal Court and its staff.[2012]

919. In the area of citizen security, the Commissions noted with deep concern reports of lethal operations against non-state vessels (or boats) conducted by the United States in the Caribbean Sea and the Eastern Pacific Ocean since early September, which have allegedly resulted in the deaths of a high number of persons.[2013] According to publicly available and official information, approximately fifteen air and naval operations have been conducted by United States forces against boats which US authorities allege are linked to transnational criminal organizations, resulting in more than 80 people killed and three survivors. In a press release issued in December, the IACHR urged the State to ensure that all security operations, including those carried out beyond its borders, are consistent with international human rights obligations, particularly regarding the protection of the right to life, the use of force, due process guarantees, and accountability mechanisms.[2014]

920. In December, media information raised concerns about a "double-tap" attack that presumably took place in September, where survivors from an initial strike were reportedly killed in a follow-up strike.[2015] Legal experts and human-rights organizations argued that the targeting of shipwrecked or incapacitated individuals is prohibited under international humanitarian law, while Administration officials defended the strikes as lawful self-defense and asserted the United States acted within the authority of the law of armed conflict.[2016] Nevertheless, the lack of publicly disclosed evidence linking the vessels to an armed conflict, has intensified calls for congressional oversight and accountability.[2017]

921. The Commission is also concerned about the continued armed violence within the United States and measures adopted that could weaken efforts to address this critical issue. In 2025 the State revised federal policies on gun control, including the reduction of resources allocated to gun violence prevention programs and modifications to regulations on background checks for the acquisition of firearms.[2018] Between January and November, 374 mass shootings were recorded in the country.[2019] In this same period, 13,048 homicides were registered, both intentional and unintentional, including of 1,104 children.[2020] The Commission

[2011] IACHR, Press Release No. 065/25, IACHR Concerned About U.S. Measures That Impact the Effective Exercise of Human Rights, March 31, 2025.
[2012] OHCHR, The new US administration must recommit to human rights at home and abroad, February 27, 2025.
[2013] CNN, A timeline of US strikes on boats that have killed 87, December 5, 2025. USNI News, 4 Dead in Latest U.S. Strike on Suspected Narco Boat, December 5, 2025.
[2014] IACHR, Press Release No. 248/25, IACHR urges the United States to ensure respect for human rights in extraterritorial security operations, December 2, 2025.
[2015] The Guardian, Killing of survivors sparks outrage – but entire US 'drug boat' war is legally shaky, December 4, 2025.
[2016] Reuters, White House defends US attack on boat from Venezuela as lawful, December 2, 2025.
[2017] CBS News, Trump's Venezuela boat strikes fuel war crimes allegations. Are they legal?, December 4, 2025; The Guardian, Killing of survivors sparks outrage – but entire US 'drug boat' war is legally shaky, December 4, 2025.
[2018] The Trace, Trump Moves to Undo Biden's Gun Policies, March 3, 2025.
[2019] Gun Violence Archive. Gun Violence Registry 2025, November 19, 2025.
[2020] Gun Violence Archive. Gun Violence Registry 2025, November 19, 2025.

notes that firearms are the leading cause of death among children.[2021] As of November, 215 armed shootings incidents in educational centers caused the death of 148 victims.[2022]

922. On the other hand, the Commission is alarmed over the increased rhetoric that could power political violence in the country. In particular, the Commission condemned the killing of a conservative activist, who was fatally shot in September, during a public event. The IACHR urged the State to adopt comprehensive and human rights-based measures to prevent gun violence, protect the right to life, and guarantee an environment in which freedom of expression and democratic participation can be exercised safely.[2023] This incident also added to a series of violent attacks that have affected political figures with specialized investigators recording approximately 150 politically motivated attacks in the first half of 2025, almost twice as many as in the same period of 2024.[2024]

923. The Commission is also concerned about the deployment of the National Guard — and more broadly armed or militarized forces — for citizen-security tasks in U.S. cities. In 2025, the National Guard has been mobilized in multiple metropolitan areas including Washington, D.C., California and Tennessee.[2025] In Washington, D.C., for example, some 800 Guard members were activated in August under a "crime emergency" decree, marking the start of a broader federal takeover of local policing functions. The Commission notes that this pattern has occurred disproportionately in cities under administrations led by one major political party — raising concerns that federal military resources are being used in a politicized manner rather than solely for genuine public-safety emergencies. Several of these deployments — including federalization of state Guard units — are being challenged in court as potentially unlawful.[2026]

924. In relation to access to justice, the Commission recognizes the launch, by the Department of Justice, of the Access to Justice Prize 2025, a competition aimed at fostering innovative solutions to address critical gaps in access to justice, with an initial focus on rural communities.[2027] The Commission also highlights the interagency effort of the Legal Aid Interagency Roundtable to coordinate government resources for the benefit of victims and survivors of crime and other rights violations, as well as the continuity of this program until the end of September.[2028]

925. On the other hand, the Commission expressed concern over the increasing pattern of reprisals, intimidation, and violations of due process affecting justice operators and perceived political opponents. In particular, the increase in hostile political rhetoric against judges and prosecutors, as well as at the reassignment and dismissal of judicial officials without clear established procedures.[2029] The Commission received information regarding statements and measures adopted by State officials that appeared to target individuals as apparent retaliation for the fulfillment of their prosecutorial functions, based on perceptions of their political affiliation or perceived opposition to government policies. Reported incidents of public knowledge include statements by senior officials directing investigations or prosecutions against specific individuals, dismissals of career prosecutors and other public officials without established merit-based or procedural safeguards, and threats of job loss linked to political affiliation or perceived loyalty rather than merit or objective criteria. In a press release published in November, the Commission urged the United States to ensure that justice officials and public servants can perform their functions free from intimidation,

[2021] NPR, Gun deaths among children and teens rose during the pandemic and continued climbing, June 11, 2025.
[2022] K-12 School Shooting Database, All School Shootings from 1996 to the Present, November 2025.
[2023] IACHR [@CIDH], (September 12, 2025), #UnitedStates: #IACHR condemns the killing of Charlie Kirk during a public event in Utah and also expresses concern over the shooting that same day at Evergreen High School in Colorado which left two teenage students in critical condition. The Commission notes that more than 300 mass shootings have already been recorded this year in the United States. The IACHR expresses its solidarity with the families of the victims and urges the State to conduct a prompt, diligent, and impartial investigation to ensure accountability., [X post], X, https://x.com/CIDH/status/1966518642880761874.
[2024] CNN, Charlie Kirk's murder is the latest example of violence tearing through American politics, September 14, 2025.
[2025] ACLU, Dozens of Veterans Descend on Capitol Hill to Oppose Military Deployments to U.S. Cities, November 18, 2025.
[2026] Office of the Attorney General for the District of Columbia, Complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief, September 4, 2025.
[2027] United States Justice Department, Justice Department Launches 2025 Access to Justice Prize to Address the Rural Justice Gap, February 6, 2025.
[2028] LAIR, LAIR Learning Agenda 2025, September 30, 2025.
[2029] OHCHR, United States: New administration must halt sweeping attacks on independent judiciary, March 7, 2025.

interference, or discrimination and further called upon the State to prevent the improper use of criminal law and proceedings to restrict judicial personnel from operating independently.[2030]

926. Moreover, the Commission notes that despite these actions against judicial officers, the judiciary continued to act independently in the fulfilment of its duties. While the Administration has issued numerous executive orders, more than 400 legal challenges have been filed in the courts which have resulted in approximately 130 precautionary measures that temporarily suspended their execution.[2031] However, the Supreme Court has progressively limited the availability of universal injunctions, resulting in the restricting of the ability of citizens to collectively challenge presidential orders that may affect broad segments of the population.[2032]

927. And finally, the IACHR takes note that the President granted general clemency to approximately 1,600 individuals convicted or awaiting trial for crimes related to the January 6, 2021, attack on the United States Capitol. Most people received full pardons, while the sentences of 14 members of the far-right groups Oath Keepers and Proud Boys were commuted.[2033]

928. Regarding the rights of women, the Commission notes the adoption of the "Tools to Address Known Exploitation by Immobilizing Technological Deepfakes on Websites and Networks Act", prohibiting the distribution of intimate images without consent, including AI-created "deepfakes".[2034] However, civil society organizations raised concerns over the Bill's broad and vague language.[2035] Conversely, the Commission notes with concern that several measures aimed at protecting women and other groups in situation of vulnerability from discrimination in the workplace, education and healthcare settings were rescinded by the current Administration.[2036]

929. This year, women's access to sexual and reproductive health services was further restricted through multiple federal and state actions,[2037] affecting family planning,[2038] contraception, cancer screenings,[2039] HIV care,[2040] and abortion.[2041] Ongoing legal uncertainty surrounding the provision of reproductive healthcare[2042] led providers to refrain from supplying abortion care as to avoid potential legal or administrative sanctions.[2043] This occurred even in extreme cases, such as that of a brain-dead pregnant woman kept on life support until the fetus was viable.[2044] In some States, physicians were criminally prosecuted for prescribing or supplying abortion pills, including a midwife for providing abortion care.[2045] As of October, [2030] IACHR, Press Release 225/25, IACHR urges the United States to safeguard judicial independence and prevent retaliation against justice officials, November 5, 2025.

[2031] Just Security, Litigation Tracker: Legal Challenges to Trump Administration Actions, October 6, 2025.
[2032] Supreme Court of the United States, President of the United States, et al. v. CASA, INC., et al, June 27, 2025.
[2033] BBC, Proud Boys and Oath Keepers among over 1,500 Capitol riot defendants pardoned by Trump, January 20, 2025.
[2034] Congress of the United States of America, S.146 - Take it down Act, May 19, 2025.
[2035] AP, President Trump signs Take It Down Act, addressing nonconsensual deepfakes. What is it?, May 20, 2025.
[2036] Federal Register, Initial Rescissions of Harmful Executive Orders and Actions, January 20, 2025.
[2037] The White House, Enforcing the Hyde amendment, January 24, 2025; Federal Register, Ending Illegal Discrimination and Restoring Merit-Based Opportunity, January 21, 2025; Congress of the United States of America, H.R.1 - One Big Beautiful Bill Act, July 4, 2025; CMS, CMS Statement on Emergency Medical Treatment and Labor Act (EMTALA), June 3, 2025.
[2038] Politico, Clinics begin closing as Trump admin continues freeze on family planning funds, April 22, 2025; KFF, Recent Policy Proposals Could Weaken the Reproductive Health Safety Net as More People Become Uninsured, July 28, 2025; NPR, Trump cuts threaten access to birth control for millions of women, August 7, 2025.
[2039] Planned Parenthood, Title X: The Nation's Program for Affordable Birth Control and Reproductive Health Care, May 2025.
[2040] Congress of the United States of America, Fiscal Year 2026 bill, August 26, 2025; HIV+HEP Policy Institute, House Republicans Go Way Beyond President's Budget by Ending all HIV Prevention & Slash AIDS Care by 20%, September 1, 2025.
[2041] NPR, Planned Parenthood in Wisconsin stops abortions due to rule that threatens funding, October 7, 2025.
[2042] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IV.a, March 26, 2025, p. 822.
[2043] NPR, Planned Parenthood in Wisconsin stops abortions due to rule that threatens funding, October 7, 2025.
[2044] BBC, Baby of brain-dead woman delivered in Georgia, woman's mother says, June 17, 2025.
[2045] NPR, Texas judge fines New York doctor for sending abortion pills to Texas, February 14, 2025; AP, Arrest warrant issued for New York doctor indicted in Louisiana for prescribing abortion pill, January 31, 2025; Texas Legislature, House bill 7, August 20, 2025; AP, Texas midwife accused by state's attorney general of providing illegal abortions, March 17, 2025.

abortion remained criminalized in 12 states[2046] and restricted in 11,[2047] while new Bills were introduced in several states to allow murder charges against women who undergo abortions, even in cases of pregnancy complications, with penalties some states including the death penalty.[2048]

930. In relation to people in the context of human mobility, the IACHR observed a series of measures and practices adopted by the United States that have significantly impacted the rights of migrants, asylum-seekers, refugees, and stateless persons. These actions, framed within a restrictive approach to migration policy, include the interruption of access to asylum procedures, the suspension and reduction of refugee admission programs, a sharp increase in the deprivation of liberty for migration control purposes, among other concerns.

931. On January 20, the Administration issued several executive orders aimed at "protecting the country against invasion", through which it ordered the suspension of the entry into the territory of all migrants, through the southern border, until the alleged invasion ceases.[2049] The order restricts the invocation to any provision that could allow the permanence in the United States.[2050] According to available information, the Department of Homeland Security has resorted to this provision to deny access to asylum procedures and expel migrants of different nationalities, without carrying out an examination of the risk of refoulement.[2051] Additionally, the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program (USRAP) was restricted.[2052] An executive order suspended the processing and funding of refugee admission and resettlement programs, setting an admission limit of 7,500 people for the next fiscal year, which would prioritize South Africa's Afrikaner ethnicity.[2053] This amount would represent a 95% decrease in the number of people admitted under USRAP compared to the last fiscal year and the first time that the program will receive a number of people resettled below 60,000 people.[2054] In February, the Commission expressed concerns over these measures.[2055]

932. Throughout the year, there has been a reported increase in the deprivation of liberty of people in the context of human mobility for the purpose of migration control. According to the information available, as of September, a total of 59,762 people were in the custody of the Customs and Border Protection (CBP) office and the Immigration and Customs Enforcement Service (ICE), which represented an increase of approximately 60% compared to the previous year; 71.5% of these people did not have a criminal record.[2056] According to public information, by the end of 2025, a total of 125 immigration detention centers are expected to open or expand and reach a housing capacity of 107,000 people.[2057] The Commission has received reports warning that detainees have not had access to legal assistance, to be heard by a justice administrator, or to suitable resources to review the detention measure.[2058] Moreover, in accordance with available information, families are being

[2046] Alabama, Arkansas, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, and West Virginia. Center for Reproductive Rights, After Roe Fell: Abortion Laws by State, consulted on October 8, 2025.

[2047] Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah, Wisconsin, and Wyoming. Center for Reproductive Rights, After Roe Fell: Abortion Laws by State, consulted on October 8, 2025.

[2048] Alabama, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Missouri, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas and Ohio. Alabama Legislature, House bill 518, April 3, 2025; Indiana General Assembly, House Bill 1334, January 13, 2025; North Dakota Legislative Branch, HB 1373, January 13, 2025; Oklahoma State Legislature, SB 456, January 8, 2025; South Carolina Legislature, House bill 3537, January 14, 2025; Idaho State Legislature, Senate bill 1059, February 7, 2025; Georgia General Assembly, House bill 441, February 13, 2025.; Iowa Legislature, House bill 453, February 28, 2025.; Missouri House of Representatives, House bill 1072, January 27, 2025; Texas Legislature, House bill 2197, January 29, 2025; Ohio General Assembly, House Bill 370, June 19, 2025.

[2049] The White House, Presidential actions guaranteeing the States protection against invasion, January 20, 2025.

[2050] U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, Section 208, Immigration and Nationality Act, 1952.

[2051] Human Rights First and Refugees International, "This is an order from Trump". Abuse, expulsions, and refoulement of people seeking asylum, May 2025, p. 4.

[2052] The White House, Presidential actions realigning the United States Refugee Admissions Program, January 20, 2025.

[2053] Reuters, Trump administration planning 7,500-person refugee ceiling, sources say, Oct. 6, 2025.

[2054] Refugees International, Strong Majority of U.S. Voters Support Refugee Resettlement as Administration Plans to Slash Program by Nearly 95 Percent, October 9, 2025.

[2055] IACHR, Press Release 037/25, IACHR expresses concern over recent migration and asylum policies and measures in the United States, February 12, 2025.

[2056] Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse (TRAC), Immigration detention quick facts, September 21, 2025.

[2057] The Washington Post, ICE documents reveal plan to double immigrant detention space this year, August 15, 2025.

[2058] Human Rights First, Report to Inter-American Commission on Human Rights in Follow Up to July 24, 2025 Public Hearing, "Human rights situation of migrants, refugees and asylum seekers," October 14, 2025, pp. 26-36.

detained with minor children under ICE custody for prolonged periods[2059] and that the conditions of detention do not meet minimum standards.[2060]

933. The IACHR expresses concern over reported difficulties in locating persons deprived of liberty due to migratory reasons, a situation that may amount to short-term enforced disappearances during involuntary or compulsory removal procedures.[2061] In various cases, authorities have faced significant delays in providing information on individuals' whereabouts, the legal basis for their detention, or the reasons justifying the deprivation of liberty.[2062] The Commission has also received reports alleging that some arrests were carried out on the basis of racial profiling, affecting not only migrants but also lawful permanent residents and, in certain instances, U.S. citizens.[2063]

934. The Commission also observes with concern the increasing use of bilateral agreements aimed at facilitating the deportation, expulsion, or transfer of persons in situations of human mobility. According to available information, these instruments allow one State party to detain and expel migrants under its jurisdiction and remove them to the territory of the other signatory State; they also authorize the transfer of asylum-seekers to third countries for the processing of their claims, rather than examining such applications in the State where the individuals were initially present.[2064] Reports received indicate that under these agreements, migrants have been forcibly transferred to countries where they lack familial, legal, or linguistic support, and where no meaningful opportunity exists to seek asylum or other forms of international protection. In a press release publish in May, the IACHR urged the United States to guarantee the rights of returned, deported, or expelled people.[2065] In September, the Commission, together with the United Nations, reiterated that these agreements may contravene non-derogable human rights obligations and emphasized that States must guarantee due process in all deportation, expulsion, and transfer procedures, irrespective of a person's migratory status.[2066]

935. In relation to statelessness, the Commission regrets it regrets the State's decision adopted in June to rescind the updated guidelines governing the treatment of stateless non-citizens in the United States. This measure was adopted pursuant to the Executive Order "Protecting the United States from Foreign Terrorists and Other Threats to National Security and Public Safety," which invokes national security considerations and directs U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) to investigate and assess, to the maximum extent possible, all non-citizens seeking admission to, entering, or already present in the United States.[2067]

936. In relation to trafficking in persons, the Commission takes note that in February, a bipartisan and bicameral legislation known as the Dignity in Government Contracting Act of 2025,[2068] was presented to close gaps that may allow human trafficking to persist in government contracting while strengthening agency

[2059] Human Rights First, Report to Inter-American Commission on Human Rights in Follow Up to July 24, 2025 Public Hearing, "Human rights situation of migrants, refugees and asylum seekers," October 14, 2025, pp. 12-13.

[2060] Human Rights Watch, "You Feel Like Your Life Is Over" Abusive Practices at Three Migrant Detention Centers in Florida Since January 2025, July 21, 2025; Americans for Immigrant Justice, Immigrants Abused in Florida Detention Sites Pervasive Overcrowding, Medical Neglect, Degrading Treatment, July 22, 2025; Human Rights First and Refugees International, "This is an order from Trump". Abuse, expulsions, and refoulement of people seeking asylum, May 2025.

[2061] IACHR, Thematic hearing, "United States: Human rights situation of migrants, refugees and asylum seekers," 193rd period of sessions, July 24, 2025.

[2062] The Guardian, Plane to purgatory: how Trump's deportation program shuttles immigrants into lawless limbo, September 10, 2025.

[2063] The Guardian, ICE agents detain US citizen as LA immigration raids continue: 'It's racial profiling', June 16, 2025.

[2064] Human Rights First and Refugees International, "This is an order from Trump". Abuse, expulsions, and refoulement of people seeking asylum, May 2025, p. 2.

[2065] IACHR, Press Release 102/25, IACHR urges States to guarantee the rights of returned, deported, or expelled people, May 15, 2025.

[2066] IACHR, Press Release 190/25, IACHR and United Nations Experts: States Must Protect the Rights of Persons in Human Mobility, September 18, 2025.

[2067] U.S. Department of Homeland Security, Rescission of the USCIS Statelessness Policy, June 5, 2025; see also: Press release No. 230/24 - IACHR calls on States to continue adopting measures to prevent and eradicate statelessness in the r..., September 27, 2024.

[2068] Government of the USA, Congressman Valado Introduces Bill to Prevent Trafficking in Government Contracts, February 6, 2025.

oversight, accountability, and reporting requirements. This Act will require contractors to provide anti-trafficking compliance plans for covered contracts to contracting officers, provide federal contracting officials with information they can use when developing plans to oversee contractors' trafficking prevention efforts, and require the Inspector General to investigate all credible information about potential human trafficking violation. In addition, the IACHR welcomes that, in July, the House Foreign Affairs Committee passed the Frederick Douglass Trafficking Victims Prevention and Protection Reauthorization Act.[2069] This legislation reauthorizes and enhances existing anti-human trafficking provisions, strengthens investigations, and combat the growing threats of child exploitation and on-line abuse.[2070]

937. With respect to the rights of Indigenous Peoples, in May Arizona adopted the "Turquoise Alert" system which represented a significant step forward in addressing the alarming rates of disappearances among Indigenous persons. The legislation establishes a system that issues and coordinates alerts for missing tribal members of at least 18 and less than 65 years old.[2071] At the federal level, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a decision regarding gaming contracts which challenged Washington State's agreements negotiated under the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (IGRA), which allow federally recognized tribes to operate and regulate casinos on their lands. By declining to hear the case, the Court upheld the lower court's ruling that affirmed the legality of these agreements and the shared regulatory framework between states and tribes.[2072]

938. In March, several tribal nations and indigenous educators denounced mass layoffs within the Bureau of Indian Education, warning that the reductions would severely impact access to culturally grounded education and continuity of community-based schools.[2073] At the same time, in April, the National Endowment for the Humanities cut approximately 1.5 million dollars in grants intended for research and documentation related to the history of Indian Boarding Schools, curtailing ongoing truth and reconciliation efforts.[2074] Moreover, the United States revoked Native American issues from the Department of the Interior's Annual Human Rights Report, viewing it as a symbolic and practical regression in the visibility of Indigenous concerns within the federal policy agenda.[2075]

939. Regarding the situation of Afro-descendant persons and the fight against racial discrimination, the IACHR takes note of specific advances taken in January to correct discriminatory practices. The Department of Justice reached a settlement for alleged redlining with a non-bank mortgage company, as part of its strategy to expand access to credit in Afro-descendant communities.[2076] In addition, the Department of Justice sued Houston County, Georgia, over an electoral scheme that would affect the vote of Afro-descendant persons.[2077] Likewise, the Minneapolis City Council approved a police oversight and reform agreement arising from investigations into discriminatory practices following the George Floyd case,[2078] and the Department of Justice reported the federal conviction of two individuals for burning a cross in front of the campaign sign of an Afro-descendant candidate in Colorado.[2079] The Commission values the proposals by the State of Maryland to reduce the mass incarceration of Afro-descendant persons.[2080]

[2069] Government of the USA, On World Day Against Trafficking in Persons, Rep. Smith highlights progress in U.S. anti-trafficking fight, July, 30, 2025.
[2070] Government of the USA, On World Day Against Trafficking in Persons, Rep. Smith highlights progress in U.S. anti-trafficking fight, July, 30, 2025.
[2071] Arizona State Legislature, HOUSE BILL 2281, May 13, 2025.
[2072] National Indian Law Library, 2025 Tribal Sovereignty and Jurisdiction News Stories, July 10, 2025; The Daily World, Tribes hail U.S. Supreme Court dismissal of Maverick Gaming's lawsuit attacking sovereignty, October 7, 2025.
[2073] VOA News, Native American news roundup, March 15, 2025.
[2074] Friends Committee on National Legislation, National Endowment for the Humanities Cuts Grants to Investigate Indian Boarding Schools, April 29, 2025.
[2075] ICT News, Indigenous human rights abuses? Trump administration cut them from annual report, August 15, 2025.
[2076] United States Department of Justice (DOJ), Justice Department Secures Third Settlement with Non-Depository Mortgage Company to Resolve Redlining Allegations, January 7, 2025.
[2077] Reuters, U.S. sues Georgia's Houston County, says it violates Black voters' rights, January 17, 2025.
[2078] Reuters, Minneapolis council approves police oversight following George Floyd probe, January 6, 2025.
[2079] United States Department of Justice (DOJ), Defendants Convicted on Charges Related to Hate Crime Hoax, May 27, 2025.
[2080] The Washington Post, Maryland's 18 ways to stop the mass incarceration of Black people, March 16, 2025.

940. On the other hand, in January, the State issued executive orders to "end illegal discrimination" in the federal administration and to "prioritize military excellence."[2081] The Commission expresses concern that eliminating diversity, equity, and inclusion programs in government and universities may reinforce structural racism against Afro-descendant persons.[2082] In addition, a Department of Justice memorandum was reported requesting the suspension of civil-rights litigation initiated in the prior period, with an impact on the advancement of the rights of Afro-descendant persons.[2083] Likewise, cultural organizations and media reported the termination of federal grants to the Whitney Plantation Museum (Louisiana), an institution dedicated to the memory of slavery,[2084] and the Smithsonian Institution came under criticism and threats of federal reprisals due to its educational activities related to slavery in the United States.[2085]

941. These setbacks are especially concerning, given the persistence of labor gaps affecting Afro-descendant persons in the United States and their cumulative effects on intergenerational mobility and access to higher education.[2086] In 2025, state and sectoral indicators showed consistently higher unemployment rates for the Afro-descendant population and declines in homeownership, while credit and assessment barriers persisted.[2087] According to official data, maternal mortality rates for Afro-descendant women continue to be markedly higher than those of other groups,[2088] and at the same time press reports indicate setbacks in the Environmental Protection Agency's environmental-justice programs—including the cancellation of grants—that exacerbate health risks in majority Afro-descendant communities.[2089] In addition, legislative efforts to redesign districts, as mentioned above, could dilute the vote of Afro-descendant and Latino communities[2090] while the Supreme Court was asked to invalidate a central provision of the Voting Rights Act aimed at protecting against vote dilution in redistricting.[2091]

942. The State also recorded an increase in police lethality numbers, with aggravated impacts on Afro-descendant persons,[2092] as well as advances and setbacks in accountability processes for racial profiling. In Georgia, prosecutors announced they would not file charges against the officer who killed an Afro-descendant man exonerated of a prior conviction,[2093] and in the case of a Congolese immigrant killed in 2022 by a police officer after a traffic stop, an appeal vacated the jury-trial conviction.[2094] At the federal level, in February, the Department of Justice deactivated the database that tracked cases of misconduct by federal agents, a measure criticized for reducing transparency.[2095] The Commission also takes note of studies

[2081] The White House, Ending Illegal Discrimination and restoring merit-based opportunity, January 21, 2025; The White House, Prioritizing Military Excellence and Readiness, January 27, 2025.

[2082] IACHR, Press Release No. 065/25, IACHR concerned over United States' measures that impact the effective exercise of human rights, March 31 2025.

[2083] Reuters, US Justice Department freezes its civil rights litigation, January 22, 2025.

[2084] The Guardian, Trump cuts federal grants to plantation museum focused on reality of slavery, April 23, 2025.

[2085] CNN, Trump escalates attacks against Smithsonian museums, says there's too much focus on 'how bad slavery was', August 20, 2025; NBC News, Trump says the Smithsonian focuses too much on 'how bad slavery was', August 19, 2025.

[2086] Institute for Higher Education Policy (IHEP), Wealth, Race, and Higher Education: Behind the Making of IHEP's Newest Research Series, July 10, 2025.

[2087] Economic Policy Institute, 2025 Q2 - State Unemployment by Race and Ethnicity, August 22, 2025; Axios, HUD cuts come as Black homeownership falls, September 29, 2025; National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA), The State of Equitable Homeownership 2025, June 25, 2025.

[2088] Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), Maternal Mortality Rates in the United States, 2023, Health E-Stats 100, February 1, 2025.

[2089] Reuters, As Trump's EPA ends 'environmental justice,' minority communities may pay a price, April 23, 2025.

[2090] The Associated Press (AP), A key court test begins for Texas' redrawn US House map that boosts the GOP, October 1, 2025.

[2091] SCOTUSblog, Group of Louisiana voters urges Supreme Court to strike down major provision of the Voting Rights Act, September 17, 2025; The Washington Post, Supreme Court justice pauses ruling weakening Voting Rights Act, July 16, 2025; United States Department of Justice (DOJ), Guidance under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, 52 U.S.C. 10301, para redistricting and methods of electing government bodies, April 2024.

[2092] Axios, New data shows deadly police encounters hit decade-high in 2024, February 25, 2025; The Hill, Police killings set record in 2024, but with smallest increase in years: Report, February 26, 2025.

[2093] Reuters, Georgia sheriff's deputy who fatally shot Black man will not be charged, February 26, 2025.

[2094] Associated Press (AP), What to know about the trial of an ex-Michigan officer charged in the killing of a Black motorist, April 28, 2025; Associated Press (AP), No verdict, mistrial declared, in trial of Michigan police officer who killed Congolese immigrant, May 8, 2025.

[2095] Reuters, US Justice Department cuts database tracking federal police misconduct, February 21, 2025.

documenting the persistence of the overrepresentation of Afro-descendant persons in the prison system.[2096] Moreover, the Federal Bureau of Investigations published in August the national crime statistics for 2024, recording 11,679 hate-crime incidents reported by agencies.[2097]

943. Finally, the Commission recorded a worrying increase in episodes of discrimination and hate crimes against various populations, particularly against Asian, Jewish, Muslim, and Latino persons.[2098] In particular, the Commission expresses concern over a United States Supreme Court decision that could legitimize racial profiling by allowing ICE agents to stop Latino persons based solely on their appearance,[2099] and over the worsening of incidents of discrimination against Latino people.[2100]

944. Regarding the rights of LGBTI persons, several positive judicial rulings were issued against regressive measures implemented by the federal government. In February, a federal district court in Maryland issued a temporary restraining order blocking an executive order that limits access to gender-affirming medical care for trans persons under the age of 19.[2101] In June, a federal judge ruled that trans and intersex persons can obtain passports that align with their gender identity.[2102] Also, a court in California granted a preliminary injunction blocking implementation of three executive orders that limit health services for LGBTI persons.[2103] In July, a decision by the Wisconsin Supreme Court enabled the state to permanently enact a ban on conversion therapy.[2104]

945. In addition to the above, different state legislatures and governments advanced protections for the rights of LGBTI persons. In February, the governor of Kansas vetoed a proposed ban on gender-affirming care for trans children and adolescents,[2105] and California's Attorney General warned local hospitals not to withhold trans youth healthcare at the risk of violating state laws.[2106] In March, the House of Representatives of Montana rejected a Bill that would have allowed criminalizing parents and medical providers for ensuring [2096] Prison Policy Initiative (PPI), Mass Incarceration: The Whole Pie 2025, March 11, 2025; The Sentencing Project, Black Disparities in Youth Incarceration, August 12, 2025.

[2097] Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), FBI Releases 2024 Reported Crimes in the Nation Statistics, August 5, 2025.

[2098] United States Congress, Audit of Antisemitic Incidents 2024, April 22, 2025; Stop AAPI hate, New data: Over Half of AA/PIs Experienced Hate in 2024, June 2, 2025; Axios, ADL: Antisemitic incidents hit record level in 2024, April 22, 2025; CAIR, CAIR's Civil Rights Report Shows Islamophobia Complaints at All-Time High, Viewpoint Discrimination Key Factor, March 11, 2025; Islamophobia, 2025 Civil Rights Report: Unconstitutional Crackdowns, s.d.

[2099] American Immigration Council, How the Supreme Court's Latest Decision Clears the Way for Racial Profiling During Immigration Raids, September 9, 2025; Equal Justice Initiative, Supreme Court Allows Stops Based on Race to Continue, September 17, 2025; USA Today, Rex Ruppke: Love racism? Great news! Supreme Court rules ICE racial profiling is totally fine, September 8, 2025.

[2100] Los Angeles Times, Latino tenants sued their landlord: A lawyer told them they would be 'picked up by ICE', July 23, 2025; NBC Chicago, Chicago landlord to pay $80K for threatening to call ICE agents on tenants, March 7, 2025.

[2101] ACLU, Federal Judge Blocks Trump Order Targeting Medical Care for Transgender Youth, February 13, 2025; District Court, D. Maryland, PFLAG, Inc. v. Donald J. Trump (8:25-cv-00337) ORDER granting 35 Motion for Temporary Restraining Order. Signed by Judge Brendan Abell Hurson on February 13, 2025.

[2102] The Guardian, Trans people can obtain US passport that aligns with their gender identity, judge rules, June 17, 2025; The Pink News, Judge blocks Trump's anti-trans passport policy, April 22, 2025; CBS News, Judge blocks Trump administration passport policy targeting transgender people, June 17, 2025; USA Today, Judge blocks Trump anti-trans passport policy, June 17, 2025.

[2103] Lambda Legal, Federal Court Blocks Trump Anti-Equity and Anti-Transgender Executive Orders Targeting LGBTQ and HIV-Serving Nonprofits, June 9, 2025; District Court, N.D. California, San Francisco A.I.D.S. Foundation v. Trump (4:25-cv-01824), ORDER granting in part and denying in part 47 motion for preliminary injunction. Signed by Judge Jon S. Tigar on June 9, 2025. (jstlc3, COURT STAFF), Filed on June 6, 2025.

[2104] KGET.com, Wisconsin Supreme Court clears the way for a conversion therapy ban to be made permanent, July 8, 2025; AP News, Wisconsin Supreme Court clears the way for a conversion therapy ban to be made permanent, July 8, 2025; CBS News, Wisconsin Supreme Court clears the way for a conversion therapy ban to be enacted, July 8, 2025.

[2105] Kansas Reflector, Kansas governor vetoes gender-affirming care ban for minors; Republicans ready for override, February 11, 2025; AP News, Kansas' Democratic governor vetoes a GOP-backed ban on gender-affirming care for trans minors, February 12, 2025; ABC News, Trans youth care ban vetoed by Kansas governor again, February 12, 2025.

[2106] Los Angeles Times, California AG warns L.A. hospital: Withholding transgender care could violate state law, February 5, 2025; The Guardian, California warns hospitals not to withhold trans youth healthcare, February 6, 2025.

gender affirming care for trans persons under 16.[2107] In June, the Maine Senate rejected legislation that would restrict transgender students' access to sports and bathrooms.[2108]

946. In contrast, during the first half of the year, the federal government issued Executive Orders[2109] which negatively affected the rights of LGBTI persons, particularly transgender, and nonbinary persons. These measures included declaring that there are only two biological sexes, suspending passport applications with an X gender marker,[2110] and halting diversity programs within federal agencies.[2111] An order, issued in January, prohibited transgender persons from serving in the military,[2112] which led to the cessation of gender-affirming procedures for service members and the potential discharge of approximately 15,000 personnel without retirement benefits. Subsequently, the pentagon stopped gender-affirming procedures for members of the military.[2113] In August, the U.S. Air Force released a memo stating that it would deny all transgender service members the option of early retirement and would instead separate them without retirement benefits.[2114]

947. In January, federal support for gender-affirming care involving surgeries or hormone treatments for persons under 19 was ended,[2115] resulting in the closure of major clinics across the country.[2116] An additional order targeted protections for transgender students and restricted educational content related to race, gender, and diversity in K–12 schools, affecting an estimated 300,100 transgender youth and prompting reports of censorship in medical and human rights research.[2117] The IACHR also notes reports of the removal of LGBTI human rights references from the State departments human rights reports.[2118] In February, another Executive Order prohibited trans women from competing in female sports categories,[2119] a decision later endorsed by the U.S. Olympic & Paralympic Committee, which barred trans women from competing in women's events at the Olympic and Paralympic Games.[2120]

[2107] Mother Jones, Montana Republicans Say No to Prosecuting Parents for Trans Care, April 9, 2025; The Guardian, 'Stop these crazy bills': Republicans join Democrats to defeat anti-trans legislation in Montana, March 7, 2025.

[2108] Maine morning star, Maine Senate rejects effort to ban trans girls from sports, June 12, 2025; Glad Law, Maine Legislature Rejects Bills Targeting Transgender Student Athletes, June 17, 2025.

[2109] The White House, Defending Women From Gender Ideology Extremism And Restoring Biological Truth To The Federal Government, January 20, 2025; The White House, Protecting Children From Chemical And Surgical Mutilation, January 28, 2025; The White House, Restoring America's Fighting Force, January 27, 2025; The White House, Prioritizing Military Excellence and Readiness, January 27, 2025; The White House, Keeping Men Out of Women's Sports, February 5, 2025.

[2110] ABC News, State Department halts 'X' passport gender marker applications. January 24, 2025; CNN Politics, State Department suspends processing passport applications with 'X' gender marker, January 24, 2025; NBC News, Things to know about how Trump's policies target transgender people, February 3, 2025.

[2111] The White House, Ending Radical And Wasteful Government DEI Programs And Preferencing, January 20, 2025.

[2112] The White House, Prioritizing Military Excellence and Readiness, January 27, 2025; NBC NEWS, February 10, 2025;, Pentagon to ban trans people from joining military, pauses gender-transition procedures, February 10, 2025; Reuters, Transgender US service members to be removed from military, Pentagon memo shows, February 27, 2025.

[2113] NBC News, Pentagon to ban trans people from joining military, pauses gender-transition procedures, February 10, 2025; NBC News, Hegseth orders immediate pause on gender-affirming medical care for transgender service members, February 10, 2025.

[2114] NBC News, Air Force denies early retirement for group of transgender service members, August 7, 2025; National Public Radio, U.S. Air Force to deny early retirement benefits to some transgender service members, August 8, 2025; PBS News, Air Force announces new policy to deny transgender troops hearings before discharges, August 18, 2025.

[2115] The White House, Protecting Children From Chemical And Surgical Mutilation, January 28, 2025; CNN Politics, January 28, 2025. Trump signs order to block federal support for minors' gender transitions. January 28, 2025.

[2116] AP News, The biggest gender-affirming care center for trans kids in the US is closing, prompting protests. July 9, 2025; NPR, Clinic for trans youth in LA closes, leaving some families struggling to find care, July 22, 2025; The Independent, Anger at closure of largest gender-affirming care center for kids in the US, July 9, 2025; NBC News, At least 21 hospitals have ended or restricted trans care for minors since January, August 24, 2025.

[2117] The White House, Ending Radical Indoctrination in K-12 Schooling, January 29, 2025; UCLA, The Williams Institute, Impact of Executive Order Imposing Restrictions on Transgender Students in K-12 Schools, February 2025.

[2118] U.S. Department of State, 2024 Country Reports on Human Rights Practices, August 12, 2025; Al Jazeera, Key issues omitted in revised US State Department human rights report, August 12, 2025; Congressional Equality Caucus, Takano Blasts State Dept for Erasing LGBTQI+ Data from Annual Human Rights Reports, August 12, 2025.

[2119] The White House, Keeping Men Out of Women's Sports, February 5, 2025; BBC News, Trump signs order banning transgender women from female sports. February 8, 2025.

[2120] ABC News, US Olympic and Paralympic officials bar transgender women from competing in women's categories, July 23, 2025; The New York Times, US Olympic and Paralympic officials bar transgender women from competing in women's categories, July 23, 2025; The Guardian, US Olympics officials quietly bar trans women from competing in women's sports, July 23, 2025.

948. In the judiciary, the Supreme Court upheld Tennessee's ban on gender-affirming care for trans youth,[2121] allowed parents in Maryland to exempt their children from LGBTQ+ inclusive storybooks based on religious grounds,[2122] and ruled in favor of a woman claiming reverse discrimination based on her heterosexuality.[2123] The Court also heard arguments in Chiles v. Salazar concerning government bans on conversion therapy, with a decision expected in 2026,[2124] and received a formal request to overturn Obergefell v. Hodges, the landmark ruling that recognized same-sex marriage rights.[2125] However, in November, the Court rejected the request to overturn the decision.[2126] In this context, civil society organizations tracked at least 616 Bills introduced across U.S. states that aim at limiting the human rights of LGBTI persons. Also, the FBI data indicated that hate crimes against LGBTIQ+ persons remained among the top three most reported categories, despite an overall decline in violent crime.[2127]

949. Regarding the rights of persons with disabilities, the federal government withdrew guidance designed to protect the rights of persons with disabilities, creating uncertainty for public and private institutions and weakening accountability mechanisms for compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).[2128] Concurrently, cuts to federal service and benefit programs disproportionately affected persons with disabilities, limiting timely access to essential financial and healthcare support.[2129] Furthermore, the suspension of legal assistance for hundreds of immigrants with disabilities or mental health conditions severely restricted their access to justice and the effective protection of their rights under U.S. law.[2130]

950. Regarding the rights of persons deprived of liberty, the Commission welcomed the commutation of the federal death penalty sentences of 37 of the 40 individuals who were on federal death row by the end of December 2024. Among those sentences were four beneficiaries of precautionary measures granted by the IACHR.[2131] Related to social reintegration, the IACHR values the decision made by the State of New York Department of Corrections and Community Supervision (DOCCS) according to which, from August 1, phone calls made by incarcerated persons in state prisons will be free of charge to strengthen the connections between those individuals and their loved ones.[2132] Also, the IACHR takes note of the introduction in the Senate of a Bill that would require state facilities to report to the U.S. Attorney General data on pregnant and [2121] U.S. Supreme Court, United States v. Skrmetti, 605 U.S. (2025) June 24, 2025; AP News, Supreme Court OKs Tennessee ban on gender-affirming care for kids, a setback for transgender rights, June 18, 2025; PBS News Hour, Supreme Court upholds Tennessee law banning gender-affirming care for transgender minors, June 18, 2025; FOX 32 Chicago, Supreme Court OKs Tennessee ban on gender-affirming care for kids, June 18, 2025.

[2122] Supreme Court of The United States, Mahmoud et al. v. taylor et al., January 27, 2025; Politico, Supreme Court OKs opt-out for LGBTQ+ materials in school, June 27th, 2025; CBS News, Supreme Court sides with parents who objected to kids' books on gender identity, sexuality, June 27th, 2025.

[2123] Supreme Court of the United States, Ames v. Ohio dept. of youth services, June 5, 2025; Scotus Blog, Supreme Court rules for straight woman who claims she was subjected to reverse discrimination, June 5, 2025; BBC, Supreme Court rules for heterosexual woman in discrimination case, June 5, 2025; NBC News, Supreme Court revives straight woman's discrimination claim, June 5, 2025. Supreme Court rules for heterosexual woman in discrimination case, June 5, 2025; NBC News, Supreme Court revives straight woman's discrimination claim, June 5, 2025.

[2124] NPR, The Supreme Court weighs conversion therapy in a case from Colorado, October 7, 2025; CNN, Supreme Court's conservative majority prepared to rule against conversion therapy ban, October 7, 2025.

[2125] ABC News, Supreme Court formally asked to overturn landmark same-sex marriage ruling, August 11, 2025; Newsweek, Supreme Court Faces Decision on Case Urging Overturn of Same-Sex Marriage, August 11, 2025; KFH News, Supreme Court Is Formally Petitioned To Reverse Same-Sex Marriage Ruling, August 11, 2025; Forbes, Will The Supreme Court Overturn Same-Sex Marriage? Maybe—But It Hasn't Done Anything Yet, August 12, 2025.

[2126] AP News, Supreme Court rejects call to overturn its decision legalizing same-sex marriage nationwide, November 10, 2025; CNN, Supreme Court declines to revisit landmark same-sex marriage precedent, November 10, 2025.

[2127] ACLU, The ACLU is tracking 616Anti-LGBTQ bills in the U.S., September 19, 2025; Human Rights Campaign, FBI's Annual Crime Report: Hate Crimes Against LGBTQ+ Community Remain Among Top 3 Most Reported Categories, August 5, 2025; U.S. Department of Justice, FBI Releases 2024 Hate Crime Statistics, August 5, 2025.

[2128] AP News, The Trump administration withdrew 11 pieces of ADA guidance. How will it affect compliance?, April 8, 2025.

[2129] Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, 2025 Budget Impacts: House Bill Would Cut Assistance and Raise Costs for People With Disabilities, June 9, 2025.

[2130] NBC News, Trump cuts off most help for immigrants with mental illness or cognitive disabilities, May 6, 2025.

[2131] IACHR, Press Release No. 002/25 - IACHR welcomes commutation of 37 federal death penalty sentences in the United States, January 3, 2025.

[2132] DOCCS, Government of the New York State, As New York's Correctional Facilities continue to recover, recruit and rebuild, DOCCS makes contact with families and loved ones more accessible to improve prison safety, reentry to the community and expand productive activities, July 2025.

postpartum prisoners. The Bill has been referred to the Judiciary Committee in February and is pending discussion.[2133]

951. However, the Commission expresses concern regarding the conditions of detention in some states. According to available information, jails in St. Louis (Missouri), Cleveland (Ohio), and Jackson (Mississippi), do not provide direct access to sunlight and fresh air due to old infrastructure, even though their own policies require it.[2134] In February in the State of New York, correctional officers led multiple strikes and protests motivated by unsafe conditions. When the strike ended, more than 2,000 guards were fired for refusing to return to work, worsening an existing staffing shortage. As of July, 35 out of the state's 42 prisons were operating with an average of 32% of guard positions unfilled. As a result, nearly 3,000 National Guard members were deployed into prisons to assist with basic tasks like supervision and head counts. However, given limited institutional training, they cannot fully replace correctional officers. This measure resulted in lack of officers available to transport inmates to medical appointments and for reintegration activities, and prisoners at some facilities spent over 17 hours a day confined to their cells. DOCCS launched a "recover, recruit and rebuild" campaign pursuing new officers through recruitment centers and new union agreements that offer sign-on and retention bonuses.[2135]

952. On the matter of the death penalty, the Commission continues to monitor its application and reiterates that the United States is the only country in the Americas that executes persons sentenced to death. According to the Death Penalty Information Center, as of November 14, a total of 43 prisoners have been executed in 11 states in the country in 2025. Of those executions, five were carried out using the nitrogen gas method and one using a firing squad.[2136]

XXXII. URUGUAY

- General considerations

953. In 2025, the Eastern Republic of Uruguay (hereinafter, "Uruguay") maintained a solid democratic and human rights institutional framework, with progress in transparency, access to justice, and the strengthening of policies on equality and non-discrimination. Uruguay achieved progress in the protection of the rights of women, Afro-descendants, older persons, persons with disabilities and the LGBTI population.

954. However, challenges persisted in terms of judicial independence, detention conditions, and the increase in prison population, as well as gender, ethnic-racial and socioeconomic gaps that continue to limit the full exercise of human rights in the country.

955. On October 2, 2025, the State submitted its response to the Commission's request for information to prepare this chapter.[2137]

[2133] Congress, Government of the United States of America, S.687 - BCRA of 2025, 2025; last visited: November 20, 2025.
[2134] The Marshall Project, The Unbearable Darkness of Jail, May 21, 2025; Missouri Independent, Why some jail detainees in Missouri can go years without seeing the sun, May 21, 2025.
[2135] The Marshall Project, New York's Prison Guard Strike Ended Months Ago. For Some, Life-Threatening Effects Persist., July 26, 2025; also, see: The Marshall Project, How a Guards' Strike Plunged New York Prisons Into Turmoil and Why the Timing Is Curious, February 22, 2025; and En pelotas, Crisis en las prisiones de Nueva York: violencia, encubrimiento y negligencia Estatal (Crisis in New York Prisons: Violence, Cover-ups, and State Negligence), April 16, 2025.
[2136] Death Penalty Information Center, Execution List 2025, November 14, 2025.
[2137] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025. On IACHR´s files.

- Specific issues

956. During 2025, the State continued to strengthen democratic institutionality and human rights institutions. In August, the 2025–2029 Sixth Open Government National Action Plan was presented, the first of its kind with a four-year duration, developed by means of a participatory process that included public institutions, civil society organizations, academia, multilateral organizations and the private sector. This plan incorporates lines of action to strengthen transparency, access to public information, accountability and citizen participation, among others, and sets out 41 commitments, undertaken by 24 public institutions, in key public policy areas such as children and adolescents, public security and corruption.[2138]

957. In this context, a participatory process was initiated for the development of the 2025-2035 National Public Security Plan, the 2027–2030 Second National Human Rights Action Plan, and the 2026–2030 Gender and Climate Change Plan.[2139] Additionally, the Project on Strengthening Climate-Smart Competencies in Uruguay was launched, with the aim of strengthening the capacities of individuals and communities to address the effects of climate change.[2140] In the areas of transparency and accountability, noteworthy measures include the launch of digital platforms, such as the Portal de Transparencia Presupuestaria (Budget Transparency Portal), the Observatorio Territorio Uruguay (Uruguayan Territory Observatory) and the Base Normativa Digital Departamental (Departmental Digital Legal Framework Database) (under development),[2141] as well as the inclusion, in the new Administrative Procedural Code, of a second instance in jurisdictional proceedings initiated by private individuals against administrative acts of the State.[2142]

958. For its part, the Secretariat of Human Rights (SDH) of the Office of the Presidency took steps to mainstream the human rights approach within the public service. Within the framework of the national budget preparation, the SDH facilitated political and institutional dialogue with legislators to promote the observance of human rights as a cross-cutting priority in the allocation of resources.[2143] The SDH is also developing an Integrated Human Rights System that will articulate public policies, the international commitments undertaken and the resources available.[2144] In addition, in coordination with the National School of Public Administration (ENAP) of the National Office of the Civil Service (ONSC), the SDH is developing several human rights training courses aimed at public officials from various ministries.[2145]

959. Similarly, the Directorate on Human Rights of the National Public Education Administration (ANEP) redefined its strategic areas to strengthen a human rights approach in the field of education. In this regard, the following areas were created: i) Comprehensive Sexual Education (ESI), with the aim of addressing sexuality in a comprehensive manner within a human rights framework; ii) Interculturality and Diversity, to strengthen training and reflection in this area; and iii) Memory, to promote dialogue and the creation of shared understandings among all educational stakeholders regarding the memory of the recent past, thereby

[2138] Gub.uy, Agency for Electronic Government and Information and Knowledge Society, "Uruguay presenta el Sexto Plan de Gobierno Abierto" (Uruguay Presents its Sixth Open Government Plan), October 3, 2025.

[2139] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, pp. 12, 26, 29 and 46. On IACHR´s files; Gub.uy., "El Plan Nacional de Seguridad Pública: el camino hacia un Uruguay Más Seguro" (National Public Security Plan: The path toward a safer Uruguay), July 28, 2025; Gub.uy., Ministry of Social Development, "Uruguay profundiza su compromiso con la justicia climática y la igualdad de género en el Diálogo Regional Norte" (Uruguay deepens its commitment to climate justice and gender equality at Diálogo Regional Norte), August 2, 2025.

[2140] Gub.uy., Ministry of Environment, "Uruguay avanza en el fortalecimiento de competencias climáticas inteligentes" (Uruguay advances on strengthening smart climate competencies), August 13, 2025.

[2141] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, pp. 1-2. On IACHR´s files.

[2142] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, p. 61. On IACHR´s files; Silvamanta, "Nuevo Código de Procedimiento Administrativo en Uruguay" (New Administrative Procedural Code in Uruguay), January 16, 2025.

[2143] Gub.uy., Secretariat of Human Rights, "Encuentro por un presupuesto con enfoque en derechos humanos" (Meeting on a human rights–based budget), August 4, 2025.

[2144] Gub.uy., Secretariat of Human Rights, "Consejo Directivo de Derechos Humanos mantuvo primera reunión del período en Torre Ejecutiva" (Human rights council holds its first meeting of the term at Torre Ejecutiva), October 15, 2025.

[2145] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, p. 27. On IACHR´s files.

protecting the right to get to know it.[2146] In addition, the National Directorate of Education implemented various programs related to human rights, including the Education and Gender Program, the Intercultural Education and Migrants Program, the Education and Ethnicities Program, the Inclusive Education Program, the Environmental Education Program, and the Education in Prisons Program.[2147]

960. Regarding access to justice, the judiciary's 2025–2034 Strategic Plan established the following as priority objectives: to optimize the functioning of public defender offices, and to ensure a timely, equal, effective and efficient access to justice for everyone. In terms of the first objective, working meetings were held with the country's 317 public defenders, with the aim of planning strategic actions to improve the provision of services. With respect to the second objective, working meetings were held with all magistrates outside the capital to identify the main barriers to access to justice and to suggest concrete actions to overcome them. Furthermore, possible strategies were discussed to strengthen the presence of the Justice of the Peace within their respective jurisdictions, with the aim of resolving conflicts and social issues.[2148]

961. As for training in the justice sector, a course titled "Human Rights and the Scope of the State's Obligation to Prevent, Investigate, and Sanction Discrimination" was provided to all staff members of the Office of the Attorney General (FGN) and other justice system actors, with a particular focus on hate speech, discrimination against Afro-descendants, antisemitism, and discrimination against older persons.[2149] It should be noted that the FGN started the preparation of a draft bill to establish a Prosecutors' School, with the aim of raising training standards at the outset of the judicial career and targeted at new members of the Office of Public Prosecutor.[2150] For its part, within the judiciary, several courses were delivered to justice system operators, both as part of initial and continuing training, and workshops for discussion and exchange were held on human rights, violence against women, and a gender perspective.[2151]

962. Regarding judicial independence, the Commission observes that the head of the FGN has yet to be appointed, since this position has been filled by acting officials since 2021[2152] and is of critical importance to ensuring its proper functioning.[2153] In addition, the Inter-American Commission condemns the attack against the current Acting Attorney General, Mónica Ferrero, perpetrated at her private residence in the early morning of September 28, allegedly linked to the seizure of psychoactive substances.[2154] It also commends the prompt response of the national authorities to enhance the security of prosecutorial personnel handling drug trafficking-related cases, as well as to investigate the incident. According to public information, the material perpetrators have already been arrested, and investigations concerning the masterminds remain ongoing.[2155]

[2146] Ibid, pp. 30-31.
[2147] Ibid, p. 7
[2148] Ibid, pp. 58-59
[2149] Ibid, p. 42
[2150] Ibid, p. 60.
[2151] Ibid, pp. 33–34, 59.
[2152] Office of the Attorney General, "Estructura del Organismo" (Organizational Structure), accessed on October 30, 2025. See also: La mañana.uy, "Renuncia de Juan Gómez pone de nuevo en el tapete necesidad de designar un fiscal de Corte titular" (Juan Gómez resignation once again highlights the need to appoint a permanent Attorney General), August 21, 2024; El País, "Vacancia de cargo del fiscal de Corte adjunto genera preocupación en el sistema político" (Vacancy in the position of deputy attorney general raises concern within the political system), April 18, 2022.
[2153] IACHR, thematic hearing, "Uruguay: Impact on the independence of the Public Prosecutor's Office", 190 regular period of sessions, Washington D.C, United States of America, July 10, 2024.
[2154] OAS, Statement of the OAS General Secretariat on the Attack against the Public Prosecutor of Uruguay, September 29, 2025; El País, "Ministro Negro confirmó dos detenidos por ataque a la fiscal Mónica Ferrero: 'No nos moverán ni un centímetro y van a caer'" (Minister Negro confirmed two arrests in the attack against acting Attorney General Mónica Ferrero: "They will make us move not even an inch, and they will be brought to justice."), September 28, 2025; El País, "El atentado contra Mónica Ferrero implicó una explosión de granada: el estruendo fue escuchado por vecinos" (The attack against Mónica Ferrero involved a grenade explosion; the blast was heard by nearby residents), September 28, 2025.
[2155] Gub.uy., Ministry of the Interior, "Carlos Negro: 'Ninguna advertencia va a poder con la Fiscalía, con la Justicia ni con la Policía Nacional'" (Carlos Negro: "No threat will undermine the Office of the Attorney General, the judiciary or the National Police"), September 29, 2025; El Observador, "Amenaza a Mónica Ferrero: Orsi dijo que reforzarán seguridad de funcionarios que trabajan contra el narcotráfico y llamó a votar ley de lavado" (Threat against Mónica Ferrero: Orsi says security for officials working against drug trafficking will be

963. With regard to the situation of Afro-descendants and the fight against racial discrimination, actions were undertaken to highlight and reaffirm the history, struggles and identity of the Afro-descendant population, promote equal opportunities, and fight against racism. In this regard, the National Institute of Human Rights and Office of the Ombudsperson (INDDHH) approved a single general procedure for the implementation of affirmative quota laws in INDDHH recruitment processes[2156], carried out institutional education and awareness-raising activities during the Month for People of African Descent and announced the design of an observatory to monitor hate speech[2157]. For its part, the Ministry of Education and Culture organized a regional meeting on Afro-centered ethnic education,[2158] and the Ministry of Social Development reinstated the National Council on Racial Equity and Afro-Descendants in order to mainstream the ethnic-racial perspective in the ministry's work.[2159]

964. Likewise, at the departmental level, the Municipality of Montevideo inaugurated memorial plaques at Parque Capurro to mark the site where enslaved persons had arrived,[2160] presented a diagnostic report on Candombe and Afro-descendants,[2161] and implemented cultural agendas.[2162] Furthermore, civil society organizations pointed to tensions surrounding the management of the Caserío de los Negros memory site and called for the temporary suspension of excavations until a community-agreed destination for the remains was established.[2163] In this regard, the INDDHH issued recommendations to ensure inter-institutional coordination, scientific standards and social participation. [2164]

965. In addition, within the framework of Law No. 19.122, which establishes an 8 percent quota regarding the vacancies at the public sector assigned to Afro-descendants, the Banco de la República (Bank of the Republic of Uruguay [BROU]) launched a recruitment process aimed at hiring Afro-descendants and trans persons.[2165] At the same time, a study on compliance with the aforementioned law, which collected data between 2014 and 2024, revealed that the Afro-descendant population faces structural inequalities in employment access and conditions, that Afro-descendant households experience higher levels of poverty, and that the average hourly wage is 29 percent lower than that of the non-Afro-descendant population. It further revealed that the implementation of the law has been deficient, as labor gaps persist despite the adoption of labor market inclusion programs.[2166] strengthened and calls for the passage of the anti-money laundering law), September 29, 2025; Gub.uy., Ministry of the Interior, "Ministro se refirió al avance en la investigación sobre el caso Ferrero y destacó profesionalismo policial" (Minister addresses progress in the investigation into the Mónica Ferrero case and highlights police professionalism), October 9, 2025.

[2156] Gub.uy., National Institute of Human Rights and Office of the Ombudsperson, "La INDDHH impulsa acciones estratégicas en el Mes de la Afrodescendencia" (The INDDHH promotes strategic actions during Afro-descendant month), July 28, 2025.

[2157] Gub.uy., National Institute of Human Rights and Office of the Ombudsperson, Press Release Día Internacional de las Personas Afro (International Day for People of African Descent), August 31, 2025.

[2158] Gub.uy., Ministry of Education and Culture, "31 agosto: Día Internacional de las Personas Afrodescendientes" (31 August: International Day for People of African Descent), August 31, 2025; Gub.uy., Ministry of Education and Culture, "Hacia una educación con mirada afrodescendiente: Primer Encuentro Regional de Etnoeducación Afrocentrada en Montevideo" (Towards an Afro-descendant–centered education: first regional meeting on Afro-centered ethnic education in Montevideo), July 23, 2025.

[2159] Gub.uy., Ministry of Social Development, "Responsabilidad transversal: reinstalación del Consejo Nacional de Equidad Racial" (Cross-cutting responsibility: reinstatement of the National Council on Racial Equity), June 9, 2025.

[2160] Municipality of Montevideo, "Inauguración de placas de la memoria en el Parque Capurro" (Inauguration of memorial plaques at Parque Capurro), June 3, 2025.

[2161] Municipality of Montevideo, "Se presentó diagnóstico sobre candombe y afrodescendencia" (Diagnostic report on Candombe and Afro-descendants presented), April 29, 2025.

[2162] Municipality of Montevideo, "Programa del paseo sur y palermo" (Paseo Sur and Palermo Program), August 4, 2025; Municipality of Montevideo, "Afrodescendencia" (Afro-descendants), August 13, 2025.

[2163] La diaria, "Atabaque pide detener excavaciones en Caserío de los Negros hasta encontrar un lugar para los restos" (Atabaque calls for excavations at Caserío de los Negros to be halted until a resting place for the remains is found), January 8, 2025; Mundo Afro, "Estudio bioarqueológico en el Caserío de los Negros reveló importantes hallazgos" (Bioarchaeological study at Caserío de los Negros reveals significant findings), March 31, 2025.

[2164] Gub.uy., National Institute of Human Rights and Office of the Ombudsperson, "Posición del Consejo Directivo: Caserío de la Real Compañía de Filipinas" (Position of the Managing Council: Caserío de la Real Compañía de Filipinas), January 14, 2025.

[2165] Banco de la República Oriental del Uruguay, "Nuevos Funcionarios en la Institución" (New staff members at the institution), July 8, 2025.

[2166] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, p. 32. On IACHR´s files.

966. Similarly, according to official data, the Afro-descendant population shows a significant incidence of poverty (particularly among children under the age of six) as well as higher rates of unemployment and educational dropout compared to the non-Afro-descendant population.[2167] Other challenges identified for the full exercise of their rights include food insecurity, the proportion of homelessness, physical and mental health issues, and the lack of up-to-date data on the Afro-descendant population that would enable the development of evidence-based policies.[2168] There are also persistent gaps in the political representation of Afro-descendant women.[2169]

967. With regard to the human rights of women, the National Gender Council was reinstated as an inter-institutional coordination space to promote substantive equality public policies across all levels of the State.[2170] At the Council's first session, the programmatic priorities of the 2025–2030 National Public Policy for Gender Equality were presented,[2171] which incorporates the 90 measures committed to by the Government's 14 ministries in the framework of International Women's Day.[2172] Among these measures, noteworthy commitments and progress include mainstreaming the gender perspective in the planning and management of public resources, in institutional structures and portfolios, and in the training of public officials.[2173] In addition, implementation of the Gender Policy for the Agricultural Sector began, which seeks to address inequalities in the agricultural sector by facilitating access to land, training and productive support.[2174]

968. Likewise, the Senate passed a bill aimed at systematizing, analyzing, and ensuring transparency of data on the gender pay gap, as a first step towards the adoption of evidence-based corrective public policies.[2175] At the same time, a recent ONSC's study found an overall gender pay gap of 10.48 percent in favor of men, as well as vertical and horizontal gender segregation within the public service: while women make up 55 percent of staff, they hold only 42 percent of leadership positions and a minimal share of senior-level posts, and are concentrated in sectors such as social services and justice.[2176] Similarly, studies by the Banco de Previsión Social (Social Security Bank, BPS) found that, while women's participation in the social security system has increased significantly,[2177] a marked trend persists whereby women receive lower salaries than men.[2178]

[2167] Gub.uy., Presidency of Uruguay, "Estudio sobre participación laboral de afrodescendientes permitirá rediseñar políticas" (Study on labor participation of Afro-descendants to enable the redesign of policies), July 25, 2025; Gub.uy., Ministry of Social Development, "Visibilizar desigualdades y fortalecer acciones: datos estadísticos de la población afrodescendiente en Uruguay" (Making inequalities visible and strengthening action: statistical data on the Afro-descendant population in Uruguay), July 2, 2025; Montevideo Portal, "El 46% de los niños afrodescendientes menores de seis años son pobres en Uruguay" (In Uruguay, 46 percent of Afro-descendant children under six live in poverty), July 1, 2025.

[2168] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, p. 54. On IACHR´s files.

[2169] La diaria, "El desafío de la inclusión afrodescendiente en la política uruguaya" (The challenge of Afro-descendant inclusion in Uruguay's politics), March 21, 2025; El País, "Las mujeres afro luchan por la inclusión en Uruguay, un país que se resiste a la paridad" (Afro-descendant women fight for inclusion in Uruguay, a country resistant to parity), March 11, 2025.

[2170] Gub.uy., Office of Planning and Budget, "Gobierno reinstala el Consejo Nacional de Género" (Government reinstates the national gender council), July 24, 2025.

[2171] Gub.uy., Ministry of National Defense, "Primera Sesión del Consejo Nacional de Género 2025-2030" (First session of the national gender council 2025–2030), November 7, 2025.

[2172] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025. On IACHR´s files, Gub.uy, Ministry of National Defense, "Presentación de los Compromisos de Estado en materia de políticas de género" (Presentation of the State commitments on gender policies), March 10, 2025.

[2173] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, pp. 24, 36, 42. On IACHR´s files.

[2174] Gub.uy., Ministry of Livestock, Agriculture and Fisheries, "Política de Género Agro" (Gender policy for the agricultural sector) n/d., accessed on November 7, 2025.

[2175] El Observador, "El Senado aprobó un proyecto de ley que busca crear un indicador sobre la brecha salarial de género" (Senate passes bill aimed at creating an indicator on the gender pay gap), August 5, 2025.

[2176] Gub.uy., National Office of the Civil Service, "Brecha de género en los puestos jerárquicos en el Estado uruguayo – 2024" (Gender gap in senior leadership positions within the Uruguayan State – 2024), March 31, 2025.

[2177] Banco de Previsión Social, La seguridad social con mirada de género, actualización (Social security from a gender perspective, updated edition), February 2025.

[2178] El País, "Adultos mayores: todos ven como algo 'muy común' la soledad y percepción cambia según el barrio en que se vive" (Older persons: everyone views loneliness as "very common," and perceptions vary depending on the neighborhood where they live),

969. Regarding the rights of children and adolescents, the Senate passed a bill raising the minimum age for marriage to 18, with the possibility of an exception subject to judicial authorization;[2179] it also resumed consideration of the initiative to eliminate the statute of limitations for sexual crimes against children and adolescents, which had remained stalled since it was submitted in 2020.[2180] Likewise, work began on the development of a pilot plan between the Food National Institute and the judiciary, under which the Specialized First-Instance Family Courts in the capital would provide food vouchers, under certain conditions, to women, children and adolescents in situations of economic vulnerability, within the framework of the judicial proceedings they manage.[2181]

970. Regarding human trafficking, the 2023–2028 National Plan for the Eradication of Commercial and Non-Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents was adopted.[2182] In addition, the National Directorate of Migration and the European Union signed a memorandum of understanding to create the Punto Atenas (Athens Point) space, which seeks to enhance coordination and articulation between national and international institutions with the aim of improving inter-agency interoperability for the prevention of cross-border crimes such as human trafficking.[2183]

971. As for the rights of LGBTI persons, actions were undertaken to promote visibility and the recognition of their rights. These actions included the appointment of a trans woman as Secretary of Human Rights;[2184] the recognition, by the SDH, of defenders such as Diana Mines, Karina Pankievich and Fernando Frontán for their work in the defense of the rights of LGBTI persons;[2185] and the sentencing of a man to seven years in prison for the murder of a trans woman.[2186] In contrast, in April the killing of a trans woman was

February 4, 2025; Debate, "Las desigualdades de género en la vejez: mujeres mayores en Uruguay enfrentan más soledad y menores ingresos" (Gender inequalities in old age: older women in Uruguay face greater loneliness and lower incomes), February 10, 2025.

[2179] Medios Públicos Uruguay, "Senado aprobó cambio para subir la edad mínima para casarse a los 18 años" (Senate passes amendment to raise the minimum age for marriage to 18), September 10, 2025.

[2180] El Telégrafo, "Presidente Orsi aseguró que reforzará las políticas de género para dar 'valor a la lucha de las mujeres'" (President Orsi states that he will strengthen gender policies to recognize women's struggles), March 11, 2025; La Diaria Uruguay, "Imprescriptibilidad de delitos sexuales y tipificación del suicidio femicida: dos proyectos de ley que ubican a las víctimas en el centro" (Elimination of the statute of limitations for sexual crimes and the criminalization of femicide-related suicide: two bills that place victims at the center), August 19, 2025.

[2181] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, p. 34. On IACHR´s files.

[2182] Gub.uy., Presidency of Uruguay, Decreto N° 48/025 Se aprueba el III Plan Nacional para la Erradicación de la Explotación Sexual Comercial y No Comercial de la Niñez y la Adolescencia, (Decree No. 48/025 on the adoption of the Third National Plan for the Eradication of Commercial and Non-Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents), February 20, 2025.

[2183] European Union, "Uruguay firma el Memorando de Entendimiento para la creación del Punto Atenas en el marco del programa europeo EUROFRONT" (Uruguay signs MOU for the creation of the Punto Atenas space within the framework of the European EUROFRONT program), June 11, 2025.

[2184] Infobae, "La secretaria de Derechos Humanos de Yamandú Orsi será la primera trans en llegar al Poder Ejecutivo" (Yamandú Orsi's Secretary of Human Rights to be the first trans woman to join the executive), February 7, 2025; LatFem, "Poder trans en el gobierno de Uruguay" (Trans power in Uruguay's government), February 17, 2025.

[2185] Yahoo Noticias, "Uruguay premia a tres activistas LGTBI que 'arriesgaron sus cuerpos' para 'abrir caminos'" (Uruguay honors three LGBTI activists who "put their bodies on the line" to "pave the way"), June 25, 2025; Diario ABC, "Secretaría de Uruguay premia a tres activistas LGTBI que 'arriesgaron sus cuerpos' para 'abrir caminos'" (The Secretariat of Uruguay honors three LGBTI activists who "put their bodies on the line" to "pave the way"), June 24, 2025; La Diaria, "Secretaría de Derechos Humanos de Presidencia homenajeó a referentes LGBTI+ y presentó lineamientos en diversidad para el quinquenio" (The Secretariat of Human Rights of the Office of the Presidency honors LGBTI+ leaders and presents diversity guidelines for the next five years), June 25, 2025.

[2186] La Diaria, "Justicia condenó a siete años de prisión al hombre que mató a una mujer trans en Jardines del Hipódromo" (The justice system sentences the man who killed a transgender woman in Jardines del Hipódromo to seven years in prison), August 6, 2025; Subrayado, "Condenaron a un hombre por el homicidio de una mujer trans asesinada de un disparo en la cabeza en Bella Italia" (A man is convicted for the killing of a trans woman after shooting her in the head in Bella Italia), August 1, 2025.

recorded in Canelones.[2187] In addition, a civil society study revealed that LGBTI migrants face expressions of xenophobia and difficulties in accessing healthcare or housing.[2188]

972. With regard to the situation of persons with disabilities, progress was made in terms of transparency and institutional strengthening, under the perspective of the social model of disability. Accountability actions regarding the implementation of affirmative action laws for persons with disabilities are noted,[2189] along with measures to ensure reasonable accommodation for persons with visual disabilities in the education and employment sectors.[2190] Nevertheless, civil society organizations reported barriers of access to public and private transportation for persons with disabilities. It was reported that a resolution under consideration would prohibit cash payments on certain means of transport, affecting this population, who, due to a lack of autonomous and accessible means, would be unable to manage payment and, consequently, move independently.[2191]

973. In terms of the rights of older persons, the Third National Plan on Aging and Older Persons is currently under development; it is designed as a public policy guiding, coordinating and monitoring instrument targeting this population.[2192] At the same time, actions were carried out over the year to promote and protect their rights. Among these measures were the following: i) a widespread 6.13-percent increase in periodic social security benefits in 2025, along with an additional adjustment for minimum pensions and retirement benefits;[2193] ii) the launch of the Observatory on Aging, Older Persons and Social Security of the BPS, aimed at strengthening existing social security policies, as well as generating input to foster innovation in the area;[2194] iii) the implementation of the Aprender Siempre (Always Learning, PAS) non-formal education programme, with specific activities for older persons in various territories;[2195] and iv) the launch of the campaign on the World Elder Abuse Awareness Day, aimed at fighting against violence and age-based discrimination.[2196]

974. As for persons in the context of human mobility, the country extended the Tie-Based Residency Program until November 23. The program, launched in May 2024, aims to offer a regular stay and access to rights to 20,000 asylum seekers.[2197] In February, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MFA) announced that 2,000 applications had been filed and that nearly half had already been resolved, benefiting nationals of Benin, Cuba, Haiti, Morocco, the Dominican Republic and Senegal.[2198] The program is based on the Inter-

[2187] La Diaria, Colectivos LGBTI+ repudiaron transfemicidio en Pinamar Norte y lo enmarcaron en una "ola de odio" global contra las identidades disidentes (LGBTI+ groups condemn the transfemicide in Pinamar Norte and frame it as part of a global 'wave of hatred' against dissident identities), April 21, 2025; El Observador, "Alexandra Ruiz, la primera mujer trans asesinada en 2025: reina de samba en Canelones, militante por los derechos LGTBI+ y una vida de sacrificios" (Alexandra Ruiz, the first trans woman murdered in 2025: samba queen in Canelones, LGBTI+ rights activist and a life of sacrifice), April 26, 2025.

[2188] IOM, UNFPA, Ovejas Negras, "Estado de situación sobre ejercicio de derechos de personas migrantes LGBTIQ+ en Uruguay" (Analysis on the exercise of rights of LGBTIQ+ migrants in Uruguay), 2025; Diario ABC, "Un estudio apoyado por la OIM señala que Uruguay debe mejorar la respuesta a migrantes LGTBIQ+" (A study supported by the IOM indicates that Uruguay must improve its response to LGBTIQ+ migrants), August 13, 2025; La Diaria, "Las personas migrantes LGBTI+ en Uruguay sienten más discriminación por su nacionalidad que por la orientación sexual o identidad de género" (LGBTI+ migrants in Uruguay face greater discrimination based on their nationality than on their sexual orientation or gender identity), August 13, 2025.

[2189] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, p. 26. On IACHR´s files.

[2190] Ibid., pp. 10, 11 and 14.

[2191] Minutes of the meeting, IACHR, meeting with CLADH, May 15, 2025. On IACHR´s files.

[2192] Gub.uy., Agency for Electronic Government and Information and Knowledge Society, "Línea de acción: Enfoque de Gobierno Abierto en el diseño e implementación de las políticas públicas" (Line of action: Open Government approach in the design and implementation of public policies), n/d., accessed on November 7, 2025.

[2193] Banco de Previsión Social, "Montos y aumentos de pasividades" (Benefit amounts and increases), 2025.

[2194] Banco de Previsión Social, "Presentación del Observatorio de Vejez, Envejecimiento y Seguridad Social (OVESS)" (Launch of the Observatory on Aging, Older Persons and Social Security), February 4, 2025.

[2195] Permanent Mission of Uruguay to the OAS, Note No. 162/2025, Input for the IACHR's 2025 Annual Report, Eastern Republic of Uruguay, October 2, 2025, p. 14. On IACHR´s files.

[2196] Gub.uy., Ministry of Social Development, "Campaña por la Toma de Conciencia del Abuso y Maltrato en la Vejez" (Campaign for World Elder Abuse Awareness Day), June 13, 2025.

[2197] Gub.uy., Ministry of the Interior, National Directorate of Migration, "Residencia por arraigo" (Tie-Based Residency).

[2198] Gub.uy., Ministry of Foreign Affairs, "Avanza regularización de migrantes gracias a nuevos mecanismos para solicitantes de refugio" (New mechanisms for asylum seekers drive progress in migrant regularization), February 25, 2025.

American Principles developed by the Commission, upholds the commitments undertaken in the 2023 Global Refugee Forum and reinforces the principles of the 2022 Los Angeles Declaration on Migration and Protection.[2199] Moreover, the Legal Citizenship and Nationality Working Group of the INDDHH submitted a report with key recommendations to ministerial authorities to ensure the right to nationality of migrants, refugees, stateless persons and children and adolescents.[2200]

975. Furthermore, there remains a lack of alignment in the passports issued to legal citizens to ensure that the corresponding Uruguayan nationality is duly recorded, notwithstanding the efforts undertaken by the government of Uruguay to find a solution. In this regard, the Inter-American Commission and other international bodies welcomed[2201] the decision to include the heading "Nationality/Citizenship" and the code "URY" on passports for both natural-born and legal citizens, in order to ensure consistency between the issuing country of the document and the citizenship of its holder. Likewise, the heading "Place of birth" was removed, as it is not considered mandatory under the regulations of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).[2202] However, on 29 July, 2025, a joint statement by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of the Interior reported that, due to challenges in the stamping of long-stay visas, the issuance of the new passports would be discontinued, without further information.[2203]

976. In terms of memory, truth and justice, actions were carried out to preserve and ensure access to relevant archives for the clarification of grave human rights violations. Among these actions, particular emphasis is placed on the signing of an agreement for the digitization of historical files from police headquarters, police intelligence services and the military justice system; the publication of historical documents related to Operation Condor; and cooperation with Chile for the exchange of documentary information on human rights violations.[2204] Moreover, public sources point to challenges in the area of reparations arising from Law No. 18.033, due to the incompatibility between reparatory pensions and regular retirement pensions. At the same time, they indicate that there is openness to dialogue between the State and victims' organizations on the matter.[2205]

977. Regarding persons deprived of liberty, at the beginning of 2025 the second National Census of Persons Deprived of Liberty was conducted, which facilitated the collection of relevant data to support informed decision-making on penitentiary public policy.[2206] Likewise, various initiatives were implemented over the year to promote social reintegration. The following initiatives are particularly noteworthy: i) the adoption of the Assisted Inclusion Project, aimed at supporting the reintegration of people recently released

[2199] Gub.uy., Presidency of Uruguay, Decree No. 138/024, May 15, 2024.

[2200] Gub.uy. "Uruguay avanza en garantizar la nacionalidad a migrantes y refugiados tras informe de D.D.H.H" (Uruguay makes progress in guaranteeing nationality for migrants and refugees following a human rights report), April 22, 2025.

[2201] IACHR [@CIDH], (April 22, 2025), #CIDH saluda la decisión del gobierno de adaptar los pasaportes de las personas extranjeras que adquirieron ciudadanía legal, siguiendo las directrices de la Organización de Aviación Civil Internacional (#IACHR welcomes the decision of the government to adapt the passports of foreign nationals who have acquired legal citizenship, in line with the guidelines of the International Civil Aviation Organization) [X post], X. https://t.co/cSn9WU0fmN; UNHCR, "Uruguay: ACNUR celebra decisión del Ministerio del Interior que contribuye a prevenir la apatridia" (Uruguay: UNHCR welcomes decision by the Ministry of the Interior that helps prevent statelessness), April 17, 2025; IOM, "IOM congratulates the Government of Uruguay for protecting migrant populations through official passport modifications", April 18, 2025.

[2202] Gub.uy., Ministry of the Interior, "Ministerio del Interior actualiza información en pasaporte para cumplir con normativa internacional" (Ministry of the Interior updates passport information to comply with international regulations), April 15, 2025.

[2203] Gub.uy., Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of the Interior, Statement No. 61/25, Pasaportes – Comunicado conjunto (Passports – Joint statement), July 29, 2025.

[2204] Gub.uy., Presidency of Uruguay, "Secretaría de Derechos Humanos para el Pasado Reciente centraliza archivos sobre violación de derechos en dictadura" (Secretariat of Human Rights for the Recent Past centralizes archives on human rights violations during the dictatorship), May 21, 2025; Prensa Latina, "Cancillería uruguaya desclasifica documentos sobre Plan Cóndor" (Uruguayan Ministry of Foreign Affairs declassifies documents on Operation Condor), May 20, 2025; Gub.uy., Ministry of Foreign Affairs, "Archivos emblemáticos del Plan Cóndor - Segunda etapa" (Emblematic archives of Operation Condor – Second stage), September 11, 2025; Gub.uy., Presidency of Uruguay, "Uruguay y Chile avanzan en cooperación en políticas de memoria, verdad y justicia" (Uruguay and Chile make progress in cooperation on memory, truth and justice policies), June 27, 2025.

[2205] Caras y Caretas, "Crysol y el Gobierno exploran salidas para compatibilizar pensión reparatoria y jubilación" (Crysol and the government explore options to reconcile reparatory pensions and retirement benefits), August 29, 2025.

[2206] Gub.uy., Ministry of the Interior, "Segundo Censo Nacional de Personas Privadas de Libertad" (Second national census of persons deprived of liberty), January 29, 2025.

after serving their sentences and who are in a situation of vulnerability;[2207] ii) the implementation of the National Literacy Plan to guarantee education for persons deprived of liberty;[2208] and iii) the adoption of an agreement between the National Rehabilitation Institute (INR) and Municipality "F", enabling men from Unit No. 6 and women from Unit No. 5 to participate in labor and community activities, both within the facilities and outside the prison setting.[2209]

978. Moreover, in June, a strategic plan and eight urgent measures were adopted to improve detention conditions at Unit No. 4 of the INR, which faces the most critical situation in terms of overcrowding.[2210] However, Uruguay remains the fifth country in the region with the highest detention rate,[2211] and the prison population continues to increase. According to official data, as of June 2025, there were 16,625 incarcerated persons. Out of that total, 15,197 were men and 1,428 were women, 66 of whom were mothers living with their daughters and sons. This figure nearly quadruples the 2020 figure of 4,369 incarcerated persons.[2212] In addition, the deaths of five persons deprived of liberty and the injuries suffered by three staff members were reported during two fires that occurred at the Santiago Vázquez Prison in March and June 2025.[2213]

[2207] Gub.uy., Ministry of Social Development, "Proyecto de Inclusión Asistida (PIA)" (Assisted Inclusion Project), April 25, 2025.

[2208] Gub.uy., Ministry of the Interior, "Autoridades impulsan Plan Nacional de Alfabetización para personas privadas de libertad" (Authorities promote the National Literacy Plan for persons deprived of liberty), June 20, 2025.

[2209] Gub.uy., Ministry of the Interior, "Convenios entre el INR y el Municipio F impulsan la reinserción social de personas privadas de libertad" (Agreements between the INR and Municipality F promote the social reintegration of persons deprived of liberty), August 18, 2025.

[2210] Gub.uy., Presidencia Uruguay, "Interior anunció medidas para atender la situación de la Unidad n.° 4 del INR" (Ministry of the Interior announces measures to address the situation at Unit No. 4 of the INR), June 27, 2025.

[2211] World Prison Brief, Institute for Crime & Justice Policy Research, World Prison Brief data – Highest to Lowest – Prison Population Rate, 2025, accessed on September 10, 2025.

[2212] Gub.uy., Presidency of Uruguay, "Interior anunció medidas para atender la situación de la Unidad n.° 4 del INR" (Ministry of the Interior announces measures to address the situation at Unit No. 4 of the INR), June 27, 2025.

[2213] Gub.uy., National Institute of Human Rights and Office of the Ombudsperson, "Comunicado público - Tercer incendio con víctimas en el ex Comcar: urge una transformación estructural", (Public statement – Third fire with victims at the former Comcar: a structural transformation is urgently needed), June 16, 2025; Montevideo Portal, "Jornada negra en Comcar: un muerto y dos heridos en CTI por trifulca e incendio" (Tragic day at Comcar: one person dead and two injured in intensive care after a brawl and fire), March 4, 2025; and "Cuatro presos muertos en el módulo 11 del Comcar a causa de un incendio" (Four inmates die in a fire at Comcar's Module 11), June 16, 2025.

PARTIALLY DISSENTING VOTE OF COMMISSIONER CARLOS BERNAL PULIDO ON CHAPTER IV-A OF THE 2025 ANNUAL REPORT "SITUATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS IN THE REGION – OVERVIEW OF THE HUMAN RIGHTS SITUATION BY COUNTRY"

With due respect for my colleagues and in accordance with Article 19.1 of the Rules of Procedure of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights ("the Commission" or "the IACHR"), and exercising our right to freedom of expression I submit this partially dissenting vote on Chapter IV-A of the 2025 Annual Report: " Situation of Human Rights in the Region: Overview of the human rights situation by country", hereinafter "the Report".

I emphasize the relevance of this report in that it systematizes and consolidates information on the human rights situation in the region over the past year. Notwithstanding the foregoing, in this vote I will refer to the following: (i) the Report contains considerations that ignore the inter-American legal framework and pose a risk to pregnant women; (ii) contraceptive methods and the need to inform women; (iii) the inadequate approach to conscientious objection in the report; (iv) gender identity and other issues related to the LGBTI community; (v) inappropriate use of the term "sex workers"; (vi) sexual and reproductive education of children and adolescents and recognition of their identity; and (vii) so-called "conversion therapies".

1. The Report contains considerations that disregard the inter-American legal framework and pose a risk to unborn children

Paragraphs 14, 27, 90, 130, 175, 178, 178, 216, 257, 341, 398, 444, 525, and 544 refer to the absolute ban on abortion or to the difficulties of access to legal abortion, as well as to the regulations on the so-called "voluntary interruption of pregnancy". Here, I will address the following issues: (i) the erroneous use of the concept of "legal termination of pregnancy"; (ii) the non-existence of the right to abortion and state leeway to regulate on this matter; and (iii) the lack of protection for the unborn.

1.1 Misuse of the concept of "voluntary interruption of pregnancy"

I emphasize the importance of the IACHR using precise and appropriate language in its reports. In other words, it is imperative to use accurate and rigorous language to ensure that decisions are based on clear understandings. In fact, on several occasions the Commission itself has acknowledged the need for conceptual precision in documents it issues[2214] and has repeatedly stressed the importance of the correct use of language.[2215]

Language constitutes, in effect, a fundamental element for human communication and the expression of thought, functioning as a dialectical unit in which both are mutually conditioned.[2216] Language plays an essential part in decision making, especially through its representative or referential function, aimed at conveying information, describing facts, and expressing ideas in a clear, precise, and objective manner, so that they serve as a solid basis for the decisions to be made.[2217]

Therefore, the appropriate and rigorous use of language in IACHR reports ensures that the message is clear and understandable to all audiences. Beyond the simple transmission of data, this linguistic rigor legitimizes the technical-legal analysis and the conclusions drawn by the IACHR.

[2214] IACHR. Indirect violations of freedom of expression: The Impact of the Concentration of Media Ownership; IACHR. Chapter IV: Report on access to information in the Hemisphere: Access to information and economic development; IACHR. Guidelines for Preparation of Progress Indicators in the Area of Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights. 2008.

[2215] IACHR. The Right of Boys and Girls to a Family. Alternative Care. Ending Institutionalization in the Americas. 2013.

[2216] Juan Alberto Mena Lorenzo, Noemí Sarracino Alum. Professional technical language in the training of future workers. Mendive, ISSN-e 1815-7696, Vol. 6, No. 4, 2008 (Issue dedicated to: October-Dec.), pp. 234-241.

[2217] Ibid.

In light of the above, it is particularly problematic that the term "termination of pregnancy" or "voluntary interruption of pregnancy" is used in the report when these areas have to do with "abortion." Thus, it is essential to draw a precise conceptual distinction between the two expressions.

Abortion is a form of termination of pregnancy carried out with the direct intention of causing the death of the fetus or, in other words, ending prenatal life.[2218] Thus, it may involve termination before the fetus is viable or even the destruction of a viable fetus.[2219] Consequently, an abortion will only be successful when it causes the death of the human being in gestation.[2220]

The expression "interruption of pregnancy" may, on the other hand, induce the idea that the gestational process can be resumed at a later date. However, as indicated, abortion necessarily entails the termination of the pregnancy through the death of the human being in gestation.

I therefore consider it essential to use the appropriate terminology so as to avoid misunderstandings regarding the interpretation and decision adopted by the Commission. Consequently, in my vote I will expressly refer to the conduct of abortion.

1.2 Absence of a right to abortion in the ISHR

While noting regulatory changes adopted by some States, in this case Bolivia, that authorize access to abortion, I emphasize, as I have done in multiple opinions[2221], that there are no binding sources in international law — and especially in the American Convention or other treaties that make up the inter-American System — that contemplate (i) the — so-called right to abortion or (ii) a correlative obligation for States to provide abortion services. That said, states have ample leeway – by virtue of the principles of subsidiarity or complementarity and representative democracy – to take measures to protect the life of the unborn child[2222] including, although it is not the only means, the use of criminal law.

Regarding the non-existence of the right to abortion, former I/A Court H.R. Judge Eduardo Vio Grossi established in his opinion partially dissenting from the judgment in the case of Manuela et al. v. El Salvador:

[2218] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb; 79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[2219] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb; 79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[2220] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb; 79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086. Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4A_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annua Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras - 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4B_VEN_EN.PDF. Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_5_SLV_EN.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024 - Chapter IV.A Situation of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4A_EN.PDF#page201.

[2221] Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4A_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras - 2023.https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4B_VEN_EN.PDF Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_5_SLV_EN.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024 - Chapter IV.A Situation of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4A_EN.PDF#page201.

[2222] ACHR Article 4.

> "In this regard, it is indisputable that (...) there is no inter-American or international legal norm, whether conventional, international custom, or general principle of law, that recognizes abortion as a right. There are only resolutions of international bodies, most of which are made up of international officials and not representatives of States: decisions which, in addition to not being binding, are not interpretative of current international law but rather reflect aspirations for it to change in the direction they suggest."[2223]

In fact, it should be noted that the Inter-American Court recently heard the case of Beatriz vs. El Salvador, in which the alleged existence of a "right to abortion" was claimed by the IACHR and the victims' representatives. However, in the judgment, the Court did not establish the existence of such a right.[2224] This is further evidence of the non-existence of a binding legal source from which an alleged right to abortion is derived.

That said, I emphasize that this leeway derived from the non-existence of a right to abortion and the convergence of competing rights is increased thanks to the fact that it is incumbent upon States to define punishable conducts and their consequences, and to the automatic referral made, according to the I/A Court H.R., by Article 7.2 of the American Convention to domestic law in matters related to deprivation of liberty—legal exception principle — (principio de reserva de ley).[2225]

This is relevant if one bears in mind that, based on a close reading of Articles 31, 76, and 77 of the American Convention, it is only through consensus — provided by the States signing and ratifying amendments or treaties — that international obligations can arise that are in addition to those already contemplated in the ACHR.

In conclusion, international human rights law – and in particular the Inter-American System – does not recognize abortion as a right, nor does it impose an obligation on States to guarantee it or provide it as a service. On the contrary, the American Convention expressly protects life from conception, and grants the states leeway to adopt the measures they deem appropriate for its protection, within the framework of their democratic principles and legislative sovereignty. The true state response to violence, abandonment, or inequality suffered by girls, adolescents, and women cannot be the elimination of a human life, but the implementation of effective and comprehensive policies of prevention, support, and justice.

In conclusion, I emphasize that paragraphs 175, 205, 257, and 396 refer to the so-called sexual and reproductive rights. In this regard, in the inter-American human rights system there is no clarity regarding the scope of this category of rights, nor are they rights expressly enshrined in the American Convention on Human Rights. Therefore, I believe that the issues addressed under this category, such as abortion, should have been analyzed in light of the rights actually recognized in the Convention.

1.3 Lack of protection for the unborn in the Report

In this report, as in others in which I have cast my vote[2226], references to abortion ignore the other person whose right to life is also protected by conventions: the unborn person. Thus, they ignore the necessary balance that must exist between competing rights of all internationally protected persons. In this regard, it should be

[2223] Partially Dissenting Opinion of Judge Eduardo Vio Grossi, Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Case of Manuela et al. v. El Salvador: Judgment of November 2, 2021, (Preliminary Objection, Merits, Reparations, and Costs), paragraph 13.

[2224] I/A Court H.R. Case of Beatriz et al. v. El Salvador. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 22, 2024. Series C No. 549.

[2225] I/A Court H.R. Case of Romero Feris v. Argentina. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of October 15, 2019. Series C No. 391. Par. 77.

[2226] Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4A_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras - 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4B_VEN_EN.PDF. Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_5_SLV_EN.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024 - Chapter IV.A Situation of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4A_EN.PDF#page201.

noted that pregnant women are also subjects of law and holders of the right to life. A pronouncement on abortion always implies a position on a practice that necessarily implies the termination of the life of a dignified human being and that Article 4 of the ACHR protects, so it is necessary to expressly recognize the rights of the unborn person as part of the weighing up of considerations required in any case of abortion.

In this regard, Article 1.2 of the ACHR clearly establishes that, for the purposes of the Convention, a "person" is every human being.[2227] Thus, in light of the Convention, human rights are not only recognized for persons who have already been born, but must be protected for all individuals from conception, who are to be considered human beings. Moreover, the I/A Court H.R. itself, in its advisory opinion 22, indicated that, unquestionably, the term "person" is equivalent to the term "human being" for the purposes of the ACHR.[2228]

Biologically and materially, a being in gestation undoubtedly constitutes a human being.[2229] Furthermore, the Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights states that "the human genome underlies the fundamental unity of all members of the human family, as well as the recognition of their inherent dignity and diversity. In a symbolic sense, it is the heritage of humanity."[2230]

The consequence of recognizing the unborn as a person/human being is that he/she becomes a holder of rights. Thus, the ACHR establishes in its articles on rights the formula "Every person (...)".[2231] Likewise, the instruments for the protection of human rights generally recognize the possession of rights by members of the human species, especially the right to life.[2232]

Furthermore, in the Artavia Murillo judgment, the I/A Court H.R. determined that "the protection of the right to life under is not absolute, but rather gradual and incremental according to its development (of the human embryo)." This implies that, irrespective of the concepts of gradualness and incrementality (with which I take issue), the Court has already established that persons in gestation must be protected by the State in their "right to life." In the same vein, in the Cuscul Pivaral case,[2233] the I/ A Court H.R. applied the ACHR to a fetus (persona en gestación) and also applied Article 19 of the ACHR, thus recognizing the legal status of the fetus as a child.

Likewise, I emphasize that the preamble of the Convention on the Rights of the Child states that the child needs protection and care both before and after birth.[2234] This implies that in light of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), the unborn child is a child in need of special care. This was reiterated in the preparatory work for the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.[2235]

In short, a comprehensive interpretation of the Inter-American System and International Human Rights Law leads to the recognition of the unborn person as a subject of rights, particularly the right to life, protected from conception by Article 4 of the American Convention. Disregarding this protection entails arbitrarily excluding

[2227] ACHR Article 1.2 "For the purposes of this Convention, person means every human being."

[2228] I/A Court H.R. OC-22/16. Ownership of rights of legal persons in the inter-American human rights system. Advisory Opinion of February 26, 2016. Series A. No. 22. Par. 48.

[2229] Kaluger, G., and Kaluger, M., Human Development: The Span of Life, The C.V. Mosby Co., St. Louis, 1974, pp. 28-29.

[2230] Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights. Article 1.

[2231] American Convention on Human Rights. Articles 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 18, 20, 21, 22, 24 and 25.

[2232] International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Preamble, par. 3; American Convention on Human Rights, par. 3. Preamble; African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights: Preamble, par. 6; Geneva Declaration on the Rights of the Child. Preamble, par. 1; American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man. Article 1; Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Preamble, par. 1; Declaration of the Rights of the Child. Preamble, par. 2; European Convention on Human Rights. Preamble, par. 2)

[2233] I/A Court H.R. Case of Cuscul Pivaral v. Guatemala. Judgment of August 23, 2018. "That said, the Court has indicated that extreme poverty and the lack of adequate medical care for women during pregnancy and postpartum are causes of high maternal mortality and morbidity. Therefore, States must implement appropriate health policies that allow it to provide assistance with suitably qualified personnel during births; policies to prevent maternal mortality by providing adequate prenatal and postpartum controls, and legal and administrative instruments relating to health policies that record cases of maternal mortality adequately. The Court has also recognized that, under Article 19 of the Convention, the State must assume its special position of guarantor with greater care and responsibility and take special measures focused on the principle of the best interest of the child."

[2234] Convention on the Rights of the Child. Preamble.

[2235] "The main reason for providing in paragraph 4 (now Article 6(5)) of the original text that the death penalty should not be applied to pregnant women was to save the innocent life of the unborn child." United Nations. General Assembly, Report of the Third Committee on the Draft International Covenants on Human Rights. A/3764. P. 40.

a human being from the legal community of persons, contravening the principle of human dignity, which is the foundation of the international human rights order.

Therefore, any decision or pronouncement regarding abortion requires a real weighing up of the competing rights – and not the suppression of one of them –, ensuring that the protection of prenatal life is combined with comprehensive care and the guaranteeing of the rights of the pregnant woman. Abiding by the American Convention requires a balanced and respectful approach to all the rights recognized therein.

1.4 Obstetric emergencies: violation of the principle of subsidiarity and lack of protection of the unborn child

Paragraphs 308 and 398 refer to the criminalization of women who suffered obstetric emergencies. In this regard, I reiterate that I fully agree that the State should not condemn women for obstetric emergencies or complications. What I disagree with is that a body such as the Commission should interfere in an intense manner in national criminal proceedings and decisions, without sufficient factual and legal grounds for doing so, and, moreover, through considerations that place the right to life of newborn children in serious danger.

That disregards the principle of subsidiarity, and (ii) paints a picture of illegitimacy with respect to all convictions imposed by the State in these cases – even when they may be properly substantiated.

Logically, the majority's rejection of the sentences imposed leads to the need to revoke those sentences. That is, it implies a pronouncement by which the majority position seeks to replace the national authority and considers that the persons convicted in the cases did not commit the crimes envisaged in domestic law, and therefore the State should not individualize or enforce any penalty against them. Therefore, the majority position far exceeded the limits on the inter-American Commission's sphere of confidence. In effect, the Commission acted like a fourth criminal instance, without any type of motivation and in a scenario in which such an assessment is not appropriate.

In this regard, the jurisprudence of the I/A Court H.R. recognizes that not even this Court, as the highest authority of the regional human rights system, can replace the national authority in assigning individual punishments for crimes envisaged under domestic law.[2236]

This erroneous position with which I take issue not only resulted in a manifest violation of the principle of subsidiarity or complementarity, but also severely jeopardized the legal right to life of newborn children. If the convicted persons really committed crimes, then the majority's rejection of those convictions would constitute a disastrous precedent of denying protection of human life.

As on other occasions, I recall that the State has a particular duty to protect the rights of children. From this duty derives the international obligation to investigate, prosecute, and punish human rights violations against children.[2237] This is a consideration that must be taken into account in the analysis of these cases, where there are serious concerns about the arbitrary deprivation of life of newborns.

[2236] I/A Court H.R. Case of Usón Ramírez v. Venezuela. Preliminary Objection, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 20, 2009. Series C No. 207. Par. 87. I/A Court H.R. Case of García Ibarra et al v. Ecuador. Preliminary Objections, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 17, 2015. Series C No. 306. Par. 167.

[2237] I/A Court H.R. Case of Rochac Hernández et al. v. El Salvador. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of October 14, 2014. Series C No. 285. Paragraph 135; I/A Court H.R. Case of V.R.P, V.P.C, et al. v. Nicaragua. Preliminary Objections, par. 292; I/A Court H.R. Case of Guzmán Albarracín et al. v. Ecuador. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of June 24, 2020. Series C No. 405. Par. 120, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of March 8, 2018 Series C No. 350. par. 164.

2. On contraceptive methods and the need to inform women

Paragraphs 14, 427, and 444 refer to access to contraceptive methods. In this regard, I emphasize[2238] that it is not enough that the use of contraceptive methods be approved to guarantee women's right to health; these measures must also be accompanied by education and awareness-raising measures on the use of contraceptive methods in general, information on the specific physical effects they entail, and their impact on the right to health. I emphasize that freedom in decision making is not limited to the provision of options. True freedom comes when sufficient information is provided to enable those decisions to be taken.

In these matters, it is essential to take into account the right of women to have access to comprehensive, truthful, and pluralistic information on their health, which is an essential dimension of the freedom of expression and the right to health recognized in international human rights law.[2239] As the IACHR has pointed out in its reports – including Merits Report No.72/14[2240] and the Beatriz case[2241] (reports that I do not agree with in their entirety) – access to information is an indispensable requirement to guarantee autonomy, personal integrity, and the possibility of making free and informed decisions with respect to health.

With regard to this matter, the World Health Organization has indicated that the choice of contraceptive methods will depend on "the person's general state of health", among other criteria.[2242] This is important, since it shows that not every method is suitable for every person and that, in this context, the supply of such methods may represent a health risk in specific cases. Thus, it is essential that people receive adequate guidance on existing contraceptive methods so that they can make an informed choice of the most appropriate option for them and are fully aware of the risks to their health.

Only with proper guidance can it be guaranteed that people who use contraceptive methods give their informed consent, an essential guarantee that derives from the text of the Convention.[2243] With respect to informed consent, the Inter-American Court has stated that:

> "the concept of informed consent consists in a prior decision to accept or to submit to a medical act in the broadest sense, which has been freely obtained – in other words, without threats or coercion, improper induction or incentives – and given after obtaining adequate, complete, reliable, comprehensible and accessible information, provided that this information has really been understood, which would allow the individual to give their full consent. Informed consent is the positive decision to submit to a medical act resulting from a decision process, or prior, free and informed choice, which constitutes a two-way mechanism of interaction in the physician-patient relationship."[2244] (Bold added)

In relation to this, in the case of I.V v. Bolivia, the Court criticized the fact that the victim never had the possibility of knowing and weighing up alternative contraceptive methods.[2245] In this case, the I/A Court H.R. emphasized the importance of people having the necessary data to make an informed decision. In this framework, the Court highlighted the importance of addressing the effects or impacts of the method to ensure free choice.[2246]

[2238] Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Situation Report Honduras - 2023. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_ENG.PDF.

[2239] Access to Information on Reproductive Health from a Human Rights Perspective, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 61, November 22, 2022. Report 332/20.

[2240] IACHR. Report No. 72/14.

[2241] IACHR. Access to Information on Reproductive Health from a Human Rights Perspective.

[2242] Family planning. Contraception methods. https://www.who.int/es/news-room/fact-sheets/detail/family-planning-contraception.

[2243] I/A Court H.R. Case I.V. v. Bolivia. Preliminary Objections, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 30, 2016 Series C No. 329.

[2244] I/A Court H.R. Case I.V. v. Bolivia. Preliminary Objections, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 30, 2016. Series C No. 329.

[2245] Ibid.

[2246] I/A Court H.R. Case I.V. v. Bolivia. Preliminary Objections, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 30, 2016. Series C No. 329.

Thus, the autonomy of individuals in the choice of contraceptive methods can only be guaranteed when they have the capacity to consent based on the necessary information to decide whether or not to use them.

3. Inadequate approach to conscientious objection

Paragraphs 14, 90, and 132 refer to the abusive or improper exercise of conscientious objection in relation to abortion. Likewise, paragraph 47 refers to conscientious objection as a barrier.

In this regard, I reiterate that the exercise of the right to freedom of conscience[2247] through the right to conscientious objection cannot be considered as an obstacle, impediment, or challenge to other rights, such as the right to health, when access to abortion services has been granted at the national level. This view is particularly dangerous and worrisome coming from an international human rights body such as the IACHR, as it does not align with the OAS Assembly's intention to seek to ensure that member states fulfill their primary responsibility to respect, guarantee, and protect all human rights, "including the right to freedom of conscience and religion or belief for all."[2248]

The recognition of the full exercise of conscientious objection on the basis of Article 12 of the ACHR would be consistent with the high value that the jurisprudence of the Inter-American Court has accorded to pluralism and the protection of cultural identity.[2249] Indeed, I point out that far from constituting an obstacle, the exercise of conscientious objection constitutes a vehicle for the protection of various rights, such as: the right to freedom of conscience and religion, the right to honor and dignity, and the right not to be subjected to forced labor. Moreover, the IACHR itself has recognized that conscientious objection acts as a guarantee of these rights.[2250] This position has indeed been upheld by the Human Rights Committee, which has construed conscientious objection as the realization or materialization of the right to freedom of conscience.[2251]

That said, conscientious objection, like any right, may clash with other fundamental guarantees. In this sense, although it is true that the exercise of freedom of conscience may be subject to limitations, it is also true that since it is a human right, its exercise cannot be stigmatized in a generalized manner, much less when it is being exercised in the context of abortion, where decisions on the limitation must be made on a case-by-case basis and in compliance with the requirements extensively developed by the ISHR, achieving an appropriate balance between freedom of conscience and other rights such as the right to life.[2252]

Here, I would like to clarify that by this I do not mean that abortion should be weighed up against conscientious objection or vice versa, since there is no right to abortion in the ISHR. In such a case, "weighing up" should be based on rights such as, where applicable, the right to health.

In any case, an interpretation that seeks to override conscientious objection in a generic manner in specific contexts and without taking into account the particularities of the cases: (i) would mean leaving freedom of conscience and religion without content; (ii) would imply consolidating a hierarchical vision of rights - far removed from the foundations of international human rights law; (iii) would completely depart from the logic of weighing up rights and (iv) would represent, consequently, a very serious attack on one of the most important guarantees of the inner core (fuero interno) of every person.

4. On gender identity and other issues related to the LGBTIQ+ community

In paragraphs 64, 139, 207, 242, 274, 421, reference is made to: (i) the right to gender identity; (ii) the matching of identification documents to gender identity; (iii) the right to marriage for same-sex couples; (iv) the right to

[2247] ACHR Article 12.
[2248] IACHR. General Assembly, Resolution 2991 of the October 7, 2022
[2249] Ibid.
[2250] IACHR. Sahli Vera vs. Chile Alfredo Díaz Bustos v. Bolivia and Xavier Alejandro León Vega.
[2251] Human Rights Committee. General Comment No. 22.
[2252] I/A Court H.R. Jurisprudence Compendium No. 26: Restriction and Suspension of Human Rights.

adoption; and (v) the prohibition of state funding for hormonal treatments for trans children and treatments aimed at modifying gender identity.

In view of this, I will now refer to: (i) the non-existence of a right to gender identity and the obligation to guarantee the rectification of the sex marker in identity documents for LGTBIQ+ persons; (ii) some considerations on the recognition of the gender identity of children and adolescents; (ii) the need to prevent discrimination based on sex in contexts of deprivation of liberty; and (iii) the need for more information and academic and scientific rigor regarding gender affirmation therapies and hormone treatments.

4.1 The non-existence of the right to gender identity and of the obligation to guarantee the rectification of the sex marker on identity documents for LGTBIQ+ persons Paragraphs 310, 397, 479, and 514 refer to decisions on changes in identification documents based on self-perceived gender identity. In this regard, I reiterate[2253] that, without disregarding domestic regulatory modifications, this in no way can be interpreted to mean that there is an obligation in the ISHR for States to guarantee that identification documents match the self-perceived gender identity. The American Convention does not expressly contemplate a right to gender identity, nor is there a binding instrument in the inter-American system that establishes an obligation to adapt identification documents to gender identity.

As I have previously pointed out, recognizing new rights that are not in the Convention through an interpretation that does not follow the procedures established in the Convention itself would undermine Articles 31, 76, and 77, ignoring the original will of the States that ratified the Convention.

Therefore, any pronouncement in which any of the organs of the IHRS applies a right that is not established in the binding instruments of international law that govern its activity will be an act violating the literal meaning of the American Convention and will exceed the scope of the competencies of the IACHR or the I/A Court H.R., as the case may be. Such an irregular constituent act (acto constitutivo) would also undermine the principles of good faith and pacta sunt servanda.[2254]

In light of the above, given that there is no right under the Convention to gender identity that is binding on States, it is possible to affirm that there are no correlative obligations to recognize this right either. On the other hand, although I am not unaware that OC-24/17 asserted the existence of the so-called "right to gender identity" and a supposed obligation to adapt identification documents to self-perceived gender identity in the terms indicated in this Chapter, I emphasize that the Advisory Opinions of the I/A Court H.R. are not entitled to contemplate rights or obligations other than those expressly contemplated by the American Convention.[2255]

In this regard, first, Article 68 of the Convention expressly affirms that states are obliged to comply with the decisions rendered by the Court, "in any case in which they are parties." This provision is important in that (i) it is the only one that refers to the legal value of the Tribunal's pronouncements and (ii) it expressly limits the binding nature of those pronouncements to the States party to a case, thus limiting the addressee of the obligations – the State party to a case – and the context in which the pronouncement is issued – that is, litigation

[2253] Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4A_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4B_VEN_EN.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_5_SLV_EN.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024 - Chapter IV.A Situation of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4A_EN.PDF#page201; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV. B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_4B_VEN_EN.PDF.

[2254] Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties. Article 26.

[2255] I/A Court H.R. Gender identity and equality and non-discrimination of same-sex couples. State obligations in relation to name change, gender identity, and rights derived from a same-sex relationship (interpretation and scope of Articles 1(1), 3, 7, 11(2), 13, 17, 18, and 24, in relation to Article 1 of the American Convention on Human Rights). Advisory Opinion OC-24/17, November 24, 2017. Series A, No. 24.

–. This position has also been maintained by some exponents of legal doctrine (sectores de la doctrina), also based on the principle of State consent as the foundation of conventional law.[2256]

Secondly, specifically regarding OC-24/17, consideration should be given to Article 64 of the ACHR, which limits the competence of the Court to issue advisory opinions regarding the Convention or treaties of the inter-American system. Thus, given that OC-24/17 establishes alleged rights not contemplated in the ACHR, nor in any other treaty of the ISHR, their binding nature is even more questionable.

Thirdly, to derive obligations or so-called rights not contemplated in the Convention, based exclusively on an advisory opinion, would contravene the principle of pacta sunt servanda that governs international treaty law, by virtue of which States are only bound to comply with that to which they have expressed their consent.[2257]

Fourth, although the I/A Court H.R. has affirmed that advisory opinions are parameters of conventionality control,[2258] I emphasize that an open and transparent inter-American dialogue is still needed to further discuss this position, which is not expressly derived from the American Convention, or any other international instrument that is binding upon states. I draw attention to the fact that there is still no consensus regarding this matter, either in states of the region or in academic circles; for that reason, important constitutional courts still refrain from invoking the notion of conventionality control and from incorporating advisory opinions as a parameter.[2259]

Finally, I note that some authors have indicated that broadening the effects of advisory opinions could trigger distortions in the way the inter-American system operates and, thus, weaken it, since (i) it entails equating decisions issued as part of the Court's advisory functions with the text of the convention itself,[2260] and (ii) it blurs the differences between the jurisdictional and advisory functions of the Court. Some have even pointed out that these interpretations by the Court generate legal uncertainty, since there is no certainty as to the effects with which advisory opinions are issued.[2261]

On the contrary, as I have stated in previous explanations of my votes, gender identity, based on self-determination or self-perception, poses serious risks to the rights of individuals, in general, and, in particular, to population groups with special inter-American protection, such as women. Insisting that States change even the sex markers on identity documents increases these risks, as it completely dilutes gender differentiation and hampers implementation of affirmative measures for women.

The Commission must deliberate deeply on this matter, from a human rights perspective and with a differential approach, in order not to harm or frustrate affirmative measures in favor of women or other population groups with special inter-American protection.

If it is enough for a person to state that he/she perceives himself/herself as a woman for the State to automatically recognize her as such, without any additional regulation or reasonable requirement, affirmative measures in favor of women will most likely lose their effectiveness, and the States will end up erasing the very identity of women and of any other population group.

On this, the then Judge Elizabeth Odio Benito was clear, explaining that:

[2256] Systematization of the criticisms in: González Domínguez, P. (2017). The doctrine of conventionality control in light of the subsidiarity principle. Constitutional Studies, 15(1), 55-98.

[2257] Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties.

[2258] I/A Court H.R. Rights and Guarantees of Children in the Context of Migration and/or in Need of International Protection. Advisory Opinion OC-21/14 of August 19, 2014. Series A No. par. 41. 31.

[2259] Ramírez, F. G. (2023). A critical look at conventionality control. Journal of Law and Social Sciences, (28), 101-142; Palacios, D. L. (2017). Inter-American conventionality control at the national level: a notion still under construction. Revista Direito e Práxis, 8, 1389-1418.

[2260] Colombo, I. (2022). A critical analysis of the doctrine of conventionality control. Omnia. Law and Society, 5 (1), pp. 83-116.

[2261] Colombo, I. (2022). A critical analysis of the doctrine of conventionality control. Omnia. Law and Society, 5 (1), pp. 83-116.

> "(...) the central subject of feminism (and, in this case, of violence against women because they are women) is women and the specific oppression they suffer, its origin and impact. If we confuse the feminist struggle and replace the subject of feminism, if the subject of feminism is no longer the biological woman and becomes a strange and confused variable of subjective identities, we should reflect on and raise the issue of the highly likely negative impact that it would have on decades of feminist theory and struggle. Moreover, not only would feminism disappear, but also the theory of human rights that is also based not on sentiments or self-perception but on objective and scientific categories. Thus, we should ask ourselves: if sex, as a substantive and scientific category disappears, absorbed by "gender identity," an individual subjective perception, what would gender violence be based on? And what would the feminine sex be reduced to? How would rape and other crimes of sexual violence against women be documented? How would the violence suffered by trans people be documented if the change of sex is something confidential that cannot be documented? And salary differences? And discrimination in access to formal and informal education at all levels? And numerous questions remain. But these few are sufficient to reveal the chaos and regression that we are facing."[2262]

I take advantage of the considerations of then Judge Elizabeth Odio Benito to insist on the defense of the value that exists in being biologically female or male, which is not equivalent to reducing the identity of a person only to his or her biological sex.

The elimination of the sex marker in public records entails significant risks for public administration and the effective guarantee of rights, particularly in the areas of health, statistics, and public policy formulation. Sex is an essential variable for the epidemiology, prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of specific diseases – including those that may affect people who self-identify as transgender according to their biological needs – as well as for the correct interpretation of clinical examinations, pharmacological dosage, and planning of health services.[2263]

Likewise, the elimination of sex weakens the production of reliable demographic data needed to design equality policies, affirmative actions, social programs, licenses, social security, and institutional organization, including sensitive areas such as the penitentiary system.[2264] Consequently, erasing this marker makes the differentiated needs of the population invisible, hinders the exercise of the administrative function, and can directly affect effective access to fundamental rights and essential state services.

Therefore, if international human rights law erases biological sex and measures with a differential approach based precisely on the criterion of biological sex, it would deprive the protection of population groups such as women of any rational basis. If the majority position is maintained in the promotion of absolute legal recognition of self-perceived or self-determined gender identity, it will hinder – if not nullify – the effectiveness of countless special protection measures.

4.2 The need to prevent sex-based discrimination in prison

Paragraph 28 stated "In terms of challenges, the prohibition of gender affirmation treatments and surgeries for persons under 18 years of age was observed; the approval of Decree 61/2025, which prevents the prison reassignment of trans persons based on their gender identity, establishing accommodation according to the sex consigned at the time of the commission of the crime" (Bold added).

[2262] I/A Court H.R. Case of Vicky Hernández et al. v. Honduras. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of March 26, 2021. Series C No. 422. Partially dissenting opinion of Judge Odio Benito, Par. 15.

[2263] VV. AA. Rare diseases. JANO, Medicina y Humanidades 2008, nº 1679; González-Lamuño, D., & García Fuentes, M.. (2008). Genetically based diseases. Anales del Sistema Sanitario de Navarra, 31(Suppl. 2, 6, 105-126).

[2264] Public Prosecutors' Office, Attorney General's Office of Panama, Resolution No 11.11 of February 11, 2016. "Which regulates breastfeeding leave"; Agenda de Salud de la Mujer Gestante V.2021. Chile Crece Contigo; United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention; United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (Nelson Mandela Rules); United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders and their Commentaries (Bangkok Rules); Third Geneva Convention.

In this regard, I emphasize that, although protection measures should be adopted for people who self-identify as transgender in prisons, the truth is that, in relation to women-only spaces, comparative contexts have shown that it is essential to maintain separate spaces based on sex. In particular, in prison contexts where gender separation has been blurred to include male inmates in female facilities, there have been significant cases of sexual, physical, and psychological violence against women.[2265]

By this I do not mean that all people who identify themselves as trans gender women are violent, but rather that there are people with violent intent who take advantage of policies that have blurred separation on the basis of sex to carry out violent acts against women. For this reason, separation in prison facilities based on sex has been a constant and reiterated obligation of international law, as a positive measure to protect women.

I reiterate[2266] that Article 5.5 of the American Convention establishes the principle of separation of places of detention for men and women and the Court has considered, based on the Convention and the pronouncements of other human rights bodies, "that all women deprived of liberty must be placed in a physically separate space from men and, moreover, in blocks or sections that are less restrictive and have a lower level of security, which responds to the low level of risk that the women represent, and with sufficient space to meet their specific needs".[2267]

This rule of separation is also found in the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (Nelson Mandela Rules)[2268], the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (Bangkok Rules)[2269], and even for armed conflicts in the Third[2270] and Fourth[2271] Geneva Conventions.

Recently, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes, and consequences noted in her report "Sex-based violence against women and girls: new frontiers and emerging issues" that:

> "Healthcare settings also present acute risks for females. The provision of single-sex hospital wards plays an essential role in safeguarding females from sexual assault and harassment while receiving medical care, including females with physical or intellectual disabilities. Women and girls in refugee camps and detention centres are also at specific risk of violence, including sexual harassment and rape".[2272] (Bold added)

Thus, states and international bodies have the duty to promote this separation, which implies that male inmates should not be present in women's prisons. Especially when, as in the Report that is the subject of this opinion,

---

[2265] D. Shaw, 'Transgender Inmate in Prison for Rape of Young Girls is Accused of Sexual Assaults on Female Inmates' (1 June 2018) Women are Human, https://www.womenarehuman.com/transgender-man-who-rapedyoung-girls-housed-in-womens-prison-jessica-winfield-nee-martin-ponting/; K. Finlay 'Transgender Inmate Charged with Sexual Assault at a Women's Prison' (24 August 2020) Women Are Human, https://www.womenarehuman.com/transgender-inmate-charged-with-sexual-assault-at-a-womensprison/; UK High Court of Justice (2021) CO/4198/2019, https://fairplayforwomen.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/07/FDJ-v-SSJ-judgment-approved-as-handed-down-on-02.07.21-002.pdf; Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes, and consequences, Reem Alsalem. AL USA 30/2023. December 21,2023; Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. Violence against women and girls in sport. A/79/325, August 27, 2024; Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. Sex-based violence against women and girls: new frontiers and emerging issues. A/HRC/59/47. June 16, 2025.

[2266] Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_ENG.PDF.

[2267] I/A Court H.R. Advisory Opinion OC-29 of 2022; Bangkok Rules, supra, Rules 12 and 41.d., and Report of the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, Rashida Manjoo, Pathways to, conditions and consequences of incarceration for women, A/68/340, supra, par. 85.

[2268] Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners. Rule 2 and 11.

[2269] United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (Bangkok Rules). Rule 1.

[2270] III Geneva Convention. Article 25.

[2271] IV Geneva Convention. Article 76.

[2272] Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes, and consequences, Reem Alsalem. Sex-based violence against women and girls: new frontiers and emerging issues. A/HRC/59/47. June 16, 2025.

no safeguards are included to prevent the forms of violence against women that can arise from these prison models that stress gender self-identification.
I call for appropriate measures to be taken to prevent all forms of violence, including violence against people who themselves as transgender women, but these measures cannot understate women's rights, nor expose them to situations of risk that violate their right to live free from all forms of violence, especially in contexts of profound vulnerability such forms of violence, especially in contexts of profound vulnerability such as those of deprivation of liberty.

4.3 The need for more information and academic and scientific rigor regarding gender affirming therapies and hormonal treatments

Paragraphs 27, 28, 101, and 143 refer to access to hormone therapies for persons under 18 years of age or so-called gender affirmation treatments. In this regard, I reiterate that there is a need for the Commission to deepen these discussions with scientific arguments in order to address them comprehensively. In particular, there are studies that indicate the harm that may result from having undergone hormone treatments in adolescence.[2273]

In addition, in the case of children and young people, it is essential that their capacity to consent to hormone treatments be taken into account and assessed. For that reason, it is necessary to have an in-depth discussion on the negative effects linked to these treatments and to align this information with the statements made by the Commission.

Indeed, academics argue that there are long-term studies that show that - in individuals who have undergone gender affirming or hormonal treatments - an increase in morbidity and mortality and a risk of suicide after transition.[2274]

For its part, the Cass report[2275] indicates that, in people of female biological sex, the possible adverse effects of these treatments include changes in sexual maturation, consequences for neurocognitive development, impacts on bone density, and an increase in body weight. The same report highlights the increase in the number of adolescents seeking transition treatments and the adverse health effects of these treatments, including the lack of certainty about the positive effects of this approach on mental health. In fact, England[2276] and at least 27 states in the United States[2277] have restricted or banned gender affirming treatments in children and adolescents due to lack of conclusive evidence regarding their effects.

These elements cannot be ignored by the Commission; especially when this body has the mandate to promote and defend human rights in the region, including the right to health.

Regarding the same matter, paragraph 144 states: "In addition, the Chilean Medical Association (COLMED) denounced parliamentary groups for persecution and threats to professionals who provide health and gender affirmation services to trans people", due to complaints filed by parliamentarians for conduct such as bodily injury against doctors who practice these procedures. In these matters, freedom of expression and the use of legal means must be taken into account with respect to conduct that could constitute a crime. This requires analysis on a case-by-case basis, also taking into account the effects of this type of treatment.

5. Inappropriate use of the term "sex workers"

[2273] 'Trust the Experts' Is Not Enough: U.S. Medical Groups Get the Science Wrong on Pediatric 'Gender Affirming' Care. https://media4.manhattan-institute.org/sites/default/files/how-to-respond-to-medical authorities_claiming_gender_affirming_care_safe.pdf.

[2274] Levine, S.B., Abbruzzese, E. Current Concerns About Gender-Affirming Therapy in Adolescents. Curr Sex Health Rep 15, 113-123 (2023). https://doi-org.ez.unisabana.edu.co/10.1007/s11930-023-00358-x.

[2275] Independent report commissioned by the UK Department of Health to determine the effects of gender affirmative health care on children: https://cass.independent-review.uk/home/publications/final-report/.

[2276] CNN. England's health service to stop prescribing puberty blockers to transgender kids.2024.

[2277] CNN. 27 states have passed laws restricting gender-affirming care for trans youth. 2025.

Paragraph 307 refers to the term "sex workers". In this regard, I disagree with the use of this expression to refer to women who are subjected to prostitution. As mentioned by the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, in her May 2024 report on prostitution, this term "is neither recognized nor defined in international law,"[2278] but also "erroneously describes prostitution as an activity as dignified as any other work. It does not take into account the serious human rights violations that characterize the prostitution system and involves a psychological manipulation of the victims and their experiences."[2279]

The expression "sex workers" introduces an interpretative framework that normalizes and legitimizes prostitution as a form of work, ignoring the fact that it is a system of violence that reduces women and girls to commodities.[2280] This approach shifts attention away from the structural conditions of inequality, coercion, and violence that typically characterize this practice, turning it into a form of violence in itself, of which women and girls, in particular, are victims.[2281] Thus, the use of this terminology is not neutral from a legal or human rights perspective, since it draws attention away from the power relations, the lack of real alternatives, and the contexts of socioeconomic vulnerability that lead to prostitution.[2282]

Prostitution results in serious and systematic violations of the human rights of women and girls, who are often dehumanized, treated as commodities, and perceived as persons without rights.[2283] It constitutes a direct violation of the right to dignity[2284] and, in many cases, involves torture and cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment. Forms of physical, sexual, and psychological violence include individual and group rape, beatings, mutilations, burns, forced, and degrading sexual practices, kidnappings, disappearances, homicides, and death threats, as well as extreme abuse in contexts of prostitution and pornography.[2285] This violence leads to permanent physical sequels, deep trauma, and a high risk of death, in addition to particularly affecting pregnant women and those subjected to conditions of slavery or sexual servitude, including situations of control by armed groups or procurement networks.[2286]

Likewise, prostitution involves economic, social, and structural violence, expressed in extreme labor exploitation, non-payment or minimum payment, extortion, debt bondage, financial control by pimps and buyers, and the systematic denial of basic rights such as health, education, food, and housing. Victims often lose their autonomy, their freedom of movement, their right to privacy and family life, and are subjected to constant surveillance, withholding of documents, and arbitrary detention.[2287] The psychological and health consequences are severe and long-lasting, including post-traumatic stress disorders, depression, dissociation, substance abuse, suicidal tendencies, sexually transmitted diseases, forced abortions, sterilizations, and a significant reduction in life expectancy, even after leaving prostitution.[2288]

For all of the above reasons, instead of "sex workers" I suggest that, in line with the aforementioned report, the term prostituted persons, women, or girls be used as a recognition of the magnitude of the harm experienced by women and girls subjected to prostitution. I recall that in international law, there is no binding treaty in the inter-American system that establishes that prostitution should be recognized as a form of work.

[2278] Report A/HRC/56/48, Prostitution and violence against women and girls - Report of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. May 7, 2024.
[2279] Ibid.
[2280] Ibid.
[2281] Ibid.
[2282] Ibid.
[2283] Ibid.
[2284] Report A/HRC/56/48, Prostitution and violence against women and girls - Report of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. May 7, 2024; European Parliament, Directorate-General for Internal Policies, "Sexual exploitation and prostitution and its impact on gender equality".
[2285] Report A/HRC/56/48, Prostitution and violence against women and girls - Report of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes, and consequences, Reem Alsalem. May 7, 2024; Communications sent to Prajwala Rapporteur and Elly Arrow.
[2286] Report A/HRC/56/48, Prostitution and violence against women and girls - Report of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes, and consequences, Reem Alsalem. May 7, 2024; United Nations Development Programme, "Sex Work and the Law in Asia and the Pacific," 2012; Communication submitted to the Just Planet Rapporteurship.
[2287] Report A/HRC/56/48, Prostitution and violence against women and girls - Report of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes, and consequences, Reem Alsalem. May 7, 2024.
[2288] Ibid.

Thus, although it is essential that progress be made in the Americas towards guaranteeing the rights of prostituted persons, this does not prevent us from recognizing that the prostitution system is in itself a violation of human rights, as it commercializes the body of prostituted persons. Therefore, I strongly urge that the term "sex work" not be used, but rather that there be open and transparent deliberation, respectful of human rights, on the best ways to address the system of prostitution in the region that causes so much harm to women and girls.

6. In relation to sexual and reproductive education for children and adolescents and recognition of their identity

Paragraphs 28, 215, 396, 515, and 558 refer to comprehensive sex education for children and adolescents. At the same time, paragraph 258 indicated "Progress was also made in the validation of the protocol for supporting recognition of gender identity for children and adolescents, in compliance with Judgment No. 95-18-EP/24".

In this regard, I will refer to: (i) the need to attend to the best interests of children and adolescents and avoid their hypersexualization, and (ii) exercise of the right of parents to choose the education of their children.

6.1 The need to address the best interests of children and adolescents and avoid their hypersexualization

In view of the restrictions imposed in relation to sexual and reproductive education, as well as education on sexual and gender diversity for children and adolescents, I reiterate[2289] that it is vital to recognize that it is also essential to take into account the role of the family, society, and the State in the protection of children's rights, and therefore there should be ample discussion recognizing the needs of children based on their stage of development. Sex education without recognition and mitigation of these risks can cause serious violations of children's rights.

I underscore that the best interests of children and adolescents is a guiding principle that should govern all state actions. Indeed, this principle is enshrined in binding instruments of the Universal Human Rights System (UHRS),[2290] the inter-American human rights system (ISHR),[2291] and the European Human Rights System (EHRS).[2292]

In the UHRS, the best interests of the child are enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW). Indeed, the CRC provides in Article 3.1 that "(i)n all actions concerning children, whether undertaken by public or private social welfare institutions, courts of law, administrative authorities or legislative bodies, the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration." and the CEDAW, in Article 5.b, enshrines the obligation of States parties to "(e)nsure that family education includes a proper understanding of maternity as a social function and the recognition of the common responsibility of men and women in the upbringing and development of their children, it being understood that the interest of the children is the primordial consideration in all cases."

In the inter-American system, the American Convention on Human Rights establishes that "(e)very minor child has the right to the measures of protection required by his condition as a minor on the part of his family, society, and the state."

[2289] Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2024/chapters/IA2024_5_SLV_EN.PDF.

[2290] Convention on the Rights of the Child. Article 3.1; Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Article 5.b).

[2291] American Convention on Human Rights. Article 19.

[2292] ECtHR. R.L and others v. Denmark.

This principle has been extensively developed by the Committee on the Rights of the Child in General Comment 14. In that Comment, the Committee held that the best interests of children is an umbrella term that encompasses three dimensions, namely: (i) a fundamental right of the child, (ii) a basic and interpretative principle, and (iii) a procedural rule.[2293]

Regarding the content of this principle, the Committee held that it implies that any action involving a child or adolescent must consider his or her best interests as a primary consideration.[2294] Hence, according to the Committee, the application of this principle means that not only should the interests of the child be considered, but also that his or her interests should take precedence whenever they conflict with other principles or interests.

Accordingly, all public policies implemented by States within the framework of their functions must take into account the interests of children and adolescents as an essential consideration. As a public policy, Comprehensive Sexuality Education must also be governed by the best interests of the child.

In this regard, I would like to point out a growing concern regarding sex education policies, that is, the hypersexualization of children and adolescents. Hypersexualization represents a risk that disproportionately affects the childhood population. This has been recognized by the Committee on the Rights of the Child in General Comment 20, which states that "(t)he digital environment can also expose adolescents to risks, such as(...) over-sexualization."[2295] This has been reiterated by the Committee in several reports, in which it has stated that hyper sexualization is a problem that must be addressed by States, since it jeopardizes the rights of children and adolescents.[2296]

Sex education, therefore, should be a means to prevent the hypersexualization of children and adolescents[2297] and not a mechanism to promote it. In the same vein, the ECtHR has established that for sex education to be in keeping with the Convention, it must aim to provide children with correct, accurate, objective, and scientific knowledge on the subject, presented in an age-appropriate way.[2298]

By virtue of the above, the ECtHR has pointed out that a sex education policy aimed at children and adolescents should: (i) be based on the principle of objectivity;[2299] (ii) approach the issues in a neutral manner;[2300] (iii) offer an accurate and scientific approach to the subject matter[2301] and (iv) ensure the presentation of the issues in a manner appropriate to the age and cognitive development of the child or adolescent.[2302] In this connection, the Committee on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights (ESCR) has indicated that sex education," entails a right education on sexuality and reproduction that is comprehensive, non-discriminatory, evidence-based, scientifically accurate and age appropriate"[2303] (Bold added).

Thus, the Inter-American Court has defined a purpose to be pursued that cannot be overlooked. Specifically, it pointed out that: "This education must ensure that children have an adequate understanding of the implications

[2293] Committee on the Rights of the Child. General Comment No. 14 (2013) on the right of the child to have his or her best interests taken as a primary consideration (art. 3, par. 1). CRC/C/GC/14.
[2294] Committee on the Rights of the Child. General Comment No. 14 (2013) on the right of the child to have his or her best interests taken as a primary consideration (art. 3, par. 1). CRC/C/GC/14.
[2295] General Comment No. 20 (2016) on the implementation of the rights of the child during adolescence.
[2296] Consideration of the reports submitted by States parties under article 44 of the Convention. Fifth periodic reports of States parties due in 2012; Committee on the Rights of the Child. Combined fifth and sixth periodic reports submitted by the Plurinational State of Bolivia under article 44 of the Convention, due in 2015.
[2297] Universidad de la Sabana. The hyper sexualization of childhood. https://www.unisabana.edu.co/portaldenoticias/al-dia/la-hipersexualizacion-de-la-infancia/.
[2298] ECtHR. Case of Macatė v. Lithuania.
[2299] ECtHR. Bayev and Others v. Russia. 2018, Par. 72; Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen, and Pedersen v. Denmark. 1976. Paragraph 53.
[2300] ECtHR. Macatė v. Lithuania. 2023. Par. 68.
[2301] ECtHR. Macatė v. Lithuania. 2023. Par. 207; Bayev and Others v. Russia. 2018. Par. 72
[2302] ECtHR. Macatė v. Lithuania. 2023. Par. 68.
[2303] Committee on ESCR, General Comment No. 22 on the right to sexual and reproductive health (Article 12 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights), paras. 9 and 49.

of sexual and emotional relationships, particularly in terms of their consent to such relationships, so that they can freely exercise their sexual and reproductive rights".[2304]

However, the report completely omitted any analysis or consideration of the relationship and impact that this type of education may have on the best interests of children and adolescents and the need for safeguards to prevent the hypersexualization of children and adolescents.

In short, sexual education must be implemented with strict respect for the best interests of the child, guaranteeing an objective, scientific approach that is appropriate to the child's age and level of development. This implies that states, in the exercise of their leeway (margen de configuración), adopt measures aimed at protecting children and adolescents from hypersexualization and from any practice that ignores their level of maturity or their right to an all-round education. Likewise, educational policies should recognize the primordial role of the family and promote values such as responsibility, self-control, and the protection of human life from conception.

6.2 Application of the right of parents to choose their children's education in these matters

I reiterate[2305] that in all discussions related to sexual and reproductive education of children and adolescents, the right of parents to choose the education of their children, recognized in Article 12.4 of the ACHR, must be safeguarded. The aforementioned article states that "(p)arents or guardians, as the case may be, have the right to provide for the religious and moral education of their children or wards that is in accord with their own convictions." (Bold added)

The same guarantee has been provided for in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,[2306] the International Covenant on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights,[2307] the Convention on the Rights of the Child,[2308] and the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights.[2309] According to the ECtHR, the right of parents to choose their children's education, including sex education, is an aspect of the right to respect for private and family life protected by the ECHR.[2310]

Thus, there is a consensus in international human rights law regarding the existence and recognition of this parental right. The Inter-American Commission has understood that the right of parents to choose the education of their children (i) must be interpreted in conjunction with the rights of children and adolescents, especially the right to education[2311] and (ii) must respect the provisions of the inter-American instruments that establish that education must be geared to training children to respect human rights, public freedoms, and tolerance.[2312]

Of course I agree with those criteria. However, it must not be forgotten that: (i) all types of education must be respectful of the best interests of children as a guiding principle, and (ii) the right of parents to choose the education of their children is derived from the right to education of children itself; therefore, there is a false dilemma in considering that these two rights are incompatible.

[2304] I/A Court H.R. Case of Guzmán Albarracín et al. v. Ecuador. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of June 24, 2020. Series C No. 405, paragraph 139.

[2305] Explanation of vote on the report "Social Cohesion: The Challenge to Consolidate Democracy in Bolivia". https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/CohesionSocial_Bolivia_SPA.pdf; Explanation of vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras - 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_ENG.PDF; Explanation of vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/docs/annual/2023/chapters/IA2023_Cap_4A_ENG.PDF.

[2306] Article 18.4.

[2307] Article 13.3.

[2308] Article 14.2.

[2309] Article 2.

[2310] ECtHR, Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen, and Pedersen, par. 53; Dojan et al, cited above, paras. 78–83.

[2311] IACHR. Report on Inter-American Standards Concerning Freedom of Religion or Belief.

[2312] IACHR. Report on Inter-American Standards Concerning Freedom of Religion or Belief.

Thus, the ECtHR, in its interpretation of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1, has stated that[2313] the right of parents to respect for their philosophical and religious convictions is based on the fundamental right to education. According to the European Court of Human Rights, although it is the parents who are entitled to this right, children are also entitled to it, because they have the right to education and teaching.[2314]

Undoubtedly, this right affects sex education for like any other type of education, it must be framed within the scope of protection of conventional law, recognized by international human rights law, which grants parents the right to choose the education of their children, in accordance with Article 12.4 of the Convention.

Issues related to sexuality, reproduction, and sexual and gender diversity are closely related and have a major impact on people's value systems. Therefore, sex education is an integral part of the moral education of children and adolescents. The broad social discussions on the subject, and the diverse visions that may arise from different value systems in a region as pluralistic as ours, cannot be ignored. Therefore, it cannot be interpreted that it is the State, or the ISHR- that is in charge of choosing the moral education of children, forgetting that it is the parents who possess this right.

7. Regarding so-called "conversion therapies"

Paragraph 449 refers to the term "conversion therapies" and the criminal liability that has been attributed to these practices. In this regard, I categorically reject any form of violence against LGTBIQ+ people. However, I emphasize that, with regard to the so-called "conversion therapies," it is essential that the IACHR define what that term means.

In addition, the impact of the right to religious freedom, enshrined in Article 12 of the ACHR, must be taken into account, and how this may include the voluntary choice of LGTBIQ+ persons to live and exercise their spirituality according to their convictions. According to the IACHR, this right includes "the freedom to worship or hold meetings in connection with religion or beliefs in places designed for such purposes".

An extremely broad interpretation of the concept of conversion therapies could interfere in the legitimate private sphere of individuals, such as decisions about their sexual orientation, their sexual expressions, and behaviors, or the support and guidance they seek in these areas.

Furthermore, I emphasize that, as explained by the Commission on previous occasions[2315] and by the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression[2316], freedom of expression is not limited to the protection of the issuer, but also guarantees the rights of those who receive or seek information, thus reaffirming its essentially democratic nature. However, this right to receive information is subject to special obligations when it involves procedures relating to personal integrity and health. Thus, in its Report on the Merits No. 72/14, the IACHR expressly stated:

> "The IACHR has recognized that the right of access to information is essential to the protection of the rights to personal integrity, autonomy and the right to health of individuals. In particular, it has recognized that the right of access to information is crucial in order for individuals to be able to make free and well-founded decisions regarding private aspects of their health, bodies, and autonomy, including decisions regarding medical procedures or treatments."[2317] (Bold added)

[2313] The general principles enunciated by the ECtHR are mainly derived from the judgments handed down in the following cases: Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen, and Pedersen v. Denmark (ECtHR 1976/5); Campbell and Cosans v. United Kingdom (ECtHR 1982/1); Valsamis v. Greece (ECtHR 1996, 70), and Folgero et al. v. Norway (ECtHR 2007/53).

[2314] Case of Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen, and Pedersen v. Denmark (STEDH 1976/5 of December 7, section 52).

[2315] Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.116 Doc. 5 rev. 1, 2000, Principle 1, available at: https://www.oas.org/en/iachr/expression/showarticle.asp?artID=25&lID=1.

[2316] Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Inter-American Legal Framework on the Right to Freedom of Expression: SRFE/INF. Last updated 2025, Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, (OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF.29/25).

[2317] IACHR. Report No. 72/14.

In this regard, it is essential that, in matters of this nature, people are guaranteed access to clear, truthful, and complete information on the effects, scope, and possible risks of any therapeutic approach or support. This is the only way to ensure effective respect for personal autonomy, freedom of choice, and freedom of conscience, religious freedom, and the right to make free and informed decisions, without disproportionate impositions or prohibitions by the State.

This dissenting vote is also my last as Commissioner of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights. I cast it in the conviction that separate opinions - even if they are uncomfortable for those who would like to see unanimity in international bodies - fulfill an irreplaceable institutional function: they make the reasons for disagreement transparent, preserve the integrity of legal debate, and contribute to the evolution of inter-American standards. I trust that the views I have presented throughout my tenure, and in particular the recurring concerns I have expressed in them, can serve as input for critical and rigorous reflection on issues that continue to arise in the work of this system. With that final consideration, and with respect for the majority decision, I hereby place my dissent on record.

CONCURRING VOTE OF COMMISSIONER ANDREA POCHAK AND COMMISSIONER JOSÉ LUIS CABALLERO OCHOA

We issue this concurring vote to underscore the grave situation affecting the rule of law and human rights in Peru. For several years, the IACHR has warned of the progressive weakening of the democratic system and its impact on the enjoyment of human rights. More recently, this critical panorama has been consolidated through a State policy aimed at ensuring impunity for serious human rights violations.

In particular, the Inter-American Commission must not normalize the Peruvian State's open disregard of the decisions of the inter-American human rights system. In that connection, the enactment of Laws 32107 — authorizing the application of statutes of limitations to crimes against humanity — and 32419 — granting amnesty to members of the armed forces and security services involved in such crimes — together with the prior pardon granted to former President Alberto Fujimori, contravened established inter-American standards and reiterated decisions of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights. This cycle of impunity is compounded by the fact that these laws have been upheld and applied by the highest judicial authority in the country, the Constitutional Court.

This deliberate State policy to reestablish impunity for serious human rights violations and to undermine the legitimacy of the inter-American human rights system — even by advancing initiatives that envisage Peru's withdrawal from the system — must be clearly denounced, since it not only affects victims, their relatives, and the Peruvian people as a whole, but also has adverse repercussions for the region.

In the course of its continuous monitoring, the Inter-American Commission has identified official discourse characterized by questioning of and confrontation with the human rights agenda, as well as limited or nonexistent participation of civil society organizations and victims in the design and implementation of public policies on human rights. Law 32301 and its implementing regulations — which amend the legal framework governing the Peruvian Agency for International Cooperation and significantly restrict the work of human rights organizations, thereby undermining democratic civic space — form part of this pattern of action.

In light of this troubling context, the Inter-American Commission has taken due note of the strong call by Peruvian human rights organizations to include the country in Chapter IV.B of the Annual Report, pursuant to Article 59 (paragraphs 6.d.ii and 6.d.iii) of the Rules of Procedure of the IACHR. We agree that this section of the Annual Report is intended to identify, document, and examine national contexts in which serious violations of the essential elements of representative democracy are verified, as well as systematic noncompliance with international human rights obligations, such as those clearly observed in Peru in the course of 2025.

However, the recent approval formally given by the Peruvian Government for the Inter-American Commission to conduct an on-site visit in 2026 ultimately explains its inclusion in that section of the Annual Report. The decision is, therefore, grounded in a broad interpretation of Article 59 (8) of the Rules of Procedure of the IACHR and in the priority objective of promoting constructive dialogue with the State, taking into account its openness to on-site observation.

In this regard, we are mindful that the regression in the rule of law and the consolidation of impunity have been accompanied by an increasingly restrictive relationship between the Peruvian State and international human rights oversight mechanisms. Therefore, the State's consent to an on-site visit by the IACHR assumes heightened significance.

We trust that, under the guidance of Commissioner Marion Bethel, in her capacity as country rapporteur, the Inter-American Commission will be able to conduct the on-site visit as soon as possible and with full scope, in order to observe and assess the principal challenges pending on the human rights agenda in Peru. We hope that this will enable the establishment of a constructive dialogue with the Peruvian State — particularly with the authorities who will take office following the 2026 elections — with a view to supporting the State in fulfilling its international obligations.

Today, more than ever, it is essential to recall that the raison d'être of the inter-American human rights system, and what must guide the mandate of the Inter-American Commission — as it did 67 years ago — are the victims. It is to them, and to each and every human rights defender who, with courage and commitment, confronts these injustices and continues to strive for justice, that we must remain accountable for our decisions.

IV.b

Cuba

CHAPTER IV-B CUBA

I. INTRODUCTION 731

II. DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS AND THE RULE OF LAW 733

A. Serious violation of the fundamental elements and institutions of representative democracy 734

1. Continuity of a single-party model 734
2. Concentration of powers and authority for the conduct of political affairs 736
3. Subordination of the administration of justice to political power 737

III. SITUATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS IN CUBA 739

A. Massive, gross, and systematic violations of human rights 739

B. Human rights defenders 739

C. Persons deprived of liberty 742

D. Freedom of expression 745

1. Criminalization, threats, and intimidation against journalists 745
2. Exile of journalists 749
3. Persecution and criminalization of those who dissent or participate in public life 752
4. Social Protest 754
5. Religious freedom 755
6. Freedom of Expression and the Internet 756

E. Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights 758

1. The economic crisis and persistent shortages of basic services 758
2. Shortcomings in the health system and challenges regarding water and food supply 759
3. Precarious labor conditions and hostile environment for the defense of labor and union rights 759
4. Climate emergency and healthy environment 760

F. Women's Human Rights 760

G. Human rights of LGBTI persons 761
H. Human rights of persons in contexts of human mobility 762
I. Human rights of victims of trafficking 763
J. Human Rights of Older Persons 764
K. Human Rights of persons with disabilities 765
L. Human Rights of Afro-descendants 765

IV. RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE STATE AND OTHER STAKEHOLDERS 766

A. Situation of the Cuban State vis-à-vis the OAS and the IACHR 766
B. U.S.-Cuba Relations 767

V. CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS 768

PARTIALLY DISSENTING VOTE OF COMMISSIONER CARLOS BERNAL PULIDO REGARDING CHAPTER IV-B OF THE 2025 ANNUAL REPORT ON CUBA 773

CHAPTER IV-B

CUBA[1]

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights once again reiterates that it is competent to examine the human rights situation in Cuba, and it has monitored that situation as well as processing individual petitions submitted by Cuban citizens. The Commission considers that the exclusion from the inter-American system occurred with respect to the Government of Cuba, not the State. The State of Cuba is party to international instruments on human rights in the Hemisphere, such as the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man and the Charter of the Organization of American States; it also signed resolution VIII of the Fifth Meeting of Consultation of Ministers of Foreign Affairs (Santiago, Chile, 1959), which established that the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights is "charged with furthering respect for such rights." Therefore, the international obligations entered by the State of Cuba have legitimized the competence of the IACHR.

2. Furthermore, with respect to the States that have not ratified the American Convention on Human Rights, the Commission has been granted the power "to pay particular attention to the observance of the human rights referred to in Articles I, II, III, IV, XVIII, XXV and XXVI of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man," as established in Article 20(a) of the Statute of the IACHR. Accordingly, it is incumbent on the IACHR to monitor human rights in Cuba. It is worth pointing out, too, that the Commission has respected the State of Cuba's right to defense, since it communicates to its representatives, at the appropriate time, each of the actions that should be brought to their attention.

3. In light of the above, in exercising its competence to promote and protect human rights in the Americas, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR or the Commission) monitored the human rights situation in Cuba, in particular the events of 2025, which could have a bearing on the full enjoyment of human rights.

4. In 2020, the IACHR released its most recent country report on Cuba, focusing on the human rights situation between 2017 and 2019.[2] Since then, the Commission has continued to monitor the Cuban context and has found that the main concerns encountered then have not only remained, but have deepened over time.

5. The IACHR continued to receive information on violations of fundamental rights in Cuba, especially since the protests of July 2021 and which have continued in the following years.[3] In this context, its attention has been drawn to acts that seriously compromise the freedom, personal safety, and physical integrity of the population. These violations have mainly affected social leaders, political opponents, activists, and independent journalists, as well as human rights defenders, women, Afro-descendants, and LGBTI people, among other particularly vulnerable groups.[4]

6. In April 2023, the IACHR published a thematic report on labor and trade union rights in Cuba. In that report, the IACHR and its Special Rapporteurship on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights (for its Spanish acronym REDESCA) were able to identify patterns of violation of labor and union rights, related to the following: a) discrimination and persecution for political reasons in the workplace; b) workplace harassment; c) impediments to access to justice in labor-related matters; d) violations of due process; e)

[1] Commissioner Carlos Bernal Pulido approved the report and issued a partial reasoned vote. The partial reasoned vote appears at the end of this chapter.
[2] IACHR, Situation of Human Rights in Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 2, February 3, 2020.
[3] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV. Section B: Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26, 2025, par. 42.
[4] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B, Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26, 2025, par. 9.

insufficient wages to meet basic needs; f) unjustified obstacles to freedom to choose a profession; g) gender discrimination; h) violation of academic freedoms; i) lack of trade union and professional association freedoms; and j) abusive disciplinary measures.[5]

7. In addition, during 2025, the IACHR continued to take notice of various facts that constituted obstacles to the enjoyment of the rights of persons under the jurisdiction of the Cuban State, such as arbitrary restrictions on the rights to assembly and association, and on freedom of expression and dissemination of thought, particularly in the context of the various social protests that have occurred in the country since July 2021, and that continued in 2022, 2023, 2024, and 2025.

8. Furthermore, the IACHR notes that Cuba continues to face structural challenges in relation to human rights. These challenges are rooted in the aforementioned absence of the essential elements of representative democracy, especially the continuity of a single-party model, the absence of free elections and political pluralism, and the prohibition of association for political purposes.

9. This political model of the State has a negative impact on human rights in two main ways. On the one hand, there is an active tendency on the part of the State to systematically intimidate and repress those who express disagreement with the government or are considered opponents/dissidents of the Communist Party. On the other, it prevents implementation of the reforms needed to reestablish the separation and independence of branches of government, improve living conditions, and combat impunity in cases of human rights violations.

10. Thus, in evaluating the human rights situation in Cuba in 2025, the IACHR decided to include the country in Chapter IV-B of its annual report, given that it considers that the country's situation falls within the provisions of Article 59, paragraph 6(a)(i) of its Rules of Procedure, which refers to:

> (a) a serious breach of the core requirements and institutions of representative democracy mentioned in the Inter-American Democratic Charter, which are essential means of achieving human rights, including:
>
> (i) whether there is discriminatory access to or abusive exercise of power that undermines or denies the rule of law, such as systematic infringement of the independence of the judiciary or lack of subordination of State institutions to the legally constituted civilian authority.

11. Furthermore, the IACHR also found that the foregoing situation meets the criteria set forth in Article 59(6)(c) of the Rules of Procedure, which provides that:

> (c) The State has committed or is committing massive, serious and widespread violations of human rights guaranteed in the American Declaration, the American Convention, or the other applicable human rights instruments.

12. In accordance with article 59.5 of the IACHR Rules of Procedure, for preparing this chapter of its report, the Commission has relied on information provided by international agencies, civil society organizations, and the government itself via its official media. The IACHR has also relied on information obtained through its other monitoring and protection mechanisms, such as, inter alia, the system of petitions and cases, precautionary measures, and public hearings. The IACHR analyzes the information received in light of inter-American human rights norms and standards and issues recommendations to the State. It also takes this opportunity to report on activities carried out during 2025 with respect to Cuba.

13. The IACHR approved this report on December 2, 2025. On January 23, 2026, the Commission sent the Cuban State a copy of the preliminary draft of this report in accordance with Articles 59(7) and 59(10) of its Rules of Procedure, giving it one month to submit its comments. The State did not submit any observations.

[5] IACHR, Labor and Union Rights in Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 53, April 5, 2023.

II. DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS AND THE RULE OF LAW

14. Article XX of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man (1948) establishes that: "Every person having legal capacity is entitled to participate in the government of his country, directly or through his representatives, and to take part in popular elections, which shall be by secret ballot, and shall be honest, periodic and free."[6]

15. Moreover, upon adopting the Inter-American Democratic Charter in 2001, the OAS member states recognized that representative democracy is the system through which stability, peace, and development in the region can be achieved, and that it is fundamental for attaining the full exercise of fundamental rights. Article 3 of the Inter-American Democratic Charter states that:

> Essential elements of representative democracy include, inter alia, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, access to and the exercise of power in accordance with the rule of law, the holding of periodic, free, and fair elections based on secret balloting and universal suffrage as an expression of the sovereignty of the people, the pluralistic system of political parties and organizations, and the separation of powers and independence of the branches of government.[7]

16. For its part, by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (I/A Court H.R.), in the case of San Miguel Sosa et al. v. Venezuela (2018), indicated that the Inter-American Democratic Charter "is a rule of authentic interpretation of the treaties to which it refers, since it reflects the interpretation that the OAS Member States themselves, including the States Parties to the Convention, make of the norms pertaining to democracy in both the OAS Charter and the Convention." Thus, the I/A Court H.R. concluded that "the effective exercise of democracy in the American States is, therefore, an international legal obligation and they have sovereignly agreed that such exercise is no longer a matter solely for their domestic, internal or exclusive jurisdiction."[8]

17. At the same time, the IACHR, as it has been reiterating in its annual reports, teaches that the exercise of the right to political participation implies "the right to organize parties and political associations, which through open discussion and ideological struggle, can improve the social level and economic circumstances of the masses and prevent a monopoly on power by any one group or individual."[9] Likewise, the Commission has considered that:

> Governments have, in the face of political rights and the right to political participation, the obligation to permit and guarantee: the organization of all political parties and other associations, unless they are constituted to violate fundamental human rights; open debate of the principal themes of socioeconomic development; the celebration of general and free elections with all the necessary guarantees so that the results represent the popular will.[10]

18. Accordingly, as reflected in its annual reports, the IACHR has postulated a direct relationship between the exercise of political rights and the concept of democracy as a form of governmental organization,

[6] OAS, American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, adopted at the Ninth International Conference of American States, Bogotá, Colombia, 1948.

[7] OAS, Inter-American Democratic Charter, Article 3.Adopted at the Twenty-eighth special session, Lima, Peru, September 11, 2001.

[8] I/A Court H.R., Case of San Miguel Sosa et al. v. Venezuela, Merits, Reparations, and Costs, Judgment of February 8, 2018, Series C No. 34818, par. 114.

[9] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV, Cuba, "a. Political Rights", 2002, par. 12.

[10] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV, Cuba, "a. Political Rights", 2002, par. 12.

which, in turn, implies the exercise of other fundamental human rights.[11] Indeed, for the IACHR, the concept of representative democracy is based on the principle that political sovereignty resides with the people and that, in the exercise of that sovereignty, they elect their representatives to exercise political power. These representatives are also elected by citizens to implement specific policy measures– which in turn implies that there has been broad debate on the nature of the policies to be applied – freedom of expression – among organized political groups – freedom of association – that have had the opportunity to express themselves and meet publicly – right of assembly. [12] The exercise of political rights is therefore inseparable from other fundamental human rights

A. Serious violation of the fundamental elements and institutions of representative democracy

19. Pursuant to Article 59, paragraph 6(a)(i) of its Rules of Procedure, the IACHR considers that there exists in Cuba a serious violation of the fundamental elements and institutions of representative democracy, including an abusive exercise of power that contravenes the rule of law through systematic infringement of the independence of the Judiciary. There are three structural reasons for this: 1) continuity of a single-party political model; 2) concentration of faculties and powers in the management of public affairs; 3) subordination of the administration of justice to political power.

1. Continuity of a single-party model

20. The current Cuban Constitution of 2019 continues to establish the Communist Party of Cuba (PCC) as the superior political driving force of society and the State and, currently, the only party in Cuba.[13] The Commission notes that this results, formally and in practice, in the non-existence of opposition political parties and of diverse schools of thought.[14]

21. Likewise, although Cuba's electoral law establishes active and passive suffrage for Cuban citizens without ideological restrictions[15]; in practice, according to the testimonies received by the IACHR, the Candidacy Commissions[16] act as an ideological filter so that people who do not identify with official state views and the PCC do not hold public elective positions.

22. Thus, the Commission notes that, although de jure the law allows free political participation of citizens, de facto the Communist Party reportedly continues to regulate, control, and direct electoral processes in the country. Furthermore, the Commission points out that the official departure of former President Raúl Castro from the leadership of the Communist Party in 2021 did not result in changes with respect to political participation or in openness to party and ideological pluralism.[17]

---

[11] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Cuba, par. 16.

[12] IACHR, Report on the Situation of Human Rights in Haiti, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.77.rev.1, doc. 18, May 8, 1990, Chapter 1. "Political Rights," par. 15.

[13] Specifically, Article 5 of the current Constitution establishes: "The Communist Party of Cuba, unique, Martiano, Fidelista, and Marxist-Leninist, the organized vanguard of the Cuban nation, sustained in its democratic character as well as its permanent linkage to the people, is the superior driving force of society and the State." Cuba, Official Gazette, Constitution of the Republic (GOC-2019- 406-EX5), April 10, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/sites/default/files/goc-2019-ex5_0.pdf.

[14] IACHR, Situation of Human Rights in Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 2, February 3, 2020, par. 141.

[15] 11 Cuba, Official Gazette, Law No. 127 "Electoral Law" (GOC- 2019-735-O60), August 19, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/.

[16] According to the Cuban Constitution, the Candidacy Commissions are the bodies in charge of preparing and presenting the draft candidacies of deputies to the National Assembly of People's Power and filling the positions elected by the National Assembly of People's Power and the municipal assemblies of People's Power. Cuba, Official Gazette, Law No. 127 "Electoral Law" (GOC- 2019-735-O60), August 19, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/es, Article 152.

[17] Granma, Elegido Miguel Díaz-Canel Bermúdez como Primer Secretario del Comité Central del Partido Comunista de Cuba (Miguel Díaz-Canel Bermúdez elected as First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Cuba), April 19, 2021; Los tiempos, Raúl Castro se va, pero seguirá presente en decisiones estratégicas en Cuba (Raúl Castro leaves, but will still be present in strategic decisions in Cuba), April 20, 2021; El país, Miguel Díaz-Canel asume el mando del Partido Comunista cubano tras la salida de Raúl Castro (Miguel Díaz-Canel assumes command of the Cuban Communist Party after Raúl Castro's departure), April 19, 2021.

23. In response to anti-democratic practices, in April 2025[18], the IACHR warned that Cuba continues to face structural challenges in the area of human rights. These challenges derive from the absence of the essential elements of any representative democracy, especially the continuity of a single-party model, the absence of free elections and political pluralism, and the prohibition of association for political purposes. The IACHR has been documenting how the lack of independence among the branches of government and the hegemonic control of the single party seriously impair the functioning of institutions and violate minimum guarantees for the respect of human rights.

24. On the other hand, and according to official information, the Commission observed that in May, in the municipality of "10 de Octubre" in the province of Havana, the electoral process to elect the new delegates of the People's Power began, which involves the organization of grassroots assemblies in each community with the nomination of citizens who are elected by secret and universal ballot.[19] It also noted that in July, the Havana Provincial Electoral College, in the municipality of "La Lisa", began elections to fill vacancies in the 29th constituency, as part of actions to strengthen the People's Power system.[20]

25. In this regard, as of the date of this report, the IACHR does not have updated information on how these processes were carried out and whether they were conducted in a manner that guaranteed the alternation of power, that is, with the support of free and fair elections.

26. As indicated by the I/A Court H.R. in the case of Castañeda Gutman v. Mexico of 2008, although the inter-American system does not impose a specific electoral system or a specific means of exercising the rights to vote and to be elected, there are general guidelines that determine a minimum content of political rights that must be observed.[21] Consequently, as highlighted by the Court in the case of Yatama v. Nicaragua of 2005, "the full scope of political rights cannot be restricted in such a way that their regulation or the decisions adopted in application of this regulation prevent people from participating effectively in the governance of the State or cause this participation to become illusory, depriving such rights of their essential content."[22]

27. In the case of Cuba, the IACHR observes that the limitations to the exercise of political participation, derived from the single party system and the monopoly of power in a single political group, result in the destruction of the essence (minimum content) of political rights. This, in turn, fosters a political structure characterized by the absence of democratic institutions.

28. Likewise, the Commission notes that on July 16, the Fifth Regular Session of the National Assembly of People's Power (ANPP)[23]began and addressed, among others, issues related to the Government Program for the current year and amendments to the Constitution. In this regard, the IACHR notes that, on July 18, the National Assembly approved a constitutional reform aimed at abolishing the age limit of 60 years to run for the presidency of the country in a first term, a provision contemplated until now in Article 127 of the Constitution in force since 2019.[24]

[18] IACHR, Situation of human rights and individual freedoms in Cuba, Subcommittee on Human Rights, European Parliament, Speech, April 8, 2025.

[19] Government of Cuba, Inicia en 10 de Octubre con el apoyo de pioneros la elección de delegados del Poder Popular (Election of delegates of the People's Power begins on October 10 with the support of pioneers), May 19, 2025.

[20] Government of Cuba, Consejo Electoral Provincial, acciones de fortalecimiento del sistema del Poder Popular (Provincial Electoral Council, actions to strengthen the People's Power system), July 15, 2025.

[21] I/A Court H.R., Case of Castañeda Gutman v. Mexico, Preliminary objections, merits, reparations, and costs, Judgment of August 6, 2008, Series C No. 184, par. 166.

[22] I/A Court H.R., Case of Yatama v. Nicaragua, Preliminary objections, merits, reparations and costs, Judgment of June 23, 2005, Series C No. 127, par. 204.

[23] Government of Cuba, Inició hoy Quinto Periodo Ordinario de sesiones de la Asamblea Nacional del Poder Popular, en su X legislatura (Today saw the start of the Fifth Regular Session of the National Assembly of People's Power, in its X Legislature), July 16, 2025.

[24] Government of Cuba, Reforma constitucional suprime límite de 60 años de edad para ser elegido Presidente de la República (Constitutional amendment abolishes age limit for election to the office of President of the Republic), July 18, 2025; DW, Cuba suprimime límite de edad para ser presidente del país (Cuba abolishes age limit to become President of the country), July 19, 2025. It should be noted that the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man does not establish any age limit for exercising political rights. Although

29. According to dissidents, the aforementioned amendment ratifies the role of the Assembly as legal guarantor of the status quo and not of the will of the people. This is because the measure could be interpreted as a legalistic adjustment to allow the permanence of historical figures or those close to the leadership in positions of power. In other words, its purpose is to perpetuate the regime and tight control of the succession process within the ranks of the Communist Party of Cuba (PCC).[25]

30. In this regard, the procedure required by the Constitution for an ordinary reform requires that the initiative be presented by the President, the Council of State, the Council of Ministers, at least one third of the deputies, or by citizen petition, and subsequently approved by an absolute majority in the National Assembly. However, the speed, lack of effective public debate, and unanimity in voting would reflect a process lacking social control and discussion.[26] The constitutional reform file did not include citizen consultation or pluralistic discussion, thereby failing to comply with a democratic procedure.[27]

2. Concentration of powers and authority for the conduct of political affairs

31. As mentioned earlier, according to Article 3 of the Inter-American Democratic Charter, the separation of powers and independence of the branches of government are essential elements of democracy. In this regard, the I/A Court H.R. specified, in Advisory Opinion No. 28 of 2021, that:

> "The separation of State powers into different branches and organs is linked closely with the aim of preserving related freedoms, with the understanding that concentration of power leads to tyranny and oppression. At the same time, the separation of State powers allows for the efficient fulfillment of the various aims entrusted to the State."[28]

32. In the same vein, the I/A Court H.R. considers that "the separation and independence of powers (branches of government) assumes the existence of a system of controls and oversight to constantly regulate the balance of powers."[29] This system of "checks and balances" would therefore require the existence of guarantees that allow the branches of government to act freely and autonomously, without interference or subordination to one another.[30] international human rights law admits the regulation of political rights based on criteria such as nationality or age, any form of restriction must be necessary and proportional, and avoid practices based on bias or stereotypes based on age.

---

[25] DemoAmLat, La vieja guardia del Partido Comunista de Cuba cierra la puerta a la renovación (Cuba's Communist Party old guard closes the door to renewal), July 22, 2025; Martinoticias, Observatorio independiente critica "controvertidas reformas y leyes" aprobadas por el régimen cubano (Independent observatory criticizes "controversial reforms and laws" approved by Cuban regime), July 23, 2025; Cubanet, Cuba: Alertan sobre falta de transparencia en procesos de consulta popular (Alert on lack of transparency in citizen consultation processes), May 13, 2025.

[26] Martinoticias, Observatorio independiente critica "controvertidas reformas y leyes" aprobadas por el régimen cubano (Independent observatory criticizes "controversial reforms and laws" adopted by the Cuban regime), July 23, 2025; DemoAmLat, La vieja guardia del Partido Comunista de Cuba cierra la puerta a la renovación (Cuba's Communist Party old guard closes the door to renewal), July 22, 2025; Cubanet, Cuba: Alertan sobre falta de transparencia en procesos de consulta popular (Alert on lack of transparency in citizen consultation processes), May 13, 2025.

[27] Martinoticias, Observatorio independiente critica "controvertidas reformas y leyes" aprobadas por el régimen cubano (Independent observatory criticizes "controversial reforms and laws" adopted by the Cuban regime), July 23, 2025; DemoAmLat, La vieja guardia del Partido Comunista de Cuba cierra la puerta a la renovación (Cuba's Communist Party old guard closes the door to renewal), July 22, 2025; Cubanet, Cuba: Alertan sobre falta de transparencia en procesos de consulta popular (Alert on lack of transparency in citizen consultation processes), May 13, 2025.

[28] I/A Court H.R., The concept of indefinite presidential reelection in Presidential Systems in the context of the inter-American human rights system (Interpretation and scope of Articles 1, 23, 24, and 32 of the American Convention on Human Rights, Article XX of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, Article 3.d of the Charter of the Organization of American States, and the Inter-American Democratic Charter), Advisory Opinion OC-28/21, June 7, 2021, Series A No.28, par. 80.

[29] I/A Court H.R., The concept of indefinite presidential reelection in Presidential Systems in the context of the inter-American human rights system (Interpretation and scope of Articles 1, 23, 24, and 32 of the American Convention on Human Rights, Article XX of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, Article 3.d of the Charter of the Organization of American States, and the Inter-American Democratic Charter), Advisory Opinion OC-28/21, June 7, 2021, Series A No.28, par. 82.

[30] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Cuba", 2022, par. 30.

33. In the case of Cuba, the Commission notes that the National Assembly of People's Power (ANPP) has the power to elect the leaders of the most important judicial, oversight, and administrative institutions.[31]

34. The foundations of the State and the characteristics of the branches of government show that the main powers for the conduct of public affairs remain concentrated in a small number of authorities. The National Assembly of People's Power has a very high concentration of functions, including the appointment of those who will occupy positions in other sectors of the State. In addition, it can dismiss officials, a role that could affect independent and impartial decision-making.[32]

35. The Commission considers that this structure, which did not change in 2025, continues to create an environment in which political affiliation and loyalty to the government and its ideology become fundamental requirements to access and remain in such positions. This situation perpetuates a structure in which power and decision-making remain concentrated in the ruling political group, rather than being based on diverse and truly democratic representation. It also makes it impossible to implement reforms in the country.

3. Subordination of the administration of justice to political power

36. Regarding the right to justice, the American Declaration contemplates in Article XVIII that: "Every person may resort to the courts to ensure respect for his legal rights. There should likewise be available to him a simple, brief procedure whereby the courts will protect him from acts of authority that, to his prejudice, violate any fundamental constitutional rights."[33] The Declaration also provides in Article XXVI the right to due process of law, establishing that "Every person accused of an offense has the right to be given an impartial and public hearing, and to be tried by courts previously established in accordance with pre-existing laws, and not to receive cruel, infamous or unusual punishment."[34]

37. In addition, with regard to judicial independence, the Inter-American Court considers that the right to be judged by an impartial judge or tribunal is a fundamental guarantee of due process. That is to say, it must be guaranteed that the judge or court in the exercise of his/its function as a judge can exercise the greatest objectivity. Likewise, the independence of the Judiciary from the other branches of government is essential for the exercise of the judicial function.[35]

38. With respect to Cuba, the Commission notes that while Article 150 of the 2019 Constitution states that "Magistrates and judges, in their function of imparting justice, are independent and do not owe obedience except to the law",[36] testimonies gathered by the IACHR from former members of the Cuban Judicial System indicate that, in practice, judicial independence is not respected. The following are especially notable:

> Judicial independence is highly compromised in Cuba, since all the actors have to be part of the Communist Party of Cuba. Independence is very well conceived from the legal and [31] Article 109 of the Constitution sets out all its electoral powers. The National Assembly elects the President and Vice President of the Republic from among its members. It also elects the members of the Council of State and appoints, on the proposal of the President of the Republic, the Prime Minister and members of the Council of Ministers. In addition, it elects the President and Justices of the People's Supreme Court, the Attorney General of the Republic, the Comptroller General of the Republic, and the President and members of the National Electoral Council. Cuba, Official Gazette, Constitution of the Republic (GOC-2019-406-EX5), April 10, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/sites/default/files/goc-2019-ex5_0.pdf.

[32] IACHR, Report on the Situation of Human Rights in Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 2, February 3, 2020, par. 113.

[33] OAS, American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, Adopted at the Ninth International Conference of American States, Bogotá, Colombia, 1948.

[34] OAS, American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, Adopted at the Ninth International Conference of American States, Bogotá, Colombia, 1948.

[35] I/A Court H.R., Case of Palamara Iribarne v. Chile, Merits, Reparations, and Costs, Judgment of November 22, 2005, Series C No. 135, par. 145.

[36] Cuba, Official Gazette, Constitution of the Republic (GOC-2019-406-EX5), April 10, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/sites/default/files/goc-2019-ex5_0.pdf. Article 150.

> constitutional point of view, but, in practice, the pressures to which we are subjected force us away from what we would like to do.[37]
>
> Judicial independence, as established by the Constitution, the law of the courts and the law of the prosecution, is not achieved in practice. Everything is judicial arbitrariness in all senses and processes. [...] Since the complaint is filed, the investigative process is opened, and it is presented to the court, arbitrariness has been verified. Everything is directed by the Communist Party and the interests of the Government, structures that have the "leading voice" in all the processes in which they have an interest.[38]

39. The Commission also notes that the Assemblies of People's Power have a high degree of interference in the appointment of judges, who are accountable to it for their actions and can be revoked by the body that elects them.[39] In this way, judges who do not conform to the government's ideology are persecuted and removed from office, undermining the integrity of the judicial system.[40] With regard to the Office of the Attorney General of the Republic, the Constitution provides that it is an indivisible organic unit subordinate to the President of the Republic.[41] In the Commission's opinion, these provisions violate the fundamental principle of separation of powers and undermine public confidence in the impartiality of the judicial system.

40. Likewise, the IACHR has questioned the concentration of powers and authority for the conduct of public affairs.[42] In particular, it is of concern that the National Assembly of People's Power has broad powers to adopt laws.[43] The Commission considers that this structure continues to create an environment in which political affiliation and loyalty to the government and its ideology become fundamental requirements to access and remain in such positions.[44] In addition--, it can dismiss officials, a role that could affect independent and impartial decision-making.[45]

41. Specifically, the Commission was informed that, in July 2025, during the Fifth Ordinary Session of the ANPP, 18 new deputies were elected and took office as members of the National Assembly.[46] According to information available to the Commission, the causes for the departure of the former deputies were not specified and the process has been described as a partial renewal, lacking transparency and without information.[47] In this regard, the Cuban Parliament is presented as a body representing the plurality of territories and sectors of the country, although the political reality is that of a monolithic body organically subordinated to the Cuban Communist Party (PCC), with no room for diversity or representation of independent associations.[48] The opacity of parliamentary replacements is evidence of the subordination to

---

[37] IACHR, Labor and Union Rights in Cuba report, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 53, April 5, 2023, par. 346 (interview 52).

[38] IACHR, Labor and Union Rights in Cuba report, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 53, April 5, 2023, par. 346 (interview 41).

[39] Cuba, Official Gazette, Constitution of the Republic (GOC-2019-406-EX5), April 10, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/sites/default/files/goc-2019-ex5_0.pdf, Articles 149, 154-155.

[40] IACHR, interviews with P.O.R.; F.Y.Y.; A.R.Y., S.F.M., August 12, 2022. IACHR archive.

[41] Cuba, Official Gazette, Constitution of the Republic (GOC-2019-406-EX5), April 10, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/sites/default/files/goc-2019-ex5_0.pdf. Chapter VI - Office of the Attorney General.

[42] IACHR, Report on the Situation of Human Rights in Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc, February 23, 2020, par. 113.

[43] Article 109 of the Constitution sets out all its electoral powers. The National Assembly elects the President and Vice President of the Republic from among its members. It also elects the members of the Council of State and appoints, on the proposal of the President of the Republic, the Prime Minister and members of the Council of Ministers. In addition, it elects the President and Justices of the People's Supreme Court, the Attorney General of the Republic, the Comptroller General of the Republic, and the President and members of the National Electoral Council. Cuba, Official Gazette, Constitution of the Republic (GOC-2019-406-EX5), April 10, 2019. Available at: https://www.gacetaoficial.gob.cu/sites/default/files/goc-2019-ex5_0.pdf.

[44] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV-B, Cuba, 2024, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26, 2025, par. 31.

[45] IACHR, Situation of Human Rights in the Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 2, February 3, 2020, par. 113.

[46] Government of Cuba, Tomaron posesión 18 nuevos diputados en el Parlamento cubano (18 new deputies were sworn in to the Cuban Parliament), July 16, 2025.

[47] Martinoticias, Observatorio independiente critica "controvertidas reformas y leyes" aprobadas por el régimen cubano (Independent observatory criticizes "controversial reforms and laws" adopted by the Cuban regime), July 23, 2025; DemoAmLat, La vieja guardia del Partido Comunista de Cuba cierra la puerta a la renovación (Cuba's Communist Party old guard closes the door to renewal), July 22, 2025; Cubanet, Cuba: Alertan sobre falta de transparencia en procesos de consulta popular (Alert on lack of transparency in citizen consultation processes), May 13, 2025.

[48] Martinoticias, Observatorio independiente critica "controvertidas reformas y leyes" aprobadas por el régimen cubano (Independent observatory criticizes "controversial reforms and laws" adopted by the Cuban regime), July 23, 2025; DemoAmLat, La vieja political interests and the absence of checks and balances, limiting the possibility of exercising oversight of the authorities and the transparency of the legislative process.[49]

III. SITUATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS IN CUBA

A. Massive, gross, and systematic violations of human rights

42. For decades, the IACHR has continued to ascertain, with extreme concern, arbitrary restrictions on the right to assembly and freedom of expression of the population, as well as the persistence of violations of the right to liberty, security, and integrity of individuals, of protection from arbitrary detention, inviolability of the home, minimum judicial guarantees, and judicial protection, to which political dissidents, social leaders, activists, human rights defenders, and independent journalists are subjected. In particular, between 2021 and 2024, the IACHR warned that repression of dissent got worse, especially since the July 2021 protests in Cuba.[50]

43. In 2025, the IACHR continued to observe systematic repression by state agents and pro-government groups seeking to prevent peaceful gatherings and protests organized by people who dissent from the positions imposed by the government in the country. Repressive practices have included, inter alia, arbitrary detentions, criminalization, house arrests, surveillance, interrogations, threats, fines, and internet shutdowns. All this is taking place in a context of deep social and economic crisis, which has included power outages for prolonged periods of time, making it difficult to access essential basic goods, already in short supply, such as food, water, and medicines.

44. The Commission considers that these state practices constitute massive, serious, and systematic violations of human rights. This conclusion is based on the large number of victims, the seriousness of the actions undertaken, and the existence of certain patterns of conduct carried out with state resources in response to a policy defined and endorsed from the highest levels of state power. Therefore, the IACHR considers that the current human rights situation in Cuba is covered by the provisions of Article 59, paragraph 6(c) of its Rules of Procedure.

45. The following are the main rights violations identified in 2025.

B. Human rights defenders

46. During 2025, human rights defenders in Cuba have continued to carry out their advocacy activities under a hostile and repressive environment fostered by the State. The complaints received point to an intensification of the patterns of criminalization, persecution, and harassment against those who defend human rights in the country, accompanied by a total closure of the civic space.

47. In this regard, the IACHR has documented a new wave of repression directed against activists, political opponents, and social leaders. The revocation of conditional release, mobility restrictions, and criminalization through the misuse of criminal law continue to be widespread practices used to silence and obstruct human rights advocacy.

48. The Commission learned about the revocation of parole of activists who had been released between January and March 2025.[51] In April, Cuba's Supreme Court upheld the revocation of conditional release of several opposition members, including José Daniel Ferrer and Félix Navarro, who had been released guardia del Partido Comunista de Cuba cierra la puerta a la renovación (Y), July 22, 2025; Cubanet, Cuba: Alertan sobre falta de transparencia en procesos de consulta popular (Alert on lack of transparency in citizen consultation processes), May 13, 2025.

[49] Cubanet, Cuba: Alertan sobre falta de transparencia en procesos de consulta popular (Alert on lack of transparency in citizen consultation processes), May 13, 2025; DemoAmLat, La vieja guardia del Partido Comunista de Cuba cierra la puerta a la renovación (Cuba's Communist Party old guard closes the door to renewal), July 22, 2025.

[50] CIDH, Annual Report, Chapter IV.B "Cuba", 2021, par. 19

[51] Justice 11J, Otro año sin justicia (2025) (Another Year Without Justice (2025)), updated as of August 20, 2025.

from prison under severe restrictions.[52] Both were detained again after supposedly arbitrary violations of the conditions imposed. In Ferrer's case, a serious deterioration of his health, lack of access to adequate medical care, and prison conditions that could constitute torture were denounced, which led his family and international organizations to issue urgent appeals for his life.[53] In this regard, on October 8, 2025, the Complaint Center of the Foundation for Pan American Democracy (for its Spanish acronym FDP) informed the Commission of the imminent risk to the life and integrity of José Daniel Ferrer due to practices of forced exile and coercion for his departure from the country.[54] Then, on October 13, the Commission took note that José Daniel Ferrer arrived in the United States after being released from prison in Cuba.[55]

49. Likewise, on June 11, the People's Provincial Court of Villa Clara revoked the conditional release of activist Donaida Pérez Paseiro, after she was accused of "non-compliance in the labor sphere and failure to attend the execution judge's summons" and, therefore, she must serve the remainder of her sentence in prison for the alleged crimes of contempt, assault, and public disorder.[56]

50. The Commission notes that human rights defenders and activists continue to be accused of crimes as an instrument of control by the State. Organizations such as Prisoners Defenders have denounced the use of criminal law as a mechanism to silence dissent. As of August 31, 2025, there are reportedly 1,185 people in prison for exercising the defense of human rights.[57] According to those organizations, serious patterns have been identified such as the systematic criminalization of fundamental rights such as freedom of expression and protest and the use of vague and disproportionate criminal offenses such as disobedience, contempt, or propagation of epidemics, and the application of summary or military proceedings without minimum procedural guarantees.[58]

51. The following are some of the cases of criminalization that the IACHR has observed. On February 6, Alexander Verdecia, coordinator of the Patriotic Union of Cuba (for its Spanish acronym UNPACU), was arrested and formally charged through a prosecutorial request on June 18, 2025 with the crimes of instigation to commit a crime and propaganda against the constitutional order. According to the information available, the Prosecutor's Office requested a 10-year prison sentence for his publications on social networks criticizing the government. As of September 5, he did not have a trial date.[59]

---

[52] Amnesty International, Cuba: Parole of José Daniel Ferrer and Félix Navarro revoked, May 8, 2025; France 24, Cuba revoca la excarcelación de los opositores Ferrer y Navarro y los devuelve a prisión (Cuba revokes release of opponents Ferrer and Navarro and returns them to prison), April 29, 2025.

[53] Diario Las Américas, Opositor José Daniel Ferrer es víctima de torturas en cárcel de Cuba; familia teme por su vida (Opposition figure José Daniel Ferrer tortured in prison in Cuba; his family fears for his life), July 6, 2025; ADN Cuba, Logran ver a José Daniel Ferrer (They manage to see José Daniel Ferrer): "Continúa sobreviviendo en condiciones crueles" ("He continues to survive in cruel conditions")July 15, 2025.

[54] Foundation for Pan American Democracy (FDP), José Daniel Ferrer García forced banishment, October 8, 2025.

[55] Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, Saludo y reconocimiento a José Daniel Ferrer (Greeting and recognition for José Daniel Ferrer), October 13, 2025; CNNespanol, El disidente cubano José Daniel Ferrer llega a Estados Unidos tras ser liberado de prisión (Cuban dissident José Daniel Ferrer arrives in the United States after being released from prison), October 13, 2025; Swissinfo, El histórico disidente cubano José Daniel Ferrer parte al exilio en Estados Unidos (Famous Cuban dissident José Daniel Ferrer leaves for exile in the United States), October 13, 2025.

[56] Justice 11J, Donaida Pérez Paseiro: nueva re-encarcelación como castigo por defender derechos humanos (Donaida Pérez Paseiro jailed once again for defending human rights), undated; Diario Las Américas, Revocan libertad condicional a la activista cubana Donaida Pérez Paseiro (Parole revoked for Cuban activist Donaida Pérez Paseiro), June 11, 2025; Martí Noticias, Régimen revoca libertad condicional a la presa política cubana Donaida Pérez Paseiro (Regime revokes parole for Cuban political prisoner Donaida Pérez Paseiro), June 11, 2025: Cubanet, Régimen cubano devuelve a la cárcel a la activista opositora Donaida Pérez Paseiro (Cuban regime returns opposition activist Donaida Pérez Paseiro to prison), June 11, 2025.

[57] Prisoners Defenders, Se intensifica cada mes la represión en Cuba (Repression in Cuba intensifies every month):13 nuevos presos políticos llevan a un nuevo récord de 1.185 (13 new political prisoners leads to a new record of 1,185), September 11, 2025.

[58] Prisoner Defenders, 4 años desde el 11J: el 65% de los prisioneros políticos en Cuba son manifestantes del 2021 mientras se incrementan las torturas (4 years since 11J: 65% of political prisoners in Cuba are 2021 protesters as torture increases), July 10, 2025.

[59] Martí Noticias, Sin fecha de juicio el preso político cubano Alexander Verdecia tras siete meses en la cárcel (Cuban political prisoner Alexander Verdecia still has no trial date after seven months in prison), September 5, 2025; El Toque, Fiscalía pide diez años de cárcel por criticar al Gobierno cubano en Facebook: el caso de Alexander Verdecia (Attorney's office calls for ten years in prison for criticizing the Cuban government on Facebook: Alexander Verdecia case), June 19, 2025; CiberCuba, Piden 10 años de prisión para cubano

52. In February 2025, the IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression received reports of the arbitrary detention in Havana of Berta Soler Hernández, leader of the Ladies in White; Marieta Martínez and María Mercedes Benítez, members of the movement, and former political prisoner Ángel Moya Acosta, as they were on their way to the funeral of Yolanda Santana Ayala, also a member of the group and a former political prisoner. According to public statements, Soler was allegedly taken to a meeting room, where a political police officer warned her that she would not be allowed to attend the wake dressed in white, a color that identifies the movement in its demonstrations for the freedom of people imprisoned for political reasons in Cuba.[60] Over the course of the year, the Office continued to record multiple reports of harassment, bullying, and intimidation of the movement.[61]

53. In March, activist Oscar Sanchez Madan, Political Coordinator of the National Council of the United Anti-totalitarian Forum (FANTU), was sent back to prison after 18 days detained in a police unit for protesting with anti-government posters in Marti Park in the city of Matanzas and charged with public disorder. There is no information on the commencement of the trial. The activist had just been released after being deprived of his liberty and serving a sentence of one year and two months for the crime of public disorder.[62]

54. In addition, during the year, mobility restrictions continued to be imposed to silence critical opinions, including police operations to prevent people from leaving their homes. According to the organization Cubalex, in August and in the framework of the 31st anniversary of the "Maleconazo[63]" there were police and State Security surveillance operations, arbitrary house arrests, and selective interruptions of access to the Internet against several activists, independent journalists, and human rights defenders.[64] On July 2, the homes of several activists, including Manuel Cuesta Morúa, Vice-President of the Council for Democratic Transition in Cuba, and Lady in White María Cristina Labrada, were reportedly under strict surveillance surrounded by plainclothes agents to prevent them from attending an event organized by the U.S. Embassy.[65] For her part, leader Berta Soler, a member of the Ladies in White, was detained that same day to prevent her participation in the event.[66] In May, activist Donaida Perez denounced that Cuban State authorities refused to carry out her immigration procedures to prevent her from traveling to an event of the Christian Democrat Organization of America (for its Spanish acronym ODCA) in Colombia for "disparaging the revolution".[67]

por expresar opiniones contra el gobierno en redes (Ten years in prison requested for Cuban charged with criticizing the government on social networks), June 18, 2025.

[60] CiberCuba, Represión en Cuba (Repression in Cuba): Arrestan a opositores que iban al velorio de una Dama de Blanco (Opposition members on their way to the wake of a Lady in White arrested) February 5, 2025.

[61] Infobae, Las Damas de Blanco cubanas denuncian siete arrestos este Domingo de Ramos (Cuban Ladies in White denounce seven arrests this Palm Sunday) April 13, 2025; Diario las Américas, Régimen cubano intensifica la represión contra las Damas de Blanco (Cuban Regime Intensifies Repression Against the Ladies in White) April 7, 2025; Martí Noticias, Damas de Blanco denuncian 16 semanas consecutivas de represión en Cuba (Ladies in White Denounce 16 Consecutive Weeks of Repression in Cuba), June 30, 2025.

[62] Martí Noticias, Activista cubano Oscar Sánchez Madan encarcelado nuevamente tras protesta (Cuban activist Oscar Sánchez Madan jailed again after protest), April 3, 2025; ADN Cuba, Devuelven a prisión a opositor Oscar Sánchez Madan, tras ser liberado hace pocas semanas (Opposition activist Oscar Sánchez Madan returned to prison after being released a few weeks ago), April 2, 2025.

[63] On August 5, 1994, thousands of Cubans took to the streets of Havana's Malecon to protest against the economic crisis, repression, and lack of freedoms. It was one of the biggest social outbursts under the Cuban regime. Thirty-one years after that historic day, the government continues to respond with systematic repression to any attempt at citizen protest.

[64] Cubalex, Cuba: vigilancia y arrestos domiciliarios en el aniversario 31 del Maleconazo (Cuba: surveillance and house arrests on the 31st anniversary of the Maleconazo), August 5, 2025; Cibercuba, Régimen cubano impide salir a activistas en aniversario del Maleconazo (Cuban regime prevents activists from taking to the streets on the anniversary of the Maleconazo, August 5, 2025.

[65] 14 y medio, El régimen impide que los invitados cubanos asistan a la fiesta del 4 de Julio en la Embajada de EE UU (The regime prevents Cuban guests from attending July 4 celebration at the U.S. embassy), July 2, 2025; Martí Noticias, Ola represiva impide participación de cubanos en celebración organizada por Embajada de EEUU (Repression to prevent Cubans from attending celebration organized by the U.S. embassy), July 2, 2025.

[66] Cibercuba, Seguridad del Estado detiene a Berta Soler tras salir de su casa en La Habana (State Security detains Berta Soler after leaving her home in Havana), July 2, 2025; Infobae, El régimen de Cuba arrestó por segunda vez en cinco días a Berta Soler, activista y fundadora de las Damas de Blanco (Cuba's regime arrested Berta Soler, activist and founder of the Ladies in White, for the second time in five days), July 3, 2025.

[67] Martí Noticias, Prohíben a activista cubana viajar a evento de ODCA en Colombia por su "posición política"(Cuban activist prevented from traveling to Christian Democrat Organization of America event in Colombia because of her political stance), May 27, 2025; Diario de Cuba, El régimen impide a la activista Donaida Pérez Paseiro viajar a un evento de la Organización Demócrata Cristiana de América (Regime prevents activist Donaida Pérez Paseiro from traveling to an event organized by the ODCA), May 27, 2025.

55. In addition, in April 2025, the homes of activists Yamilka Lafita, Olga Rodríguez, and Daniela Peral remained under siege by police officers, preventing them from leaving to attend a religious service.[68]

56. Stigmatization continues to be a strategy for discrediting defenders, who are labeled by the State as "terrorists". In July 2025 the Cuban regime updated its list of "alleged terrorists", identifying 62 individuals and 20 organizations, including activists, historic leaders in exile, and influencers based abroad.[69] Among the organizations included are the Cuba First movement and the Patriotic Union of Cuba (for its Spanish acronym UNPACU).[70]

57. In 2025 the IACHR granted precautionary measures in favor of defenders at risk. On January 30, the Commission granted precautionary measures in favor of Luis Wilber Aguilar Bravo and his family because they were subject to surveillance, threats, and harassment by State agents, as a result of public statements and complaints about the situation of political prisoners in Cuba.[71] Likewise, on March 27, the IACHR granted precautionary measures in favor of Mario Alberto Hernández Leyva, Vice-President of the Opposition Movement for a New Republic (for its Spanish acronym MONR) and promoter of the citizens' campaign "Cuba Decides", on the grounds that his life and personal integrity are at risk due to the conditions of detention to which he has been subjected since he was deprived of his liberty in June 2024.[72]

58. In view of the facts described above, the Commission expresses its concern over the closure of civic space in Cuba, manifested in the persistence of repressive acts and harassment by state agents against those who denounce and defend human rights. The Commission reiterates the absence of the minimum conditions required for the free exercise to defend human rights.

59. The IACHR reiterates its call to the State to adopt effective measures to guarantee and protect the rights of human rights defenders, activists, and other social leaders. In this regard, the Commission urges the Cuban State to cease all actions that arbitrarily interfere with the exercise of human rights related to opportunities for citizens to participate in society ("civic space") and to guarantee an environment conducive to the defense of human rights.

C. Persons deprived of liberty

60. The Commission appreciates the release of 553 persons deprived of their liberty, while taking note of the questions raised about this measure. In addition, it reiterates its concern about the absence of updated official data on persons incarcerated in Cuban prisons, the high rate of incarceration, the deplorable conditions in which prisoners are held, and the particularly harsh impact they have on detainees with psychosocial disabilities. Another matter of concern is the persistence of acts of torture and ill-treatment, which disproportionately affects persons detained for political reasons, along with the use of forced labor.

61. In particular, according to available information, on January 14, following an agreement with the Holy See, Cuba announced the "gradual release" of incarcerated persons through penitentiary "benefits"

[68] ADN Cuba, Policía política mantiene sitada la vivienda de las activistas Yamilka Lafita y Daniela Peral (Political police keep the home of activists Yamilka Lafita and Daniela Peral under siege), April 16, 2025; Diario de Cuba, El régimen impide a activistas asistir a la misa por el niño Damir Ortiz realizada en La Habana (Regime prevents activist from attending mass conmemorating child Damir Ortiz in Havana), April 10, 2025.

[69] Diario de Cuba, La Habana añade nuevos nombres a su lista de supuestos 'terroristas' y elimina otros sin explicaciones (Havana adds new names to its list of alleged 'terrorists' and removes others without explanation), July 10, 2025; Televisión Avileña, Actualiza Cuba lista de personas y entidades buscadas por vínculos con el terrorismo (Cuba updates list of persons and entities wanted for ties to terrorism), July 10, 2025.

[70] Diario de Cuba, Justificación del 'exterminio' por pensar diferente: activistas sobre la lista de supuestos terroristas de La Habana (Justification of 'extermination' for thinking differently: activists on Havana's list of alleged terrorists), July 14, 2025.

[71] IACHR, Resolution 9/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 393-24, Luis Wilber Aguilar Bravo Rivera and family regarding Cuba, January 30, 2025

[72] IACHR, Resolution 28/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 671-23, Mario Alberto Hernández Leyva regarding Cuba, March 27, 2025.

that would allow sentences to be served outside prison.[73] In that connection, the IACHR welcomed the release from prison of at least 60 persons deprived of liberty for political reasons, some of whom are beneficiaries of precautionary measures, and urged the State to inform them about the criminal proceedings and to respect their rights, including their stay in the country.[74]

62. On March 10, 2025, according to Prisoners Defenders, the process concluded with the release of 553 prisoners, 323 of whom were detained for common crimes and 230 for political reasons. As a result, the released persons began to serve their sentences outside prison under probation or "extrapenal license." In this regard, the Commission takes note of the concerns of civil society regarding the failure to release hundreds of political detainees who remain in prison.[75] Likewise, the IACHR is concerned about the subjection of released persons to various conditions that include, inter alia, being subjected to wiretapping and searches, restrictions on freedom of expression and human rights advocacy work, and the ban on their leaving the city they live in; non-compliance with these conditions would result in the revocation of the benefit and return to prison.[76] On this point, the Commission was informed that these people are reportedly subject to constant threats and summons by State security agents and courts.[77]

63. With regard to the absence of updated official data and the high rate of incarceration, the Commission once again regrets that the Cuban State persists in its refusal to publish official data on persons detained in the country. The most recent official data were published in 2012, at which time 57,337 persons were detained in the country's prisons.[78] However, this figure contrasts with civil society's more recently updated figure, which indicates that, as of March 30, 2021, there were close to 100,000 people deprived of their liberty.[79] Given that the latest figure for the number of inhabitants of the country in 2024 is 10,979,783, Cuba would be one of the two countries with the highest prison population per capita worldwide, with 910 persons deprived of liberty per 100,000 inhabitants.[80]

64. Regarding prison conditions, the IACHR once again expresses its concern about the deplorable conditions in prisons, that, between January and June 2025, caused the death of at least 24 people in state

[73] Prisoners Defenders, 7 new political prisoners in February further expose the fraud on 230 draconian excarcellations, March 13, 2025; also, see: ADN Cuba, Régimen cubano anuncia el fin del proceso de excarcelación de 553 presos en menos de dos meses (Cuban regime announces the end of the process of releasing 553 prisoners in less than two months), March 10, 2025.

[74] IACHR [@IACHR], (Jan. 21, 2025), #IACHR and its @RELE_CIDH welcome the release of at least 60 people deprived of liberty for political reasons [X], https://x.com/CIDH/status/1881724797089944059.

[75] On this matter, see the section on democratic institutionality; also, see: Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, OCDH califica de injusto e incompleto el proceso de excarcelaciones en Cuba al excluir al menos a 760 presos políticos y darse ya por finalizado (OCDH calls Cuba's release process unjust and incomplete as it excludes at least 760 political prisoners and is already considered completed), March 11, 2025; and Prisoners Defenders, 7 new political prisoners in February further expose the fraud on 230 draconian excarcellations, March 13, 2025.

[76] Prisoners Defenders, 7 new political prisoners in February further expose the fraud on 230 draconian excarcellations, March 13, 2025.

[77] IACHR, Public Hearing "Situación de la privación arbitraria de libertad por motivos políticos (Situation of Arbitrary Deprivation of Liberty for Political Reasons)," 192nd regular session, March 4, 2025.

[78] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Cuba",2021, par. 121; IACHR, 2021 Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Cuba",2022, par. 150; and IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV.B "Cuba", 2023, par. 60; and IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV.B "Cuba", 2024, par. 58.

[79] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Cuba",2021, par. 121; IACHR, 2021 Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Cuba",2022, par. 150; and IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV.B "Cuba", 2023, par. 60; further, see: Cuban Observatory of Human Rights, OCDH denuncia situación del Covid-19 en cárceles de Camagüey (Cuba) y la nula transparencia del gobierno en la gestión de la pandemia (OCDH denounces the situation of Covid-19 in prisons in Camagüey (Cuba) and the lack of government transparency in the management of the pandemic), March 30, 2021.

[80] The calculation was made by the IACHR based on the figures indicated. On this, see: IACHR, 2021 Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Cuba",2021, par. 121; IACHR, 2021 Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Cuba",2022, par. 150; IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV.B "Cuba", 2023, par. 60; World Bank, Data for Cuba, Population, total., 2025; and Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, OCDH denuncia situación del Covid-19 en cárceles de Camagüey (Cuba) y la nula transparencia del gobierno en la gestión de la pandemia (OCDH denounces the situation of Covid-19 in prisons in Camagüey (Cuba) and the lack of government transparency in the management of the pandemic), March 30, 2021; also, see: World Prison Brief, Highest to Lowest - Prison Population Rate, 2025.

custody,[81] mainly due to malnutrition and lack of timely medical attention.[82] According to available data, these conditions are characterized by severe overcrowding -although the exact percentage is unknown-, inadequate food, lack of water, poor or denied medical care, and deplorable hygiene that contributes to the spread of contagious diseases such as tuberculosis.[83] As for food, the available data indicate that it is of poor quality, scarce, and monotonous, in addition to restrictions on storing food sent by families. Some of these issues are reportedly linked to the systematic theft of food supplies by prison personnel, who either sell it or use it to feed pigs. In addition, political detainees are constantly faced with the arbitrary suspension of family visits, prolonged solitary confinement, or complete prohibition of contact with family members, denial of the possibility of less harsh prison conditions, and the lack of adequate medical care.[84]

65. Likewise, as part of a hearing held during its 192nd session, the Commission was informed of the particularly harsh impact of prison conditions faced by persons with psychosocial disabilities in Cuba. On this point, civil society pointed out that this population was reportedly subjected to institutional neglect, mistreatment, psychological torture, lack of medical treatment, and the withdrawal of their psychiatric medication, which exacerbated their mental health condition and even increased the risk of suicide.[85]

66. Based on the foregoing, the Commission recalls that overcrowding of persons deprived of their liberty may in itself constitute a form of cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment.[86] In addition, it once again reminds Cuba of its duty to ensure that persons deprived of liberty are held in conditions compatible with their human dignity. These include, among others, access to safe drinking water, sufficient and proper food, and appropriate hygienic conditions.[87] In addition, it is part of this obligation to provide timely, adequate, and specialized health care to persons in its custody, as well as to make the required adjustments for the treatment of persons with disabilities.[88]

67. On the other hand, the IACHR condemns the repeated acts of ill-treatment and torture in Cuban prisons, which reportedly disproportionately affect persons deprived of their liberty for political reasons. The Commission, through a pronouncement of August 7, 2025, expressed its concern about the situation of political detainees José Daniel Ferrer García and Félix Navarro Rodríguez, who were reportedly facing various forms of mistreatment.[89] In particular, the available data show physical violence, beatings of handcuffed persons, prolonged isolation without medical supervision, extreme confinement in "punishment cells" without ventilation or natural light, and lack of human contact as a mechanism of psychological torture.

[81] Centro de Documentación de Prisiones Cubanas, 24 inmates die and 160 complaints of torture recorded, June 26, 2025; also see: Diario de Cuba, 24 muertes bajo custodia y 160 denuncias de tortura en cárceles de Cuba en solo medio año (24 deaths in custody and 160 complaints of torture in Cuban prisons in only half a year), June 26, 2025; and ADN Cuba, muere otro recluso de la prisión de boniato, en santiago de cuba (Another inmate dies in Boniato prison, in Santiago de Cuba), March 13, 2025.

[82] Cubanet, Hambruna, torturas y represión: (Famine, torture and repression): 67 denuncias desde cárceles cubanas en marzo (67 complaints from Cuban prisons in March), April 9, 2025; also, see: Centro de Documentación de Prisiones Cubanas, 24 reclusos mueren y se registran 160 denuncias de tortura (24 inmates die and 160 complaints of torture are recorded), June 26, 2025.

[83] Cubanet, Hambruna, torturas y represión: (Famine, torture and repression): 67 complaints from Cuban prisons in March, April 9, 2025; and Cubalex, Cuba at UN: state claims to "comply" with Mandela rules while hiding prison violations, June 13, 2025; similarly, see: IACHR, Public Hearing "Cuba: Rights of persons deprived of liberty with psychosocial disabilities", 192nd regular session, March 3, 2025.

[84] Cubanet, Hambruna, torturas y represión: (Famine, torture and repression): 67 complaints from Cuban prisons in March, April 9, 2025; and Cubalex, Cuba at UN: state claims to "comply" with Mandela rules while hiding prison violations, June 13, 2025.

[85] IACHR, Public Hearing "Cuba: Rights of persons deprived of liberty with psychosocial disabilities", 192nd regular session, March 3, 2025.

[86] IACHR, Report on the Use of Pretrial Detention in the Americas, December 30, 2013, par. 290

[87] IACHR, Report on the Human Rights of Persons Deprived of Liberty in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, adopted on December 31, 2011, par. 432

[88] On this, see: I/A Court H.R., Case Chinchilla Sandoval-Reyes et al. v. Guatemala. Preliminary objection, merits, reparations, and costs. Judgment of February 29, 2016, Series C No. 312, paras. 171-72 and 208-215.

[89] IACHR [@CIDH] (August 7, 2025).#Cuba #IACHR expresses concern about the situation of José Daniel Ferrer García and Félix Navarro Rodríguez, who remain detained and are beneficiaries of precautionary measures [X], https://x.com/CIDH/status/1953547110936134039.

What is more, persons who attempt to denounce these violations of their rights are reportedly arbitrarily transferred to other centers in retaliation or threatened with new criminal proceedings.[90]

68. As the Commission was informed during a public hearing, between 2022 and February 28, 2025, civil society documented at least 255 acts of repression against detainees. At least 79 of those acts correspond to denial of (or deficient) medical attention, 47 to physical or psychological violence, and 22 to the use of punishment cells. These practices have reportedly led to an increase in suicide attempts, although there is a lack of statistical data due to the lack of official information.[91] As regard denunciations in 2025, between January and June, at least 160 complaints of ill-treatment were reported in 43 prisons. Of the total, 104 involved denials of medical care, 45 involved physical torture, and 11 involved psycho-emotional torture; and 56 victims were political detainees.[92]

69. In addition, the IACHR expresses its concern about the subjection of nearly 60,000 persons deprived of liberty or sentenced to alternative regimes to forced labor practices for the production of products, especially charcoal and cigars. According to Prisoners Defenders, these practices are characterized by: coercion; lack of a contract; a 63-hour work week; lack of tools, training, and protection; either no or merely symbolic wages; and, in some cases, physical violence, including sexual violence against women. In addition, the number of Afro-Cuban victims of such treatment is reportedly particularly high.[93]

70. In light of the above, the Commission reiterates its condemnation of all forms of torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment, and recalls that these acts must be absolutely prevented and prohibited under any circumstances.[94]

D. Freedom of expression

1. Criminalization, threats, and intimidation against journalists

71. In 2025, the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression (SRFOE) of the IACHR continued to record systematic repression against journalists and press workers in Cuba. The most frequent forms of repression included arbitrary detentions, as one of the most frequent forms of harassment during the first half of the year; as well as illegal summons by State Security or Police agents, threats, interrogations, violations of due process, selective or massive police operations, surveillance and monitoring, restrictions on movement, as well as obstructions to journalistic coverage during events of public interest.[95] These practices have generated an increasingly hostile environment for the free and safe practice of journalism on the island and have prompted the exile of numerous journalists.

[90] On this, see: IACHR, Public Hearing "Cuba: Rights of persons deprived of liberty with psychosocial disabilities", 192nd regular session, March 3, 2025; Cubalex, Cuba en ONU: el estado asegura "cumplir" las reglas mandela mientras oculta las violaciones en las cárceles (Cuba at the UN: the state claims to "comply" with Mandela rules while hiding violations in prisons), June 13, 2025; and Cubanet, Hambruna, torturas y represión: (Famine, torture and repression): 67 denuncias desde cárceles cubanas en marzo (67 complaints from Cuban prisons in March), April 9, 2025; also, see: https://fundaciondemocraciapanamericana.org/wp-content/uploads/2025/09/Reporte-de-Victimas-Agosto-2025.pdf, August 2025.

[91] IACHR, Public Hearing "Cuba: Rights of persons deprived of liberty with psychosocial disabilities", 192nd regular session, March 3, 2025.

[92] Centro de Documentación de Prisiones Cubanas, 24 reclusos mueren y se registran 160 denuncias de tortura (24 inmates die and 160 complaints of torture recorded), June 26, 2025; also see: Diario de Cuba, 24 muertes bajo custodia y 160 denuncias de tortura en cárceles de Cuba en solo medio año (24 deaths in custody and 160 allegations of torture in Cuban prisons in just half a year), June 26, 2025.

[93] Prisoners Defenders, Cuba's Prison Business: 60,000 prisoners are used as slave labor, September 2025.

[94] IACHR, Report on the Human Rights of Persons Deprived of Liberty in the Americas, paras. 343 and 350.

[95] Article 19 MX-CA, Análisis trimestral sobre el estado de la libertad de expresión en Centroamérica y el Caribe (enero a marzo de 2025) (Quarterly analysis on the state of freedom of expression in Central America and the Caribbean (January to March 2025)), May 8, 2025; Article 19 MX-CA, Análisis trimestral sobre el estado de la libertad de expresión en Centroamérica y el Caribe (abril a junio de 2025) (Quarterly analysis on the state of freedom of expression in Central America and the Caribbean (April to June 2025)), 2025; Article 19 MX-CA, Resonancia y disputa: espacio cívico en Cuba, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua y El Salvador (Resonance and dispute: civic space in Cuba, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador), 2025; Cubalex, Tendencias y patrones de represión en Cuba: primer semestre de 2025 (Trends and patterns of repression in Cuba: first half of 2025); August 2025.

72. The Rapporteurship received several reports of arbitrary arrests of journalists. In particular, it learned of the arrest of José Gabriel Barrenechea, journalist and contributor to the media 14yMedio, arrested on November 8, 2024 on charges of "public disorder" for his participation in the protests against the blackouts in Encrucijada, Villa Clara. According to available reports, Barrenechea faces between three and eight years in prison. During his imprisonment, he reportedly suffered from various illnesses.[96] The trial against him, along with that of five other participants in the protests, was held on September 24, 2025 and had reached the sentencing stage.[97]

73. On January 24, 2025, Yadiel Hernández, an independent journalist for 14yMedio, was arrested while investigating a drug trafficking network in a high school in Matanzas. According to available reports, Hernández was charged with the alleged crime of "propaganda against the constitutional order" and subsequently transferred to a State Security barracks in Versalles, Matanzas, where he was interrogated.[98] He remained there for almost a month before being transferred to the Combinado del Sur prison. After several months of imprisonment, the Rapporteurship learned of his release on April 28, 2025.[99]

74. Also, on May 25, 2025, there were reports of the arbitrary arrest of journalist Carlos Milanés, an independent contributor to ADN Cuba, Cubanet, and Radio Martí. According to reports in the public domain, the arrest occurred when Milanés was in front of his sister's house in Havana and noticed a patrol car and a State Security motorcycle approaching. He was reportedly violently arrested and placed in a vehicle, where he was held for at least 20 minutes while being questioned about his relationship with activists of UNPACU and his knowledge of possible demonstrations by the group. Subsequently, he was allegedly taken to the dungeon of the Dragones Police Unit, where he was detained for almost four hours. In addition, there have been reports of threats, as well as physical and verbal aggressions against him and his family, designed to hinder his journalistic work. Milanés was also reportedly summoned for questioning about his "social behavior," according to reports.[100]

75. On June 29, 2025, the arbitrary detention of journalist Henry Constantín Ferreiro, regional vice-president of the Inter American Press Association (IAPA) and director of La Hora de Cuba, was reported in [96] Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ), 2 freelance journalists arrested amid Cuba's ongoing repression of independent press, April 17, 2025; Article 19 MX-CA, Libertad para Yadiel Hernández y José Gabriel Barrenechea, colaboradores de 14ymedio (Freedom for Yadiel Hernández and José Gabriel Barrenechea, contributors to 14ymedio), April 29, 2025; Article 19-MX-CA, José Gabriel Barrenechea cumple seis meses sin libertad (José Gabriel Barrenechea has so far completed 6 months in prison), May 8, 2025.

[97] Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, Ya tiene fecha el juicio político contra el intelectual José Gabriel Barrenechea Chávez (Date set for political trial of intellectual José Gabriel Barrenechea Chávez), September 16, 2025; Martí, Familiares esperan veredicto tras polémico juicio por protestas pacíficas en Encrucijada (Next of kin await verdict after questionable trial for protesting peacefully in Encrucijada), September 25, 2025; ADN Cuba, Queda concluso para sentencia el juicio contra José Gabriel Barrenechea (Trial against José Gabriel Barrenechea ready for sentencing stage), September 25, 2025; Cubanet, Liberan a uno de los acusados por la protesta de Encrucijada (One of the accused for the Encrucijada protest has been released). José Gabriel Barrenechea remains in prison, September 26, 2025.

[98] 14ymedio.com, Un reportero de '14ymedio' en prisión por investigar el tráfico de drogas en una escuela de Matanzas ('14ymedio' reporter in prison for investigating drug trafficking in Matanzas school), 10 April 2025; Diario de Cuba, Un periodista de '14 y medio' que investigaba un caso de drogas, acusado de 'propaganda contra el orden constitucional', ('14 y medio' journalist investigating drug case accused of 'propaganda against constitutional order'), 11 April 2025; ADN Cuba, Periodista independiente se encuentra preso en el Combinado del Sur (Independent journalist is imprisoned in Combinado del Sur), 10 April 2025; Article 19 MX-CA, Libertad para Yadiel Hernández y José Gabriel Barrenechea, colaboradores de 14ymedio (Freedom for Yadiel Hernández and José Gabriel Barrenechea, 14ymedio collaborators), 29 April 2025.

[99] Cuban Institute for Freedom of Expression and the Press (ICLEP), Liberan a periodista independiente Yadiel Hernández luego de tres meses encarcelado en Matanzas (Independent journalist Yadiel Hernández released after three months in prison in Matanzas), May 5, 2025; 14yMedio, Liberan sin cargos al reportero de '14ymedio' Yadiel Hernández luego de tres meses encarcelado ('14ymedio' rapporteur Yadiel Hernández released without charges after three months in prison), April 30, 2025.

[100] ADN Cuba, Detienen a reportero de ADN Cuba Carlos Milanés (ADN Cuba, reporter Carlos Milanés arrested), 27 May 2025; Article 19 MX-CA, Detienen al periodista independiente Carlos Milanes en Cuba (Independent journalist Carlos Milanés arrested in Cuba), 2 June 2025; Voces del Sur, Detienen con violencia al periodista independiente Carlos Milanés por presuntos vínculos con la UNPACU, (Independent journalist Carlos Milanés violently arrested for alleged ties to UNPACU)22 July 2025; ICLEP, Detienen con violencia al periodista independiente Carlos Milanés por presuntos vínculos con la UNPACU (Independent journalist Carlos Milanés violently arrested for alleged ties to UNPACU), 28 May 2025.

the city of Camagüey.[101] According to available information, Constantín was transferred to the State Security Operations Department, known as Villa María Luisa, and released after being detained for four days.[102] He was charged with the crime of contempt, allegedly in connection with a May 2025 publication in which he denounced the conduct of a State Security agent. After his release, Constantin said: "I will face threats in the future," but he asserted: "I plan to continue in Cuba, exercising my freedom of expression for a better Cuba in which we are all free."[103]

76. On July 26, 2025, independent journalist and activist Angel Cuza Alfonso was reportedly arbitrarily detained in Havana by State Security, accused of possessing an empty bullet casing to be used as a souvenir.[104] According to reports, Cuza Alfonso clarified that the projectile had been in his possession for more than 17 years and had no criminal purpose. The Cuban Observatory for Human Rights (for its Spanish acronym OCDH) described the detention as arbitrary and without legal grounds, and in an official statement pointed out that "the mere possession of an inert object, without context of threat or use, cannot be criminalized."[105]

77. In addition to these reports, there are various forms of aggression against the independent press, including threats, intimidation, surveillance, harassment, and judicial harassment. In this context, it was reported that in April 2025, journalist Carlos Michael Morales was summoned by the Municipal Court of Caibarién, together with his employer.[106] According to the information available, Morales did not attend the summons, but his employer showed up and was informed that his employment contract was not legally valid. The journalist also publicly denounced that his sanction would be extended by an additional five months of hard labor.[107] In this regard, the Foundation for Pan American Democracy has denounced the lack of response from the judicial authorities to the request for rectification of the amount and date of extinction of the sanction, as well as alleged maneuvers by the Caibarién Execution Court to prolong the sentence. The organization also reported attempts to dismiss the work contracts submitted by the journalist as part of his compliance with the

[101] Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression (SRFOE), [@RELE_CIDH], (June 30, 2025), SRFOE condemns detention of journalist Henry Constantín, by State security, accused of contempt. The Office urges their immediate release and that their living conditions, health and integrity be respected, X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1939817291769946493.

[102] Inter American Press Association (IAPA), [@sip_oficial], (June 30, 2025), Condenamos la detención de Henry Constantín en #Cuba, regional vice president of the IAPA and director of La Hora de Cuba, X, https://x.com/sip_oficial/status/1939806997773189526?t=0YvfePAfORKz0rZIiFOsPw&s=08; IAPA, IAPA condemns detention of journalist in Cuba and calls for his immediate release, July 1, 2025; 14ymedio.com, Detenido el periodista Henry Constantín en la ciudad de Camagüey, June 30, 2025; Ciber Cuba, Periodista Henry Constantin detenido y acusado de desacato por denunciar a represor del MININT (Journalist Henry Constantin arrested and accused of contempt for denouncing MININT oppressor), June 30, 2025; 14ymedio.com, Released after four days in a dungeon, Henry Constantin reaffirms his intention to stay in Cuba, 4 July 2025; ICLEP, Independent journalist Henry Constantin detained and charged with contempt for denouncing a State Security agent on the Internet, 30 June 2025; CiberCuba, Policía a Henry Constantín durante detención en Camagüey: (Police arrest Henry Constantin during detention in Camaguey,)No sabes el pingal de pesos que pagan por andar detrás de gente como tú" ("You can't imagine how much they pay to go after people like you,") June 30, 2025.

[103] Diario de Cuba, Liberado Henry Constantin (Henry Constantin Released) : 'Pienso seguir en Cuba ejerciendo mi libertad de expresión' ('I plan to continue in Cuba exercising my freedom of expression'), July 4, 2025.

[104] Article 19 MX-CA, Detienen arbitrariamente al periodista y activista cubano Ángel Cuza (Cuban journalist and activist Ángel Cuza arbitrarily arrested), 31 July 2025; Cubanet, Trasladan al Combinado del Este al reportero cubano Ángel Cuza Castillo por portar un amuleto (Cuban reporter Ángel Cuza Castillo taken to Combinado del Este carrying a souvenir), 31 July 2025; Martí Noticias, OCDH denuncia detención arbitraria de activista cubano Ángel Cuza Alfonso (OCDH denounces arbitrary arrest Cuban activist Ángel Cuza Alfonso), 4 August 2025; Martí Noticias ,"Me despido por siempre", escribe activista desde prisión de máxima seguridad en La Habana ("I say goodbye forever", activist writes from maximum security prison in Havana), 7 August 2025.

[105] Cubanet, "No me dejen solo": ("Don't leave me alone":) Ángel Cuza denuncia fabricación de cargos en su contra (Angel Cuza denounces fabrication of charges against him), August 7, 2025.

[106] Martí Noticias, "Me quieren callar de cualquier forma": alargan sanción a periodista independiente ("They want to shut me up in any way they can": they extend independent journalist's sentence), 22 April 2025; Diario de Cuba, El periodista independiente Carlos Michael Morales recibe una nueva citación judicial: (Independent journalist Carlos Michael Morales receives another writ of summons:)'Un procedimiento encaminado a hostigarme' ('A proceeding aimed at harassing me'), April 17, 2025.

[107] ADN Cuba, "Voy a tomar medidas radicales": extender sanción a periodista independiente Carlos Michael Morales (I am going to take extreme measures: extend punishment of independent journalist Carlos Michael Morales), April 23, 2025; Carlos Michael Morales, [@CarlosLibreCuba], (21 April 2025), En el día de hoy las fuerzas represoras de la seguridad del estado y el tribunal, pretenden alargar mi sanción cinco meses más. (Today State security oppressors and the court intend to extend my sentence by five more months) Hecho que nunca aceptaré y estoy dispuesto a todo aunque en esto me vaya la vida (Something that I will never accept and I am willing to do anything even if it costs me my life), X, https://x.com/CarlosLibreCuba/status/1914412753512509862.

sanction.[108] As documented in this Office's previous annual report, Morales was sentenced in May 2024 to eight months of imprisonment for the alleged crime of "disobedience", a sentence that was later replaced by hard labor.[109]

78. There were also reports of the summons of independent journalist Vladimir Turró Páez, contributor to CubaNet, to appear before the Municipal Court. The notification was reportedly delivered to his home by an official who was allegedly unable to specify the reason for the summons or to clarify whether Turró Páez was listed as a defendant or witness. The journalist stated that he has not been formally notified of any investigation or criminal proceedings against him. In his public complaint, he stated: "I have not committed any crime, the only thing I know how to do is to inform. I did not receive that summons, and I will not appear in any court because I do not owe anything to justice." He also pointed out that this situation is part of a pattern of harassment aimed at forcing independent journalists to abandon their work and generating a chilling effect.[110]

79. SRFOE continues to record acts of harassment, threats, and intimidation against independent journalist Camila Acosta, a contributor to CubaNet and correspondent of the Spanish ABC newspaper.[111] In April 2025, Acosta reported being intercepted by two agents of the Ministry of the Interior, dressed in civilian clothes, while she was making a live broadcast in Havana's El Vedado neighborhood. According to reports, the agents refused to identify themselves and demanded that the journalist show them her documents.[112] Likewise, on May 20, 2025, in connection with Cuba's Independence Day, Acosta reported surveillance in the vicinity of her home.[113] Later that year, in August, on the occasion of the commemoration of the 31st anniversary of the Maleconazo, she again reported seeing State Security agents dressed in civilian clothes in front of her residence.[114] Other journalists reportedly experienced similar acts of hostility: Mabel Páez, director of El Majadero de Artemisa; Yasser Toledo Ventura, former director of Páginas Villareñas; Yunia Figueredo, director of Amanecer Habanero, and her husband, journalist Frank Correa.[115]

80. It was also learned that threats against Adelth Bonne Gamboa, an independent journalist and collaborator of the media outlet CubaNet, were made through the social network Facebook. According to available information, the messages contained threats against his life if he did not cease his critical publications on the social, economic, and political crisis in Cuba. In particular, the threats included phrases such as: "Hey, stop that...stop...we are following you and we would be very sorry if you had an accident" and "Homeland or Death. Stop it now." Based on the information to which this Office had access, the sources of these threats were allegedly agents of the Ministry of the Interior (for its Spanish acronym MININT).[116]

---

[108] Martí News, Fundación para la Democracia Panamericana alerta sobre riesgos para la vida de un preso político en Cuba (Foundation for Pan American Democracy warns about risks to the life of a political prisoner in Cuba), September 15, 2025.

[109] Martí Noticias, "Me quieren callar de cualquier forma": alargan sanción a periodista independiente ("They want to shut me up in any way they can": they extend independent journalist's sentence), April 22, 2025; IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Annual Report of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression (SRFOE), OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 39, March 3, 2025, par. 453.

[110] Cubanet, Periodista de 'CubaNet' Vladimir Turró Páez denuncia intento de citación judicial ('CubaNet' journalist Vladimir Turró Páez denounces attempted subpoena), May 5, 2025; Martí Noticias, "No he cometido delito alguno", periodista anuncia que no acatará citación de tribunal de Arroyo Naranjo ("I have not committed any crime", journalist announces that he will not respond to subpoena by a Arrollo Naranjo court), May 6, 2025.

[111] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Annual Report of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II/ Doc. 39, March 3, 2025, par. 451.

[112] ICLEP, Periodista Camila Acosta acosada por agentes del MININT durante la procesión de viernes santo (Journalist Camila Acosta harassed by MININT agents during Good Friday procession), 19 April 2025; Cubanet, Agentes del MININT interrumpen transmisión en vivo de la periodista Camila Acosta (MININT agents interrupt live broadcast of journalist Camila Acosta), 18 April 2025;

[113] Article 19 MX-CA, La Seguridad del Estado vigila en su vivienda a la periodista independiente, Camila Acosta (State Security surveys independent journalist Camila Acosta at her home), May 22, 2025.

[114] Article 19 MX-CA, Persiste el hostigamiento en contra de la periodista Camila Acosta (Harrasment of journalist Camila Acosta continues), August 6, 2025; CiberCuba, Periodista denuncia cerco de la Seguridad del Estado en La Habana y muestra fotos de sus represores (Journalist denounces survaylance by state security in Havana and shows photos of the oppressors), September 8, 2025.

[115] Voces del Sur, ICLEP denuncia escalada represiva del régimen cubano en el cuarto aniversario del 11J (ICLEP denounces stepped-up repression by the Cuban regime on the fourth anniversary of 11J), July 22, 2025.

[116] ICLEP, Colaborador de la prensa independiente Adelth Bonne Gamboa denuncia acoso y amenazas de partidarios del régimen en redes sociales (Independent press contributor Adelth Bonne Gamboa denounces harassment and threats from regime supporters on social networks), 17 April 2025; Article 19 MX-CA, Periodista independiente y activista de Cuba reciben amenazas de muerte en redes sociales, (Independent journalist and Cuba activist receive death threats on social networks,) 18 April 2025; Cubanet, "Estoy en peligro":

81. The Office of the Special Rapporteur notes with concern that this state of affairs has been exacerbated by cuts in funding for journalism in and about the island, which has jeopardized the sustainability of several independent media outlets that have played a key role in the face of government censorship. The affected media outlets include Cubanet, Diario de Cuba, Radio, and TV Martí, among others.[117] According to reports in the public domain, for decades, Radio Martí' s radio broadcasts have provided an alternative source of information for the Cuban population, despite the fact that the station has been subject to systematic interference and blockades by the State.[118]

82. The Office of the Special Rapporteur reiterates that journalism is the primary and principal manifestation of freedom of expression, since it is journalists and the media that keep society informed on matters of public interest and contribute to the existence of broad, robust, and pluralistic public debate.[119] For this reason, States have the obligation to create the conditions for journalists to freely, independently, and safely go about their work.[120]

83. According to Principle 9 of the Declaration of Principles: "the murder, kidnapping, intimidation of and/or threats to social communicators, as well as the material destruction of communications media violate the fundamental rights of individuals and strongly restrict freedom of expression. It is the duty of the state to prevent and investigate such occurrences, to punish their perpetrators and to ensure that victims receive due compensation."[121] The IACHR and its Special Rapporteurship have considered that these kinds of actions are intended to restrict or hinder the work of journalists who investigate violations, abuses, irregularities, or illicit acts of any kind, whether carried out by public officials or private individuals.[122]

84. As already stated, SRFOE considers it imperative that the State of Cuba refrains from engaging in threats, intimidation, and criminalization, and guarantees the exercise of the right to freedom of the press through the implementation of measures for the prevention, protection, and investigation of attacks against journalists and the media.[123]

2. Exile of journalists

85. As in previous years, the Office of the Special Rapporteur is extremely concerned that forced exile has become one of the main avenues for journalists and communicators in the face of the Government's escalating repression against the independent press in Cuba. According to civil society organizations, in recent years the forced departure from the country of professionals linked to media outlets such as El Estornudo, Periodismo de Barrio, CubaNet and El Toque[124] has been well documented. Most of them had reportedly been

("I am in danger":) Activista y colaborador de CubaNet Adelth Bonne denuncia amenazas (Activist and CubaNet contributor Adelth Bonne denounces threats), April 16, 2025.

[117] El Nuevo Herald, Suspensión de ayuda de EEUU amenaza supervivencia de periodismo independiente cubano (Suspension of U.S. aid threatens survival of Cuban independent journalism), February 28, 2025; Cubita Now, Marco Rubio suspende ayuda a CubaNet, afectando el periodismo independiente en Cuba (Marco Rubio suspends aid to CubaNet, affecting independent journalism in Cuba), March 5, 2025; CiberCuba, Marco Rubio retira los fondos de EE.UU. a CubaNet (Marco Rubio withdraws U.S. funding to CubaNet), March 4, 2025.

[118] 14yMedio, Paralizan las operaciones de Radio y Televisión Martí, sus empleados quedan bajo licencia administrativa (Martí Radio and Television operations shut down; employees placed on administrative leave), March 15, 2025; Cibercuba, Orden de Trump desmantela agencia que administra Radio y TV Martí (Trump order dismantles agency that administers Martí Radio and Television): "No tiene salvación," ("There is nothing that can be done")March 16, 2025; 14yMedio, Radio Martí llama a una parte de su personal a regresar a sus puestos de trabajo (Martí Radio calls part of its staff to return to their jobs), March 26, 2025.

[119] I/A Court H/R. Advisory Opinion OC-5/85 of November 13, 1985, Compulsory Membership in an Association Prescribed by Law for "the Practice of Journalism (Articles 13 and 29 American Convention on Human Rights), par. 71; IACHR, Background and Interpretation of the Declaration of Principles, not dated.

[120] IACHR, SRFOE, The Inter-American Legal Framework regarding the Right to Freedom of Expression, OEA Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/25 par. 8.

[121] IACHR, SRFOE, Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression, 2000.

[122] IACHR, Background and Interpretation of the Declaration of Principles, not dated.

[123] IACHR, Annual Report 2022, Annual Report of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II/ Doc. 50, March 6, 2023, par. 457.

[124] Reporters Without Borders (RSF), El exilio forzado del periodista José Luis Tan Estrada, símbolo de la creciente represión de la prensa en Cuba (The forced exile of journalist José Luis Tan Estrada, a symbol of the growing repression of the press in Cuba), January 16, 2025.

subjected to reprisals including systematic surveillance, direct threats, and arbitrary arrests. Thus, the report "Voces Desplazadas: (Displaced Voices:) Radiografía del exilio periodístico latinoamericano 2018-2024" (X-ray of journalists exiled in Latin America"), prepared by civil society organizations, identified Cuba as one of the countries with the highest number of journalists in exile in the region. The report also warns that the situation has been exacerbated by multiple factors, including the elimination of humanitarian parole by the United States.[125] Likewise, the Office of the Special Rapporteur notes with concern the intensification of transnational repression against exiled journalists, as well as the absence of guarantees for the full exercise of their rights in the receiving States.

86. For example, on January 2, 2025, SRFOE learned of journalist José Luis Tan Estrada's decision to leave Cuba.[126] Tan Estrada, who contributed to independent media such as La Hora de Cuba, Diario de Cuba, YucaByte, and Martí Noticias, made this decision after years of harassment and threats from Cuban authorities. According to public reports, the journalist had reportedly been arrested on several occasions and accused of spreading false information.[127] On February 15, 2025, new reports indicated that, while in Guyana, Tan Estrada received direct threats, some of them through social networks. In one of the messages, he was explicitly warned: "Don't keep talking a lot of shit because we know where you are." In response, the journalist held the Cuban State responsible for any harm he might suffer.[128]

87. On March 29, 2025, the Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) expressed its concern over the imminent risk of deportation of Cuban independent journalist and political prisoner Lázaro Yuri Valle Roca, who is reportedly residing in the United States under humanitarian parole.[129] According to reports in the public domain, Valle Roca and his wife, Eralidis Frómeta, received letters from the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) notifying them that they must leave the country by April 25 or face expedited removal proceedings.[130] As documented in this Office's previous Annual Report, Valle Roca arrived in the United States in June 2024, after obtaining humanitarian parole.[131] On that occasion, he denounced that his departure from Cuba had been [125] LatAm Journalism Review, More than 900 Latin American journalists estimated to be remaking their lives and jobs in exile, September 9, 2025; Article 19 MX-CA, Análisis trimestral sobre el estado de la libertad de expresión en Centroamérica y el Caribe (enero a marzo de 2025) (Quarterly analysis on the state of freedom of expression in Central America and the Caribbean (January to March 2025)), May 8, 2025.

[126] Martí, Periodista independiente José Luis Tan Estrada sale de Cuba: (Independent journalist José Luis Tan Estrada leaves Cuba:)La Seguridad del Estado me obligó (State Security forced me to), December 31, 2024, Article 19 MX-CA, "El régimen cubano me ha #exiliado", anuncia el periodista independiente cubano José Luis Tan ("The Cuban regime has #exiled me," announces Cuban independent journalist José Luis Tan), December 31, 2024.

[127] RSF, El exilio forzado del periodista José Luis Tan Estrada, símbolo de la creciente represión de la prensa en Cuba (The forced exile of journalist José Luis Tan Estrada, symbol of the growing repression of the press in Cuba), January 16, 2025; LatAm Journalism Review, Independent journalist José Luis Tan Estrada leaves Cuba: "La Seguridad del Estado me obligó," (State security forced me to) January 2, 2025; IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Annual Report of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression (SRFOE), OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 39, March 3, 2025, par. 450.

[128] CiberCuba, José Luis Tan, periodista cubano exiliado en Guyana, denuncia amenazas: (José Luis Tan, Cuban journalist exiled in Guyana, denounces threats:) "Responsabilizo al régimen", ("I hold the regime responsible"), February 15, 2025; ADN Cuba, José Luis Tan Estrada: "Responsabilizo al régimen cubano de cualquier cosa que me pueda suceder" ("I hold the Cuban regime responsible for anything that may happen to me,"), February 15, 2025.

[129] Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) Americas Program, [@CPJAmericas], (Mar. 29, 2025), @pressfreedom is alarmed to learn that exiled Cuban journalist Yuri Valle Roca and his wife have received letters from DHS advising them that they must leave the US by April 25 or risk deportation, X, https://x.com/cpjamericas/status/1906030572532592949?s=46.

[130] CiberCuba, Comité para la Protección de Periodistas alarmado tras peligro de deportación del cubano Yuri Valle Roca (Committee to Protect Journalists alarmed after danger of deportation of Cuban Yuri Valle Roca), March 29, 2025; Diario de Cuba, 'Nos quieren devolver a la muerte': ("They want to send us back to die") El periodista exiliado cubano Lázaro Yuri Valle recibe notificación de salida de EEUU (Cuban exiled journalist Lázaro Yuri Valle Valle receives notice to leave the U.S.), March 30, 2025; ADN Cuba, Notifican la cancelación de su parole al periodista y opositor cubano Lázaro Yuri Valle Roca (Cuban journalist and opposition figure Lázaro Yuri Valle Roca notified that his humanitarian parole has been cancelled), March 29, 2025; Martí, Activista exiliado Yuri Valle Roca en peligro de ser deportado a Cuba tras cancelación de parole (Exiled activist Yuri Valle Roca in danger of being deported to Cuba following cancellation of his parole), March 30, 2025.

[131] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Annual Report of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II/ Doc. 39, March 3, 2025, par. 452.

forced and warned that, should he return, he would not face imprisonment, but that his life would be in danger.[132]

88. The Office of the Special Rapporteur has considered that the forced exile of journalists constitutes a violation of at least four dimensions of the right to freedom of expression: (i) it directly affects the individual dimension of the right, by preventing journalists from safely carrying out their informative work. As inter-American jurisprudence has maintained, the practice of journalism can only be performed freely when those who exercise it are not subject to threats, physical, psychological or moral aggression, or other acts of harassment; (ii) it violates the social dimension of the right, by functioning as a silencing tool aimed at preventing certain information from reaching society; (iii) it produces an inhibiting or chilling effect, inducing self-censorship among other journalists, media, and social actors; and (iv) it undermines informational pluralism. The free circulation of ideas and news is possible only through a plurality of sources of information and respect for the media. This plurality constitutes a precondition for the effective exercise of freedom of expression and there is a state duty to guarantee it.[133]

89. The impact on information pluralism can be observed at different levels: exile limits the diversity of opinions and perspectives in public debate, creates significant gaps in the investigation and dissemination of quality information, and facilitates the predominance of official versions without any effective counterweight. This scenario creates a fertile field for government propaganda, the normalization of authoritarian discourse, and the propagation of fake news, while hindering access to accurate and verified information on matters of public interest. In some cases, it can lead to the creation of "zones of silence" or "news deserts", where the absence of independent media and information sources prevents the effective exercise of the right to freedom of expression.[134]

90. This is particularly serious in contexts of social and political crises, of rupture or alteration of the constitutional and democratic order, and of massive or systematic violations of human rights. In these situations, the work of the independent press is fundamental both for documenting and denouncing abuses of power and demanding accountability, as well as for building and preserving historical memory and forming a vigorous public opinion that contributes to democratic recovery and the reconstruction of the rule of law.[135]

91. Therefore, this Office reaffirms that States, by virtue of their obligations to respect and guarantee, must adopt specific measures to identify and counteract threats that may lead to the forced exile of journalists. As established in Inter-American jurisprudence, "States have the duty to provide measures to protect the life and integrity of journalists who are subject to this special risk due to factors such as the type of events they cover, the public interest in the information they disseminate, or the area they must access to carry out their work; this duty extends as well as to those who are subject to threats in connection with the dissemination of that information or for reporting or promoting the investigation of violations they have suffered or learned of in the exercise of their profession."[136] States must also refrain from taking actions that [132] ADN Cuba, Notifican la cancelación de su parole al periodista y opositor cubano Lázaro Yuri Valle Roca (Cuban journalist and opposition figure Lázaro Yuri Valle Roca notified that his humanitarian parole has been cancelled), March 29, 2025; Lázaro Yuri Valle Roca, [@EralidisFr13730], (March 29, 2025), Bueno hermanos amigos y seguidores como ven me sacaron de Cuba porque la dictadura me estaba matando y ahora me botan para que me acabe de matar, X, (So, friends and followers, as you can see, they got me out of Cuba because the dictatorship was killing me and now they threw me out so that it can finish the job) https://x.com/EralidisFr13730/status/1905860201221140583.

[133] IACHR, SRFOE, Exile of journalists and freedom of expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, paras. 144-147.

[134] IACHR, SRFOE, Exile of journalists and freedom of expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, para. 148.

[135] IACHR, SRFOE, Exile of journalists and freedom of expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, para. 150.

[136] IACHR, SRFOE, Exile of journalists and freedom of expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, par. 133.

could increase the risk of forced exile, which involves not only avoiding direct actions against journalists but also preventing the creation of adverse environments for freedom of expression.[137]

3. Persecution and criminalization of those who dissent or participate in public life

92. Likewise, in 2025, this Rapporteurship recorded multiple facts that demonstrate ongoing arbitrary use of the judicial system and the punitive power of the State as a tool of repression against various segments of the population.[138] Among those affected are activists, human rights defenders, political opponents, academics, as well as citizens legitimately exercising their rights to freedom of expression, peaceful assembly, and association. Criminalization continues to be one of the main repressive patterns identified, used for purposes of censorship, silencing, and social control.

93. Thus, for example, rapper and artist Fernando Almenares Rivera was arrested on December 31, 2024, in Havana by State Security agents in civilian clothes. According to the information available, he was still in custody at the time of writing this report. After his arrest, his home was reportedly searched by the police in the presence of his relatives.[139] His artistic work has been characterized by strong social criticism and public support for people detained for political reasons.

94. In April 2025, according to reports in the public domain, a new series of arbitrary detentions took place: Jorge Fernández Era (humorist); Berta Soler Fernández (leader of the Ladies in White); Ángel Moya Acosta (activist and former political prisoner); and at least six collaborators of the UNPACU were reportedly arrested by State Security and National Revolutionary Police agents.[140]

95. Arbitrary arrests, summonses, and judicial proceedings also continue to be recorded against those who speak out critically through social networks. Alexander Verdecia Rodríguez, UNPACU activist, was arrested on February 6, 2025, and remains in pretrial detention in Las Mangas, Granma. He is charged with "propaganda against the constitutional order" and "instigation to commit a crime" for Facebook posts that, according to the Prosecutor's Office, incited rebellion and disrespect for social order and the State.[141] Alexander Fábrega Milanés was sentenced to seven years in prison for the alleged crime of "propaganda against the constitutional order" after denouncing alleged acts of corruption on social networks.[142]

---

[137] IACHR, SRFOE, Exile of journalists and freedom of expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, par. 133.

[138] CiberCuba, Nuevas imágenes del violento arresto de anciano en La Habana (New images of the violent arrest of an elderly man in Havana): Portaba pancarta contra el gobierno (He was carrying an anti-government banner), Feb. 5, 2025; Swissinfo.ch, Condenan en Cuba a un joven a 7 años de cárcel a un joven por cuestionar en redes el sistema político (In Cuba, a young man is sentenced to 7 years in prison for questioning the political system in the media), March 25, 2025; Martí Noticias, Veterinario de Santa Clara enfrenta hasta 8 años de cárcel por críticas al régimen (Santa Clara vet facing up to 8 years in prison for criticizing the regime), September 25, 2025; ADN Cuba, Detienen durante varias horas a activista cubana y le provocan un esguince (Cuban activist suffers sprain during detention lasting several hours), August 26, 2025; ADN Cuba, Cienfuegos: cubano protesta desde una torre de Etecsa y es detenido (Cienfuegos: cuban arrested after protesting from a tower in Etecsa), February 17, 2025; OCDH, El Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos denuncia arbitrariedad en proceso judicial contra ciudadano por grabar en la vía pública (Cuban Human Rights Observatory denounces arbitrary proceedings in trial against citizen caught making a recording on the street), June 27, 2025.

[139] Diario de Cuba, El régimen acusa al artista contestatario Nando Obdc de vínculos con personas que planean actos violentos en Cuba (Regime accuses critical artist Nando Obdc of having ties with people planning acts of violence in Cuba), January 3, 2025; Cubanet, "Me están golpeando donde más me duele": madre de Nando OBDC ("They are hitting me where it hurts most": Mother of Nando OBDC), September 15, 2025.

[140] Article 19 MX-CA, Activistas en Cuba son víctimas de detenciones arbitrarias y desaparición forzada de corta de duración (Activists in Cuba are victims of arbitrary detentions and enforced disappearances of short duration), April 19, 2025.

[141] Cubalex, Activista cubano Alexander Verdecia enfrenta 10 años de cárcel por publicaciones en Facebook (Cuban activist Alexander Verdecia faces 10 years in jail for Facebook posts), undated; Martí Noticias, Sin fecha de juicio el preso político cubano Alexander Verdecia tras siete meses en la cárcel (No trial date for Cuban political prisoner Alexander Verdecia after seven months in jail), September 5, 2025; El Toque, Fiscalía pide diez años de cárcel por criticar al Gobierno cubano en Facebook: el caso de Alexander Verdecia (Prosecutor's Office asks for ten years in prison for criticizing the Cuban government on Facebook), June 19, 2025.

[142] Cubanet, Joven condenado a siete años de prisión por publicaciones críticas en redes sociales (Young man sentenced to seven years in prison for critical publications in social networks), March 24, 2025; CiberCuba, Cuba: Joven es condenado a 7 años de prisión por criticar a Díaz-Canel y convocar protestas (Young man is sentenced to 7 years in prison for criticizing Diaz-Canel and calling for protests), March 25, 2025.

96. The OCDH condemned the sentence handed down by the Chamber for Crimes against State Security of the Provincial Court of Santiago de Cuba, which sentenced Félix Daniel Pérez Ruiz to five years in prison and sentenced Cristhian de Jesús Peña Aguilera to four years, for the crime of "propaganda against the constitutional order", in retaliation for publications made on the social network Facebook.[143] According to public reports, Ana Ibis Tristá Padilla and Jarold Varona Agüero were acquitted in the same case for lack of evidence; however, the Prosecutor's Office challenged the decision and initiated an appeal process. In September 2025, it was recorded that the Provincial Court finally found Ana Ibis Tristá Padilla guilty of "propaganda against the constitutional order" and "other acts against State Security." [144]

97. According to IAPA reports, political prisoner Luis Robles was threatened in prison in retaliation for publications made by his mother on the social network Facebook. Likewise, Gustavo Mena was denied parole, despite having been sentenced to two years in prison for the crime of contempt, linked to critical publications. In addition, the conviction against Sulmira Martínez, derived from publications in which she called for demonstrations, was upheld, and Yoel Ricardo Llerena was criminally prosecuted for content published on the same platform.[145]

98. Furthermore, documentary proof exists of the criminalization by the Cuban State of activists and academics Jenny Pantoja and Alina Bárbara López for exercising their rights to freedom of expression and demonstration. The Attorney General's Office of the Republic of Cuba charged them with the crimes of contempt, disobedience, and attempt, in connection with a peaceful protest they had been carrying out since March 2023, demanding better living conditions and more democratic openness.[146]

99. Activist Juan Luis Bravo Rodríguez was reportedly verbally summoned to appear on January 13 at the State Security Operations Unit in Guantánamo. He reportedly faces charges for the crime of "usurpation of functions", after the publication of a video in the media CubaAdn, on March 19, 2024, in which he denounced the precarious working conditions and the lack of state protection for peasants in that province.[147]

100. The IACHR and the Inter-American Court have pointed out that criminal law is the most restrictive and severe means of establishing responsibility for conduct related to the right to freedom of expression, particularly when people are sentenced to prison;[148] and that its application to punish speech of public interest is incompatible with inter-American standards.[149] In this regard, the Office of the Special

[143] SIP (IAPA), Informe Cuba, April 21, 2025; Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos (OCDH), OCDH condena sentencia de cinco y cuatro años de cárcel contra dos cubanos por sus publicaciones en Facebook (OCDH condemns five and four-year prison sentences against two Cubans for postings published on Facebook), January 14, 2025; Cubanet, Condenan a dos cubanos a cinco y cuatro años de cárcel por criticar al Gobierno en Facebook (Two Cubans sentenced to five and four years in prison for criticizing the Government on Facebook), January 14, 2025.

[144] OCDH, Cuba: hasta 14 años de cárcel por publicaciones en Facebook y por acusaciones sin pruebas de la policía política (Cuba: up to 14 years in jail for Facebook postings and accusations without evidence by political police), September 23, 2025; Cubanet, De cuatro a 14 años de cárcel para activistas que convocaron a una marcha en 2023 (Four to 14 years in jail for activists who called for march in 2023), September 23, 2025; ICLEP, Condenan a 14 años de cárcel a la activista Ana Ibis Tristá Padilla tras haber sido absuelta por falta de pruebas en un primer juicio (Activist Ana Ibis Tristá Padilla sentenced to 14 years in jail after being acquitted for lack of evidence in first trial), September 25, 2025.

[145] SIP (IAPA), Cuba report, April 21, 2025,

[146] Article 19 MX-CA, ARTICLE 19 exhorta al Estado cubano a detener la criminalización de activistas y académicas (ARTICLE 19 exhorts the Cuban State to stop the criminalization of activists and academics), May 28, 2025.

[147] Cubalex, [@CubalexDDDH], (Jan. 10, 2025), El activista Juan Luis Bravo Rodríguez fue citado verbalmente para presentarse el próximo lunes 13 de enero en la Unidad de Operaciones de la Seguridad del Estado (Activist Juan Luis Bravo Rodríguez was verbally summoned to appear next Monday, Jan. 13, at the State Security Operations Unit), X, https://x.com/CubalexDDHH/status/1877820698153890278.

[148] I/A Court H.R., Case of Usón Ramírez v. Venezuela, Preliminary Objections, Merits, Reparations, and Costs, Judgment of November 20, 2009, Series C, No. 207, par. 55.

[149] I/A Court H.R., Álvarez Ramos v. Venezuela, Preliminary objection, merits, reparations and costs, Judgment of August 30, 2019, Series C No. 380, par. 121.

Rapporteur reiterates that limiting debate through criminal law seriously impairs democratic oversight and, when used unnecessarily and disproportionately, leads to the abusive exercise of the State's punitive power.[150]

4. Social Protest

101. The report "Another Year Without Justice 2025" states that between July 2024 and June 2025, about 290 protests were documented in Cuba, mainly motivated by the collapse of the electricity system and the increase in internet rates charged by the Cuban Telecommunications Company (for its Spanish acronym ETECSA). During the same period, at least 543 people were still detained for participating in demonstrations: 360 for those of July 2021 and 183 for subsequent protests. Of them, 101 were sentenced to between 10 and 22 years of imprisonment or hard labor.[151] The Rapporteurship received reports of unfair trials, restrictions on prison benefits, limitations on contact with family members, and inhumane prison conditions.[152]

102. The serious political, economic, and social situation in Cuba continues to generate discontent and gave rise to multiple demonstrations throughout the year. These expressions of protest include street closures, pot-banging, rallies in front of state institutions, burning of garbage dumps and facilities, and, especially, the display of anti-government posters, a practice that has reportedly increased significantly in recent months. The Office of the Special Rapporteur notes with concern that this increase in social protest has been accompanied by an intensification of state repression, through arbitrary arrests, summonses, surveillance, threats, subpoenas, use of force, internet shutdowns, and the presence of agents at the site of demonstrations. There are also reports of aggressions by security forces and identification of community leaders. Persons arrested in this context have been deprived of their liberty, in some cases in confinement and subjected to constant interrogation, without contact with their families.[153]

103. In June 2025, student protests were registered in at least ten faculties of five universities in the country, in response to the increase in internet fees announced by the Government. The students called for a "general strike", denouncing that the increase imposed by the state-owned company ETECSA is equivalent to almost two months' salary for just a few hours' access to the network.[154] They also complained about the lack of electricity, water, transportation, and food, conditions which, they said, seriously affect their quality of life and academic performance. According to testimonies disseminated on social networks, participating students were subjected to reprisals by State Security agents, including home visits, interrogations, threats of academic expulsion, and physical violence inside university campuses. These practices have been reported in several provinces of the country.[155]

104. In July 2025, local organizations reported attempts by the Cuban government to prevent the participation of activists and human rights defenders on the 4th of July commemoration at the U.S. Embassy in Havana.[156] According to reports, several people were intercepted en route and forced to abandon their vehicles to prevent their arrival. Opponents, independent journalists, relatives of political prisoners, and those released

[150] I/A Court IDH, Case of Tristán Donoso v. Panama, Preliminary objection, merits, reparations and costs, Judgment of January 27, 2009, Series C No. 193, par. 119.

[151] Justice 11J, Otro año sin justicia (2025) (Another year without justice (2025)), August 20, 2025; Cubanet, Cuba registró 290 protestas en un año, muchas en territorios sin antecedentes (Cuba registered 290 protests in one year, many in unprecedented territories), July 11, 2025; 14yMedio, Cuatro años después del mayor estallido social desde 1959, Justicia 11J presenta un balance (Four years after the biggest social outburst since 1959, Justicia 11J presents a balance), July 11, 2025.

[152] IACHR, SRFOE, Press release No. R151/25, Cuba: SRFOE condemns state repression and calls for respect and guarantee of the rights to freedom of expression, association, and peaceful assembly, July 31, 2025; Human Wright Watch, Cuba: Protesters Detail Abuses in Prison, July 11, 2025; El País, "Golpes, aislamiento y privación del sueño": los castigos infligidos por manifestarse en Cuba" ("Beatings, isolation, and sleep deprivation: punishments for protesting in Cuba"), July 11, 2025.

[153] Cubalex, Informe mensual sobre la situación de los derechos humanos en Cuba (Monthly report on the Situation of Human Rights in Cuba), May, 2025.

[154] El País, El descontento en Cuba estalla en las universidades (Discontent in Cuba erupts in universities), June 4, 2025;

[155] Cubalex, Informe mensual sobre la situación de los derechos humanos en Cuba (Monthly report on the human rights situation in Cuba), June 2025.

[156] Cubalex, [@CubalexDDDH], (July 3, 2025), El régimen cubano desplegó una jornada represiva para impedir que activistas, periodistas y opositores (A day of repression by the Cuban regime to prevent protests by activists, journalists, and opponents), X, https://x.com/CubalexDDHH/status/1940840275586474227.

from prison on 11J were allegedly subjected to surveillance outside their homes by State Security agents, rapid response brigades, and police, who in many cases prohibited them from leaving their homes.[157]

105. In October 2025, there were further citizen protests in response to prolonged power outages and water shortages. In the Los Sitios Popular Council, in Central Havana, videos posted on social networks showed people blocking traffic at the intersection of Monte and Antón Recio streets. According to reports, protesters lit a bonfire, demanded the restoration of basic services, and shouted slogans such as "Freedom!" and "Electricity!".158

106. The SRFOE recalls that social protest, which includes the exercise of the right to freedom of peaceful assembly without arms, freedom of association, and freedom of expression, is a fundamental tool in the defense of democracy and human rights, and the State is obliged to respect, protect, and guarantee these rights.159 Nevertheless, it is worrisome that a pattern of criminalization of social protest persists in Cuba. This pattern consists of the use of the punitive power of the State to deter, punish, or prevent the exercise of the right to protest, and in some cases, social and political participation more broadly, through the arbitrary, disproportionate, or repeated use of the criminal or misdemeanor justice system against demonstrators, activists, and social or political leaders for participating in or allegedly organizing a social protest, or for being part of the organizing or convening group or entity.160

107. The Office of the Special Rapporteur noted in its report on "Protest and Human Rights" that the application of criminal law to the conduct of participants in a demonstration constitutes a serious restriction with serious consequences for freedom of expression, and the rights of assembly, association, and political participation, which according to the principles developed by the Inter-American system can only be used in a very exceptional way and is subject to a higher level of scrutiny.[161]

5. Religious freedom

108. The Office of the Special Rapporteur took note of a report published by the OCDH in January 2025, which documents at least 996 acts against religious freedom in 2024, a figure that is higher than that for the previous year. Among the most frequent violations were impediments to attendance at religious ceremonies, fines for leaders of churches not recognized by the State, harassment of believers participating in civic activities, and denial of religious assistance for persons deprived of liberty for political reasons. The report also states that independent Christian churches, with no possibility of obtaining state recognition, were reportedly subjected to harassment by State Security, and their leaders were summoned to police stations, fined, or threatened with severe legal sanctions and confiscations.[162]

[157] Cubalex, Informe mensual sobre la situación de los derechos humanos en Cuba (Monthly report on the human rights situation in Cuba), July 2025.

[158] Martí Noticias, Protestas por agua en Cuba: desafío ciudadano ante una crisis en aumento (Water protests in Cuba: citizens rise up to challenge a growing crisis), October 2, 2025; CiberCuba, Apoyo unánime a las protestas en Cuba contra el Gobierno: (Unanimous support for protests in Cuba against the government:) "No hay ser humano que aguante tanto" ("No human being can endure that much,"), October 3, 2025; Martí Noticias, Estallan protestas en La Habana en reclamo de electricidad y agua (Protests erupt in Havana over electricity and water shortages), October 3, 2025; 14yMedio, Decenas de personas bloqueon calles y pidieron "corriente" durante el apagón de La Habana (Dozens of people blocked streets and demanded "power" during the blackout in Havana.), October 3, 2025; El Toque, Vecinos de Centro Habana salen a la calle por apagón y piden libertad (Residents of Central Havana take to the streets over power outage and demand freedom), October 3, 2025;

[159] IACHR, SRFOE, Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.22/19, September, 2019, Prologue and paras. 1-46.

[160] IACHR, SRFOE Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.22/19, September 2019, Prologue and par. 188.

[161] IACHR, SRFOE Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, IACHR/RELE/INF.22/19, September 2019, Prologue and par. 185.

[162] Cuban Observatory for Human Rights (OCDH), En 2024 se produjeron en Cuba casi mil actos contra la libertad religiosa (In 2024, almost one thousand acts against religious freedom took place in Cuba), January 31, 2025.

6. Freedom of Expression and the Internet

109. In 2025, the SRFOE recorded multiple reports highlighting the critical energy situation in Cuba. Throughout the year, daily blackouts were documented in different regions of the country, with numerous thermoelectric plants out of service,[163] including those of Antonio Guiteras[164], Mariel,[165] Nuevitas, Felton, Santa Cruz, Cienfuegos and Renté,[166] which reportedly caused most damage in the provinces of the interior,[167] leaving some areas without electricity for up to 72 hours, as was reported in the case of Matanzas.[168] The outages were reportedly caused mainly by the limited operating capacity of the thermoelectric plants, due to recurrent failures, lack of maintenance, and fuel shortages. According to information in the public domain, blackouts continued during March 2025,[169] with a gradual recovery of service in some sectors after outages of more than 48 hours.[170]

[163] CiberCuba, Crisis de apagones en Cuba: (Blackout crisis in Cuba:)Nueve unidades termoeléctricas están fuera de servicio (Nine thermoelectric units are out of service), February 6, 2025.

[164] CiberCuba, Se disparan los apagones en Cuba tras la desconexión de la termoeléctrica Antonio Guiteras (Power outages skyrocket in Cuba after the shutdown of the Antonio Guiteras thermoelectric plant), February 4, 2025; CiberCuba, De mal en peor: (From bad to worse:)Reportan día con récord de apagones en Cuba (Record blackout day reported in Cuba), February 5, 2025; CiberCuba, Guiteras podría reincorporarse al Sistema Eléctrico el viernes, si la avería no es grave (Guiteras could be reinstated to the Electric System on Friday, if the failure is not serious,) February 4, 2025.

[165] CiberCuba, Cubanos reaccionan con indignación ante incertidumbre sobre reparación de termCiberCuba. Se disparan los apagones en Cuba tras la desconexión de la termoeléctrica Antonio Guiterasoeléctrica Guiteras (Cubans react with indignation at uncertainty over repair of the CiberCuba thermoelectric plant. Outages in Cuba skyrocket following disconnection of the Antonio Guiteraso thermoelectric plant), February 5, 2025; CiberCuba, De mal en peor: (From bad to worse:) Reportan día con récord de apagones en Cuba (Record Blackout Day Reported in Cuba), February 5, 2025; CiberCuba, Se disparan los apagones en Cuba tras la desconexión de la termoeléctrica Antonio Guiteras (Blackouts soar in Cuba after disconnection of Antonio Guiteras Thermoelectric Plant), February 4, 2025; CiberCuba, Guiteras podría reincorporarse al Sistema Eléctrico el viernes, si la avería no es grave (Guiteras could be reinstated to the Electric System on Friday, if the breakdown is not serious), February 4, 2025; CiberCuba, UNE rectifica y aumenta la incertidumbre: (UNE changes its mind and increases uncertainty): La empresa estatal no puede poner fecha a reincorporación de la Guiteras (The state-owned company cannot set a date for the reinstatement of Guiteras), February 4, 2025; CiberCuba, Apagones en Cuba (Outages in Cuba): Se desconecta otra vez termoeléctrica Guiteras del SEN (Guiteras thermoelectric plant is disconnected again from SEN), February 4, 2025; CiberCuba, Apagones por déficit de 1,545 MW para este lunes en Cuba (Outages due to 1,545 MW deficit for this Monday in Cuba), February 3, 2025; CiberCuba, Falla en alimentación eléctrica provocó salida de la planta Guiteras: (Power failure caused Guiteras plant to shut down:) Prevén sincronización en las próximas horas (Synchronization expected in the next few hours), February 2, 2025; CiberCuba, Se agrava generación eléctrica en Cuba tras salida de termoeléctrica Guiteras por avería "no identificada" (Electricity generation worsens in Cuba after Guiteras thermoelectric power plant goes out of service due to "unidentified" breakdown), February 2, 2025; CiberCuba, Termoeléctrica Antonio Guiteras se desconecta del Sistema Eléctrico Nacional por "causa no identificada" (Antonio Guiteras thermoelectric plant is disconnected from the National Grid for "unknown" reason), February 2, 2025; CiberCuba, La termoeléctrica Antonio Guiteras estuvo varias horas fuera de servicio: impacto en el sistema eléctrico (Antonio Guiteras thermoelectric plant out of service for several hours: impact on the electrical system), January 27, 2025; CiberCuba, Sistema Eléctrico en la cuerda floja: (Weaknesses of the electricity system:) Averías y mantenimientos hacen temer un nuevo apagón general en Cuba (Malfunctions and maintenance raise fears of a new general blackout in Cuba), January 19, 2025.

[166] Ciber Cuba, Apagones no dan descanso en Cuba: (Blackouts persist in Cuba:) Déficit energético alcanza este domingo los 1,480 MW (Energy deficit reaches 1,480 MW this Sunday), February 16, 2025; CiberCuba, Termoeléctrica Felton limpia la cuarta parte de sus tubos (Felton thermoelectric plant cleans a quarter of its pipes), February 3, 2025; CiberCuba, Aumentan los apagones en Cuba por déficit superior a los 1,500 MW (Increased blackouts in Cuba due to deficit exceeding 1,500 MW), January 31, 2025; CiberCuba, La termoeléctrica Felton se desconecta del SEN: (Felton thermoelectric plant cut off from the national grid) Cuba enfrenta más apagones (Cuba faces more blackouts), January 30, 2025; CiberCuba, Apagones en Cuba este jueves por déficit superior a 1,400 MW (Blackouts in Cuba this Thursday due to deficit exceeding 1, 400 MW), January 30, 2025; CiberCuba, Pronostican jornada de fuertes apagones en Cuba (Day of major blackouts forecast for Cuba), January 29, 2025; CiberCuba, Crisis energética persiste (Energy crisis continues): Unión Eléctrica de Cuba reporta severas afectaciones (Unión Eléctrica de Cuba reports severe damages), January 28, 2025.

[167] CiberCuba, Crisis de apagones en Cuba: (Blackout crisis in Cuba:) Nueve unidades termoeléctricas están fuera de servicio (Nine thermoelectric units are out of service), February 6, 2025.

[168] CiberCuba, Youtuber cubano revela imágenes inéditas de la termoeléctrica Guiteras: (Cuban Youtuber reveals unpublished images of the Guiteras thermoelectric plant:) "Pocos la han visto" ("Few have seen it"), February 15, 2025; CiberCuba, "Vamos a ver a qué hora llega la corriente" ("Let's see what time the electricity arrives"): Youtuber cubano muestra la dura realidad de los "malditos apagones" en Cuba (Cuban Youtuber shows the harsh reality of the "damned blackouts" in Cuba), February 13, 2025; CiberCuba, Crisis energética en Cuba: (Energy crisis in Cuba:)Empresa Eléctrica de Matanzas anuncia suministro de "una hora de corriente al día" (Empresa Eléctrica de Matanzas announces supply of "one hour of electricity per day"), February 16, 2025.

[169] France 24, Cuba recupera poco a poco la electricidad tras un apagón total (Cuba gradually recovers electricity after a total blackout), March 17, 2025.

[170] France 24, Cuba recupera poco a poco la electricidad tras un apagón total (Cuba gradually recovers electricity after total blackout), March 17, 2025; Swissinfo.ch, Cuba recupera gradualmente la electricidad tras un colosal apagón (Cuba gradually recovers electricity after colossal blackout), March 17, 2025.

110. The Special Rapporteur was also informed of the new commercial measures announced by the Prime Minister and implemented since May 30 by the state-owned Empresa de Telecomunicaciones de Cuba S.A. (for its Spanish acronym ETECSA), which establish a limit of 360 Cuban pesos (CUP), equivalent to US$1 on the informal market, as the maximum amount that a user can add to his or her main balance during a 30-day period. With that amount, it would only be possible to purchase a 6 GB data plan. Additional packages would have a high cost: for example, 3 GB extra cost 3,360 CUP (about 9 dollars). Civil society organizations warn that these rates contrast with the minimum monthly wage in Cuba, set at 2,100 CUP (US$5.5).[171]

111. This Office was told that ETECSA apparently justified these changes as part of an economic plan aimed at attracting foreign exchange "to sustain the telecommunications network and continue offering services in local currency."[172] For their part, civil society organizations have pointed out that these restrictions act as an indirect form of censorship, limiting freedom of expression, and exacerbating information isolation.[173] In a press release, the Office of the Special Rapporteur warned that internet access in Cuba is essential for the circulation of information, and that these measures could further consolidate state control over the flow of information, restricting the population's contact with the outside world.[174]

112. SRFOE recalls that access to the Internet is a sine qua non condition for the effective exercise of human rights. In the 2011 joint statement on freedom of expression and the Internet, the United Nations, OSCE, IACHR, and ACHPR Special Rapporteurs stated that "[G]iving effect to the right to freedom of expression imposes an obligation on States to promote universal access to the Internet. Access to the Internet is also necessary to promote respect for other rights, such as the rights to education, health care and work, the right to assembly and association, and the right to free elections."[175]

113. It also emphasizes that the rules to be adopted should seek to ensure that pricing structures are inclusive, so as not to hinder access; that connectivity is extended throughout the territory, to effectively promote access for rural users and marginalized communities; that communities have access to community information and communication technology centers and other public access options; and that efforts to improve training and education are strengthened, especially in poor, rural sectors and among the elderly population.[176]

---

[171] Perfil, Cuba justificó el tarifazo al internet móvil: (Cuba justified the mobile internet rate hike): "Sin esto, habrá un colapso tecnológico" ("Without this, there will be a technological collapse,")June 6, 2025; El País, El Gobierno de Cuba dolariza internet (Cuba's Government dollarizes the Internet): "Esta medida es un verdadero apartheid digital" ("This measure is a true digital apartheid,"), June 2, 2025; SIP (IAPA) La SIP alerta sobre impacto negativo de nuevas tarifas en el acceso a internet en Cuba (IAPA warns of negative impact of new tariffs on internet access in Cuba), June 6, 2025; BBC News, "You can't buy a data package because you're already going without food": the wave of unrest in Cuba over rising internet tariffs, June 5, 2025.

[172] BBC News Mundo, "No puedes comprar un paquete de datos porque ya te quedas sin comer": la ola de malestar en Cuba por el aumento de las tarifas de internet ("You can't buy a data package because you will have nothing left to buy food": widespread discontent in Cuba following internet rates increase), June 5, 2025; DW, El 'tarifazo' de telefonía pone a rabiar a los cubanos (Telephone rates surge infuriates Cubans), June 2, 2025; Empresa de Telecomunicaciones de Cuba S.A. (ETECSA), Nuevas medidas comerciales en el servicio de telefonía móvil (New commercial measures impact mobile telephone service), May 30, 2025.

[173] SIP (IAPA), La SIP alerta sobre impacto negativo de nuevas tarifas en el acceso a internet en Cuba (IAPA warns of negative impact of new tariffs on Internet access in Cuba), June 6, 2025.

[174] IACHR, SRFOE, Press release No. R151/25, Cuba: SRFOE condemns state repression and calls for respect and guarantee of the rights to freedom of expression, association, and peaceful assembly, July 31, 2025.

[175] United Nations Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Opinion and Expression, Representative for Freedom of the Media of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression of the Organization of American States (OAS), and Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression and Access to Information of the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights (ACHPR), Joint Declaration on Freedom of Expression and the Internet, June 1, 2011

[176] United Nations Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Opinion and Expression, the Representative for Freedom of the Media of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression of the OAS, and Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression and Access to Information of the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights (ACHPR), Joint Declaration on Freedom of Expression and the Internet, June 1, 2011; IACHR, SRFOE, Standards for a Free, Open, and Inclusive Internet OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF.17/17, March 15, 2017, par. 35.

E. Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights

1. The economic crisis and persistent shortages of basic services

114. The Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) estimated that Cuba's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) would contract by 1.5% in 2025 and said that the country suffered from "chronic inflation."[177] Despite projections of slowing inflation, data for the first half of 2025 showed that prices continued to rise, reaching 41%.[178] In this context, the latest Human Rights Watch World Report noted that the economic crisis in Cuba continues to affect the human rights of the population, by causing a lack of essential medicines and food insecurity.[179]

115. The IACHR and its REDESCA note with concern the worsening food crisis, which constitutes, according to the Cuban Observatory of Human Rights, one of the main concerns for Cubans (71%), along with power outages and the cost of living.[180] According to the Observatory, at least 89% of Cuban households remain in extreme poverty and 78% of the Cuban population intends to migrate.[181]

116. In this regard, they also emphasize that the economic crisis and the persistent shortage of basic services in Cuba, as well as the situation of poverty, cannot be understood without considering the impact of the embargo imposed by the United States. This embargo has significantly limited the ability of the Cuban state to generate the foreign exchange necessary to import fuel, technology, and other essential inputs. Recent studies, such as the one conducted by the Cuban Capacity Building Project at Columbia Law School, confirm that fluctuations in sanctions policy have had a direct effect on the country's economic growth.[182] Restrictions on the flow of goods, income from U.S. visitors, and remittances have had a significant impact on Cuba's GDP, highlighting the vulnerability of both the private sector and households to changes in sanctions.[183]

117. In turn, while sanctions have had a proven impact on the Cuban economy, they alone do not explain the magnitude of the crisis. The Cuban Capacity Building Project study also points out that, although U.S. exports and remittances are key determinants of private consumption and GDP growth, there are also internal barriers that limit the country's competitiveness and ability to fully integrate into the global economy.[184] These internal restrictions, added to the dependence on external income affected by the embargo, create a situation in which the crisis responds to both external factors and internal structural problems.[185]

118. In this same context, the IACHR and its REDESCA recognize the State's efforts to encourage local production and reduce dependence on food imports. However, they emphasize that guaranteeing the right to adequate food requires not only the development of technical capacity and inputs for agricultural production, but also the adoption of comprehensive measures to ensure the availability, accessibility, and quality of food for the population, which implies addressing the internal barriers that prevent agricultural products from being obtained on global markets when it is not possible to produce them locally.

---

[177] ECLAC, Economic Survey of Latin America and the Caribbean, 2025: resource mobilization to finance development., August 5, 2025, 73.

[178] ECLAC, Economic Survey of Latin America and the Caribbean, 2025: resource mobilization to finance development., cited above, 76.

[179] Human Rights Watch, World Report 2025, July 2025.

[180] Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, VIII Informe 2025 El Estado de los derechos sociales en Cuba (VIII Report 2025 The State of Social Rights in Cuba), September 9, 2025.

[181] Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, VIII Informe 2025 El Estado de los derechos sociales en Cuba (VIII Report 2025 The State of Social Rights in Cuba), cited above, 3.

[182] Columbia Law School, Cuba Capacity Building Project, What Effects Do U.S. Sanctions Have on the Cuban Economy?, Thursday, February 6, 2025

[183] Columbia Law School, Cuba Capacity Building Project, What Effects Do U.S. Sanctions Have on the Cuban Economy?, cited above.

[184] Columbia Law School, Cuba Capacity Building Project, What Effects Do U.S. Sanctions Have on the Cuban Economy?, cited above..

[185] Columbia Law School, Cuba Capacity Building Project, What Effects Do U.S. Sanctions Have on the Cuban Economy?, cited above.

119. Cuba is also facing a historically unprecedented housing crisis. The government reported a shortfall of 805,583 housing units. Construction progress is minimal: only 2,728 homes were completed in 2025 (0.1% of the total deficit) and in the first quarter construction amounted to only 12.4 percent of the target envisaged in the State plan. As a result, about 35% of housing is considered to be in poor condition or deteriorated, leaving thousands of families in overcrowded or at-risk conditions.[186]

2. Shortcomings in the health system and challenges regarding water and food supply

120. According to the Cuban Observatory for Human Rights, only 3% of the population was able to acquire their medicines in public pharmacies, while the rest were unable to do so due to cost or shortages.[187] Along similar lines, the Cuban Minister of Health pointed out that only 30% of the basic list of medicines was covered, due to the lack of foreign currency for their purchase or to import raw materials and produce them locally.[188] Likewise, between 2022 and 2024, the number of medical personnel decreased by 18,702, so the shortage of professionals in the field is also a challenge.[189] At the same time, hospital infrastructure has deteriorated, resulting in the closure of 63 hospitals, 37 family medical offices, 187 maternity homes, and 45 stomatological clinics between 2010 and 2022.[190]

121. Finally, the IACHR and its REDESCA express their concern about the massive power outages and their impact on the supply of drinking water. In this regard, the Superior Organization of Business Management, Water and Sanitation, explained that 70% of the water supply problems are due to failures in the electrical system, because while the restoration of electricity is instantaneous, in the case of water it takes several hours due to the pumping processes.[191] In this context, the IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur recognize international cooperation efforts to construct desalination plants that ensure access to drinking water to the population, specifically to vulnerable communities such as San Antonio Sur.[192]

3. Precarious labor conditions and hostile environment for the defense of labor and union rights

122. According to the Cuban Observatory for Human Rights, unemployment among the economically active population remains at 12%, and 14% of the population over 70 years of age continues to work after retirement because their income is equal to or less than 4,500 CUP per month (equivalent to approximately US$177[193]). For its part, the Independent Trade Union Association of Cuba presented the results of the National Survey on Occupational Safety and Health in Cuba, which show that 95.5% of workers perceive an absence or insufficiency of state investment in infrastructure related to occupational health and social security.[194] The survey also showed an accident rate of 82.9% during commuting to and from the workplace. In that context, the National Office of Statistics and Information (for its Spanish acronym ONEI) reported that

[186] Infobae, Crisis en Cuba: la dictadura admitió un déficit habitacional de 805.583 viviendas (Crisis in Cuba: the dictatorship admitted a housing deficit of 805,583 houses). July 14, 2025; updated July 14, 2025. CiberCuba, Incumplen plan de viviendas en Cuba: (CiberCuba, Cuba's housing plan is not fulfilled:) Gobierno reconoce su fracaso sin consecuencias (Government acknowledges its failure without consequences). CiberCuba Editorial Office, May 6, 2025.

[187] Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, VIII Informe 2025 El Estado de los derechos sociales en Cuba (VIII Report 2025 The State of Social Rights in Cuba), cited above, 11.

[188] IPS Cuba, Crisis de medicinas en Cuba: la salud a merced del mercado informal (Crisis of medicines in Cuba: health at the mercy of the informal market), January 16, 2025.

[189] ONEI, Anuario Estadístico de Cuba 2024 (Cuba Statistical Yearbook 2024:): Salud Pública y Protección Social (Public Health and Social Protection), July 30, 2025.

[190] IPS Cuba, Crisis de medicinas en Cuba: la salud a merced del mercado informal (Crisis of medicines in Cuba: health at the mercy of the informal market), January 16, 2025.

[191] Diario de Cuba, El 70% de los problemas en el abasto de agua en Cuba está vinculado a los apagones (70% of water supply problems in Cuba are linked to power outages.), July 4, 2025.

[192] UNICEF, UNICEF supports access to safe water with new desalination plant in San Antonio del Sur, February 20, 2025.

[193] Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Humanos, VIII Informe 2025 El Estado de los derechos sociales en Cuba (VIII Report 2025 The State of Social Rights in Cuba), cited above.

[194] Independent Trade Union Association of Cuba, Presentación resultados Encuesta Nacional sobre Seguridad y Salud en el Trabajo en Cuba y solicitud de audiencia temática y pronunciamiento sobre la situación de Seguridad y Salud en el Trabajo en Cuba (Presentation of the results of the National Survey on Occupational Safety and Health in Cuba and request for a thematic hearing and pronouncement on the situation of Occupational Safety and Health in Cuba), September 1, 2025, 21.

occupational accidents decreased in 2024; however, the number of fatalities remained at 52, which raised the mortality rate, particularly in transportation, agriculture, and manufacturing.[195]

4. Climate emergency and healthy environment

123. REDESCA closely monitored tropical storm warnings for the second half of 2025 for Cuba and other Caribbean countries. In this context, the Institute of Meteorology warned of the probability of a hurricane affecting 50% of the island's territory.[196] In view of this, REDESCA recommends that the State of Cuba, faced with the continuous threat of tropical storms and hurricanes that are often aggravated by its geographical position and in the context of a climate emergency, strengthen its contingency plans and be prepared to minimize the damage and vulnerabilities derived from these phenomena.

124. On the other hand, REDESCA takes note of Cuba's efforts to develop an energy policy based on renewable sources, particularly solar energy.[197] Accordingly, the Ministry of Finance and Prices implemented Resolution 169 to exempt some items related to renewable energies from customs duties. In this regard, it is expected that by 2030, at least 24% of the energy generated will be from renewable sources, which would reduce dependence on fossil fuels and polluting emissions.[198]

F. Women's Human Rights

125. Regarding the situation of women's human rights, as in previous years, there is still a lack of a specialized legal framework for the protection of women's rights that includes the criminalization of femicide and the establishment of protection and prevention measures, such as temporary housing centers for victims of gender-based violence.[199] Nor has the State ratified the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment, and Eradication of Violence against Women, the main regional instrument for the protection of women's human rights.[200]

126. In this context of lack of legal protection, civil society organizations and the population in general have had to mobilize to document, draw attention to, and take preventive actions regarding violence against women, particularly gender-based disappearances and violent deaths.[201] In this regard, up to September 1, 2025, 30 violent deaths of women were recorded, mostly perpetrated by their partners or ex-partners and occurring in the victims' homes.[202]

127. In the area of prevention, the State made progress in the construction of an administrative, computerized, and interoperable registry on the violent death of women and girls for gender-related reasons. According to the information available, this registry will provide the necessary information for the adoption of adequate prevention policies and more effective oversight of the corresponding criminal proceedings.[203]

---

[195] ONEI, Protección del trabajo (Labor Protection). Indicadores seleccionados, enero-diciembre 2024 (Selected indicators, January-December 2024), April 2025.

[196] Swissinfo, Cuba prevé una temporada de ciclones 'activa', hasta con el paso de un huracán por la isla (Cuba forecasts 'active' cyclones season, including a hurricane passing over the island), September 17, 2025.

[197] TV BRICS, Cuba avanza con determinación hacia una transición energética sostenible (Cuba moves with determination towards a sustainable energy transition), May 30, 2025.

[198] Prensa Latina, Transición energética en Cuba apuesta por las fuentes renovables (Energy transition in Cuba opts for renewable sources), April 10, 2025.

[199] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter V. Cuba, March 26, 2025, par. 140; 2023 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B. Cuba, December 31, 2023, par. 139.

[200] OAS, General Information on the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment, and Eradication of Violence against Women, Signatory Countries, accessed on October 16, 2024.

[201] Alas Tensas, Alertas ciudadanas, redes sociales y prensa independiente: las únicas herramientas frente a las desapariciones en Cuba (Citizen alerts, social media, and independent press: the only tools to combat disappearances in Cuba), August 21, 2025.

[202] Alas Tensas, Infografía | Feminicidios en Cuba, enero-septiembre 2025 (Infographic | Femicide in Cuba, January–September 2025), September 17, 2025; Alas Tensas, Tres nuevos crímenes machistas elevan a 30 las víctimas en Cuba en 2025 (Three new gender-based crimes bring the number of victims in Cuba to 30 in 2025), September 4, 2025.

[203] Office of the Attorney General of the Republic of Cuba, Evalúa Comité de Género evaluúa cumplimiento de las acciones previstas en el área 7 del Programa Nacional para el Adelanto de las Mujeres (Gender Committee assesses compliance with actions planned

However, it notes that this registry would not be public, which limits the right of women to participate in the construction of public policies that affect them.

128. On the other hand, repression against women activists and human rights defenders persists. According to information from civil society, as of August 2025, there were 122 women deprived of liberty for political reasons.[204] In the first half of the year, at least 77 women were reportedly arbitrarily detained, a third of them belonging to the Ladies in White movement.[205] In this context, they also reported extreme conditions of confinement, including lack of access to adequate medical care, mistreatment, harassment, and violence, including sexual violence, as well as forced labor.[206] Likewise, the prison benefits of release from prison or parole are allegedly revoked in retaliation when women resume their activism or advocacy work, and are denied to those who carry out protest actions inside detention centers.[207]

129. The persistent violence faced by women in Cuba demonstrates the urgency of adopting and implementing adequate legislation and public policies for prevention and protection. Likewise, the deficiencies in the protection of their rights at the regulatory level impede the exercise of their rights to life, liberty, security, and equality upheld in the American Declaration of the Rights of Man.[208] In this context, women activists and rights defenders find themselves in a particularly vulnerable situation, facing a pattern of discrimination and violence exercised by state agents, which even impacts their family members.

G. Human rights of LGBTI persons

130. Regarding the rights of LGBTI people, Cuba experienced progress and challenges in 2025. The State continues to fail to produce official data on the prevalence of violence and discrimination based on prejudice. However, it transpired that in January, Brenda Diaz, a trans woman and political prisoner, was released by the Cuban government four years after being arrested in the protests of July 11, 2021. Diaz denounced having spent years in a cell for men suffering physical and verbal abuse before being released on parole. Her case reflects structurally embedded violence and lack of recognition of gender identities in the prison system.[209]

131. In May, hundreds of people marched in Havana during the government-sponsored Cuban Days against Homophobia and Transphobia, highlighting achievements such as the new Family Code, but also denouncing persistent discrimination in employment, education, and health.[210] In July, the National Assembly in area 7 of the National Program for the Advancement of Women), June 10, 2025; Granma, En Cuba no hay espacio para la violencia de género (In Cuba, there is no place for gender-based violence.), April 7, 2025.

[204] Prisoner Defenders, Se intensifica cada mes la represión en cuba: (Repression in Cuba intensifies every month:)13 nuevos presos políticos llevan a un nuevo récord de 1.185 (13 new political prisoners leads to a new record of 1,185), September 11, 2025.

[205] See: III Situation of Human Rights in Cuba, B. Section on Human Rights Defenders and the paragraphs mentioning the cases of the Ladies in White in this report.

[206] CubaNet, Alertan sobre condiciones críticas de la presa política Mileidys Rodríguez (Warning about critical conditions of political prisoner Mileidys Rodríguez), June 6, 2025; Prisoner Defenders, El negocio penitenciario de Cuba (The prison business in Cuba): 60 mil prisioneros son usados como fuerza laboral esclava (60,000 prisoners are used as slave labor force), September 15, 2025.

[207] 11J, Donaida Pérez Paseiro: nueva re-encarcelación como castigo por defender derechos humanos (Donaida Pérez Paseiro: new re-imprisonment as punishment for defending human rights), s.f.; Justicia 11JDetencionesPorMotivosPolíticos, [@justicia11j], (2025, June 11), El régimen cubano ha revocado la libertad condicional de Donaida Pérez Paseiro y la envía de vuelta a prisión (The Cuban regime has revoked Donaida Pérez Paseiro's parole and is sending her back to prison), [Tweet,]https://x.com/justicia11j/status/1932826882652696809; Alas Tensas Gender Observatory, Violencia política contra mujeres ejercida por el régimen cubano y sus agentes | Enero - Mayo 2025 (Political violence against women perpetrated by the Cuban regime and its agents | January–May 2025), June 22, 2025; Centro de Documentación de Prisiones Cubanas, Personas privadas de libertad con situaciones delicadas de salud (July 2025) (Persons deprived of liberty with sensitive health conditions (July 2025)), August 13, 2025.

[208] Organization of American States, American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, 1948, Articles 1 and 2.

[209] Washington Blade, Transgender woman who protested against Cuban government released from prison, January 18, 2025; AND Cuba, Casi 4 años en un módulo para hombres: (Nearly 4 years in a men's prison):Brenda Díaz denuncia maltratos en prisión (Brenda Díaz denounces mistreatment in prison), January 27, 2025.

[210] Cuba Herald, La comunidad LGBTIQ+ vuelve a marchar en La Habana en rechazo a la homofobia y la transfobia (LGBTIQ+ community marches again in Havana to reject homophobia and transphobia), May 11, 2025; Swiss info, La comunidad LGBTI pro Gobierno desfila en Cuba contra la homofobia (Pro-government LGBTI community marches in Cuba against homophobia), May 11, 2025.

passed a new civil registration law that allows trans people to change the gender marker on official documents without surgery and on the basis of self-determination.[211]

H. Human rights of persons in contexts of human mobility

132. The Commission notes with concern the recent immigration measures that could limit the entry of Cuban nationals residing abroad into their own country. According to the information available, in December 2024 the Ministry of Foreign Affairs reported that as of April 1, 2025 border control would not admit the use of expired passports to enter Cuban territory.[212] The decision would have put an end to the temporary exception granted in March 2020, which authorized the return to Cuba with expired documentation, as a result of the closure of consulates and air disruptions caused by the Covid-19 pandemic. However, the IACHR notes that the measure was criticized because of the high costs involved in renewing the passport at consulates and because it applied to Cubans who have another nationality, but who have not renounced their Cuban nationality of origin, preventing their entry without an updated Cuban passport.[213]

133. In addition to these measures, during 2025, the Commission continued to observe curtailments of the right to movement and residence, affecting both critics of the Government and persons residing abroad.[214] Likewise, the IACHR learned that in August 2025, certain Cuban nationals permanently residing in the United States entered the island to visit family members and were prevented from leaving the country without apparent justification.[215]

134. The IACHR also notes new restrictions and administrative modifications adopted in the United States reportedly affecting, inter alia, family reunifications initiated by Cuban permanent residents. In this regard, on June 4, 2025, the U.S. government issued a presidential proclamation establishing partial entry restrictions for persons from certain countries, including Cuba.[216] According to available information, although the Cuban Family Reunification Permit Program (CFRP) remained in effect as a formal mechanism, the proclamation entailed immigration restrictions and policy adjustments implemented during the year, limiting its practical effectiveness.[217] The Commission notes with concern that this decision could affect the right to unity and protection of the family, particularly children and adolescents.

135. Regarding these restrictions, the IACHR continues to observe a steady increase in regional asylum applications from Cuban nationals. According to the information available, in Brazil, between January and March 2025, more than 9,000 Cubans requested international protection, surpassing even the number of Venezuelan nationals, who, in recent years, have been registered as the main nationality requesting asylum.[218] Likewise, according to Costa Rica's General Directorate of Immigration and Foreigners, in the first half of 2025, at least 1,140 Cuban nationals applied for international protection in the country, the second largest contingent

[211] Them, Cuba Will Now Allow Trans People to Change Gender Markers Without Bottom Surgery, July 22, 2025; Los Angeles Blade, Cuban lawmakers simplify process for trans people to change IDs, July 29, 2025; CiberCuba, aprueba el cambio de género por solicitud personal (Cuba approves gender change by personal request), July 18, 2025.

[212] Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Cuba updates entry regulations for nationals abroad, December 6, 2024.

[213] Noticias Cuba, ¿Se puede entrar a Cuba solo con pasaporte extranjero en 2025? (Will it be possible to enter Cuba only with a foreign passport in 2025?) La respuesta definitiva (The definitive answer), August 20, 2025; Cibercuba, ¡Atención cubanos en el exterior! (Watch out, Cubans abroad!) Normativa sobre pasaportes entre en vigor el primero de abril (Passport regulations enter into force on April 1)., March 30, 2025.

[214] See the section on Human Rights Defenders.

[215] Cuba Noticias 360, Cuba impide la salida del país a ciudadanos residentes en Estados Unidos (Cuba impedes exit from the country of citizens residing in the United States), August 5, 2025; Cibercuba, Regulados: cubanos denuncian que el régimen impide su regreso a EE.UU. tras viajar a la isla (Regulated: Cubans denounce that the regime prevents their return to the U.S. after traveling to the island), August 4, 2025.

[216] The White House, Presidential actions restricting the entry of foreign nationals to protect the United States from foreign terrorists and other national security and public safety threats, June 4, 2025.

[217] Univision Noticias, ¿Qué pasa con los cubanos en proceso de reunificación familiar tras restricción de viaje de Trump.(What about Cubans in the process of family reunification following Trump's travel restrictions?), June 6, 2025.

[218] Folha BV, Pedidos de refúgio de cubanos no Brasil supera de venezuelanos en 2025 (Refuge requests from Cubans in Brazil exceed those from Venezuelans in 2025), May 16, 2025.

of asylum seekers (after Nicaraguan nationals).[219] Likewise, in the same period, asylum applications from Cuban nationals to the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance (for its Spanish acronym COMAR) reportedly totaled 20,900, nearly as many as applications from Honduran nationals, revealing a sustained increase in relation to previous years.[220]

I. Human rights of victims of trafficking

136. In the area of human trafficking, the Commission has continued to observe with concern the human rights situation of health personnel participating in international medical missions. According to the information gathered by the IACHR, in some of these missions it is possible to observe the existence of the three elements that could characterize this situation, namely, the action, the means, and the purpose.[221]

137. In particular, in addition to the act of transfer and the possibility of forced or compulsory labor, certain missions may involve the retention of passports, a practice contrary to Article 12(b) of the Palermo Protocol, which indicates the obligation of States to ensure the integrity and security of the travel or identity documents it issues.[222] According to information garnered by civil society, based on the 1,185 testimonies taken from healthcare personnel between 2019 and 2023, 40% of them reportedly had their passports withheld and only 23.88% were issued a paper or photocopy without legal validity to replace it.[223]

138. Likewise, in some medical missions, the IACHR warns of constant surveillance, limitation of free time through overwork, and manipulation on the basis of undocumented migration. According to civil society organizations, another form of limitation to mobility consists of prohibiting the transfer of medical or educational certifications to make it impossible to work outside official programs.[224]

139. According to UNODC, these subtle means of coercion, devoid of physical violence, are characteristic of contemporary trafficking in persons, and include strategies to keep victims under domination or intentional subjection, without the need for deprivation of liberty. In particular, UNODC notes that confiscation of passports and other personal documents is reportedly a particularly effective method of preventing victims from escaping, since, "without any personal documents on hand, victims often feel that they have no other option but to submit to exploitation."[225] According to UNODC, deception about working conditions is one of the most common means used by traffickers to lure victims into exploitative situations.[226]

140. In light of the above, the IACHR recalls that trafficking in persons represents a multiple or continuous violation, which continues until the victim is at liberty. This is because the means through which human trafficking is carried out, leave the victim utterly defenseless, which leads to other related violations.[227] For its part, the I/A Court H.R. recognized that human trafficking involves multiple offenses,[228] since it also [219] Semanario Universidad, Acoso a migrantes en EE.UU. eleva a 4.737 las solicitudes de refugio en el país este año (Harassment of migrants in the U.S. raises requests for asylum in the country to 4,737 this year), August 13, 2025.

[220] Revista El Estornudo, La alternativa del refugio para miles de cubanos varados en México (The asylum option for thousands of Cubans stranded in Mexico), July 14, 2025; Diario del Sur, Cubanos y haitianos lideran peticiones de asilo en Comar Tapachula (Cubans and Haitians lead asylum requests in Comar Tapachula), April 22, 2025; TV Migrante, México se consolida como destino de refugio para personas migrantes: supera 16 mil solicitudes de asilo en 2025 (Mexico consolidates its position as a refuge for migrants: over 16,000 asylum applications in 2025), March 25, 2025.

[221] UNODC, Legislative Guidelines for the Implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organize Crime and its Protocols, 2004, p. 270.

[222] UNODC. United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and Its Protocols, Article 12.b).

[223] Prisoners Defenders, 1.402 Profesionales cubanos Vs (1.402 Cuban Professionals v.) Gobierno cubano. (Cuban government). Ampliación del proceso de denuncia de este caso penal presentado ante la Oficina de las Naciones Unidas (Ginebra) y la Corte Penal Internacional. (Expansion of the complaint process of this criminal case filed with the United Nations Office (Geneva) and the International Criminal Court.), January 2024, p. 96

[224] Cuba Archive, Forced/compelled labor (trafficking in persons) by the Cuban state: Information for the 2025 Trafficking in Persons Report. February 2025 (Updated as of April 2025), p. 13.

[225] UNODC, Evidential Issues in Trafficking in Persons Cases. Case Digest. 2017, p. 82.

[226] UNODC, Evidential Issues in Trafficking in Persons Cases. Case Digest. 2017, p. 62.

[227] IACHR, Human Mobility. Inter-American Standards., OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 46/15, December 31, 2015, par. 222.

[228] I/A Court H.R., Case of the Hacienda Brasil Verde Workers v. Brazil, Preliminary objections, merits, reparations, and costs), Judgment of October 20, 2016, Series C No. 318, par. 223.

affects other rights recognized in the ACHR. It is considered particularly serious when it is part of a systematic pattern or a practice that is applied or tolerated by the State or its agents.[229]

141. Based on the above, the IACHR recalls that States must adopt comprehensive measures, with a human rights approach, to prevent, investigate, prosecute, and provide remedies for possible cases of human trafficking. In particular, they must guarantee that the participation of health personnel is completely voluntary, ensuring access to identity and travel documentation without arbitrary restrictions, avoiding passport retention practices, and ensuring decent working and living conditions.

J. Human Rights of Older Persons

142. The Commission received troubling information on possible violations of the right to pensions and access to care for the elderly in Cuba, as well as on their precarious living conditions. In particular, the IACHR has documented serious pension deficiencies ranging from the amount of the pension itself to its physical accessibility. In this regard, more than 39% of retired seniors reportedly received a monthly pension of only US$13, barely enough for food.[230] In addition to the above, there are reportedly barriers to pension access due to lack of electricity, cash shortages, and deterioration of ATMs, all of which allegedly have a disproportionate impact on the elderly.[231]

143. The lack of access to sufficient pensions has reportedly led to an increase in the number of elderly people living on the streets and begging. In view of this, the Commission notes that the Council of Ministers issued Agreement 10056/2025, which establishes a protocol to document persons in this situation. One media outlet reported that the Agreement would require local governments to identify, classify, and relocate these people, including the elderly, who, if they do not have family support, should be placed in care homes. However, the Social Protection Centers reportedly only admit stays of a maximum of 90 days.[232]

144. Likewise, an independent study reveals that Cuban seniors aged 60 and older identify the food crisis and the constant power outages affecting the State as their main problem.[233] In addition to the above, one media outlet reported that blackouts are compounded by other forms of shortages such as access to water, medicines, fuel, among other basic necessities.[234] The IACHR notes that these restrictions have a disproportionate and more pernicious impact on the elderly, who often have to face these difficulties alone because the members of their nuclear family have left Cuba.

145. Along these lines, the IACHR was informed of the particular situation of Mrs. Zoila Esther Chávez Pérez, 84 years old, whose son, writer, and journalist José Gabriel Barrenechea was deprived of liberty because of his political opinions in November 2024.[235] According to a public statement by Cuban civil society organizations, the imprisonment of Mrs. Chávez's son has had a disproportionate and dangerous impact on the

[229] IACHR, Human Mobility. Inter-American Standards., OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 46/15, December 31, 2015, par. 222.
[230] Newsweek, Sobrevivir con 13 dólares al mes: la lucha diaria de los adultos mayores en Cuba (Surviving on $13 a month: the daily struggle of Cuba's seniors), June 20, 2025.
[231] Martí Noticias, Falta de efectivo y cajero rotos: la odisea de cada día de los pensionados cubanos (Lack of cash and broken ATM: the daily odyssey of Cuban pensioners), February 25, 2025.
[232] Noticia Cubita Now, Desamparo en la vejez, los adultos mayores frente al abandono estatal en Cuba (Neglect in old age: older adults facing state abandonment in Cuba), May 9, 2025.
[233] Observatorio de Derechos Sociales Cuba and Observatorio Cubano de Derechos Sociales, The State of Social Rights in Cuba, VIII Report 2025, p. 7.
[234] Infobae, El calvario que sufren las personas mayores por dramática crisis en Cuba: (The ordeal suffered by the elderly due to the dramatic crisis in Cuba:) "Ni en el período especial había tanto miseria" ("Not even in the special period was there so much misery."), June 7, 2025.
[235] Cubanet, "Lo que más deseo es ver a mi hijo antes de morirme": madre de José Gabriel Barrenechea ("What I want most is to see my son before I die": mother of José Gabriel Barrenechea), April 11, 2025.

exercise of the right to care of his mother, who lives in solitude and whose health has reportedly deteriorated.[236]

146. The IACHR reiterates that States must have social security systems that guarantee access to both contributory and non-contributory old age benefits.[237] Along these lines, the Commission has also referred to the fact that States must guarantee that older persons have access to whatever it takes to ensure an adequate standard of living and well-being, including adequate food, decent housing, and access to water and sanitation for an old age with dignity.

K. Human Rights of persons with disabilities

147. In its most recent thematic report, the IACHR highlighted the modification of domestic legislation that recognized the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, establishing the right to request support and safeguards.[238] At the same time, the Commission took note of the adoption of Decree No. 121, which establishes the care service for families of severely disabled children and recognizes it as work paid for by the State.[239] In the same vein, the State has reaffirmed its commitment at the international level to the protection and inclusion of persons with disabilities in the framework of the 18th Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD).[240]

148. However, the IACHR notes with concern the precarious conditions of persons with disabilities in the penitentiary system, especially the cases of political prisoners that show a lack of adequate medical and psychological care. Available public sources have exposed critical situations of at least four persons deprived of liberty in the context of 11J, who, having psychosocial disabilities due to psychiatric disorders, are reportedly not receiving specialized treatment or access to medication; in addition, civil society organizations denounce that persons with psychosocial disabilities are not separated from the rest of the prison population, which allegedly exposes them to constant abuse and aggression.[241] In particular, family members have complained that at least one of them is being mistreated by the guards, and his deterioration is evident.[242]

149. Furthermore, international organizations and academia have drawn attention to the increase in the inequality gap in Cuba during 2025.[243] ECLAC, for its part, pointed out that Cuba has concealed poverty figures, failing to comply with international commitments to report information to regional statistical monitoring systems.[244] The Commission is concerned about this, because situations of poverty and extreme poverty hinder access to, and effective enjoyment of, the rights of persons with disabilities, and could exacerbate pre-existing disabilities or trigger new ones. Not having the necessary accommodations and supports undermines the autonomy and legal capacity of persons with disabilities.

L. Human Rights of Afro-descendants

[236] Cuba x Cuba, Declaración pública de organizaciones de la sociedad civil cubana en apoyo a la liberación de José Gabriel Barrenechea para que pueda proporcionar cuidados a su madre (Public statement by Cuban civil society organizations in support of the release of José Gabriel Barrenechea so that he can look after his mother), May 2, 2025.

[237] IACHR, Human Rights of the elderly and national protection systems in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc.397/ II. Doc. 397/22, December 31, 2022, paras. 345-346.

[238] IACHR, The Situation of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities in the Americas , OEA/Ser.L/V/II., Doc. 1/25, January 31, 2025, par. 401.

[239] Official Gazette of the Republic of Cuba, Ministry of Justice, Council of Ministers, Decree 121, April 28, 2025.

[240] Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Republic of Cuba, Reafirma Cuba en la ONU compromiso con los derechos de las personas con discapacidad (Cuba reaffirms its commitment to the rights of persons with disabilities at the UN), June 12, 2025.

[241] Marti Noticias, Abogadas exponen la crítica situación de los presos con discapacidades en Cuba (Lawyers expose the critical situation of prisoners with disabilities in Cuba), March 4, 2025.

[242] Diario de Cuba, Un preso político del 11J padece una crítica condición psiquiátrica y no recibe atención médica especializada (A political prisoner of 11J suffers from a critical psychiatric condition and is not receiving specialized medical attention), January 30, 2025.

[243] Cibercuba, Académicos oficialistas reconocen aumento de brecha de desigualdad en Cuba (Pro-government academics acknowledge widening inequality gap in Cuba), May 25, 2025.

[244] Diario de Cuba, El régimen cubano oculta sus cifras de pobreza e incumple con la CEPAL (The Cuban regime hides its poverty figures and fails to comply with ECLAC), June 30, 2025.

150. According to the information available to the Commission, the State continues to fail to produce official statistics broken down by race or ethnicity, which draws attention away from Afro-descendants and limits the design and implementation of appropriate public policies to address their needs. In this regard, Afro-Cuban activists remain in exile, denouncing the persistence of structural racism.[245] Likewise, civil society organizations denounced the persistence of racial discrimination, as well as harassment, immigration restrictions, and digital surveillance against anti-racist activists.[246]

151. At the same time, the Commission notes that the restrictions on civic liberties and the escalation of repression against human rights defenders continue, with impacts on defenders of the rights of Afro-descendants. Donaida Pérez, opposition figure and president of the Asociación Yorubas Libres de Cuba, was released from prison in January 2025, but on June 11 her parole was revoked and she returned to prison, in unsanitary conditions.[247] Such events occur in a context of racial discrimination against the Afro-Cuban Yoruba community and the expression of its religious beliefs.

152. In addition to the above, as of April 2025, 73% of the 1,155 political prisoners were of African descent, which is equivalent to 2.17 times their share of the population.[248] This occurs in a context of over-representation of black youth in pre-trial detention and longer average sentences for people of African descent, as well as reports of violence and racial discrimination in interaction with the authorities.[249]

IV. RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE STATE AND OTHER STAKEHOLDERS

A. Situation of the Cuban State vis-à-vis the OAS and the IACHR

153. On January 31, 1962, the Government of Cuba was excluded from participation in the inter-American system by means of Resolution VI, adopted at the Eighth Meeting of Consultation of Ministers of Foreign Affairs, held in Punta del Este, Uruguay.[250] That resolution ceased to have effect on June 3, 2009, when the General Assembly of the Organization of American States, at its Thirty-Ninth Regular Session in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, determined by resolution AG/RES. 2438 (XXXIX-O/09) that "the participation of the Republic of Cuba in the OAS will be the result of a process of dialogue initiated at the request of the Government of Cuba, and in accordance with the practices, purposes, and principles of the OAS."[251]

154. As of the date of adoption of this report, the annulment of the 1962 resolution that excluded the Cuban Government from the inter-American system has not resulted in Cuba's reincorporation in the OAS. In 2018, for example, at the Eighth Summit of the Americas, Cuba sent a delegation and, despite walking out of the inaugural session prior to the address delivered by the Secretary General of the Organization, it announced that it would continue to "exercise [its] legitimate right to participate at a forum to which it should have been a party for a long time." At the same event, Foreign Minister Bruno Rodríguez reiterated the position of the [245] El País, La escritora cubana que le pone palabras a la disidencia lesboafrofeminista (The Cuban writer who voices lesbian-Afro-feminist dissent), May 19, 2025; Havana Times, Is There Racism in Cuba? History and Contemporary Times, May 21, 2025.

[246] Amnesty International, The State of the World's Human Rights, chap. Cuba, April 2025; Diario de Cuba, Marthadela Tamayo: 'Cuba tiene una deuda pendiente con la sociedad civil, especialmente con las mujeres' (Cuba has a pending debt with civil society, especially with women), January 23, 2025.

[247] Race & Equality, Cuba: Warning about the escalation of repression against activists and human rights defenders four years after the 11J protests, July 11, 2025.

[248] Prisoners Defenders, 7 nuevos prisioneros políticos en abril elevan la cifra total en Cuba a 1.155 bajo un marcado racismo estructural (7 new political prisoners in April bring the total number in Cuba to 1,155 amidst marked structural racism), May 14, 2025.

[249] 14ymedio, 11J: Cuatro años después del mayor estallido social desde 1959, Justicia 11J contabiliza 360 presos (Four years after the biggest social outburst since 1959, Justicia 11J counts 360 prisoners), July 11, 2025; Diario de Cuba, Prisoners Defenders registra 1.155 presos políticos y denuncia racismo estructural en Cuba (Prisoners Defenders registers 1,155 political prisoners and denounces structural racism in Cuba), May 14, 2025.

[250] The text of Resolution VI is found in the "Eighth Meeting of Consultation of Ministers of Foreign Affairs serving as Organ of Consultation in Application of the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance, Documents from the Meeting, Punta del Este, Uruguay, January 22 to 31, 1962, Meeting Documents," Organization of American States, OEA/Ser.F/II.8, doc. 68, pp. 13-15.

[251] The text of resolution AG/RES. 2438 (XXXIX-O/09) can be found in "Thirty-ninth Regular Session, San Pedro Sula, Honduras, June 2–4, 2009, Proceedings, Volume I," Organization of American States, OEA/Ser.P/XXXIX-0.2, p. 12.

Cuban State with respect to what it views as the use of the OAS as an instrument of the geopolitical interests of United States.

155. The exclusion of the Cuban government by the OAS has not prevented the Commission from fulfilling its mandate to promote and protect human rights;[252] since it recognizes it as "legally responsible before the Inter-American Commission with respect to human rights", since it is "party to the international instruments that were initially established in the American Hemisphere to protect human rights", and because Resolution VI of the Eighth Meeting of Consultation "excluded the government of Cuba, and not the State, from participation in the Inter-American system."[253]

156. The Commission recalls that the States that have not ratified the American Convention on Human Rights conferred on the Commission the power "to pay particular attention to the observance of the human rights referred to in Articles I, II, III, IV, XVIII, XXV, and XXVI of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man," in accordance with Article 20(a) of the Statute of the IACHR.

157. Under this mandate, the Commission has prepared eight country reports and one thematic report, with the last country report dated 2020 and the thematic report dated 2023. Cuba has also been included in Chapter IV, or its equivalent, of the Annual Report in the years 1984-1985 to 1994, and continuously since 1996. In the wake of the regulatory amendments in 2013, Cuba's inclusion in the annual reports was based on the criteria set forth in article 59(6)(a.i) and (c) of the Rules of Procedure.

158. Over the past ten years, the IACHR has held annual public hearings regarding Cuba. In 2025, as of the date of writing this report, the Commission held the hearing entitled Cuba: Rights of persons deprived of liberty with psychosocial disabilities (193rd Regular Session).

159. Likewise, information has been requested from the State in accordance with the powers set forth in Article 18, paragraph d, of the Statute; and, in addition, individual petitions, cases, and precautionary measures continue to be received, processed, and examined.

160. With regard to precautionary measures, as of the date of preparation of this report, Cuba has 54 precautionary measures in force. Of these, three were granted in 2025. In 2025, the IACHR drew attention to the situation of beneficiaries of precautionary measures through statements on social networks where it condemned the new wave of repression registered on April 29, condemning the use of arbitrary detentions such as that of José Daniel Ferrer and Félix Navarro; and other activists.

161. Although the Cuban government does not respond to the communications and decisions of the IACHR, civil society organizations report experiencing the cessation or decrease in intensity, sometimes temporarily, of the mistreatment, reprisals, harassment, and/or aggressions to which they were subjected prior to the Commission's actions.

B. U.S.-Cuba Relations

162. The U.S. economic embargo against Cuba, initiated more than 60 years ago, is based on a set of U.S. laws and regulations that prohibit or limit trade relations with the island, in particular: the Trading with the Enemy Act (1917), the Foreign Assistance Act (1961), the Cuban Democracy Act (1992), the Cuban Liberty

[252] During 2018, the IACHR issued two letters requesting information from the State and published two press releases: IACHR, Press Release R152/2018, IACHR publishes merits report in case related to criminalization of political opinion and deliberation in Cuba, April 11, 2018; and IACHR, Press Release R152/2018, The Office of the Special Rapporteur Expresses Concern over Criminal Convictions for desacato laws in Cuba,,1 July 7, 2018.

[253] IACHR, 2002 Annual Report, Chapter IV, Human Rights Developments in the Region, Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.117 Doc. 1 rev. 1, March 7, 2003, paras. 3-7; IACHR, Seventh Report on the Situation of Human Rights in Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.61, Doc.29 rev. 1, October 4, 1983, paras. 16-46.

and Democratic Solidarity Act, known as Helms-Burton (1996) and the Trade Sanctions and Trade Enhancement Act (2000).[254]

163. Over time, the intensity of the embargo has fluctuated between easing and adding restrictions. Since the announcement on December 17, 2014, of the reestablishment of relations between Cuba and the United States of America,[255] the Commission has continued to monitor the partial lifting of the economic embargo by the U.S. Congress.[256]

164. As of 2025, the United States Government reactivated some sanctions imposed on the Cuban Government. Specifically, in January, the executive order "Initial Rescissions of Harmful Executive Orders and Actions", in its Section 2, revoked, among others, the presidential memorandum of January 14, 2025, which revoked the designation of Cuba as a State Sponsor of Terrorism.[257]

165. Additionally, on June 30, the President signed the National Security Presidential Memorandum (NSPM) to strengthen the Cuba policy implemented during his first term, reversing the Biden administration's revocation that eased pressure on the Cuban regime. The NSPM, among other issues, puts an end to economic practices that benefit Cuban intelligence services or security agencies; enforces the legal ban on U.S. tourism to Cuba and ensures compliance through regular audits and mandatory recording of all travel-related transactions for at least five years; supports the economic embargo of Cuba and opposes calls by the United Nations and other international forums for its lifting.[258]

166. As it has reiterated on several occasions, the IACHR calls for the lifting of the U.S. economic embargo against Cuba due to its impact on the Cuban population and their rights. On the other hand, it reiterates that the embargo does not exempt the Cuban State from complying with its international obligations, nor does it excuse it for violations of the American Declaration.[259]

167. The economic embargo of Cuba has also been criticized by the United Nations on several occasions. Since 1992, the UN General Assembly has called on the United States to lift sanctions on Cuba, so far without success.

V. CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

168. The IACHR notes with great concern that, based on the information gathered in 2025, taking into account the recommendations made in its most recent country report and in Chapters IV of previous annual reports, it does not observe an improvement in structural aspects, such as violations of the rights to personal liberty and integrity, and arbitrary restrictions on the right to vote and to participate in government, freedom of expression, and dissemination of thought. In addition, violations of due process guarantees, undue restrictions on the right of transit, among other anomalies, persist. In addition, the IACHR regrets the limited official information available and the State's historical distancing from this regional human rights body.

169. At the same time, the IACHR reiterates its interest in carrying out an on-site visit to Cuba, in order to initiate rapprochement and dialogue with the Cuban State and thus provide technical support in human rights matters as required, in order to promote respect and guarantees for human rights on the island.

170. In light of the above, in compliance with its mandate, the Commission urges the State of Cuba:

Representative democracy and political rights

[254] U.S. Department of State, Cuba Sanctions, 2017.
[255] The White House, Fact Sheet: Charting A New Course On Cuba December 17, 2014.
[256] IACHR, Press release No. 156/2014, IACHR Welcomes Announcement to Reestablish Relations between the United States and Cuba, , December 18, 2014
[257] The White House, Initial Rescissions of Harmful Executive Orders and Actions, January 20, 2025.
[258] The White House, President Donald Trump Strengthens the Policy of the United States Toward Cuba, June 30, 2025.
[259] IACHR, Situation of Human Rights in Cuba, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 2, February 3, 2020, par. 49.

1. To guarantee access to public information in the framework of electoral processes and to allow electoral observation in the country, ensuring an environment conducive to public scrutiny and transparency in such processes.
2. To adopt measures that guarantee respect for civil and political rights related to democratic participation in public administration within the framework of its domestic laws and constitutional precepts reformulated in accordance with the above recommendations.
3. To open up channels that would allow real and vigorous participation by all political sectors of the population and contribute to the construction of democracy in Cuba.
4. To adopt measures allowing the rights to freedom of assembly and of association for political organizations and movements.
5. To release persons detained for political reasons or reasons of conscience, including activists, artists, and journalists tried or sentenced for their work or advocacy.

Independence of branches of government, procedural guarantees, and judicial protection

6. To adopt the measures needed to ensure the full independence of the judicial branch from the other branches of government.
7. To investigate alleged human rights violations, punish those responsible, and take measures to prevent impunity due to a lack of judicial independence.
8. To ensure that the criminal offenses contemplated in its legislation are not used improperly to restrict other rights, or against dissenting persons.
9. To refrain from making illegal or arbitrary arrests and, when someone is deprived of his or her liberty, ensure that it is an exceptional measure and complies with all the guarantees to be observed when restricting that right, including being brought immediately before a judge.
10. To take all necessary steps to prevent the use of official inquiries to bring unjust or unfounded lawsuits against persons who legitimately demand observance and protection of their rights by means of social protest.
11. To adopt measures to ensure that lawyers can practice their profession without restrictions for political reasons and without threats or harassment.

Human rights defenders

12. To free human rights defenders, activists, and other social leaders who are currently arbitrarily detained as a result of their denunciation and defense activities.
13. To refrain from acts of harassment, threats, aggression, persecution, arbitrary detentions, and criminalization committed by State authorities to the detriment of human rights defenders.
14. To ensure an environment free of hostilities and with respect for fundamental freedoms for the defense of human rights. Accordingly, to refrain from actions that could impair opportunities to guarantee of an open and participatory civic space.
15. To refrain from imposing arbitrary restrictions on the right to free movement of human rights defenders, allowing them to exercise freely their right to freedom of movement on Cuban territory.

Persons deprived of liberty

16. To collect statistical data on persons deprived of their liberty and incorporate them into a public, easily accessible, and periodically updated registry. In particular, the registry must contain, at least, the following data: (i) number of persons detained in each place of deprivation of liberty, and installed capacity of each center; (ii) age; (iii) gender, sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression; (iv) nationality, migratory status and ethnic-racial origin; (v) special risk situation, such as the existence of disability; (vi) health condition;

(vii) family composition; (viii) socio-economic information; (ix) procedural situation; (x) sentence or measure applied and estimated date of release; (xi) causes of imprisonment; and (xii) data on the court or tribunal that ordered and oversees the detention.

17. To ensure that persons deprived of liberty are treated with dignity. Specifically, to guarantee adequate, specialized, and timely medical care; sufficient food with high nutritional value; safe drinking water; and decent sanitation and hygiene conditions. In addition, to adopt measures to combat overcrowding.
18. To take steps to prevent and combat all forms of torture or ill-treatment. To this end, to create an independent mechanism with broad powers to examine detention centers, conduct private interviews with detainees, and receive complaints and initiate investigations into acts of torture or ill-treatment.

Freedom of expression

19. To guarantee the legal conditions needed for the full exercise of the right to freedom of expression, freedom of the press, freedom of peaceful assembly, and freedom of association, both online and offline. This includes making domestic regulation compatible with international human rights standards on the subject.
20. To ensure that all individuals and groups, including journalists, artists, human rights defenders, political opponents, among others, can exercise their right to freedom of expression, peaceful assembly, and association without fear of reprisals or criminalization.
21. To refrain from arbitrarily obstructing -even by indirect means- journalistic activities including the local press and international correspondents.
22. To immediately cease all forms of harassment, threats, intimidation, and censorship, such as subpoenas, interrogations, arbitrary detentions, and police intimidation, among others, against any person for causes related to the exercise of their freedom of expression and freedom of association and assembly.
23. To respect, protect, and guarantee the right to social protest. In particular, to refrain from imposing requirements contrary to international human rights law, such as prior authorization; and to refrain from applying criminal sanctions against individuals solely for participating in public demonstrations.
24. To guarantee universal access to the Internet without restrictions, discrimination, blocking, or arbitrary interference. In particular, to refrain from any kind of discrimination in the treatment of data and Internet traffic based on factors such as devices, content, author, origin and/or destination of the material, service, or application, in accordance with the principle of net neutrality.
25. To facilitate the operation of international observation mechanisms regarding the situation of the right to freedom of expression in Cuba, including providing all official information considered relevant.
26. To guarantee pluralism and diversity in the media and adopt measures to prevent the existence of public media monopolies. Likewise, to adopt the necessary measures to ensure that the State's media are subject to appropriate legislation and regulation.
27. In addition to the on-site visit mentioned in paragraph 169, the IACHR recommends the State to grant its consent for a visit by the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression to detention centers where persons who claim to be deprived of their liberty for expressing their thoughts and opinions are held.

Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights

28. To guarantee the economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights of the entire population on an equal basis, paying special attention to vulnerable groups, such as people living in poverty, older adults, and people deprived of their liberty.
29. To take concrete steps to ensure access to adequate food or the means to obtain it.

30. To adopt concrete measures to ensure access to essential public services, including adequate health services and medical supplies. To ensure that the population has access to adequate medical personnel and avoid promoting the outflow of health personnel as a way of attracting foreign currency, especially in a context where there are insufficient professionals to meet the health needs of the country's population.
31. To promote effective measures to ensure access to essential public services such as water and electricity and enhance the resilience of infrastructure in order to meet the vital needs of the population and promote its integral development.
32. To adopt substantial measures to respond to climate change and mitigate its effects considering the geographical situation of the country and the high levels of vulnerability of the population in a context of inadequate and insufficient infrastructure and access to services. These measures should consider access to basic supplies and services in emergency situations.

Women

33. To strengthen the legal framework for the protection of women's rights to address gender-based violence and facilitate its prevention, investigation, and punishment, considering the special risks faced by women activists, human rights defenders, and women deprived of their liberty.
34. To ratify the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment, and Eradication of Violence against Women ("Convention of Belém do Pará").
35. To establish specialized protection mechanisms for women who are victims of gender-based violence, including the creation of safe temporary shelters staffed with personnel trained in a gender perspective.
36. To guarantee public access to data on violent deaths of women to facilitate the participation of civil society in the design and implementation of public policies for the prevention of gender-based violence against women, girls, and adolescents.

LGBTI persons

37. To collect and analyze data regarding the prevalence and nature of violence and discrimination against LGBTI people based on prejudice.
38. To refrain from carrying out, through its agents, acts of violence against LGBTI people and guarantee a legal framework that protects them from the actions of third parties.

People in a situation of human mobility

39. To refrain from preventing, or creating legal or administrative obstacles for, the return of Cuban nationals to their country.
40. To remove travel restrictions imposed on individuals because of their activities as activists or for political reasons.
41. To adopt urgent and comprehensive measures to address the factors that lead its nationals to leave the country, including violations of basic human rights and fundamental freedoms.
42. To guarantee the full exercise of civil and political rights, which includes the right of all persons, in accordance with international human rights standards, to leave the country, to move freely within its territory, to choose their place of residence, and to enter or re-enter the country of which they are nationals. This includes, in particular, not preventing or hindering in any way the departure from or entry into the country of persons participating in legitimate activities.

Older persons

43. To address the emerging and particular needs of the elderly in the face of recurrent blackouts, while a permanent solution is being considered.
44. To evaluate the amount of pensions for the elderly and make the necessary adjustments so that they can afford the basic food basket.
45. To review and evaluate the scope of the protocol for elderly people living on the street and make adjustments to provide temporary and sustainable solutions.

Persons with disabilities

46. To establish protocols for special care of persons deprived of liberty with disabilities, based on intersectional perspectives, as well as adequate medical follow-up; including the necessary support and reasonable adjustments.
47. To allocate financial resources for the implementation of permanent multidisciplinary support systems, as well as the application of accessibility and reasonable accommodation measures.

People of African descent

48. To implement effective policies to control racial profiling.
49. To ensure an enabling environment for effective participation based on standards of non-discrimination, freedom of expression, and freedom of association.
50. To publish disaggregated statistics and ensure independent oversight of the justice system.

PARTIALLY DISSENTING VOTE OF COMMISSIONER CARLOS BERNAL PULIDO REGARDING CHAPTER IV-B OF THE 2025 ANNUAL REPORT ON CUBA

With all due respect to my colleagues, and in accordance with Article 19.1 of the Rules of Procedure of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights ("the Commission" or "the IACHR") and in exercise of the right to freedom of expression, I submit this partially dissenting opinion in relation to Chapter IV-B of the 2025 Annual Report on Cuba, hereinafter referred to as "the Report."

I highlight the relevance of this report, insofar as it systematizes and consolidates information on the current situation of the population in Cuba. Without prejudice to the foregoing, and expressing my agreement with the general content of the report, this vote is limited exclusively to the formulation of observations on certain specific aspects that I consider relevant. These considerations do not affect or call into question the general diagnosis or the central conclusions of the report, but are intended to contribute to a more precise debate on these specific points.

In said sense, in this vote I will refer to: (i) the need to prevent discrimination based on sex in contexts of deprivation of liberty and (ii) the non-existence of a right to gender identity and the obligation to guarantee the rectification of the sex marker on identity documents for persons who self-identify as transgender.

1. The need to prevent discrimination based on sex in contexts of deprivation of liberty

Paragraph 129 of the report refers to:

> "129. With regard to the rights of LGBTI persons, Cuba experienced both progress and challenges in 2025. The state still does not produce official data on the prevalence of violence and discrimination based on prejudice. However, it was reported that in January, Brenda Díaz, a trans woman and political prisoner, was released by the Cuban government four years after being arrested during the protests on July 11, 2021. Díaz reported spending years in a men's prison unit suffering physical and verbal abuse before being released on parole. Her case reflects the structural situation of violence and lack of recognition of gender identities in the prison system."

On this point, I highlight that, although protective measures should be taken for people who self-identify as transgender in prisons, the truth is that, when it comes to spaces exclusively for women, comparative contexts have shown that it's essential to maintain separate spaces based on sex. In particular, in prison contexts where gender separation has been blurred in order to include males in female facilities, there have been important cases of sexual, physical, and psychological violence against women[260].

[260] D. Shaw, 'Transgender Inmate in Prison for Rape of Young Girls is Accused of Sexual Assaults on Female Inmates' (1 June 2018) Women are Human, https://www.womenarehuman.com/transgender-man-who-rapedyoung-girls-housed-in-womens-prison-jessica-winfield-nee-martin-ponting/; K. Finlay 'Transgender Inmate Charged with Sexual Assault at a Women's Prison' (24 August 2020) Women Are Human, https://www.womenarehuman.com/transgender-inmate-charged-with-sexual-assault-at-a-womensprison/; UK High Court of Justice [2021] CO/4198/2019, https://fairplayforwomen.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/07/FDJv-SSJ-judgment-approved-as-handed-down-on-02.07.21-002.pdf; Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. AL USA 30/2023. December 21, 2023; Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. Violence against women and girls in sport. A/79/325. August 27, 2024; Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. Sexual violence against women and girls: new frontiers and emerging issues. A/HRC/59/47. June 16, 2025.

With this, I do not mean that all people who identify as transgender women are violent, but rather that there are people with violent intentions who take advantage of policies that have blurred the separation based on sex to carry out violent acts against women. This is why separation in prison facilities based on sex has been a constant and repeated obligation under international law, as a positive measure to protect women.

I reiterate[261] that Article 5.5 of the American Convention establishes the principle of separation of places of detention between men and women, and the Court has considered, based on the Convention and rulings by other human rights bodies, "that all women deprived of liberty must be housed physically separate from men and, furthermore, in less restrictive and lower security wings or sections that address the low level of risk they represent and with sufficient space where they can meet their specific needs."[262]

This rule of separation is also found in the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (Nelson Mandela Rules)[263], the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (Bangkok Rules)[264], and even for armed conflicts in the Third[265] and Fourth[266] Geneva Conventions.

Recently, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, noted in her report "Sexual violence against women and girls: new frontiers and emerging issues" that:

> "Healthcare settings also pose serious risks to women. The existence of single-sex wards is essential to protect female patients from sexual assault and harassment while receiving medical care, including women with physical or intellectual disabilities. Women and girls in refugee camps and detention centers are also at particular risk of violence, including sexual harassment and rape."[267] (Bold text not in the original text)

That being the case, States and international bodies have a duty to promote this separation, which means that there should be no male inmates in women's prisons. This is especially true when, as in the draft report addressed by this vote, no safeguards are included to prevent the forms of violence against women that can arise from these prison models that give predominance to gender self-identification.

I call for appropriate measures to be taken to prevent all forms of violence, including violence against people who self-identify as transgender women, but these measures must not ignore women's rights or expose them to situations of risk that violate their right to live free from all forms of violence, especially in contexts of profound vulnerability such as those of deprivation of liberty.

2. Inexistence of the right to gender identity and the obligation to guarantee the rectification of the sex marker on identity documents for persons who identify as transgender

Paragraph 130 of the report states:

---

[261] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF.

[262] IHR Court Advisory Opinion OC-29 of 2022; Bangkok Rules, supra, Rules 12 and 41.d., and Report of the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, Rashida Manjoo, Causes, conditions, and consequences of incarceration for women, A/68/340, supra, para. 85.

[263] United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners. Rules 2 and 11.

[264] United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (Bangkok Rules). Rule 1.

[265] III Geneva Convention. Article 25.

[266] IV Geneva Convention. Article 76.

[267] Special Rapporteur on violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, Reem Alsalem. Sexual violence against women and girls: new frontiers and emerging issues. A/HRC/59/47. June 16, 2025.

> "130. In May, hundreds of people marched in Havana during the Cuban Days Against Homophobia and Transphobia, an event promoted by the government, highlighting achievements such as the new Family Code, but also denouncing persistent discrimination in employment, education, and health care. In July, the National Assembly passed a new civil registry law that allows trans persons to modify gender markers on official documents without undergoing surgery and based on self-determination."

On this point, I reiterate[268] that, without disregarding internal regulatory changes, this cannot in any way be interpreted as meaning that there is an obligation under the Inter-American Human Rights System for States to ensure that identification documents reflect self-perceived gender identity. The American Convention does not expressly provide for a right to gender identity, nor is there a binding instrument in the Inter-American System that establishes an obligation to adapt identification documents to gender identity.

As I have indicated, recognizing new rights that are not in the Convention through an interpretation that does not follow the procedures established in the Convention itself would undermine Articles 31, 76, and 77, disregarding the original will of the States who ratified the Convention.

Therefore, any ruling in which any of the bodies of the IHRS applies a right that is not established by the binding instruments of international law governing its activity will be an act that violates the letter of the American Convention and exceeds the scope of competence of the IACHR or the IHR Court, as the case may be. An irregular constitutive act of this nature would also undermine the principles of good faith and pacta sunt servanda[269].

In light of the above, since there is no conventional right to gender identity in the Inter-American Human Rights System, it can be held that there are also no corresponding obligations for States to recognize this right. On the other hand, although I am aware that OC-24/17 affirmed the existence of the so-called "right to gender identity" and an alleged obligation to adapt identification documents to self-perceived gender identity in the terms indicated in this Chapter, I emphasize that the Advisory Opinions of the IHR Court have no ability to consider rights or obligations other than those expressly provided for in the American Convention[270].

In this regard, first, Article 68 of the Convention expressly provides that States are bound to comply with the decisions rendered by the Court "in any case to which they are parties." This provision is highly relevant in that (i) it is the only one that refers to the legal value of the Court's rulings and (ii) it expressly limits the binding nature of the rulings to the States parties to a case, thus limiting the recipient of the obligations—the State party to a case—and the context in which the ruling is issued—that is, the contentious case. This position has also been upheld by some sectors of legal doctrine, based also on the principle of State consent as the basis of conventional law[271].

Secondly, specifically with regard to OC-24/17, it is important to take into consideration Article 64 of the ACHR, which limits the Court's jurisdiction to issue advisory opinions on the Convention or treaties of the Inter-

[268] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Informe annual 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Report on the Situation of Honduras – 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Report on Chapter IV.A. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024- Chapter IV.A development of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4A_ES.PDF#page201; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV. B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF.

[269] Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties. Article 26.

[270] IHR Court. Gender identity, equality, and non-discrimination for same-sex couples. State obligations in relation to name change, gender identity, and rights derived from a relationship between same-sex couples (interpretation and scope of Articles 1.1, 3, 7, 11.2, 13, 17, 18, and 24, in relation to Article 1 of the American Convention on Human Rights). Advisory Opinion OC-24/17 of November 24, 2017. Series A No. 24.

[271] Systematization of critiques in: González Domínguez, P. (2017). The doctrine of conventionality control in light of the principle of subsidiarity. Constitutional Studies, 15(1), 55-98.

American System. Thus, since OC-24/17 establishes alleged rights not contemplated in the ACHR or in any other treaty of the IAHRS, its binding nature is even more questionable.

Thirdly, deriving obligations or so-called rights not contemplated in the Convention, based exclusively on an advisory opinion, would be contrary to the principle of pacta sunt servanda governing international treaty law, according to which States are only bound to comply with that to which they have expressed their consent[272].

Fourth, although the IHR Court has held that advisory opinions are parameters for reviewing compliance with the Convention[273], I emphasize that there is still a need for open and transparent Inter-American dialogue to further discuss this position, which does not derive expressly from the American Convention or any other international instrument binding on the States. I draw attention to the fact that there is still no consensus on this matter either among the States of the region or in academia; hence, important constitutional courts still refrain from invoking the concept of conventionality control and from incorporating advisory opinions as a parameter[274].

Finally, I would like to note that some authors have held that broadening the effects of advisory opinions could contribute to distorting the functioning of the Inter-American System and, thereby, weakening it, since (i) it results in equating decisions issued in the Court's advisory capacity with the text of the convention itself[275], and (ii) blurs the differences between the Court's jurisdictional and advisory functions. Some have even suggested that these interpretations by the Court create legal uncertainty, as there is no certainty as to the effects with which advisory opinions are issued[276].

On the contrary, as I have stated in previous reasoned votes, gender identity, understood under the criteria of self-determination or self-perception, poses serious risks to the rights of individuals in general and, in particular, to population groups with special Inter-American protection, such as women. Insisting that States change the sex markers on identity documents increases these risks, as it completely dilutes the differentiation between the sexes and undermines the application of affirmative action measures for women.

The Commission must deliberate deeply on this matter, from a human rights perspective and with a differential approach, in order not to undermine or frustrate affirmative measures in favor of women or other population groups with special Inter-American protection.

If it is enough for a person to simply state that they self-identify as a woman for the State to automatically recognize them as such, without any additional reasonable regulation or requirement, it is likely that affirmative measures in favor of women will lose their effectiveness, and that States will end up erasing the very identity of women and any other population group.

On this point, the then Judge Elizabeth Odio Benito was clear in explaining that:

> «[…] the core subject of feminism (and, in this case, violence against women for the simple fact of being women) is women and the specific oppression they suffer, its origin and impact. If we confuse the feminist struggle and replace the subject of feminism, if the subject of feminism ceases to be biological women and becomes a strange and confusing variable of subjective identities, we must consider and bring to the table the more than predictable negative impact that it would have on decades of feminist struggle and theory. And not only would feminism disappear, but also human rights theory, which is also based not on feelings or self-perceptions, but on objective and scientific categories. So, one might

[272] Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties.

[273] IHR Court. Rights and guarantees of children in the context of migration and/or in need of international protection. Advisory Opinion OC-21/14 of August 19, 2014. Series A No. 21. Para. 31.

[274] Ramírez, F. G. (2023). A critical look at conventionality control. Journal of Law and Social Sciences, (28), 101-142; Palacios, D. L. (2017). Inter-American conventionality control at the national level: a notion still under construction. Direito e Práxis Magazine, 8, 1389-1418.

[275] Colombo, I. (2022). A critical analysis of the doctrine of conventionality control. Omnia. Law and society, 5 (1), pp. 83-116.

[276] Colombo, I. (2022). A critical analysis of the doctrine of conventionality control. Omnia. Law and society, 5 (1), pp. 83-116.

> ask: if sex, a material and scientific category, disappears, absorbed by "gender identity," a subjective individual perception, what would gender-based violence be based on? And what would the female sex be reduced to? How would rape and other crimes of sexual violence against women be documented? How would violence suffered by transgender people be documented if sex change is something confidential that cannot be documented? What about wage differences? What about discrimination in access to education at all levels, formal and informal? There are many more questions. But these few are enough to highlight the chaos and regression we are facing.»[277]

I use the considerations of the then Honorable Judge Elizabeth Odio Benito to insist on defending the value of being biologically female or male, which is not equivalent to reducing a person's identity solely to their biological sex.

The removal of the sex marker from public records poses significant risks for public administration and the effective guarantee of rights, particularly in the areas of health, statistics, and public policy formulation. Sex is an essential variable for epidemiology, prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of specific diseases—including those that may affect people who self-identify as transgender based on their biological needs—as well as for the correct interpretation of clinical tests, drug dosing, and health service planning[278].

Likewise, its elimination weakens the production of reliable demographic data necessary for designing equality policies, affirmative action, social programs, licenses, social security, and institutional organization, including sensitive areas such as the prison system[279]. Consequently, removing this marker obscures the diverse needs of the population, hinders the exercise of administrative functions, and can directly affect effective access to fundamental rights and essential state services.

For which reason, if international human rights law erases biological sex and differential measures based precisely on biological sex criteria, it would strip away the rational basis for protecting population groups such as women. If the majority position continues to promote the absolute legal recognition of self-perceived or self-determined gender identity, it will hinder—if not nullify—the effectiveness of countless special protection measures.

I thus leave these considerations, which explain and justify my partially dissenting vote.

[277] IHR Court. Case of Vicky Hernández and others vs. Honduras. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of March 26, 2021. Series C No. 422. Partially dissenting opinion of Judge Elizabeth Odio Benito. Para. 15.

[278] Various authors. Rare diseases. JANO, Medicine and Humanities 2008, no. 1679; González-Lamuño, D., & García Fuentes, M. (2008). Genetic diseases. Annals of the Navarre Health System, 31(Suppl. 2), 105-126.

[279] Public Ministry, Office of the Attorney General of Panama, Resolution No. 11.11 of February 2016. "Regulating permission for breastfeeding"; Pregnant Women's Health Agenda V.2021. Chile Grows with you; United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention; United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (Nelson Mandela Rules); United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders and the Guidelines for Their Application (Bangkok Rules); Third Geneva Convention.

IV.b

Nicaragua

CHAPTER IV.B NICARAGUA

I. INTRODUCTION 779

II. THE SITUATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS IN 2025 785

A. Consolidation of the concentration of power 785

B. Closure of civic space 787

C. Arbitrary detention 790

D. Persons deprived of liberty 791

E. Persons in the context of human mobility and transnational repression 793

F. Indigenous peoples and Afro-descendent communities 795

III. ECONOMIC, SOCIAL, CULTURAL, AND ENVIRONMENTAL RIGHTS 796

A. Climate emergency and a healthy environment 796

B. Business and human rights 798

C. Fiscal and economic policies 800

IV. SITUATION OF FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION 801

A. Arbitrary detention and forced disappearance of journalists 801

B. Pressure, threats, and intimidation towards journalists and media outlets 803

V. CONCLUSIONS 806

VI. RECOMMENDATIONS 807

CHAPTER IV.B

NICARAGUA

I. INTRODUCTION

1. In accordance with its treaty-based and statutory mandate,[1] the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights ("Commission," "Inter-American Commission," or "IACHR") has been closely following the human rights situation in Nicaragua in the context of a protracted disruption of the democratic order and the consolidation of an authoritarian regime that concentrates power.

2. As documented by the IACHR, the social protests of April 2018 spontaneously exposed the social discontent that had built up over several years, in response to the institutional processes that gradually co-opted public institutions and led to a concentration of state power in the hands of the executive branch. Those protests were initiated by the elderly and supported by youths and university students in response to proposed reforms to the Social Security Law.[2]

3. In the report Gross Human Rights Violations in the Context of Social Protests in Nicaragua, the IACHR found that the State's response to this expression of social dissent was the arbitrary use of violence.[3] The Commission also noted that the magnitude of repression by the State, as well as the strategies deployed to deter demonstrations, evidenced the government's intention to stifle social demands and regain control of public space.[4] According to the findings of the Interdisciplinary Group of Independent Experts (GIEI-Nicaragua), in the context of the repression, Nicaragua engaged in conduct that could constitute crimes against humanity, such as murder, deprivation of liberty, rape, torture, and forced disappearance.[5]

4. Since then, the Commission has documented various phases of repression by the State to silence any opposition to the regime. In view of the worsening political, social, and human rights crisis, and the

[1] The IACHR prepared this report by virtue of its competence and functions, as established in Article 18 of its Statute and Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights. The State of Nicaragua ratified the American Convention on Human Rights on September 25, 1979. Despite Nicaragua having denounced the OAS Charter on November 18, 2021, the IACHR has ratified its jurisdiction over the country. IACHR, Press Release No. 312/21 The IACHR Stresses Its Competent Jurisdiction Concerning Nicaragua and Laments Nicaragua's Decision to Denounce the Charter of the OAS in a Context of Serious Human Rights Violations, Washington, D.C., November 20, 2021.

[2] IACHR, 2023 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B, Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 386 rev. 1, December 31, 2023, para. 3.

[3] IACHR, Gross Human Rights Violations in the Context of the Social Protests in Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 86, June 21, 2018, para. 2.

[4] The Commission revealed that state violence followed a common pattern, marked by: the excessive and arbitrary use of police force, including lethal force; the use of parapolice forces or shock groups with the acquiescence, tolerance and cooperation of state authorities; intimidation and threats against leaders of social movements; arbitrary arrests of young people and adolescents who were participating in protests; lack of diligence in opening investigations into the killings and bodily injuries taking place in this context; obstacles in accessing emergency medical care for the wounded, as a form of retaliation for their participation in protests; and the dissemination of propaganda and stigmatization campaigns, measures of direct and indirect censorship. IACHR, Gross Human Rights Violations in the Context of the Social Protests in Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 86, June 21, 2018, para. 2.

[5] This conclusion is based on the number of victims, the seriousness of the repressive actions, the existence of certain patterns of conduct that were carried out with State resources, according to a policy that was determined and supported by the State's highest authorities. Also, the characteristics of State-sponsored violence in Nicaragua, demonstrate that there was a State decision to adopt a course of conduct which resulted in the commission of multiple criminal acts directed against protesters and political dissidents. GIEI-Nicaragua, Report on the violent events that took place between April 18th and May 30th, 2018, p. 226.

situation of structural impunity for human rights violations since 2018,[6] the Commission has included Nicaragua in the Annual Report, Chapter IV.B, according to the grounds set forth in its Rules of Procedure.[7]

5. In 2023, the Commission concluded that the civic and democratic space in Nicaragua had been closed by the regime by various means of repression and that it is unsafe for civil society to participate in social, political, or religious life.[8] In particular, the IACHR noted the mass closure of civil society organizations and the intensification of state persecution of persons perceived as opponents of the regime through criminalization, arbitrary deprivation of nationality, banishment, and confiscation of property, bank accounts, pensions, and other economic reprisals as a form of violence.[9]

6. In 2024, the Commission warned of a new series of measures aimed at perpetuating the totalitarian regime in the country, in which power is concentrated in the Ortega-Murillo family. Among them was the approval of a partial reform of the Constitution introducing a model of so-called "direct democracy" and centralizing power in the officed of the president of the Republic, now headed by two co-presidents. In addition, the regime expanded its repressive apparatus beyond the State's borders to persecute political opponents in exile, while within Nicaragua the repression even extended to government sympathizers and workers, as well as society at large, cementing a climate of subjugation and absolute control.[10]

7. In 2025, the human rights situation in Nicaragua remained among the most critical in the region and continued to deteriorate.[11] In the course of the year, the Commission expressed its rejection of the entry into force of constitutional amendments that legalized the concentration of power in the executive branch and the dismantling of democratic institutions in a State where the checks and balances of a democratic system ceased to exist several years ago.[12] In addition, it received information on the continuation of arbitrary detentions; allegations of forced disappearances; cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment of persons deprived of their liberty; and the persistence of severe restrictions on civil rights, in particular the freedoms of religion, expression, and association.[13]

8. The report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in that regard concluded: "Since the adoption of the legislative reforms in 2024 and 2025, culminating in the reform of the Constitution, Nicaragua has entered a new, worrisome phase of erosion of the rule of law, further deepening prior trends of concentrated executive powers and weakened human rights guarantees."[14] These reforms have allowed for systematic undue restrictions of fundamental freedoms, which continue to be used to suppress dissent, in contravention of international human rights law and standards.[15]

---

[6] Impunity has been defined in inter-American jurisprudence as the total lack of investigation, prosecution, capture, trial and conviction of those responsible for violations of the rights protected by the American Convention, in view of the fact that the State has the obligation to use all the legal means at its disposal to combat that situation, since impunity fosters chronic recidivism of human rights violations, and total defenselessness of victims and their relatives. I/A Court H.R., Case of Bámaca Velásquez v. Guatemala, Merits, Judgment of November 25, 2000, Series C No. 70, para. 211.

[7] IACHR, 2018 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 30, March 17, 2019; IACHR, 2019 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 9, February 24, 2020; IACHR, 2020 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II., March 30, 2021; IACHR, 2021 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 64 rev. 1, May 26, 2022; IACHR, 2022 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II., April 1, 2023; IACHR, 2023 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 386 rev. 1, December 31, 2023.

[8] IACHR, Closure of civic space in Nicaragua, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 212/23, September 23, 2023, para. 299.

[9] Cf. IACHR, Closure of civic space in Nicaragua, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 212/23, September 23, 2023, para. 14.

[10] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26, 2025, para. 6.

[11] IACHR, Press Release No. 73/25, Seven years after the beginning of the crisis in Nicaragua, IACHR condemns consolidation of the authoritarian regime, Washington, D.C., April 14, 2025.

[12] IACHR, Press Release No. 73/25, Seven years after the beginning of the crisis in Nicaragua, IACHR condemns consolidation of the authoritarian regime, Washington, D.C., April 14, 2025.

[13] See below. II. Human rights situation in 2025.

[14] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 78.

[15] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 78.

9. For its part, the Group of Experts on Human Rights in Nicaragua (GHREN) stated that "the regime of President Daniel Ortega and Rosario Murillo, has deliberately transformed the country into an authoritarian State where no independent institutions remain, opposition voices are silenced, and the population—both inside and outside Nicaragua—faces persecution, forced exile, and economic retaliation."[16] In particular, according to GHREN, the constitutional reform represented a final blow to the rule of law, as it eliminated the few remaining institutional controls, creating an absolutist executive branch.[17]

10. After assessing the human rights situation in Nicaragua in 2025, the IACHR decided to include Nicaragua again in Chapter IV.B, because it deems that the situation falls under the grounds set forth in subparagraphs 6(a)(i) 6(b), and 6(c) of Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, which lay out the following criteria for the inclusion of a member state in this chapter:

> (a) a serious breach of the core requirements and institutions of representative democracy mentioned in the Inter-American Democratic Charter, which are essential means of achieving human rights, including:[18]
>
> i. there is discriminatory access to or abusive exercise of power that undermines or denies the rule of law, such as systematic infringement of the independence of the judiciary or lack of subordination of State institutions to the legally constituted civilian authority;
>
> […]
>
> (b) The free exercise of the rights guaranteed in the American Declaration or the American Convention has been unlawfully suspended, totally or partially, by virtue of the imposition of exceptional measures such as a declaration of a state of emergency, state of siege, suspension of constitutional guarantees, or exceptional security measures.[19]
>
> (c) The State has committed or is committing massive, serious and widespread violations of human rights guaranteed in the American Declaration, the American Convention, or the other applicable human rights instruments.[20]

11. In relation to the commission of serious, systematic human rights violations, the IACHR notes that Nicaragua has been a police state, characterized by the executive branch directing control, surveillance, and repression through state security institutions and para-state groups, against anyone perceived as an opponent.[21] At the same time, the civic space remains completely closed as a result of the cancellation of thousands of social organizations and the criminalization and de facto prohibition of any public meeting not called by the regime, including religious demonstrations.[22]

12. Particularly during 2025, the IACHR received information on new arbitrary detentions and the intensification of patterns of repression involving the concealment or forced disappearance of detained

[16] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Press release, "Nicaragua's deepening repression: UN experts call for urgent global action," February 26, 2025.
[17] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Press release, "Nicaragua's deepening repression: UN experts call for urgent global action," February 26, 2025.
[18] IACHR Rules of Procedure, adopted by the Commission at its 137th regular session held from October 28 to November 13, 2009; as amended on September 2, 2011, and at its 147th regular session held from March 8 to 22, 2013, for entry into force on August 1, 2013, Article 59(6)(a).
[19] IACHR Rules of Procedure, adopted by the Commission at its 137th regular session held from October 28 to November 13, 2009; as amended on September 2, 2011, and at its 147th regular session held from March 8 to 22, 2013, for entry into force on August 1, 2013, Article 59(6)(b).
[20] IACHR Rules of Procedure, adopted by the Commission at its 137th regular session held from October 28 to November 13, 2009; as amended on September 2, 2011, and at its 147th regular session held from March 8 to 22, 2013, for entry into force on August 1, 2013, Article 59(6)(c).
[21] See below. II. Human rights situation in 2025.
[22] See below. II. Human rights situation in 2025.

individuals.[23] According to civil society organizations, as of August 31, 2025, at least 63 people were arbitrarily deprived of their liberty, and 33 of those had reportedly been forcibly disappeared.[24]

13. In the course of 2025, the situation of persons arbitrarily deprived of their liberty worsened as a result of deplorable conditions of detention, torture and ill-treatment, prolonged detention, and, in some cases, the concealment of their whereabouts as a mechanism of punishment and repression. In this context, in July, the IACHR condemned that these practices resulted in the deaths of Mauricio Alonso Petri and Carlos Cárdenas Zepeda, both of whom were elderly persons who had been detained for being identified as opponents of the regime. In both cases, their relatives reported that they were ignorant of their whereabouts and were only able to confirm their deaths when their bodies were handed over.[25]

14. In addition, the IACHR was informed of the intensification of patterns of repression and transnational persecution targeting opposition figures in exile through surveillance, harassment, threats, and acts of violence, as well as measures of control and retaliation against their relatives in Nicaragua.[26] This was confirmed by the Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, which noted that the Nicaraguan State pursued a strategy to suppress dissent that has evolved into highly targeted tactics with global reach.[27] According to a report presented in September 2025, this strategy includes arbitrary deprivation of nationality, forced expulsions, entry bans, confiscation of property, denial of passports, alteration or removal of civil registry documents, and widespread surveillance, among other practices. The scope of these violations demonstrates that the State has actively extended its control beyond its borders, posing serious challenges for the persons affected, the States concerned, and the international community.[28]

15. Lastly, in 2025, the IACHR published its report "Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua,"[29] in which it concluded that the physical and cultural existence of these peoples is at risk due to violence perpetrated by armed settlers with the aim of dispossessing of their ancestral lands and displacing them. In particular, the IACHR documented a series of armed attacks, physical assaults, kidnappings, targeted killings, sexual violence, threats, harassment, the burning of homes, the destruction of livelihoods, and other acts of violence perpetrated in recent years that remain unpunished.[30]

16. Based on the circumstances described, the Inter-American Commission deemed that the situation in Nicaragua also meets the criteria set forth in subparagraphs 6(d)(i), 6(d)(ii), 6(d)(iii) of Article 59 of its Rules of Procedure, which read as follows:

> (a) The presence of other structural situations that seriously affect the use and enjoyment of fundamental rights recognized in the American Declaration, the American Convention or other applicable instruments. Factors to be considered shall include the following, among others:[31]
>
> i. serious institutional crises that infringe the enjoyment of human rights;

[23] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

[24] Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, List of political prisoners, September 2025.

[25] IACHR, Press Release No. 140/25, Nicaragua: IACHR condemns transnational repression, Washington, D.C., July 14, 2025.

[26] Cf. IACHR, Thematic Hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas.

[27] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 29.

[28] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 29.

[29] IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, para. 205.

[30] IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, para. 205.

[31] IACHR Rules of Procedure, adopted by the Commission at its 137th regular session held from October 28 to November 13, 2009; as amended on September 2, 2011, and at its 147th regular session held from March 8 to 22, 2013, for entry into force on August 1, 2013, Article 59(6)(d).

ii. systematic noncompliance of the State with its obligation to combat impunity, attributable to a manifest lack of will;

iii. serious omissions in the adoption of the necessary measures to make fundamental rights effective, or in complying with the decisions of the Commission and the Inter-American Court;

17. In including Nicaragua in this chapter, the IACHR took account of the State's non-compliance with the recommendations of the IACHR and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (IACtHR); [32] Nicaragua's withdrawal from the Organization of American States, effective November 18, 2023; and the constitutional reforms adopted in 2025 that dismantled the rule of law.

18. The IACHR also considered the Nicaraguan State's persistent lack of cooperation with United Nations human rights mechanisms. [33] Since 2019, Nicaragua has ceased to cooperate and has neither submitted replies or participated in constructive dialogues with treaty bodies, including the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, [34] the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, [35] the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, [36] the Human Rights Committee, [37] the Committee against Torture, [38] and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. [39]

19. During 2025, Nicaragua adopted further decisions aimed at withdrawing from international organizations and the UN specialized agencies. On February 3, Nicaragua ordered the closure of the offices of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) in Managua, in response to the publication of the report The State of Food Security and Nutrition in the World 2024. [40]Subsequently, on February 27, it announced its withdrawal from the Human Rights Council and all its subsidiary mechanisms. [41] That withdrawal occurred one day before the release of the GHREN report confirming the active participation of the army in the 2018 crackdown. [42]

20. On February 28, 2025, Nicaragua served notice of its dissociation from the International Labor Organization (ILO) and the International Organization for Migration (IOM), arguing that they were no longer fit for purpose. [43] On May 4, 2025, the State announced its exit from the United Nations Educational, Scientific [32] The State has repeatedly stated its rejection of the Inter-American Court's orders and, following its most recent communication of April 11, 2022, refused to respond to that Court's requests, as a result of which it has been declared in permanent contempt. Cf. I/A Court H.R., Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. regarding Nicaragua. Provisional Measures, Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of November 22, 2021; and Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. regarding Nicaragua. Extension of Provisional Measures. Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of July 2, 2024, whereas clause 17.

[33] According to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) for the Universal Periodic Review of Nicaragua, six treaty bodies indicated that, since 2019, Nicaragua had ceased to cooperate and had neither submitted replies nor participated in constructive dialogues with those treaty bodies, including the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

[34] UN, Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, Concluding observations on the combined initial and second and third periodic reports of Nicaragua, CRPD/C/NIC/CO/1-3, Distr.: General, 23 April 2024, paras. 2 and 3.

[35] Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, Provisional concluding observations on the combined seventh to tenth periodic reports of Nicaragua, CEDAW/C/NIC/PCO/7-10, Distr.: General, 14 November 2023, para. 3.

[36] Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, Concluding observations on the combined fifteenth to twenty-first periodic reports of Nicaragua, CERD/C/NIC/CO/15-21, Distr.: General, 22 December 2023, paras. 6 and 7.

[37] Human Rights Committee, Concluding observations on the fourth periodic report of Nicaragua CCPR/C/NIC/CO/4, Distr. General, 30 November 2022, para. 2.

[38] Committee against Torture, Concluding observations on the second periodic report of Nicaragua, CAT/C/NIC/CO/2, 7 December 2022, para. 2.

[39] Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Concluding observations on the fifth periodic report of Nicaragua, E/C.12/NIC/CO/5, 11 November 2021, paras. 2 and 3.

[40] According to the regime, the report contained false information and lacked objectivity and methodological rigor. The regime also claimed that it presented data on Nicaragua that were neither consulted nor validated by national institutions, constituting a violation of the country's sovereignty. Cf. El País, "Ortega ordena el 'cierre inmediato' de la FAO en Nicaragua por publicar 'información falsa'", February 6, 2025; Divergentes, "Dictadura sandinista expulsa a la FAO de Nicaragua y se retira del organismo", February 4, 2025.

[41] El 19 Digital, "Remitimos misiva del Ministerio de Relaciones Exteriores de Nicaragua al Presidente del Consejo de Derechos Humanos de la Organización de Naciones Unidas", February 27, 2025.

[42] United Nations, Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Press release, "Nicaragua: UN experts publish groundbreaking report naming 54 officials responsible for systematic repression," April 3, 2025.

[43] El 19 Digital, "Nicaragua se retira de Organización Internacional de Trabajo y Organización Internacional para las Migraciones," February 28, 2025.

and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) after the institution awarded the World Press Freedom Prize to La Prensa, a newspaper that operates from exile.[44] On June 12, Nicaragua formalized its dissociation from the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), which it described as an instrument of manipulation, double standards, and interference in the internal affairs of States.[45]

21. In this regard, the GHREN stressed that the simultaneous departure of the agencies was intended to strengthen the quest for impunity of co-presidents Ortega and Murillo. Such decisions "not only aim to evade international scrutiny, accountability and the obligations that membership entails, but they also simultaneously signal a clear intent to undermine the very mechanisms designed for international cooperation and human rights protection."[46]

22. Lastly, the IACHR evaluated the impunity surrounding serious human rights violations committed since 2018. As the IACHR has extensively documented, the violent and repressive state response against dissent and political opposition has resulted in the deaths of at least 355 persons; more than 2,000 persons arbitrarily detained since 2018; more than 2,000 persons injured during social protests; more than 453 persons deprived of their nationality; as well as the closure of more than 5,000 civil society organizations.[47]

23. In accordance with Article 59(5) of the IACHR Rules of Procedure, this report was prepared using information from primary and secondary sources. Regarding the primary sources, the IACHR analyzed the testimonies received through MESENI; information available from cases, petitions, and precautionary and provisional measures; information presented at public hearings; and well as the information obtained and documented in the Commission's press releases and annual and thematic reports.

24. As regards secondary sources, the report took into account the following: official acts of all levels and branches of government, including constitutional amendments, legislation, decrees, judicial decisions, official statements; findings of other international human rights bodies, including treaty bodies, Rapporteurs, working groups, the Human Rights Council and other United Nations bodies and specialized agencies; human rights reports issued by governments and regional bodies; reports by civil society organizations and information submitted by those organizations and by individuals; public information widely disseminated in the media; and relevant legal and academic research.

25. The IACHR reiterates that Nicaragua's withdrawal from the Organization does not exempt the State from complying with its international obligations under the international treaties to which it is still a party, in particular those that grant jurisdiction to the organs of the inter-American human rights system.[48] Among others, Nicaragua adopted the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man in 1948; ratified the American Convention on September 25, 1979; and, in accordance with Article 62 thereof, recognized the contentious jurisdiction of the Inter-American Court on February 12, 1991. It is also a party to the Inter-American Convention to Prevent and Punish Torture; the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment, and Eradication of Violence against Women, or the Convention of Belém do Pará; and the Inter-American Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities.

---

[44] United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), Press release "UNESCO statement following Nicaragua's decision to withdraw from the Organization," Paris, May 4, 2025; also El 19 Digital, "Desde nuestra dignidad nacional, nos retiramos de la UNESCO!" May 4, 2025.

[45] El 19 Digital, "Gobierno de Nicaragua comunica decisión irrevocable de retirarse de ACNUR," June 12, 2025.

[46] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 30.

[47] Press Release No. 73/25, Seven years after the beginning of the crisis in Nicaragua, IACHR condemns consolidation of the authoritarian regime, Washington, D.C., April 14, 2025.

[48] In this regard, the Inter-American Court has pointed out that a State that withdraws from the OAS remains bound to the full observance of other human rights instruments ratified and not denounced individually and autonomously, which are in force. The Court held that in that sense, although in general, for the ratification of the treaty, the status of OAS member state is subject to conditions, those conditions are not required for the continuity of obligations. Accordingly, the denunciation of the OAS Charter is immaterial where the American Convention on Human Rights is concerned and, therefore, its provisions are binding upon Nicaragua. Cf. Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. and 45 inmates in eight prisons, regarding Nicaragua. Provisional Measures. Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of November 22, 2022, whereas clauses 28 to 30.

26. By virtue of the foregoing, the IACHR reaffirms its competence over Nicaragua and the full exercise of its treaty-based and statutory mandates. In 2025, the IACHR published four press releases[49] and held two public hearings on the human rights situation in Nicaragua.[50] In addition, the Inter-American Commission adopted several decisions on precautionary measures to protect persons whose rights were at serious risk of irreparable harm,[51] including individuals who have disappeared or been deprived of their liberty in inhumane conditions. In view of the extremely serious and urgent situation of some beneficiaries, the IACHR lodged several requests for provisional measures or the extension of provisional measures with the Inter-American Court of Human Rights,[52] all of which were granted.[53]

27. The IACHR adopted this report on November 10, 2025. Subsequently, on December 3, 2025, the Commission sent the preliminary draft of the report to the Nicaraguan State in accordance with Articles 59.7 and 59.10 of the IACHR Rules of Procedure. Allowing a month for the receipt of observations from the State, which, however, did not present any information.

II. THE SITUATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS IN 2025

28. In its report Nicaragua: Concentration of Power and the Undermining of the Rule of Law, the IACHR noted that, for several years, a gradual process of weakening of democratic institutions has taken place in Nicaragua, resulting in the breakdown of the principle of separation of powers.[54] In 2025, the IACHR warned that the entry into force of the partial reform of the Nicaraguan Constitution consolidated the institutionalization of the subordination of public powers to presidential control, as well as the apparatus of repression that has restricted fundamental freedoms in the civic space, as discussed below.

A. Consolidation of the concentration of power

29. On February 18, 2025, the Law on Partial Reform of the Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua came into force, amending more than 100 articles of the constitutional text.[55] Among the most significant changes were the adoption of the so-called "direct democracy" model that centralizes power in the office of the president by establishing a co-presidency,[56] the repeal of the principle of separation of powers, and the extension of the presidential term to six years.[57] The reform also eliminated the independence of the

[49] IACHR, Press Release No. 140/25, Nicaragua: IACHR condemns transnational repression, Washington, D.C., July 14, 2025; Press Release No. 137/25, IACHR expresses concern over new violations of the right to nationality in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., July 10, 2025; Press Release No. 73/25, Seven years after the beginning of the crisis in Nicaragua, IACHR condemns consolidation of the authoritarian regime, Washington, D.C., April 14, 2025.

[50] IACHR, Thematic Hearing "Nicaragua: New Patterns of Repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

[51] IACHR, Press Release No. 189/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of five individuals in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., September 18, 2025; Press Release No. 71/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of Douglas Gamaliel Pérez Centeno in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., April 9, 2025; Press Release No. 53/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of José Alejandro Hurtado Díaz in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., March 14, 2025; Press Release No. 42/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of Julio Antonio Quintana Carvajal in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., February 20, 2025; Press Release No. 11/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures to Angélica Chavarría in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., January 14, 2025.

[52] IACHR, Press Release No. 3/25, IACHR requests from Inter-American Court an extension of provisional measures in favor of Catalino Leo Cárcamo in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., January 3, 2025.

[53] Cf. I/A Court H.R., Urgent measures issued in favor of Catalino Leo Cárcamo Herrera and the members of his family regarding Nicaragua. Extension of the provisional measures in the Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. regarding Nicaragua. Order of the President of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of January 6, 2025.

[54] IACHR, Nicaragua: Concentration of Power and the Undermining of the Rule of Law, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 288, October 25, 2021, para. 174.

[55] Republic of Nicaragua, Law No. 1234 (Law Partially Amending the Political Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua), adopted on January 30, 2025, published in Official Gazette (La Gaceta) No. 32, February 18, 2025.

[56] Republic of Nicaragua, Law No. 1234 (Law Partially Amending the Political Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua), adopted on January 30, 2025, published in Official Gazette (La Gaceta) No. 32, February 18, 2025, Art. 2.

[57] Republic of Nicaragua, Law No. 1234 (Law Partially Amending the Political Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua), adopted on January 30, 2025, published in Official Gazette (La Gaceta) No. 32, February 18, 2025, Arts. 132 ff.

Supreme Electoral Council and the kinship restrictions that had placed limits on who could run for the presidency, thereby strengthening the concentration of power in the Ortega-Murillo family.[58]

30. However, in 2025, the entry into force of the amendments resulted in Rosario Murillo's assumption of the office of co-president, without an election, as well as the de facto extension of the term of office of the President of the Republic. On March 6, 2025, the National Assembly passed a new electoral law in line with the Constitution, further restricting political pluralism and the minimum requirements for participation.[59] According to civil society organizations, the law preserves the discretion that has characterized election management under the Daniel Ortega regime and consolidates it as an institutional practice.[60] Among other provisions, it eliminates the recognition of traditional forms of organization and participation of Indigenous peoples within regional political parties; removes mechanisms of direct democracy—such as plebiscites and referendums—as well as the possibility of challenging decisions of the Supreme Electoral Council; and expands the grounds for cancellation of the legal status of political parties.[61]

31. The constitutional reform also enshrines the subordination of the judiciary to the executive branch.[62] In that regard, on May 13, 2025, the National Assembly passed a new Organic Law of the Judicial System that de facto eliminated the judicial career, abolished public merit- and competition-based examinations as a mechanism for entry and promotion, and granted the National Council of Judicial Administration and Career—under the control of the executive branch—discretionary power to appoint judges and technical personnel of the judicial system.[63] It also authorizes restrictions on the publicity of criminal proceedings at the discretion of the judicial authority and empowers the office of the president of the Republic to appoint the President of the Supreme Court of Justice, replacing the previous internal election system.[64]

32. Lastly, other aspects of concern institutionalized through the constitutional amendments include the subordination of the Ministerio Público (Public Prosecution Service) to direct presidential control; the elimination of safeguards limiting military intervention to exceptional cases, thereby allowing the Presidency to deploy the army when it considers that the "stability" of the country is at risk;[65] and the suspension of human rights under states of emergency, without any restrictions.[66] In addition, the amendments legalize politically affiliated security forces and state-aligned vigilante groups by establishing a volunteer

[58] Information received by the IACHR in the framework of the thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025; see also United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 6.

[59] Republic of Nicaragua, Law No. 1242 (Electoral Law), adopted on march 6, 2025, published in Official Gazette (La Gaceta) No. 46, March 10, 2025.

[60] According to a civil society analysis, the new law consists of 162 articles, resulting from the elimination of 45 provisions of the previous version and the incorporation of 22 new ones. Of the 140 articles that maintain consistency with previous legislation, 86 have been modified (61 percent), while the remaining 54 remain substantially unchanged; some contain slight variations in wording that do not alter the meaning of the provision. Urnas Abiertas, El análisis de la nueva ley electoral. Nueva ley, viejo truco: el disfraz legal del autoritarismo, March 2025.

[61] Cf. Urnas Abiertas, El análisis de la nueva ley electoral. Nueva ley, viejo truco: el disfraz legal del autoritarismo, March 2025.

[62] Republic of Nicaragua, Law No. 1234 (Law Partially Amending the Political Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua), adopted on January 30, 2025, published in Official Gazette (La Gaceta) No. 32, February 18, 2025, Art. 8.

[63] Republic of Nicaragua, Law No. 1244 (Organic Law of the Judicial System of the Republic of Nicaragua), adopted on March 27, 2025, published in Official Gazette (La Gaceta) No. 61, March 31, 2025, Arts. 92 ff.

[64] Republic of Nicaragua, Law No. 1244 (Organic Law of the Judicial System of the Republic of Nicaragua), adopted on March 27, 2025, published in Official Gazette (La Gaceta) No. 61, March 31, 2025, Arts. 23 ff.

[65] Information received by the IACHR in the framework of the thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025; see also United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025.

[66] Information received by the IACHR in the framework of the thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025; see also United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025.

auxiliary police force and patriotic reserve forces made up of civilians.[67] According to GHREN, this set of provisions granted the executive branch "virtually unlimited power over the population."[68]

33. The IACHR reiterates its concern about the scope and purpose of the constitutional amendments, the effect of which is to perpetuate the absolute concentration of power[69] in the Ortega-Murillo family and neutralize any possibility of restoring democratic order.[70] Furthermore, they consolidate a regime incompatible with the democratic principles established in the Inter-American Democratic Charter and that underpin the inter-American human rights system.[71] The Commission emphasizes that democracy, the rule of law, and respect for human dignity are essential conditions for the effective functioning of the inter-American order.

B. Closure of civic space

34. In 2025, the IACHR observed that spaces for civic and democratic engagement remained closed. Since 2018, the country has been a police state, characterized by the executive branch directing control, surveillance, and repression through state security institutions and para-state groups, against anyone perceived as an opponent, even beyond its borders.[72] The persistence of criminalization, in turn, maintains the de facto prohibition of any public meeting that is not called by the government or the ruling party, including religious demonstrations, and of any public or private comment or statement that could be considered critical of the government.[73]

35. In this context, in 2025, the OHCHR noted that the entry into force of the partial reform to the Constitution consolidated de jure and de facto control over institutional mechanisms that enable the persecution of political opponents and dissidents.[74] It also stressed that those regressive legal reforms, together with the lack of accountability for human rights violations, maintain a deterrent effect on civic space and citizen participation.[75]

36. At the thematic hearing, "Nicaragua: Impacts of Constitutional and Legal Reforms on Human Rights", civil society organizations denounced that the new Constitution obliges political parties, media, and religious organizations to subordinate their activities to constitutional principles defined by the regime on the basis of party affinity, thereby institutionalizing ideological control over Nicaraguan society and eliminating any possibility of pluralism.[76] In relation to women's rights, they expressed concern about the repeal of Article 48—which established the State's obligation to eliminate obstacles to equality and to ensure the effective

[67] Information received by the IACHR in the framework of the thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025; see also United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025.

[68] UN, "Nicaragua: UN Group of Experts alarmed by far-reaching change to the Constitution," November 25, 2024.

[69] On the gradual concentration of power in the executive branch, see IACHR, Nicaragua: Concentration of Power and the Undermining of the Rule of Law, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 288, October 25, 2021.

[70] IACHR, Press Release No. 295/24, "Nicaragua: Nicaragua: IACHR condemns constitutional amendments that eliminate democratic checks and balances," Washington, D.C., November 27, 2024.

[71] IACHR, Press Release No. 295/24, "Nicaragua: Nicaragua: IACHR condemns constitutional amendments that eliminate democratic checks and balances," Washington, D.C., November 27, 2024.

[72] IACHR, 2022 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, April 1, 2023, para. 11; and IACHR, Closure of civic space in Nicaragua, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 212/23, September 23, 2023, para. 14.

[73] I/A Court H.R., Case of Chavarría Morales et al. v. Nicaragua. Provisional Measures, Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of July 1, 2025, para. 24.

[74] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, paras. 78 and 79.

[75] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, paras. 78 and 79.

[76] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

participation of women in political, economic, and social life—as well as the imposition of a single definition of "family" in the constitutional text.[77]

37. In this context of regressive legislative changes, repression of human rights defenders has intensified.[78] Women defenders and feminist activists reported that they continue to face political and institutional violence, in addition to gender-specific repression.[79] According to their accounts, 279 women's rights or feminist organizations were forcibly closed and had their assets confiscated.[80] In Nicaragua, many of these individuals continue to work clandestinely, at great risk to their lives and wellbeing. In particular, the IACHR highlights the case of defender Vilma Núñez de Escorcia, a beneficiary of provisional measures granted by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, who remains in a situation of extreme defenselessness within Nicaraguan territory and of statelessness in situ.[81]

38. In 2025, the IACHR received information on the continued dismantling of civil society organizations, including religious entities, international development cooperation organizations, and groups historically linked to the ruling party.[82] These included: Save the Children International, Fundación Suiza para la Cooperación al Desarrollo, Terre des Hommes Schweiz, Instituto Nacional para la Promoción y Defensa de los Derechos del Consumidor (INDEC), Lutheran World Relief, Fundación Alzheimer de Nicaragua, Asociación Pro-Ayuda a la Niñez Nicaragüense (APAN), Congregación Fraternidad de Hermanas Misioneras Serviam y la Asociación de Iglesias Presbiterianas de Nicaragua (AIPN). According to the available information, in some cases the cancellations were accompanied by the confiscation and unlawful appropriation of assets; in others, the organizations themselves requested their dissolution due to a lack of funds or the clear impossibility of pursuing their objectives, which, under the legislation, would allow them to determine the destination of their assets.[83]

39. In Nicaragua, the Commission has recorded the dissolution of more than 5,600 organizations, out of a total of 7,227 constituted in 2018,[84] amounting to 75 percent of the country's associative fabric. These mass closures have severely limited the ability of civil society actors to participate in political, social, cultural, and religious life, as well as in activities for the promotion and defense of human rights. At the same time, it reflects an intent to consolidate a regime based on control and the suppression of all forms of pluralism.

40. Likewise, the IACHR noted the persistence of severe restrictions on freedom of religion, including the prohibition of religious celebrations in public spaces, the surveillance of masses, and the

[77] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

[78] Cf. Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), "La persecución de opositores políticos persiste en Nicaragua y se extiende fuera de sus fronteras," 27 June 2025.

[79] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

[80] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

[81] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26, 2025, para. 64.

[82] Cf. BBC News, "El gobierno de Daniel Ortega ordena el cierre de Save the Children y otras 14 ONG, en una nueva arremetida contra la sociedad civil de Nicaragua", January 8, 2025; Nicaragua Investiga, "Ministerio del Interior de Nicaragua Disuelve 10 organismos, entre ellas el Instituto IDEAS", February 24, 2025; Confidencial, "Eliminan el Instituto de Defensa de los Derechos del Consumidor y otras nueve oenegés", March 28, 2025; DW, "Nicaragua: Ortega disuelve la Fundación Suiza y otras 10 ONG", March 29, 2025;; Confidencial, "Eliminan a la sandinista Unión de Periodistas de Nicaragua y otras 14 oenegés", May 26, 2025; 100% Noticias, "Cancela 15 ONG, incluida la oficialista Unión de Periodistas de Nicaragua", May 26, 2025; Artículo 66, "Régimen de Ortega y Murillo cancela 15 ONG, entre ellas una de excombatientes sandinistas", August 21, 2025.

[83] Cf. BBC News, "El gobierno de Daniel Ortega ordena el cierre de Save the Children y otras 14 ONG, en una nueva arremetida contra la sociedad civil de Nicaragua", January 8, 2025; Nicaragua Investiga, "Ministerio del Interior de Nicaragua Disuelve 10 organismos, entre ellas el Instituto IDEAS", February 24, 2025; Confidencial, "Eliminan el Instituto de Defensa de los Derechos del Consumidor y otras nueve oenegés", March 28, 2025; DW, "Nicaragua: Ortega disuelve la Fundación Suiza y otras 10 ONG", March 29, 2025;; Confidencial, "Eliminan a la sandinista Unión de Periodistas de Nicaragua y otras 14 oenegés", May 26, 2025; 100% Noticias, "Cancela 15 ONG, incluida la oficialista Unión de Periodistas de Nicaragua", May 26, 2025; Artículo 66, "Régimen de Ortega y Murillo cancela 15 ONG, entre ellas una de excombatientes sandinistas", August 21, 2025.

[84] Cf. State of Nicaragua, Note MPN-OAS-0069-100LAR, Observations of the State of Nicaragua on the preliminary document titled "Chapter IV.B - Annual Report of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights," December 19, 2019, p. 53.

criminalization of expressions of faith.[85] Among other events, on January 30, 2025, the IACHR learned of the forced closure of the San Luis Gonzaga Seminary, belonging to the Diocese of Matagalpa, and the expulsion of its seminarians.[86] During Holy Week, authorities banned public processions, and priests reported surveillance, controls over the content of sermons, and the obligation to submit photographs to the National Police prior to celebrating liturgical acts.[87] According to available information, since 2018, more than 300 priests, nuns, and other religious personnel of the Catholic Church have been forced to abandon their pastoral work in Nicaragua.[88]

41. In the course of 2025, state repression also extended to Protestant and evangelical congregations.[89] According to public information, Christian and evangelical pastors and leaders who remain in the country are required to confine their sermons exclusively to theological content and to refrain from any social or political criticism.[90] In addition, state agents reportedly make regular visits to their homes and monitor their activities and communications with other churches as a means of intimidation.[91] Since 2022, evangelical pastor and leader Efrén Antonio Vílchez López has been deprived of his liberty in retaliation for his critical stance towards the government.[92] On July 17, 2025, evangelical pastor Rudy Palacios Vargas was arrested without a warrant, together with four family members. They are beneficiaries of precautionary measures granted by the IACHR due to the serious risk to their life and personal integrity as a result of the conditions of detention in which they are being held.[93]

42. In the view of the IACHR these actions are evidence of the persistence of a repressive policy to criminalize religious expression and completely control civic and democratic spaces in Nicaragua, facilitated by subordinating all branches of government to the executive and the installation of a system bereft of checks and balances.

43. The Commission emphasizes that a free, plural and inclusive civic space is an essential condition for the effective functioning of democracy and the rule of law, as well as for the exercise of the freedoms of association, assembly, expression and religion. In particular, freedom of association is an appropriate way for people to participate and act collectively in all matters that interest or affect them. Together with the right of assembly and freedom of expression, they comprise a democratic vehicle for collectively expressing peaceful dissent and criticism of the government.[94]

[85] IACHR, Press Release No. 73/25, Seven years after the beginning of the crisis in Nicaragua, IACHR condemns consolidation of the authoritarian regime, Washington, D.C., April 14, 2025.

[86] Confidencial. "Régimen se toma el Seminario Mayor de Filosofía San Luis Gonzaga en Matagalpa", January 30, 2025; La Prensa, "Régimen sandinista confisca de facto instalaciones del Seminario Mayor de Filosofía San Luis Gonzaga, de Matagalpa", January 21, 2025; Despacho 505, "Denuncian confiscación del Seminario San Luis Gonzaga, de la Diócesis de Matagalpa", January 20, 2025.

[87] El País, "Enviar fotos, moderar sermones y no orar por Nicaragua: así controla Ortega a los sacerdotes", March 21, 2025; Agencia Informativa Católica Argentina (AICA), "Nicaragua vivirá su tercera Semana Santa con procesiones bajo vigilancia", April 11, 2025; Vatican News, "Holy Week celebrations banned in Nicaragua", April 17, 2025.

[88] Of this total, at least 51 priests have been ejected from the country, 80 nuns expelled, 70 people banned from returning to the country, and more than 71 priests gone into exile because of threats of imprisonment or death. Martha Patricia Molina, "Nicaragua: una Iglesia perseguida. VII Entrega", 2025, p. 9.

[89] Cf. CWS, "Total Control: The Erradication of Independent Voices in Nicaragua", 2025.

[90] Puertas Abiertas, "Aumenta la vigilancia sobre líderes cristianos en Nicaragua", May 5, 2025; Puertas Abiertas, "Policía invade iglesia en Nicaragua", April 5, 2025; Cf. CWS, "Total Control: The Erradication of Independent Voices in Nicaragua", 2025.

[91] Puertas Abiertas, "Aumenta la vigilancia sobre líderes cristianos en Nicaragua", May 5, 2025; Puertas Abiertas, "Policía invade iglesia en Nicaragua", April 5, 2025.

[92] Freedom of Religion or Belief in full, "El pastor Efrén Antonio Vílchez López es una de las cientos de voces independientes que el gobierno nicaragüense se apresura a silenciar", April 2, 2025.

[93] IACHR, Resolution 65/2025, Precautionary measure No. 1230-25, Armando José Bermúdez Mojica and others regarding Nicaragua, September 16, 2025; Resolution 100/2024, Precautionary measure No. 1245-24, Carlos Alberto Vanegas Gómez and Efrén Antonio Vílchez López regarding Nicaragua, December 16, 2024.

[94] IACHR, Closure of civic space in Nicaragua, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 212/23, September 23, 2023, para. 54; OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 212/23, September 23, 2023, para. 233.

C. Arbitrary detention

44. During 2025, the IACHR received information about further arbitrary detentions and the intensification of patterns of repression involving the concealment or forced disappearance of detained individuals. This context is particularly serious in Nicaragua due to the lack of judicial independence, coupled with constitutional reforms that continued to restrict due process guarantees and judicial protection.[95]

45. Civil society organizations informed the IACHR that the constitutional amendments repealed Articles 33 and 34, which enshrined judicial guarantees, including the review of detention within 48 hours, the right to be informed of the charges, and the prohibition against keeping in jail anyone who has served their sentence.[96] Similarly, the express protection against torture and cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment, previously recognized in Article 36, was eliminated.[97]

46. At the thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," the IACHR received information about an escalation in repression consisting of mass raids, police operations, and arbitrary detentions in different departments of the country.[98] In particular, civil society organizations indicated that these actions mainly targeted high-profile individuals, including indigenous community leaders and authorities, journalists, religious persons, activists, members of political parties, and former military personnel. They also informed the IACHR of arrests of persons linked to the regime itself or to the official party, which could constitute reprisals for unauthorized political activities.[99]

47. According to the information received, in 2025, arbitrary detentions have been notable for a lack of information regarding the whereabouts of detainees, many of whom have remained missing for prolonged periods.[100] For their part, families have been forced to visit multiple detention centers in search of information, which it was described as "a deliberate act of psychological attrition" and "one of the cruelest expressions of repression in Nicaragua".[101] In this regard, they reported having to cope not only the absence of their loved ones, but also institutional harassment when attempting to obtain information at police stations, prisons, and hospitals. The State's silence regarding the whereabouts of arbitrarily detained persons, together with the pattern of forced disappearances, prolongs uncertainty and anguish and is part of a deliberate strategy to intimidate the population and discourage any form of criticism or denunciation of repression in the country.[102]

48. In this context, on October 3, 2025, the United Nations Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances reported that everyone who tries to exercise or defend their rights is at risk of

[95] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas; UDJ, Colectivo Nunca Más and IM-Defensoras, ¿Dónde más busco? Vidas suspendidas, desapariciones forzadas en Nicaragua y la resistencia de quienes les buscan, August 2025.

[96] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

[97] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.

[98] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas.

[99] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas.

[100] Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, List of political prisoners, September 2025; Cf. IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas.

[101] Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, List of political prisoners, September 2025.

[102] Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, List of political prisoners, September 2025; Cf. IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas.

being forcibly disappeared in Nicaragua.[103] It noted that these disappearances "appear to be ordered at the highest levels of authority and are designed to instill fear across society, sending the message that anyone who voices a differing opinion may suffer the same fate."[104] In this regard, it called on Nicaraguan authorities to stop arbitrary detentions and enforced disappearances, to release all those still detained arbitrarily, and to ensure their families know their fate and whereabouts.[105]

49. The IACHR urges the State of Nicaragua to immediately cease repression, arbitrary detentions, and, in particular, the concealment of detainees as a form of punishment and control. The IACHR recalls that forced disappearances, even when of short duration, constitute one of the most serious human rights violations, as they place victims outside any form of judicial protection and expose them to extreme risk to their life and well-being. The practice violates the right to recognition as a person before the law, the right to personal liberty and security, and the right to be free from torture or other cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment, in addition to posing a direct threat to the right to life.[106]

D. Persons deprived of liberty

50. The situation of persons arbitrarily deprived of their liberty continues to be of grave concern due to the deplorable conditions of detention, as well as allegations of ill-treatment and torture. According to information from the Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, as of August 31, 2025, at least 63 persons reportedly remained arbitrarily deprived of their liberty in the context of the crisis that began on April 18, 2018, of whom 49 were men and 14 women. Of that total, 21 persons were reportedly detained at the National Penitentiary System "La Modelo", two at the "La Esperanza", one was under house arrest, one was hospitalized, and 33 were reported forcibly disappeared.[107]

51. In that regard, civil society organizations informed the IACHR that many of those detained for political reasons were being held in maximum-security cells, under prolonged isolation, without ventilation or natural light, and with restrictions on family visits and access to correspondence or reading materials. They also denounced detention conditions characterized by a lack of beds, mattresses, and blankets; unsanitary conditions and poor ventilation; inadequate food; lack of access to drinking water and medicines; and negligent medical care, among other factors.[108]

52. According to the information and testimonies received by the IACHR, these conditions have had a serious adverse impact on the physical and mental health of detainees, especially those in vulnerable situations. In particular, the IACHR is concerned about the situation of the 22 elderly detainees, many of whom suffer from chronic illnesses and have been in prolonged detention without adequate medical care, which exacerbates the decline in their health and increases the risk to their life and well-being.[109]

53. In this context, the Group of Experts on Human Rights in Nicaragua documented prolonged isolation without objective grounds, as well as confinement in punishment cells for lengthy periods. It also denounced acts amounting to physical torture and other cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment during exhaustive interrogations aimed at obtaining information; beatings; sexual violence, (rape, threats of rape, and forced nudity); electric shocks, (including to the genitals); burns; asphyxiation; waterboarding;

[103] Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), Special Procedures, Press release, "Nicaragua: UN experts say continuing repression of population through enforced disappearances must stop", October 3, 2025.
[104] Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), Special Procedures, Press release, "Nicaragua: UN experts say continuing repression of population through enforced disappearances must stop", October 3, 2025.
[105] Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), Special Procedures, Press release, "Nicaragua: UN experts say continuing repression of population through enforced disappearances must stop", October 3, 2025.
[106] IACHR, Press Release No. 176/25, "Enforced disappearance inflicts profound suffering on victims and violates their right not to be subjected to torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment", Washington, D.C., August 29, 2025.
[107] Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, Report of August 2025, September 2025.
[108] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., July 25, 2025.
[109] Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, Report of August 2025, September 2025.

injuries inflicted with penetrating objects; humiliating searches; intimidation with dogs; and the use of common prisoners to monitor and harass political prisoners.[110]

54. In 2025, the Commission granted precautionary measures in favor of 10 individuals arbitrarily deprived of their liberty whose families reported having no information regarding their whereabouts, fate, or state of health. These cases are characterized by an absence of official information on places of detention, lack of access to legal representation and contact with family members, as well as the absence of judicial records to verify the conditions under which the beneficiaries are being held,[111] which could also constitute enforced disappearance under international law.

55. On August 29, 2025, the IACHR learned of the death of Carlos Cardenas Zepeda, age 68, who was arrested on August 18 in retaliation for his work as legal adviser to the Nicaraguan Episcopal Conference during the 2018 National Dialogue. Days earlier, on August 25, the death of Mauricio Alonso Petri, age 64, former president of the opposition party Movimiento Renovador Sandinista, was reported; he had been arrested on July 18.[112] In both cases, relatives reported that they were unaware of the individuals' whereabouts and state of health and were notified only upon delivery of the bodies. They further indicated that they did not receive official information regarding the causes of death and were allegedly subjected to intimidation and threats aimed at hindering the conduct of funeral services in accordance with their beliefs.[113]

56. With regard to access to justice for persons deprived of liberty, the Commission received information on persistent violations of the right of access to justice, fair trial guarantees, and the right to a defense, in the context of the complete absence of an impartial and independent justice system. Among the impacts recorded, the following stand out: restrictions on access to case files, refusal to process appeals, harassment and threats towards legal representatives, and the conduct of legal proceedings virtually and without legal counsel present.[114]

57. The Commission urges the regime in Nicaragua to guarantee dignified treatment and access to adequate medical care, sufficient nutritious food, and healthy conditions of detention for all persons in their custody. The IACHR emphasizes that providing adequate medical care to persons deprived of liberty is an obligation that directly stems from the State's duty to guarantee the right to humane treatment set forth in Articles 1.1 and 5 of the American Convention, and Article I of the American Declaration.[115]

58. Lastly, the IACHR renews its call to guarantee the right to life and humane treatment for all persons in its custody, as well as to comply with the precautionary and provisional measures granted by the IACHR and the Inter-American Court. In addition, it urges the State to immediately release everyone who was arbitrarily deprived of their liberty in the context of the crisis that began on April 18, 2018.

---

[110] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Report of the Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, A/HRC/58/26, 26 May 2025, paras. 43-45.

[111] Press release No. 011/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures to Angélica Chavarría in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., January 10, 2025; Press release No. 042/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of Julio Antonio Quintana Carvajal in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., February 20, 2025; Press Release No. 053/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of José Alejandro Hurtado Díaz in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., March 14, 2025; Press Release No. 071/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of Douglas Gamaliel Pérez Centeno in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., April 9, 2025; Press Release No. 131/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of Aníbal Martín Rivas Reed in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., June 27, 2025; Press release No. 189/25, IACHR grants precautionary measures in favor of five individuals in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., September 18, 2025.

[112] El País, "Detenciones letales en Nicaragua: otro opositor muere bajo custodia del régimen de Ortega y Murillo", Washington, D.C., September 2, 2025; Confidencial, "Dictadura entrega a segundo preso político fallecido en una semana", San José, August 30, 2025; SwissInfo/Agencia EFE, "Organismos denuncian «exterminio silencioso» de opositores presos en Nicaragua", Washington, D.C., August 31, 2025.

[113] El País, "Detenciones letales en Nicaragua: otro opositor muere bajo custodia del régimen de Ortega y Murillo", Washington, D.C., September 2, 2025; Confidencial, "Dictadura entrega a segundo preso político fallecido en una semana", San José, August 30, 2025; SwissInfo/Agencia EFE, "Organismos denuncian «exterminio silencioso» de opositores presos en Nicaragua", Washington, D.C., August 31, 2025.

[114] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., July 25, 2025; Mechanism for the Recognition of Political Prisoners, List of political prisoners, September 2025.

[115] IACHR, 2022 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 50 rev. 1, April 1, 2023, para. 102.

E. Persons in the context of human mobility and transnational repression [116]

59. During 2025, the Commission received information and testimonies regarding the continued displacement of Nicaraguans to other countries as a result of repression. At the same time, it noted the worsening of a policy of persecution beyond national borders aimed at silencing those considered opponents of the government, despite being in exile. [117]

60. In Nicaragua, the intensification of repression has forced more than 400,000 people to leave the country in order to safeguard their life and personal integrity since the onset of the human rights crisis in 2018. According to the most recent report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, published in June 2025, the number of applicants for international protection increased fivefold between 2020 and 2024, rising from 70,786 to 386,221, primarily in Costa Rica, the United States, Mexico, Spain, and Panama. Seventy percent of that population is located in Costa Rica, which has received more than 380,000 applications for asylum since 2018. [118]

61. In this context, in 2025, the IACHR expressed concern regarding the intensification of repression against Nicaraguans in situations of human mobility, human rights defenders, and opposition members in exile. [119] Its concern relates in particular to acts of persecution, harassment, surveillance, violence, and threats attributed to state agents or persons linked to the regime. According to the information received, since 2018, at least six persons perceived as opponents have been arbitrarily deprived of their lives as part of this cross-border violence. [120] In this regard, the Commission lamented the killing of retired Major Roberto Samcam at his residence in San José, Costa Rica, on June 19, 2025, in an attack by an individual posing as a courier who shot him multiple times. Mr. Samcam had been a refugee since 2018 and was a well-known political analyst and critic of the regime. [121]

62. Likewise, available information indicates that other mechanisms of transnational repression used by the regime include the misuse of INTERPOL red notices—alerts issued to request the location and provisional arrest of individuals for extradition purposes—against persons considered opponents or dissidents in exile; extradition requests against asylum seekers; as well as the manipulation of financial compliance regulations to block access to the banking system for Nicaraguan individuals and organizations abroad. [122]

63. In its report "Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders", the Group of Experts on Human Rights in Nicaragua documented a series of transnational human rights violations, including forced expulsions and entry bans, property confiscations, passport denials, and the alteration or deletion of civil records. [123] According to the Group, the effect of these measures is to "deprive victims of their legal identity, their property and income, their ability to move freely and, ultimately, their recognition as persons before the law." [124] Many of them are rendered de jure or de facto stateless. In addition, effective access to asylum and other protection

[116] For a definition of transnational repression, see: Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), Civic Space Brief: What is Transnational Repression?, 2025, p. 1.

[117] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025.

[118] UNHCR, Global Trends 2024, June 12, 2025.

[119] IACHR, Press Release No. 140/25, Nicaragua: IACHR condemns transnational repression, Washington, D.C., July 14, 2025.

[120] Cf. IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas.

[121] IACHR, Press Release No. 140/25, Nicaragua: IACHR condemns transnational repression, Washington, D.C., July 14, 2025.

[122] Cf. IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas; Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, pp. 24 and 25.

[123] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 29.

[124] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 29.

mechanisms is impaired by the absence of documentation to sustain their situation.[125] The deliberate use of deprivation of nationality and erasure or denial of official documents has imposed what victims themselves describe as "civil death."[126] To that extent, the Group of Experts concluded that these acts constitute serious violations of international human rights law that, in some cases, amount to crimes against humanity.[127]

64. In this context, civil society organizations informed the IACHR that, since January 2024, there have been at least 290 cases of individuals denied entry into the country and an additional 348 acts of migratory repression, including forced displacement and collective expulsions.[128] They also denounced persistent arbitrary refusal to issue or renew identity documents, confiscation of passports, and tightening of immigration controls, particularly as a result of new reforms to the Immigration Law that reportedly empower authorities to deny entry to the country to persons considered a "social risk."[129]

65. The IACHR rejected the adoption of the Law of Partial Reform of Articles 23 and 25 of the Political Constitution in May 2025. This reform establishes that any Nicaraguan who acquires another nationality automatically loses Nicaraguan nationality, with the exception of Central American citizens residing in Nicaragua.[130] In this regard, the Commission warned that the law could give rise to situations in which Nicaraguans who have acquired another nationality—including in cases of exile, forced displacement, or family reunification—automatically lose their Nicaraguan nationality, without due process and without consideration of other potential consequences. This risk is further exacerbated in contexts in which the acquisition of a second nationality is conditional upon retaining the nationality of origin or where, apparently, a second nationality has been acquired without having actually obtained it.[131]

66. Lastly, the IACHR was informed that harassment, acts of intimidation, and reprisals affect the families of exiled persons and persons arbitrarily deprived of their nationality who remain in Nicaragua.[132] Such acts include arbitrary dismissals, confiscation of property, detentions, restrictions on mobility within the country, and constant surveillance, among others. According to the Group of Experts on Human Rights in Nicaragua, this "proxy punishment" is intended to exert pressure on real or perceived opponents in exile, generating a more severe psychological impact on victims and their families—including older persons, children, and adolescents—and contributing to a climate of generalized fear and self-censorship that stifles dissent both within the country and in exile.[133]

67. The IACHR urges the State of Nicaragua to end to repressive policies and practices that generate forced displacement, exile, and statelessness, and to guarantee the full exercise of the rights to nationality, identity, freedom of movement, and return to the country, in accordance with inter-American standards in that regard. It also calls on the State to cease the use of immigration control as a tool of political

[125] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 29.
[126] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 29.
[127] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, pp. 29 and 30.
[128] IACHR, Public hearing on the topic "Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., March 7, 2025.
[129] IACHR, Public hearing on the topic "Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., March 7, 2025.
[130] Cf. National Assembly of Nicaragua, "Aprobamos reforma constitucional que reafirma nuestro nacionalismo y patriotismo", May 16, 2025.
[131] IACHR, Press Release No. 137/25, IACHR expresses concern over new violations of the right to nationality in Nicaragua, Washington, D.C., May 30, 2025.
[132] Cf. IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025; Supplementary information in thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, in IACHR archive, provided by UDJ, Race and Equality, FIDH, and Urnas Abiertas.
[133] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, pp. 29 and 30.

persecution, to reinstate documents and civil records that have been annulled, and to ensure that no nationality-related procedure is used for retaliatory purposes.

F. Indigenous peoples and Afro-descendent communities

68. In 2025, the IACHR published its report "Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua," in which it concluded that the physical and cultural existence of these peoples is at risk due to violence perpetrated by armed settlers with the aim of dispossessing of their ancestral lands and displacing them.[134] In particular, the IACHR documented a series of armed attacks, physical assaults, kidnappings, targeted killings, sexual violence, threats, harassment, the burning of homes, the destruction of livelihoods, and other acts of violence perpetrated in recent years that remain unpunished.[135]

69. At the same time, in its report, the Commission pointed out that the context of violence on the Caribbean Coast was not an isolated phenomenon, but rather formed part of a set of state actions and omissions that had facilitated the dispossession and exploitation of land and natural resources for the benefit of the ruling regime and private interests.[136] Widespread corruption, the militarization of the region, the free hand accorded to the security forces under the command of the Ortega-Murillo regime, the imposition of parallel structures, and the dismantling of the autonomy regime have facilitated the dispossession of indigenous and Afro-descendent territories.[137]

70. According to Fundación del Río, between 2023 and 2025, the executive branch granted more than 20 mining concessions to Chinese. companies for more than 250,000 hectares, including new open-pit exploitations on the North Caribbean Coast, without fulfilling its duty to carry out free and informed prior consultation.[138] In 2025, the IACHR urged the States of origin of cattle, monoculture, logging, and mining companies to adopt measures to supervise and regulate the activities of their national companies abroad, in line with international standards in that regard.[139]

71. In 2025, the establishment of a regime concentrating absolute power further deepened the extreme vulnerability of indigenous and Afro-descendant communities. In particular, the constitutional amendments dismantled the autonomy of the Caribbean Coast that had been enshrined in the Constitution since 1987. At the same time, the Electoral Law passed in March did away with recognition of the traditional forms of organization and political participation of communities through regional parties.[140]

72. Civil society organizations also denounced the persistent criminalization of indigenous leaders and forest rangers on the Caribbean Coast.[141] In 2025, at least 10 indigenous persons continued to be detained in particularly serious conditions, some in situations of enforced disappearance or held in prisons far from their communities, without access to medical care, facing restrictions on communicating in their own

[134] IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, para. 205.
[135] IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, para. 205.
[136] IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, para. 206.
[137] IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, para. 206.
[138] Confidencial, "Condenan entrega de concesión minera a empresa china en la Reserva de Biosfera de Río San Juan", July 29, 2025; The IACHR was informed that at least 41 percent of the territory of the Mayagna Sauni As people had been concessioned to foreign mining companies, such as Calibre Mining Corp., of Canadian capital, and Hemco-Nicaragua S.A., of the MINEROS Group, of Colombian origin. According to reports from the Oakland Institute, other prominent mining corporations and investment firms based in the United States and Canada are also the main financiers of foreign gold mining companies in Nicaragua. Those investors include U.S. firms such as BlackRock Inc., Van Eck Associates Corp., Invesco Ltd. and Wexford Capital LP, as well as Canadian mining corporations. IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, para. 211.
[139] IACHR, Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua, August 25, 2025, para. 216.
[140] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: Impacts of constitutional and legal reforms on human rights," 192nd session, Washington, D.C., United States, March 4, 2025.
[141] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025.

language, and subjected to ill-treatment.[142] On March 27, 2025, the Inter-American Court granted provisional measures in favor of four arbitrarily detained Mayangna forest rangers. In addition, it emphasized that indigenous persons deprived of their liberty were a disproportionately affected group, given their special relationship with their land and community, and that imprisonment amounted to an obstacle to the full exercise of the right to cultural identity and generated suffering beyond that inherent in deprivation of liberty.[143]

73. Under international human rights law, the State of Nicaragua has the obligation to ensure the right of Indigenous and Afro-descendent peoples to live freely in their territories, in accordance with their own worldviews, forms of organization, and culture, as an indispensable condition for their survival as collective subjects of rights. It also has an obligation to allow them to return to their traditional territories in safety and with dignity, which includes the State's duty to take measures to combat impunity for those responsible for such violence.[144]

74. Lastly, the IACHR urges Nicaragua to cease repression against indigenous and Afro-descendant communities. It also reiterates that Indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants represent Nicaragua's cultural diversity. Their disappearance or forced assimilation would represent an irreparable fracture in the memory, social fabric, and pluralistic project of the Nicaraguan nation.

III. ECONOMIC, SOCIAL, CULTURAL, AND ENVIRONMENTAL RIGHTS

75. The IACHR, through the Office of its Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural and Environmental Rights (REDESCA), received information on the persistence of serious and systematic violations of the economic, social, cultural, and environmental (ESCE) rights of the population. In addition, it has followed up on the impacts of the climate emergency in the context of the closure of civic and democratic space, as discussed below.

A. Climate emergency and a healthy environment

76. The IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights have observed that, in the context of the global climate emergency, Nicaragua is highly vulnerable to recurrent natural hazards, including droughts, hurricanes, floods and earthquakes.[145] Such extreme weather events not only place people's lives and property at risk, but can also negatively affect progress in poverty reduction and food security. The destruction of agricultural infrastructure and the displacement of communities further aggravate this situation, hindering access to basic resources and limiting development opportunities. Within this framework, the El Niño phenomenon generated record temperatures in 2024, intensifying droughts and reducing rainfall, thereby adversely affecting agricultural output and food security.[146]

77. The Dry Corridor, recognized primarily in Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua, —with some extensions into Costa Rica and Panama— has historically covered 63 municipalities in Nicaragua, accounting for 37 percent of the national territory. Subsistence and small-scale agriculture constitute the main source of livelihood for a significant portion of this population. In this context, climate variability and the effects

[142] IACHR, Thematic hearing "Nicaragua: New patterns of repression," 193rd session, Washington, D.C., United States, July 25, 2025.

[143] I/A Court H.R., Matter of four members of the Mayangna indigenous people deprived of liberty regarding Nicaragua, Provisional Measures, Order of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights of March 27, 2025, para. 29.

[144] In particular, the IACHR has recognized that Indigenous peoples have the right to be protected from forced displacement from their territories as a result of violence. If they are displaced because of violence, they have the right to receive special attention from the State. The forced displacement of Indigenous or tribal villages, groups of families, communities, or peoples from their lands as a result of armed violence means that in many cases they lose their sociocultural integrity and their habitat. IACHR, Indigenous and Tribal Peoples' Rights over Their Ancestral Lands and Natural Resources: Norms and Jurisprudence of the Inter-American Human Rights System, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, December 30, 2009, para. 152.

[145] World Food Programme (WFP), Nicaragua Country Brief, May 2025, 2025.

[146] World Meteorological Organization, State of the Climate in Latin America and the Caribbean 2024, March 28, 2025.

of climate change pose major challenges to sustainable development. According to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the sectors most affected by this variability within the Dry Corridor are agriculture and, to a lesser extent, livestock.[147]

78. Below-average and erratic rainfall has negatively affected agricultural production, led to increases in food prices, and deepened food insecurity among households dependent on the agricultural minimum wage.[148] In the Dry Corridor, climate variability has had a particularly severe impact on family farming, causing production losses and compromising the food security of a large number of people.[149] In addition, rising food prices and global economic pressures have driven up the cost of agricultural inputs, placing local food systems at risk. The FAO has documented that many vulnerable households have adopted negative coping strategies, including reducing the quality and quantity of food consumed, as well as withdrawing children from school.[150]

79. Nicaragua's economy and social indicators are highly vulnerable to external shocks and natural phenomena, given their strong dependence on sectors that are sensitive to climatic conditions.[151] According to the Global Risk Index 2024, the country ranks twentieth, reflecting the frequency and intensity of extreme weather events and their significant contribution to the persistence of food insecurity.[152] According to an FAO report, approximately 19.6 percent of the country's population suffers from hunger. It is also estimated that 15 percent of children under five years of age experience stunting as a result of inadequate nutrition.[153]

80. The IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights have observed that deforestation continues to pose a critical challenge in Nicaragua. According to available information, the country has one of the highest deforestation rates in the region, having lost approximately 22 percent of its forest cover over the past two decades.[154] The United Nations has identified Nicaragua as the State with the highest rate of deforestation in Central America.[155] This loss of forest cover is particularly severe in protected areas of high biodiversity, such as the Indio Maíz Biological Reserve, where deforestation has reached 38.7 percent, and the Río San Juan Wildlife Refuge, with a 32 percent loss of forest cover. In this context, information has been received regarding recent reforms to the forestry legal framework, as well as the role of the National Forestry Institute (INAFOR) in the regulation and protection of forests.[156] According to data for 2022, the Ministry of Environment and Natural Resources (MARENA) reportedly granted 1,007 permits for timber extraction, authorizing the exploitation of 98,389 cubic meters of forest cover during that period.[157]

81. The Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights of the IACHR received information on the situation of the Río San Juan Wildlife Refuge (RVSSJ), one of Nicaragua's most important protected areas, which is facing an unprecedented environmental crisis. According to available data, deforestation, irregular land occupation, and illegal mining have intensified in this area, accelerating the degradation of one of the best-preserved tropical rainforests in Central America, with significant impacts on biodiversity, local ecosystems, and the rights of the communities living in the region.[158] A report by Fundación del Río documents the loss of 13,700 hectares of forest cover in less than a decade, [147] World Meteorological Organization, State of the Climate in Latin America and the Caribbean 2024, March 28, 2025.

[148] WFP, El Niño in Latin America and the Caribbean: 2023-2024, 2024.
[149] WFP, Nicaragua Country Brief, May 2025, 2025.
[150] WFP, Nicaragua Country Brief, May 2025, 2025.
[151] WFP, Nicaragua Country Brief, May 2025, 2025.
[152] WFP, Nicaragua Country Brief, May 2025, 2025.
[153] DW, Ortega retira a Nicaragua de la FAO y exige cierre oficinas, February 5, 2025.
[154] El País, La invasión de Indio Maíz cruza la frontera: colonos nicaragüenses asedian Costa Rica, June 1, 2025.
[155] El País, La invasión de Indio Maíz cruza la frontera: colonos nicaragüenses asedian Costa Rica, June 1, 2025.
[156] El País, Los bosques de Nicaragua, en extinción: en 20 años ya no habrá cobertura forestal, según un estudio, June 18, 2025.
[157] El País, Los bosques de Nicaragua, en extinción: en 20 años ya no habrá cobertura forestal, según un estudio, June 18 2025.
[158] Mongabay Latam, Nicaragua: el bosque húmedo mejor conservado de Centroamérica está en riesgo ante el avance de la deforestación, la minería ilegal y las invasiones, July 16, 2025.

equivalent to 32 percent of the refuge's forest.[159] Likewise, a notable increase in irregular occupation within the RVSSJ has been reported, associated with an increase of more than 290 percent in forest fires in a single year and a 55 percent rise in the construction of unauthorized infrastructure, including housing and settlements.[160] The expansion of illegal mining activities and wildlife trafficking has also been reported, which could have severe impacts on ecosystems and compromise the livelihoods of local communities.

B. Business and human rights

82. The Commission and the Office of its Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights have observed that during 2025 Nicaragua faced significant challenges related to business activities and their potential impacts on human rights. According to the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in 2024, state authorities reportedly allowed the expansion of extractive activities—including mining, logging, pine resin extraction, and cattle ranching—without the prior consent of the communities affected, despite the impacts on their rights.[161] These practices raise serious concerns owing to their potential effects on the economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights of communities.[162] In this context, the Commission recalls the State's duty to consult and seek the consent of persons whose rights could be affected by programs or projects that pose a risk of significant environmental damage.

83. The Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights has received information regarding the adoption in April 2025 of the Environmental Conservation and Sustainable Development Areas Law (Law No. 1248), as well as the issuance of a presidential decree that amends previous provisions and eliminates the public consultation process under the Environmental Assessment System for permits and authorizations related to the use of natural resources.[163]

84. In this context, note has been taken of the concerns expressed by civil society organizations and the academic community, particularly regarding the potential impacts of these reforms on Nicaragua's natural areas and on indigenous and Afro-descendant communities.[164] Among the concerns raised is the possible alteration of the regulatory framework applicable to protected natural areas, which could increase their vulnerability to environmental degradation. It has also been noted that the new legal framework could prioritize "economic development" objectives—particularly through the authorization of activities such as mining, logging, and cattle ranching—over environmental conservation and the protection of the rights of Indigenous and Afro-descendent communities.[165] Similarly, concerns have been raised regarding the lack of clarity surrounding the concept of "rational use" of natural resources, especially in areas such as the Bosawás Biosphere Reserve, which is considered one of the largest and most biodiverse rainforest regions in Latin America.[166]

85. The IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights have continued to monitor the implementation of so-called "special development regimes," through which certain territories have been granted fiscal, legal, and budgetary autonomy to attract [159] Fundación del Río, Valoración Ambiental del Refugio de Vida Silvestre Río San Juan, 2025.

[160] Mongabay Latam, Nicaragua: el bosque húmedo mejor conservado de Centroamérica está en riesgo ante el avance de la deforestación, la minería ilegal y las invasiones, July 16, 2025.
[161] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 66.
[162] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 66.
[163] Assembly of Nicaragua, Bill No. 202510106. Law on Environmental Conservation Areas and Sustainable Development, April 30, 2025; La Gaceta - No. 80, May 7, 2025.
[164] Mongabay Latam, Nicaragua legaliza la explotación de recursos en áreas naturales y dejará de consultar a pueblos indígenas, May 20, 2025.
[165] El País, La invasión de Indio Maíz cruza la frontera: colonos nicaragüenses asedian Costa Rica, June 1, 2025.
[166] Mongabay Latam, Nicaragua legaliza la explotación de recursos en áreas naturales y dejará de consultar a pueblos indígenas, May 20, 2025.

foreign investment.[167] In this context, note has been taken of the entry into force of a partial reform of the Constitution, which entailed the amendment of more than 100 of its articles.[168] Among these amendments, information has been received regarding changes to Article 175 on the political and administrative division of the country.[169] These measures have raised concerns about their potential impact on the rights of local communities, as well as on the environmental impacts, particularly in relation to mining concessions granted in territories encompassed by these special development regimes.[170]

86. The IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights also learned of the approval, on August 5, 2025, of Law No. 1258, known as the Border Territory Law.[171] This legislation defines "border territory" as the area extending from the conventional international boundary up to 15 kilometers into national territory. Article 2 establishes that in order to safeguard sovereignty and national security, territorial integrity, the independence of the country, and peace, the border territory is the property of the Nicaraguan State. Civil society organizations have denounced the potential impacts arising from the adoption of this legislation.[172] According to their analysis, the border strips cover approximately 14,250 square kilometers along the northern border with Honduras and approximately 4,635 square kilometers along the southern border with Costa Rica, encompassing eight indigenous and Afro-descendent territories in the north and one indigenous and Afro-descendent territory in the south.[173] In this regard, the Border Territory Law has raised concerns about its impact on the collective property rights of more than 100 indigenous and Afro-descendent communities situated in these areas. The legislation repealed the 2010 Law on the Legal Regime of Borders, which established the obligation for Nicaragua to respect the international instruments that it had signed and ratified. According to the information received, the new law could potentially lead to militarization, occupation of territories, and appropriation of natural resources belonging to indigenous and Afro-descendent peoples.

87. As noted above, in 2025 the practice of granting mining concessions in indigenous territories without due respect for indigenous peoples' rights to consultation and to free, prior, and informed consent persisted.[174] Illegal gold-mining activities have also been identified in the Rama and Kriol indigenous territory, located in the San Juan River Biosphere Reserve.[175]

88. In this context, indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants continue to face obstacles in exercising their rights related to their territories and self-government. They are exposed to increased violence as well as illegal exploitation, and usurpation of land and resources, which seriously threaten their cultural and physical existence.[176] In turn, in the context of the expansion of mining concessions and their impacts, information has been received that, in some cases, affected communities have not received sufficient, clear, and accessible information about the projects and their potential consequences, have been subjected to undue [167] Concertación Democrática Nicaragüense [@CDNicaraguense], (January 20, 2025), Una vez más, los Ortega Murillo venden la soberanía nacional con los nuevos "Regímenes especiales de Desarrollo", diseñados bajo el [Tweet], Twitter, https://x.com/CDNicaraguense/status/1881364557240656111.

[168] IACHR, Press Release No. 295/24, Nicaragua: IACHR condemns constitutional amendments that eliminates democratic checks and balances, November 27, 2024.

[169] National Assembly of Nicaragua, Aprobamos en primera legislatura reforma parcial a nuestra constitución política, November 22, 2024.

[170] WOLA, Constitutional reform in Nicaragua: Concentration of power and repression of human rights, December 11, 2024; Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights, VIII Annual Report of the Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural and Environmental Rights of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, 2024, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. doc. 39/25 v.3, March 13, 2025; El País, Ortega divide a Nicaragua en "regímenes especiales de desarrollo", zonas de legislación opaca creadas con miras a China, December 3, 2024.

[171] Legislación de Nicaragua, Legislación de Nicaragua Normas Jurídicas Ley No. 1258, Ley De Territorio Fronterizo, August 5, 2025.

[172] Confidencial, Régimen se adjudica el control total de los territorios fronterizos de Nicaragua, August 5, 2025.

[173] BBC News, Por qué Nicaragua declaró propiedad estatal todo el territorio a menos de 15 km de sus frontera August 14, 2025.

[174] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 65.

[175] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 66.

[176] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 82.

pressure, and have not had the necessary time to deliberate freely and in an informed manner.[177] It has also been observed that, even when gold mining is legal, in some countries it operates under legal frameworks that allow the circumvention of environmental regulations or is carried out without effective oversight mechanisms, replicating many of the problems identified in connection with illegal mining.[178] The IACHR emphasizes that the overlap of indigenous territories with protected areas, the expansion of extractive activities, and the granting of mining rights in indigenous territories without adequate processes of free, prior, and informed consultation further exacerbate the vulnerability of these communities.

C. Fiscal and economic policies

89. The IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights have noted that Nicaragua continues to be one of the poorest countries in the region, with a per capita income that remains the second lowest in Latin America, surpassed only by Haiti.[179] In addition, access to basic services, such as electricity, drinking water, and sanitation, continues to be limited, with marked inequalities along territorial and socioeconomic lines. While the Instituto Nacional de Información de Desarrollo (National Development Information Institute) regularly updates statistics on employment and the basic food basket, several key indicators related to education, health, housing, and poverty reduction remain outdated.[180] In addition, there is still a lack of disaggregation of data by gender, ethnicity, age, disability, and region, with the last census having been conducted in 2005.[181] The minimum monthly wage established for 2025 is between 5,950.02 córdobas (approximately US$148) and 13,315.61 córdobas (approximately US$333), depending on the sector.[182] These figures are well below the cost of the basic food basket, reported at 20,394.28 córdobas (about US$555) in January 2025, reflecting the difficulties faced by the population in covering their basic needs.[183]

90. Despite relatively stable economic growth over the past three years, with an average rate of 4 percent according to the World Bank, the Nicaraguan economy remains highly vulnerable to external and climate-related shocks, underscoring the need for fiscal and economic policies grounded in a human rights approach.[184] This requires expanding fiscal space without resorting to regressive measures; moving toward a more progressive tax structure, including higher taxation of income and wealth and a review of inefficient exemptions; strengthening revenue collection in extractive sectors; and introducing environmental fiscal instruments, including disincentives for emissions and deforestation, accompanied by social safeguards. To reduce poverty and inequality, priority should be given to quality social spending in health, education, water, and sanitation; the expansion of social protection systems that are responsive to the life cycle and climate shocks; and the deployment of active employment policies with a gender focus to close gaps and address informality. All cooperation and financing by international financial institutions should incorporate due diligence and human rights–based risk assessments, as well as guarantees of participation and transparency, to avoid adverse impacts, particularly on indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants. Debt management and any fiscal consolidation measures must be assessed in line with the principle of non-regression and the obligation to use the maximum available resources.

[177] United Nations, Annual report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and reports of the Office of the High Commissioner and the Secretary-General, A/HRC/57/20, 2 September 2024.
[178] Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights, Press release No. RD054, REDESCA Warns About the Impact of Illegal Gold Mining and Urges the Guarantee of a Healthy Environment, March 18, 2025.
[179] Ministry of Foreign Affairs, European Union and Cooperation of Spain, Oficina de Información Diplomática, Ficha País, Nicaragua January 2025.
[180] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 55.
[181] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 55.
[182] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 56.
[183] United Nations (UN), Human Rights Council, Human rights situation in Nicaragua, Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/92, 15 August 2025, para. 56.
[184] World Bank Group, Overview: Nicaragua, last updated October 7, 2025.

91. The Commission observes that the deterioration of democratic institutionality and the shrinking of civic space in Nicaragua have direct and cumulative effects on economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights: they restrict participation, access to information, and access to justice; undermine university autonomy and academic freedom; and exacerbate the vulnerability of persons deprived of nationality, indigenous and Afro-descendent peoples, women and girls, and environmental defenders.

92. Under the American Convention, the Inter-American Democratic Charter, inter-American standards, and the Escazú Agreement, the State must respect, protect, and ensure these rights through non-regressive measures and the use of the maximum available resources. Withdrawal from or suspension of cooperation with international organizations does not exempt the State from its obligations or justify restrictions on rights; on the contrary, it heightens the need to strengthen safeguards, transparency, and accountability.

IV. SITUATION OF FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

93. The IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression observed the lack of guarantees for the free and safe exercise of journalism and freedom of expression in Nicaragua. During 2025, a sustained pattern of harassment by state actors against journalists and press workers persisted, including arbitrary arrests and searches,[185] enforced disappearances,[186] forced exile, and arbitrary deprivation of nationality.[187]

94. In addition, a range of threats against the press continues to be documented, including harassment and smear campaigns, monitoring and surveillance practices, stigmatizing statements, the closure of media outlets, the arbitrary blocking of websites—including those of independent media—and other forms of pressure. These developments are taking place in a context further aggravated by the constitutional reform that eliminated democratic checks and balances and imposed additional restrictions on the exercise of freedom of expression.

95. Moreover, reports received during the year indicates that reporting such incidents may result in reprisals, which discourages complaints and contributes to the underreporting of violence against the press.[188] This situation places the independent press in Nicaragua in a state of serious vulnerability. Indeed, organizations such as Reporters Without Borders and the Central American Network of Journalists have described the country as one of the most restrictive environments for the exercise of freedom of expression.[189]

A. Arbitrary detention and forced disappearance of journalists

96. In 2025, the IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression continued to monitor complaints of forced disappearance and arbitrary detention of journalists in Nicaragua, particularly in late 2024 and early 2025, in the context of a renewed escalation of repression.[190] In this regard, they received reports concerning the arrest on October 27, 2024, of journalist Elsbeth D'Anda, director of the [185] Periodistas y Comunicadores Independientes de Nicaragua, Basta ya de represión contra el periodismo nicaragüense, July 12, 2025.

[186] OHCHR, Nicaragua: UN experts say continuing repression of population through enforced disappearances must stop, October 3, 2025.

[187] LatAm Journalism Review, For Nicaraguan journalists, exile and statelessness are the cost of reporting amid repression, April 9, 2025.

[188] Confidencial, "Ellos los tienen, pero los niegan": El reclamo de familiares de presos políticos "desaparecidos", September 8, 2025; La Mesa Redonda, Aumentan a 73 las personas presas políticas en Nicaragua, 33 en condición de desaparición forzada, September 1, 2025.

[189] Artículo 66, Nicaragua es el peor país para la libertad de prensa y el periodismo en toda América Latina, May 2, 2025; Agencia EFE, Nicaragua es el país más crítico para la prensa, dice la directora de Red de Periodistas, August 30, 2025.

[190] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Press Release No. R324/25, The SRFOE urges Nicaragua to cease persecution of the press and release all persons arbitrarily detained, December 19, 2024; IACHR, Press release No. 295/24, Nicaragua: IACHR condemns constitutional amendments that eliminates democratic checks and balances, November 27, 2024.

program La Cobertura, broadcast by Canal 23.[191] Since that date, no official information has been forthcoming regarding her situation or whereabouts.[192]

97. On November 22, 2024, journalist Catalino Leo Cárcamo Herrera was arrested by state security agents in the department of León.[193] During the arrest, police officers—one of whom reportedly belonged to the Directorate of Special Operations—intercepted him in the street, confiscated his cell phone, and violently forced him in a patrol vehicle. Individuals close to Cárcamo went to the La Paz Centro police station, where he was allegedly taken; however, authorities reportedly refused to provide information on his whereabouts.[194] In the absence of any response regarding his situation, in January 2025 the Commission requested provisional measures from the Inter-American Court of Human Rights.[195] On February 4, 2025, the Court granted the measures and ordered the State to report on his whereabouts and proceed with his immediate release.[196] Nevertheless, as of this writing, the journalist's location remains unknown,[197] despite international requests for proof of life.[198]

98. In 2025, the Commission and the Office of its Special Rapporteur also documented the detention of Irving Guerrero Montes, a retired journalist and former correspondent for Radio Corporación and Canal 23. According to public information, Guerrero was arrested on February 9, 2025, in the city of León by agents of the National Police, on charges of illegal possession of weapons.[199] Various reports suggest that the arrest may have been carried out in retaliation for his journalistic activities.[200] According to Reporters Without Borders, after three days in detention, the journalist was put under house arrest.[201]

99. On the other hand, the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression continued to follow up on the case of journalist Fabiola Tercero Castro, who was reported missing on July 12, 2024, following a police raid carried out without a court order.[202] In 2025, fellow journalists and civil society organizations working in defense of freedom of expression in Nicaragua pointed out that this case was not an isolated incident, but rather part of a systematic pattern of repression and criminalization of journalism. In addition, they urged the State provide information on her whereabouts.[203]

---

[191] According to the information available, at the time of her arrest, at least 20 police agents burst into her residence without a warrant, confiscated her electronic equipment and transferred her to the Judicial Assistance Directorate, known as El Chipote. Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ), Elsbeth D'Anda; LatAm Journalism Review, Journalist arrested in Nicaragua after reporting on price hikes, November 20, 2024; IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Report, 2024 Annual Report, OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 39, March 3, 2025, para. 924.

[192] Colectivo Nicaragua Nunca Más, Periodismo en resistencia: voces que enfrentan a la dictadura, September 8; Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Lejos de rendirse: el periodismo independiente en Nicaragua resiste con convicción frente a la represión y nuevos desafíos, January-March.

[193] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Press release No. R324/25, The SRFOE urges Nicaragua to cease persecution of the press and release all persons arbitrarily detained, December 19, 2024.

[194] I/A Court H.R.,, Adoption of Urgent Measures Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. regarding Nicaragua, January 6, 2025; I/A Court H.R., Extension of Provisional Measures, Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. regarding Nicaragua, February 4, 2025.

[195] IACHR, Press release No. 003/25, IACHR requests from Inter-American Court an extension of provisional measures in favor of Catalino Leo Cárcamo in Nicaragua, January 3, 2025.

[196] I/A Court H.R.,, Adoption of Urgent Measures Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. regarding Nicaragua, January 6, 2025; I/A Court H.R., Extension of Provisional Measures, Matter of Juan Sebastián Chamorro et al. regarding Nicaragua, February 4, 2025.

[197] Swissinfo.ch, El periodismo nicaragüense vive entre la apatridia y la cárcel, denuncia ONG humanitaria, September 8, 2025.

[198] Infobae, Estados Unidos le exigió a Nicaragua una prueba de vida del periodista Leo Cárcamo, September 19, 2025; Nicaragua Investiga, EEUU exige pruebas de vida del periodista Leo Cárcamo y acusa al régimen de Ortega-Murillo, September 19, 2025.

[199] Alertas Libertad de Prensa Nicaragua, [@AlertasLP_Nic], (February 9, 2025), Policía de León detiene a excorresponsal de Radio Corporación, X, https://x.com/AlertasLP_Nic/status/1888766995056730330.

[200] 100% Noticias, Otro periodista detenido en Nicaragua: acusan a Irving Guerrero de tenencia ilegal de armas, February 10, 2025; LatAm Journalism Review, Seven months after her disappearance, colleagues of journalist Fabiola Tercero demand information on her whereabouts, February 12, 2025.

[201] Reporters Without Borders (RSF), Nicaragua celebrates National Journalist Day yet its press freedom is nearly extinct, February 28, 2025.

[202] RSF, Journalist disappears amid Ortega's siege of what is left of independent journalism in Nicaragua, July 29, 2024; Artículo 19, Se cumplen 17 días de la desaparición forzada de la periodista y activista nicaragüense Fabiola Tercero, July 30, 2024.

[203] LatAm Journalism Review, Seven months after her disappearance, colleagues of journalist Fabiola Tercero demand information on her whereabouts, February 12, 2025; Infobae, Activistas nicaragüenses en el exilio exigieron información sobre la periodista Fabiola Tercero, desaparecida hace un año por el régimen de Ortega, July 12, 2025.

100. The IACHR recalls that the State of Nicaragua has the obligation to respect and ensure the full exercise of freedom of expression, including independent and critical journalism, which is essential for democracy and the rule of law. This obligation implies, on the one hand, that the authorities refrain from unduly interfering with the right to freedom of expression, thereby allowing journalists and the media to fulfill their watchdog function in a democratic society; and, on the other hand, that the State create the necessary conditions for the press to be able to carry out its work freely, independently, and safely.[204] Consequently, an environment marked by constant reprisals, including the criminalization of the practice of journalism, constitutes a serious violation of the right to freedom of expression, not only of those who are directly affected, but also of the right of citizens to seek and receive information.[205]

101. The Commission renews its urgent call to the State of Nicaragua to immediately release all persons arbitrarily detained—including journalists and broadcasters—for the exercise of their work, and to provide information on their location and situation.

B. Pressure, threats, and intimidation towards journalists and media outlets

102. In 2025, the IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression heard complaints about the persecution of journalists and press workers in Nicaragua. According to the information received, journalists who are critical of the government and those who attempt to report on the political and social situation in the country are the target of threats, surveillance, and acts of harassment. In some cases, these attacks force journalists to remain in their homes for fear of being assaulted.[206] According to public reports, this climate of repression has generated an atmosphere of social isolation, as family members, friends, and close associates tend to distance themselves for fear of also becoming targets of reprisals.[207]

103. In this same context of increasing repression, there have also been reports of the organization of harassment and smear campaigns against journalists on social networks, including the use of netcenters (troll farms) and the active participation of state authorities.[208] In addition, the Commission received serious allegations of systematic pressure put on journalists to collaborate with the government, either by becoming informants or snitches, or by joining official media outlets.[209] This pressure reportedly included requests for information about journalists in exile, accompanied by threats of expulsion from the country in the event of refusal.[210] This strategy reportedly involves various state bodies and "paramilitary" groups, presenting journalists with a choice between constant harassment and surveillance or allowing direct interference in their journalism.[211]

104. Likewise, the IACHR and the Office of its Special Rapporteur received information on multiple accounts of stigmatization of Nicaraguan journalists, including those in exile. These include branding journalists as "coup plotters," "traitors," "sellouts," "opponents," and "stateless persons,"[212] as well as "worms,"

[204] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, The Inter-American Legal Framework regarding the Right to Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF.29/25, 2025, para. 8.
[205] UN, OSCE, IACHR/Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Joint Declaration on Freedom of Expression and Elections in the Digital Age April 30, 2020; IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B, Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26, 2025, para. 123.
[206] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno de Nicaragua intensifica el hostigamiento y las represalias contra familiares de periodistas exiliados, abril-junio de 2025, p. 6.
[207] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Lejos de rendirse: el periodismo independiente en Nicaragua resiste con convicción frente a la represión y nuevos desafíos, enero-marzo de 2025, p. 10.
[208] Periodistas y Comunicadores Independientes de Nicaragua, Violencia digital y criminalización amenazan la libertad de prensa en Guatemala, May 23, 2025.
[209] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno Ortega-Murillo intenta reclutar a periodistas independientes como "orejas y soplones" del Estado, julio-septiembre de 2025, p. 6.
[210] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno Ortega-Murillo intenta reclutar a periodistas independientes como "orejas y soplones" del Estado, julio-septiembre de 2025, p. 7.
[211] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno Ortega-Murillo intenta reclutar a periodistas independientes como "orejas y soplones" del Estado, julio-septiembre de 2025, p. 6.
[212] El 19 Digital, El 19 Digital cumplirá 17 años: Informando la verdad, verdadera, August 4, 2025.

"information mercenaries," and "media terrorists."[213] Additionally, there have been statements by public officials describing journalists as "buffoons," "diabolical," and "dirty,"[214] and allusions to critical or opposition media with such language as "apocalyptic beast" and "100 percent lies."[215]

105. In this regard, the IACHR warns that stigmatizing statements encourage animosity and violence against communicators, as well as legitimize acts of violence suffered, thereby contributing to the repression of expression observed in Nicaragua. Furthermore, the Commission emphasizes that the State has the obligation to guarantee and preserve an environment conducive to the effective exercise of freedom of expression.[216] These duties imply the responsibility to exercise due care in public debate, particularly by avoiding expressions that could lead to human rights violations or expose individuals to such violations.[217] Consequently, those subject to these obligations must refrain from making statements that encourage violence or hatred,[218] as well as from statements that compromise the safety of journalists and human rights defenders.[219]

106. In addition to these facts, there is a continuation of systematic obstacles to journalistic coverage of issues of high public interest in Nicaragua, together with the imposition of restrictive administrative measures aimed at silencing critical voices and consolidating the government's information monopoly. For instance, the closure of Radio Centro 870 AM was announced; the station was regarded as an important platform for the discussion of community issues.[220]

107. Between 8 and 11 of Nicaragua's 15 departments now have no independent media,[221] and approximately 85% of those media outlets have terminated their operations.[222] In this context, independent journalists are being systematically prevented from covering State institutions.[223] In this regard, the F*undación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia (FLED)* has reported that even media outlets that toe the government line face restrictions in the exercise of their work and are forced to rebroadcast newscasts from the pro-government Radio Ya, limiting the broadcasting of local content.[224]

108. Likewise, on March 13, 2025, media outlets critical of the government, such as La Prensa, 100% Noticias, and Onda Local, reportedly lost the rights to use domain names with the .ni suffix, which is administered by the Nicaraguan State.[225] The closure of media outlets in an already restrictive environment

[213] El 19 Digital, De mercenarios a mendigos mercenarios: el triste final de los sicarios digitales, August 13, 2025.
[214] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno Ortega-Murillo intenta reclutar a periodistas independientes como "orejas y soplones" del Estado, julio-septiembre de 2025, p. 15.
[215] El 19 Digital, Editorial de Detalles del Momento: "Nacer hoy morir mañana", September 12, 2025.
[216] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, The Inter-American Legal Framework regarding the Right to Freedom of Expression, 2025 Update, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, CIDH/RELE/INF.29/25, 2025, para. 11.
[217] IACHR, Press Release No. 26/21, IACHR Notes Inflection Point for Freedom of Expression on the Internet, Calls for Dialogue in the Region, February 5, 2021.
[218] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, The Inter-American Legal Framework regarding the Right to Freedom of Expression, 2025 Update, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, CIDH/RELE/INF.29/25, 2025, para. 14.
[219] I/A Court H.R., Case of Ríos v. Venezuela, Merits, Reparations and Costs, Judgment of January 28, 2009, Series C No. 194, para. 145; I/A Court H.R., Case of Perozo v. Venezuela, Merits, Reparations and Costs, Judgment of January 28, 2009, Series C No. 195, para. 157.
[220] Radio Camoapa, Radio Centro 870 AM cierra sus puertas tras 33 años de historia en Juigalpa, June 30, 2025.
[221] Infobae, Una ONG advirtió que Nicaragua es el país con más obstáculos para el periodismo en Centroamérica por culpa del régimen de Ortega, August 30, 2025; Nicaragua Investiga, Mayoría de zonas geográficas de Nicaragua no cuentan con periodistas independientes, October 7, 2024; Divergentes, Periodistas en extinción: aumentan los "desiertos de noticias" en diez departamentos de Nicaragua, January 13, 2025; El País, Periodistas en vías de extinción en Nicaragua, January 13, 2025; Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno Ortega-Murillo intenta reclutar a periodistas independientes como "orejas y soplones" del Estado, julio-septiembre de 2025, p. 4.
[222] CB24, Crisis sin precedentes en el periodismo nicaragüense: 61 medios cerrados, September 29, 2025.
[223] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Lejos de rendirse: el periodismo independiente en Nicaragua resiste con convicción frente a la represión y nuevos desafíos, January-March de 2025, p. 6.
[224] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Lejos de rendirse: el periodismo independiente en Nicaragua resiste con convicción frente a la represión y nuevos desafíos, January-March de 2025, p. 8.
[225] Deutsche Welle, Medios críticos de Nicaragua denuncian bloqueo de sitios web, March 15, 2025; Nicaragua Investiga, Ortega ordena bloquear medios digitales dentro de Nicaragua, March 14, 2025; IACHR, Press release No. 073/25, Seven years after the beginning of the crisis in Nicaragua, IACHR condemns consolidation of the authoritarian regime, April 14, 2025.

for freedom of expression represents a serious setback for the circulation of free, pluralistic, and diverse information.[226]

109. The virtual disappearance of independent journalism in large parts of the country is particularly serious, as it not only entails a breach of the State's obligations to promote and protect media pluralism, but also prevents broad sectors of the population from accessing information on events that directly affect them.

110. In the case of Nicaragua, the IACHR reaffirms the crucial importance of community media in providing a visibility platform for the culture and the problems of historically marginalized and socially excluded groups. It also reiterates the State's duty to ensure respect for media independence and to refrain from imposing prior censorship through any State body, as well as any type of prior conditioning that could amount to censorship of information content.[227]

111. The Office of the Special Rapporteur notes that recurrent threats and the economic difficulties associated with the practice of critical journalism are forcing journalists to go into exile, abandon the profession, or seek alternative livelihoods outside of journalism.[228] According to figures released in October, at least 300 journalists are currently in exile.[229]

112. Likewise, the Commission and the Office of its Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression have received troubling information indicating that journalists have been subjected to measures resulting in the arbitrary loss of Nicaraguan nationality, or face deliberate obstacles in obtaining or renewing identification documents.[230] These practices give rise to situations of de facto statelessness, exposing the persons concerned to serious situations of legal and social vulnerability.[231] In turn, journalists and broadcasters face restrictions on entry into Nicaragua, even when they have Nicaraguan nationality.[232]

113. In exile, multiple testimonies report the impossibility of continuing journalistic activities due to the lack of stable income, difficulties in rejoining the labor market,[233] and bureaucratic obstacles related to the absence of documentation.[234] This situation has a negative impact on the ability of people in exile to access employment, education, housing, and other rights and services in host states.[235]

114. The IACHR has held that forced exile constitutes a violation of the right to freedom of expression in at least four dimensions: (i) it directly affects the individual dimension of the right by preventing journalists from practicing their profession of providing information in conditions of safety. As established in inter-American jurisprudence, journalism can only be practiced freely when those who engage in it are not the object of threats, physical, psychological, or moral aggression, or other acts of harassment; (ii) it violates the social dimension of the right by acting as a silencing mechanism designed to hinder the flow of information to society; (iii) it generates an inhibiting or chilling effect, encouraging self-censorship among journalists, media

[226] Noticias Bluefields, Radio Centro 870 AM cierra sus transmisiones tras 33 años al aire, July 1, 2025.
[227] I/A Court H.R., Case of the Maya Kaqchikel Indigenous Peoples of Sumpango et al. v. Guatemala. Merits, Reparations and Costs. Judgment of October 6, 2021, Series C No. 440, para. 117.
[228] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno de Nicaragua intensifica el hostigamiento y las represalias contra familiares de periodistas exiliados, April-June de 2025, p. 6.
[229] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno Ortega-Murillo intenta reclutar a periodistas independientes como "orejas y soplones" del Estado, July-September de 2025, p. 5.
[230] Deutsche Welle, Periodistas nicaragüenses, la apatridia como castigo, June 26, 2025.
[231] Infobae, Denuncian que el periodismo nicaragüense vive entre la apatridia y la cárcel, September 9, 2025; Colectivo Nicaragua Nunca Más, Periodismo en resistencia: voces que enfrentan a la dictadura, September 8, 2025.
[232] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno de Nicaragua intensifica el hostigamiento y las represalias contra familiares de periodistas exiliados, April-June de 2025, p. 3.
[233] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno de Nicaragua intensifica el hostigamiento y las represalias contra familiares de periodistas exiliados, April-June de 2025, p. 10.
[234] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno Ortega-Murillo intenta reclutar a periodistas independientes como "orejas y soplones" del Estado, July-September de 2025, p. 8.
[235] Fundación por la Libertad de Expresión y Democracia, Gobierno de Nicaragua intensifica el hostigamiento y las represalias contra familiares de periodistas exiliados, April-June de 2025, p. 8.

outlets, and other social actors; and (iv) it undermines informational pluralism. The free circulation of ideas and news is only conceivable within a plurality of information sources and when there is respect for the media. This plurality is a key condition for the effective exercise of freedom of expression, and the State has the obligation to guarantee it.[236]

115. The impact on information pluralism can be observed at different levels: exile limits the diversity of voices and perspectives in public debate, it creates a significant gap in research and dissemination of quality information, and it facilitates the predominance of official narratives without effective counterweight. This scenario creates fertile ground for government propaganda, the normalization of authoritarian discourses, and the spread of fake news, while hindering access to accurate and verified information on matters of public interest. In some cases, it can lead to the creation of "silenced zones" or "news deserts," where the absence of independent media and information sources impedes the effective exercise of the right to freedom of expression.[237]

116. The Commission reaffirms that States have the obligation to adopt specific measures to identify and counter threats that may lead to the forced exile of journalists, and must refrain from acts that increase the risk of forced displacement of journalists, in accordance with their international human rights obligations.[238] In the case of Nicaragua, the IACHR emphasizes the importance of not only refraining from direct actions against journalists but also preventing the creation of adverse environments for freedom of expression.

117. Lastly, the IACHR notes that the facts described above form part of the recent constitutional reform that consolidates repressive patterns in Nicaragua.[239] In this context, it expresses deep concern at the elimination of the explicit constitutional prohibition of media censorship. The reform establishes that the State must supervise the media to prevent them from being influenced by foreign interests and to prevent the dissemination of "false news that threaten the people." It also imposes restrictions on the political rights of those who incur offenses against "peace and security."[240]

118. The IACHR recalls that States have the obligation to prohibit prior censorship and any type of pressure on the dissemination of expression, as established in Principle 5 of the IACHR Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression.[241] In this regard, the pressures imposed by the State on the work of social communicators constitute an obstruction to the full functioning of democracy. The changes introduced by the constitutional reform impose restrictions on freedom of expression that are incompatible with the American Convention and with the international commitments assumed by the State.

V. CONCLUSIONS

119. In 2025, the IACHR observed the consolidation of an authoritarian regime in Nicaragua, formalized by the entry into force of a partial reform of the Political Constitution and other regressive norms that institutionalized the subordination of the legislative, judicial, and electoral branches to presidential control. These measures definitively suppressed the separation of powers and deepened the dismantling of the rule of law, with the aim of closing any avenue for democratic restoration.

[236] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Exile of Journalists and Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, CIDH/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, paras. 144-147.
[237] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Exile of Journalists and Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, CIDH/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, para. 148.
[238] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Exile of Journalists and Freedom of Expression, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, CIDH/RELE/INF.30/25, April 15, 2025, para. 133.
[239] IACHR, 2024 Annual Report, Chapter IV.B Nicaragua, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 39 rev. 2, March 26, 2025, paras. 144 et seq.; Washington Office on Latin America, Constitutional reform in Nicaragua: Concentration of power and repression of human rights, December 11, 2024; Confidencial, Reforma constitucional anula las libertades individuales y públicas de los nicaragüenses, November 28, 2024.
[240] Confidencial, Reforma constitucional anula las libertades individuales y públicas de los nicaragüenses, November 28, 2024.
[241] IACHR, Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression, principle 5.

120. The Commission found that civic and democratic space remains completely closed. In 2025, the criminalization of any form of social organization, public expression, or religious manifestation persisted through the closure of civil society organizations, the persecution of religious communities, and the criminalization of indigenous authorities, human rights defenders, activists, members of political parties, former military personnel, and even individuals linked to the regime itself or to the official party.

121. The IACHR is also concerned about the persistence of arbitrary detention and the deplorable conditions of detention documented in this report, characterized by ill-treatment, torture, prolonged isolation, and, in many cases, the concealment of victims' whereabouts for extended periods. In 2025, the deaths that occurred in state custody reflected an aggravation of state violence and the complete absence of due fair trial and judicial protection. For the IACHR, these facts, together with the patterns of violations of the rights to life and humane treatment recorded, constitute serious human rights violations under international law.

122. The IACHR noted the intensification of transnational repression by the Nicaraguan regime against exiled persons, their families, and civil society organizations that continue their work from exile. In 2025, the IACHR was informed of acts of harassment, threats, and assault against Nicaraguans in other countries, as well as the improper use of international cooperation mechanisms to persecute and silence dissidents beyond national territory. As noted by the Group of Experts on Human Rights in Nicaragua, these practices constitute a policy of transnational persecution that is incompatible with international human rights law, as well as posing serious challenges for the States concerned and for the international community as a whole.[242]

123. With regard to the situation of the Indigenous and Afro-descendent peoples of the Caribbean Coast, the IACHR noted that the constitutional and legal reforms in force in 2025 dismantled the autonomy regime established in 1987 and consolidated the concentration of executive power over their territories and forms of government. In turn, in its report Violence against indigenous peoples and Afro-descendants on the Caribbean coast of Nicaragua published that year, the Commission documented a serious context of armed attacks, selective assassinations, and arrests of community leaders, as well as the granting of extractive concessions without prior, free, and informed consultation, resulting in their dispossession and displacement from their territories. In this regard, the IACHR reiterates that this set of facts pose a serious threat to the physical and cultural survival of the indigenous and Afro-descendent peoples of Nicaragua.

124. The IACHR took note of persistent violations of economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights, exacerbated by the country's high vulnerability to climate impacts. Likewise, in 2025, constitutional amendments and the adoption of new laws further weakened guarantees for economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights, particularly through the elimination of environmental safeguards and participation and consultation mechanisms, thereby intensifying a climate conducive to continued dispossession and violation of collective ownership rights.

125. Lastly, in 2025, the situation of freedom of expression and the practice of independent journalism remained critical. The IACHR noted the ongoing repression of the press through arbitrary detention, reports of forced disappearance, and other acts, including overseas. In turn, the stigmatization of journalists, censorship in the digital space, and the elimination of constitutional guarantees for the protection of freedom of expression are yet further manifestations of the consolidation of an absolutist authoritarian regime in Nicaragua.

VI. RECOMMENDATIONS

126. Based on the foregoing analysis, the Inter-American Commission renews its call for the State to comply with and implement the recommendations issued in the Final Report of its working visit to the country, the recommendations issued by the Interdisciplinary Group of Independent Experts (GIEI), and the recommendations issued under Chapter IV.B of the annual reports published since 2018, all of which are still in a state of non-compliance. including the following:

[242] Group of Human Rights Experts on Nicaragua, Nicaragua: Persecution Beyond Borders. Exile and Transnational Human Rights Violations, September 23, 2025, p. 29.

General recommendations

1. Adopt the necessary measures to overcome the human rights crisis by reestablishing democratic institutions, the full validity of the Rule of Law and fundamental freedoms, including freedom of expression.

2. End the impunity for the human rights violations committed since 2018.

3. Release all people that have been arbitrarily detained in the context of the crisis that began in 2018.

4. Restore nationality to all Nicaraguan persons affected by the arbitrary deprivation of their nationality since 2018.

5. Initiate processes that promote truth, justice and reparations for the victims of the serious crisis that the country is experiencing.

6. Effectively comply with the precautionary measures granted by the Inter-American Commission and the provisional measures of the Inter-American Court in favor of persons deprived of liberty, older persons, indigenous peoples, human rights defenders, women, and other groups at serious risk.

Civic and democratic space

7. Rescind all decrees and acts of authority relating to the cancellation of the legal status of civil society organizations that have been approved without guaranteeing due process.

8. Return to members of the organizations the facilities and all confiscated goods, in the same conditions in which they were found at the time of the search of the organization's facilities, where appropriate.

9. Immediately cease judicial persecution, repression, stigmatization, attacks, threats, and intimidation against civil society actors, in both the physical and digital environment, including journalists, human rights defenders, activists, artists, academics, political opponents, and members of religious communities.

10. Cease persecution against the Catholic Church and other faiths, as well as arbitrary arrests, confiscations, and those acts that limit the religious freedom of the population.

Persons deprived of liberty

11. Guarantee due process of law for detained persons. In particular, immediately inform the detainees, their family members and representatives of the grounds and reasons for the detention. Likewise, the right to a fair trial must be ensured, so that defendants have regular contact with their legal representatives and are involved in the preparation for their respective hearings. In addition, it is essential for legal representatives to have unrestricted access to the detainees.

12. Guarantee the dignified treatment of persons in the custody of the State pursuant to international standards. In particular, ensure that they receive medical attention appropriate to their specific health conditions, are given sufficient food with high nutritional value, and are housed in good sanitary conditions.

13. Use solitary confinement in maximum security centers on an exceptional basis and, using individualized risk assessment, implement it for the shortest amount of time possible and as a last resort. Any solitary confinement orders must be approved by a competent authority and be subject to independent review.

Human mobility and transnational repression

14. Take immediate steps to end policies and practices that generate forced displacement, exile, and statelessness, ensuring full exercise of the rights to nationality, identity, freedom of movement, and return to the country.

15. Restore annulled or confiscated documentation, civil records, and property rights, an ensure that any procedures related to nationality or immigration status are conducted in accordance with due process, with objective criteria, transparency, independent judicial oversight, and effective remedies.

16. Review and repeal constitutional and legal reforms that are incompatible with the State's international human rights obligations, particularly those related to the automatic loss of nationality, immigration control, and the use of the concept of "social risk" to restrict fundamental rights.

Indigenous and Afro-descendent communities

17. Guarantee the right of indigenous and Afro-descendant peoples to territory as the first step to safeguard their basic rights. In particular, guarantee the complete and effective demarcation, titling and clearance of their territories in accordance with international standards and the recommendations issued by the bodies of the Inter-American system.

18. Adopt all legislative measures to ensure the effective exercise of the right to prior, free and informed consultation and consent of the indigenous communities, pursuant to international standards, particularly regarding development projects or for the exploitation of natural resources that could affect their rights.

19. Guarantee the right of indigenous and Afro-descendant communities and their defenders to a life without violence, in the face of threats, aggression and other acts of intimidation by third parties or companies in their territories.

20. Adopt measures to guarantee the right of indigenous and Afro-descendant peoples to exercise self-determination in a practical and effective manner, in accordance with international standards.

Economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights

21. Adopt policies aimed at guaranteeing the effective enjoyment of economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights without discrimination and under conditions of equality, with an intersectional and intercultural approach, and in accordance with the principles of non-regression and the use of the maximum available resources.

22. Ensure, in particular, effective access to education, health, work, drinking water, and a healthy environment. Implement economic and fiscal policies with a human rights-based and progressive approach (including the review of inefficient exemptions, improved taxation of income and wealth, and the capture of extractive rents), prioritize social spending, and develop climate-sensitive social protection. In public financing, require safeguards and human rights due diligence from international financial institutions.

23. End all forms of harassment and persecution of higher education faculty and academic authorities. Guarantee academic freedom and protect university autonomy; review, investigate, and repeal or modify any regulation or practice that undermines it; restore legal personality and confiscated assets; and ensure access to academic records. Avoid indoctrination and promote participatory, inclusive, and diverse learning environments.

24. Refrain from harassing or persecuting public servants for political reasons; respect their fundamental freedoms and the right to work under safe and dignified conditions; avoid arbitrary dismissals and reprisals; and guarantee due process and a merit-based career system.

25. Guarantee access to participation, information, and justice in environmental matters, enabling organizations and communities to defend the environment without fear of reprisals. In particular, restore and strengthen public consultation in environmental impact assessment; publish open registries of concessions, EIAs and monitoring; and operate accessible grievance and remedy mechanisms, in line with inter-American standards and resolution 3/2021.

Freedom of expression

26. Immediately cease all judicial persecution, repression, stigmatization, attacks, threats and intimidation against individuals and groups who exercise their right to freedom of expression, both on and offline, including journalists, human rights defenders, activists, artists, members of the academia, political opponents and members of religious communities.

27. Refrain from exerting pressure on or interfering with the media and cable operators, both in terms of news content and editorial policy, as well as operation.

28. Refrain from arbitrarily hindering—even by indirect means—journalistic activities, including those of the local press and international correspondents. In particular, restore authorization for the international press to operate in Nicaragua, as applicable, wherever they have been arbitrarily restricted.

29. Bring domestic legislation into line with international human rights standards. In particular, repeal all laws that are contrary to the principles and standards on freedom of expression, peaceful assembly and association, including the Special Cybercrimes Act, the Law on Foreign Agents, the Law of Defense of the Rights of the People to Independence, Sovereignty and Self-Determination for Peace, and the Law on Regulation and Control of Non-Profit Organizations.

30. Refrain from taking measures that impede Nicaraguans' entry into or departure from the country for reasons related to the exercise of the right to freedom of expression, such as the withholding of passports or the denial of any type of migration documentation.

IV.b

Venezuela

CHAPTER IV.B VENEZUELA

I. INTRODUCTION 811

II. PRESENCE OF REGULATORY ELEMENTS FAVORING INCLUSION 812

III. HUMAN RIGHTS SITUATION 814

A. Democratic institutions 814

1. Consolidation of a dictatorship 814
2. Situation of judicial independence 815

B. Political prosecution: punishment for dissent and impunity 815

1. Arbitrary detentions 815
2. Enforced disappearances and isolation regimes 818
3. Violations of due process and other fair-trial guarantees 820

C. Situation of freedom of expression 820

1. Enforced disappearance and arbitrary arrests of journalists and media workers 820
2. Threats and attacks against the press 826
3. Arbitrary closure and sustainability of media outlets 830
4. Criminalization of critical and citizen voices exercising their right to freedom of expression 832
5. Social protest 835
6. Academic freedom 837
7. Closure of the civic space and increasing restrictions on the exercise of freedom of association 839
8. Freedom of expression and internet 840

D. Situation of economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights 842

1. The economic crisis and persistent scarcity of basic services 842
2. Structural difficulties in healthcare and challenges in access to food and water 842

3. Job insecurity and hostile environment for the defense of workers' and union rights 845
4. Restrictions on the right to education and academic freedom 845
5. Climate emergency and healthy environment 847
6. Mining operations and impacts on communities 849

E. Groups in situation of discrimination 850

1. Human rights defenders 850
2. Women 854
3. Persons in mobility 856
4. Persons deprived of liberty 857
5. Persons with disabilities 860
6. Lesbian, gay, bisexual, and intersex (LGBTI) persons 860
7. Indigenous peoples 860

IV. CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS 861

Persons with disabilities 864

Lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, and intersex (LGBTI) persons 864

Indigenous peoples 865

PARTIALLY DISSENTING VOTE OF COMMISSIONER CARLOS BERNAL PULIDO REGARDING CHAPTER IV-B OF THE 2025 ANNUAL REPORT ON VENEZUELA 866

CHAPTER IV.B

VENEZUELA[1]

I. INTRODUCTION

1. In compliance with its conventional and statutory mandate, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (hereinafter the Commission, the IACHR, or the Inter-American Commission) has followed the human rights situation in Venezuela with special attention. Every year for the past two decades, Venezuela has been included in Chapter IV.B of the annual report due to the grave institutional and human rights situation there. From 2005 to 2016, the IACHR documented the progressive concentration of power in the executive branch. In 2017, it warned of an institutional crisis derived from the executive branch's interference in the other branches of government, and in 2019, it concluded that this crisis had eroded the rule of law.

2. In 2025, a dictatorship was consolidated in Venezuela. On January 10, after an electoral process characterized by widespread complaints of fraud, lack of transparency, and severe, systematic violations of human rights, Nicolás Maduro held on to power without democratic legitimacy. As of the preparation of this report, the National Electoral Council (CNE) had still not published the tally sheets that would purportedly confirm the final outcome. This development amounted to the total concentration of public powers in the hands of the de facto authorities, characteristic of a dictatorial regime. The seriousness of the situation calls for urgent diplomatic action to re-establish democracy and rebuild the country's institutions based on human rights and the rule of law.

3. The consolidation of the de facto regime entrenched impunity in Venezuela. In 2025, the Office of the Public Prosecutor and the judicial branch had still not investigated, prosecuted, or handed down punishment for the murders; cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment; arbitrary detentions; and violations of due process that took place during and after the 2024 electoral process. A similar situation is observed with respect to the severe and systematic violations of human rights committed in previous years, which motivated the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court to launch, for the first time in the Western Hemisphere, a formal investigation of crimes against humanity. The IACHR supports the filing of a formal case with that Court, in the understanding that impunity is structural and forms part of the de facto authorities' deliberate strategy to maintain political control and silence dissident voices.

4. The lack of a democratic system has rendered the exercise of fundamental freedoms and human rights impossible, undermining their universal, indivisible, and interdependent character. This context has enabled the regime to abuse its power to politically pursue opponents or individuals perceived as such, who lack access to effective judicial protection. Concurrently, the rapid deterioration of living conditions has led to the displacement of over 6.8 million people since 2015, constituting one of most serious migratory and humanitarian crises in the world.

5. The Inter-American Commission underscores that the Venezuelan case exemplifies the close relationship among human rights, democracy, and the rule of law. These three elements form an essential triad in which they each are defined, complement, and take on meaning in function of the others. The intentional destruction of this triad, as a result of the co-opting of the public authorities and the rupture of the constitutional order, enabled the establishment of the dictatorial regime.

[1] Commissioner Carlos Bernal Pulido approved the report and issued a partial reasoned vote. The partial reasoned vote appears at the end of this chapter.

II. PRESENCE OF REGULATORY ELEMENTS FAVORING INCLUSION

6. After reviewing the human rights situation in Venezuela, the Commission decided to include the country in this chapter, in accordance with Article 59, paragraphs 6.a.i, 6.a.ii, 6.c.iii, 6.d.i, and 6.d.ii of the Rules of Procedure of the IACHR, which set forth the following criteria for inclusion:

> a. A serious breach of the core requirements and institutions of a representative democracy mentioned in the Inter-American Democratic Charter, which are essential means of achieving human rights, including:
>
> > i. there is discriminatory access to or abusive exercise of power that undermines or denies the rule of law, such as systematic infringement of the independence of the judiciary or lack of subordination of State institutions to the legally constituted civilian authority;
> >
> > ii. there has been an unconstitutional alteration of the constitutional regime that seriously impairs the democratic order; or
>
> c. The State has committed or is committing massive, serious and widespread violations of human rights guaranteed in the American Declaration, the American Convention, or the other applicable human rights instruments.
>
> > iii. serious omissions in the adoption of the necessary measures to make fundamental rights effective, or in complying with the decisions of the Commission and the Inter-American Court; […].
>
> d. The presence of other structural situations that seriously affect the use and enjoyment of fundamental rights recognized in the American Declaration, the American Convention or other applicable instruments. Factors to be considered shall include the following, among others:
>
> > ii. systematic noncompliance of the State with its obligation to combat impunity, attributable to a manifest lack of will;

7. With regard to the criteria set out in Article 59.6.a of the IACHR Rules of Procedure, the Inter-American Commission stresses that the swearing-in of Nicolás Maduro on January 10, 2025, constituted a breakdown in the constitutional order and the consolidation of a dictatorial regime. The electoral opacity, serious complaints of fraud, and systematic restrictions on political rights make it impossible for this Commission to consider the 2024 elections democratically legitimate.[2] Rather, these circumstances reflect the use of a sham electoral process to project a false appearance of democracy, and demonstrate the complete absence of the minimum conditions needed for the effective exercise of political rights in Venezuela.

8. With regard to the criterion set out in Article 59.6.c., the Inter-American Commission observes that the State's refusal to comply with its international obligations forms part of a deliberate strategy to consolidate the de facto regime. This attitude is manifested in grave omissions in the adoption of the measures needed to guarantee the effective exercise of fundamental rights, and to adhere to and implement the decisions handed down by the Commission and the Inter-American Court.

9. In this respect, the IACHR highlights that on August 21, 2025, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights published its decision on the preliminary objections in the case of Chirinos Salamanca v. Venezuela. In this decision, the Inter-American Court indicated that the legitimacy of the State's 2012 denunciation of the American Convention on Human Rights was compromised, since it had been issued in a context of democratic setbacks. In addition, it specified that the 2019 ratification by the interim government kept the obligations derived from the American Convention on Human Rights in force.[3]

[2] IACHR, Venezuela: Serious human rights violations in connection with the elections, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc. 253/24, December 27, 2024, par. 3.

10. This decision reaffirms the jurisdiction of the inter-American human rights system bodies with regard to Venezuela, and to the State's obligation to implement the decisions of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights and the recommendations of the IACHR. Based on this decision, on September 3, 2025, the Commission requested the Venezuelan State's authorization to conduct an on-site visit in order to observe the human rights situation in the country, specifically, the conditions of the persons being held at the Metropolitan Caracas Center for Defendants and Convicted Prisoners I (Helicoide).[4] As of the date this report was prepared, the State has not responded to this request.

11. With regard to the criterion in Article 59.6.d.ii, the Inter-American Commission observes a lack of manifest will to combat impunity. As of the date this report was prepared, the State has not provided any information on progress made in the investigation, prosecution, or punishment of the grave human rights violations that took place in connection with the elections. According to information from public institutions, at least 28 murders,[5] 195 injuries,[6] and 2,229 arrests,[7] including of 158 adolescents,[8] were documented in this period. In addition, at least 29 cases of short-term enforced disappearances were recorded by the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission created by the United Nations Human Rights Council (hereinafter the Fact-Finding Mission).[9]

12. Pursuant to Article 59.5 of the Rules of Procedure of the IACHR, this report was prepared based on primary and secondary sources of information. As primary sources, the IACHR analyzed the testimonies received through the Special Monitoring Mechanism for Venezuela (MESEVE), and the information available on the cases, petitions, and precautionary and provisional measures; presented at public hearings; and recorded in Commission press releases and annual and thematic reports.

13. As secondary sources, the report considered the acts of public institutions at all levels and branches of government, including constitutional amendments, legislation, decrees, judicial decisions, and declarations by de facto authorities. Also taken into account were the conclusions of other international human rights bodies, including treaty bodies, rapporteurs and working groups, the Human Rights Council, and other specialized bodies and agencies of the United Nations (UN); human rights reports by governments and regional bodies; reports by civil society organizations and information submitted by those organizations and by individuals; public information widely disseminated in the media; and relevant legal and academic research.

14. Be that as it may, the IACHR underscores that, as occurs in dictatorial regimes, the opacity of information and the lack of transparency of public institutions in Venezuela seriously hamper access to verifiable data on the human rights situation. The available "official" information is scarce and fragmented, and in many cases not credible, insofar as it serves State propaganda purposes more than accountability criteria. This lack of access to trustworthy, data-based public information obstructs the independent verification of facts, limits international monitoring work, and bolsters the structural impunity that characterizes the current de facto regime.

[3] Inter-American Court of Human Rights. Caso Chirinos Salamanca y otros Vs. Venezuela. Excepciones Preliminares. Sentencia de 21 de agosto de 2025. Serie C No. 562 [Case of Chirinos Salamanca et al. v. Venezuela. Preliminary Objections. Judgment of August 21, 2025. Series C No. 562].

[4] IACHR, Press release 185/25, IACHR reaffirms its authority over Venezuela and seeks approval for an on-site visit, September 16, 2025.

[5] Office of the Public Prosecutor, Press conference: Attorney General Tarek William Saab on violent acts after the elections, December 2, 2024.

[6] Office of the Public Prosecutor, Press conference: Attorney General Tarek William Saab on violent acts after the elections, December 2, 2024.

[7] Swissinfo, Suben a 2.229 los detenidos en protestas tras las presidenciales en Venezuela, dice Maduro [Number of people detained in protests after the presidential elections in Venezuela reaches 2,229, says Maduro], August 7, 2024.

[8] IACHR, Press release 326/24, IACHR: Venezuela must release adolescents in arbitrary detention, December 20, 2024.

[9] Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, AHRC/57/CRP.5, pars. 126 and 127.

15. The IACHR approved this report on December 17, 2025. On January 20, 2026, the Commission sent a copy of the report to the State of Venezuela, in accordance with Article 59.10 of its Rules of Procedure. The State did not submit observations.

III. HUMAN RIGHTS SITUATION

A. Democratic institutions

1. Consolidation of a dictatorship

16. The swearing-in of Nicolás Maduro on January 10, 2025, consolidated a dictatorial regime in Venezuela. In connection with the elections, the public institutions were used as tools not only to favor the incumbent ticket, but also to obstruct and hamper the opposition's political participation. The administrative disqualification of opposition figures, obstacles to the registration of candidates, discriminatory impediments to voting abroad, and the withdrawal of international electoral observation missions were all documented, as were arbitrary detentions and acts of intimidation against people associated with the political opposition.[10] All of these factors evinced a sham electoral process meant to project the false appearance of democracy.

17. The most concerning circumstance around Nicolás Maduro's swearing-in is the lack of transparency in the face of serious, grave complaints of electoral fraud. The elections were held on July 28, 2024. On that day, the National Electoral Council reported that a "terrorist cyberattack" from North Macedonia had affected the transmission of votes. After refusing independent audits of the incident, the National Electoral Council announced Nicolás Maduro's victory.[11] As of the date of this report, the State has still not published the voting tally sheets that back the announced results. In turn, the opposition claims that it has collected 83.5% of the tally sheets nationwide, which allegedly identify opposition candidate Edmundo González Urrutia as the winner.[12]

18. The alleged opposition victory was officially recognized by various States in the region, including the United States, Argentina, Uruguay, Ecuador, Peru, Panama, and Costa Rica. In turn, while Chile and El Salvador did not expressly recognize González Urrutia as president-elect, they stated that they would not accept the results proclaimed by the National Electoral Council as legitimate. On the other hand, Colombia, Brazil, Mexico, Dominican Republic, Canada, Jamaica, Guyana, Haiti, and Paraguay abstained from recognizing a winner, urging the parties to preserve political dialogue and to guarantee the transparency of the electoral process.[13]

19. The consolidation of the dictatorial regime in Venezuela is also observed in the closure of civic space. In 2025, at the IACHR 193rd Period of Sessions, civil society organizations presented an investigation on the impact of the implementation of the Law on the Oversight, Regularization, Operations, and Financing of Nongovernmental Organizations (NGOs) and Nonprofit Social Organizations. The study, which included 101 civil associations in the country's 24 states, indicated that this law has significantly affected organizations' formalization and operations, by imposing bureaucratic hurdles (31.7%), high costs (21.8%), and excessive requirements (15.8%), leaving nearly half (41.9%) unable to regularize their legal situations.[14]

20. Furthermore, the organizations' operational capacities have shrunk, with 63.4% reporting that they have reduced or suspended their services, and 46.5% that they have lost essential financing sources.

[10] IACHR, Venezuela: Serious human rights violations in connection with the elections, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc. 253/24, December 27, 2024, par. 3.
[11] IACHR, Venezuela: Serious human rights violations in connection with the elections, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc. 253/24, December 27, 2024, par. 42.
[12] IACHR, Venezuela: Serious human rights violations in connection with the elections, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc. 253/24, December 27, 2024, par. 47.
[13] Voz de América, Estos son los países que reconocen triunfo de Maduro, quienes creen que perdió y los cautelosos [These are the countries that recognize Maduro's victory, believe he lost, and are being prudent], October 28, 2024.
[14] IACHR, 193rd Period of Sessions, Venezuela: Attacks against human rights defenders, Thursday, July 24, 2025.

Compounded by a climate of fear and distrust, this has driven several organizations to transfer some or all of their operations abroad, directly affecting their services for vulnerable communities. In addition, the fragility of the civic space in the country is exacerbated by the fact that 62.8% of civil society organizations are uncertain about the law's consequences and how it will be enforced in the future.[15]

2. Situation of judicial independence

21. The Commission has consistently warned that Venezuela does not have an independent judiciary, which has enabled the concentration of public power in the head of the ruling party and allowed corruption and impunity for grave, systematic human rights violations, especially against critical and dissident voices.[16] The erosion of judicial independence is due to aspects such as: the high rate of temporary judges, irregular appointment of the highest judicial authorities, lack of guarantees of tenure for judges, and opacity in judicial governance and the administration of justice.[17]

22. The organization Acceso a la Justicia reported that on October 1, 2025, the Supreme Court of Justice approved a new regulation on the entry, permanence, promotion, and separation of non-tenured judges. Although this is presented as a measure to strengthen the judiciary, in fact it consolidates the system of provisional judges without guaranteeing their tenure. The resolution reaffirms that such tenure can only be obtained through public competitive processes, as called for in Article 255 of the Constitution. However, in practice it perpetuates the temporary nature of the positions, as judges continue to be appointed and removed directly by the Supreme Court of Justice Judicial Committee, without guarantees or prior proceedings.[18]

23. Effective public competitions have not been held since 1999, and most judges remain provisional. For 2019, only 14.7% of judges were tenured, according to the International Commission of Jurists; the State has not published recent official figures. This lack of transparency lends weight to the suspicion that judicial tenure is nearly nonexistent. Article 36 of the new regulation makes it possible for non-tenured judges to be immediately terminated, in violation of the standards of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, which calls for independence, stability, and protection against external pressures.[19]

B. Political prosecution: punishment for dissent and impunity

24. The repressive patterns identified during the 2024 electoral process continued in 2025, and included arbitrary detentions, short-term enforced disappearances, and violations of due process against opposition figures, journalists, and human rights defenders. These acts reflect the persistence of a state policy geared towards curbing dissidence and restricting the exercise of fundamental freedoms.

1. Arbitrary detentions

25. According to the organization Foro Penal, in 2025, 884 persons were registered as political prisoners in Venezuela. From January to August of that year, at least 200 arbitrary detentions were documented. The State's repressive forces intensified their actions in two specific periods: the first, in connection with the swearing-in of the president on January 10, with 84 arrests (67 men and 17 women); and the second, during the May 25 elections, with 42 arrests (34 men and 8 women). Between these two episodes,

[15] Acceso a la Justicia, TSJ aprueba normativa para jueces no titulares sin resolver su provisionalidad [Supreme Court of Justice approves regulation for non-tenured judges without addressing their provisional status], October 30, 2025.
[16] Acceso a la Justicia, TSJ aprueba normativa para jueces no titulares sin resolver su provisionalidad [Supreme Court of Justice approves regulation for non-tenured judges without addressing their provisional status], October 30, 2025.
[17] Acceso a la Justicia, TSJ aprueba normativa para jueces no titulares sin resolver su provisionalidad [Supreme Court of Justice approves regulation for non-tenured judges without addressing their provisional status], October 30, 2025.
[18] Acceso a la Justicia, TSJ aprueba normativa para jueces no titulares sin resolver su provisionalidad [Supreme Court of Justice approves regulation for non-tenured judges without addressing their provisional status], October 30, 2025.
[19] Acceso a la Justicia, TSJ aprueba normativa para jueces no titulares sin resolver su provisionalidad [Supreme Court of Justice approves regulation for non-tenured judges without addressing their provisional status], October 30, 2025.

there were 13 more detentions (11 men and 2 women), and between June and August, 61 more (43 men and 18 women).[20]

26. The documented arbitrary detentions were clearly politically motivated. According to information provided by the political group Comando "ConVzla," at least 70 people associated with the opposition leader María Corina Machado and other political organizations were detained between January and October 2025. The main forces involved in carrying out these detentions were the Bolivarian National Intelligence Service (SEBIN), General Directorate of Military Counterintelligence (DGCIM), Bolivarian National Police (PNB), National Anti-Extortion and Kidnapping Command (CONAS), and Bolivarian National Guard (GNB). The most common seizure sites include residences, public spaces, workplaces, areas near voting centers, control points, and healthcare facilities.[21]

27. Comando "ConVzla" reported the following 70 detentions: Willman Coronado (02/02/2025), Rafael Tudares (01/07/2025), Marianela Ojeda (01/07/2025), Francisco Graterol (01/07/2025), Carlos Martínez (01/07/2025), Nereida Briceño (01/08/2025), Héctor Uzcátegui (01/08/2025), Jesús Ramírez (01/08/2025), Carmen Salazar (01/09/25), Carlos Alfredo Aponte Yépez (01/09/25), Germán Eduardo Antillano Yépez (01/09/2025), José Cipriano Díaz (01/09/2025), Zyad Naime (01/09/2025), Yarely Reina (01/09/25), José Daniel López (01/09/25), Daniel García (01/09/2025), Lisandro Arturo Henríquez Figueira (01/09/2025), Ruperto Contreras (01/09/25), Rommel Zabala (01/09/25), Julio César Balza (01/09/25), Roalmi Cabeza (01/09/25), Rosa Elena Urbina (01/09/25), Miguel Ángel García Montenegro (01/09/2025), Pedro Alvarado (01/09/25), Noel Álvarez (01/10/25), Guaiker González (01/15/25), Danis Anulfo (Lenin) Ojeda (01/28/25), Dannnis Arnulfo Ojeda (01/28/2025), Lionmary Espina (02/21/25), Manuel Mora (02/27/25), Jesús Ángel Manrique (05/06/2025), Juan Pablo Manrique (05/06/2025), Hostari Molina (05/21/25), Lourdes Villareal (05/22/2025), Eliecer Ramón Sánchez Linarez (05/23/25), Yraida Coromoto Ruiz (23/05/25), José Manuel Robles (23/05/25), Ángel Luna (06/06/25), Catalina Ramos (26/05/25), Elgio Enrique Pedreañez Paz (05/27/2025), Ulises Martínez (06/08/25), Rodrigo Pérez (07/06/25), Luis José Magallanes (06/07/25), Manuel Enrique Ferreira (19/07/25), Guillermo Segnini (18/07/25), Luis Andrés Cabrera Coronel (07/22/2025), Albany Milagros Colmenares Mendoza (07/23/25), Nikoll Arteaga Hernández (07/23/25), Diliangela Guedez (07/28/25), Ada María Anciani Velásquez (08/12/25), Roberto José Campero Reyes (08/14/2025), Lorenia Gutiérrez (08/25/25), Yones Molina (08/31/25), Jesús Castillo (08/31/25), José Patricio Mena (02/09/2025), Jorge Herrera (03/09/25), Julio Velazco (03/09/25), Juan Torres (10/09/25), Elizabeth Rodríguez (09/10/25), Alexánder Suarez (09/16/2025), Mario José Aldana Becerra (09/17/25), Pedro Andrade (09/21/25), Hommel Torres (09/21/25), Juan Enrique Pérez (09/27/2025), Ricardo Berrio (09/29/25), Lewis Mendoza (10/04/25), Orangel Tabares (10/11/25), Ismael Ortiz (10/11/25), Xiomara Ortiz (10/13/25), Luz Maria Rodriguez (10/13/25), Alexis Jesus Guedez (10/13/25), Rafael Trinidad Mendoza Gonzalez (10/13/25), Mirla del Carmen Catire (10/13/25), Franklin Rivero (10/15/2025), José Castellanos (10/17/2025), Blanca Guerrero de Loaiza (10/17/2025), Omario Castellanos (10/17/2025), Aracelis Balza (10/19/2025), Wladimir Alejandro Yépez Soto (10/22/2025), Javier Cisneros (10/24/2025).[22]

28. In general terms, arbitrary detentions were characterized by a lack of factual and legal grounds that would justify them, as well as by delays in bringing the detainees before the competent judicial authorities. The observed modus operandi reproduces repressive patterns previously documented by this Commission, involving arrests made by unidentified agents, often hooded, who do not show warrants or communicate the grounds for the arrest. Also documented were cases of the excessive, disproportionate use of force during entry into residences and the transfer of persons in vehicles without official identification.[23]

[20] Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela. (2025). Report of the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela (A/HRC/60/61). United Nations Human Rights Council, par. 22.

[21] Vente Venezuela, Agresiones y violaciones de DDHH a María Corina Machado, aliados y afiliados de Vente Venezuela durante la campaña postelectoral, Enero - Octubre 2025, [Attacks and human rights violations against María Corina Machado, allies, and members of Vente Venezuela during the post-election campaign, January - October 2025], communication received on October 30, 2025.

[22] Vente Venezuela, Agresiones y violaciones de DDHH a María Corina Machado, aliados y afiliados de Vente Venezuela durante la campaña postelectoral, Enero - Octubre 2025, [Attacks and human rights violations against María Corina Machado, allies, and members of Vente Venezuela during the post-election campaign, January - October 2025], communication received on October 30, 2025.

29. In 2025, the State security forces ramped up the arbitrary detention of foreigners and of individuals with dual citizenship, with the apparent purpose of using them as bargaining chips for Venezuelan citizens deprived of liberty abroad. In February 2025, Nicolás Maduro announced the detention of over 150 foreigners, who he classified as "mercenaries;"[24] the IACHR has been unable to corroborate this figure. In turn, the International Fact-Finding Mission registered 84 cases (81 men and 3 women), while the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón (JEP Venezuela) documented 83.[25] As reported by JEP Venezuela[26] and Foro Penal,[27] as of the date of this report, the arrested individuals have been unable to exercise their right to consular assistance,[28] established in the applicable international treaties.[29]

30. The arbitrarily arrested foreigners allegedly included: Juan Camilo Vargas Picón (8/10/2024); José Maria Basoa Vadovinos (9/2/2024); Andrés Martínez Adasme (9/2/2024); Jan Darmovrzal (9/14/2024); Manuel Alejandro Tiques Chaves (9/14/2024); Arlei Danilo Espitia Lara (9/14/2024); Said Awuada (9/14/2024); Luis Oswaldo Landazuri Leon (9/25/2024); Cristian Cenusse (9/27/2024); Carlos Alberto Cañas Carrero (9/30/2024); Martin Emilio Rincón Quitan (9/30/2024); Yaakov Harari (10/10/2024); Ricardo Aurelio Meléndez Guerrero (10/18/2024); Yevenhii Trush (10/20/2024); Gunter Sandau (11/7/2024); Danner Gonzalo Barajas Luque (11/7/2024); Alberto Trentini (11/15/2024); Ray Noorhassan (11/17/2024); Nahuel Agustín Gallo (12/8/2024); Marco Antonio Madrid Martínez (12/19/2024); Aidel Suárez Medina (12/24/2024); Justin Van Der Ramder (12/25/2024); MyKhailo Kostiv (1/7/2025); Oleh Rudenko (1/7/2025); Michael Alfred Gustav (1/7/2025); Enit Kasmi (5/19/2025); Antun Mrdeza (5/21/2025); Germán Darío Guiliani (5/21/2025); Sharif Qamar (5/21/2025); Muhamad Azhar (5/21/2025); Zohaib Llagar Liaqat (5/21/2025); Buttnaham Islam (5/21/2025); Yaacob Hartary (5/21/2025); Angelique Corneille (6/18/2025); Zsuzsanna Bossanyi (6/18/2025); Ender Yesid Gomez Soto (7/1/2025); Petter Distefano Padilla Rea (7/27/2025); Jose Luis De La Asunción Aragón (detained after the elections); Alvaro Javier Ojeda Melendez (detained in January 2025, date not specified); Luis Eduardo Quinchia (detained in January 2025, date not specified); Segundo Manuel Cortes Preciado (detained in July 2024, date not specified); Pantaleon De La Asunción Aragón (detained in July 2024, date not specified).[30]

31. The Venezuelans with dual citizenship who were arbitrarily arrested allegedly include: Jorge Alayeto Bigott (8/6/2017); Ángela Lisbeth Expósito Carillo (9/21/2018); Ovidio Andrés Carrasco Mosqueda (2/4/2019); Jhon Hader Betancurt Restrepo (8/16/2019); Juan Carlos Marruffo Capozzi (10/2/2019); Juan Francisco Rodríguez Dos Ramos (10/2/2019); María Auxiliadora Delgado Tabosky (10/2/2019); Leonardo David Chirinos Parra (4/21/2020); Gerardo José Cotichia Guerra (4/23/2020); Victor Alejandro Pimienta Salazar (5/4/2020); Fernando Andrés Noya Contramaestre (5/4/2020); Karen Hernández Rodríguez (5/5/2020); Roberto Andrés Rondón Restrepo (5/6/2020); Carla Rosaura Da Silva Marrero (5/6/2020); José Ibienay Ruiz Delgado (5/8/2020); Rafael Enrique Castro Sandoval (5/9/2020); Oscar Leonardo Aguillón Garcés (5/10/2020); Miguel Ángel Plaza Méndez (5/10/2020); Cesar Junior Altamar Sarmiento (5/11/2020); Leandro Leomar Chirinos Parra (5/12/2020); José Alexander Sanquino Escalante (5/16/2020); Bruno Juárez (11/3/2021); Olvani Marian Gaspari Bracho (3/31/2023); Uaiparu Guerere López (5/31/2023); Adrián De Gouveia (1/18/2024); Alejandro José Gonzales de Canales (2/9/2024); Rocío del Carmen San Miguel Sosa (2/9/2024); Miguel Alexander Duarte Solís (7/29/2024); Francesca Isabella Martinelli García (7/29/2024); Daniel Enrique Echenagucia Vallenilla (8/2/2024); Carmen Yalexy Picón Leon (8/10/2024); Perkins Rocha

[23] Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela. (2025). Report of the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela (A/HRC/60/61), United Nations Human Rights Council, par. 23.

[24] Swissinfo, Nicolás Maduro dice que suben a «más» de 150 extranjeros los detenidos en Venezuela [Nicolás Maduro says the number of detained foreigners in Venezuela has risen to "over" 150], January 9, 2025.

[25] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025.

[26] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025.

[27] Meeting with the organization Foro Penal, August 7, 2025.

[28] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025.

[29] Vienna Convention on Consular Relations. Document A/CONF.25/12.

[30] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025.

(8/27/2024); Biagio Pilieri (8/28/2024); Dorensky Rojas (8/28/2024); Jeralmy Celeste Barradas Espinoza (9/19/2024); Antonio Gerardo Buzzetta Pacheco (9/30/2024); Sofía Sahagún (10/23/2024); Luis Carlos Peña (10/31/2024); Jorge Arturo Yespica Dávila (11/1/2024); Roberto Baldo (11/29/2024); Monserrat Espinosa Irbern (11/29/2024); Luis Arnaldo Palocz Vegas (12/14/2024); Gabriel Alejandro Carrasquero Aponte (1/10/2025); Javier Sebastián Rosales Patiño (1/10/2025); Ignacio Monllau Medina (2/20/2025); Catalina Ramos (5/26/2025); Jesús Castillo (8/31/2025); Reinaldo Emilio Gutiérrez (10/26/2025); Reinaldo Andrés Gutiérrez Santander (10/26/2025).[31]

32. On July 18, 2025, a trilateral agreement among El Salvador, United States, and Venezuela was disclosed; with this agreement, El Salvador delivered 252 people who had been held in maximum-security prisons, including individuals deported from the United States to the Venezuelan authorities. In turn, Venezuela committed to releasing 80 people. By July 24, 2025, human rights organizations had verified the release of 71 people, most of whom had been arrested during the post-election protests of 2024 and including 10 United States nationals.[32] Diverse civil society organizations warned that Venezuelan State security forces have used arbitrary detentions as a means for diplomatic pressure: "hostage diplomacy" to negotiate the release of Venezuelans deprived of liberty abroad.[33]

33. Although there have been numerous releases, the freed individuals remain subject to measures that restrict their personal liberty. According to information provided by the organizations Foro Penal and JEP Venezuela, these individuals are still required to regularly appear at courts with jurisdiction over anti-terrorism matters and are prohibited from leaving the country and from participating in public activities. These requirements trigger the constant fear of once again being deprived of liberty, especially every time they need to appear in court. Likewise, the released individuals' family members, many of whom live in remote areas and have scarce financial resources, reportedly have to request financial support to travel to Caracas to visit.[34]

34. The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights strongly condemns the use of criminal law as a mechanism for repression and political persecution of opposition figures, journalists, and human rights defenders. It also categorically rejects the use of persons deprived of liberty as a tool for negotiation or political exchange meant to improve the international image of the dictatorial regime or strengthen its position vis-a-vis other States. The IACHR calls for the immediate release of all political prisoners and individuals detained as retaliation against their work in defense of human rights, including Javier Tarazona, Rocío San Miguel, Carlos Torres, Freddy Superlano, Williams Dávila, Juan Pablo Guanipa, Biagio Pilieri, Perkins Rocha, Luis Palocz, and Jesús Armas.

2. Enforced disappearances and isolation regimes

35. The practice of enforced disappearance as a strategy to persecute individuals perceived as opposition figures continued in Venezuela in 2025. Pursuant to Article II of the Inter-American Convention on Forced Disappearance of Persons, "forced disappearance is considered to be the act of depriving a person or persons of his or their freedom, in whatever way, perpetrated by agents of the state or by persons or groups of persons acting with the authorization, support, or acquiescence of the state, followed by an absence of information or a refusal to acknowledge that deprivation of freedom or to give information on the whereabouts of that person, thereby impeding his or her recourse to the applicable legal remedies and procedural guarantees."[35]

[31] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025.

[32] France 24, Venezolanos deportados a El Salvador aterrizan en Caracas tras canje por presos políticos y estadounidenses [Venezuelans deported to El Salvador land in Caracas after exchange for political prisoners and U.S. nationals], July 18, 2025.

[33] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025.

[34] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025; meeting with the organization Foro Penal, August 7, 2025.

[35] Article 2, Inter-American Convention on Forced Disappearance of Persons.

36. The United Nations Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances has insisted that "there is no time limit, no matter how short, for an enforced disappearance to occur."[36] Accordingly, this Commission considers that the authorities' deliberate reluctance to provide information on the whereabouts of detainees, combined with the failure to bring them before a court within the legal period of 48 hours, constitutes enforced disappearance.

37. In a report published in September 2025, the Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights and Foro Penal organizations documented 96 enforced disappearances between July 28, 2024, the date of the presidential elections, and July 27, 2025, the date of the municipal elections. Most of the cases were registered in the months following the presidential elections and during the period prior to the May 2025 parliamentary and gubernatorial elections, which demonstrates the intensification of State repression in contexts of greater political mobilization and participation in Venezuela.[37]

38. The geographic distribution of arbitrary detentions changed significantly between 2024 and 2025. In 2024, after the disputed presidential elections, the cases were primarily concentrated in the border states of Táchira, Apure, and Zulia, with smaller groups registered in Sucre, Vargas, and Amazonas. Conversely, in 2025 most detentions took place in Caracas, with secondary concentrations in the states of Carabobo and Miranda, while in the rest of the country few incidents were reported. This variation suggests a shift of the repressive focus towards the direct control of urban zones and of the national political/administrative apparatus.[38]

39. According to the IACHR, the most emblematic cases documented in 2025 include the following: Eduardo Torres Muñoz, PROVEA attorney, human rights defender, and university professor, who disappeared on May 9, 2025, and was subsequently accused of conspiracy and other crimes; Lucas Hunter, French-American tourist, who disappeared on January 7, 2025, near the border with Colombia and was released on July 18, 2025, as part of the prisoner swap; Maykelis Borges, partner of an opposition military lieutenant and pregnant when she was detained, who disappeared on January 29, 2025; Nahuel Gallo, Argentine corporal first class, who disappeared on December 8, 2024, after arriving in Venezuela and was subsequently associated with alleged terrorist acts. Lastly, Naomi Arnaudez, attorney and political activist, was arrested on May 23, 2025, and accused of terrorism, while Rory Branker, journalist for the La Patilla web portal, disappeared on February 20, 2025, and was accused of extortion and of disseminating false information.[39]

40. Through its mechanisms for monitoring and receiving testimonies, the IACHR showed that in 2025, dozens of political prisoners were held incommunicado from their families and legal counsel, even when their detention location was known unofficially. It was further observed that as of April 2025, 65 families had not received formal notification of the detention center where their relatives were being held, and that in some cases information on the detainees' status or whereabouts came from other prisoners or SEBIN employees who requested supplies. The IACHR also documented mistreatment and degrading treatment of family members who went to the detention centers, including groping and invasive searches of women, as well as the deliberate refusal to allow visits or provide information on the detainees' state of health.[40]

41. The Inter-American Commission urges the Venezuelan State to immediately release all political prisoners, ensuring respect for and protection of their lives and personal integrity at all times, in line with the international obligations taken on by the State. The IACHR also considers it imperative that urgent

[36] United Nations Human Rights Council, Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, August 10, 2015, A/HRC/30/38, par. 102.

[37] Foro Penal & Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights. (2025). Electoral Repression, Enforced Disappearances and Political Control in Venezuela.

[38] Foro Penal & Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights. (2025). Electoral Repression, Enforced Disappearances and Political Control in Venezuela.

[39] Foro Penal & Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights. (2025). Electoral Repression, Enforced Disappearances and Political Control in Venezuela.

[40] IACHR, Press release 72/25, IACHR urges Venezuela to immediately release political prisoners and to end the practice of holding them incommunicado, April 11, 2025.

measures be adopted to check detainees' health status and to ensure their access to regular visits from trusted family members and legal representatives, in conditions that ensure their dignity, personal safety, and due process.[41]

3. Violations of due process and other fair-trial guarantees

42. In Venezuela, the Office of the Public Prosecutor and the judiciary form part of the de facto regime's repressive apparatus, which has led to a near total lack of fair-trial guarantees and of effective access to justice, especially for members of the political opposition and individuals perceived as such. Various civil society organizations have reported systematic violations of due process, including the appointment of ex officio public defenders without the consent of the accused, the holding of remote hearings in which the competent judges or prosecutors are not identified; and the refusal to hear legal appeals, including habeas corpus. Likewise, there are records of late court appearances, the use of vague criminal charges, and a lack of access to legal files,[42] all of which consolidate a climate of structural impunity and annul the guarantees of effective judicial protection.

43. Grave violations of procedural guarantees were observed in initial appearance hearings. Despite relatives being present in certain cases of children and adolescents, most hearings are held virtually, often at night and from remote detention centers or courthouses, while the judges and public defenders are in Caracas. This modality hinders effective interaction between the defendants and the judicial authorities, impairing the right to defense and the principle of immediacy.[43] Furthermore, according to information received from civil society organizations, none of the detained foreigners have been able to exercise their right to consular assistance, in violation of the applicable international treaties.[44]

C. Situation of freedom of expression

1. Enforced disappearance and arbitrary arrests of journalists and media workers

44. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (SRFOE or the Office) warns about the continuing repression and persecution of the independent press and critical voices in Venezuela, which ratcheted up after the presidential elections on July 28, 2024.

45. The year 2025 saw new arrests of journalists, the use of criminal law to intimidate and silence, threats, the arbitrary shutting down of media outlets, obstacles to accessing public information, and stigmatizing discourse. This situation intensified in connection with the municipal and regional elections held during the year.

46. According to public reports, the journalist and activist Ángel Godoy has been missing since January 8, 2025, after being seized, allegedly arbitrarily, by hooded, unidentified figures when arriving at his residence in Los Teques in the state of Miranda. Godoy, human rights defender, director of the Movimiento Democracia e Inclusión (MDI) and writer for the Punto de Corte online portal, was reportedly intercepted by two unidentified vehicles in the parking lot of his residence.[45]

[41] IACHR, Press release 72/25, IACHR urges Venezuela to immediately release political prisoners and to end the practice of holding them incommunicado, April 11, 2025.

[42] Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, (2025). Report of the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela (A/HRC/60/61). United Nations Human Rights Council, par. 41.

[43] Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, (2025). Report of the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela (A/HRC/60/61). United Nations Human Rights Council, par. 42.

[44] Meeting with the organization Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, August 7, 2025.

[45] Espacio Público, Enero: se profundiza la censura [January: censorship gets worse], February 5, 2025; Espacio Público, 10 al 12 Ene: desapariciones, detenciones y bloqueos [Jan 10 to 12: disappearances, detentions, and blocking], January 13, 2025.

47. Likewise, the National Association of Journalists (CNP), Zulia chapter, reported the detention of the journalist Edison Castro, who is also a professor at the Humanities and Education School of the University of Zulia, coordinator of the broadcasting courses and member of the CNP Zulia Disciplinary Board.[46] He was reportedly seized in La República square, in the city of Maracaibo, during the protest called by opposition leader María Corina Machado this past January 9, 2025. The organization Aula Abierta also reported what had occurred and expressed its concern about the persistent patterns of politically motivated criminalization, persecution, threats, harassment, and arbitrary detentions of members of the educational community.[47] According to reports, Edison Castro was released later that night.[48]

48. The Venezuelan National Union of Press Workers (SNTP) reported that journalist Julio Balza, member of opposition leader Maria Corina Machado's press team, had been detained by Bolivarian National Intelligence Service (SEBIN) agents.[49] According to public information, the detention occurred on January 9, 2025, in the municipio of Chacao, when Balza was heading to his vehicle after a demonstration called by the opposition. Family members allegedly went to various detention centers in Caracas without receiving confirmation of his location, as well as to the Office of the Public Prosecutor and Palace of Justice (courthouse) to file a writ of habeas corpus, which was not accepted or processed.[50] The Vente Venezuela party also reportedly indicated that it was unaware of the journalist's whereabouts.[51]

49. On January 9, 2025, the SNTP also registered the arrest of journalist Leandro Palmar, information coordinator for Luz Radio 102.9 FM, and of his technical assistant Belices Salvador Cubillán, photographer and videographer, while they were covering a protest called by the opposition in La República square, in the state of Zulia.[52] Both were reportedly detained by Bolivarian National Guard personnel and, according to public reports, were accused of the crimes of terrorism, incitement to hatred, conspiracy, and disturbing the peace.[53] Family members reported that they were not allowed to engage private defense counsel

[46] CNP, Zulia chapter, [@cnpzulia], (January 9, 2025), Denunciamos y rechazamos la detención en Plaza de La República del periodista Edinson Castro [We denounce and reject the detention of the journalist Edinson Castro in La República square], X, https://x.com/cnpzulia/status/1877402571565887749?t=JdFbQfK_Cc2Iv4sNIJQnjg&s=08; EvTv, Denuncian que el periodista Edinson Castro fue detenido en Maracaibo [Edinson Castro is reported to have been detained in Maracaibo], January 9, 2025; Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, [@RELE_CIDH], (January 9, 2025), En la jornada de movilizaciones del #ENE9, RELE registra con preocupación la detención del periodista Edinson Castro en Zulia [On the January 9 (#ENE9) day of protests SRFOE registers, with concern, the detention of journalist Edinson Castro in Zulia], X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1877508352525128140.

[47] La TV Calle, CNP denunció la detención del periodista Edinson Castro en Zulia [CNP reports the detention of journalist Edinson Castro in Zulia], January 9, 2025.

[48] Aula Abierta, [@AaulaAbiertaLA], (January 10, 2025), Recibimos información que en horas de la noche del jueves #9Ene fue liberado el profesor universitario de @LUZadn, Edison Castro [We have received information that Edison Castro, @LUZadn university professor, was released on the night of Thursday, January 9 (#9Ene)], X, https://x.com/AulaAbiertaLA/status/1877692848986013926.

[49] National Union of Press Workers (SNTP), [@sntpvenezuela], (January 9, 2025), Denunciamos la detención del periodista Julio Balza, miembro del equipo prensa de María Corina Machado [We denounce the detention of journalist Julio Balza, member of María Corina Machado's press team], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1877524356940837214.

[50] Espacio Público, Julio César Balza: periodista cumple 12 días en desaparición forzada [Julio César Balza: journalist missing for 12 days after enforced disappearance], January 21, 2025; Tal Cual, Madre de Julio Balza: "Les pido que liberen a mi hijo, él es periodista no terrorista" [Julio Balza's mother: "I am asking them to release my son, he is a journalist, not a terrorist"], January 10, 2025; RunRun.es, "Nadie nos ha dicho nada": Padres del periodista Julio Balza claman por su liberación ["No one has told us anything": Journalist Julio Balza's parents call for his release], January 11, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Tribunal rechaza habeas corpus a favor de periodista Julio Balza, denuncia el Sntp [Court rejects habeas corpus for journalist Julio Balza, reports the SNTP], January 15, 2025.

[51] El Carabobeño, Detienen al periodista Julio Balza, del equipo de prensa de MCM [Journalist Julio Balza, from the MCM press team, is detained], January 9, 2025; Vente Venezuela Human Rights, [@VenteDDHH], (January 9. 2025), Nuestro periodista del @convzlacomando, Julio Balza, se encuentra desaparecido desde casi las 4pm de hoy [Our journalist from @convzlacomando, Julio Balza, has been missing since close to 4 p.m.], X, https://x.com/VenteDDHH/status/1877507515421741523.

[52] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (January 10, 2025), El periodista Leandro Palmar, reportero de LUZ Radio, fue detenido este #9Ene por la Guardia Nacional en la manifestación de Plaza de la República, en #Maracaibo [Journalist Leandro Palmar, reporter for LUZ Radio, was detained this January 9 (#9Ene) by the National Guard at the demonstration in La República square, in #Maracaibo], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1877839014570467350; DW, Periodista y asistente acusados de terrorismo en Venezuela [Journalist and assistant accused of terrorism in Venezuela], January 13, 2025; Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (January 11, 2025), El equipo de LUZ Radio 102.9 FM informó que recientemente detuvieron al coordinador de la emisora, Leandro Palmar [LUZ Radio 102.9 FM team reported that station coordinator Leandro Palmar was recently detained], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1878151259510702424.

[53] NTN24, Imputan terrorismo a periodista y su asistente tras documentar la represión del 9E en Maracaibo [Journalist and his assistant charged with terrorism after documenting the January 9 repression in Maracaibo], January 13, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Imputan por and were assigned a public defender.[54] In turn, the National Association of Journalists, Zulia chapter, reportedly rejected what occurred, describing it as an attempt to criminalize the reporting work of both media professionals.[55]

50. The arrest by SEBIN agents of the journalist Rory Branker, editor of the news portal La Patilla, at his residence in Caracas, was reported on February 20, 2025.[56] According to public versions, he was allegedly first brought to the El Helicoide detention center, although his family was unable to locate him after trying at various prisons, prosecutors' offices, courts, and intelligence headquarters. Subsequently, SEBIN officers reportedly searched his home and confiscated laptop computers and mobile phones.[57] On February 26, the Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace, Diosado Cabello, affirmed in his "Con el Mazo Dando" [Hammering Away] program that the journalist had been arrested due to alleged extortion and dissemination of false information, but did not present any evidence or provide details on his state of health or exact location.[58]

51. In turn, on August 27, 2025, the IACHR issued resolution 62/2025, which granted precautionary measures for Branker, in the consideration that he was at serious, urgent risk of suffering irreparable harm to his rights to life and personal integrity in Venezuela.[59] After nearly seven months of enforced disappearance and detention, in September the journalist was confirmed to be in custody at the Bolivarian National Police holding cells in Boleíta (Zone 7), Caracas.[60]

52. On March 4, 2025, it was reported that journalist Román Comacho had been detained by SEBIN officers in a shopping center in the municipio of Sucre, in Caracas, state of Miranda. According to public reports, he was transferred to a Scientific, Criminal and Criminalistic Investigations Corps (CICPC) facility in El Hatillo.[61] At the initial appearance hearing, he was reportedly accused of the alleged crimes of incitement to hatred, obstruction of justice, and dissemination of false news, for having publishing a video associated with the murder of a person in the José Félix Ribas neighborhood in Petare. On March 7, Camacho was reportedly delitos de terrorismo a periodista Leandro Palmar en Zulia [Journalist Leandro Palmar charged with crimes of terrorism in Zulia], January 12, 2025.

---

[54] SNTP, El aislamiento intermitente de Leandro Palmar y Belices Cubillán [The intermittent isolation of Leandro Palmar and Belices Cubillán], July 13, 2025.

[55] CNP, Zulia chapter, El CNP Zulia rechaza la privación de libertad dictada en contra del periodista Leandro Palmar [CNP Zulia rejects the deprivation of liberty handed down against journalist Leandro Palmar], January 13, 2025.

[56] El Tiempo, Denuncian la detención arbitraria de otro periodista en Venezuela [Arbitrary detention reported of another journalist in Venezuela], February 21, 2025; Reporters Without Borders (RSF), VENEZUELA | La detención del periodista Rory Branker, un nuevo símbolo de la represión contra la libertad de prensa [VENEZUELA | The detention of Rory Branker, a new symbol of repression against freedom of the press], February 26, 2025; Venezuela Press and Society Institute (IPYS), Alerta IPYSve | Periodista Rory Branker fue detenido arbitrariamente [IPYSve Alert | Journalist Rory Branker was arbitrarily detained], March 5, 2025; SRFOE, [@RELE_CIDH], (February 20, 2025), La RELE registra y condena la detención del periodista Rory Branker de @la_patilla, en hechos registrados este jueves #20FEB [The SRFOE registers and condemns the detention of journalist Rory Branker of @la_patilla, in acts registered this Thursday #20FEB], X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1892751421512040793.

[57] La Patilla, Desaparición forzada de Rory Branker: el silencio que acecha a la prensa en Venezuela [Enforced disappearance of Rory Branker: the silence stalking the press in Venezuela], March 20, 2025.

[58] International Federation of Journalists (IFJ), Venezuela: Exigen la libertad del periodista Rory Branker [Venezuela: Calls for freedom for journalist Rory Branker], March 7, 2025; Ifex, Periodista Rory Branker fue detenido arbitrariamente [Journalist Rory Branker was arbitrarily detained], March 14, 2025; Reporte Ya, [@ReporteYa], (May 15, 2025), Ministro Cabello confirmó este #14May en su programa "Con el mazo dando" [Minister Cabello confirmed this #14May in his program "Con el mazo dando"] X, https://x.com/ReporteYa/status/1922992343638012166?t=E6rq4XTQfd_yKgXqOmIf7Q&s=08; CNP Caracas, [@CNPCaracas], (May 15, 2025), Ministro Diosdado Cabello arremete contra periodistas y medios en su programa "Con el Mazo Dando" [Minister Diosdado Cabello lashes out at journalists and the media in his program "Con el Mazo Dando"], X, https://x.com/CNPCaracas/status/1923025429457158384.

[59] IACHR, Resolution 62/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 906/25, Rory Daniel Branker regarding Venezuela, August 29, 2025; La Patilla, CIDH otorgó medidas cautelares al periodista Rory Branker en Venezuela [IACHR granted precautionary measures to journalist Rory Branker in Venezuela], September 3, 2025.

[60] Efecto Cocuyo, Tras 206 días de desaparición forzada, la familia del periodista Rory Branker dio con su paradero [Journalist Rory Branker located by his family after 206 days of enforced disappearance], September 15, 2025; Espacio Público, Septiembre: detenciones arbitrarias y hostigamiento para silenciar [September: arbitrary detentions and harassment to silence], October 6, 2025.

[61] Espacio Público, Detienen al periodista Román Camacho [Journalist Román Camacho detained], March 6, 2025; NTN24, Detenido el periodista Román Camacho en Caracas [Journalist Román Camacho detained in Caracas], March 4, 2025; SRFOE, [@RELE_CIDH], (March 4, 2025), RELE recibe con preocupación reportes sobre la detención del periodista Román Camacho [SRFOE receives with concern reports on the detention of journalist Román Camacho], X, https://x.com/search?q=from%3ARELE_CIDH%20camacho&src=typed_query.

released after being held for over 70 hours. Over social media, the journalist confirmed that the investigation against him continues and that he is forbidden from speaking publicly about the case.[62]

53. Furthermore, on March 20, 2025, Juan Francisco Alvarado, social communications student, was reportedly arrested by Bolivarian National Guard officers in the municipio of Anzoátegui, state of Cojedes, and accused of alleged instigation to hatred after publishing complaints on his Facebook account.[63] According to the SNTP, Alvarado was detained while heading home in the town of Apartadero, and was transferred to a Bolivarian National Guard command in Agua Blanca, state of Portuguesa.[64]

54. On April 10, 2025, civil society organizations reported the disappearance and detention of journalist Nakary Ramos, of the media outlet Impacto Venezuela, who was with her partner Gianni González at the time of the acts.[65] According to public reports, Ramos was detained by State officers under accusations of instigation to hatred and dissemination of false news, after reporting on the increase in thefts in Caracas. The arrest took place a few days after the Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace, Diosdado Cabello, classified several reports of crime disseminated on social media as fake news and called for action against people who share this type of content.[66] On June 17, 2025, the First Control Court of the Caracas Metropolitan Area reportedly ratified the custodial measure against the journalist.[67]

55. On May 22, 2025, the arbitrary detention of the 76-year-old media professional José Raúl Amiel was reported; he was allegedly detained by hooded SEBIN agents who entered his Caracas residence without a warrant. According to reports, the detention was associated with a blog publication that criticized [62] Efecto Cocuyo, Excarcelan al periodista Román Camacho tras más de 48 horas preso [Journalist Román Camacho released after over 48 hours in custody], March 7, 2025; Voces del Sur, Excarcelaron al periodista Román Camacho [Journalist Román Camacho released], July 18, 2025.

[63] Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (March 25, 2025), El joven Juan Francisco Alvarado, quien estudia Comunicación Social, resultó detenido por efectivos de la GNB [The young man Juan Francisco Alvarado, who studies social communication, was detained by members of the GNB], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1904615737135706620; Espacio Público, Detienen y acusan de instigación al odio al estudiante Juan Francisco Alvarado [Student Juan Francisco Alvarado detained and accused of instigation to hatred], March 25, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Presentarán en tribunales a estudiante de periodismo por sus críticas en redes sociales [Journalism student to be brought before the courts due to his criticism on social media], March 24, 2025; SRFOE, [RELE_CIDH], (March 22, 2025), RELE condena detención arbitraria del estudiante de periodismo Juan Francisco Alvarado [SRFOE condemns arbitrary detention of journalism student Juan Francisco Alvarado], X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1903603169461965216; IPYS Venezuela, Alerta IPYSve | Detienen a estudiante de periodismo Juan Francisco Alvarado en Cojedes [IPYSve Alert | Journalism student Juan Francisco Alvarado detained in Cojedes], March 31, 2025.

[64] Espacio Público, Marzo: censura establecida [March: censorship established], April 5, 2025; SNTP, Juan Francisco Alvarado, un estudiante de comunicación preso a consecuencia de la persecución digital [Juan Francisco Alvarado, communications student imprisoned due to digital persecution], July 13, 2025.

[65] Tal Cual, CNP Caracas denuncia detención de la periodista Nakary Ramos [CNP Caracas reports detention of journalist Nakary Ramos], April 10, 2025; EvTv, CNP denuncia detención de periodista Nakary Ramos de Impacto Venezuela [CNP reports detention of Impacto Venezuela journalist Nakary Ramos], April 10, 2025; SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (April 10, 2025), La periodista Nakary Ramos, de @ImpactoVE, se encuentra desaparecida desde el pasado #8Abr [Journalist Nakary Ramos of @ImpactoVE missing since last April 8 (#Abr)], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1910359931305468407; SRFOE, [@RELE_CIDH], (April 10, 2025), RELE recibe con preocupación reportes sobre la detención de la periodista Nakary Ramos, cuyo paradero se desconocía [SRFOE receives with concern reports on the detention of the journalist Nakary Ramos, whose whereabouts were unknown], X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1910424030114611666.

[66] Efecto Cocuyo, CNP Caracas denuncia detención de periodista Nakary Ramos [CNP Caracas condemns detention of journalist Nakary Ramos], April 10, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Nakary Mena Ramos, la única mujer periodista presa en Venezuela, cumple 100 días de encarcelamiento [Nakary Mena Ramos, the only woman journalist imprisoned in Venezuela, marks 100 days in custody], July 17, 2025.

[67] Espacio Público, Tribunal ratifica privativa de libertad a la periodista Nakary Mena [Court ratifies imprisonment of journalist Nakary Mena], June 18, 2025.

the elections of deputies and governors.[68] Civil society organizations warned about his delicate state of health, including knee mobility and blood pressure issues, and expressed concern over his physical integrity.[69]

56. On May 23, 2025, the journalist and university professor Carlos Marcano was reportedly detained by Bolivarian National Police officers, who entered his family residence in Caracas by force, breaking the gate without showing a search or arrest warrant. According to reports, after being apprehended, Marcano was forcibly disappeared until June 5, when his mother was able to see him at the Bolivarian National Police headquarters in La Yaguara, Caracas. The next day, he was reportedly once again transferred to an undisclosed location.[70]

57. The Office of the Rapporteur also learned that Colombian journalist and photojournalist Scheyder Vladimir Mendoza, of the agency AFP in Cúcuta, was detained by members of the Bolivarian National Guard on September 11, 2025, upon crossing the Francisco de Paula Santander International Bridge in Ureña, while covering the Venezuelan military deployment on the border with Colombia. According to public reports, before releasing him, the officers allegedly forced him to delete the audiovisual material and photographs he had taken.[71]

58. The Office of the Rapporteur continued to monitor the situation of journalists who had been arbitrarily detained, especially in connection with the 2024 presidential elections, including journalist and radio host José Gregorio Camero, whose relatives warned about his deteriorating health after he had suffered several decompensations while being held at a CICPC cell in the state of Guárico.[72] As was documented in the previous annual report,[73] Camero was arrested on August 3, 2024 by officers of the General Directorate of Military Counterintelligence (DGCIM) in Valle de la Pascua, and accused of terrorism, incitement to hatred, and [68] Tal Cual, Denuncian detenciones de un comunicador y un defensor de derechos humanos [Detentions of media professional and human rights defender condemned], May 23, 2025; CNP Caracas, [@CNPCaracas], (May 22, 2025), Denunciamos la detención arbitraria del comunicador Raúl Amiel [We condemn the arbitrary detention of media professional Raúl Amiel], X, https://x.com/CNPCaracas/status/1925747065872629797; Espacio Público, Detienen a periodistas y defensores horas antes del proceso electoral del #25May [Journalists and defenders detained hours before the #25May elections], May 24, 2025; SRFOE, [RELE_CIDH], (May 23, 2025), Según reportes públicos, el comunicador José Raúl Amiel, habría sido detenido arbitrariamente [According to public reports, media professional José Raúl Amiel was arbitrarily detained]. La RELE urge a autoridades a informar condiciones en que se encuentra [The SRFOE urges authorities to disclose his condition], X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1925906820175905092.

[69] DDHH Vente Venezuela, [@VenteDDHH], (May 23, 2025), José Raúl Amiel Diazviana, periodista venezolano fue secuestrado este jueves [José Raúl Amiel Diazviana, Venezuelan journalist, was kidnapped this Thursday], X, https://x.com/VenteDDHH/status/1926044840208302528.

[70] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (May 23, 2025), La noche de este #22May fue detenido el periodista Carlos Marcano [Journalist Carlos Marcano detained the night of this #22May], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1925979367177433310; IPYS Venezuela, Alerta IPYSve | Detienen arbitrariamente al periodista Carlos Marcano en Caracas [IPYSve Alert | Journalist Carlos Marcano arbitrarily detained in Caracas], May 26, 2025; IPYS Venezuela, [@ipysvenezuela], (May 23, 2025), Carlos Marcano, comunicador y colaborador de organizaciones sociales [Carlos Marcano, media professional and collaborator with social organizations], X, https://x.com/ipysvenezuela/status/1926001282885575080; Espacio Público, Periodista Carlos Marcano en desaparición forzada [Journalist Carlos Marcano in enforced disappearance], June 9, 2025; SRFOE, [@RELE_CIDH], (May 23, 2025), RELE expresa preocupación por la detención del periodista y docente Carlos Marcano hoy en su residencia en Sucre, Caracas [SRFOE expresses concern over the detention of journalist and professor Carlos Marcano today at his residence in Sucre, Caracas] , X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1926015131411976674?t=AnI7I-iMt92T_HdILXbeZQ&s=08.

[71] Efecto Cocuyo, Detienen a periodista y lo liberan luego tras hacerlo borrar material del despliegue militar venezolano en Táchira [Journalist detained and then released after being forced to delete material on the Venezuelan military deployment in Táchira], September 11, 2025; SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (September 11, 2025), Scheyder Vladimir Mendoza, periodista y reportero gráfico de agencias internacionales, fue detenido por la Guardia Nacional [Scheyder Vladimir Mendoza, journalist and graphic reporter for international agencies, detained by the National Guard], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1966241448619069760.

[72] Espacio Público, Familiares del periodista José Gregorio Camero alertan sobre problemas de salud tras su detención [Relatives of journalist José Gregorio Camero warn about health problems following his detention], February 11, 2025; IACHR, SRFOE, Press release R088/25, SRFOE warns about the serious deterioration of the media ecosystem in Venezuela and urges the State to respect and guarantee freedom of expression and of the press, May 5, 2025.

[73] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Annual Report 2024, OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 39, March 3, 2025, pars. 1294 and 1300.

conspiracy, after an opposition protest against the election results announced on July 28 by the National Electoral Council. On July 21, 2025, the SNTP reported his release.[74]

59. Likewise, the Office of the Special Rapporteur learned that the journalist Víctor Ugas was hospitalized from February 4 to 6 due to asthma complications attributed to the environmental conditions in the Tocorón prison, where he has been held since August 2024.[75]

60. Reports also emerged that journalist, union leader, and political activist Carlos Julio Rojas was being held in solitary confinement at the SEBIN headquarters in El Helicoide. According to the information available, he was not being allowed visits nor deliveries of medication, clothing, or food, even though he has high blood pressure and needs treatment.[76] Rojas was arrested on April 15, 2024, and civil society organizations, activists, family members, and colleagues have been calling for his release ever since.[77] The IACHR granted precautionary measures in favor of the journalist, in the consideration that he faces a serious, urgent risk of suffering irreparable harm to his rights in Venezuela.[78]

61. Likewise, it was disclosed that the wife of journalist and political leader Biagio Pilieri reported that he has been kept isolated and incommunicado since he was detained on August 28, 2024, by SEBIN agents at the El Helicoide office in Caracas.[79]

62. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression received reports indicating that journalist Roland Carreño's defender had unofficially informed SNTP that he had been notified of the alleged transfer of Carreño and Freddy Superlano, political leader, from El Helicoide to an undisclosed location.[80] Since his detention on August 2, 2024, in the post-election period, Carreño has reportedly not received visits or telephone calls, which has led to growing concern among his family members.[81] Notably, the

[74] El Impulso, Excarcelan a periodista José Gregorio Camero: quedan 19 detenidos, advierte el SNTP #22Jul [Journalist José Gregorio Camero released: 19 still detained, SNTP warns], July 22, 2025; VPItv, [@VPITV], (July 21, 2025), Como parte de las excarcelaciones de las últimas horas en Venezuela, el periodista José Gregorio Camero [Journalist José Gregorio Camero, among the individuals released in the past few hours], X, https://x.com/VPITV/status/1947465844713251310?t=W_oa40SDsvbVzpK-Frio7g&s=19.

[75] Espacio Público, Febrero: expresión perseguida y condenada [February: speech targeted and criminalized], March 5, 2025.

[76] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (June 14, 2025), El periodista y activista político Carlos Julio Rojas, encarcelado hace un año y dos meses, se encuentra en una celda de castigo desde hace dos semanas [Journalist and political activist Carlos Julio Rojas, imprisoned one year and two months ago, held in a punishment cell for the past two weeks], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1934012796779311362?t=zpTeMTurjAVxnaCrAB3yBg&s=08; Efecto Cocuyo, CNP Caracas denuncia que Carlos Julio Rojas tiene dos semanas en aislamiento [CNP Caracas reports that Carlos Julio Rojas has been in solitary confinement for two weeks], August 9, 2025; Crónica Uno, Periodista Carlos Julio Rojas es sometido a aislamiento por segunda vez en dos meses [Journalist Carlos Julio Rojas subjected to solitary confinement for the second time in two months], August 12, 2025.

[77] Espacio Público, Carlos Julio Rojas cumple un año de injusta detención [Carlos Julio Rojas has been unfairly detained for one year], April 15, 2025; RunRun.es, Piden libertad para periodista Carlos Julio Rojas a once meses de su detención [Freedom requested for journalist Carlos Julio Rojas eight months after he was detained], March 16, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Piden libertad para Carlos Julio Rojas a 400 días de haber sido arrestado [Freedom requested for Carlos Julio Rojas 400 days after he was arrested], May 30, 2025; IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Annual Report 2024, OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 39, March 3, 2025, par. 1289.

[78] IACHR, Resolution 7/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 205-24, Carlos Julio Rojas regarding Venezuela, January 20, 2025.

[79] SNTP, Esposa de Biagio Pilieri denuncia 10 meses de aislamiento: "No sabemos nada de su salud" [Wife of Biagio Pilieri denounces 10 months of isolation: "We know nothing about his health"], July 9, 2025.

[80] SRFOE, [@RELE_CIDH], (September 4, 2025), RELE monitorea con preocupación el traslado del periodista Roland Carreño y el político Freddy Superlano (beneficiarios de MC) [SRFOE monitors with concern the transfer of journalist Roland Carreño and politician Freddy Superlano (beneficiaries of precautionary measures)], X, https://x.com/RELE_CIDH/status/1963638779178016968.

[81] SNTP, El periodista Roland Carreño fue sacado de El Helicoide y llevado a un lugar desconocido [Journalist Roland Carreño taken from El Helicoide and brought to an undisclosed site], undated; NTN24, Denuncian que los presos políticos venezolanos Roland Carreño y Freddy Superlano habrían sido trasladados del Helicoide a paradero desconocido [Venezuelan political prisoners Roland Carreño and Freddy Superlano reportedly transferred from Helicoide to undisclosed location], September 1, 2025; El Impulso, Voluntad Popular exige fe de vida de Ronald Carreño y Freddy Superlano #2Sep [Voluntad Popular party demands proof that Ronald Carreño and Freddy Superlano are alive #2Sep], September 2, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Sntp denuncia traslado de Roland Carreño a sitio desconocido [SNTP condemns Roland Carreño's transfer to undisclosed site], September 2, 2025; NTN24, Aurora Silva, esposa de Freddy Superlano, habla de últimas informaciones sobre el dirigente político [Aurora Silva, wife of Freddy Superlano, discusses the most recent information about the political leader], September 2, 2025.

IACHR granted precautionary measures to the journalist Roland Carreño in the consideration that he faces a serious, urgent risk of suffering irreparable harm to his rights in Venezuela.[82]

63. In a report for the United Nations Human Rights Council, the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela documented 18 cases of journalists being detained while working, from August 2024 to August 2025, due to their being considered opponents of the government, whether or not that was true. The report also indicates that between January and June 2024, 144 attacks on freedom of expression were documented, including 44 associated with incidents in digital environments. These acts form part of a pattern of sustained repression that restricts the exercise of journalism and citizens' right to be informed.[83]

64. The IACHR and its Office of the Rapporteur reiterate that journalism is the primary and principal manifestation of freedom of expression, since it is journalists and the media that keep society informed of matters of public interest and contribute to the existence of a broad, robust, and plural public debate.[84] An independent and critical press is fundamental to ensuring respect for other liberties that form part of a democratic system of government.[85]

65. As the Special Rapporteurs for Freedom of Expression indicated in their Joint Declaration of 2013, the State "has the duty to ensure that journalists and media workers [...] are not arrested, threatened, assaulted, or limited in any manner in their rights as a result of practicing their profession."[86] Moreover, the States are obligated to create the conditions for journalists to exercise their profession freely, independently, and safely.[87]

66. Attacks aimed at silencing critical voices or inhibiting citizen participation in matters of public interest constitute a clear violation of human rights and the fundamental principles of the rule of law.[88] The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur strongly condemn the systematic repression and persecution of the independent press in Venezuela and urge the Venezuelan State to immediately put an end to all forms of aggression against journalists, the media, and individuals exercising their right to freedom of expression. They also call for the cessation of arbitrary detentions and the immediate release of all persons who have been detained for political motives.

2. Threats and attacks against the press

67. In addition to the detentions, other forms of aggression against the press continue to be reported, including raids, threats of arrest, and attacks on media facilities with a view to intimidating and silencing. On March 18, 2025, Bolivarian National Guard and Office of the Public Prosecutor agents allegedly

[82] IACHR, Resolution 50/2024, Precautionary Measure No. 883-24, Roland Oswaldo Carreño Gutiérrez regarding Venezuela, August 17, 2024.

[83] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (September 22, 2025), La Misión Internacional Independiente de Determinación de los Hechos de la ONU confirmó 18 detenciones de periodistas en Venezuela, "por ser considerados opositores al Gobierno, de manera real o percibida" [UN Independent International Fact-Finding Mission confirmed 18 detentions of journalists in Venezuela "for being considered actual or perceived opponents of the government," X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1970252648109547969; Espacio Público, Misión Independiente documenta en un año 18 casos de detenciones de periodistas en el ejercicio de su trabajo [In one year, Independent Mission documents 18 cases of detentions of journalists], September 22, 2025.

[84] Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Advisory Opinion OC-5/85, "Compulsory membership in an association prescribed by law for the practice of journalism (Arts. 13 and 29 American Convention on Human Rights), November 13, 1985, par. 71; IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Background and Interpretation of the Declaration of Principles, undated.

[85] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Background and Interpretation of the Declaration of Principles, undated.

[86] United Nations Special Rapporteur on the Protection and Promotion of the Right to Freedom of Opinion and Expression, and Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression of the OAS Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Joint declaration on violence against journalists and media workers in the context of protests, September 13, 2013.

[87] IACHR, SRFOE, Marco Jurídico Interamericano sobre el derecho a la libertad de expresión: actualización 2025 [Inter-American legal framework regarding the right to freedom of expression, 2025 update], OEA/Ser.L/V /II CIDH/RELE/INF.29/25, pars. 6-8, 338, and following.

[88] IACHR, SRFOE, Press release R088/25, SRFOE warns about the serious deterioration of the media ecosystem in Venezuela and urges the State to respect and guarantee freedom of expression and of the press, May 5, 2025.

raided the apartment of journalist Charito Rojas in Valencia, state of Carabobo. According to reports, the agents checked the property and demanded that the storage room be opened. In June 2024, a Carabobo criminal court reportedly issued a warrant for Rojas's arrest for an alleged pattern of aggravated fraud and conspiracy.[89]

68. Likewise, the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression learned of reports of threats against the journalist Jesús Hermoso, who allegedly received at least three warnings of a possible arrest warrant against him due to his journalism work. According to public statements, Hermoso asserted: "we received information from various channels that I would be apprehended. First, due to the exposure and the things I write. Second, because Diosdado Cabello threatened the sectors on the left that meet with opposition figures. He sent that message about five weeks ago on his program."[90] In the face of these threats, the journalist announced on his social media accounts that he had decided to self-exile: "I never wanted to leave Venezuela, but it was either that or keep quiet at the risk of being imprisoned. Today the fight for my country continues, but in relative safety abroad."[91]

69. In turn, the journalist Gustavo Azócar reported that a warrant for his arrest had been issued by the Ninth Control Court of the Judicial Circuit of the state of Táchira, for the alleged crimes of incitement to hatred and aggravated unlawful disclosure of personal information. According to Azócar, his attorneys have not been given access to the file, in violation of his right to defense.[92]

70. Furthermore, the SNTP warned about serious threats received by Venezuelan journalist and activist Melanio Escobar, founder of the Redes Ayuda organization dedicated to defending freedom of expression, digital rights, and the security of journalists and activists. According to Escobar's own public statements, he has been subjected to constant threats and recently received messages that include direct threats to kidnap his family to force them to return to Venezuela to be "disappeared, tortured, or killed." Some messages reportedly contained references to the alleged addresses of his relatives' homes.[93] Civil society organizations warned that this type of harassment demonstrates the dangers faced by Venezuelan journalists even when in exile, and demanded the immediate cessation of acts of intimidation against the press and their families.[94] A similar act was reported by the journalist Orlando Avendaño, who indicated that both he and the journalist Jesús Medina Ezaine had received threats of potential kidnapping with a view to bringing them back to Venezuela.[95]

71. In September 2025, new cases were registered of harassment of journalists in Venezuela. On September 18, Andreina Badual, journalist and human rights activist, reported that she had been followed by a man on a motorcycle after attending an event at the French embassy in Caracas, in what she classified as part of a pattern of intimidation against the individuals who speak out about the situation of political prisoners. Some days later, on September 25, Francesca Díaz, journalist at Correo del Caroní and Radio Fe y Alegría, reported that she had been subjected to threats and smear campaigns on social media, where she was falsely [89] Espacio Público, Marzo: censura establecida [March: censorship established], April 5, 2025.

[90] Espacio Público, El periodista Jesús Hermoso recibió alertas de captura [Journalist Jesús Hermoso received arrest warnings], undated.

[91] Jesús Noel Hermoso, [@Jesus_Hermoso], (September 15, 2025), Nunca quise irme de Venezuela, pero era eso o mantenerme en silencio a riesgo de ser encarcelado [I never wanted to leave Venezuela, but it was either that or keep quiet at the risk of being imprisoned], X, https://x.com/Jesus_Hermoso/status/1967619027863580995?t=QYyPt7df-6l80xDNmcUR1w&s=08.

[92] Espacio Público, Marzo: censura establecida [March: censorship established], April 5, 2025; SNTP, [@sntvenezuela], (March 27, 2025), El periodista Gustavo Azócar Alcalá denunció la existencia de una orden de captura en su contra [Journalist Gustavo Azócar Alcalá reported the existence of an arrest warrant against him], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1905353473283240331.

[93] SNTP, El periodista Melanio Escobar denuncia amenazas de secuestro y agresión [Journalist Melanio Escobar reports threats of kidnapping and assault], September 8, 2025; Melanio Escobar, [@MelanioBar], Gracias a todos por la solidaridad pública y privada ante las amenazas de muerte hacia mi [Thank you all for your public and private support in the face of the death threats against me], X, https://x.com/MelanioBar/status/1964979530202054985?t=GVltX6MYw3_dAMXEV9Hm4Q&s=19.

[94] IPYS Venezuela, [@ipysvenezuela], (September 8, 2025), El periodista exiliado @MelanioBar denunció en su cuenta de X haber recibido amenazas directas contra su familia [Exiled journalist @MelanioBar reported on her X account that she had received direct threats against her family], X, https://x.com/ipysvenezuela/status/1965143471586451566?t=ooWwVL-WvhPoNcH-oEnSzQ&s=08.

[95] Orlando Avendaño, [@OrlvndoA], (September 9, 2025), Me llegó información de que el régimen pretende secuestrarnos [I received information that the regime plans to kidnap us], X, https://x.com/OrlvndoA/status/1965548111528399237?t=QioOOIyrdyX0cQ7y59d2OA&s=08.

accused of collaborating with security forces. The journalist indicated that "over the past few years I have been censored precisely due to my journalistic approach and have even lost radio slots for defending the truth."[96]

72. Lastly, on July 6, 2025, unidentified individuals reportedly broke into the CNP Caracas headquarters illegally. During the assault, they reportedly subdued the security personnel and destroyed a banner with the faces of journalists detained in Venezuela, most of whom had been arrested after the July 28, 2024, presidential elections. The general secretariat of the CNP Caracas publicly reported that the banner was torn down by armed and hooded individuals and demanded an immediate investigation.[97]

73. The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression recall that principle 9 of the Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression indicates that the "murder, kidnapping, intimidation of and/or threats to social communicators, as well as the material destruction of communications media violate the fundamental rights of individuals and strongly restrict freedom of expression. It is the duty of the state to prevent and investigate such occurrences, to punish their perpetrators and to ensure that victims receive due compensation."[98] The Commission and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression have asserted that attacks on journalists are intended to silence them, and therefore also constitute violations of society's right to have free access to information.[99]

74. On January 9, 2025, during protests called by the opposition in several cities in Venezuela to reject the results announced by the National Electoral Council declaring Nicolás Maduro victorious, multiple acts of harassment and violence against journalists covering the protests were registered. For example, media worker Frank Daza was injured while covering a demonstration in the municipio of Pedro María Ureña, state of Táchira.[100] According to reports, hooded figures aboard a vehicle attacked the protestors, allegedly injuring Daza.[101] That same day, journalists Joanna Barboza and Felipe López were allegedly assaulted while reporting from the La República square, state of Zulia. Allegedly, Barboza's cell phone was taken, and an officer struck López and destroyed his ID.[102] In addition, work equipment belonging to the journalists Reinaldo Campins and Randolfo Blanco was reported to have been stolen while they were covering the demonstrations.[103]

75. Multiple obstacles and instances of intimidation of the press were also documented during the May 25, 2025, elections. According to public reports, in Mérida, a member of the Plan República security force asked to photograph credentials as a requirement for access; in Caracas, a reporter for the Tal Cual daily

[96] Espacio Público, Septiembre: detenciones arbitrarias y hostigamiento para silenciar [September: arbitrary detentions and harassment to silence], October 6, 2025; Espacio Público, Andreína Baduel: "Soy una perseguida" [Andreína Baduel: I am being persecuted], July 7, 2025.

[97] IPYS Venezuela, [@ipysvenezuela], (July 6, 2025), La madrugada de este domingo #6Jul, sujetos no identificados ingresaron ilegalmente [Early this Sunday #6Jul, unidentified individuals entered illegally], X, https://x.com/ipysvenezuela/status/1941886180771197051?t=633GwikF5d7dRFhpHWHsNg&s=08; RunRun.es, Irrupción violenta en el CNP: encapuchados se llevaron pancarta de periodistas presos [Violent break-in of the CNP: hooded individuals took banner of imprisoned journalists], July 6, 2025; CNP Caracas, [@CNPCaracas], (July 6, 2025), Los sujetos encapuchados amenazaron con arma de fuego a personal de vigilancia y rompieron cerco eléctrico para ingresar [The hooded figures threatened security staff with firearms and broke electric fence to get in], X, https://x.com/CNPCaracas/status/1941757177292562680.

[98] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression, 2000, principle 9.

[99] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Background and Interpretation of the Declaration of Principles, undated; IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Annual Report 2022, OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 50, March 6, 2025, par. 41.

[100] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (January 9, 2025), El comunicador Frank Daza fue herido mientras daba cobertura a la concentración opositora [Media worker Frank Daza injured while covering the opposition rally], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1877437642528186830.

[101] La Nación, Alcalde de Ureña repudia ataque a manifestación opositora que dejó dos heridos [Mayor of Ureña repudiates attack on opposition protest that left two people injured], January 9, 2025.

[102] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (January 9, 2025), Joanna Barboza y Felipe López fueron agredidos [Joanna Barboza and Felipe López were assaulted], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1877386029188936150?t=LwEPkgvth3-IEppHujvGfg&s=08.

[103] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (January 9, 2025), Motorizados identificados con grupos oficialistas [Motorcyclists identified with pro-government groups], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1877375879036190866?t=qkr7o6c03_Rny_7lQaSQrQ&s=08; CNP Venezuela, [@cnpvenezuela], (January 9, 2025), Carabobo @CNP_Carabobo Periodista Randolfo Blanco fue despojado de celular por func Guardia Nacional [Journalist Randolfo Blanco had his cell phone taken by National Guard members], X, https://x.com/cnpven/status/1877407215318909164?t=uWeIWHxTdkQG6R9wr6vDxg&s=08.

newspaper was prevented from entering a voting center, on the grounds that only VTV teams were allowed to do so.[104] In addition, armed civilians threatened journalist Daniel Garrido, correspondent for Telemundo News, and his team, forcing them to show their credentials.[105]

76. In the July 27 municipal elections,[106] in Barquesimeto, state of Lara, journalists were reportedly forced to remain outside the polling station while a candidate for mayor of Irivarren was voting.[107] In Puerto Ordaz, journalists Félix Requena and Edwin Rosal were reportedly harassed and monitored while they were covering the voting.[108] Furthermore, in Cojedes, journalist Pilar Guerra was reportedly denied access to a polling station,[109] and in Lara the El Impulso newspaper team was forced to delete photographic material taken at the La Salle school, even though the polling station coordinator had authorized the coverage.[110] Certified journalists were also reportedly blocked in Aragua and Zulia.[111] Lastly, in Nueva Esparta, a soldier prevented a journalist from filming supporting footage around the polling station in the Madre Guadalupe school in Maneiro.[112]

77. Furthermore, a pattern continues to be observed, in which foreign journalists seeking to cover the political, social, and human rights situation in Venezuela are deported. On August 27, 2025, Mexican journalists Israel Navarro and Gerardo Torres, from the media outlet Milenio, were deported by Venezuelan authorities after trying to enter the country. According to public reports, they arrived at the Simón Bolívar de Maiquetía International Airport on August 25 and were held by migration and counterintelligence personnel for at least 24 hours, during which their passports, mobile phones, and work equipment were confiscated. The SNTP reported that the authorities forbade them from communicating in any way with Milenio and kept them under surveillance in a room guarded by soldiers before they were deported. In an interview, journalist Navarro stated that the Venezuelan officers justified the measure by insisting that journalistic activities "are not allowed" in the country.[113]

78. These acts take place against the backdrop of increasing stigmatization of the press, pushed by the highest-level State authorities, including governors and mayors. For example, Nicolás Maduro publicly accused the Spanish agency EFE of conducting "a dirty little campaign against the country," affirming that "all the EFE journalists serve as media hitmen against Venezuela, they are the face of fascism."[114] Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace Diosdado Cabello also criticized EFE after an interview of political activist Magalli Meda. Three days later, the internet observatory VE sin Filtro reported that operators like CANTV, G-Network, [104] SNTP, [@snptvenezuela], (May 25, 2025), En dos hechos, a un mismo reportero del @DiarioTalCual se le impidió el acceso al centro de votación Edoardo Crema [On two occasions, the same @DiarioTalCual reporter was denied access to the Edoardo Crema polling station], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1926675329558393294.

[105] SNTP, [@snptvenezuela], (May 25, 2025), Civiles armados y sin identificación amenazaron al periodista Daniel Garrido [Armed and unidentified civilians threatened journalist Daniel Garrido], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1926727769104196020.

[106] SNTP, SNTP: Restricciones, intimidación y censura en la cobertura periodística de las elecciones municipales 2025 [SNTP: Restrictions, intimidation, and censorship in the journalistic coverage of the 2025 municipal elections], July 27, 2025.

[107] SNTP, Plan República restringe cobertura de periodistas durante la votación de Henri Falcón [Plan República restricts journalists' coverage during Henri Falcón vote], July 27, 2025.

[108] SNTP, Periodistas son fotografiados y señalados de "saboteadores" en Puerto Ordaz [Journalists are photographed and called "saboteurs" in Puerto Ordaz], July 27, 2025.

[109] SNTP, Plan República impide labor de periodista en San Carlos durante jornada electoral [Plan República prevents journalist from working in San Carlos on election day], July 27, 2025.

[110] SNTP, Comandante de la GNB obliga a equipo de El Impulso a borrar fotos de la cobertura [GNB commander forces El Impulso team to delete photos from their coverage], July 27, 2025.

[111] SNTP, Periodistas enfrentan restricciones en centros de votación de Aragua y Zulia [Journalists face restrictions at polling stations in Aragua and Zulia], July 27, 2025.

[112] SNTP, En el municipio Maneiro le impiden a periodista grabar a las afueras de centro de votación [In the municipio of Maneiro journalist is prevented from recording around the polling station], July 27, 2025.

[113] El Diario, SNTP denunció que dos periodistas mexicanos fueron deportados cuando intentaban ingresar a Venezuela [SNTP reported that two Mexican journalists were deported when they tried to enter Venezuela], August 27, 2025; Espacio Público, Periodistas de México inadmitidos: "aquí es diferente" [Mexican journalists denied entry: "it's different here"], August 30, 2025; SNTP Venezuela, Periodistas de Milenio denuncian que fueron deportados al intentar ingresar a Venezuela [Milenio journalists report that they were deported when trying to enter Venezuela], August 27, 2025; NTN24, Dos periodistas mexicanos que buscaban cubrir la tensión entre Estados Unidos y el régimen madurista fueron deportados de Venezuela [Two Mexican journalists deported from Venezuela while attempting to cover U.S.-Maduro tensions], August 27, 2025.

[114] Espacio Público, Nicolás Maduro hostiga a la agencia EFE [Nicolás Maduro harasses the agency EFE], January 31, 2025.

Airtek, Movistar, NetUno, Digitel, Supercable, and Thundernet had blocked the EFE website through DNS and HTTPS.[115]

79. Likewise, public reports indicate that in Trujillo, Governor Gerardo Márquez threatened to arrest individuals who, in his opinion, produce hate speech or content that instigates hatred on social media, warning that a "Tun Tun" [Knock Knock] operation would occur, in allusion to security organizations arbitrarily detaining and forcibly disappearing individuals perceived as opposition figures.[116]

80. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression warns that these kinds of statements create a hostile climate for the exercise of journalism. Public servants serve as guarantors of people's fundamental rights and, therefore, their statements cannot ignore those rights nor constitute forms of direct or indirect interference with or harmful pressure on the rights of those who seek to contribute to public deliberation by expressing and disseminating their thoughts, like journalists.[117] Consequently, this Office makes an urgent call to the national and local authorities to abstain from issuing statements that could threaten, stigmatize, or disqualify the independent press in Venezuela.

3. Arbitrary closure and sustainability of media outlets

81. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression continued to receive information on the closure of local radio programs and stations, in many instances due to pressure or orders from agents of the National Telecommunications Commission (CONATEL). According to public information, on January 24, CONATEL staff ordered the closure of Criolla 100.7 FM, a radio station operating since 2020 in the municipio of Angostura, state of Bolívar, and seizure of its equipment, alleging that it was operating "underground."[118] Furthermore, on February 21, the stations Victoria 100.9 FM and Stilos 93.1 FM, located in Biscucuy, state of Portuguesa, reportedly stopped operating after a CONATEL visit in which their equipment was seized.[119]

82. On March 31, CONATEL ordered the closure of Radio Mundial 860 AM, after declaring its concession title terminated; this station had been operating for over 70 years in San Cristóbal, state of Táchira. Public reports indicate that it was one of the few medium-wave broadcasters in the region, meaning its shutdown creates an additional information vacuum.[120] On May 22, Admirable Stereo 106.1 FM went off the air in San Antonio del Táchira, after a CONATEL operation in which its equipment was confiscated due to lack of proper authorization. The station, active since 2020, had requested the permit but had not received a response.[121]

---

[115] Espacio Público, Bloquean acceso al portal web de la Agencia EFE [Access to EFE web portal blocked], March 25, 2025; Correo del Caroní, VE sin Filtro denuncia bloqueo del portal de noticias EFE [VE sin Filtro condemns blocking of EFE news portal], March 23, 2025.

[116] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (January 27, 2025), El gobernador de #Trujillo, Gerardo Márquez, amenazó con cárcel a quienes escriban en redes sociales mensajes que puedan ser considerados de odio [#Trujillo governor Gerardo Márquez threatened to jail social media users whose posts could be considered hate speech], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1883984861482160234.

[117] Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Case of Ríos et al. v. Venezuela, Preliminary Objections, Merits, Reparations, and Costs, Judgment of January 28, 2009, Series C No. 194, par. 139.

[118] Tal Cual, Conatel cierra Criolla 100.7FM en Bolívar y decomisa varios equipos del medio [Conatel shuts down Criolla 100.7FM in Bolívar and seizes several pieces of equipment], January 24, 2025; Espacio Público, Conatel cerró la emisora Criolla 100.7 FM en el estado Bolívar [Conatel shut down the station Criolal 100.7 FM in the state of Bolívar], January 25, 2025.

[119] SNTP, [@sntpvenezuela], (February 22, 2025), Las emisoras Victoria 100.9 FM y Stilos 93.1 FM, de Biscucuy [The Biscucuy stations Victoria 100.9 FM and Stilos 93.1 FM], X, https://x.com/sntpvenezuela/status/1893433243354976384?t=6oqHDdv5SpFyM6BsbWaT5w&s=08.

[120] El Impulso, Radio Mundial 860 AM en Táchira cesa sus transmisiones tras orden de Conatel [Radio Mundial 860 AM in Táchira ends broadcasts after Conatel order], March 31, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Conatel ordena cierre de emisora Radio Mundial en Táchira: tenía 70 años de transmisiones [Conatel orders shutdown of Radio Mundial in Táchira, after 70 years of broadcasts], March 31, 2025; Espacio Público, Sale del aire Radio Mundial 860 AM en Táchira por órdenes de la Conatel [Radio Mundial 860 AM in Táchira goes off the air on Conatel orders], April 1, 2025; IPYS Venezuela, Radio Mundial 860 AM en Táchira sale del aire por orden de Conatel [Radio Mundial 860 AM in Táchira goes off the air on Conatel orders], April 1, 2025.

[121] IPYS Venezuela, [@ipysvenezuela], (May 23, 2025), Este jueves #22May la emisora Admirable Stereo 106.1 FM salió del aire [This Thursday #22May the station Admirable Stereo went off the air], X, https://x.com/ipysvenezuela/status/1925980633509101629?t=B5Bg4d3DeRRAU-h_ku41Vw&s=08.

83. Likewise, the private telecommunications company SuperCable announced that it would definitively shut down on August 18, 2025, in compliance with an order issued by CONATEL. The company, with over 30 years of operations in Venezuela, provided subscription television and internet services. In a statement, SuperCable asserted that it was up to date with its legal and tax obligations. Previously, on March 14, CONATEL had informed SuperCable users that it was revoking SuperCable ALK Internacional S.A.'s administrative licenses.[122]

84. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression has also expressed concern over the lack of economic and structural conditions to ensure media sustainability in Venezuela, which has led to the progressive closure of news outlets. In this context, it was reported that the Táchira Regional Television (TRT) had partially shut down its operations on August 29, 2025, and had dismissed nine employees, including two journalists, two camera operators, the studio director, an audio operator, an administrator, and two security guards.[123]

85. Furthermore, on September 5, the digital media outlet El Martillo Venezuela announced its partial shutdown, after operating for nearly five years, due to the lack of resources needed to maintain its team of journalists. The founder and director, journalist José Mireles, informed SNTP that the portal had been running for the past six months on personal funds while they tried to find financing. The decision left seven press workers unemployed.[124]

86. The Commission and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression recall that the media plays an essential role as a vehicle for the exercise of freedom of expression and information, in its individual and social dimensions, in a democratic society.[125] Freedom of expression is especially important for the press; while it is the media's responsibility to disseminate information and ideas on matters of public interest, the public has the right to right to be informed.[126] Accordingly, the UN, Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), and OAS rapporteurs affirmed in their joint declaration in 1999 that an "independent and pluralistic media is essential to a free and open society and accountable government."[127]

87. They also recall that direct or indirect pressure meant to silence the informative work of media professionals is incompatible with the right to freedom of expression. According to principle 13 of the IACHR Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression, the "exercise of power and the use of public funds by the State, the granting of customs duty privileges, the arbitrary and discriminatory placement of official advertising and government loans; the concession of radio and television broadcast frequencies, among others, with the intent to put pressure on and punish or reward and provide privileges to social communicators and communications media because of the opinions they express threaten freedom of expression, and must be explicitly prohibited by law."[128]

[122] Espacio Público, SuperCable: cierre definitivo [SuperCable: definitive shutdown], August 19, 2025.

[123] Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (August 30, 2025), La Televisora Regional del Táchira (TRT) cerró parcialmente sus operaciones este viernes [Táchira Regional Television (TRT) partially shut down its operations this Friday], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1961747707820666935?t=9qDlAh7hbE-Q4zAJ1MuiOw&s=08.

[124] SNTP, El medio digital El Martillo anuncia el cese parcial de sus operaciones [Digital media outlet El Martillo announces partial shutdown of its operations], September 6, 2025; El Martillo Venezuela, [@ElMartilloVen], (September 5, 2025), El Martillo Venezuela anuncia el cese parcial de sus operaciones [El Martillo Venezuela announces partial shutdown of its operations], X, https://x.com/ElMartilloVen/status/1964110289940381953.

[125] Inter-American Court of Human Rights. Case of Herrara Ulloa v. Costa Rica, Preliminary Objections, Merits, Reparations, and Costs, Judgment of July 2, 2004, Series C No. 107, par. 117; Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Case of Ivcher-Bronstein v. Peru, Reparations and Costs, Judgment of February 6, 2001, Series C No. 74, par. 149.

[126] Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Case of Ivcher-Bronstein v. Peru. Reparations and Costs, Judgment of February 6, 2001, Series C No. 74, par. 153.

[127] UN Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Opinion and Expression, OSCE Representative on Freedom of the Media, and OAS Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Expression, First Joint Declaration of the Rapporteurs for Freedom of Expression, 1999.

[128] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Declaration of Principles on Freedom of Expression, 2000.

4. Criminalization of critical and citizen voices exercising their right to freedom of expression

88. On the eve of the presidential inauguration, planned for January 10, repression of various civil society stakeholders was observed to escalate; these stakeholders included human rights defenders, academics, activists, political leaders, and journalists. The acts of repression occurred in connection with the protests and demonstrations convened by opposition groups to repudiate the inauguration of Nicolás Maduro. Furthermore, new reprisals against the exercise of the rights to freedom of expression, association, assembly, and academic freedom were also documented. All of this was compounded by implementation of the "Law on the Oversight, Regularization, Operations, and Financing of Nongovernmental and Nonprofit Social Organizations" as well as by the cutbacks in international cooperation funding, which have significantly affected the operations of civil society organizations and of the media in Venezuela.

89. On January 7, 2025, Carlos Correa, director of the organization Espacio Público, journalist, and human rights defender, was intercepted in downtown Caracas by hooded individuals dressed in black and was taken to an undisclosed location. His family members and colleagues looked at various detention centers but were unable to obtain official information about his whereabouts, while the authorities denied having him in custody.[129] On January 8, his wife, Mabel Calderín, filed a writ of habeas corpus at the Palace of Justice in Caracas.[130] According to public information, Correa was brought before the courts on January 9 and released on January 16.[131]

90. While defender Carlos Correa was detained, the IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression called on the Venezuelan authorities to provide information on his whereabouts and guarantee his rights.[132] Likewise, the UN Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association and the OAS Inter-American Commission on Human Rights Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression expressed their profound concern about the case and about the conditions restricting the exercise of public participation in Venezuela.[133]

---

[129] Espacio Público, Exigimos la liberación inmediata del defensor Carlos Correa [We demand the immediate release of defender Carlos Correa], January 8, 2025; RSF, Presunta desaparición forzada del director de Espacio Público en Venezuela: RSF exige respuestas a las autoridades [Alleged enforced disappearance of Espacio Público director in Venezuela: RSF demands answers from the authorities], January 10, 2025.

[130] Provea, [@_Provea], (January 8, 2025), Tras más de dos horas de haber introducido un recurso de Hábeas Corpus [Over two hours after filing a writ of habeas corpus], X, https://x.com/_Provea/status/1877050833923199259; Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (January 8, 2025), Con el apoyo de varios defensores de derechos humanos, Mabel Calderín [With support from various human rights defenders, Mabel Calderín], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1877060495682711732.

[131] Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (January 15, 2025), Mabel Calderín, esposa de nuestro director Carlos Correa [Mabel Calderín, wife of our director Carlos Correa], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1879643926036152398?s=46&t=MqOVYcsFpR9jsgswGpJsmw; Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (January 16, 2025), En las primeras horas de este #16ene, nuestro director Carlos Correa fue excarcelado [Early this January 16 (#16ene), our director Carlos Correa was released], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1879824400062751059?s=46; El Tiempo, Tras 9 días detenido por el régimen venezolano, liberan a Carlos Correa, activista y director de ONG [Carlos Correa, activist and NGO director, released after 9 days held by the Venezuelan regime], January 16, 2025; Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) Américas, [@CPJAmericas], (January 16, 2025), CPJ @pressfreedomwelcomes the release of Espacio Público director Carlos Correa, X, https://x.com/CPJAmericas/status/1879922690833924427.

[132] IACHR, [@CIDH], (January 8, 2025), #CIDH y su @RELE_CIDH condenan la detención arbitraria y desaparición forzada de Carlos Correa [IACHR (#CIDH) and its Special Rapporteur (@RELE_CIDH) condemn the arbitrary detention and enforced disappearance of Carlos Correa], X, https://x.com/CIDH/status/1877048782472253897.

[133] Pedro Vaca Villarreal, [@PVacaV], (January 16, 2025), Informan sobre la excarcelación de Carlos Correa en la madrugada de hoy [Reports indicate Carlos Correa released from prison early this morning], X, https://x.com/PVacaV/status/1879851958611374168; Gina Romero, [@Ginitastar], (January 9, 2025), En nuestra condición de Relatores Especiales para la Libertad de asociación y reunión pacífica ONU y de libertad de expresión de la OEA externamos nuestra grave preocupación por Carlos Correa y las garantías para la participación pública en Venezuela [In our capacity as Special Rapporteurs for Freedom of Association and Peaceful Assembly of the United Nations and for Freedom of Expression of the OAS, we express our grave concern about Carlos Correa and the guarantees for public participation in Venezuela], X, https://x.com/Ginitastar/status/1877415368643190966?t=DSlCwF6xe8FL6y3tQgBhbw&s=08; Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (January 9, 2025), Exrelatores de la libertad de expresión de la CIDH condenan la desaparición de nuestro director Carlos Correa [Former IACHR rapporteurs for freedom of expression condemn the disappearance of our director Carlos Correa], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1877542168157376571.

91. On January 9, 2025, in the context of demonstrations called by the opposition, opposition leader María Corina Machado was taken and held after participating in a rally in Chacao, Caracas.[134] According to public reports, government employees fired against the motorcycles in which she was being transported, and while detained she was forced to record several videos; she was subsequently released.[135] The Commission recalls that María Corina Machado is a beneficiary of precautionary measures, granted to ensure that she can "carry out her political participation activities without being subjected to threats, harassment, or acts of violence in the exercise thereof."[136] After these events, Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace Diosdado Cabello denied the detention, calling it a "lie" and accusing the opposition of inventing it to generate media coverage.[137] In turn, Minister of Information Freddy Ñáñez disseminated a video in which Machado asserts that she is "good and free," and affirmed that the complaint was a "publicity distraction" due to the scant participation in the protests. Similarly, Attorney General Tarek William Saab indicated that this "staging" was intended to "sow chaos and violence."[138]

92. According to public information, on January 9, 2025, Roalmi Alberto Cabeza Cedeño, Central University of Venezuela student, was arbitrarily detained by the Bolivarian National Police at the Altamira interchange, during the operation meant to apprehend opposition leader María Corina Machado. Cabeza reportedly brought Machado from the demonstration in Chacao to the detention site. On January 13, Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace Diosdado Cabello published a video on social media showing the student, with little clothing, narrating his detention. Cabeza was reportedly brought before the authorities for the alleged crimes of conspiracy and simulation of a punishable act, with the intention to create unrest in the country.[139]

93. On May 23, 2025, the Office of the Rapporteur learned of reports that Juan Pablo Guanipa, opposition leader, had been taken by security forces two days before the regional and legislative elections.[22] The authorities reportedly accused him of forming part of an alleged network to "boycott" the elections and of planning "terrorist acts."[140] After he was detained, family members complained that he remained missing, with no contact whatsoever nor information provided about his health status for over a month.[141] Civil society organizations and political leaders classified the act as a "kidnapping" and condemned it as part of an escalation of repression meant to silence dissident voices.[142]

94. The transfer of political leader Freddy Superlano from the SEBIN facilities in El Helicoide to an undisclosed location was reported on August 31, 2025. According to the available information, the

---

[134] Comando ConVzla, [ConVezlComando], (January 9, 2025), María Corina (@MariaCorinaYA) fue violentamente interceptada a su salida de la concentración en Chacao [María Corina (@MariaCorinaYA) was violently intercepted upon leaving the rally in Chacao], X, https://x.com/convzlacomando/status/1877435670278410688?s=48; Efecto Cocuyo, [@EfectoCocuyo], (January 9, 2025), La líder opositora María Corina Machado fue detenida [Opposition leader María Corina Machado detained], X, https://x.com/EfectoCocuyo/status/1877440474174087522.

[135] CNN, Comando con Venezuela reportó liberación de María Corina Machado; Gobierno de Maduro niega detención de la líder opositora [Comando con Venezuela reported release of María Corina Machado; Maduro government denies detention of the opposition leader], January 9, 2025; RPP, María Corina Machado fue secuestrada, forzada a grabar videos y luego liberada, informó su equipo [María Corina Machado was kidnapped, forced to record videos, and then released, reported her team], January 9, 2025; Noticias Caracol, "María Corina Machado ha sido liberada": subdirector de la División de las Américas de HRW ["Mariá Corina Machado has been released": Americas deputy director of HRW], January 9, 2025.

[136] IACHR, Press release 009/25, The IACHR condemns the ongoing practices of state terrorism in Venezuela and recalls that María Corina Machado is a beneficiary of precautionary measures, January 9, 2025.

[137] The New York Times, Venezuela's Opposition Leader is Forcibly Detained and Then Released, January 9, 2025.

[138] BBC News, La oposición denuncia la detención y posterior liberación de María Corina Machado en Venezuela tras reaparecer en las protestas contra la toma de posesión de Maduro [The opposition denounces the detention and subsequent release of María Corina Machado en Venezuela after she reappeared in the protests against Maduro's inauguration], January 9, 2025.

[139] Aula Abierta, Situación de la libertad académica, la libertad de asociación, el derecho a la educación y las universidades en Venezuela [Situation of academic freedom, freedom of association, the right to education, and universities in Venezuela], January 2025; Tal Cual, Preguntas que deja video de la presunta detención de Roalmi Cabeza, motorizado de Machado [Questions raised by video of the alleged detention of Roalmi Cabeza, Machado's motorcyclist], January 14, 2025.

[140] Crónica Uno, "Detienen por presunto terrorismo al opositor Juan Pablo Guanipa tras 134 días en la clandestinidad" [Opposition figure Juan Pablo Guanipo arrested for alleged terrorism after 134 days missing], May 23, 2025.

[141] Correo del Caroní, Denuncian que Juan Pablo Guanipa cumple un mes en desaparición forzada [Juan Pablo Guanipo reported to have been in enforced disappearance for one month], June 23, 2025.

[142] DW News, El régimen venezolano detiene al opositor Juan Pablo Guanipa [Venezuelan regime detains opposition figure Juan Pablo Guanipa], May 23, 2025.

authorities did not inform Superlano's family members of his whereabouts nor of the reasons for his transfer.[143] Freddy Superlano had previously been detained on July 30, 2024, in the city of Caracas, allegedly by SEBIN officials. In view of these events, the IACHR issued resolution 55/2024, granting him precautionary measures, in the consideration that he faces a serious, urgent risk of suffering irreparable harm to his rights in Venezuela.[144]

95. On June 18, 2025, the Third Trial Court of the state of Monagas, based in Maturín, sentenced Merlys Oropeza, 25 years old and resident of the Las Carolinas community, to ten years in prison for the alleged crimes of instigation to hatred and conspiracy.[145] The judgment was based on her publication of a critical message, spread through her WhatsApp status in August 2025, in which she questioned the distribution of food through the government Local Supply and Production Committees (CLAP) program. In July 2025, she was reported to have been released.[146]

96. Information was also revealed about the ten-year prison sentence handed down to citizens Génesis Gabriela Pabón Paredes and Rocío Del Mar Rodríguez Guillén for allegedly committing the crimes of incitement to hatred, treason, and terrorism. According to the reports, the judgment was associated with the printing of t-shirts containing a picture of a post-election protest, in which several people knock down a statue of former president Hugo Chávez.[147] These events reportedly occurred after the July 28, 2024, presidential elections. Over the course of 2025, the Office received reports of arrests and the opening of criminal cases against individuals who criticized the government or simply disseminated information about various matters. The individuals involved in these cases include Oscar Duque Díaz,[148] Alexis Zárraga,[149] Ashley Aways,[150] and Michael Palin[151].

[143] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, [@oveprisiones], (September 2, 2025), Aurora Silva, esposa de @freddysuperlano, recibió la información de que al preso político lo trasladaron de las celdas del Sebin de El Helicoide [Aurora Silva, wife of @freddysuperlano, was informed that the political prisoner had been transferred out of the Sebin cells in El Helicoide], X, https://x.com/oveprisiones/status/1962899062371602510; Freddy Superlano, [@freddysuperlano], (September 2, 2025), Hoy nuevamente nos arrebantan la tranquilidad y nos surmegen en horas de incertidumbre y agonía [Today we have once again been robbed of our peace and plunged into hours of uncertainty and agony], X, https://x.com/freddysuperlano/status/1962915050294821313.

[144] IACHR, Press release 193/24, IACHR Grants Precautionary Measures to Political Leader Freddy Superlano in Venezuela, August 26, 2025, IACHR, Resolution 55/2021, Precautionary Measure 899-24, Freddy Francisco Superlano Salinas regarding Venezuela, August 26, 2024.

[145] NTN24, "Ya no me quedan fuerzas": Joven condenada a 10 años de cárcel por un estado en WhatsApp contra la jefe de un Consejo Comunal después de las elecciones ["I've got no strength left": young woman sentenced to 10 years in jail for a WhatsApp status targeting a community council leader following the elections], June 24, 2025; Investigative Journalism Agency, Merlys Oropeza: condenada a prisión por criticar al gobierno de Maduro en redes [Merlys Oropeza: sentenced to prison for criticizing the Maduro government on social media], June 30, 2025; El Nacional, La historia de Merlys Oropeza: detenida, torturada y condenada a 10 años de cárcel por un WhatsApp [The story of Merlys Oropeza: detained, tortured, and sentenced to 10 years in jail for a WhatsApp status], July 3, 2025.

[146] Efecto Cocuyo, Excarcelan a joven en Maturín, que fue condenada a 10 años de prisión por criticar a una jefa del Clap [Young woman who was sentenced to 10 years in prison for criticizing a Local Committee for Supply and Production boss, released], July 23, 2025; La Opinión, Régimen de Maduro libera a joven que fue condenada a 10 años por un mensaje en WhatsApp [Maduro regime releases young women who was sentenced to 10 years for a WhatsApp message], July 23, 2025.

[147] Espacio Público, [@espaciopublico], (July 17, 2025), A las ciudadanas Génesis Pabón y Rocío Rodríguez las condenaron a 10 años de prisión por los delitos de "instigación al odio", "traición a la patria" y "terrorismo" [Citizens Génesis Pabón and Rocío Rodríguez sentenced to 10 years in prison for the crimes of "instigation to hatred," "treason," and "terrorism"], X, https://x.com/espaciopublico/status/1945923207250268617; Tal Cual, Condenadas a 10 años de cárcel por estampar franela con caída de estatua de Chávez [Sentenced to 10 years in jail for stamping t-shirt with fall of Chávez statue], July 17, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Las 2 merideñas a las que condenaron a 10 años de cárcel por estampar franelas de protesta poselectoral [The two women from Mérida who were sentenced to 10 years in jail for stamping post-election protest t-shirts], July 19, 2025.

[148] Espacio Público, Ciudadano detenido en Táchira por gritar consignas contra Maduro [Citizen detained in Táchira for shouting slogans against Maduro], January 4, 2025.

[149] Espacio Público, Privan de libertad a un médico en Falcón por publicar mensajes críticos en WhatsApp [Doctor in Falcón deprived of liberty for publishing critical messages on WhatsApp], February 18, 2025.

[150] Espacio Público, Ministerio Público detiene a adolescente por contenido en TikTok [Office of the Public Prosecutor arrests adolescent for TikTok content], February 26, 2025.

[151] Espacio Público, Septiembre: detenciones arbitrarias y hostigamiento para silenciar [September: arbitrary detentions and harassment to silence], October 6, 2025.

5. Social protest

97. The IACHR report on "Venezuela: Serious human rights violations in connection with the elections," published January 7, 2025, documents grave abuses by law enforcement personnel between July 28 and 30, 2024, in connection with the post-election protests. At least 25 people, all men ages 15 to 56, were killed. Ten of the deaths are attributed to state security forces (eight to the military and two to the police), and six to armed groups, which act with the State's tolerance or acquiescence and are legally part of the "People's System for Protecting Peace."[152]

98. Likewise, between July 28 and August 24, 2024, civil society organizations reported 1,542 detentions in connection with the post-election protests, including of women, adolescents, people with disabilities, Indigenous people, journalists, and media workers. Against this backdrop, according to public information, Nicolás Maduro made stigmatizing comments about the demonstrators, asserting that "thanks to the response and reaction capacity of the civic-military-police union we dealt with the fascist outbreak in accordance with the Constitution and in peace" and warning that "this time there will be no pardon, this time there will be Tocorón" (referring to a prison in the state of Aragua).[153]

99. In turn, the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela indicated that acts of repression, including the death of at least 25 people and the detention of over 2,220, were registered in connection with the 2024 post-election protests. The Mission also documented cases of enforced disappearances—some of short duration—as well as acts of torture; cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment; and sexual and gender-based violence. Although some detainees were released during this period, arbitrary detentions of members of the opposition and of individuals perceived as such continued systematically.[154]

100. The organization Espacio Público published its report on the overall status of the right to peaceful demonstration in Venezuela 2024, in which it recorded 407 demonstrations over the course of the year. Peaceful protest continued to be a key tool for complaining, especially with regard to demands for basic services and workers' rights. Demonstrations, led by communities and trade associations, held constantly from the beginning of the year. That said, after the mass protests against the election results, an increase in repression was reported, with over 1,500 people detained according to official figures, at least 20 murdered, and cases of enforced disappearances.[155]

101. According to the Venezuelan Observatory of Social Conflict (OVCS), during the first half of 2025 approximately 1,249 protests were recorded in the country.[156] Furthermore, from January to August 2025, the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela documented at least 200 detentions. State repression reportedly intensified at key moments, like the presidential inauguration on January 10, during which 84 people were detained (67 men and 17 women), and the elections on May 25, with 42 detentions (34 men and 8 women). In the period between these two events, the Mission reported 13 additional detentions (11 men and 2 women), and between June and August, another 61 (43 men and 18 women).[157]

---

[152] IACHR, Venezuela: Serious human rights violations in connection with the elections, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc. 253/24, December 27, 2024, pars. 63 and 64.

[153] IACHR, Venezuela: Serious human rights violations in connection with the elections, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.doc. 253/24, December 27, 2024, pars. 71 and 72.

[154] United Nations Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, September 10, 2025, par. 10.

[155] Espacio Público, Situación general del derecho a la manifestación pacífica en Venezuela 2024 [Overall situation of the right to peaceful demonstration in Venezuela 2024], May 2, 2025.

[156] OVCS, Conflictividad Social en Venezuela en el primer semestre de 2025 [Social Conflict in Venezuela in the first half of 2025], July 10, 2025.

[157] United Nations Human Rights Council, Report of the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, September 10, 2025, par. 22.

102. On January 9, 2025, demonstrations were reported in different parts of the country, in opposition to the inauguration of Nicolás Maduro, as were pro-government marches called by the president himself in support of Chavismo and against the opposition leader Edmundo González.[158] In this context, public reports indicated that military forces had repressed protests in Maracaibo with tear gas, and that multiple demonstrators were loaded into security vehicles.[159] Furthermore, in Valencia, Maracay, Nueva Esparta, and Zulia, National Guard members, along with groups, had tried to disperse demonstrations called by the opposition. In Maracay, for example, citizens who tried to gather in squares like San Juan and Estudiante were reportedly dispersed with tear gas by motorcycle riders and security forces.[160]

103. Social protest, which includes the exercise of the right to peaceful and unarmed assembly, freedom of association, and freedom of expression, is a fundamental tool in the defense of democracy and of human rights, and the State is obliged to respect, protect, and guarantee these rights.[161] As for the obligation to respect, the IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression have indicated that "the exercise of freedom of assembly through social protest should not be subject to government authorization or excessive requirements that make it difficult to carry out."[162]

104. Likewise, with regard to the obligation to protect and facilitate, the Commission has underscored that "the overriding social interest in the right to take part in public demonstrations gives rise to a general presumption in favor of its exercise."[163] As noted in the IACHR report on protest and human rights, States must act on the basis of the lawfulness of protests and public demonstrations and on the assumption that they do not constitute a threat to public order, even in cases where they are unannounced.[164] Lastly, with regard to the obligation to guarantee, the IACHR has established that it "entails first and foremost the duty to investigate and punish any violation that occurs within the framework of a public demonstration."[165]

105. The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression have also held that the "application of criminal law to the acts of participants in a demonstration constitutes a serious restriction with far-reaching consequences for freedom of expression, as well as the rights of assembly, association, and political participation, which under the principles developed above can only be used on a very exceptional basis and is subject to a heightened level of scrutiny."[166]

---

[158] RCN, Manifestaciones de venezolanos en Colombia este 9 de enero: en estos puntos se concentrarán [Protests by Venezuelans in Colombia this January 9: gathering points], January 8, 2025.

[159] AlbertoRodnews, [@AlbertoRodnews], (January 9, 2025), Detenciones y gases lacrimógenos para dispersar a los ciudadanos [Detentions and tear gas to disperse citizens], X, https://x.com/AlbertoRodNews/status/1877375929422422387; La Silla Vacía, Avanzan marchas en Bogotá y Venezuela contra posesión de Maduro [Marches advance in Bogotá and Venezuela against Maduro's swearing-in], January 9, 2025; Crónica Uno, Represión y agresiones a periodistas marcaron convocatorias opositoras en las regiones [Repression and attacks on journalists mark opposition demonstrations in the regions], January 9, 2025.

[160] AlbertoRodnews, [@AlbertoRodnews], (January 9, 2025), Detenciones y gases lacrimógenos para dispersar a los ciudadanos [Detentions and tear gas to disperse citizens], X, https://x.com/AlbertoRodNews/status/1877375929422422387; La Silla Vacía, Avanzan marchas en Bogotá y Venezuela contra posesión de Maduro [Marches advance in Bogotá and Venezuela against Maduro's swearing-in], January 9, 2025; Crónica Uno, Represión y agresiones a periodistas marcaron convocatorias opositoras en las regiones [Repression and attacks on journalists mark opposition demonstrations in the regions], January 9, 2025.

[161] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF. 22/19, September 2019, Prologue and pars. 1-46.

[162] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF. 22/19, September 2019, par. 91.

[163] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF. 22/19, September 2019, par. 91.

[164] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF. 22/19, September 2019, par. 93.

[165] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF. 22/19, September 2019, par. 246.

[166] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Protest and Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF. 22/19, September 2019, par. 185.

6. Academic freedom

106. In 2025, the university environment in Venezuela has been marked by a hostile climate and violations of academic freedom, including detentions, persecution, harassment, and threats. According to civil society organizations, members of the university community have been subjected to retaliation for their critical work, whether the analysis of the State's economic policies, research and attention to human rights violations, the organization of venues for criticism within the university, or active participation in the debate over public affairs.[167]

107. From January 1 to October 10, 2025, at least 22 people with direct ties to the academic sphere were reportedly arrested and/or harassed (19 detained and 3 persecuted). They include: nine university professors, five students, two university workers and human rights defenders, one researcher, one representative of the student federation, and one representative of the student association. Of the 19 detainees, 7 were accused and/or formally charged before courts with jurisdiction over terrorism issues. In addition, from July 28, 2024, until October 10, 2025, the organization Aula Abierta documented a total of 95 incidents of retaliation against university professors and students, comprising 54 detentions, 40 cases of harassment, and the cancellation of a university professor's passport.[168]

108. Among the registered cases, on July 18, 2025, the Central University of Venezuela Student Federation (FCU-UCV) denounced the detention of student Simón Bolívar, university representative and student leader, presumably at the hands of hooded figures. According to the FCU-UCV, this act constitutes a repressive action that undermines the university's autonomy and was intended to silence dissident voices by restricting the rights to free expression and democratic participation, within the university sphere and nationwide.[169]

109. Similarly, according to public reports, professor and union leader Roberto Campero was arrested on August 14, 2025, after intelligence agents forcibly removed him from his home in Turmero, state of Aragua. Campero is a member of the Teachers' Union (Sitraenseñanza), which is affiliated with the national labor union federation Fetramagisterio.[170] Also reported were the allegedly arbitrary detentions of other stakeholders in the academic sphere, including: Carlos Alfredo Aponte Yépez, Edison Castro, Manuel Alejandro Muñoz Camacho, Roalmi Cabeza, Eduardo Torres, Enrique Jesús Gómez Méndez, Naomi Gabriela Arnaudez Ramos, Catalina Ramos, and Rodrigo Cabeza, among others[171].

110. Acts of stigmatization and potential threats against members of the academic community were also registered. On May 28, 2025, Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace Diosdado Cabello called academics in Venezuela "terrorists" during an address broadcast on national television, reportedly while presenting an alleged network of actors who, according to Cabello, sought to "boycott" the May 2025 elections, allegedly made up of social and political leaders, many of whom are also professors, researchers, and other members of Venezuelan academia.[172]

---

[167] Information sent by the organization Aula Abierta, October 14, 2025. Archive of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression.

[168] Information sent by the organization Aula Abierta, October 14, 2025. Archive of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression.

[169] RunRun.es, Denuncian detención de dirigente universitario ucevista Simón Bolívar [Detention of UCV student Simón Bolívar condemned], July 18, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Primero Justicia demanda que se diga dónde está Simón Bolívar Obregón [Primero Justicia party demands answers on Simón Bolívar Obregón's whereabouts], July 21, 2025; AlbertoNews, FCU-UCV denuncia la detención arbitraria del dirigente estudiantil Simón Bolívar [FCU-UCV condemns the arbitrary detention of student leader Simón Bolívar], July 18, 2025.

[170] Efecto Cocuyo, Quién es Roberto Campero, el docente detenido en Aragua [Who is Roberto Campero, the professor detained in Aragua], August 15, 2025; NTN24, En menos de 48 horas el régimen de Maduro suma al sindicalista Roberto Campero a la lista de presos políticos [In less than 48 hours the Maduro regime adds Roberto Campero to the list of political prisoners], August 15, 2025.

[171] Information sent by the organization Aula Abierta, October 14, 2025. Archive of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression.

[172] Information sent by the organization Aula Abierta, October 14, 2025. Archive of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression.

111. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression learned of reports of a statement issued by the National Radio of Venezuela (RNV) accusing the Central University of Venezuela Development Studies Center, Rosa Luxemburg Foundation, Provea, and the Political Ecology Observatory (OEP) of acting as alleged "instruments of political interference." According to the statement, these organizations operate with international support, under an "academic and environmentalist facade," with the aim of destabilizing the State. Reports indicate that activists and academics like Alexandra Martínez, Emiliano Terán Mantovani, Edgardo Lander, Santiago Arconada, and Francisco Javier Velasco were mentioned directly, and accused of leading campaigns that were critical of the State policies.[173]

112. Similarly, on January 8, 2025, during the State channel Venezolana de Televisión's broadcast of the program "Con el Mazo Dando," the Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace, Diosdado Cabello, stated that there was an alleged plan in place to make an attempt on the life of Miguel Ángel Suárez, president of the Central University of Venezuela Student Federation. According to public statements, this was a "false positive" designed to blame the government and provoke a reaction from the university community to "sow chaos."[174]

113. Civil society organizations have denounced that the public classification of academics as "terrorists" on television media constitutes the formalization of a state policy geared towards the prosecution and repression of students, professors, and researchers. They allege that the objective of this practice is to silence critical voices in the academic sphere that actively participate in public debate and warn that these acts reveal a deliberate attempt to restrict the influence of the university and its community in forming a critical consciousness and in defending the civic space in Venezuela.[175]

114. Moreover, a police presence was reported at various academic institutions in the country. On January 9, 2025, Aula Abierta disclosed complaints of the excessive presence of police officers at the entrance of the Office of the Dean of Economics and Business of Lisandro Alvarado Central-Western University (UCLA). On January 15, state police checkpoints were reported to have been set up around the University of Oriente (UDO), in the state of Anzoátegui. That same day, the Central University of Venezuela University Council issued a statement rejecting the massive presence of security forces at the main campus access points.[176]

115. Lastly, on May 14, 2025, it was reported that the Central University of Venezuela University Council had publicly denounced the dispossession of the Rental Zone university income-generating area in Caracas, after the construction of a bus station and installation of a statue commemorating the 80th anniversary of the Soviet victory in World War II, works carried out by the Office of the Mayor of the municipio of Libertador without the university's legal consent or authorization. The university considered these actions to be part of a policy to systemically dispossess it of its goods, which are essential to its operation. On May 20, the University Council reportedly demanded the immediate restitution of the Northern Rental Zone and re-establishment of its legal rights over the property.[177]

116. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression has indicated that murder, kidnapping, intimidation, assault, harassment, threats, gender-based violence, and other attacks against individuals because of their participation in the academic community or the exercise of activities violate the fundamental rights of individuals, restrict academic freedom, and prompt self-censorship in society, as do

[173] Aula Abierta, Venezuela: Alerta ante graves señalamientos desde la RNV contra ONGs de derechos humanos, académicos e investigadores científicos, [Venezuela: Alarm over the RNV's serious accusations against human rights NGOs, academics, and scientific researchers], August 15, 2025.

[174] Aula Abierta, Situación de la libertad académica, la libertad de asociación, el derecho a la educación y las universidades en Venezuela [Situation of academic freedom, freedom of association, the right to education, and universities in Venezuela], January 2025.

[175] Information sent by the organization Aula Abierta, October 14, 2025. Archive of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression.

[176] Aula Abierta, Situación de la libertad académica, la libertad de asociación, el derecho a la educación y las universidades en Venezuela [Situation of academic freedom, freedom of association, the right to education, and universities in Venezuela], January 2025; Information sent by the organization Aula Abierta, October 14, 2025. Archive of the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression.

[177] Aula Abierta, 2 nuevos zarpazos a la autonomía universitaria en Venezuela [2 new blows to university autonomy in Venezuela], July 1, 2025.

physical attacks against institutions, libraries, or laboratories. It is the States' duty to prevent and investigate these acts, punish the perpetrators, and ensure adequate reparation to the victims, regardless of whether the injurious acts occurred through analog or digital means.[178] The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression call on the Venezuelan State to cease all acts of harassment, intimidation, and prosecution against the members of the academic community who participate in the discussion of matters of public interest.

7. Closure of the civic space and increasing restrictions on the exercise of freedom of association

117. The Law on the Oversight, Regularization, Operations, and Financing of Nongovernmental and Nonprofit Social Organizations, intended to regulate civil society organizations in Venezuela, went into effect in November of 2024. According to the information registered, this law established two deadlines for 2025: by February 13, the organizations would have to obtain a certificate showing that they had submitted documentation to the Public Registry; and by May 14, they would have to update their bylaws and obtain the formal registration. Civil society organizations reported that in some cases they were ordered to submit financial records dating back to their founding, despite the law not stipulating that condition. In addition to being burdensome, these requirements reportedly led to legal uncertainty, since many organizations lack the guarantees needed to keep operating. The organizations whose bylaws are not aligned with the requirements of the law had to modify them before May 14, under the threat of being dissolved or penalized.[179]

118. The entry into force of the new law was compounded by the reduction in foreign aid funding from the United States previously provided through cooperation programs with multilateral agencies and international organizations. This decrease has reportedly had a significant impact on the sustainability and operability of organizations in Venezuela. Along these lines, it was reported that on March 13, 2025, the organization Transparency Venezuela announced it had closed its offices in the country and would begin operating in exile, indicating that its work was "incompatible" with the new legal framework. Other organizations have also reportedly closed their doors without publicizing it, in order to protect their workers.[180]

119. In this context, Minister of the Interior, Justice, and Peace Diosdado Cabello publicly stated that he had a list of 500 individuals allegedly investigated by the FBI for a "corruption scheme" associated with USAID. According to public reports, his statements suggest that accusations of foreign financing may be used as political justification for conducting criminal investigations against civil society actors. In other television appearances, Cabello has publicly pointed to the media, activists, opposition leaders, and human rights organizations, accusing them of conspiring with USAID.[181]

120. Freedom of association implies the right of organizations to establish their own internal structures, activities, and plans of action without the intervention of authorities restricting or hampering the exercise of this right. Any restriction on the exercise of the right to association must be clearly established by law, and formulated ahead of time in an express, precise, and strictly defined manner. Furthermore, it must pursue a lawful aim and be necessary and proportional in a democratic society. In this regard, the IACHR has indicated that the States "should refrain from promoting laws and policies that use vague, imprecise, and broad [178] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Special Rapporteurship on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights, Inter-American Principles on Academic Freedom and University Autonomy, 2021, Principle V: Protection against acts of violence.

[179] WOLA, Venezuela's New NGO Law and U.S. Funding Freeze Are a Death Blow to Country's Civil Society., April 9, 2025.

[180] WOLA, Venezuela's New NGO Law and U.S. Funding Freeze Are a Death Blow to the Country's Civil Society, April 9, 2025; Transparency Vzla, [@NoMasGuiso], (March 13, 2025), La persecución no los hará menos corruptos [Persecution won't make them any less corrupt], X, https://x.com/NoMasGuiso/status/1900155614711394609; Transparency Venezuela, Mercedes De Freitas: "Transparencia Venezuela continúa desde el exilio con la obligación de seguir combatiendo la corrupción venezolana" [Mercedes De Freitas: "Transparency Venezuela carries on in exile with the obligation to keep fighting Venezuelan corruption], March 13, 2025.

[181] WOLA, Venezuela's New NGO Law and U.S. Funding Freeze Are a Death Blow to Country's Civil Society. April 9, 2025. Con el Mazo Dando, Cabello sobre escándalo de la USAID: Los ladrones que están viviendo allá están muy preocupados [Cabello on USAID scandal: The thieves living there are very worried], February 3, 2025.

definitions of the legitimate motives for restricting the establishment and operation of human rights organizations."[182]

121. When a State impedes this right by any means incompatible with international standards, it not only restricts defenders' freedom of association, but also obstructs their work of promoting and defending human rights and, consequently, the free exercise of the right to defend those rights.[183]

8. Freedom of expression and internet

122. The State continued to block digital platforms and independent media as a control mechanism to restrict the dissemination of information, limit freedom of expression, and obstruct organization and social protest. According to the organization Conexión Segura y Libre, from July 4, 2024, to January 31, 2025, 79 new cases of website blocking were registered. The affected websites included media outlets, social media, tools for avoiding censorship, public DNS servers, human rights organizations' pages, and sites with content critical of the government, especially ones focused on publishing election results based on the tally sheets collected by the opposition.[184]

123. Along these lines, according to public reports, between January 7 and February 5, 2025, at least nine internet providers in Venezuela blocked nighttime access to the social media platform TikTok. The first block was registered on January 7 on Supercable, followed in the next few days by Cantv, Net Uno, Digitel, Movistar, G-network, Inter, V-net, and Airtek.[185] Over the course of the year, there were reports of blocked access to Google's public DNS servers[186] and to the mobile phone application Telegram.[187] Organizations and experts have indicated that although these private companies act under government pressure to implement these blocks, they are also duty-bound to inform their users of the restrictions implemented.[188]

124. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression also observed that high-level government officials continue to make statements pushing for the elimination of certain applications. For example, Nicolás Maduro called WhatsApp "Zionism's" and "imperialism's tool for espionage," claiming that it "reads your messages, has your photos, your location, and controls your life." He added: "I did my part by saying so a year ago. I said it on August 28 last year. And I say it again to the people. WhatsApp is the main tool for spying on the peoples of the world, and the main tool that has been used to massacre entire peoples. So get rid of WhatsApp. Get WhatsApp out of your life. Kick WhatsApp out of your life and be free and live happy."[189]

---

[182] IACHR, Second Report on the Situation of Human Rights Defenders in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 66, December 31, 2011, par. 183.

[183] IACHR, Second Report on the Situation of Human Rights Defenders in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 66, December 31, 2011, par. 156.

[184] Conexión Segura y Libre, Ve sin Filtro, Redes de control: censura y represión digital en las elecciones presidenciales en Venezuela [Networks of control: censorship and digital repression in the presidential elections in Venezuela], 2025.

[185] VE sin Filtro, [@cesinfiltro], (7 de enero de 2025), Bloquearon TikTok por 6h esta madrugada en #Venezuela [TikTok blocked for 6 hours early this morning in #Venezuela], X, https://x.com/vesinfiltro/status/1876631558754283825; Ve sin Filtro, Bloquean DNS públicos, VPN y Tiktok en Venezuela [Public DNS, VPN, and TikTok blocked in Venezuela], January 9, 2025.

[186] VE sin Filtro, [@cesinfiltro], (January 8, 2025), CANTV bloquea el acceso a los servidores DNS públicos de Google [CANTV blocks access to Google's public DNS servers], X, https://x.com/vesinfiltro/status/1876862765454840035.

[187] VE sin Filtro, [@cesinfiltro], (January 10, 2025), Última Hora #10ene: Bloquearon Telegram en #Venezuela [Breaking January 10 (#10ene): Telegram blocked in #Venezuela], X, https://x.com/vesinfiltro/status/1877894687991664848; Efecto Cocuyo, Bloqueo a Telegram duró varias horas en Venezuela, reporta VE Sin Filtro [Telegram blocked for several hours in Venezuela, reports VE Sin Filtro], January 11, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, Venezuela Sin Filtro registra nuevo bloqueo a Telegram desde Cantv [Venezuela Sin Filtro registers new block of Telegram from Cantv], May 2, 2025.

[188] Efecto Cocuyo, Bloqueo nocturno de Tik Tok en Venezuela cumple 10 días [Nighttime blocking of TikTok in Venezuela reaches 10-day mark], January 16, 2025.

[189] NTN24, Maduro volvió a pedir a sus seguidores que eliminen WhatsApp: "Sirve de instrumento al espionaje para perseguir y matar" [Maduro once again asks his followers to eliminate WhatsApp: "It serves as an instrument of espionage for persecution and murder"], September 12, 2025; Efecto Cocuyo, VE Sin Filtro a Maduro: WhatsApp no lee tus mensajes ni escucha tus llamadas [VE Sin Filtro to Maduro: WhatsApp does not read your messages or listen to your calls], September 12, 2025; Primicias, Nicolás Maduro acusa de "espionaje" a WhatsApp y desinstala la aplicación de su teléfono [Nicolás Maduro accuses WhatsApp of "spying" and uninstalls the application from his phone], June 30, 2025; VE sin Filtro, [@cesinfiltro], (September 12, 2025), La guerra de Maduro contra WhatsApp es

125. In addition, in its report "Redes de control: censura y represión digital en las elecciones presidenciales en Venezuela [Networks of control: digital censorship and repression in the presidential elections in Venezuela]," the organization Conexión Segura y Libre documented multiple repressive practices in the digital sphere, including threats made from the official accounts of security forces, disinformation and government propaganda campaigns, use of surveillance technologies, random telephone checks in public spaces, and the dissemination of opposition figures' and demonstrators' personal data over official channels or accounts tied to the government, with the objective of harassing them or facilitating their capture.[190]

126. According to available reports, cell phone checks were resumed at checkpoints nationwide in connection with the presidential inauguration on January 10. The use of drones as a surveillance tool was also documented. Civil society organizations reported at least 20 publications on social media showing drones flying over opposition rallies in Caracas and other cities.[191] They warn that beyond monitoring protests, these devices could be used for political espionage. For example, on January 7, María Corina Machado reported drones flying over the home of her mother, Corina Parisca, in Caracas.[192]

127. The Venezuelan State has also been reported to use information technologies for the mass collection of personal data without adhering to basic standards of responsibility, transparency, or supervision. According to civil society reports, citizens are obliged to enter sensitive information on platforms like VenApp or VePatria to access public services and benefits. This practice gravely jeopardizes individual privacy and facilitates the unlawful use of personal data, in a context that lacks guarantees for the protection of fundamental rights.[193]

128. Against this backdrop, the Office of the Rapporteur received information about official campaigns urging citizens to inform on neighbors allegedly involved in subversive activities. Many arrests of demonstrators and political leaders were shared by State media outlets and social media as propaganda, most notably the so-called "Tun Tun" operation, which involved police and military forces. In other cases, it was citizens themselves who documented and shared arrests and evidence of repression over social media or in direct complaints. Starting in December 2024, after opposition leader Edmundo González announced his return to Venezuela for the presidential inauguration, intimidating videos associated with this operation reappeared and continued to circulate even after January 10, 2025.[194]

129. The Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression indicates that these are not isolated acts but rather form part of a systematic government pattern to control the public narrative, restrict the flow of information, silence critical voices, and obstruct mobilization and social protest, both on and offline. As the Office has pointed out, measures such as the blocking of websites, platforms, domains, and IP addresses to combat disinformation are a form of censorship that limits access to information, affects journalistic work, and may conceal human rights violations. These measures are only justified when they are necessary in order una excusa para aumentar el control y la censura [Maduro's war on WhatsApp is an excuse to increase control and censorship], X, https://x.com/vesinfiltro/status/1966587581459582983?t=fVVFJ-ooa3U73fmGnypcTA&s=08.

[190] Conexión Segura y Libre, Ve sin Filtro, Redes de control: censura y represión digital en las elecciones presidenciales en Venezuela [Networks of control: censorship and digital repression in the presidential elections in Venezuela], 2025.

[191] Conexión Segura y Libre, Ve sin Filtro, Redes de control: censura y represión digital en las elecciones presidenciales en Venezuela [Networks of control: censorship and digital repression in the presidential elections in Venezuela], 2025.

[192] Swissinfo.ch, María Corina Machado denuncia el sobrevuelo de drones en la casa de su madre en Caracas [María Corina Machado reports drones flying over her mother's house in Caracas], January 7, 2025; María Corina Machado, [@MariaCorinaYA], (January 7, 2025), Desde hace unas horas, agentes del régimen han rodeado la casa de mi mamá, han puesto alcabalas en toda la urbanización y sobrevolado con drones [In the past few hours, regime agents have surrounded my mother's house, set up checkpoints throughout the development, and have been flying drones overhead], X, https://x.com/MariaCorinaYA/status/1876724382502162628; Efecto Cocuyo, Funcionarios de seguridad del Estado rodean casa de la madre de María Corina Machado, denunció la dirigente [State security agents surround María Corina Machado's mother's house, the leader reported], January 7, 2025.

[193] Espacio Público, Privacidad y gestión de datos personales en Venezuela [Privacy and personal data management in Venezuela], March 1, 2025.

[194] Conexión Segura y Libre, Ve sin Filtro, Redes de control: censura y represión digital en las elecciones presidenciales en Venezuela [Networks of control: censorship and digital repression in the presidential elections in Venezuela], 2025.

to protect human rights or legitimate public interests, and proportionate, that is, when there are no less invasive alternative measures that could preserve those interests.[195]

D. Situation of economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights

1. The economic crisis and persistent scarcity of basic services

130. The Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights (REDESCA) is following the serious violations of economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights with concern. The progressive concentration of power in the executive branch, together with the weakening of the rule of law, have shaped an environment characterized by severe restrictions on civil and political rights, which in turn negatively affects the protection and guarantee of economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights.

131. According to the Center for Political and Government Studies at Andrés Bello Catholic University (UCAB), the Venezuelan economy continues on its hyperinflationary trend, with a 26% increase in the month of May alone.[196] In the first five months of 2025, cumulative inflation surpassed 105.5%, with a year-on-year forecast to potentially exceed 200%. In a context in which the minimum wage remains frozen at symbolic levels and where over 80% of the population lives below the poverty line, each additional percentage point of inflation means a real decrease in people's capacity to access food, medication, and essential services.[197]

132. The intensification of the economic crisis and persistent scarcity of essential services have adversely impacted the population's exercise of their economic and social rights. Over 20 million Venezuelans live in multidimensional poverty,[198] and 13.5 million have critical needs.[199] The violations of workers' rights and lack of access to food, medicine, quality education, and essential services have created grave obstacles and major challenges to guaranteeing decent living conditions and citizens' overall wellbeing.[200]

133. Along these lines, the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) reported that, from May 1, 2024, to April 30, 2025, people in Venezuela continued to face major challenges in accessing healthcare services, decent work, and an adequate standard of living. It highlighted that the lack of public financial data on sanctions precludes the comprehensive assessment of their impact on the human rights of the population in Venezuela.[201]

2. Structural difficulties in healthcare and challenges in access to food and water

134. In the health sector, hospitals remain collapsed, with a shortage of supplies, medications, and workers.[202] All told, 75% of health centers lack doctors and 74% do not have sufficient nursing staff on [195] IACHR, Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression, Digital Inclusion and Internet Content Governance, OEA/Ser.L/V/II CIDH/RELE/INF. 28/24, June 2024, par. 215.

[196] PolítiKa UCAB, Venezuela: Entre la tormenta económica y la encrucijada política [Venezuela: Between the economic storm and the political crossroads], June 30, 2025.

[197] DW, En Venezuela medir la inflación es un acto subversivo [In Venezuela, measuring inflation is a subversive act], June 25, 2025.

[198] Human Rights Watch, Venezuela: Rights Crisis Deepens as Maduro is Sworn in, January 16, 2025.

[199] La Silla Vacía, Venezuela 2025: Una emergencia que no cesa [Venezuela 2025: An unending emergency], February 12, 2025.

[200] Center for Political and Government Studies, UCAB, La Consolidación de una transición Democrática [Consolidation of a Democratic Transition], Vol. 2. 2025.

[201] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela – Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.

[202] El Nacional, Los sistemas de salud de América Latina, golpeados por problemas comunes (el de Venezuela en situación crítica) [Latin American healthcare systems plagued by common problems (with Venezuela's in a critical state)], January 5, 2025.

board.[203] The childhood vaccination rate remains low, and key programs like the Organ and Tissue Procurement System have not been restarted.[204]

135. In its report on the situation in Venezuela,[205] the OHCHR stated that it had received information indicating that health problems persisted among Indigenous peoples, especially with regard to exposure to malaria, tuberculosis, and HIV/AIDS.[206] The lack of medication and medical supplies, and of routes and transportation, further strained local capacities to respond effectively to outbreaks. The OHCHR received concerning reports about morbidity and maternal mortality in the Ye'kwana and Sanemá Indigenous territories. According to that same information, only 3 medical doctors were available for every 7,448 inhabitants, and the 20 community health centers in the territory lack medications, basic materials, and equipment, including diagnostics. Some patients have also reported difficulties in accessing emergency services, which are often hundreds of kilometers away, with no available transportation.[207]

136. In 2025 grave violations of the rights of the elderly continued in Venezuela and were associated with insufficient income and barriers in access to healthcare. Over the course of the year, the Venezuela Social Security Institute (IVSS) standard pension held at 130 bolivars (approximately US$1.25), far below the cost of living, which pushed broad sectors of the elderly into vulnerability and social protest due to their incomes and healthcare. At the same time, specialized reports indicated that the humanitarian crisis continued to hinder effective access to medication, medical checkups, and essential services for this age group.[208]

137. Likewise, the "Wayamoutheri" Venezuelan Program for the Promotion of Indigenous Rights, PROVEA, and the ODEVIDA Coalition have documented the consequences of the rise in legal and illegal extractive activities,[209] including the extreme health situation facing several Indigenous peoples due to the growth of mining. Morbidity and mortality have increased exponentially as a result of diseases like malaria and tuberculosis in mining areas like the Alto Orinoco region in the state of Amazonas, where reports from the communities themselves reference numerous cases of the two diseases. These organizations have also specified that the serious problems of survival, socioeconomic impoverishment, lack of healthcare, and discrimination have led several Indigenous peoples to migrate to neighboring countries like Colombia and Brazil.[210]

138. The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) also reported the specific harms caused by the prolonged crisis, which has led to the collapse of essential social services, in particular affecting children, pregnant women, and Indigenous communities.[211] In 2025, 7.7 million people, including 3.8 million children, need humanitarian assistance.[212] UNICEF estimates that 406,000 children and women access primary healthcare in the centers it supports, and 656,000 children receive nutritional support to prevent or treat acute malnutrition.[213]

[203] El Nacional, Los sistemas de salud de América Latina, golpeados por problemas comunes (el de Venezuela en situación crítica) [Latin American healthcare systems plagued by common problems (with Venezuela's in a critical state)], January 5, 2025.
[204] El Nacional, Los sistemas de salud de América Latina, golpeados por problemas comunes (el de Venezuela en situación crítica) [Latin American healthcare systems plagued by common problems (with Venezuela's in a critical state)], January 5, 2025.
[205] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela – Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.
[206] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela – Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025, par. 22.
[207] SURVIVAL, Venezuela: Yanomami people engulfed in worst health crisis for decades, July 11, 2025.
[208] El Comercio, IVSS ya paga pensión de julio 2025: estos son los montos actualizados y requisitos para solicitarlo [IVSS is already paying July 2025 pensions: updated amounts and application requirements], June 24, 2025.
[209] PROVEA, Informe Especial: Pueblos y liderazgos indígenas en grave riesgo [Special Report: Indigenous peoples and leaders at grave risk], June 21, 2025.
[210] PROVEA, Informe Especial: Pueblos y liderazgos indígenas en grave riesgo [Special Report: Indigenous peoples and leaders at grave risk], June 21, 2025.
[211] UNICEF, Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela HIGHLIGHTS, 2025.
[212] UNICEF, Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela HIGHLIGHTS, 2025.
[213] UNICEF, Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela HIGHLIGHTS, 2025.

139. The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights learned of complaints about the lack of access to water and sanitation, according to which the shortages are particularly severe in rural areas, Indigenous communities, and regions affected by extractive activities (mining, oil), where access to potable water and sanitation is even more limited than in other parts of the country. The most vulnerable families typically spend hours collecting and storing water, with negative repercussions on their health, quality of life, and access to other human rights.[214]

140. The fishing communities in Falcón state have denounced the pollution of the water and local marine ecosystem from oil spills allegedly caused by a damaged pipeline nearby.[215] This pollution has affected the food security and overall livelihoods of these communities. The OHCHR was able to corroborate oil slicks in the Triste Gulf, covering 195 km^2.[216] In turn, the Venezuelan Observatory of Social Conflict has reported that the precariousness of public services continues to be a decisive factor in social conflict. The lack of effective responses from the authorities has exacerbated the crisis of access to drinking water, electricity, transportation, and domestic gas, leading to multiple demonstrations in various regions of the country.[217]

141. The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights take note of the data provided by the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA)[218] on water, sanitation, and hygiene services showing that many communities, especially in rural areas, continue to rely on surface water or rainwater due to their lack of access to safe sources. In addition, the deteriorated sanitation systems and limited access to hygiene products exacerbate health risks, especially in rural communities in the rainy season. OCHA information shows that the communities' resilience and capacity to respond to emergencies, especially in connection with floods and rainfall events, has been compromised in the context of weak healthcare capacity and lack of investment in sustainable infrastructure in critical zones like Amazonas, Sucre, Miranda, and Delta Amacuro. Therefore, according to this institution, to prevent further deterioration of public health and mitigate the impact of climate and epidemiological emergencies, water, sanitation, and hygiene projects must be implemented in communities, health centers, and schools without delay.[219]

142. In turn, with regard to Venezuela, the Global Report on Food Crises emphasizes concern over hunger.[220] From October 2024 to May 2025, Venezuela's food security was Stressed (IPC Phase 2) at the area level, and as the year goes on, the Crisis (IPC Phase 3) outcomes will persist for a number of the poorest households. In that same period, between 1 and 1.49 million people faced food insecurity.[221] Furthermore, in June the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights indicated that the average monthly salary had remained unchanged since March 2022, at 130 bolivars, equivalent to US$1, or half the price of a carton of eggs.[222]

[214] El Diario, ¿Cuáles son las medidas que aplican los venezolanos para sobrellevar las fallas del servicio de agua en el país? [What measures are Venezuelans taking to cope with water service disruptions in the country?], March 22, 2025.
[215] El Nacional, Pescadores de Falcón piden soluciones ante derrame de petróleo en el Golfete de Coro [Falcón fisherman request solutions for the oil spill in the Gulf of Coro], January 22, 2025.
[216] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela – Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.
[217] OVCS, Conflictividad Social en Venezuela en el primer semestre de 2025 [Social conflict in Venezuela in the first half of 2025], February 19, 2025.
[218] Reliefweb, OCHA, Reporte de Situación Venezuela (marzo – abril 2025) [Venezuela Situation Report (March–April, 2025)], June 17, 2025.
[219] Reliefweb, OCHA, Reporte de Situación Venezuela (marzo – abril 2025) [Venezuela Situation Report (March–April, 2025)], cited above.
[220] UN News, El hambre extrema alcanza un máximo histórico [Extreme hunger hits record high], May 16, 2025.
[221] FEWS Net, Venezuela, Informe de monitoreo remoto [Remote monitoring report].
[222] United Nations, OHCHR, HC Türk updates Council on the human rights situation in Venezuela, June 27, 2025.

3. Job insecurity and hostile environment for the defense of workers' and union rights

143. With regard to the guarantee of workers' rights in Venezuela,[223] the end of the first half of 2025 was characterized by a hostile[224] and repressive climate towards human rights defenders, unionists,[225] and workers.[226] In this context, on March 17, 2025, the Governing Body of the International Labour Organization (ILO) urged the government to speed up implementation of the commitments taken on in connection with the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry adopted in 2019, with regard to the Minimum-Wage Fixing Convention (No. 26); the Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention (No. 87); and the Tripartite Consultation Convention (No. 144).[227] The Governing Body also requested immediate measures to facilitate the presence of the ILO special advisor on social dialogue in the country and invited the government to convene the fifth social dialogue forum without delay, which reveals the high level of conflict surrounding working conditions.[228]

144. The Venezuelan Observatory of Social Conflict (OVCS) documented a total of 401 protests during the month of January 2025 alone. Of those, 305 addressed civil and political rights and 96, or 24%, were to demand economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights.[229] These protests were mainly driven by the labor sector, which faces increasingly precarious economic conditions. Reports were made of 36 protests repressed, involving injuries and arrests, and an increase in prosecution against human rights defenders, journalists, and unionists.[230]

4. Restrictions on the right to education and academic freedom

145. The education system in Venezuela is facing an unprecedented structural crisis, characterized by a sustained regression that threatens to leave the country without a new generation of professional teachers in less than one decade.[231] The drop in enrollment in education programs, exodus of teachers, increasing deficit of educators, low salaries, and precarious labor conditions, together with exclusion at all educational levels and the deterioriating infrastructure, reflect a gradual collapse closely linked to the country's economic, political, and social crises.[232] These issues are compounded by teachers' low wages, the persistence of problems in accessing basic services in schools, and the sustained drop in school[233] and university[234] attendance.

---

[223] DW, Cómo el chavismo manipula la vulnerabilidad social [How Chavismo manipulates vulnerability], May 12, 2025.

[224] Infobae, Crisis en Venezuela: alarmante persecución del Servicio Bolivariano de Inteligencia contra dirigentes de la Coalición Sindical [Crisis in Venezuela: alarming persecution of Labor Union Coalition leaders by the Bolivarian Intelligence Service], March 25, 2025.

[225] Infobae, El régimen de Maduro intensifica la persecución contra sindicalistas venezolanos: "Es el precio por defender la democracia" [Maduro regime intensifies persecution of Venezuelan unionists: the price of defending democracy], April 6, 2025.

[226] Infobae, Trabajadores venezolanos protestaron contra los sueldos de "hambre y miseria" en el país [Venezuelan workers protest the "hunger and misery" wages in the country], May 1, 2025.

[227] International Labour Organization (ILO), Decision concerning the developments in the full implementation by the Government of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela of the agreed plan of action to give effect to the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry in respect of Conventions Nos 26, 87 and 144, March 17, 2025.

[228] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela – Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.

[229] OVCS, Conflictividad Social en Venezuela en el primer semestre de 2025 [Social conflict in Venezuela in the first half of 2025], February 19, 2025.

[230] OVCS, Conflictividad Social en Venezuela en el primer semestre de 2025 [Social conflict in Venezuela in the first half of 2025], February 19, 2025.

[231] El Nacional, Venezuela podría quedarse sin nuevos docentes profesionales en siete años [Venezuela could be left without new teaching professionals in seven years], February 17, 2025.

[232] El Nacional, Déficit de docentes: Venezuela necesita al menos 60 años para cubrir las más de 250.000 vacantes existentes [Deficit of teachers: Venezuela needs at least 60 years to cover the more than 250,000 vacancies], January 31, 2025.

[233] El Ucabista, Especialistas: urge integrar a 3 millones de niños y jóvenes al sistema educativo [Experts: 3 million kids and young people must be urgently integrated into the education system], April 29, 2025.

[234] PolítiKa UCAB, Venezuela: Entre la tormenta económica y la encrucijada política [Venezuela: Between the economic storm and the political crossroads], June 30, 2025.

146. Reports by NGOs and academia point to a pattern of government interference[235] that includes the arbitrary appointment of university authorities, imposition of educational policies aligned with the official political agenda, and creation of parallel universities under government control.[236]

147. By the end of the first half of 2025, Venezuela had not implemented effective measures to protect university autonomy.[237] Rather, as documented by NGOs and the academic community itself, budgetary restrictions, political persecution, and government control over public universities have all intensified.[238]

148. In January 2025, the IACHR warned, through the Special Follow-up Mechanism for Venezuela (MESEVE), of the continued persecution, criminalization, threats, and harassment against the university community, indicating that these actions remain State policies and affect freedom of expression and academic liberty.[239]

149. In June 2025, the National Council of Universities (CNU) eliminated internal and diagnostic tests for admission to public universities, centralizing 100% of the process through the National Admission System (SNI) of the University Sector Planning Office (OPSU), under the Ministry of Higher Education.[240] The Government of Venezuela justified this measure as a mechanism to guarantee a "free, high-quality university-level education for all" and to prioritize inclusion and merit. However, in a statement disseminated on X, students expressed their strong and categorical rejection of the CNU's June 26, 2025, decision, which, they argue, eliminates universities' power to define their own admission mechanisms;[241] they also called it a grave violation of Article 109 of the Constitution, which establishes autonomy, and demand it be reversed[242]. Autonomous universities like the Central University of Venezuela (UCV) have invoked their autonomy and announced that they will keep their own internal admission tests,[243] in defense of their power to define their own admission mechanisms, protected by Article 109 of Constitution and the Law on Universities.[244]

150. In April, the Human Rights Observatory of the University of the Andes (ODHULA), in partnership with the Human Rights Committee of the School of Legal and Political Sciences of the University of Zulia, Aula Abierta, and the "Padre Luis María Olaso" Center for Peace and Human Rights of the Central University of Venezuela, documented incidents that affect the right to education and other human rights in the university context.[245] This report emphasized that a high number of incidents had been reported: from budgetary squeezing (54 %-67 %), aggressions, and the imposition of illegal rules, to restrictions on electing authorities, especially at ULA, LUZ, and UCV.

---

[235] Aula Abierta, Aula Abierta presenta graves preocupaciones en materia de libertad académica ante Universidad de Ottawa [Aula Abierta voices serious concerns over academic freedom to the University of Ottawa], March 26, 2025.

[236] University of the Andes, Plan de la Patria 2019-2025: Consolidación del Sistema Universitario Paralelo en Venezuela https://www.uladdhh.org.ve/wp-content/uploads/2021/03/Plan-patria-2019-2025-sistema-universidades-paralelas-venezuela-Def.pdf [Plan for the Homeland 2019-2025: Strengthening the Parallel University System in Venezuela].

[237] Infobae, El perverso plan para implosionar a universidades copándolas de estudiantes que respondan a la revolución bolivariana [The perverse plan to implode universities by flooding them with students loyal to the Bolivarian revolution], July 2, 2025.

[238] Infobae, El perverso plan para implosionar a universidades copándolas de estudiantes que respondan a la revolución bolivariana [The perverse plan to implode universities by flooding them with students loyal to the Bolivarian revolution], July 2, 2025.

[239] Aula Abierta, Venezuela: CIDH alerta que la persecución y criminalización contra la comunidad universitaria siguen siendo políticas de Estado [Venezuela: IACHR warns that the persecution and criminalization of the university community continue to be State policies], January 7, 2025.

[240] El Nacional, Cómo será el ingreso a las universidades públicas tras eliminación de pruebas internas [What university admissions will be like after elimination of internal tests], June 30, 2025.

[241] SWI swissinfo.ch, Estudiantes denuncian eliminación de pruebas de ingreso a universidad pública en Venezuela [Students denounce elimination of admissions tests for public university in Venezuela], June 30, 2025.

[242] Infobae, Estudiantes venezolanos denunciaron la modificación del ingreso a la universidad: "Es una violación a la autonomía", [Venezuelan students denounced the change to university admissions: "It's a violation of autonomy"], July 1, 2025.

[243] NTN24, UCV apela a su autonomía y acuerda mantener las pruebas internas de admisión [UCV invokes its autonomy and agrees to keep internal admissions testing], July 4, 2025.

[244] Noticiero Digital, APUCV: La UCV perdió 50% de su plantilla de profesores por los bajos salarios [APUCV: The UCV has lost 50% of its teaching staff due to low wages], July 9, 2025.

[245] Human Rights Observatory of the University of the Andes (ODHULA), Reporte Mensual. Situación de las Universidades en Venezuela [Monthly Report. Situation of Universities in Venezuela], April 2025.

5. Climate emergency and healthy environment

151. In the first six months of 2025, Venezuela has experienced multiple extreme climate events: a sustained increase in temperatures, with severe, prolonged droughts, especially in the Zulia region;[246] unprecedented forest fires that affect vast extensions of protected ecosystems and rural areas during the first half of the year;[247] and torrential rainfall, floods, landslides, and the rapid disappearance of the Andean glaciers, creating severe environmental and social fragility.[248]

152. The country experienced one of the worst droughts in recent years, with reduced rainfall and lower levels of water in hydroelectric reservoirs.[249] The National Institute of Meteorology and Hydrology (INAMEH) documented minimum temperatures above normal in most of the country during the first quarter of 2025,[250] except for in northern Zulia and Táchira, which intensified the drought.[251]

153. To mitigate the effects of the climate emergency and energy crisis, according to an official statement issued by the Ministry of People's Power for Electric Energy,[252] the State implemented contingency measures, including the reduction of working hours in public institutions and the use of the contingency electricity system called 1x1, in which the energy supply is rotated among regions to reduce the pressure on the national electricity system affected by the drought and the low levels of the hydroelectric reservoirs.[253]

154. Starting in the month of May, the situation worsened. Venezuela faced nine tropical waves, with torrential rainfall that triggered extreme climate events like floods, especially in the coastal and Andean zones, causing landslides, damage to road infrastructure, the collapse of water and electricity grids, and massive agricultural losses.[254] All told, 70% of the vegetables eaten in the country are produced in flood-affected areas,[255] meaning this situation could lead to food insecurity.

155. The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights take note of the state of emergency in the states of Mérida, Táchira, Trujillo, and Barinas caused by intense rainfall—made stronger by tropical waves—between June 24 and 25. Over 8,000 families were affected, nearly 370 residences damaged (103 collapsed, 110 total losses), and 25 bridges destroyed, with 16 of them beyond repair.[256] The ground collapse and isolation of rural communities forced hundreds—and potentially thousands—of people to temporarily relocate within the country.[257] In response, the State activated the "Andes 2025 Task Force" with the participation of the Civil Protection, Bolivarian National Armed

[246] El País, Investigadores que estudian el cambio climático ven una "injusticia científica" en Colombia y Venezuela [Researchers who study climate change see "scientific injustice" in Colombia and Venezuela], July 17, 2025.
[247] El País, Investigadores que estudian el cambio climático ven una "injusticia científica" en Colombia y Venezuela [Researchers who study climate change see "scientific injustice" in Colombia and Venezuela], July 17, 2025.
[248] El País, Investigadores que estudian el cambio climático ven una "injusticia científica" en Colombia y Venezuela [Researchers who study climate change see "scientific injustice" in Colombia and Venezuela], July 17, 2025.
[249] El Nacional, Venezuela registró más de 20 incendios forestales en menos de una semana [Venezuela registered over 20 forest fires in less than a week], March 27, 2025.
[250] National Institute of Meteorology and Hydrology (INAMEH), El Fenómeno de la Niña y su influencia en la República Bolivariana de Venezuela [La Niña and its influence on the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela], January-March 2025.
[251] Extra News Mundo, En Venezuela habrá más calor hasta el 2 de mayo ¿Cómo podemos sortear este clima? [Venezuela to be hotter until May 2; how can we cope with this climate?], March 24, 2025.
[252] Ministry of People's Power for Electric Energy, Comunicado-Poderes públicos darán el ejemplo en las próximas seis semanas de dura sequía por el calentamiento global [Statement: Public authorities will set the example in the next six weeks of severe drought due to global warming], March 23, 2025.
[253] Ciudad CCS, Ante emergencia climática el Gobierno anuncia horario especial [Government announces special schedule due to climate emergency], March 24, 2025.
[254] El País, Pueblos bajo el agua y ocho mil familias afectadas: las lluvias tropicales arrasan en Venezuela [Towns under water and 8,000 families affected; tropical rains ravage Venezuela], June 27, 2025.
[255] El País, Pueblos bajo el agua y ocho mil familias afectadas: las lluvias tropicales arrasan en Venezuela [Towns under water and 8,000 families affected; tropical rains ravage Venezuela], June 27, 2025.
[256] El Estímulo, Estados andinos en emergencia: Fuertes lluvias dejan a familias damnificadas y vías incomunicadas [Emergency in the Andean states: Heavy rains devastate families and block roads], June 25, 2025.
[257] Infobae, Intensas lluvias por una onda tropical dejan más de 8000 familias aisladas y destruyen 25 puentes en el occidente de Venezuela [Intense rainfall due to a tropical wave isolates over 8,000 families and destroys 25 bridges in Western Venezuela], June 27, 2025.

Forces, and state authorities.[258] In addition, on June 26, 2025, the State ordered a study of the climate's impact on the country's bodies of water and soils, with a view to preventing future potential adverse impacts.[259]

156. In addition, the Indigenous communities (Waraos) have expressed their concern over the alarming levels reached by the Orinoco River, which according to statements will lead to the displacement of persons.[260] The Government of the State of Amazonas reported that over 200 families had been evacuated due to the Orinoco River's rise in the month of July.[261] Furthermore, the expansion of illegal mining in the Venezuelan Amazon has led to deforestation, mercury pollution, and the forced displacement of Indigenous and rural communities to midsize cities like Puerto Ayacucho and Ciudad Bolívar.[262]

157. The ocean's encroachment on the coasts of the state of Anzoátegui is already displacing communities, with no State interventions or short-term solutions being offered. The Ecology and Development Foundation (ECODES) warns that erosion, pollution, and the lack of adaptation plans could lead to the displacement of entire populations in the coming years.[263]

158. In the 2025 Global Report on Internal Displacement published by the Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre (IDMC), Venezuela is still included among the countries with internal migration driven by environmental crises, although the figures for the country are notably under-reported due to a lack of official data.[264] According to IDMC data, Venezuela posted 52,000 cases of internal displacement due to extreme climate events, primarily floods, between 2020 and 2024 (source). Although exact official figures are unavailable, the IDMC estimated that by the end of the first half of 2025 thousands of people will be displaced due to hydrometeorological causes.[265]

159. The major environmental challenges facing Venezuela include rapid deforestation, pollution of bodies of water, and illegal mining. The Venezuelan Amazon is exposed to growing threats.[266] According to data from MapBiomas Venezuela, 32,600 km^2 of forest have been lost in the past 39 years due to agriculture, as well as to illegal mining and the growth of cities.[267]

160. The pollution of rivers, lakes, and soils due to oil spills, industrial waste, and illegal mining continues to be a structural problem.[268] In the Sixth Report of the Southern Venezuela Socio-environmental Observatory, the organization SOS Orinoco offers a diagnostic assessment for the January-April 2025 period, of the Guayana region in the country's south, characterized by a grave socioenvironmental crisis mainly caused by illegal mining, whose implications go beyond ecological degradation to significant impacts on the systematic [258] Ministry of the People's Power for Habitat and Housing, ¡Junto a la Fuerza de Tarea Andes 2025! GMVV y GMBNBT se mantienen en estados afectados por lluvias [Standing with the Andes 2025 Task Force! GMVV and GMBNBT stay in states affected by rain], June 30, 2025.

[259] Ministry of the People's Power for Economy and Finance, Ordenan estudio del impacto climático en cuerpos de agua y suelos de Venezuela [Study ordered of the impact of the climate on Venezuelan bodies of water and soils], June 26, 2025.

[260] Correo del Caroní, Waraos temen que las lluvias aceleren la crecida del río Orinoco [Waraos fear rainfall will speed up Orinoco River's rise], June 26, 2025.

[261] MundoUR, Más de 200 familias afectadas por la crecida del rio Orinoco [Over 200 families affected by the Orinoco River's rise], July 8, 2025.

[262] El País, El avance de la minería ilegal en la Amazonía venezolana: impacto ambiental y migración forzada hacia las ciudades intermedias [The advance of illegal mining in the Venezuelan Amazon: environmental impact and forced migration towards midsize cities], February 28, 2025.

[263] Mongabay, Venezuela: el aumento del nivel del mar amenaza con destruir dos pueblos en Anzoátegui [Venezuela: sea level rise threatens to destroy two towns in Anzoátegui], June 2, 2025.

[264] Internal Displacement Monitoring Centre (IDMC), Country Profile Venezuela.

[265] Mongabay, Desplazados climáticos en Venezuela se reconstruyen entre los escombros del huracán Beryl [Climate-displaced people in Venezuela rebuild amidst the wreckage from Hurricane Beryl], May 29, 2025.

[266] Mongabay, Venezuela perdió más de 4 millones de hectáreas de sus ecosistemas naturales en casi cuatro décadas (Estudio) [Venezuela lost over 4 million hectares of its natural ecosystems in nearly four decades (Study)], February 26, 2025.

[267] Correo del Caroní, Minería ilegal fue el principal problema ambiental de Venezuela en 2024, según Vitalis [Illegal mining was Venezuela's main environmental problem in 2024, according to Vitalis], July 8, 2025.

[268] El Ucabista, Recuperar la Economía venezolana cuidando el ambiente sí es posible [Yes, an environmentally friendly economic recovery is possible in Venezuela], January 28, 2025.

violation of human rights, the erosion of democracy, and the absence of effective rule of law.[269] The report also indicates that illegal mining has devastated large areas of the Amazon rainforest, causing massive deforestation, mercury pollution of rivers, and the displacement of communities in the state of Amazonas. The report underscores that the use of mercury in extracting gold threatens aquatic biodiversity and the health of the Indigenous communities, which depend on those resources for sustenance.[270]

161. The IACHR and its Office of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights take note of the presentation of the first Climate Transparency Report,[271] which contains 78 adaptation targets and 43 mitigation targets to be reached before 2030. These targets include the creation of community councils, communes, and social movements as local mechanisms for adaptation. The report acknowledges that the country's lack of a national adaptation plan hampers fulfillment of its commitments to economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights and climate transparency.[272]

6. Mining operations and impacts on communities

162. The Venezuelan State has a legal framework and public policies in place on the activities of extractive industries in the country, geared towards preventing, regulating, and punishing the adverse impacts on economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights and the environment,[273] including the Constitution, Organic Law on the Environment, and Criminal Law on the Environment, among other pieces of legislation. However, according to the OHCHR, some Indigenous communities continue to suffer the impacts of illegal mining on their lands, even in areas previously declared to be free of mining in the state of Amazonas and elsewhere, as asserted by the Deputy High Commissioner in her oral update on Venezuela to the Human Rights Council on March 20, 2025.[274]

163. More recently, in its report submitted to the Human Rights Council on June 26, 2025,[275] the OHCHR indicated that it had received allegations that illegal mining activities continued in Indigenous territories in the state of Amazonas, including in the Yapacana National Park, despite this Park having been declared 'free of mining' in 2023, following military operations.[276] The OHCHR added that illegal gold mining in Ye'kwana territories in Amazonas allegedly led to violent clashes between the Indigenous communities and individuals associated with the mines. The Office expressed its concern over the delay in the investigations into the previously reported killings and other violations against Indigenous peoples.

164. In the same report, the OHCHR noted that the creation of technical working groups of the Ministry of Ecosocialism and the State-owned oil company Petroleos de Venezuela S.A. was announced in September 2024. The groups' aim was to evaluate actions to control and address oil spills, which is an important step in line with the OHCHR's previously formulated recommendations.[277] However, the OHCHR also noted that oil spills have continued up to the date of the Report, and that the fishing communities in the state of Falcón have reported the resultant pollution of the water and local marine ecosystem, which has affected their food security and livelihoods.[278]

[269] SOS Orinoco, Sexto Informe del Observatorio Socioambiental Sur de Venezuela (enero-abril 2025) [Sixth Report of the Southern Venezuela Socio-environmental Observatory], April 30, 2025.
[270] SOS Orinoco, Sexto Informe del Observatorio Socioambiental Sur de Venezuela (enero-abril 2025) [Sixth Report of the Southern Venezuela Socio-environmental Observatory], April 30, 2025.
[271] UNFCC, República Bolivariana de Venezuela, Inventario Nacional de Gases de Efecto Invernadero [Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, National Inventory of Greenhouse Gases], February 23, 2025.
[272] Efecto Cocuyo, Venezuela presenta su primer reporte de transparencia climática ante las Naciones Unidas [Venezuela submits its first climate transparency report to the United Nations], February 23, 2025.
[273] Estrucplan, Marco Legal Latinoamérica: República de Venezuela [Latin American Legal Framework: Republic of Venezuela].
[274] United Nations, OHCHR, Oral Update on the Human Rights Situation in Venezuela, March 20, 2025.
[275] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.
[276] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.
[277] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.
[278] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.

165. As a measure for the prevention, regulation, and punishment of tourism development and other territorial development projects' adverse impacts on economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights and the environment, in April 2025 the State announced the creation of the Committee for the Oversight and Control of Environmental Impacts, an initiative to address the country's ecological challenges, with a view to optimize institutional operations to limit environmental crime in the country and mitigate environmental changes in critical areas like mining, tourism, and agriculture.[279]

166. The research group SOS Orinoco affirms that agricultural and mining activities are the two chief causes of forest loss in the Amazon, and emphasizes that the rapid growth of mining is especially alarming.[280] Likewise, the group indicates that the illegal mining of minerals to the south of the Orinoco River is carried out through an unlawful and therefore opaque partnership of the Venezuelan armed forces with local armed groups, the ELN, and FARC dissidents; and that in the Yapacana National Park, this criminal mix has run operations that have devastated the environment and intensified local conflicts.[281]

167. Referencing the effects on health, the environment, and the rights of rural communities of the agroindustrial expansion and the intensive use of agrochemicals, the Ministry of the People's Power for Ecosocialism, together with the authorities of the Superior Prosecutor's Office; Environmental Guard; Socialist Fishing Institute; Scientific, Criminal, and Criminalistic Investigations Corps; Bolivarian National Police; Office of the Ombudsman; and Supreme Court of Justice, recently spearheaded the creation of the Committee for the Oversight and Control of Environmental Impacts, to limit the commission of environmental crimes, by comprehensively addressing critical areas, including agriculture, which require multidisciplinary approaches to mitigate environmental changes.[282]

168. Pursuant to the Venezuelan Constitution and national law, the State has the formal obligation to investigate and punish human rights violations, including ones committed by companies. This work falls chiefly to the Office of the Public Prosecutor and the judicial system. However, recent reports indicate that the judiciary has lacked independence since 2004, leading to high levels of impunity and ineffective investigations, especially in cases involving business or government interests.[283] The OHCHR asserted that it had received information on threats and harassment against environmental rights defenders by both State and non-State actors, for which reason it urged the authorities to take steps to effectively protect environmental defenders, including through the ratification of the Escazú Agreement.[284]

E. Groups in situation of discrimination

1. Human rights defenders

169. In 2025, the Commission observed that the obstacles to defending human rights in Venezuela were getting higher, given the tighter restrictions on the civic space and the increase in repression, intimidation, and harassment. Along these lines, the Commission received alarming information on temporary disappearances, the unlawful use of criminal law, and the cancellation of passports, among other repressive practices designed to silence dissident voices. This is compounded by the enforcement of laws designed to disproportionately control the activities of organizations that work to defend human rights.

170. Civil society organizations condemn the policy of criminalization, repression, and social control allegedly being applied against individuals who promote, defend, and demand human rights in [279] Venezuelan Consulate in São Paulo, Venezuela establece comité ambiental para enfrentar desafíos ecológicos [Venezuela establishes environmental committee to address ecological challenges], April 8, 2025.

[280] SOS Orinoco, Sexto Informe del Observatorio Socioambiental Sur de Venezuela (enero-abril 2025) [Sixth Report of the Southern Venezuela Socio-environmental Observatory], April 30, 2025.
[281] SOS Orinoco, Sexto Informe del Observatorio Socioambiental Sur de Venezuela (enero-abril 2025) [Sixth Report of the Southern Venezuela Socio-environmental Observatory], cited above.
[282] La Radio del Sur, Impulsan creación del Comité de Fiscalización y Control de Impactos Ambientales en Venezuela [Push to create the Committee for the Oversight and Control of Environmental Impacts in Venezuela], April 9, 2025.
[283] Human Rights Watch, World Report 2025, December 1, 2024.
[284] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025.

Venezuela.[285] According to the Center for Defenders and Justice (CDJ), in the first half of 2025, 321 attacks and security incidents against defenders were documented; they included 190 stigmatizing messages, 95 acts of intimidation and harassment, 27 threats, 6 arbitrary detentions, and a prosecution.[286] In turn, figures from the OHCHR indicate that from July 29, 2024, to April 30, 2025, eight human rights defenders and six humanitarian workers were arbitrarily detained in Venezuela.[287]

171. The Commission observes with alarm that the State has resorted to arbitrarily detaining defenders, as well making use of short- and long-term disappearances, as a method of intimidation. This practice reportedly consists of not disclosing the detained individual's whereabouts and denying their detention for several hours or days, before bringing them before the courts.[288] On August 8, 2025, the human rights defender Martha Lía Grajales was detained at a Bolivarian National Police Division of Criminal Investigations checkpoint in Caracas after participating in a peaceful protest. According to the information available, while she was detained, other vehicles driven by alleged police officers came to the place she was being held and took her to an unknown location.[289] It was not until August 11 that the Office of the Attorney General of Venezuela, on its social media, confirmed her arrest and announced that she was being accused of the crimes of "incitement to hatred," "conspiracy with a foreign government," and "association."[290] It was subsequently disclosed that she had been granted alternative measures to continue with the criminal proceedings in freedom.[291]

172. Similarly, Eduardo Torres, human rights defender, attorney for the organization PROVEA, and beneficiary of IACHR precautionary measures since April 2024,[292] was last seen on May 9, 2025, in Caracas's Central Park.[293] Not until May 13, 96 hours after his disappearance, did the Attorney General of the Republic report on social media that the defender was being held in State custody. He also indicated that Mr. Torres was being charged with the crimes of conspiracy, terrorism, treason, and criminal association.[294] According to

[285] Center for Defenders and Justice (CDJ), Situación de las personas defensoras de derechos humanos en Venezuela, Primer Semestre 2025, [Situation of human rights defenders in Venezuela, First Half of 2025], July 18, 2025.

[286] CDJ, Situación de las personas defensoras de derechos humanos en Venezuela, Primer Semestre 2025, [Situation of human rights defenders in Venezuela, First Half of 2025], July 18, 2025.

[287] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025, par. 33.

[288] Amnesty International, Detentions without a trace: The crime of enforced disappearance in Venezuela, July 15, 2025, p. 14.

[289] X [@UNHumanrights]#Venezuela: @volker_turk calls for immediate release of human rights defender Martha Lía Grajales. She was detained after a demonstration in Caracas on 8 August. Her family and lawyer must be informed about her fate and whereabouts. Her human rights must be respected, published August 11, 2025; PROVEA, Defender los derechos humanos de las personas humildes no es un delito: Libertad inmediata para Martha Lía Grajales [Defending the poor's human rights is not a crime: Freedom for Martha Lía Grajales now], August 11, 2025.

[290] Infobae, Persecución en Venezuela: la Fiscalía de la dictadura confirmó la detención de la activista Martha Grajales [Persecution in Venezuela: Dictatorship's Office of the Attorney General confirmed the arrest of activist Martha Grajales], August 11, 2025; Telesur, Ministerio Público de Venezuela informa detención de Martha Grajales por incitación al odio y conspiración [Venezuela's Office of the Public Prosecutor reports arrest of Martha Grajales for incitement to hatred and conspiracy], August 11, 2025.

[291] El Tiempo, Liberaron a la activista colombo-venezolana Martha Grajales, quien fue capturada cuando participaba en una manifestación en Caracas [Colombian-Venezuelan activist Martha Grajales, who was arrested while participating in a demonstration in Caracas, released], August 12, 2025; El Nacional, Excarcelada Martha Grajales bajo medidas cautelares [Martha Grajales released with alternative measures], August 13, 2025; Infobae, El régimen de Maduro excarceló a la activista venezolana Martha Lía Grajales bajo medidas cautelares [Maduro regime released Venezuelan activist Martha Lía Grajales with alternative measures], August 13, 2025.

[292] IACHR, Resolution 26/2024, Precautionary Measure No. 438-15 Members of the Venezuelan Program of Education-Action on Human Rights (PROVEA) regarding Venezuela, Follow-up and Extension, April 29, 2024.

[293] X, [@CIDH]. #Venezuela: #CIDH expresa preocupación por las denuncias de desaparición forzada de Eduardo Torres, defensor de #DerechosHumanos y beneficiario de medidas cautelares, quien habría sido visto por última vez el 9 de mayo en Parque Central, Caracas. Organizaciones de la sociedad civil y familiares temen que haya sido detenido y desaparecido. En el contexto de detenciones arbitrarias y desapariciones forzadas de corta duración, la CIDH llama a las autoridades a que garanticen la vida e integridad personal, el derecho a la tutela judicial efectiva y a brindar información a la familia sobre el paradero de Eduardo Torres. [#Venezuela: IACHR (#CIDH) expresses concern about reports of the enforced disappearance of Eduardo Torres, human rights (#DerechosHumanos) defender and beneficiary of precautionary measures, who was last seen on May 9 in Parque Central, Caracas. Civil society organizations and family members fear that he has been detained and disappeared. In the context of arbitrary detentions and short-term enforced disappearances, the IACHR calls on the authorities to guarantee his life and personal integrity and his right to effective judicial protection, and to provide information to the family about his whereabouts.] Published May 13, 2025.

[294] Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Venezuela: Authorities Must Immediately Release Eduardo Torres, End Persecution of Human Rights Defenders, and Cease All Forms of Politically Motivated Repression, May 30, 2025; Freedom House, Venezuela: Las autoridades deben liberar de inmediato a Eduardo Torres, cesar la persecución contra defensores de derechos humanos y toda public information, the defender was being held in the cells located at SEBIN headquarters, specifically at El Helicoide, without the right to receive visitors or to contact his family members or the legal counsel of his choice.[295]

173. On January 7, 2025, the Commission learned of the detention of Carlos Correa (mentioned above in the section on the situation of freedom of expression), human rights defender and beneficiary of IACHR precautionary measures since January 2025, whose whereabouts were unknown for eight days. According to information available later, the authorities brought Mr. Correa before a court with jurisdiction over terrorism on January 9, and he was released on January 16, 2025.[296]

174. The human rights defender Jesús Alexander Armas was detained by six hooded, uniformed men with firearms on December 10, 2024, and remained in custody at El Helicoide until July 2025, completely isolated and incommunicado, without access to his family or legal counsel.[297] He was granted IACHR precautionary measures on December 31, due to the refusal of various government authorities to provide information on where and how he was being held, as well as to the lack of information on the detention conditions, including his state of health, and whether he had been subjected to inhumane treatment.[298] In addition, the IACHR previously documented other cases, including those of Javier Tarazona, deprived of liberty since 2021;[299] Rocío San Miguel, detained since February 9, 2024; Carlos Julio Rojas, detained since April 15, 2024; and Kennedy Tejeda,[300] all of whom are still being held. Notably, all of these individuals have precautionary measures in force with the IACHR.[301]

175. These detentions are accompanied by stigmatizing speech against organizations that defend human rights, associating them with alleged terrorist actions. The Center for Defenders and Justice documented stigmatizing speeches and campaigns in the first quarter of 2025 that systematically point to nongovernmental organizations as destabilizing agents. The objective is to associate these organizations' activities with stakeholders outside the law and acts involving corruption, as a way to intimate and harass.[302]

176. In this context, the Commission is concerned about the particular risk to the people who play an active role in seeking justice for individuals known as "political prisoners" in Venezuela. On June 12, 2025, the IACHR granted precautionary measures to Andreina Baduel, director and coordinator of the Committee for forma de represión por motivos políticos [Venezuela: the authorities must immediately release Eduardo Torres, stop persecuting human rights defenders, and end all forms of political repression], May 30, 2025.

[295] Acceso a la Justicia, Cronología del caso de Eduardo Torres [Timeline of Eduardo Torres case], July 1, 2025; X [@PROVEA], Hoy #9Jun Eduardo Torres, defensor laboral, cumple 1 mes detenido injustamente desde que fue víctima de una desaparición el viernes 9 de mayo. Permanece aislado en el Sebin El Helicoide, incomunicado, sin visitas de su familia o abogados [Today, #9Jun, Eduardo Torres, labor defender, has been unfairly held for 1 month since he was disappeared on Friday, May 9. He remains isolated and incommunicado at the SEBIN El Helicoide, without visits from his family or attorneys.], published June 9, 2025.

[296] IACHR, Resolution 3/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 16-25, Carlos José Correa Barros regarding Venezuela, January 10, 2025; Amnesty International, Urgent Action: one defender free, four remain in prison, January 16, 2025; El Mundo, Liberan a Carlos Correa, el gallego detenido en Venezuela, tras ser presentado ante un tribunal de terrorismo [Carlos Correo, Galician detained in Venezuela, released after being brought before a terrorism court], January 16, 2025.

[297] Caracas Chronicles, Jesús Armas and the Heavy Price of Defying Maduro, July 24, 2025; Stanford University, Center on Democracy, Development and the Rule of Law, Statement Demanding the Immediate Release of Jesús Armas (FFSF 2022, Venezuela), July 10, 2025.

[298] IACHR, Resolution 105/2024, Precautionary Measure No. 1426-24, Jesús Alexander Armas Monasterios regarding Venezuela, December 31, 2024.

[299] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, par. 195; IACHR, Resolution 258/2020, Precautionary Measure No. 258-20, José Javier Tarazona Sánches regarding Venezuela, June 18, 2020.

[300] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, pars. 193 and 195; Amnesty International, Venezuela: enforced disappearances amount to crimes against humanity, July 15, 2025.

[301] IACHR, Resolution 258/2020, Precautionary Measure No. 258-20, José Javier Tarazona Sanches regarding Venezuela, June 18, 2020; defender Rocío San Miguel has precautionary measures since January 2012; Resolution 7/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 205-24, Carlos Julio Rojas regarding Venezuela, January 20, 2025; Resolution 92/2024, Precautionary Measures No. 143-13 and 181-19, Identified members of the organization Foro Penal regarding Venezuela, November 28, 2024 (Follow-up, Modification, Extension, and Lift).

[302] Center for Defenders and Justice (CDJ), Situación de las personas defensoras de derechos humanos en Venezuela – Primer Trimestre 2025 [Situation of human rights defenders in Venezuela – First Quarter 2025], April 25, 2025; Amnesty International, Urgent Action, Cease Detentions and Attacks on Defenders, May 21, 2025.

the Freedom of Political Prisoners, who has allegedly been subjected to threats, harassment, and intimidation in continuous and intense surveillance by State agents, including being followed by armed men and drones, being photographed by police officers, and having State officers be continuously present near her residence.[303]

177. On May 4, 2025, the IACHR granted precautionary measures to Aurora Carolina Silva Uzcátegui and her two daughters, who, due to her participation in the Committee for the Freedom of Political Prisoners and her complaints regarding her husband Freddy Francisco Superlano Salinas's detention and deprivation of liberty, are allegedly being subjected to harassment and surveillance by State agents.[304] Similarly, on April 24, 2025, the IACHR granted precautionary measures to Sairam Gabriela Rivas Moreno, who after making public statements calling for the release of her partner Jesús Alexander Armas Monasterio, was reportedly subjected to threats and harassment by State agents.[305]

178. The intimidating effect of this modus operandi on civil society organizations and the general population, members of which have resorted to self-exile to protect themselves, is concerning. According to the OHCHR, between July 29, 2024, and April 30, 2025, at least 75 men and 41 women, including human rights defenders, journalists, unionists, and union leaders, as well as poll watchers and members of opposition parties, felt compelled to leave the country, or go into hiding, out of fear of persecution. These individuals reported intimidation of their family members in Venezuela by various authorities.[306]

179. In 2025, the Commission reiterated its condemnation of the arbitrary and illegal cancellation of passports belonging to opposition figures, defenders, and journalists.[307] According to information submitted by civil society organizations, records show that 40 individuals have had their passports canceled; of those, 35 were journalists or human rights defenders.[308] The Commission was informed that this strategy is allegedly being used as a punishment and control measure to prevent these people from leaving the country and from participating in international human rights forums. In some cases, this has served as a preparatory step towards depriving human rights defenders of their liberty.[309]

180. In addition to these practices, the civil space is continually deteriorating due to the implementation of laws that could lead to the administrative or financial strangulation of nonprofit organizations. After the Law on the Oversight, Regularization, Operations, and Financing of Nongovernmental Organizations and Nonprofit Social Organizations went into effect in August 2024, the Commission received information on various irregularities in its enforcement. Civil society organizations informed the Commission that the civil registrars in Venezuela were allegedly imposing arbitrary requirements not provided for in the law, such as demanding financial statements from up to 10 years back. A survey of 101 organizations taken by local organizations in June 2025 showed that of 43 organizations that tried to register, only 7 made it through the first stage, and none working on defending human rights were able to complete the process. All told, 63.4% of the surveyed organizations had to reduce or suspend their activities after the law went into effect.[310] This situation was also documented by the OHCHR, which indicated that some Venezuelan nongovernmental

[303] IACHR, Resolution 44/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 440-25, Andreina Baduel regarding Venezuela, June 12, 2025, par. 20.

[304] IACHR, Resolution 38/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 320-25, Aurora Carolina Silva Uzcátegui and her two daughters regarding Venezuela, May 4, 2025, pars. 24 and 25.

[305] IACHR, Resolution 35/2025, Precautionary Measure No. 1426-24, Sairam Gabriela Rivas Moreno regarding Venezuela, April 24, 2025 (Extension), par. 21.

[306] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025, par. 35.

[307] IACHR, Press release 106/25, Venezuela must restore the unlawfully and arbitrarily revoked passports of opposition activists, rights defenders, and journalists, IACHR says, May 20, 2025.

[308] CEJIL, Anulación de pasaportes en Venezuela: una estrategia de silenciamiento y represión contra personas defensoras de derechos humanos, periodistas y activistas [Passport cancellations in Venezuela: a strategy to silence and repress human rights defenders, journalists, and activists], April 2025, p. 7.

[309] IACHR, Public hearing "Venezuela: Attacks against human rights defenders", held during the 193rd Period of Sessions, July 24, 2025.

[310] IACHR, Public hearing "Venezuela: Attacks against human rights defenders," held during the 193rd Period of Sessions, July 24, 2025.

organizations had ceased their activities amid allegations of surveillance, prosecution, and acts of retaliation, including selective detentions.[311]

181. In addition, on March 30, 2025, the Official Gazette published the measures adopted by the Office of the Examiner of Venezuelan Banking Institutions with regard to the supervision of nongovernmental organizations and the addition of burdensome administrative requirements for civil society, as well as the authorization for banks to request sensitive information, such as a list of donors and staff, donation reports, detailed description of projects, or annual plans.[312] The IACHR has emphasized that, in principle, financial resources received by organizations are not public unless the organizations provide public services or act on behalf of the State.[313] Along these lines, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights has expressed that the exercise of freedom of association entails the right for organizations to set up their own internal structures, activities, and plans of action without the intervention of the authorities that would restrict or hamper the exercise of the respective right.[314]

182. The Commission is concerned to have learned that, as a consequence of the adverse climate for the defense of human rights in Venezuela, civil society organizations have had to minimize their public visibility through dynamics that include self-censorship, minimizing the use of their official headquarters or closing them, organizational anonymity, limited use of spokespeople, limitations on collaborative work, and an emphasis on silent documentation.[315]

2. Women

183. In connection with the situation of the rights of women, the following courts with jurisdiction over crimes of violence against women were opened: the Court of Appeals and Trial Court in Zulia and two courts in Monagas.[316] Although this measure is meant to improve the judicial response in these cases, it is concerning that the country has not adopted sufficient preventive measures. For example, there is no comprehensive national policy to prevent and address all forms of gender violence against women, girls, and adolescents. Neither is there an official system or registry of up-to-date disaggregated data that would make it possible to adopt appropriate prevention strategies. [317]

184. Given the lack of official data, the IACHR takes notes of the records and reports prepared by civil society organizations and the public information in the media on this issue. Notably, one study highlighted the prevalence of psychological, physical, and sexual violence, with a greater incidence within the family or couple.[318] In the first half of the year, 76 femicides were reported, most committed by the victims' partners or ex-partners.[319]

---

[311] United Nations, OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025, par. 46.

[312] IACHR, Public hearing "Venezuela: Attacks against human rights defenders," held during the 193rd Period of Sessions, July 24, 2025; OHCHR, Situation of human rights in the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, A/HRC/59/58, June 18, 2025, par. 45.

[313] IACHR, Second Report on the Situation of Human Rights Defenders in the Americas, OEA/Ser. L./V/II. Doc. 66, December 31, 2011, par. 182.

[314] Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Case of Baena-Ricardo et al. v. Panama, Merits, Reparations and Costs, Judgment of February 2, 2001, Series C No. 72, par. 156.

[315] Human Rights of Venezuela in Movement, Venezuela: el inicio de la emergencia democrática compleja. Violaciones dd.hh. durante los seis primeros meses del gobierno de facto. (el libro gris de Nicolás Maduro) [Venezuela: the start of the complex democratic emergency. Human rights violations during the first six months of the de facto government (Nicolás Maduro's grey book)], July 21, 2024, p. 44.

[316] Supreme Court of Justice, Inauguran Corte de Apelaciones y Tribunal de Juicio con Competencia en Delitos de Violencia contra la Mujer en Zulia [Court of Appeals and Trial Court with Jurisdiction over Crimes of Violence against Women Opened in Zulia], March 20, 2025; Supreme Court of Justice, SJ fortalece protección a mujeres con nuevos tribunales en Monagas [Supreme Court strengthens protection of women with new courts in Monagas], June 13, 2025.

[317] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, par. 183; IACHR, Annual Report 2023, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, par. 114.

[318] UNFPA, Necesidades y riesgos de violencia basada en género en el marco de la crisis multifactorial que atraviesa Venezuela [Needs and risks of gender-based violence in connection with Venezuela's current multifactorial crisis], August 7, 2025, p. 31.

[319] Utopix, Junio de 2025: Son 15 casos para un total de 76 femicidios en Venezuela el primer semestre [June 2025: 15 cases for a total of 76 femicides in Venezuela in the first half of the year], September 5, 2025.

185. Furthermore, reports continue to be made of human trafficking and modern forms of slavery in connection with migration, tourism, and mining.[320] Cases of sexual violence against girls have been documented in mining and border areas; these girls are reportedly being sexually exploited in exchange for basic goods and foods.[321] In rural areas, there are reports of adolescents being forced to marry older men in exchange for economic security.[322] Accordingly, various social sectors have requested that specialized laws be developed to comprehensively address this issue.[323]

186. In addition, violence against women politicians, leaders, activists, and human rights defenders continues. After the elections, reports were made of acts of violence allegedly committed by State agents, including arbitrary detentions; deprivation of liberty; threats; harassment; and psychological, physical, and sexual violence.[324] According to information from civil society, in the month of September, 101 women were deprived of liberty due to political reasons and faced irregularities during their detentions, like prolonged isolation and solitary confinement, denial of medical care, threats, and even sexual violence.[325] Also reported were physical attacks against women who participated in a vigil in front of the Supreme Court of Justice to demand the review of the cases of their family members being held.[326]

187. Along these lines, the Commission reiterates its call for the State to adopt sufficient, appropriate measures to prevent violence against women, girls, and adolescents. These measures must be based on data and up-to-date statistics on the causes, consequences, and frequency of violence against women, with a comprehensive approach that address the various ways and contexts in which it occurs. The Commission also urges the State to abstain from any act of violence that limits women's participation in social and political life, and to respect and guarantee the rights of persons under State custody.

188. On the issue of sexual and reproductive health, the national comprehensive health day that was held provided medical care, medication, and social support.[327] Furthermore, a course on promoting maternal and childhood health was held for community advocates under the Humane Childbirth and Breastfeeding Plan.[328] However, it is still difficult to access sexual and reproductive healthcare services,[329] such as pap smears, antiretroviral treatments, mammograms, and prenatal care, especially in rural and difficult-to-access areas.[330]

---

[320] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, March 26, 2025, par. 185; Transparency Venezuela, Trata de personas en Venezuela. Entre la miseria y la corrupción [Human trafficking in Venezuela. Between misery and corruption], September 5, 2025.

[321] ECPAT, Panorama de país. Un informe sobre la escala, el alcance y el contexto de la explotación sexual de niñas, niños y adolescentes [Country outlook: A report on the scale, scope, and context of the sexual exploitation of girls, boys, and adolescents], January 2025; UNFPA, Necesidades y riesgos de violencia basada en género en el marco de la crisis multifactorial que atraviesa Venezuela [Needs and risks of gender-based violence in connection with Venezuela's current multifactorial crisis], August 7, 2025, p. 43.

[322] Amnesty International, Trata de personas: crisis silenciosa que victimiza especialmente a mujeres y niñas en Venezuela [Human trafficking: a silent crisis that especially victimizes women and girls in Venezuela], July 31, 2025.

[323] El Ucabista, Piden desarrollar ley específica contra la trata de personas en Venezuela [Request to develop specific law against human trafficking in Venezuela], July 28, 2025.

[324] OAS-MESECVI, Committee of Experts urges Venezuela to fully respect the human rights of women in accordance with its obligations as a State Party to the Belém do Pará Convention, January 31, 2025.

[325] Civil Association "Coalition for Human Rights and Democracy, et al., Request for thematic hearing, 194th Period of Sessions, 'Situation of women political prisoners in Venezuela,'" in the IACHR archive, August 19, 2025, p. 2; Foro Penal, Presos políticos en Venezuela [Political prisoners in Venezuela], September 22, 2025.

[326] Efecto Cocuyo, ONG condenan violencia contra madres que pedían libertad de sus hijos frente al TSJ [NGO condemn violence against mothers who were calling for their sons' freedom in front of the Supreme Court of Justice], August 6, 2025.

[327] Ministry of the People's Power for Women, Gran Misión Venezuela Mujer despliega atención simultánea en los 24 estados del país [Venezuela Women Great Mission deploys simultaneous care in all 24 states of the country], September 4, 2025.

[328] Ministry of the People's Power for Women, MinMujer y UCS inician curso de formación para fortalecer el Plan Parto Humanizado y Lactancia Materna [Ministry for Women and University of Health Sciences kick off training course to strengthen the Humane Childbirth and Breastfeeding Plan], September 16, 2025.

[329] IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, March 26, 2025, pars. 187-188; IACHR, Annual Report 2023, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, December 31, 2023, paras. 117-118.

[330] UNFPA, Necesidades y riesgos de violencia basada en género en el marco de la crisis multifactorial que atraviesa Venezuela [[Needs and risks of gender-based violence in connection with Venezuela's current multifactorial crisis], August 7, 2025, p. 20; Runrun, Salud sexual en Venezuela cada vez más en riesgo por desinformación y tabúes [Sexual health increasingly at risk in Venezuela due to disinformation and taboos], September 4, 2025.

189. Furthermore, the country faces a persistent lack of medical supplies and skilled labor to provide healthcare services, which are factors that allegedly contribute to obstetrical violence.[331] Likewise, access to safe abortion, including therapeutic abortion, which is the only kind allowed under the law, remains limited.[332] Furthermore, a study revealed that the percentage of teaching staff who receive training to cover comprehensive sexual education content is insufficient to guarantee that right to all children and adolescents.[333]

190. In connection with the foregoing, the Commission urges the State to adopt the necessary measures to guarantee access to sexual and reproductive health services, including the voluntary interruption of pregnancy. It also calls for the creation of a state policy on comprehensive sexual education that includes the mandatory, continuous education of teachers. Lastly, it recommends establishing gender-sensitive healthcare protocols that prevent the occurrence of obstetrical violence, in conjunction with reporting and follow-up mechanisms.

3. Persons in mobility

191. The grave human rights crisis in Venezuela has led to an unprecedented, forced displacement of persons. According to Sustainable Development Goal indicator 10.7.4, which identifies the percentage of a country's population who are refugees or need international protection, with 18,000 out of 100,000 persons in this condition, Venezuela has the second highest percentage in the world.[334] The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) estimated a 2% increase in the number of forcibly displaced Venezuelans compared to the year before.[335] Likewise, in May 2025, the Inter-Agency Coordination Platform for Refugees and Migrants from Venezuela (R4V Platform) registered a total of 6,874,261 Venezuelan refugees, migrants, and asylum seekers in Latin America and the Caribbean.[336]

192. In the period under examination, the Ministry of the People's Power for Foreign Affairs upheld the decision to withdraw the diplomatic staff from the missions in Argentina, Chile, Costa Rica, Peru, and Dominican Republic, adopted in July 2024. According to the information available, the previously suspended consular services had been re-established in Panama and Uruguay.[337] The measure led to restrictions on obtaining and renewing personal documentation and difficulties in accessing authorized routes for entering and exiting other territories. It also reportedly made it difficult for Venezuelans whose passports had expired to return to their country; these individuals were required to mandatorily present a safe-conduct pass.[338]

193. The Commission also observed with concern the continuing cancellation of the passports of opposition figures, journalists, and human rights defenders. According to the information available, this measure was reportedly used as a systematic strategy of the regime to intimidate and silence critical voices, especially ones denouncing the abuses and lack of transparency surrounding the July 28, 2024, presidential elections.[339] The affected individuals have not received any official notification of the cancellation of their

[331] UNFPA, Necesidades y riesgos de violencia basada en género en el marco de la crisis multifactorial que atraviesa Venezuela [Needs and risks of gender-based violence in connection with Venezuela's current multifactorial crisis], August 7, 2025, p. 51; NTN24, Murió adolescente obligada a parir en hospital de La Guaira: Otro caso pone en evidencia el estado de la salud pública en Venezuela [Adolescent forced to give birth in La Guaira hospital dies: Another case demonstrates the state of public health in Venezuela], June 6, 2025.

[332] IACHR, Annual Report 2021, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, May 26, 2022, par. 185; IACHR, Annual Report 2024, Chapter IVB, Venezuela, March 26, 2025, par. 188.

[333] REDDHNNA, Solo 2 % de los maestros cuenta con preparación para abordar la sexualidad en las aulas [Only 2% of teachers are trained to cover sexuality in the classroom], May 22, 2025.

[334] UNHCR, Global Trends report 2024, Forced Displacement in 2024, p. 37.

[335] Ibid., p. 38.

[336] Inter-agency Coordination Platform R4V, Refugees and Migrants from Venezuela, June 27, 2025.

[337] El Nacional, Panamá says it restored consular relations with Venezuela to facilitate the return of migrants, September 18, 2025; Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Uruguay, Press Release No. 41/25. Reactivation of consular services between Uruguay and Venezuela, June 12, 2025.

[338] Law and Justice Observatory, Safe passage for Venezuela: the controversial decision that leaves thousands stranded, October 10, 2024.

[339] Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Passport cancellation in Venezuela: a strategy of silencing and repression against human rights defenders, journalists and activists, July 18, 2025, p. 10.

passports, nor about the reason or legal basis for it. The IACHR published a press release warning about this situation.[340]

194. On another note, there are reports of groups of Venezuelans abroad being directly or indirectly deported back to Venezuela. According to the information available, the United States reportedly deported up to 10,000 Venezuelans in the first half of 2025.[341] Of this total, some 2,900 persons were removed to third countries of which they were not nationals, with the objective of them later being transferred to Venezuela.[342] Along these lines, the Government of Honduras reported a transfer at the Soto Cano, Comayugua, military base, of 199 Venezuelan nationals coming from the United States.[343] Similarly, the Government of El Salvador announced the transfer of over 250 Venezuelans being held at the Terrorism Confinement Center (CECOT); these individuals were allegedly members of the Tren de Aragua organization and were transferred from the United States.[344]

195. In turn, the Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago, Kamla Persad-Bissessar, allegedly publicly expressed her intention to expel 200 Venezuelans from the territory as part of the government migration policy to address illegal immigration and trafficking.[345] Likewise, the Guyana police reportedly deported over 175 Venezuelan nationals in just over a month.[346]

196. The Commission does not have information on the individual identifications of the Venezuelan nationals in the removal proceedings, or on compliance with the due process guarantees applicable to such proceedings, regardless of whether the deportation to Venezuela is direct or indirect. Specifically, the IACHR observes with concern the potential lack of rick assessment for the returns, making it impossible to know whether the returnee could face persecution or threats to their life, liberty, or physical integrity upon returning to Venezuela.

4. Persons deprived of liberty

197. The IACHR has continued to monitor the special situation of risk faced by persons deprived of liberty in Venezuela, as a result of multiple factors like the two-tiered prison system, overpopulation, excessive use of pretrial detention, deplorable detention conditions, self-governance system, and mistreatment. The IACHR also remains concerned about the lack of up-to-date official statistics on this population, including the lack of public information on the scope and beneficiaries of the National Redemption Plan 2024-2025 adopted in 2024.[347]

198. The IACHR is alarmed at the existence of the two-tiered prison system in Venezuela: one official system under the Ministry of the People's Power for Prison Service that, according to the most recent data from civil society, in 2024 housed an estimated 22,019 people in the detention centers; and another parallel one made up of approximately 500 preventive detention centers, also known as "police cells." However, the actual number of people housed in these spaces is unknown, as while in 2024 the Ministry of the People's

[340] IACHR, Press release 106/25– Venezuela must restore the unlawfully and arbitrarily revoked passports of opposition activists, rights defenders, and journalists, IACHR says, May 20,2025.

[341] Swissinfo, A group of 183 Venezuelan migrants return to their country from the United States, August 14, 2025; DW, Another 319 Venezuelans deported from the U.S. arrive in Caracas, August 30, 2025.

[342] Miami Herald, Venezuelans make up largest share of migrants deported to third countries under Trump, August 7, 2025.

[343] The Guardian, Venezuelan immigrants deported from US to Venezuela via Honduras, March 24, 2025.

[344] BBC News, Bukele returns migrants deported by the US to El Salvador to Caracas in exchange for the release of 10 Americans and dozens of Venezuelan prisoners , July 18, 2025.

[345] Trinidad and Tobago Newsdays, PM: 200 jailed Venezuelans to be deported, September 10, 2025.

[346] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, 8.532 8,532 victims in 14 years: the death toll of the Ministry of Penitentiary Services, July 26, 2025.

[347] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, 8.532 víctimas en 14 años: el saldo mortal del Ministerio Penitenciario [8,532 victims in 14 years: the Ministry of Prisons' death toll], July 26, 2025.

Power for Interior Relations, Justice, and Peace published the release of 20,000 people from these sites, civil society does not have information on the matter.[348]

199. Moreover, the Commission observes that although the prison population has decreased, the country's prisons are still overcrowded. According to the available data, in July of 2025, 22,019 persons were in custody, despite the real prison capacity of only 15,096 spots, meaning there was overcrowding of 45.85%.[349] In contrast, in September 2024, there were 30,000 persons in custody, and an overcrowding rate of 85%[350]. Furthermore, it is concerning that seven of the operational facilities[351] have overcrowding rates of 110% to 255%.[352] In this respect, the Commission recalls that when the collapse of the prison system or of a prison makes it materially impossible to offer decent conditions, it is not feasible for the State to continue admitting people into those spaces.[353]

200. In addition, despite the 10-point decrease in the rate of pretrial detention, the excessive use of this measure remains one of the chief causes of overcrowding. According to civil society data published in July 2025, there were 12,110 individuals awaiting trial and 9,909 who had been sentenced, meaning pretrial detention is used at a rate of 55%;[354] in December 2023, the rate was 65%.[355] The IACHR reiterates that the use of pretrial detention must respect the presumption of innocence and the principles of exceptionality, legality, necessity, and proportionality.[356]

201. The Commission also reiterates its concern over the deplorable detention conditions, which, among other consequences, from July 26, 2011, to July 26, 2025, caused 3,538 deaths and 5,094 injuries due to a lack of medical care and acts of violence.[357] Of these, at least 149 deaths occurred in 2024, most due to health problems resulting from the lack of medical care and the unsanitary conditions.[358]

202. According to the available data, beyond the overpopulation of the facilities, individuals in custody at Venezuelan prisons continue to suffer deplorable infrastructure; unsanitary conditions; cells without adequate ventilation or constant access to natural light; insufficient, poor quality food; limited access to water; and a lack of basic supplies, meaning they depend on their families for mattresses, hygiene products, and clothing. In addition, due to prison staff complicity or negligence, weapons, drugs, and other prohibited

[348] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025, pp. 9 and 63.

[349] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Presentation of Annual Report 2024, July 2025, IACHR archive, p. 7; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025.

[350] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Venezuela", 2024, par. 213; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, "Presos venezolanos viven en menos espacio del que ocupan sus propios pies" [Venezuelan prisoners live in less space than is taken up by their own feet], September 25, 2024.

[351] Namely, the following prison compounds: Dr. Francisco Delgado Detention Center, with overcrowding of 255%; 26 de Marzo Agro-productive Prison Center, with 200%; Winnie Mandela New Man Training Center, with 232%; Rodeo III Judicial Internment Facility, with 170%; Rodeo II Judicial Internment Facility, with 162.2%; Barcelona Agro-productive Prison Center, with 112.7%; and the Barinas Judicial Internment Facility, with 110.4%.

[352] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Presentation of Annual Report 2024, July 2025, IACHR archive, p. 7; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025.

[353] IACHR, Report on the use of pretrial detention in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 46/13, December 30, 2013, par. 290.

[354] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Presentation of Annual Report 2024, July 2025, IACHR archive, p. 8; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025.

[355] IACHR, Annual Report, Chapter IV. B "Venezuela," 2024, par. 213; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2023: Degradación, desprecio y abandono: características del sistema penitenciario venezolano [Annual Report 2023: Degradation, disdain, and neglect: characteristics of the Venezuelan prison system] July 26, 2024, p. 46.

[356] IACHR, Report on Measures Aimed at Reducing the Use of Pretrial Detention in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II Doc. 46/13, December 30, 2013, par. 231. Recommendation A "General recommendations pertaining to State policy," par. 1.

[357] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, 8.532 víctimas en 14 años: el saldo mortal del Ministerio Penitenciario [8,532 victims in 14 years: the Ministry of Prisons' death toll], July 26, 2025.

[358] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, 149 muertos bajo custodia del Estado en 2024: el sistema penitenciario se consolida como herramienta de represión, tortura y muerte [149 deaths in State custody in 2024: the prison system is consolidated as an instrument of repression, torture, and death], July 21, 2025.

objects are frequently allowed to enter the facilities.[359] This puts the prison population's lives and physical integrity at risk, especially considering that a system of self-governance is still in place in the country's detention facilities, which are under the domain of the criminal structures known as "pranes."[360]

203. These deplorable conditions are even worse in the police holding cells, in which 40 persons have reportedly died, chiefly due to health-related reasons and a lack of timely care.[361] Furthermore, although these cells were designed to hold detainees for a maximum of 48 hours, this deadline is not adhered to in practice, and they are even used to hold convicted individuals. Specifically, these facilities do not meet minimum living standards due to overcrowding and lack of drinking water, food, and adequate medical care.[362] In some of them, the number of detainees is nearly four times the installed capacity, meaning people have to take turns to sleep standing up or in sheets hung as hammocks, and they do not have kitchens or bathrooms, meaning the detainees have to cook and take care of their physiological needs right in the cells.[363]

204. The IACHR also expresses its concern over the persistence of acts of torture and mistreatment. Specifically, information gathered by civil society has noted beatings, prolonged sun exposure, severe restrictions on water and food, forced nudity, and prolonged isolation, as well as confinement in punishment cells called "tigritos," in inhumane conditions; these cells lack ventilation and illumination, some are kept at low temperatures, and the detainees are forced to strip, deprived of blankets, and isolated for periods of up to 15 days.[364]

205. In view of the foregoing, the Commission reiterates that the States, as guarantors of the individuals in their custody, have the obligation to ensure that detention conditions for incarcerated individuals are compatible with human dignity. These conditions include adequate infrastructure, access to safe drinking water, and enough quality food, etc.[365] Timely, adequate, and specialized healthcare services should also be provided.[366] The Commission also recalls absolute prohibition on all forms of torture and mistreatment, and urges the State to adopt urgent measures to combat these acts.[367]

[359] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Presentation of Annual Report 2024, July 2025, IACHR archive, p. 9; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Familiares de presos en Yare III denuncian aislamiento y falta de información sobre su salud [Relatives of prisoners in Yare III denounce isolation and lack of information about their health], January 30, 2025; and Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025. Regarding the unsanitary conditions, see: #ATENCIÓN Nuestra organización ha recibido denuncias por parte de familiares de personas privadas de libertad en los Centros Penitenciarios Rodeo I y Rodeo II [ATTENTION (#ATENCIÓN) Our organization has received complaints from relatives of individuals in custody at the Rodeo I and Rodeo II Prison Centers], X account of Justicia, Encuentro y Perdón, posted July 8, 2025.

[360] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025, pp. 18 and 56-57.

[361] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Presentation of Annual Report 2024, July 2025, IACHR archive, p. 18; and Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025, p. 55.

[362] IACHR, Public hearing "Venezuela: Situation of adolescents and adults deprived of liberty in the post-electoral context," 192nd Period of Sessions, March 5, 2025.

[363] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Presentation of Annual Report 2024, July 2025, IACHR archive, p. 17; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025.

[364] Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Presentation of Annual Report 2024, July 2025, IACHR archive, p. 9; see also: Venezuelan Prison Observatory, Informe Anual 2024: Sin separación ni autonomía de poderes: cárceles y calabozos como herramientas de tortura [Annual Report 2024: Without separation or independence of powers: prisons and cells as instruments of torture], July 21, 2025.

[365] IACHR. Report on the human rights of persons deprived of liberty in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, adopted December 31, 2011, par. 432.

[366] See: Inter-American Court of Human Rights. Case of Chinchilla Sandoval et al. Guatemala. Preliminary Objection, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of February 29, 2016. Series C No. 312, pars. 171-172.

[367] IACHR. Report on the human rights of persons deprived of liberty in the Americas, OEA/Ser.L/V/II, adopted December 31, 2011, par. 343.

5. Persons with disabilities

206. The IACHR recalls that persons with disabilities are more likely to experience adverse socioeconomic situations, and that these situations are exacerbated by other factors of discrimination like gender.[368] Specifically, this year media outlets raised concerns about the difficulties faced by people with psychosocial disabilities in trying to obtain appropriate care, due to the closure of hospitals and decreased response capacity resulting from the deterioration of infrastructure and lack of supplies. For example, patients with schizophrenia are reportedly unable to access psychiatric services in a timely fashion, which exposes them to heightened social vulnerability.[369]

6. Lesbian, gay, bisexual, and intersex (LGBTI) persons

207. In Venezuela in 2025, the situation of the LGBTIQ+ community is characterized by ongoing violations of their rights as well as the fight to have those rights recognized. The State has still not produced or published official data on prejudice-based violence and discrimination, and the scant information available comes from the work of civil society. Furthermore, there is no legal framework in place to guarantee their fundamental rights.

208. In January, the civil society organization Venezuelan Observatory of LGBTIQ+ Violence (OVV LGBTIQ+) published the statistic that in 2024 there were at least 40 documented cases of discrimination against LGBTI persons in public spaces, with shopping centers being the most unsafe places.[370] In June 2025, hundreds of people marched to celebrate LGBTI pride, taking the opportunity to denounce the violations of their human rights, like abuses by the authorities, deficiencies in access to healthcare, and the lack of recognition of equal marriage, while demanding recognition of their rights.[371]

7. Indigenous peoples

209. The Inter-American Commission remains deeply concerned about the structural situation of vulnerability faced by Indigenous peoples in Venezuela. In 2025, no significant progress has been identified in the material recognition of the right to land, territory, and natural resources, nor in the implementation of effective boundary demarcation mechanisms. The IACHR observes that the processes started under the Organic Law on Indigenous Peoples and Communities are at a standstill, which exacerbates the conflicts over illegal invasions and the tapping of resources in their traditional territories. The severe effects of illegal mining in the Orinoco Mining Arc and the state of Amazonas likewise persist, without the State having adopted structural protection measures.[372]

210. The Commission has received updated information on the grave humanitarian situation of the Yanomami people, who mostly live in the state of Amazonas, in areas along the border with Brazil. According to the information received, this population's existence is gravely threatened by the expansion of illegal mining and the presence of irregular armed groups. These activities have led to the pollution of the rivers, deforestation, and the spread of endemic diseases like HIV, malaria, tuberculosis, and hepatitis.[373] The IACHR

[368] IACHR, Poverty and human rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II.164.Doc.147, September 7, 2017, par. 427.

[369] Crónica Uno, La saturación en hospitales psiquiátricos deja sin atención a pacientes vulnerables en Caracas [The saturation of psychiatric hospitals leaves vulnerable patients untreated in Caracas], February 4 2025.

[370] El Aragueño, Durante el 2024 documentaron 40 casos de discriminación a personas LGBTIQ+ en espacios públicos de Venezuela [In 2024, 40 cases of discrimination against LGBTIQ+ persons were documented in Venezuela], January 23, 2025, OVV LGBTIQ+, Espacios públicos inseguros: 65 personas LGBTIQ+ fueron discriminadas en 2024 en lugares de entretenimiento [Unsafe public spaces: 65 LGBTIQ+ persons faced discrimination at entertainment venues in 2024], January 22, 2025.

[371] Yahoo Noticias, Venezolanos marchan para exigir avances en derechos para la comunidad LGTBI [Venezuelans march to demand progress on LGTBI rights], June 28, 2025.

[372] OHCHR, Oral Update on the Human Rights Situation in Venezuela, https://www.ohchr.org/en/statements-and-speeches/2025/03/oral-update-human-rights-situation-venezuela, March 20, 2025; PROVEA, WAYAMOU THERI, and ODEVIDA, Informe Especial. Venezuela. Pueblos y liderazgos indígenas en grave riesgo [Special Report. Venezuela. Indigenous peoples and leaders at grave risk], undated, report that provides a systematic overview of the situation from September 2024 to March 2025.

[373] OHCHR, Oral Update on the Human Rights Situation in Venezuela, March 20, 2025. https://www.ohchr.org/en/statements-and-speeches/2025/03/oral-update-human-rights-situation-venezuela.

takes note, with special alarm, of the reports of the high mortality rate in the Sierra Parima region and of the total lack of an effective State response to guarantee timely and culturally appropriate medical care.[374]

211. The information received gives an account of the ineffectiveness of the healthcare system in Alto Orinoco, where most clinics remain closed and the medical staff is insufficient. Since 2019, the healthcare services have been almost totally neglected; the malaria control centers are out of supplies, and medical transportation is unavailable. Emergency cases need to be transferred by air to Puerto Ayacucho, and many communities are forced to cross the border to Brazil in search of medical care. Episodes of violence and sexual assault have also been reported, and are associated with the presence of garimpeiros (illegal miners) in the area; furthermore, data on the Indigenous birth rate, morbidity, and mortality is systematically underreported, which makes it difficult to know the true scale of the health crisis.[375]

212. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner monitored the situation of Indigenous women with regard to maternal morbidity and mortality in the Ye'Kwana and Sanemá Indigenous territories. Access to healthcare there was observed to be critically limited, with reportedly only 3 medical doctors serving a population of 7,448 women.[376]

213. The territory of the Yanomami people has not been effectively demarcated, despite their repeated requests since 2016. The lack of legal certainty facilitates the incursion of illegal miners and armed groups from Brazil and Colombia, exacerbating the environmental and social harm. The IACHR reiterates that the Venezuelan State is obligated to guarantee the territorial integrity of the Indigenous peoples and to prevent all forms of unconsented occupation and tapping of their lands. It also underscores that the persistence of illegal mining, militarization, and lack of prior consultation reflect a structural pattern of violation of the Indigenous peoples' rights to life, health, self-determination, and territory, in contravention of the standards of the Inter-American and universal systems of human rights.[377]

IV. CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

214. The swearing-in of Nicolás Maduro on January 10, 2025, marked a tipping point in Venezuela's political history. The systematic and widespread violations of human rights recorded before, during, and after his election, along with the arbitrary restrictions on political participation, exposed the regime's calculated strategy to manipulate the electoral process, by deliberately ignoring democratic principles and the fundamental rights of the electorate.

215. The absence of the rule of law and lack of an institutional framework guided by the separation and independence of the branches of government remain the biggest challenges to respect for and the guarantee of human rights in Venezuela. The country's public institutions primarily operate as tools to maintain the dictatorial regime and engage in corrupt practices. Consequently, this year saw continued political persecution of opposition figures, journalists, and human rights defenders who spoke out regarding the grave situation in the country.

216. Venezuela must urgently adopt institutional measures to return to democracy and the rule of law, guaranteeing a legitimate and peaceful constitutional succession that transparently reflects the people's will as expressed in the 2024 vote. Likewise, it is imperative for the country to rebuild judicial independence to ensure laws prevail over the will of the governing authorities and the judiciary effectively controls the constitutionality and legality of government actions.

[374] Information given to the IACHR by civil society organizations during the meeting on Indigenous peoples, May 13, 2025.
[375] Information given to the IACHR by civil society organizations during the meeting on Indigenous peoples, May 13, 2025.
[376] United Nations Human Rights Council, Rights of Indigenous Peoples. Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, A/HRC/60/41, August 12, 2025, par. 46.
[377] Information given to the IACHR by civil society organizations during the meeting on Indigenous peoples, May 13, 2025.

217. The IACHR calls on the international community to recognize the grave human rights crisis in Venezuela, to remain vigilant in the face of new escalations of repression, and to activate all diplomatic, peaceful, and institutional channels for a democratic transition in the country.

218. In view of the foregoing, and in fulfillment of its mandate, the Commission urges the State of Venezuela to:

State position vis-a-vis the Inter-American system

1. Fulfill, in good faith, the international obligations derived from the American Convention on Human Rights, paying special attention to the judgment in the case of Chirinos Salamanca et al. v. Venezuela.

2. Authorize the Inter-American Commission to make an on-site visit to the country, in compliance with the applicable regulatory provisions.

3. Fully comply with the decisions and recommendations of the inter-American human rights system, including those set out in the annual reports for the years of: 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, and 2024. Furthermore, comply with the recommendations made in reports like "Democratic Institutions, Rule of Law, and Human Rights in Venezuela" (2017), "Democracy and Human Rights in Venezuela" (2009), and the "Report on the Situation of Human Rights in Venezuela" (2003).

Democratic institutions and rule of law

4. Re-establish the constitutional order, guaranteeing:

    i. the independence and balance of powers, especially of the judicial and electoral branches;
    ii. political participation with no repression or discrimination whatsoever; and
    iii. effective citizen control over the action of the various branches of government.

5. Publish all voting tally sheets from 2024 and allow an independent audit, with international observers.

6. Guarantee a legitimate and peaceful constitutional succession.

7. Adopt suitable, effective measures to rebuild the independence of the Venezuelan Office of the Public Prosecutor and the judicial branch.

The fight against impunity and the administration of justice

8. Immediately release the individuals who have been arbitrarily deprived of liberty.

9. Ensure the guarantees of due process are fulfilled at all procedural stages associated with arrests in connection with the elections.

10. Investigate, with due diligence, all complaints of human rights violations in connection with the elections and prosecute and punish the perpetrator and masterminds.

Political rights and participation in public life

11. Adapt the internal regulatory framework to ensure that any disqualification of an individual aspiring to hold popularly elected office is carried out in line with inter-American standards.

12. Refrain from carrying out illegal or arbitrary detentions, especially of children and adolescents; and if a person is deprived of liberty, ensure that all due process guarantees are fulfilled, including prompt appearance before a competent, independent and impartial judicial authority.

13. Guarantee the right to vote abroad to Venezuelan nationals who are over 18 years of age and have not been convicted of a criminal offense.

Freedom of expression

14. Grant journalists the maximum degree of guarantees to ensure they are not detained, threatened, or assaulted, and do not have their work materials or tools confiscated due to exercising their profession.

15. Amend ambiguous or vague criminal laws that limit freedom of expression—such as laws designed to protect the honor of ideas or institutions or to protect national security or public peace—so as to avoid the use of criminal law to inhibit free democratic debate on matters of interest.

16. Refrain from applying restrictions on the operation of websites, blogs, applications, or other internet-based, electronic, or similar information dissemination systems, including support systems, such as ISPs, and search engines.

Poverty and economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights

17. Implement economic and fiscal policies that are sensitive to human rights in order to combat poverty and extreme poverty, as well as to guarantee the population's economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights, without discrimination and with special attention placed on the most vulnerable populations.

18. Adopt the necessary measures to ensure that children and adolescents have access to quality health services, including the provision of medications, with special consideration for the situation of those with chronic illnesses.

19. Refrain from any action or conduct that may limit the autonomy of universities, by investigating, reviewing, and modifying any legislation or practice that undermines it.

Human rights defenders

20. Refrain from filing unjustified criminal lawsuits based on anti-terrorism legislation to hamper the work of human rights defenders.

21. Refrain from using administrative measures, such as holding and canceling identity and travel documents, with the purpose of curbing the work of human rights defenders

22. Abolish the Law on the Oversight, Regularization, Operations, and Financing of Nongovernmental and Related Organizations; and ensure human rights defenders can perform their activities free from any type of intimidation.

Women

23. Adopt the measures necessary for compliance with the State's obligation of enhanced due diligence in the prevention, protection, investigation, punishment and reparation of all forms of violence against women.

24. Urgently adopt all necessary measures to make available a varied, accessible, and acceptable supply of female and male contraceptive and family planning methods, as well as reproductive and maternal health services throughout the country.

25. Review domestic legislation on the voluntary interruption of pregnancy in order to guarantee the effective exercise of the sexual and reproductive rights of girls, women and pregnant women of all ages.

Persons in situations of mobility

26. Ensure consular services for the processing of essential identification and travel documents.

27. Implement all efforts to inform Venezuelans in situations of mobility about the potential risks on irregular migration routes, including human trafficking, gender-based violence, abuse, and exploitation.

28. Ensure alternative ways to guarantee the reunification of family groups that have been separated by the suspension of direct flights, to prevent recourse to irregular means of migration.

Persons deprived of liberty

29. Adopt the judicial, legislative, and administrative measures needed to reduce the prison population, and in particular, to put an end to the detention of persons in pretrial detention facilities.

30. Ensure detention conditions are compatible with human dignity and respect for fundamental rights, and that they guarantee the dignified treatment of persons in custody and meet the needs of this population with respect for the gender perspective and intersectional approaches.

Persons with disabilities

31. Ensure that people with psychosocial disabilities have access to healthcare services that appropriately respond to their specific needs.

Lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, and intersex (LGBTI) persons

32. Take immediate action towards effectively collecting and analyzing data on the violence and discrimination affecting LGBTI persons.

33. Adopt the measures necessary to guarantee access to justice without discrimination for LGBTI persons, and to conduct impartial and due diligence investigations into deaths or violent crimes against them.

34. Adopt a comprehensive legal framework that explicitly protects against discrimination based on prejudices against sexual orientation, gender identity, non-normative gender expression or diverse sexual characteristics.

Indigenous peoples

35. Guarantee Indigenous peoples' self-determination and right to territory, especially in view of the impacts of illegal mining and other illegal economies in the Orinoco Mining Arc.

36. Guarantee equitable and culturally appropriate access to quality health and education services through policies and programs with an intercultural and intersectional approach.

PARTIALLY DISSENTING VOTE OF COMMISSIONER CARLOS BERNAL PULIDO REGARDING CHAPTER IV-B OF THE 2025 ANNUAL REPORT ON VENEZUELA

With all due respect to my colleagues, and in accordance with Article 19.1 of the Rules of Procedure of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights ("the Commission" or "the IACHR") and in exercise of the right to freedom of expression, I submit this vote in relation to Chapter IV-B of the 2025 Annual Report on Venezuela, hereinafter "the Report".

I fully recognize and agree with the relevance and value of the report for strengthening democracy, insofar as it rigorously and thoroughly documents serious institutional shortcomings in the country in this area. I also agree with the analysis of the current economic and social situation, since bringing these realities to light is an indispensable tool for effectively guaranteeing and protecting the human rights of the people of Venezuela.

Notwithstanding the foregoing and reiterating my agreement with the general content of the Report, this vote is limited exclusively to making observations on some specific aspects that I consider relevant. These considerations do not affect or question the general diagnosis or the main conclusions of the report but rather seek to focus the debate on these concrete points.

In that sense, in this vote I will refer to: (i) how the report contains considerations that disregard the Inter-American legal framework and pose a risk to pregnant women; (ii) observations on contraceptive methods and the need to inform women; (iii) considerations related to the sexual and reproductive education of children and adolescents; and (iii) observations regarding considerations on same-sex marriage.

1. The report contains considerations that disregard the Inter-American legal framework and pose a risk to pregnant women

Paragraphs 187 and 188 of the report state:

> "187. (...). Likewise, access to safe abortion remains limited, even to therapeutic abortion, which is the only type permitted by law.
>
> 188. In light of the above, the Commission urges the State to adopt the necessary measures to guarantee access to sexual and reproductive health services, including voluntary termination of pregnancy".

Similarly, recommendation 27 mentioned:

> "27. Review domestic legislation on voluntary termination of pregnancy to ensure the effective exercise of sexual and reproductive rights for girls, women, and pregnant persons of all ages".

On this point, I'll cover the following issues: (i) the misuse of the term "voluntary interruption of pregnancy"; (ii) the non-existence of the right to abortion and the scope for state regulation; and (iii) the lack of protection for the unborn.

1.1 Misuse of the term "voluntary interruption of pregnancy"

I highlight the importance of the IACHR using precise and appropriate language in its reports. This emphasizes the imperative of using accurate and rigorous language to ensure that decisions are based on clear understandings. In fact, on several occasions, the Commission itself has recognized the need for conceptual precision in the documents it issues[378] and has repeatedly emphasized the importance of correct language use.[379]

Language is, in fact, a fundamental element of human communication and the expression of thought, functioning as a dialectical unit in which both mutually condition each other.[380] It plays an essential role in decision-making, especially through its representative or referential function, which is aimed at conveying information, describing facts, and expressing ideas in a clear, accurate, and objective manner, so that they serve as a solid basis for the decisions that are made.[381]

Therefore, the appropriate and rigorous use of language in IACHR reports ensures that the message is clear and understandable to all recipients. Beyond the simple transmission of data, this linguistic rigor legitimizes the technical-legal analysis and conclusions raised by the IACHR.

In light of the above, it is particularly problematic that the report uses the term "voluntary interruption of pregnancy" when these issues revolve around "abortion." However, it is essential to draw a clear conceptual distinction between the two terms.

I reiterate that abortion is a form of pregnancy termination performed with the direct intention of causing the death of the fetus, or in other words, of ending prenatal life.[382] Thus, it may involve termination before the fetus is viable or even the destruction of a viable fetus.[383] To that extent, an abortion will only be successful when it causes the death of the human being in gestation.[384]

On the contrary, the expression "interruption of pregnancy" may suggest that the gestational process is likely to resume at a later date. However, as indicated, abortion necessarily involves the termination of pregnancy through the death of the human being in gestation.

I therefore consider it essential to use the appropriate terminology in order to avoid misunderstandings regarding the interpretation and the decision adopted by the Commission. Consequently, in my vote I will refer specifically to the conduct of abortion.

1.2 Absence of a right to abortion in the Inter-American Human Rights System

Regarding the recommendation to review domestic legislation on abortion, I would like to emphasize, as I have done in multiple votes,[385] that there are no binding sources in international law—and especially in [378] IACHR. Indirect violations of freedom of expression: The impact of concentration in media ownership; IACHR. Chapter IV. Report on access to information in the hemisphere: Access to information and economic development; IACHR. Guidelines for the development of indicators of progress in economic, social, and cultural rights. 2008.

[379] IACHR. The right of children to a family. Alternative care. Ending institutionalization in the Americas. 2013.

[380] Juan Alberto Mena Lorenzo, Noemí Sarracino Alum. Professional technical language in the training of future workers. Mendive, ISSN-e 1815-7696, Vol. 6, No. 4, 2008 (Issue dedicated to: October-December), pages 234-241.

[381] Ibidem.

[382] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb;79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[383] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb;79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[384] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb;79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[385] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Report on the situation of Honduras – 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter vs. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024- Chapter IV.A development of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4A_ES.PDF#page201.

the American Convention or other treaties that make up the Inter-American System—that contemplate (i) the so-called right to abortion or (ii) a corresponding obligation for States to provide abortion services. Within this context, States have broad discretion—by virtue of the principles of subsidiarity or complementarity and representative democracy—to take measures to protect prenatal life[386] which include, although not exclusively, the use of criminal law.

In light of the lack of abortion rights, former IHR Court judge Eduardo Vio Grossi made it clear in his partially dissenting opinion on the ruling in the case of Manuela and others vs. El Salvador:

> "And in this regard, it is indisputable that (...) there is no Inter-American or international legal norm, whether conventional, international custom, or general principle of law, that recognizes abortion as a right. There are only resolutions from international bodies, most of which are made up of international officials and not representatives of States, decisions that, in addition to not being binding, do not interpret current international law but rather reflect aspirations for it to change in the direction they suggest".[387]

In fact, it should be noted that the Inter-American Court recently heard the case of Beatriz vs. El Salvador, in which the IACHR and the victims' representatives alleged the existence of a "right to abortion." However, in its judgment, the Court did not establish the existence of such a right.[388] This is yet another example of the lack of a binding legal source from which a supposed right to abortion can be derived.

However, I would like to emphasize that this margin of configuration, derived from the absence of a right to abortion and the convergence of conflicting rights, is broadened by the competence of States to define punishable conduct and its consequences, and by the automatic referral that, according to the IHR Court, Article 7.2 of the American Convention makes to domestic law for matters related to deprivation of liberty—the principle of legal reservation—.[389]

This is relevant when considering that, based on a systematic reading of Articles 31, 76, and 77 of the American Convention, only through consensus—expressed by the States through the signing and ratification of amendments or treaties—can international obligations arise that are additional to those already contemplated in the ACHR.

In conclusion, international human rights law—and in particular the Inter-American System—does not recognize abortion as a right, nor does it impose an obligation on States to guarantee, promote, protect, or provide it as a service. On the contrary, the American Convention expressly protects life as of conception and grants States a margin of discretion to adopt the measures, they deem appropriate for its protection, within the framework of their democratic principles and legislative sovereignty.

1.3 Lack of protection for the unborn in the report

I notice that, in this report, as in others on which I have cast my vote,[390] references to abortion ignore the other person whose right to life is also protected by convention: the unborn child. Thus, the necessary balance that

[386] ACHR. Article 4.

[387] Partially Dissenting Vote of Judge Eduardo Vio Grossi, Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Case of Manuela and Others vs. El Salvador, Judgment of November 2, 2021, (Preliminary Exceptions, Merits, Reparations, and Costs). Paragraph 13.

[388] I/A Court H.R., Case of Beatriz and others Vs. El Salvador. Merits, Reparations and Costs. Judgment of November 22, 2024. Series C No. 549.

[389] I/A Court H.R., Case of Romero Feris Vs. Argentina. Merits, Reparations and Costs. Judgment of October 15, 2019. Series C No. 391. Para. 77.

[390] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Report on the situation of Honduras – 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A. Venezuela.

must exist between the conflicting rights of all internationally protected persons is ignored. In this regard, it should be noted that pregnant persons are also subjects of law and holders of the right to life. A ruling on abortion always implies a position on a practice that necessarily involves the termination of the life of a human being worthy of dignity and protected by Article 4 of the ACHR. It is therefore necessary to expressly recognize the rights of the pregnant person as part of the balancing required in every case of abortion.

On this point, Article 1.2 of the ACHR clearly establishes that, for the purposes of the Convention, a "person" is any human being.[391] Thus, in light of the Convention, human rights are not only recognized for persons who have already been born, but protection must be afforded to all individuals from the moment of conception, understanding them as human beings. Furthermore, the IHR Court itself, in its Advisory Opinion 22, held that, without being a matter open to interpretation, the term "person" is equivalent to the term "human being" for the purposes of the ACHR.[392]

It is biologically and materially indisputable that the developing fetus is a human being.[393] Furthermore, the Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights states that "the human genome is the basis of the fundamental unity of all members of the human family and of the recognition of their inherent dignity and diversity. In a symbolic sense, the human genome is the patrimony of humanity".[394]

The consequence of recognizing the unborn as a person insofar as a human being is that it becomes the holder of rights. Thus, the ACHR establishes in the Articles that develop rights the formula "Every person (...)".[395] Likewise, in general, protection instruments of Human rights recognize the entitlement of members of the human species to rights, in particular the right to life.[396]

In fact, in its ruling on the Artavia Murillo case, the IHR Court determined that "the protection of the right to life is not absolute, but rather gradual and incremental as the fetus develops." This implies that, without prejudice to the concepts of graduality and incrementality (from which I completely disagree), the Court has already established that pregnant persons must be protected by the State in their "right to life." Similarly, in the ruling on the Cuscul Pivaral case,[397] the IHR Court applied the ACHR to a pregnant person and also applied Article 19 of the ACHR, thereby recognizing the legal status of a child to the yet unborn person.

Along the same lines, I would like to highlight that the preamble to the Convention on the Rights of the Child states that children need protection and care both before and after birth.[398] This implies that, in light of the https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter vs. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024- Chapter IV.A development of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4A_ES.PDF#page201.

[391] ACHR. Art. 1.2 "For the purposes of this Convention, a person is every human being".

[392] IHR Court. OC-22/16. Ownership of rights by legal persons in the Inter-American Human Rights System. Advisory Opinion of February 26, 2016. Series A. No. 22. Para. 48.

[393] Kaluger, G., and Kaluger, M., Human Development: The Span of Life, The C.V. Mosby Co., St. Louis, 1974, page 28-29.

[394] Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights. Article 1.

[395] American Convention on Human Rights. Articles 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 18, 20, 21, 22, 24 and 25.

[396] International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Preamble, para. 3; American Convention on Human Rights, para. 3. Preamble; African Charter on Human Rights. Preamble, para. 6; Geneva Declaration on the Rights of Children. Preamble, para. 1; American Declaration of the International Rights and Duties of Man. Art. 1; Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Preamble, para. 1; Declaration of the Rights of the Child. Preamble, para. 2; European Convention on Human Rights. Preamble, para. 2.

[397] IHR Court. Case of Cuscul Pivaral vs. Guatemala. Judgment of August 23, 2018. "On the other hand, the Court has held that extreme poverty and the lack of adequate medical care for pregnant women or women who have recently given birth are causes of high maternal mortality and morbidity, and therefore States must provide adequate health policies that allow for assistance with personnel adequately trained in childbirth care, policies for the prevention of maternal mortality through adequate prenatal and postpartum checkups, and legal and administrative instruments in health policies that allow for the adequate documentation of cases of maternal mortality. Likewise, the Court has recognized that, under Article 19 of the Convention, the State must assume a special position of guarantor with greater care and responsibility and must take special measures guided by the principle of the best interests of the child."

[398] Convention on the Rights of the Child. Preamble.

CRC, the unborn child is a child who requires special care. This was reiterated in the preparatory work for the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.[399]

In short, a comprehensive interpretation of the Inter-American System and international human rights law leads to the recognition of the unborn child as a subject of rights, particularly the right to life, protected from conception by Article 4 of the American Convention. Disregarding this protection implies arbitrarily excluding a human being from the moral and legal community of persons, contrary to the principle of human dignity that constitutes the foundation of the international human rights order.

Therefore, any decision or ruling on abortion requires a genuine balancing of the conflicting rights—not the suppression of one of them—ensuring that the protection of prenatal life is coordinated with comprehensive care and the guarantee of rights of pregnant women. Only a balanced and respectful approach to all conventionally recognized rights can be considered consistent with the American Convention.

2. On contraceptive methods and the need to inform women

It was mentioned on recommendation 26:

> "26. Urgently adopt all necessary measures to make available a varied, accessible, and acceptable range of contraceptive and family planning methods for both women and men, as well as reproductive and maternal health services throughout the country".

On such matter, I insist[400] that it is not enough to approve the use of contraceptive methods to guarantee women's sexual and reproductive rights, but that these measures must be accompanied by others related to education and awareness about the use of contraceptive methods in general, information about their specific physical effects, and their impact on the right to health. I emphasize that freedom in decision-making is not limited to the availability of options. True freedom comes when sufficient information is provided to make those decisions.

In these matters, it is essential to take into account women's right to comprehensive, accurate, and pluralistic information about their sexual and reproductive health, which is an essential dimension of freedom of expression and the right to health recognized in international human rights law.[401] As noted by the IACHR in its reports—including Merits Report No. 72/14[402] and in the Beatriz case[403] (reports with which I do not fully agree), access to information is an essential requirement for guaranteeing autonomy, personal integrity, and the possibility of making free and informed decisions regarding health.

On this matter, the World Health Organization has held that the adoption of contraceptive methods will depend on "the general state of health of the person," among other criteria.[404] This is highly relevant, as it shows that not every method is suitable for every person and that, in this context, the provision of such methods may pose a health risk in specific cases. It is therefore essential that people receive adequate guidance on the [399] "The main reason for providing in paragraph 4 [now Article 6(5)] of the original text that the death penalty should not be applied to pregnant women was to save the innocent life of the unborn child." United Nations. General Assembly. Report of the Third Committee on the Draft International Covenants on Human Rights. A/3764. Page 40.

[400] Reasoned Vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Report on the situation of Honduras – 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF.

[401] Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Access to reproductive health information from a human rights perspective, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 61, November 22, 2022. Report 332/20.

[402] IACHR. Report No. 72/14.

[403] IACHR. Access to reproductive health information from a human rights perspective.

[404] Family planning. Contraceptive methods. https://www.who.int/es/news-room/fact-sheets/detail/family-planning-contraception.

contraceptive methods available so that they can make an informed choice about the option that is most suitable for them.

Only with proper guidance can it be ensured that people who use contraceptive methods give their informed consent, an essential guarantee that derives from the text of the convention.[405] With regard to informed consent, the IHR Court has established that:

> "The concept of informed consent consists of a prior decision to accept or undergo a medical procedure in the broad sense, obtained freely, that is, without threats or coercion, inducement, or improper incentives, expressed after obtaining adequate, complete, reliable, understandable, and accessible information, provided that this information has been truly understood, which will enable the individual's full consent. Informed consent is the positive decision to undergo a medical procedure, derived from a prior, free, and informed decision-making or choice process, which constitutes a two-way mechanism of interaction in the doctor-patient relationship.[406]

In this regard, in the case of I.V. vs. Bolivia, the Court criticized the fact that the victim never had the opportunity to learn about and weigh different contraceptive methods.[407] In this case, the IHR Court stressed the importance of individuals having the necessary information to make an informed decision. In this context, the Court underscored the importance of addressing the effects or impacts of the method on free choice.[408]

Thus, individuals' autonomy in choosing contraceptive methods can only be guaranteed when they have the ability to consent to the use or non-use of these methods with the necessary information.

3. Regarding sexual and reproductive education for children and adolescents

Paragraphs 187 and 188 of the report provide:

> "187. (:...) "On the other hand, a study revealed that the proportion of teaching staff receiving training to address comprehensive sexuality education content is insufficient to guarantee this right to all children and adolescents.
>
> Likewise, it urges the creation of a state policy on comprehensive sexuality education that includes mandatory and ongoing training for teaching staff".

In this regard, I will refer to: (i) the need to serve the best interests of children and adolescents and avoid their hypersexualization, and (ii) the exercise of parents' right to choose their children's education in these matters.

3.1 The need to serve the best interests of children and adolescents and prevent their hypersexualization

In light of the restrictions imposed on sexual and reproductive education, as well as education on sexual and gender diversity aimed at children and adolescents, I reiterate[409] that it is essential to also recognize that it is vital to take into account the role of the family, society, and the State in protecting the rights of children, and therefore a broad dialogue must be opened that recognizes the needs of children according to their stage of [405] IHR Court. Case of I.V. vs. Bolivia. Preliminary Exceptions, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 30, 2016. Series C No. 329.

[406] IHR Court. Case of I.V. vs. Bolivia. Preliminary Exceptions, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 30, 2016. Series C No. 329.
[407] Ibidem.
[408] IHR Court. Case of I.V. vs. Bolivia. Preliminary Exceptions, Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 30, 2016. Series C No. 329.
[409] Reasoned vote. Annual report 2024. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF.

development. Sex education without the recognition and mitigation of these risks can cause serious violations of the rights of girls and boys.

I emphasize that the best interests of children and adolescents are a guiding principle that should inform all government actions. Indeed, this principle is enshrined in binding instruments of the Universal Human Rights System (UHRS),[410] the Inter-American Human Rights System (IAHRS)[411] and the European System of Human Rights (ESHR).[412]

In the UHRS, the best interests of the child are enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Indeed, Article 3.1 of the CRC provides that "In all actions concerning children, whether undertaken by public or private social welfare institutions, courts of law, administrative authorities or legislative bodies, the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration." And the CADAW, in Article 5.b, enshrines the obligation of States Parties to "To ensure that family education includes a proper understanding of maternity as a social function and the recognition of the common responsibility of men and women in the upbringing and development of their children, it being understood that the interest of the children is the primordial consideration in all cases".

In the Inter-American System, the ACHR recognizes this principle in Article 19, providing that "every child has the right to the measures of protection required by his or her status as a minor from his or her family, society, and the State".

This principle has been extensively developed by the Committee on the Rights of the Child in General Comment 14. In this Comment, the Committee held that the best interest of the child is an umbrella term which encompasses three dimensions, namely: (i) a fundamental right of the child, (ii) a basic and interpretative principle, and (iii) a procedural rule.[413]

With regard to the content of this principle, the Committee held that it implies that any action involving a child must consider the child's best interest as a primary consideration.[414] Hence, according to the Committee, the application of this principle means that not only must the interests of the child be considered, but their interests must always take precedence when they clash with other principles or interests.

In accordance with the above, all public policies implemented by States within the framework of their functions must take into account the interests of children and adolescents as an essential consideration. As a public policy, Comprehensive Sexual Education must also be governed by the best interests of children and adolescents.

I would like to raise a growing concern in this regard regarding sex education policies, namely the hypersexualization of children and adolescents. Hypersexualization represents a risk that disproportionately affects children. This has been recognized by the Committee on the Rights of the Child in General Comment 20, which states that "the digital environment can also expose adolescents to risks, including, among others, (...) hypersexualization".[415] The Committee has reiterated this in several reports, arguing that hypersexualization is a problem that must be addressed by States, as it jeopardizes the rights of children and adolescents.[416]

[410] Convention on the Rights of the Child. Article 3.1; Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Article 5.b).

[411] American Convention on Human Rights. Article 19.

[412] ECHR. R.L and others vs Denmark.

[413] Committee on the Rights of the Child. General Observation Nº 14 (2013) on the right of the child to have his or her best interests taken as a primary consideration (art. 3, Para. 1). CRC/C/GC/14.

[414] Committee on the Rights of the Child. General Observation Nº 14 (2013) on the right of the child to have his or her best interests taken as a primary consideration (art. 3, Para. 1). CRC/C/GC/14.

[415] General Observation number. 20 (2016) on the effectiveness of children's rights during adolescence

[416] 39 Consideration of the reports submitted by States parties under article 44 of the Convention. Fifth periodic reports of States parties due in 2012; Committee on the Rights of the Child. Combined fifth and sixth periodic reports submitted by the Plurinational State of Bolivia under article 44 of the Convention, due in 2015.

Sex education, therefore, should be a means of preventing the hypersexualization of children and adolescents[417] and not a mechanism to promote it. Consistent with this, the ECHR has established that for sex education to be in line with the Convention, it must aim to provide children with correct, precise, objective and scientific knowledge on the matter, presented in a manner appropriate to their age.[418]

In light of the above, the ECHR has held that a sex education policy aimed at children and adolescents should: (i) be based on the principle of objectivity;[419] (ii) approach the issues in a neutral manner;[420] (iii) offer a precise and scientific approach to the subject[421] and (iv) make sure topics are presented in a way that is appropriate for the age and cognitive development of the child or teen.[422] In this context, the Committee on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights has held that sex education "entails a right to comprehensive, non-discriminatory education on sexuality and reproduction, based on evidence, scientifically rigorous, and age-appropriate"[423] (Bold type not in original text).

In this sense, the IHR Court has defined a goal that must be pursued and cannot be overlooked. In particular, it has stated that: "Such education must be capable of enabling girls and boys to adequately understand the implications of sexual and emotional relationships, particularly in relation to consent to such relationships and the exercise of freedoms with respect to their sexual and reproductive rights".[424]

However, the report completely omitted any analysis or consideration of the relationship and impact that this type of education may have on the best interests of children and adolescents, and the need for safeguards to prevent the hypersexualization of children and adolescents.

In short, sexual and reproductive education must be implemented with strict respect for the best interests of the child, ensuring an objective, scientific approach that is appropriate to their age and level of development. This means that States, in exercising their margin of discretion, must adopt measures aimed at protecting children and adolescents from hypersexualization and any practice that disregards their developmental maturity or their right to a comprehensive education. Likewise, educational policies must recognize the fundamental role of the family and foster values such as responsibility, self-control, and the protection of human life since conception.

3.2 The application of parents' right to choose their children's education in these matters

I reiterate[425] that in all discussions concerning the sexual and reproductive education of children, the right of parents to choose their children's education, as recognized in Article 12.4 of the ACHR, must be safeguarded. The aforementioned article provides that "Parents or guardians, as the case may be, have the right to provide for the religious and moral education of their children or wards that is in accord with their own convictions" (Bold type not in the original text).

[417] La Sabana University. The hypersexualization of childhood. https://www.unisabana.edu.co/portaldenoticias/al-dia/la-hipersexualizacion-de-la-infancia/.

[418] ECHR. Case of Macatė vs. Lithuania.

[419] ECHR. Bayev and Others vs. Russia. 2018. Para. 72; Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen and Pedersen vs Denmark. 1976. Paragraph 53.

[420] ECHR. Macatė vs. Lithuania. 2023. Para. 68.

[421] ECHR. Macatė vs. Lithuania. 2023. Para. 207; Bayev and Others vs. Russia. 2018. Para. 72.

[422] ECHR. Macatė vs. Lithuania. 2023. Para. 68.

[423] CESCR, General Observation No. 22 on the right to sexual and reproductive health (Article 12 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights), paras. 9 and 49.

[424] IHR Court. Case of Guzmán Albarracín and others Vs. Ecuador. Merits, Reparations and Costs. Judgment of June 24, 2020. Series C No. 405, Paragraph 139.

[425] Reasoned vote on the report on "Social cohesion: the challenge for the consolidation of democracy in Bolivia". https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/CohesionSocial_Bolivia_SPA.pdf; Reasoned vote. Report on the situation of Honduras – 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Informe annual 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF.

This same guarantee has been provided for in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,[426] the International Covenant on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights,[427] the Convention on the Rights of the Child[428] and the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights.[429] According to the ECHR, the Parents' right to choose their children's education, including sex education, is an aspect of the right to respect for private and family life protected by the ECHR.[430]

Thus, there is consensus in international human rights law concerning the existence and recognition of this right of parents. The Inter-American Commission has understood that the right of parents to choose their children's education (i) must be interpreted in conjunction with the rights of children and adolescents, especially the right to education[431] and (ii) it must comply with the provisions of Inter-American instruments that establish that education should be oriented toward teaching children to respect human rights, civil liberties, and tolerance.[432]

Of course, I agree with these criteria; however, it cannot be overlooked that: (i) all types of education must respect the best interests of children as a guiding principle, and (ii) the right of parents to choose their children's education is derived from the right itself to education for children; for which reason, there is a false dilemma in considering that both rights are incompatible.

Thus, the ECHR, within the framework of its interpretation of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1, has held that,[433] it is the fundamental right to education on which the right of parents to respect for their philosophical and religious convictions is based. According to the European Court of Human Rights, although this right rests with parents, it also rests with children, who have the right to education and teaching.[434]

This right undoubtedly has an impact on sexual and reproductive education, since, like any other type of education, it must come within the scope of protection of the conventional right, recognized by international human rights law, which grants parents the right to choose their children's education, pursuant to Article 12.4 of the convention.

Issues related to sexuality, reproduction, sexual diversity, and gender are closely intertwined and have a significant impact on people's value systems. Therefore, sex education is an integral part of the moral education of children and adolescents. The broad social discussions on the subject and the diverse views that may arise from different value systems in a region as pluralistic as ours cannot be ignored. Therefore, it cannot be interpreted that it is the State or the bodies of the Inter-American System who are called upon to choose the moral education of children, forgetting that it is the parents who are the holders of that right.

4. Same-sex couples: the vision incorporated by the ACHR on marriage

Paragraph 208 of the report holds:

> "In June 2025, hundreds of people marched in celebration of LGBTI pride, denouncing violations of their human rights, such as abuse by the authorities, poor access to healthcare, and lack of recognition of equal marriage rights, while demanding recognition of their rights".

[426] Article 18.4.
[427] Article 13.3.
[428] Article 14.2.
[429] Article 2.
[430] TEDH, Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen y Pedersen, Para. 53; Dojan and others, cited above, Para. 78-83.
[431] IACHR. Study on Freedom of Religion and Belief | Inter-American Standards.
[432] IACHR. Study on Freedom of Religion and Belief | Inter-American Standards.
[433] The general principles set out by the ECHR are derived primarily from the judgments in Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen, and Pedersen vs. Denmark (ECHR 1976/5); Campbell and Cosans vs. the United Kingdom (ECHR 1982/1); Valsamis vs. Greece (ECHR 1996, 70) and Folgero and others vs. Norway (ECHR 2007/53).
[434] Case of Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen, and Pedersen vs. Denmark (SECHR 1976/5, of December 7, para. 52).

On this point, without prejudice to States adopting legal measures to protect same-sex relationships, I reiterate[435] that there is no conventional provision obliging States to recognize same-sex marriages. As I have mentioned on several occasions, the treaties that form part of the Inter-American Human Rights System and grant jurisdiction to the Inter-American Commission to address contentious cases do not include any obligation with respect to the recognition of same-sex marriage. This absence of obligation stems from the literal wording of the American Convention, which clearly establishes that marriage is a right reserved for "a man and a woman":

> "The right of men and women to marry and found a family shall be recognized if they are of legal age and meet the conditions required by domestic law, provided that such conditions do not affect the principle of non-discrimination established in this Convention"[436] (Bold type not in the original text).

Therefore, in accordance with the hermeneutic principle that calls for a literal interpretation in good faith[437], the State is only compelled to recognize the right to marriage for couples specifically mentioned in Article 17.2 of the American Convention.

It is essential to stress that, according to the jurisprudence of the International Court of Justice, the interpretation of a treaty in good faith should not result in changes to the literal wording of treaties or in inferring what is not expressly contained in the text. This approach implies that the interpreter must assume that the parties had the intention that is apparent from the ordinary meaning of the terms used in the international agreement.[438] The text-centered approach to treaty interpretation is not only accepted in international law, but also highly recommended, as it is based on the only empirically verifiable evidence of the intentions of States: the text of the treaty itself.[439]

Following these rules of interpretation, the European Court of Human Rights has considered marriage to be between a man and a woman— as established in the European Convention on Human Rights, in a provision similar to that of the ACHR—.[440] In that sense, the European Court supports the idea that there is no binding obligation for states to recognize same-sex marriage, which leaves ample room for states to regulate this matter.[441] Likewise, in terms of the European Court of Human Rights:

> "The Court reiterates that, in accordance with Article 14 in conjunction with Article 8, States are free to restrict marriage to opposite-sex couples only and have a certain margin of appreciation in deciding the exact nature of the legal status granted by other means of legal recognition".[442]

---

[435] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Report on the situation of Honduras – 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter vs. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024- Chapter IV.A development of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/es/cidh/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4A_ES.PDF#page201.

[436] American Convention on Human Rights. Article 17.1

[437] Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties. Article 31

[438] International Court of Justice. Case concerning rights of nationals of the United States of America in Morocco. France v. United States of America. ICJ Reports 1952, pp. 196-199. International Court of Justice. Interpretation of peace treaties with Bulgaria, Hungary, and Romania (Second Phase). ICJ Reports 1950, pp.229-230.

[439] International Court of Justice. Question of the Delimitation of the Continental Shelf between Nicaragua and Colombia beyond 200 Nautical Miles from the Nicaraguan Coast (Nicaragua vs. Colombia), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2016, p. 116-123, paras. 34-38, 46. Although the International Court of Justice did not rely exclusively on the literal criterion of interpretation, this was one of the first criteria taken into account by the Court in rejecting the interpretation of the Colombian party.

[440] European Convention on Human Rights. Article 12: "Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right".

[441] ECHR. Oliari and others vs Italy. July 21, 2015. Para. 193.

[442] ECHR. Chapin and Charpentier vs France. September 9, 2016. Para. 48.

On this point, it is worth noting that this same approach is upheld by the European Court in the cases of Orlandi vs. Italy[443] and Fedotova and others vs. Russia.[444] In fact, in both cases, the European Court held that, although states must provide mechanisms to protect same-sex unions, this protection does not necessarily derive from the recognition of same-sex marriage.

Under this context, I fully agree that the margin of discretion available to States in this regard relates both to the form of recognition and to the content of the protection to be granted to same-sex couples, which, of course, cannot translate into a complete absence of protection for same-sex couples.

[443] ECHR. Orlandi vs Italy. "The Court reiterates that States are still free, under Article 12 of the Convention as well as under Article 14 taken in conjunction with Article 8, to restrict access to marriage to different sex. The same holds for Article 14 taken in conjunction with Article 12 (see Oliari and Others, cited above, § 193)." Para. 192.

[444] In this case, the Court analyzed only the possible violation of Article 8 of the ECHR, which refers to the right of individuals not to be subjected to arbitrary interference by the State in their private lives. In the case of same-sex couples, the Court established that the lack of a legal framework allowing same-sex couples to have their relationship recognized and protected under national law can create significant obstacles in the daily lives of these couples. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it established that the State may enjoy a margin of appreciation in determining the form of registration of same-sex unions, which implies that such registration does not necessarily have to be through the institution of marriage.

V.

Follow-Up of Recommendations in Country or Thematic Reports

Bolivia

CHAPTER V FOLLOW-UP ON RECOMMENDATIONS MADE BY THE IACHR IN THE SOCIETAL COHESION REPORT: THE CHALLENGE FOR THE CONSOLIDATION OF DEMOCRACY

I. BACKGROUND INFORMATION 877

II. FOLLOW-UP ON RECOMMENDATIONS 879

A. Social cohesion 879

B. Pending challenges in human rights 882

C. Strengthening of democratic institutions 901

Separation of powers 901

D. Protection of human rights defenders and other vulnerable groups 904

E. Freedom of expression and access to information 907

F. Social protest and use of force 916

G. Administration of justice 921

III. SUMMARY TABLE OF LEVEL OF COMPLIANCE WITH RECOMMENDATIONS 932

IV. CONCLUSIONS 933

REASONED VOTE BY COMMISSIONER CARLOS BERNAL PULIDO ON THE REPORT "FOLLOW-UP TO RECOMMENDATIONS MADE BY THE IACHR IN THE SOCIAL COHESION REPORT: THE CHALLENGE FOR THE CONSOLIDATION OF DEMOCRACY" IN RELATION TO BOLIVIA 936

FOLLOW-UP ON RECOMMENDATIONS MADE BY THE IACHR IN THE SOCIETAL COHESION REPORT: THE CHALLENGE FOR THE CONSOLIDATION OF DEMOCRACY[1]

1. This report presents the first follow-up assessment of the recommendations issued in the report "Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia."[2] (hereinafter "Country Report"), approved on January 20, 2024, by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (hereinafter "Commission," "Inter-American Commission," or "IACHR"). The report is prepared pursuant to Article 59, paragraph 9, of the Commission's Rules of Procedure, according to which, through Chapter V of its Annual Report, the Commission shall follow up on the measures taken by the member states of the Organization of American States (hereinafter "OAS") to comply with the recommendations made in its country or thematic reports.

I. BACKGROUND INFORMATION

2. On January 20, 2024, the IACHR approved the Country Report, in which it analyzed the human rights situation in Bolivia, based on observations made during the in loco visit conducted from March 27 to 31, 2023; the structural challenges, as well as the main advances and challenges remaining since the previous visit, conducted in 2006.

3. Among the pending challenges identified by the Commission are effective measures to guarantee the right to self-determination of indigenous peoples, including indigenous peasant jurisdiction, as well as the rights of the Afro-Bolivian people. It also noted the challenges in guaranteeing women's right to a life free of violence, as well as the full exercise of the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, gender-diverse, and intersex (LGBTI) persons. On the other hand, it highlighted the need for state attention to the environmental impacts of extractive activities; guarantees for access to water, health, work, and education, among others.

4. The report also acknowledged the continued historical institutional weakness, affected by deepening political polarization, and analyzed how this social phenomenon fuels conflict, enables the escalation of violence, and creates conditions for human rights violations in the country, in addition to affecting democratic institutions, the rule of law, and freedom of expression.

5. The document also analyzed the historical challenges of the justice system, which have resulted in the Bolivian population, in all its diversity, distrusting the judiciary, especially the criminal justice system. The IACHR observed that the consolidation of progress in human rights is at risk if the justice system continues to face the serious challenges it currently faces.

6. Based on its findings, in the Country Report, the Commission issued 32 recommendations and requested the State to adopt measures for compliance with said recommendations, considering the challenges identified.

---

[1] Commissioner Carlos Bernal Pulido approved the report and issued a partial reasoned vote, joined by Commissioner Gloria Monique de Mees. Most considerations were developed in the reasoned vote corresponding to the report "Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia." The partial reasoned vote appears at the end of this chapter.

[2] IACHR, Report "Social cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", OAS/Ser.L/V/II, Doc.1/2024, January 20, 2024.

7. In order to prepare this follow-up document, information provided by the State on December 12, 2024, through the SIMORE[3] platform was used. Subsequently, on July 21, 2025, the IACHR requested that the Plurinational State of Bolivia respond within 30 days regarding its compliance with the recommendations contained in the Country Report. The State provided the requested information on August 20, 2025. The Commission appreciates and welcomes the information received which has been included in this document to the extent that it is relevant.

8. For its part, the IACHR issued a questionnaire to civil society organizations so that they could provide their response on the follow-up to the recommendations. The IACHR appreciates the information provided by some organizations, which was taken into account for the follow-up to the recommendations in the Country Report, and values their involvement in the processes for following up on the IACHR's recommendations.

9. On October 28, 2025, the Commission transmitted to the State a copy of the preliminary draft of this Report, in accordance with Article 59, paragraph 10, of its Rules of Procedure, and requested that it submit its observations. On November 11, 2025, the Commission received the State's observations and comments[4], which were incorporated, as appropriate, into this version. The final version of this report was approved by the Commission on December 15, 2025.

10. This follow-up report assesses compliance with the recommendations, in accordance with the General Guidelines for Follow-up on Recommendations and Decisions of the IACHR[5], in accordance with the thematic structure incorporated into the Country Report. Furthermore, the preparation of this document is consistent with the practice of the IACHR in the area of follow-up.

11. With regard to each recommendation, the report: (i) summarizes the reasons that led the IACHR to formulate it; (ii) summarizes the information that has become known since the publication of the Country Report, including that reported by the State and civil society organizations, as well as that gathered in monitoring the general human rights situation in the country[6]; (iii) presents an analysis and the level of compliance with each recommendation, noting the main advances and challenges in implementation; and (iv) provides an assessment of the information that the State has not yet submitted or the measures that remain to be adopted in order to determine progress in the level of compliance. After presenting its analysis of compliance with all the recommendations, the IACHR issues its conclusions regarding progress and challenges in compliance.

12. Full compliance with the recommendations of the IACHR is essential to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights in OAS member states and to strengthen the Inter-American Human Rights System (hereinafter "IAHRS"). The current international scenario requires that the actors involved not only participate actively, reporting information on the measures taken to comply with the decisions adopted by international organizations, including the IACHR, but also that these efforts translate into appropriate, timely, and effective state measures that achieve the aims of each decision.

13. The IACHR reiterates the importance of the Plurinational State of Bolivia fully complying with the recommendations made in the report under review. It also hopes that this tool will enable the establishment of a dialogue process aimed at ensuring compliance with the recommendations addressed to the Plurinational State of Bolivia in the area of human rights.

[3] Plurinational State of Bolivia, Note 296/2025, November 4, 2025.
[4] Plurinational State of Bolivia, Note 298/2025, Observations to the project of the report, November 11, 2025.
[5] IACHR, General Guidelines for Follow-up on Recommendations and Decisions of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc.385/23 (second edition), November 20, 2023.
[6] To this end, the IACHR has resorted to information gathered during public hearings, ex officio investigations, inputs from petition and case mechanisms and precautionary measures, and responses to requests for information submitted under the authority established in Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights, as well as information received from other public sources and the decisions and recommendations of specialized international organizations, among others.

II. FOLLOW-UP ON RECOMMENDATIONS

A. Social cohesion

Recommendation No. 1. Design and implement a nationwide, regularly functioning roundtable that provides spaces for democratic dialogue between different sectors of society to promote shared visions; prevent further polarization; prevent violence and ethnic-racial discrimination; and contribute to democratic governance.

14. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR warned that social relations in Bolivia are affected by polarization, hostility, and hatred among groups opposed for political reasons. While political differences are part of a healthy democratic society, the IACHR noted that such polarization has led to mistrust of democratic institutions and a lack of consensus on historical events that continue to affect the social fabric. This phenomenon is worsened by discrimination based on ethnic and racial origin and the lack of effective channels for dialogue. For this reason, the IACHR urged the State to create spaces for consensus and genuine dialogue among the different sectors of Bolivian society, in all its diversity, in order to prevent polarization from deepening[7].

Information on compliance

15. According to information reported by the State, the Social Cabinet of the Cultural and Political Revolution of the Plurinational State of Bolivia was established as a platform for dialogue, consultation, and debate on political, economic, and social issues between different sectors of society and the Executive Branch[8]. This group is comprised of national social organizations, the Pact for Unity[9] and 17 government ministries. According to information provided by the State, five meetings of the Group were held between January and October 2024[10]. Likewise, the State noted that permanent dialogue tables have been held in territories affected by social tensions, which have allowed for the involvement of national and regional actors, as well as indigenous and local authorities. Along these lines, the State reported that the necessary inter-institutional channels have been activated to ensure that the results of the dialogue translate into efficient actions[11].

16. For its part, civil society commented that the project "Dialogue to support and build human rights for peace in Bolivia" was implemented between 2019 and 2022[12]; which organized public consultations with young people, activists, and representatives of organizations working for human rights and gender equality, aimed at preventing violence, mitigating the polarization generated by the electoral context, promoting respect for human rights as a priority for a successful political transition, fostering trust and cooperation between opposing sectors of society, and generating a long-term agenda for the consolidation of

[7] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 78, 89 and 99.

[8] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

[9] The State reported that it is made up of the Single Trade Union Confederation of Rural Workers of Bolivia (CSUTCB), the National Confederation of Indigenous Rural Women "Bartolina Sisa" (CNMCIOB-BS), the Trade Union Confederation of Indigenous Intercultural Communities of Bolivia (CSCIOB), the National Council of Ayllus and Markas of Qullasuyu (CONAMAQ), and the Confederation of Indigenous Peoples of Eastern Bolivia (CIDOB), and the Bolivian Workers' Union (COB).

[10] First session: January 23, 2024; second session: April 2, 2024; third session: May 28, 2024; fourth session: August 13, 2024; fifth session: October 8, 2024. For further reference, visit: https://www.facebook.com/vicemssc/videos/1181228876417886/ or https://www.facebook.com/vicemssc/posts/pfbid01LMCcEu8QLrz6PM1GgZ78pGfZ9wXbDg3g5e365uVfZi5cNH7DYthggTYe9moCWhal?rdid=qU3dSMwa0Kj3mFr2#.

[11] Inter-American SIMORE, , Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September 2025.

[12] Signed by the State and the United Nations between 2019 and 2022: https://mptf.undp.org/sites/default/files/documents/2023-11/00122936_bolivia_final_evaluation.pdf.

peace. Its participants also stressed that they are not aware of the existence of a permanent national roundtable, despite the worsening polarization in recent years[13].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

17. The IACHR acknowledges the measures taken by the State following the adoption of the Social Cohesion Report, in particular the organization of the Social Cabinet of the Cultural and Political Revolution of the Plurinational State of Bolivia and the convening of meetings that include social and trade union organizations. However, it takes note of the lack of information on its implementation and results in 2025.

18. It should be noted that the Social Cohesion Report highlighted the need to create spaces for dialogue that cover the plurality of actors in Bolivian society and that prevent the polarization that affects even within organizations. In this regard, in order to comply with this recommendation, it is essential that the spaces for dialogue have as their goal and methodology the participation of actors from different areas of the political and social spectrum. This can be guaranteed by means of a call for participation that is representative of geographical distribution, in order to ensure broad political representation of the groups that are part of the dialogue, or by incorporating groups with diverse themes, including those who may be critical of the policies being implemented.

19. Likewise, spaces for dialogue must have mechanisms in place that promote timely and informed dialogue and aim to influence the decision-making process. In this regard, since the IACHR requires more information to verify the scope of the dialogue and its impact on public debate, it is concluded that this recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

20. In order to move forward with this recommendation, the Commission believes it is necessary to understand the scope of the Social Cabinet's call for participation, considering the different types of social actors (social organizations, human rights organizations, journalists' associations, trade unions, organizations representing indigenous and peasant peoples, among others) and its geographical scope (including organizations from different departments of Bolivia). Likewise, efforts should be made to convene and ensure the voluntary participation of social or political organizations with diverse ideological positions, even those contrary to those of the government itself. In addition, the Commission deems it essential to know the topics addressed and the results of this dialogue. Finally, it is crucial for the IACHR to have updated information during 2025.

Recommendation No. 2. Implement a national strategy for institutional capacity strengthening focused on dialogue, negotiation, and peaceful conflict resolution techniques, with an intercultural approach which takes into account the forms of organization specific to each community.

21. In the Social Cohesion Report, the IACHR identified the presence of “shock groups” in the various situations of social conflict highlighted in the Report and therefore urged the State to institutionally strengthen the public bodies responsible for preventing and addressing social conflict. In addition, the IACHR called on the State to establish policies, strategies, and special training activities focused on negotiation techniques and peaceful conflict resolution at all levels, prioritizing the community level and respecting each community's own forms of organization and conflict management[14].

[13] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire on the recommendations of the “Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia,” August 25, 2025, p. 1.

[14] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 99 and 100.

Information on compliance

22. The State reported that the Vice Ministry for Coordination with Social Movements and civil society is responsible for addressing social demands, channeling requests to the appropriate authorities, and monitoring the activities of social organizations[15]. Likewise, it is responsible for the follow-up on agreements between the institutions of the Executive Branch and social and civil organizations, through regular meetings with the coordinators of social organizations from the 17 ministries[16]. The State also noted that during 2024 and 2025, workshops and training sessions were held for municipal and regional authorities, as well as community leaders, incorporating techniques of mediation, participatory dialogue, and intercultural management. In addition, support and technical assistance protocols were implemented for subnational governments, with the aim of strengthening their response capacity and their dignified and respectful interaction with indigenous communities[17].

23. For its part, civil society stressed that it is unaware of any initiatives of this kind[18].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

24. The IACHR thanks the State and civil society for the information provided and welcomes the existence of an entity within the executive branch with the authority to address social demands and follow up on the results of dialogues with the authorities. However, it is important to note that the powers of this entity were approved prior to the country visit and the issuance of the Report on Social Cohesion. On the other hand, it commends the creation of training opportunities for municipal and regional authorities.

25. Likewise, it should be noted that the recommendation is aimed at designing and implementing actions intended to strengthen capabilities for dialogue and peaceful dispute resolution, with a community-based and intercultural approach. In this regard, in order to comply with this recommendation, the State must formulate a capability-building strategy that includes, at least, courses, management tools, or working methodologies aimed at the National Police, relevant entities of the executive branch, and social leaders for the preventive approach to social conflicts, taking into account the specific needs and cultural characteristics of each community. With regard to the activities reported, the State is requested to report on how these fit into a national strategy and to detail their impact. Therefore, the Commission considers that this recommendation remains pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

26. In order to advance in compliance with this recommendation, the Commission requests information on the measures the State has adopted to strengthen its capabilities for dialogue and peaceful dispute resolution. These measures, intended for authorities or other social groups, may include, inter alia, capability-building workshops, mechanisms for monitoring the issues and agreements addressed. Likewise, in monitoring the agreements, the Commission requests information on how they are implemented and the results observed.

[15] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024. For further information on the meetings held by the Executive Branch, please visit the following links: https://www.facebook.com/vicemssc/posts/pfbid0hyDGv1qMYdmgSQKH9d9yWAmPj3pXYHwdpvKY9W9uaskZtHxsqAruVm5kxmLK69Lkl?rdid=tbgQhV50oRnevMfJ#, https://www.facebook.com/vicemssc/posts/pfbid0qtYtRftY7Fr1xgVr6e14MsraGZsp7tCpmkmNqdf6USN3GTDW6RvGJYANNeWPPvNsl?rdid=2nUB39Ann4iFeEON#, https://www.facebook.com/vicemssc/posts/761367112682962?rdid=7nWD0S14A3yYAoGQ#.

[16] Supreme Decree No. 4857, passed on January 6, 2023.

[17] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September, 2025.

[18] Human Rights Community, ibid., p. 2.

B. Pending challenges in human rights

Recommendation No. 3 Promote, in the immediate term, a comprehensive review of the procedures for recognizing indigenous autonomies, in order to develop an assessment which identifies the obstacles keeping these procedures from being agile, simple, and effective.

27. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR mentioned that the indigenous autonomy regime allowed the representative authorities of the indigenous peasant peoples to exercise governance powers and strengthen their own legal systems, norms, and mechanisms for democratic participation. However, the IACHR also held that there were frequent complaints about the existence of highly bureaucratic processes for establishing autonomy and approving statutes and autonomy designs. It therefore recommended that the State, in consultation with the peoples, evaluate the changes or adaptations necessary in the legal and administrative framework to ensure that the establishment of indigenous autonomy is not hindered by bureaucratic deficiencies[19].

Information on compliance

28. The State reported that the legal exercise of self-determination by indigenous and aboriginal peasant peoples and nations is conducted through procedures established by several central government bodies, which guarantees their full participation and the exercise of their collective rights within the framework of current legislation[20]. With regard to the management role of the autonomous regions, the executive body is responsible for issuing Certificates of Ancestral Territory and Governance Viability and Population Base[21]. The executive body also held that some obstacles have been identified that prevent these procedures from being agile, simple, and effective, due to the slowness of the procedures before different State bodies and their lack of adaptation to the characteristics and barriers of the population[22].

29. The State also explained that the Electoral Body is responsible for supervising and monitoring compliance with the rules and procedures for the election of the authorities of indigenous and aboriginal peasant nations and peoples. For its part, the Plurinational Legislative Body has the power to approve the law creating the corresponding territorial units. In addition, the Plurinational Constitutional Court issues judgments on the constitutional compatibility of the autonomy statutes.

30. The State cited the "Multiethnic Indigenous Territory" as a recent example of recognition of indigenous autonomy, with the plural identity of the Mojeño Trinitario, Mojeño Ignaciano, Tsimane, Movima, and Yuracaré peoples[23], whose process had already been highlighted in the Country Report[24].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

31. The Commission takes note that the rules and powers reported were approved prior to the country visit and the issuance of the Report on Social Cohesion. However, it appreciates the information on the obstacles observed, so that the system of indigenous autonomies effectively guarantees the rights of indigenous peasant peoples. In this regard, the IACHR highlights the need to conduct a participatory assessment that allows

[19] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 42 and 44.
[20] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[21] These competencies are regulated in Ministerial Resolutions 309/17 and 310/17 both passed in 2017.
[22] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.
[23] Law No. 1497, passed on March 1, 2023.
[24] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 42.

all entities involved in the procedure to streamline and facilitate their bureaucratic processes. Therefore, it is considered that this recommendation remains pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

32. With the aim of advancing in the compliance with this recommendation, the IACHR requests information on the development of a participatory assessment with indigenous and peasant organizations that, from an intercultural perspective, will identify measures that can be adapted to facilitate the bureaucratic processes for establishing indigenous autonomy. This assessment should help to understand the diversity of entities involved in the process, the procedures for each one, their deadlines, and to consider the linguistic, social, political, economic, and cultural barriers that may be hindering access for the peoples. Upon the State's recognition that its own institutions are unaware of some procedures, this recommendation acquires particular relevance. Therefore, in order to assess compliance, the State must consider whether this lack of knowledge is part of the administrative obstacles reported by indigenous organizations.

Recommendation No. 4 Design and implement a comprehensive public policy, in the short term, that completes the process of land reform and land deeds for indigenous peoples, peasants, and Afro-Bolivians, and provides protection against third-party actions.

33. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR indicated that constitutional reforms addressed structural problems related to access to and recognition of the territorial rights of indigenous and Afro-Bolivian peoples. However, it collected reports on challenges in the process of land regularization and titling, as well as on illegal occupations that threaten territorial integrity. Likewise, it stressed that legal uncertainty has contributed to the phenomenon of dispossession, encroachment, and land trafficking. Therefore, the IACHR urged the State to complete the process of land and territory regularization and titling, address persistent historical challenges, and generate measures to protect against third-party actions, such as land encroachment. This includes collecting data to facilitate coordinated action both within the State and among indigenous peoples[25].

Information on compliance

34. The State reported that the Rural Land Titling and Regularization Program (BO-L 1113) had been implemented until 2024[26], reaching a total of 95.8 million hectares nationwide, an area corresponding to 93% of all rural land. Of the total amount of rural land titled, 27% corresponds to indigenous communities, 18% to communal property, 10% to small properties, 16% to medium-sized and corporate properties, and 29% to public lands. Thus, at the national level, 25.8 million hectares have been registered as lands belonging to indigenous peasent communities. Of these, 11.5 million hectares are located in the highlands and 14.2 million in the lowlands. In addition, it was emphasized to the IACHR that only 6% of the national territory remains for the completion of land regularization and titling, an area that is being claimed by different agrarian actors (small property owners, community members, indigenous peoples, medium-sized businesses)[27].

35. Likewise, approval was reported for the financing of two projects aimed at consolidating legal security and the development of rural lands, the Bolivian Land Administration Program for Sustainable Rural

[25] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras 126, 132, and 133.
[26] For further information, visit: https://www.inra.gob.bo/programa-de-saneamiento-y-titulacion-de-tierras-rurales/.
[27] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

Development BO-L1234[28] and the Fund for the Consolidation of Indigenous Peasant Territories in the Lowlands[29], which are awaiting approval and enactment into law[30].

36. For its part, civil society confirmed that the information provided by the State is publicly available and broken down according to progress, type of property, and distribution across departments. In this regard, they hold that between 2023 and 2024, only 1% of the total has been completed, leaving 6% of the territory pending[31].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

37. The Commission thanks the State and civil society for the information provided. It also takes note of the progress made in the titling and land regularization process, which has advanced significantly since 2006, as well as the projects that are being approved in those areas where it is still pending.

38. The IACHR has repeatedly insisted on the importance of protecting the territory of indigenous peoples and the relationship between said protection and the exercise of the collective rights of these peoples, as well as the protection of their development priorities free from violence by third parties[32]. Therefore, it is fundamental that States not only recognize the rights of indigenous peoples, native peasants, and Afro-Bolivian communities in their regulatory frameworks, but also effectively implement the demarcation and titling of their territories.

39. For this reason, the IACHR deems as positive the fact that the funding necessary to advance in the fulfillment of this recommendation has been secured. In this regard, it remains attentive to its effective implementation, so that progress can be made on the remaining percentage and therefore concludes that this recommendation is in partial compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

40. In order to advance in the compliance with this recommendation, the IACHR requires information on the initiation and implementation of the Bolivian Program for Land Administration for Sustainable Rural Development BO-L1234 and the Fund for the Consolidation of Indigenous and Native Peasant Territories in the Lowlands, as well as information that allows it to assess how progress has been made with the remaining 6% gap, and in other actions aimed at protecting the territories of indigenous and aboriginal peasant peoples from harm caused by third parties.

Recommendation No. 5. Design and implement a public policy which, in order to guarantee consultation from a perspective of the right to self-determination, contemplates prior, free, and informed consent with regard to any legislative, administrative, or other measure that may affect the rights of indigenous peoples, peasants, and Afro-Bolivians.

41. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR mentioned that indigenous, peasant, and Afro-Bolivian peoples have the right to be consulted through appropriate procedures whenever legislative or administrative measures that may affect them are planned, in order to implement their right to self-

[28] For further information, visit: https://www.iadb.org/es/proyecto/BO-L1234.
[29] For further information, visit: https://www.iadb.org/es/proyecto/BO-T1429.
[30] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.
[31] Construir Foundation, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", September 12, 2025, p. 2.
[32] Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Right to self-determination of Indigenous and Tribal Peoples, Approved by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights on December 28, 2021, OAS/Ser.L/V/II, para. 125.

determination. However, there are reports of failure to apply this constitutional provision in extractive or construction projects already in operation. In view of this, the IACHR expressed its concern about the repeated reports of lack of practical and effective implementation in projects with the potential to affect the rights of indigenous peoples[33]. Therefore, the IACHR urged the State to guarantee prior consultation, free and informed consent in all cases of possible impacts on the rights of indigenous, native, peasant, and Afro-Bolivian peoples in order to give effect to their right to self-determination, in accordance with inter-American standards.

Information on compliance

42. The IACHR received information from the Plurinational State of Bolivia indicating that, in accordance with the current regulatory framework, prior consultation applies at all levels of government in any situation that may affect the collective rights of indigenous and aboriginal peasant peoples. The implementation of this right is the responsibility of the executive branch and is supervised by the Supreme Electoral Court[34]. Likewise, technical assistance, support, and guidance are provided to guarantee the full exercise of the rights of indigenous and aboriginal peasant nations and peoples[35].

43. In the area of hydrocarbons and energy, it was reported that the Ministry of Hydrocarbons and Energy has an internal organizational structure for the fulfillment of the right to consultation. It was also noted that in 2024 and 2025, eight[36] consultation processes have been held; and that the last two were on the projects "Seismic exploration in Tatarenda, Department of Santa Cruz" and "Development of the Huayco field, Department of Tarija," where the indigenous territories of Iupaguasu, Takovo Mora, Kaaguasu, Charagua Norte, and Itika Guasu were consulted, respectively. This information would reflect a decrease in the number of prior consultations implemented, from an average of nine per year between 2013 and 2019 to two per year between 2020 and 2023.

44. As for mining activities, the Mining Administrative Jurisdictional Authority (AJAM) held workshops, seminars, and training sessions, and issued guidelines and procedures to create mechanisms for the uniform implementation of the consultation process for the granting of mining rights, with the aim of improving the prior consultation processes conducted with indigenous peoples, intercultural communities, and Afro-Bolivian peoples[37]. Said procedure, which is unique compared to other consultation processes, consists of four phases: the first two, preparatory and deliberative, are mandatory; while the mediation and final decision phases are only implemented if no agreement is reached in the deliberative phase.

45. For its part, civil society emphasized that problems still exist in the overlap of hydrocarbon and mining activities in operation with indigenous lands where prior consultation has not been performed. Thus, they hold that at least 27 indigenous territories allegedly have hydrocarbon areas with deficient or absent consultation processes[38].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

46. The Commission thanks the State and civil society for the information provided, particularly regarding the implementation of prior consultation mechanisms in the hydrocarbons and energy sector, as well

[33] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 134, 138, 141 and 142.

[34] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.

[35] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

[36] The projects reported in 2024 are the following: i) Exploratory Drilling of INGRE X-3D Well, ii) Drilling of Tomachi - X1 Stratigraphic Research Well (TMC-X1 IE), iii) Tomachi - X2 Stratigraphic Research Well (TMC-X2 I.E.), iv) Construction of Production Facilities, Gathering Pipeline, and Start-up of Yope-X1 Well (YOP-X1) in the Yope Field, v) Installation of Production Lines and Facilities for Wells AST-X1 and CHU-X2 Section II, vi) Drilling of Well SNQ-X1001 and Installation of Production Lines and Facilities SNQ-X1000, SNQ-X1001, and SNQ-X1002.

[37] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

[38] Human Rights Community, ibid., p. 2. In the northern Amazon region: 13 out of 15 territories; Chapare-Moxos: 5 out of 6 territories; Chaco region: all indigenous territories.

as information on the regulatory framework and existing powers in Bolivia. It should be noted that all the regulations mentioned predate the visit to the country and the Social Cohesion Report. With regard to the information on the consultation processes carried out and the information provided by civil society, as contained in the Report on Social Cohesion, on strengthening consultation mechanisms, the IACHR considers it essential that participatory mechanisms and coordinated action with indigenous peoples be used, in order to assess and adapt State mechanisms to incorporate and guarantee the free, prior, and informed consent of communities in such processes.

47. The IACHR notes that, the fourth cycle of the Universal Periodic Review identified the importance of improving consultation and decision-making mechanisms to ensure the effective participation of indigenous peoples in matters relating to their ancestral lands in Bolivia. In this regard, emphasis was also placed on strengthening the participation of indigenous communities in decision-making processes that may affect their lands, resources, and rights, in accordance with the International Labor Organization (ILO) Convention No. 169 on Indigenous and Tribal Peoples and the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples[39].

48. The IACHR has stressed that the use of an intercultural approach includes at least two dimensions: (i) distribution of power in decision-making regarding their own development priorities and control over their lives; and (ii) the level of recognition of their cultural differences, without this being a cause for exclusion or discrimination[40]. In this sense, States must adapt their policies, plans, and even mechanisms for dialogue to the characteristics of each community they seek to influence, in order to guarantee their self-determination and respect for their collective rights.

49. Therefore, taking into account that consultation processes are being implemented on issues related to extractive projects that have an impact on the territories and peoples where they are carried out, but that these processes must respond more adequately to the particular characteristics and collective needs of these peoples, the IACHR concludes that this recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

50. In order to advance in compliance with the recommendation, the IACHR requires information on the steps taken by the State to design and implement a public policy that addresses the historical demands for consultation. This may include spaces for dialogue to design such measures, the preparation of assessments that include the demands for consultation presented by the organizations, as well as the measures that would have been taken to strengthen intercultural dialogue in those cases.

Recommendation No. 6. Design and implement a national public policy that guarantees institutional functioning to prevent, protect, investigate, punish, and redress gender-based violence against women and LGBTI persons, with a gender, intersectional, and intercultural perspective, with adequate resources.

51. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR noted that, despite the measures adopted to address gender-based violence and access to justice, a culture of discrimination against women persists in the country, affecting indigenous and rural women in particular. Added to this is a high level of impunity in the investigation, punishment, and redress of violence, due to budgetary and regulatory deficiencies and misconduct by judicial authorities. In view of this situation, the IACHR has established that the State must incorporate a gender and intercultural approach, as well as an intersectional perspective, into investigations and judicial proceedings to ensure respect for the cultural and ethnic identity, language, and particular characteristics of indigenous women victims of violence. It also urged the State to strengthen its regulatory framework to guarantee the exercise of rights for all transgender, non-binary, or gender-diverse persons, and to implement public policies to advance sociocultural changes that will eradicate discrimination and violence based on sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, and sexual characteristics[41].

[39] United Nations Organization (UN), Human Rights Council, Report of the Work Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, A/HRC/59/7, March 19, 2025, paras. 122.260 - 122.265.

[40] Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Right to self-determination of Indigenous and Tribal Peoples, ibid., para. 211.

Information on compliance

52. The State reported on the third Multisectoral Plan for Comprehensive Development for Living Well - against Racism and all Forms of Discrimination (2021-2025)[42], whose aim is to carry out, in a coordinated and joint manner, tasks to prevent and combat racism and discrimination. In addition, information was provided on the development of a network management model to enhance coordination and cooperation among all levels of government, civil society, and with women's social organizations. This plan includes the following prevention components: care, protection, investigation, and punishment[43].

53. The State reported on the Complaint Registration and Monitoring System (SIRESEPRAJ) of the National Committee against Racism and All Forms of Discrimination, whose purpose is to collect and record information, monitor cases, and enable the generation of reports and statistics. Said registry collects cases initiated for crimes of racism and all forms of discrimination in administrative, judicial, and constitutional proceedings, and they are sent to the National Committee to Combat Racism and All Forms of Discrimination for registration, systematization, and monitoring in the event of possible irregularities, errors, or delays in the process for society in general and the LGBTI population[44].

54. Information was also provided on the Advocacy Plan to Combat Racism, Discrimination, and Hate Speech in Electoral Processes 2025. Among the goals of this plan are to advocate for the incorporation of political parties' proposals and electoral regulations, as well as to address the demands of vulnerable populations regarding parity and alternation, access to political proposals, assisted voting, and the political agenda. Thus, the Regulations on Election Campaigning and Propaganda for the 2025 General Elections were approved[45], which contains the principles set forth in Law No. 045 against racism and all forms of discrimination [46]. In this sense, actions have been taken to prevent racism and discrimination; 21 training events were held until July 2025, reaching 2,295 students and public servants[47].

55. The State reported on the drafting of the document "Women advancing with proposals for decolonization and depatriarchalization," with 190 proposals for actions and recommendations to promote the fulfillment of women's rights (indigenous, mestizo, Afro-Bolivian, rural, urban, LGBTI) in the areas of health, education, and political participation. Likewise, with the aim of promoting the application of the collective and individual rights of Afro-Bolivian women, the Plurinational Public Policy Proposal for the Afro-Bolivian People was drafted but has not yet been approved. Finally, in April 2025, in coordination with the National Confederation of Indigenous Peasant Women of Bolivia "Bartolina Sisa," a meeting was held that resulted in the articulation of the agenda for the Inter-American Decade for the Rights of All Women, Adolescents, and Girls in Rural Environments in the Americas 2024-2034.

[41] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 167, 180, 182, 203 and 205.
[42] Ministry of Justice and Institutional Transparency, Ministerial Resolution No. 31/2023, approved on February 17, 2023.
[43] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[44] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.
[45] Judgment TSE-RSP-ADM No. 231, approved on April 16, 2025.
[46] Law No. 045, passed on October 8, 2010.
[47] These events included students from technical institutes, the ESFEM Teacher Training College "Mcal. Andrés de Santa Cruz and Calahumana"; public servants from the Tax Appeals Authority, the Integrated Police Station - Max Paredes Munaypata, Bolivian Human Rights Police, Chamber of Deputies, Ministry of Development Planning, Comptroller General of the State, Food Production Support Company (EMAPA), Financial System Supervisory Authority (ASFI), and the Autonomous Departmental Government of Potosí; and social organizations.

56. For its part, the Executive drafted a preliminary bill on the exercise of the rights of the population, with the active participation of organizations representing said population. In this regard, the State has outlined the different stages for the formulation of this draft bill: a first stage of information gathering and formulation of the regulatory proposal, which began in 2024, and a second stage of validation and consultation with the LGBTIQ+ community, which began in the first quarter of 2025.

57. In this regard, civil society highlighted that the Ombudsman's Office approved the Ombudsman's Action Plan for Vulnerable Populations 2024-2028, which aims to address urgent issues and respond comprehensively to different types of violence and discrimination suffered by priority populations (including women and LGBTI people); offering prevention and response mechanisms that will be implemented through the entity's departmental offices, in coordination with the populations and state entities at different levels of government[48].

58. In addition, civil society reported that, according to data from the Public Ministry[49], as of 2017, reports of various forms of violence against women have exceeded 40,000, and since 2022, there have been more than 51,000 cases per year, representing 32.90% of the total number of cases filed with the Public Ministry. However, the vast majority of reports (95%) did not result in a conviction. Only in the case of femicides is there a significant resolution rate (32.27%), which can be explained by the prompt identification of the perpetrators, their apprehension, and the prioritization of these cases by the Public Ministry in application of the 72-hour Protocol[50].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

59. The Commission takes note of the measures reported by the State since the issuance of the Report, such as the Action Plan to Combat Racism, Discrimination, and Hate Speech in Electoral Processes 2025 and the Regulations on Propaganda and Electoral Campaigning for the 2025 General Elections, which address the fight against discrimination. It also recognizes the regulatory framework and implementation measures that have been adopted, as well as the preliminary drafts and policy proposals currently being developed. The IACHR will monitor progress in this area. It should be noted that the information provided by civil society on the problems with progress in prosecuting complaints of various forms of violence is consistent with the information gathered during the visit, and as such, concern is expressed about this trend.

60. Gender-based violence is a complex phenomenon that, for its prevention, protection, investigation, punishment, and redress, requires measures aimed at strengthening the institutions responsible for these areas, as well as eradicating the social and structural discrimination that exists in society. Therefore, mechanisms designed in a participatory manner and the implementation of actions aimed at public and private actors are required. It should be noted that detailed information on violence is essential, and in this regard, the System for the Registration and Follow-up of Complaints (SIRESEPRAJ) is welcomed. However, it is necessary to design actions aimed at promoting the protection of those who report violence from the negative consequences they may suffer.

61. For all these reasons, although there is a regulatory framework in place prior to the visit, as well as significant institutional advances since then that address gender-based violence, and despite the incorporation of a gender perspective into other instruments, a national public policy has not yet been designed to guarantee institutional functioning to prevent, protect, investigate, punish, and redress gender-based violence against women and LGBTI persons, with a gender, intersectional, and intercultural perspective, and with adequate resources. Therefore, it is concluded that this recommendation remains pending.

[48] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 4.
[49] Public Ministry. Public Accountability Report - Final 2023.
[50] Human Rights Community, ibid., p. 3.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

62. In order to advance on the compliance with this recommendation, the Commission requests that the State report on the initiation of a dialogue process for the design of a national public policy on gender violence. It also requests that the State report on the approval of the draft bill for the exercise of rights of the LGBTI population and the Proposal for a Plurinational Public Policy for the Afro-Bolivian People.

Recommendation No. 7 Design and implement an ongoing training program for health personnel on legal termination of pregnancy.

63. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR took note of the training provided by the State to public health personnel on women's right to access legal termination of pregnancy, as recognized by Bolivian law. However, despite these advances, multiple complaints about obstacles to accessing health services, particularly regarding ignorance on the part of health personnel, indicate that the judgment of the Plurinational Constitutional Court is not being fully enforced[51] which eliminated the requirement for judicial authorization to access legal termination of pregnancy in cases allowed by law[52]. Consequently, it recommended that the State establish an ongoing training program for health personnel to ensure the proper implementation of legal termination of pregnancy.

Information on compliance

64. The State indicated that it routinely conducts training inspections in primary, secondary, and tertiary health centers in the public subsector of the National Health System, with the aim of verifying and assessing compliance with regulations on care for victims of violence. Between 2023 and 2024, educational inspections were conducted in 150 health facilities[53].

65. With regard to training processes for health personnel, the State reported on the content taught, which was the following: "Comprehensive care model for victims of sexual violence"[54]; Technical procedure for the provision of health services within the framework of Plurinational Constitutional Ruling 206/2024[55]; and "Clinical protocols on the use of misoprostol in gynecology and obstetrics"[56]. In this regard, information was provided on the provision of face-to-face and virtual training in 2023 and 2024, with a total of 967 people trained, including nursing graduates, nursing assistants, general practitioners, and specialists.

66. For its part, civil society held that according to the report by the Coalition of Civil society organizations on Women's Rights for the Universal Periodic Review[57], the Ombudsman's report on "The situation of legal termination of pregnancy as a human right of women"[58], there are still obstacles and impediments to accessing the service, since users who go to a health facility, even minors, are repeatedly questioned by medical staff, whether due to prejudice, ignorance of the rules, or arbitrary decisions, even when they have been victims of sexual violence. Thus, civil society held that, although training is provided, there is no permanent national policy aimed at health services in a decentralized manner.

[51] Plurinational Constitutional Court, Plurinational Constitutional Judgment 0206/2014, February 5 and 6.
[52] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 186 and 187.
[53] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[54] Ministry of Health, Ministerial Resolution No. 1508, approved on November 24, 2015.
[55] Ministry of Health, Ministerial Resolution No. 0027, approved on January 29, 2015.
[56] Ministry of Health, Ministerial Resolution No. 0568, approved on September 10, 2018.
[57] Coalition of Civil society organizations on Women's Rights for the Universal Periodic Review, July, 2024.
[58] Ombudsman's Office of Bolivia, On compliance with Plurinational Constitutional Judgment 206/2014 and the application of the technical procedure for the legal termination of pregnancy in health services nationwide, July 2, 2020.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

67. The Commission appreciates the information provided by the State and civil society. It thus welcomes the continued efforts to strengthen oversight and training mechanisms for health personnel on the legal termination of pregnancy. However, it is concerned about gaps in access and the consequences that failure to implement these measures may have for women, particularly minors and victims of sexual violence.

68. In order to guarantee the protection of these women's rights, the State must implement a permanent training mechanism, which can reach different health facilities nationwide and prevent barriers to access or possible stigmatization or revictimization that its lack of implementation may generate. In this regard, the Commission considers that this recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

69. To make progress in implementing this recommendation, the Commission requests that the State provide detailed information on the training courses that have been implemented, including their geographical distribution, content, and methodology. It also requests that it be possible to verify whether curricula are being designed for health personnel that incorporate this topic. Finally, it requests information on how these training supervisions are conducted and what their results are.

Recommendation No. 8 Regulate the use of objection of conscience in healthcare facilities.

70. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR has noted that women, girls, and adolescents, as well as their families, face stigmatization, harassment, and abuse by healthcare personnel and third parties when they attend health centers to undergo a legal termination of pregnancy. In many cases, their privacy and confidentiality as users of a health service is also violated, as their data is leaked to the press or to religious groups and organizations that oppose legal termination of pregnancy. In this regard, the IACHR has held that States must guarantee that women, girls, adolescents, and all pregnant persons have access to reproductive health services, even in situations of conscientious objection in the health field, since conscientious objection is an individual decision and not an institutional or collective one[59]. Therefore, the IACHR recommended that clear regulations be established governing the exercise of objection of conscience, ensuring that it does not constitute a barrier to accessing reproductive health services, through measures to refer such situations to another medical professional.

Information on compliance

71. With regard to this recommendation, the State expressed the need to regulate the use of conscientious objection in health centers. Specifically, it held that the national regulatory framework is currently being analyzed as a basis for the development of a document on conscientious objection.

72. For its part, civil society referred to the Ombudsman's Office report "Beatriz"[60], which points out that in the Short-Term Social Security Management Entities there are no regulatory instruments or knowledge among health personnel regarding conscientious objection. Said report shows that, of the 13 agencies that were supervised, only three had a regulatory instrument governing it; furthermore, of the 22 interviews conducted with health personnel, only 10 stated that they were aware of conscientious objection and its implications for the provision of health services.

[59] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 190 and 194.
[60] Ombudsman's Office, Beatriz Ombudsman Report, March 18, 2025.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

73. The Commission appreciates the information provided by the State and civil society. It also notes that there is still no bill or other measure aimed at regulating conscientious objection within the regulatory framework. The IACHR thus expresses its concern regarding the negative impact that this may be having on the exercise of individuals' rights to access legal termination of pregnancy. It therefore considers that this recommendation is still pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

74. In order to move forward in complying with the recommendation, the Commission requests that the State report on the steps taken to adopt a regulatory framework governing objection of conscience.

Recommendation No. 9. Adopt a law to guarantee human rights, including DESCA rights, political rights, the right to family and filiation, for transgender, non-binary, and gender-diverse persons.

75. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR held that challenges remain in guaranteeing the rights of LGBTI persons, especially with regard to cultural change in society, recognition of diverse families, and the exercise of all rights by transgender, non-binary, and gender-diverse persons. The IACHR also expressed concern about the lack of legal certainty resulting from the partial unconstitutionality of the Gender Identity Law, which has led to a legal limitation on the exercise of all the rights of transgender, non-binary, and gender-diverse persons. In this regard, the IACHR urged the State to adopt legislative measures to guarantee the exercise of all human rights of transgender, non-binary, and gender-diverse persons, as well as to make legal changes to protect against discrimination and violence based on diversity of sexual characteristics[61].

Information on compliance

76. The State reported that it had developed a comprehensive human rights policy proposal which addresses the needs of people with diverse sexual orientations, gender identities, and gender expressions. This proposal was developed collectively, with the participation of LGBTI people in Bolivia, in three stages. The first stage consisted of compiling the needs of the LGBTI population in the cities of Santa Cruz, La Paz, and Cochabamba. The second stage consisted of technical roundtables with various State entities, and the third stage consisted of disseminating the principles and guidelines of the regulatory proposal. The proposed legislation has 28 articles, divided into three sections, which contain: general provisions; express recognition of the rights of LGBTI people; civil rights; economic and social rights of the LGBTIQ+ population; as well as amendments and additions to the Criminal Code, the Code of Criminal Procedure, and Law No. 807 on gender identity[62].

77. For its part, the Plurinational Electoral Body (OEP) referred to current regulations that promote and protect all Bolivian citizens, without discrimination. It also reported on the powers of the Civil Registry Service (SERECI), a registration body under the Supreme Electoral Court. Within the framework of these powers, the service is responsible for organizing and administering the registration of individuals, their marital status, parentage, and vital events, among other things, for the exercise of civil and political rights. It also referred to the procedure for registering same-sex and opposite-sex domestic partnerships, which is regulated by current national legislation.

[61] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 197, 204 and 205.
[62] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.

78. On the other hand, the State held that, with regard to the political rights of LGBTI persons, young people are involved, deliberated, and represented, since they have a substitute delegate and a full delegate with national coverage in the Plurinational Youth Council.

79. Likewise, the State reported that Bill No. 042/2024-2025, "Law on Compliance with International Human Rights Commitments," is currently being considered by the Human Rights Committee of the Chamber of Deputies of the Plurinational Legislative Assembly. This proposed legislation seeks to amend certain provisions of criminal law, specifically those concerning criminal offenses of discrimination, hate crimes, and crimes against humanity, so as to include sexual orientation and gender identity, among other factors, as motives for these crimes[63].

80. Civil society reported on several regulatory instruments[64], or local norms[65] which have been approved in recent years in favor of LGBTI people, seeking to guarantee the health rights of spouses, the electoral rights of transgender people, or ensuring the participation of LGBTI representatives in local discussion forums. Civil society also highlighted the creation of the National Mechanism for LGBTI Leaders, which promotes concrete actions to guarantee fundamental rights and has the support of entities such as the Ombudsman's Office.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

81. The IACHR appreciates the information provided and welcomes the participatory design process involving civil society and other public entities. It also commends the adoption of other regulatory, jurisprudential, and local measures that have been adopted during this time. However, the Commission takes note that, in its report, the State failed to mention gender identity and expression in the registration process. Furthermore, it remains attentive to the progress of the legislative projects reported.

82. This recommendation aims to establish a clear regulatory framework that recognizes and develops the legal rights of LGBTI individuals, guarantees their exercise, and clarifies the obligations of the various public entities that affect those rights. Therefore, considering that the proposed legislation has been developed through a participatory process, although it has not yet been approved and there is no information on progress as to its approval, the Commission concludes that the recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

83. In order to advance on the compliance of this recommendation, the Commission requests that the State report on the process of approving the law to guarantee human rights, including DESCA, political rights, family rights, and the rights of transgender, non-binary, and gender-diverse persons to establish parentage. It also requests information on whether this law has been presented to the legislative body and whether any steps have been taken to move it forward. Likewise, whether there are other legislative proposals that have been promoted or approved in this regard.

Recommendation No. 10 Design and implement a national public policy, with an intercultural and educational perspective, for the management of toxic substances, prevention, and remediation of environmental and human pollution.

[63] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September, 2025.

[64] Among them: Short-Term Social Security Supervisory Authority – ASUSS, Instruction INS/ASUSS/DGE/UADR No. 0002/2023 – E-ASUSS/2023-04907 of 2023; Civic Registry Service – SERECI, Instruction TSE-SERECI-DN No. 037/2024 of 2024.

[65] Municipality of Tarija-Cercado, Municipal Law No. 401/2024 of 2024.

84. On the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR expressed concern about studies confirming the presence of mercury used in artisanal and small-scale gold mining activities in indigenous communities, as well as in other communities that have no connection to gold mining, as a result of dietary exposure through the consumption of contaminated fish. Likewise, it held that the effects of environmental damage have had a particular impact on the rights of indigenous peasant and Afro-Bolivian peoples. Furthermore, illegal activities such as deforestation, fires, land encroachment, and the use of agrochemicals have threatened the environment and led to the displacement of indigenous and peasant communities[66]. The IACHR therefore urged the State to adopt measures to guarantee the rights of these communities through mechanisms for the prevention and remediation of pollution and the management of toxic substances.

Information on compliance

85. According to information reported by the State, the SAU-BO-L1237 Program on water security and environmental sanitation in urban areas is being implemented, and the Drinking Water, Solid Waste Sanitation, and Storm Drainage Program (PROASRED), which seeks to improve the coverage, quality, and efficiency of water and sanitation services in six departments (Potosí, Oruro, Santa Cruz, Cochabamba, and Pando). Both projects are expected to result in the construction of sanitary landfills and other infrastructure works to improve solid waste management[67].

86. With regard to forest fires, the Lucho Contra los Incendios (I fight Fires) Prevention Plan was implemented in June 2024, and Supreme Decree No. 5225 was approved in September 2024[68], which declared an ecological pause throughout the national territory, with the aim of protecting the environment, people's health, biodiversity, and the activities of the population amid the national emergency caused by forest fires. This decree was not regulated, and therefore never enforced.

87. In the area of health coverage and prevention, the State reported the existence of the Mercury and Health Plan and the "Technical Guide for the Prevention, Diagnosis, Treatment, and Surveillance of Mercury Poisoning in Bolivia"[69]. These instruments are being implemented through training and coordination workshops, in a decentralized manner, with the Departmental Health Services (SEDES).

88. In the area of education, the State mentioned that teacher training includes curriculum guidelines that address issues related to the efficient use of drinking water, climate change, deforestation, and the sustainable use of resources, among others. In this regard, the State held that the plans and programs of the regular education subsystem had been approved[70], which include early education in school-based community families, vocational community primary education, and productive community secondary education.

89. For its part, civil society agreed to highlight the approval of the "Technical Guide for the Prevention, Diagnosis, Treatment, and Surveillance of Mercury Poisoning in Bolivia" (see para. 86), which will enable the early prevention, detection, and reduction of damage suffered by people exposed to this metal[71].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

90. The IACHR recognizes the measures adopted by the State following the approval of the Report on Social Cohesion, in particular the adoption of the Technical Guide for the Prevention, Diagnosis, Treatment,

[66] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 212 and 216

[67] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

[68] Ombudsman's Office, Report on the human rights situation in Bolivia in 2024, paras. 132 and 135.

[69] Health Ministry, Ministerial Resolution 0142/2024 of April 9, 2024.

[70] Approved by Ministerial Resolution 1040/2022 of November 22, 2022.

[71] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 8.

and Monitoring of Mercury Poisoning in Bolivia, which constitutes an important public policy instrument for addressing the prevention of environmental and human contamination.

91. The IACHR notes that, in the fourth cycle of evaluation of the Bolivian State in the UPR, the need to adopt appropriate measures to protect the right to health and address the effects of pollution related to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources has been highlighted, and in particular, the use of mercury in illegal mining activities, through the implementation of the Minamata Convention on Mercury or the application of the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights[72].

92. In its report on the forest fires that occurred in Bolivia in 2024, REDESCA received information on the serious impacts of mining, particularly in the Bolivian Amazon, including the contamination of water bodies due to the intensive use of mercury, which confirms the relevance of the observations made in the country report. It was considered that both the fires of 2024 and the previous processes of deforestation and degradation, marked by changes in land use and the expansion of the agricultural frontier, along with mercury pollution from gold mining, are causing a loss of biodiversity, which must be addressed to guarantee the right to water, health, and a healthy environment for indigenous and rural communities, and thus ensure their cultural integrity[73].

93. With regard to having a nationwide public policy with an intercultural and educational focus, the IACHR identifies the need for policy instruments to be designed and implemented in accordance with the principles of a human rights approach, that is, in accordance with the principles of participation, equality and non-discrimination, accountability, and transparency of information, among others[74]. In this regard, the Commission needs to know whether the instruments reported have taken into account the priorities of historically discriminated against groups and whether their demands have been incorporated into the formulation of public policy.

94. Likewise, compensation for victims of environmental and human contamination requires an appropriate regulatory framework and judicial, administrative, and corporate due diligence powers to respond to the violation of their human rights. Therefore, the Commission expresses its concern about the lack of information on this component and requests that the State include it in the information to be provided.

95. Recognizing the actions undertaken by the State and taking into account that the IACHR requires additional information demonstrating the implementation of the principles of the human rights approach and adequate mechanisms for redress, the Commission finds that the recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

96. The Commission urges the State to report on the progress and results of the implementation of the projects reported (SAU-BO-L1237, PROASRED, Mercury and Health Plan), as well as others that may be relevant, and to include the coordination mechanisms that are being developed for their decentralized implementation. In addition, it requests that the State report on the mechanisms for participation, accountability, and transparency, with an emphasis on socially and environmentally vulnerable groups, so that the policy measures can be guaranteed to respond to their needs. Likewise, the IACHR requires the State to identify the measures adopted to guarantee access to judicial, administrative, and operational business resources, in order to facilitate timely and adequate mechanisms for redress.

[72] United Nations Organization (ONU), Human Rights Council, Report of the Work Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, A/HRC/59/7, March 19, 2025, paras. 122.153, 122.188, 122.264

[73] IACHR-REDESCA, Report on REDESCA's Working Visit to Bolivia, Impacts of Forest Fires on DESCA and Biodiversity, OAS/Ser.L/V/II.Doc.91/25, May 30, 2025.

[74] IACHR, Report on Public Policies with a Human Rights Approach: approved by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc.191/18, September 15, 2018, para. 61.

Recommendation No. 11 Design and implement a plan for access to drinking water without discrimination, in the medium term.

97. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR noted that access to water remains a matter of extreme concern and held that, in a context of climate emergency and prolonged droughts, water scarcity also affects rural plantations and livestock amidst increased agricultural demand. In this regard, the IACHR expressed concern about environmental challenges and access to water[75], and urged the State to take measures to address barriers and inequalities in access to safe water.

Information on compliance

98. The State reported that it has a "National Water and Sanitation Strategy for Rural Areas and Small Villages (ENRAS)"[76]. It added that project management for the provision of drinking water and basic sanitation at the national level is being done without any discrimination. The State also held that progress has been made in universalizing basic services through the Economic and Social Development Plan. As a result, the State noted that 95.5% of the population in urban areas and 57.7% in rural areas have access to safe water, representing an increase of 8.7 percentage points since 2020. Likewise, sanitation coverage in 2025 is 89.4% in urban areas and 52.2% in rural areas, representing an increase of six percentage points in the last five years. In this regard, the State stressed that the main challenges lie within the context of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), which are to be achieved by 2030[77].

99. Civil society reported on other government actions being conducted by the Ministry of Environment and Water. This ministry is promoting projects aimed at directly benefiting rural families in the municipalities of Coroico, La Asunta, Uyuni, and Cuevo. Progress was also mentioned in the construction of irrigation systems, dams, and other water projects in the municipalities of La Paz[78].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

100. The IACHR appreciates the data that allows for identifying the scope of water access coverage in society. It also recognizes the existence of the ENRAS aimed at rural areas, although it holds that this has been implemented since 2018, prior to the issuance of the Report on Social Cohesion.

101. During its recent visit following the fires, REDESCA identified programs intended to achieve universal access to drinking water and basic sanitation services in urban and rural areas, as well as the protection of water resources[79]. In turn, it received information showing that forest fires critically aggravated water shortages, affecting both access to water for human consumption and its availability for agricultural and livestock activities. It was highlighted that the massive loss of forest cover also caused interference in essential ecological functions, such as the ability of soils to retain water. Added to this is the contamination of water resources associated with the intensive use of agrochemicals and unsustainable agricultural practices, which

[75] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 217 and 220.
[76] Approved in September 2018.
[77] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[78] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 9.
[79] The Sectoral Program for Drinking Water for Small Communities, the Sanitation Program in Rural Areas and Small Communities, and Integrated Water Management in Urban Areas, Cities Program – Expansion and Improvement for Sustainable and Resilient Water Supply in Cities, Comprehensive Water Management in Urban Areas Program, MI AGUA Phase IV (Phase 1) Program, MI AGUA Phase IV (Phase 2) Program, "MI AGUA Phase V" Program, "MI AGUA Phase V BEI" Program, "Water and Sanitation Program for Intermediate and Small Cities," "Water and Irrigation Program for Bolivia," "Water, Sanitation, Solid Waste, and Storm Drainage Program," and "Lake Titicaca Sanitation Program".

has deteriorated water and soil quality and affected vulnerable aquatic ecosystems. This situation has had a direct impact on the health of communities, worsening the effects of the environmental crisis[80].

102. The Commission highlights the need to reduce gaps in access to water in rural areas, as well as in some cities with longstanding water access issues, such as Cochabamba[81]. These gaps have a particular impact on socially vulnerable groups, especially people living in poverty.

103. Recognizing the state actions that are being implemented and considering the need to approve a plan to address the gaps that still exist in access to water on equal terms, the Commission identifies that the recommendation is partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

104. The Commission urges the State to strengthen and expand measures to approve a comprehensive and universal drinking water access plan, as well as to continue reporting on progress in drinking water coverage, taking into account existing social gaps, the differentiated impact on populations living in poverty, and the essential elements of public services: their availability, accessibility, adaptability, and quality.

Recommendation No. 12 Provide adequate funding to establishments that guarantee public health services, with a focus on interculturality, gender, and intergenerational solidarity, taking into account traditional healing practices and medicines.

105. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR held that, although Bolivia has taken important steps to improve health and adopt a comprehensive approach, there are challenges in terms of infrastructure, the provision of medicines, specialized personnel, health technologies, and ambulances, as well as the absence of a national law and specific public policies on mental health. In this regard, the IACHR recommended that the State strengthen public health policy from an intercultural and gender perspective in order to guarantee universal access to health care for the population. It also urged Bolivia to adopt a perspective that guarantees the inclusion of persons with disabilities and eliminates barriers that prevent or hinder access to health services, information, and goods[82].

Information on compliance

106. The State reported on the validity of Law No. 1152 of February 20, 2019, which expands the beneficiary population that is not covered by Short-Term Social Security and is entitled to free health care, with the aim of moving towards a Single, Universal, and Free Health System, with sources of funding and State bodies responsible for administering the economic resources allocated to universal and free care for beneficiaries in first, second, and third-level public health facilities. In this sense, the State also mentioned that, by means of Ministerial Resolution No. 0251, dated June 30, 2021, it approved the "Regulations for the technical application and administrative and financial management of Law No. 1152, in order to apply the law at all levels of public health care and management"[83]".

107. According to information provided by civil society organizations, since the enactment of Law 1151, which establishes health as a universal and free right, Universal Health Insurance (SUS) has treated an average of 5.2 million patients with various pathologies annually. It was also mentioned that funding for care

[80] IACHR-REDESCA, Report on REDESCA's Working Visit to Bolivia, Impacts of Forest Fires on DESCA and Biodiversity, OAS/Ser.L/V/II.Doc.91/25, May 30, 2025, paras. 36-37 and 121.
[81] Report on Social Cohesion, para. 217.
[82] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 221 and 228.
[83] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September, 2025.

in tertiary hospitals has increased progressively, starting at Bs. 209 million in 2019 and reaching more than Bs. 618 million in the years leading up to 2024[84].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

108. The IACHR takes note that the information presented by the State predates the adoption of this recommendation. It also thanks civil society for the information provided, which helps to understand the evolution of the budget for tertiary hospitals until 2024.

109. The United Nations Committee on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights expressed concern about the insufficient funding of Law No. 1152 (Unified Health System) and the worsening structural weaknesses of the system as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic[85]. It also pointed out the persistence of barriers in access to health services for persons with disabilities and LGBTI persons, as well as the lack of a sufficient number of specialists with an intercultural approach[86]. Along the same lines, the UN in Bolivia observed a significant decline in immunization coverage as of 2018.

110. In turn, REDESCA highlighted that the forest fires of 2024 exposed the limitations of public health systems in the face of large-scale environmental crises and that, despite the efforts made, significant gaps remain in the capacity to respond to health emergencies caused by air pollution[87].

111. In view of this, and considering that the Commission needs more information to identify progress in complying with the recommendation, it is concluded that this is pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

112. The Commission urges the State to provide information on the resources being allocated to health care in order to address service needs, in line with approaches based on interculturalism, gender, and intergenerational solidarity, and taking into account traditional healing practices and medicines.

Recommendation No. 13. Adopt a policy and implementation plan that ensures domestic workers' access to social security, labor protection, and decent working conditions.

113. In the Report on Social Cohesion, REDESCA stressed the need to guarantee and respect the labor and union rights of workers in Bolivia, particularly those of different social groups in situations of greater vulnerability or historical structural discrimination. In this regard, the IACHR noted that, in general, female domestic workers receive wages below the national minimum wage, which prevents them from accessing their labor benefits[88]. Therefore, it was recommended that the State adopt measures to guarantee access to social security, labor protection, and decent working conditions for domestic workers.

[84] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 9.

[85] A/HRC/WG.6/48/BOL/2, of November 18, 2024, with reference to the Presentation of the United Nations team in the country, para. 38.

[86] United Nations, Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Concluding observations on the third periodic report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, E/C.12/BOL/CO/3, para. 50.

[87] IACHR-REDESCA, Report on REDESCA's Working Visit to Bolivia, Impacts of Forest Fires on DESCA and Biodiversity, OAS/Ser.L/V/II.Doc.91/25, May 30, 2025, paras. 37-38.

[88] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 232 and 239.

Information on compliance

114. In its SIMORE report, the State held that current regulations governing domestic workers and employers recognize labor rights such as wages, severance pay, vacation time, annual bonuses, and social security, and establish limits on working hours[89]. It also reported on the approval of Supreme Decree No. 5266[90], which allows domestic workers to set up their own employment agencies. Likewise, it underscored the development of a policy input document on the right to care, which considers the formation of care cooperatives for domestic workers as a strategy and even raises the possibility of changing their denomination to care specialists[91].

115. In turn, the State explained that since 2021, meetings have been held with relevant entities such as the Short-Term Social Security Supervisory Authority (ASUS), the National Health Fund (CNS), and the National Federation of Domestic Workers of Bolivia (FENATRAHOB), in order to comply with the regulation that establishes that salaried domestic workers must have short-term insurance.

116. Regarding training and certification, the State reported that in 2022, workshops have been held in the nine departments for salaried domestic workers, with a total of 572 participants[92]. It also highlighted the implementation of the skills certification project for female domestic and catering workers, which has been running as of 2013 in coordination with the Plurinational Skills Certification Service of the Ministry of Education, whose aim is to certify the skills of domestic workers in the workplace[93].

117. On the other hand, according to information provided by civil society organizations, neither the current regulatory framework nor the implementation mechanisms developed by the State would be sufficient to comply with the contents of ILO Convention No. 189, since there would be no State monitoring and control mechanism. Thus, for example, not all salaried domestic workers would have insurance from the National Health Fund (CNS)[94].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

118. The IACHR appreciates the information provided and takes note of the adoption of Supreme Decree No. 5266, which allows for the establishment of private employment agencies in general, which may apply to domestic workers. It also takes note of the activities reported by the State, although it holds that many of them took place before the visit and the issuance of the report.

119. As previously discussed, the Social Cohesion Report highlights the need to address the situation of domestic workers, as they earn less than the minimum wage, which hinders their access to social services such as social security, labor protection, and decent labor conditions. This is a consequence of the low wages paid in this sector and the high level of job precariousness. This may also contribute to the employment and underemployment gaps between men and women in Bolivia[95].

120. The State reported no measures taken after the visit or the issuance of the Report on Social Cohesion aimed at strengthening social security, guaranteeing labor protection, and creating mechanisms to achieve decent working conditions. In this sense, aware of the approval of Supreme Decree No. 4589 in 2021, which regulated the affiliation of domestic workers to the National Health Fund, the Commission would like to [89] Law No. 2450, of April 9, 2003, and its regulations, Supreme Decree No. 4589, of September 28, 2021.

[90] Approved on November 6, 2024 which amends Supreme Decree.º 1386, of February 6, 2013.
[91] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.
[92] Participants were reported with the following distribution: La Paz (57), Oruro (60), Cochabamba (60), Santa Cruz (48), Beni (159), Pando (69), Chuquisaca (39), Potosí (62), Tarija (48).
[93] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[94] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 10.
[95] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 232.

have more information that would allow it to identify progress in the implementation of this measure. Therefore, this recommendation is considered pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

121. The Commission requests that the State provide information on the scope of implementation of the current regulatory framework and on domestic workers' access to social security, labor protection, and dignified labor conditions. To this end, the State is requested to report on the updated coverage that the CNS has in the domestic workers sector since 2021, when its regulations were approved.

Recommendation No. 14 Adopt a public policy to promote access to quality education with an intercultural, gender, and disability perspective, with the aim of guaranteeing educational spaces under conditions of equality for people in particularly vulnerable situations.

122. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR emphasized that the right to education is a human right and an indispensable means for the exercise of other rights. Therefore, the IACHR held that it is essential for the State to adopt all necessary measures to guarantee access to education, bearing in mind the principles of progressivity and non-regressivity in order to achieve quality education, free from stereotypes, structural prejudices, and historical discrimination. In addition, human rights education must be provided in both formal and informal educational contexts, ensuring the effective professional training of teaching staff, particularly in matters of equality and non-discrimination[96].

Information on compliance

123. The State informed the IACHR of the adoption of public policies focused on access to quality education that respects and promotes interculturalism, gender equality, and the inclusion of highly vulnerable persons in the field of alternative education. In this regard, it held that regulations governing itinerant primary education for young people and adults in Alternative Education Centers (CEA) were approved in 2024[97].

124. In addition, the State reported on the public policy for comprehensive early childhood development called "With you from the beginning," which was subsequently approved by Supreme Decree No. 4980[98], in order to establish conceptual, strategic, and institutional guidelines for the comprehensive development of early childhood in the Bolivian State[99].

125. Likewise, the State informed of the approval of the "Curricular Guidelines for Inclusive Education for the Plurinational Education System"[100] for the benefit of students with disabilities, learning difficulties, and extraordinary talent. These guidelines are based on four educational principles established in the regulatory framework[101]: equal opportunity education, education with equal conditions, timely education, and relevant education. In this regard, the State also reported on the implementation of the "Curricular and Methodological Guidelines for Inclusive Education in Special Education," the Guide for Family Support in Inclusive Educational Processes, the Educational Guide for Families and Communities of Deaf Persons, the Educational Guide for Families and Communities of Blind or Visually Impaired Students, and the Program for Socio-Community Education at Home for Persons with Disabilities.

[96] Report on Social Cohesion, paras. 236 and 238.
[97] Approved by Ministerial Resolution No. 222/2024 of April 2, 2024.
[98] Approved on July 5, 2023.
[99] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[100] Approved in 2023.
[101] Law No. 070 of Education "Avelino Siñani - Elizardo Pérez, approved on December 20, 2010.

126. On the other hand, the State reported that the Draft Bill on the Exercise of Rights of the LGBTI Population was proposed in the 2024-2025 period, with the participation of organizations representing this population, which proposes the right to education free from stigma, discrimination, and violence, and which has not yet been passed. It reported that protocols for the prevention, detection, care, and punishment of harassment, bullying, and violence in the Plurinational Education System, motivated by sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or intersexuality, will be promoted and implemented at all levels and subsystems[102].

127. Finally, the State held that the statistics on "Enrolled Students with Disabilities in Regular Education" are updated annually, with breakdowns down to the level of educational unit and exchanges, taking into account gender, geographical area, and dependency. These data are collected through the Single Student Registry (RUDE) form and allow for the monitoring of each enrolled student. In this sense, information was also provided on the publication of the System of Educational Indicators for Special Education, which has a matrix of 79 indicators. Finally, it was mentioned that projects have been coordinated so that the Autonomous Territorial Entities incorporate accessibility features that allow the movement of people with temporary or permanent limitations.

128. For its part, civil society stated that no progress had been made in terms of free, intercultural, and non-discriminatory public education, as established by Law No. 070, since the 2021-2025 Sectoral Plan for Comprehensive Education Development had not been explicitly implemented in the curricula. In addition, it was noted that there is no law on sexual and reproductive rights which establishes responsibilities, policies, programs, and actions for all state bodies at different levels, and which addresses issues such as maternal mortality, comprehensive sexuality education, access to sexual and reproductive health, sexually transmitted infections (STIs), among other related topics[103].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

129. The IACHR thanks the State and civil society for the information provided and takes note of the actions reported for the implementation of existing norms, as well as other norms that are still in the process of debate and approval. In this regard, the actions aimed at generating disaggregated and updated information that allows for the targeting of inclusion strategies on the most vulnerable populations in society are worth highlighting. However, it should be noted that the standards reported predate the issuance of the Report on Social Cohesion, so it is essential to have more information on the implementation processes.

130. For its part, REDESCA pointed out that the fire emergency disrupted normal education in large areas of the country, violating the right of children and adolescents to receive a continuous, quality education. As a protective measure against air pollution, the education authorities suspended face-to-face classes in more than 1,200 schools. Although in some cases classes were taught online, this measure proved unfeasible in many rural areas due to the digital gap. In addition, some rural schools were used as temporary shelters for evacuees or as aid collection centers, which altered their educational function and prevented them from operating normally as educational centers[104].

131. It is important to remember that the Commission has stressed that education is a human right protected by Article 26 of the American Convention on Human Rights and recognized by Article 13 of the Protocol of San Salvador. It has also held that it is an indispensable means for the exercise of other rights[105]. With regard to the situation of education in Bolivia, the Report on Social Cohesion noted that there are difficulties in applying the designed curriculum when it has to be implemented in certain regional contexts, and

[102] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.

[103] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 10.

[104] IACHR-REDESCA, Report on REDESCA's Working Visit to Bolivia, Impacts of Forest Fires on DESCA and Biodiversity, OAS/Ser.L/V/II.Doc.91/25, May 30, 2025, paras. 142-146 and 175.

[105] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 236.

that discriminatory treatment against the LGBTI population, Afro-Bolivians, and persons with disabilities persists, sometimes caused by a lack of training and awareness among teaching staff[106].

132. It should be noted that the information presented provides insight into some of the progress made and mechanisms related to the barriers faced by the LGBTI population and persons with disabilities. In this regard, the Commission remains attentive to learning about the mechanisms for implementing these standards, the results of ongoing regulatory debates, and the impacts they have on the populations they seek to protect. Likewise, it is important to note that there are no measures aimed at guaranteeing equal access to education for the Afro-Bolivian population.

133. For all these reasons, the Commission considers that this recommendation is in a situation of partial compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

134. The Commission considers it important to clarify that, in order to move forward with this recommendation, the State must generate more information conducive to monitoring the implementation of the actions reported. It therefore requests further information on the monitoring actions taken in the implementation of the reported Principles and Guidelines, as well as details of the projects mentioned aimed at ensuring that Autonomous Territorial Entities incorporate accessibility aspects. Furthermore, the Commission requests that the results of the regulatory debates that have been taking place be specified, in particular the Draft Bill on the Exercise of Rights of the LGBTI+ Population. Finally, the Commission requests that the public policies aimed at protecting the right to education of the Afro-Bolivian population be specified.

C. Strengthening of democratic institutions

Separation of powers

Recommendation No. 15. Create and implement a strategic plan, through an internal program within each of the State bodies, to rebuild public confidence in State institutions, taking into account the separation and balance of public bodies.

135. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR noted that, despite regulatory recognition, the separation and balance among the different branches of government are in a state of institutional weakness, which particularly affects the judiciary. Allegations of interference, coupled with other institutional challenges, have led to a loss of credibility of State institutions before the public. For this reason, the IACHR urged the State to adopt effective measures to guarantee the separation of the branches of government so that they can exercise their constitutional functions, which will strengthen the population's confidence in democratic institutions[107].

Information on compliance

136. The Bolivian State sent information concerning ordinary, Agro-environmental, and constitutional jurisdiction, as well as that of the Council of the Judiciary[108]. First, the Plurinational Constitutional Court (TCP) noted that public confidence in constitutional jurisdiction depends on the proper management of the current caseload, which increased between 2018 and 2023. In this context, the development of the Institutional Strategic Plan (PEI) 2021-2025 was reported[109], which includes measures to optimize constitutional procedural management. Measures were also approved to implement technologies and innovations that reduce the procedural burden and guarantee access to justice within reasonable timeframes[110].

[106] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 233 and 234.
[107] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 249, 256 and 258.
[108] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

137. For its part, the Agro-Environmental Court mentioned that its 2021-2025 Strategic Plan for the Judiciary took into account the separation and balance of public bodies, as well as coordination between the bodies that comprise the judiciary.

138. In turn, the Council of Magistrates has mentioned the implementation of the "Policy for the timely provision of judicial officials to fill vacant positions in the Judiciary" ("Zero Vacancies"), which was approved by Agreement 52/2023, with the aim of reducing delays in justice caused by staff shortages and strengthening credibility in the judicial system[111].

139. The Plurinational Electoral Body (OEP) highlighted a series of actions aimed at strengthening the fulfillment of its electoral functions, in particular its powers for intercultural and gender-based democratic strengthening, which aim to develop and consolidate an intercultural democratic culture in the State and society[112]. Therefore, it reported on the PEI 2021-2025 project "Strengthening Intercultural Democracy and the Electoral Function of the Plurinational Electoral Body for Public Servants of the Plurinational State of Bolivia," which seeks to promote intercultural democracy and the electoral function of the OEP through various training processes aimed at public organizations. Reference was also made to the electoral regulations that entrust the Supreme Electoral Tribunal (TSE), through the Intercultural Service for Democratic Strengthening (SIFDE), with the preparation and dissemination of electoral statistics, as well as studies and research on intercultural democracy. The OEP also promoted awareness and reflection among citizens through various publications[113]. Likewise, emphasis was placed on the Observatories of Intercultural Democracy and Democratic Parity.

140. For its part, civil society pointed out that there was deep mistrust among citizens in the administration of justice, which showed the urgent need to implement structural reforms that would guarantee the independence, transparency, and efficiency of the Bolivian judicial system[114]. Some organizations reported that allegations of corruption involving judicial authorities had been made public[115].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

141. The IACHR welcomes the efforts of the Plurinational Constitutional Court to address the problem of procedural burden through measures that promote internal coordination and the use of technological tools. However, it is important to consider other efforts within the justice system that demonstrate the existence of true judicial independence, free from pressure and incentives of any kind. It also notes the lack of information regarding other State bodies, in particular other entities of the executive and legislative branches, which contributes to the crisis of trust by the population in its institutions.

[109] Plurinational Constitutional Court, TCP-AD-SP-027/2022, approved by Administrative Agreement of the Plenary Chamber, March 31, 2022.

[110] Plurinational Constitutional Court, TCP-AD-SP-005/2024, approved by Administrative Agreement of the Plenary Chamber, April 3, 2024.

[111] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.

[112] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.

[113] Publications of 12 issues of Andamios magazine and five issues of Tejedoras magazine on democracy and gender.

[114] Human Rights Community, ibid., p. 11.

[115] El Deber. Senior judge removed from office and courts ask the Constitutional Court to support judicial independence. 06/18/2025. Retrieved on 09/11/2025. Available at: https://eldeber.com.bo/pais/cae-un-alto-magistrado-y-tribunales-le-piden-al-tcp-que-apoye-independencia-judicial_519114/; Construir Foundation, ibid., p.s. 9-10.

142. With regard to judicial independence, various United Nations treaty bodies have expressed concern about this issue. On the one hand, in its fourth cycle, the Human Rights Council, in the Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), noted the importance of guaranteeing judicial independence and access to justice in the Plurinational State of Bolivia[116]. The Council also identified the need to implement the recommendations of the report of the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, regarding his visit to Bolivia in 2022, with the aim of intensifying the efforts necessary to guarantee the separation and balance of the judiciary[117].

143. Likewise, it is important to consider that several factors, such as problems in implementing judicial elections within the planned timeframe and difficulties arising from the extension of judicial terms, which have even occurred after judicial elections have been held, have had a negative impact on confidence in the judicial system. The IACHR has repeatedly expressed its concern about respecting the terms of office, as they are an important factor in the preservation of democratic institutional political processes[118].

144. For all these reasons, the Commission concludes that this recommendation remains pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

145. In order to advance compliance with this recommendation, the State is requested to provide further information on the measures adopted by the various State bodies aimed at rebuilding public confidence in institutions, and, in particular, to take into account the separation and balance between them. To this end, information is requested on the measures taken by the executive, legislative, and other judicial bodies. It is important that these strategic plans take into account the specific difficulties faced by each entity in its relationship with citizens.

Recommendation No. 16 Adopt a norm which equates the procedures for the prosecution of members of the TSE with those of authorities of the Judicial and Executive branches.

146. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR identified that since 2009 there has been a high degree of instability in the Supreme Electoral Court (TSE), which affects its ability to perform its functions independently. Since then, none of its members have completed their terms due to the lack of guarantees for the performance of their duties, allegations of interference attributed to the executive and legislative branches, and a series of resignations. During the political and social crisis of 2019, electoral officials at the national and departmental levels suffered human rights violations through a pattern of judicial persecution lacking objective motivation and applied without prior investigation. As a result, TSE judges were subjected to criminal proceedings for crimes committed in the exercise of their functions[119]. Unlike senior officials in the judicial and executive branches, they do not benefit from the special jurisdiction procedures for the prosecution of officials set forth in Law No. 044[120]. For this reason, the IACHR has stressed that members of electoral bodies must have guarantees for the free exercise of their functions without fear of reprisals and therefore require regulatory protection similar to that afforded to authorities in the judicial and executive branches.

[116] United Nations Organization (ONU), Human Rights Council, Report of the Work Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, A/HRC/59/7, March 19, 2025, para. 122.31.

[117] United Nations Organization (ONU), Human Rights Council, Report of the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, Diego García-Sayán, A/HCR/50/36/Add.1, May 11, 2022, para. 110.

[118] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 435.

[119] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 261 – 263.

[120] Law No. 044, Law for the Prosecution of the President and/or Vice President, High Authorities of the Supreme Court of Justice, Agro-Environmental Court, and Judicial Council, Plurinational Constitutional Court and del Public Ministry, passed on October 8, 2010.

Information on compliance

147. The State informed the IACHR that on May 14, 2024, the TSE submitted Bill No. 039/2024-2025, entitled "Law Amending Laws No. 044, Law for the Prosecution of the President and/or Vice President, High Authorities of the Supreme Court of Justice, Agro-Environmental Court, Council of the Magistrature, Plurinational Constitutional Court, and the Public Ministry, of October 8, 2010, and Law No. 018 of the Plurinational Electoral Body, of June 16, 2019," as a measure to bring the procedures for the prosecution of members of the TSE into line with those of the high authorities of the Judiciary and the Executive. However, no progress has been reported in the processing of this regulatory proposal[121].

148. For its part, civil society confirmed that only Bill No. 075/24 is available, which aims to incorporate the members of the TSE into the legal framework for their prosecution through a trial of responsibilities, provided for in Law No. 044[122]. In addition, it was noted that, despite the request to resubmit the bill for the 2025 legislative session, the Assembly dismissed it[123].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

149. The Commission notes the submission of the Bill, made after the issuance of this report. It also expresses its concern regarding the lack of progress in its consideration by the legislative branch.

150. It should be noted that the IACHR has expressed the need for an independent, transparent, and accountable electoral body as a requirement for guaranteeing free and fair elections pursuant to the rule of law[124]. In this sense, this recommendation aims to strengthen the role of the electoral body in Bolivia, in order to guarantee the independent action of its members and strengthen institutional trust. Therefore, noting that the process of approving the law has begun, but that this bill has not been processed, the Commission considers that this recommendation remains pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

151. In order to advance in compliance with this recommendation, the Commission requests that information be provided on the progress made in the processing, approval, and implementation of Bill No. 075-2024, which establishes a process for the prosecution of members of the Supreme Electoral Court, as well as other authorities of the executive and judicial branches. In this regard, it requests information on the processing of the bill before the Legislative Branch, as well as on the public debate forums used. It also requests information on whether there are other similar bills that have been introduced and are in the process of discussion, adoption, or implementation.

D. Protection of human rights defenders and other vulnerable groups

Recommendation No. 17 Design and implement a comprehensive policy to protect the life, integrity, and work of human rights defenders, including an early warning system to identify risks.

152. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR recognized that the defense of human rights in Bolivia has led to a series of social and political transformations throughout its history. Nonetheless, the work

[121] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August and September, 2025.
[122] Human Rights Community, ibid., p. 11.
[123] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 10.
[124] Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Nicaragua: Concentration of power and weakening of the rule of law, Adopted by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights on October 25, 2021, par. 67.

of defending human rights takes place in a context of political polarization that manifests itself in all spheres of society and has given rise to attacks against human rights defenders. In response to this, Bolivia does not have a comprehensive policy for the protection of human rights defenders. For all these reasons, the IACHR has urged the State to adopt, as a matter of priority, a comprehensive policy for the protection of human rights defenders and to guarantee the independence of organizations that defend these rights[125].

Information on compliance

153. The State informed the IACHR that, in the absence of a policy or regulation protecting the work of human rights defenders, the Office of the Ombudsman had drafted a bill entitled "Law on the promotion, protection, and respect of the rights of human rights defenders," which provides for the creation of a mechanism to apply protective measures in response to threats against the rights and/or activities of human rights defenders. This draft is currently being shared with third parties and will subsequently be submitted to the Plurinational Legislative Assembly[126].

154. Civil society reported that there would be no comprehensive policy for the protection of human rights defenders or an institutionalized early warning system. In this sense, state actions would be fragmented and reactive responses to situations of risk. In addition, it was reported that a civil society human rights observatory has identified an increase in violations such as criminalization, obstruction of unionization, and censorship of the role of human rights defenders. It noted that the number of cases recorded had risen from 51 in 2023 to 93 in 2024[127].

155. Civil society also held[128] that the Ombudsman's Office presented the "Protocol for the Defense of Human Rights Defenders and Civic Space as a follow-up to the Marrakesh Declaration"[129] whose fundamental aim is to establish procedures and strengthen its scope of action in the defense of human rights defenders. This document sets out a model national report that would be applied by national human rights institutions in the region.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

156. The Commission appreciates the information reported, in particular, on the draft bill and the Protocol prepared by the Ombudsman's Office. In this regard, the Commission has stressed that national human rights institutions must play a leading role in the creation and development of public policies for the protection of human rights[130]. Likewise, it has recognized the need for protection mechanisms to comply with various components, among which it is crucial that the regulatory framework clearly establishes the responsibilities of the different State bodies and entities in terms of protection.

157. On this point, the present recommendation aims to design and implement a comprehensive policy for the protection of the life, integrity, and work of human rights defenders, including an early warning system for identifying risks. However, the information provided does not allow for the identification of substantial progress, as the bill is in its initial stages, prior to its presentation to the legislative body. Thus, the Commission considers that the recommendation is still pending compliance.

[125] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 298, 301 and 306.
[126] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[127] UNITAS, Follow-up questionnaire on the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion, August 25, 2025.
[128] Construir Foundation, ibid., p.s. 10 and 11.
[129] Ombudsman's Office, Protocol for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders and Civic Space as a follow-up to the Marrakesh Declaration, December, 2023.
[130] Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Towards a comprehensive policy for the protection of human rights defenders, approved by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights on December 30, 2017, OAS/Ser.L/V/II, para. 253.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

158. In order to advance in compliance with this recommendation, the State is requested to report on the efforts made to design and implement a comprehensive policy for the protection of life, integrity, and work of human rights defenders, including an early warning system. To this end, it is requested that information be provided on the progress of the draft bill prepared by the Office of the Ombudsman, or on the work conducted by other entities, aimed at adopting and implementing it.

Recommendation No. 18 Develop the national population and housing census in a timely manner, within the deadlines and conditions approved in the Law on the Application of the Results of the Population and Housing Census, ensuring, as far as possible, in this or future census surveys, the inclusion of categories disaggregated by ethnic-racial origin, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, and disability.

159. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR noted the need to conduct a national population and housing census as a preliminary step to the upcoming electoral processes. In this regard, the IACHR emphasized the importance of state institutions having national resources to conduct censuses that respond to the phenomenon being measured, as well as the reason and purpose for doing so. Thus, the IACHR held that the intention of measuring a country's diversity is not only to identify the population demographically and focus on the situation faced by certain ethnic-racial groups, but also to help raise awareness and propose coordinated actions that contribute to overcoming obstacles and promoting the guarantee of their rights[131].

Information on compliance

160. In its report to the Commission, the State reported that on March 23, 2024, the population and housing census was conducted by the National Institute of Statistics (INE), and its results were published in August 2025[132]. This included questions on ethnic self-identification and a reference list of indigenous, native, and Afro-Bolivian nations and peoples, as well as questions on permanent difficulties, categorized by levels of difficulty, which allows for analysis of the prevalence of disability and differentiation of degrees of functional severity in the population. It should be noted that, for the adoption of questions on these two topics, inter-institutional technical committees were created for each one[133].

161. With regard to sexual orientation and gender identity, the State reported that these issues were not included in the census questionnaire, following consultation with LGBTI groups, due to the risk of underreporting and the need to train and raise awareness among those conducting the census interviews, all under a privacy protocol. To this end, mention was made of inter-institutional efforts and meetings with the participation of various LGBTI associations and groups, as well as the results of the "First national survey of people with diverse sexual orientation, gender identity, and expression in Bolivia," reflected in the "Ombudsman's Report Unequal before the law: results and analysis of the 1st virtual survey for people with diverse sexual orientation, identity, and gender expression in Bolivia," prepared by the Ombudsman's Office.

162. For its part, civil society confirmed the completion of the 2024 Population and Housing Census and the publication of its results and highlighted that there had been open access to the data, matrixes, and variables of the results[134].

[131] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 288.
[132] National Institute of Statistics (INE), Bolivia census 2024, https://cpv2024.ine.gob.bo.
[133] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.
[134] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 11.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

163. The Commission thanks the State and civil society for the information provided on the conduct of the census and the inclusion of some of the variables mentioned in the recommendation. It also notes that the recommendation included the phrase "as far as possible," recognizing that some of its elements will require gradual institutional adjustments or changes. This is based on the understanding that, historically, censuses in the region have not captured population data on all factors related to the diversity of human experience, such as gender identity, sexual orientation, and gender expression. With this understanding, the IACHR recognizes the efforts made by the State to coordinate with civil society organizations working for the rights of LGBTI persons in Bolivia in the decision-making process for the formulation of the recent census not to incorporate certain variables; and that this decision was made through a participatory process with LGBTI groups themselves. In addition, the Commission notes that the State has shown its willingness to learn about the needs of different groups through surveys such as that conducted by the Office of the Ombudsman. Therefore, the IACHR considers that this recommendation has been fulfilled.

E. Freedom of expression and access to information

Recommendation No. 19. Design and implement a public information campaign on respecting the legitimacy and independence of journalism as a way to strengthen the rule of law and public confidence in democratic institutions.

164. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR held that press organizations, associations, unions, and media outlets have reported that violence against journalists persists. It stressed, together with the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression (hereinafter "SRFOE"), that violence against journalists violates the rights to personal integrity, life, and freedom of thought and expression. Therefore, the IACHR urged the State to adopt a narrative that contributes to public deliberation and the prevention of violence against journalists. Likewise, the IACHR called for the legitimacy and value of journalism to be recognized consistently, clearly, publicly, and firmly, even when the information disseminated may be critical, inconvenient, or untimely for the interests of the government[135].

Information on compliance

165. The State informed the IACHR that it implemented strategic campaigns[136] with the aim of promoting and strengthening respect for the legitimacy and independence of journalistic work, within the framework of the provisions of Supreme Decree No. 4857[137]. It also announced the dissemination of informational material to raise awareness among society about the legitimacy and independence of journalism through several social media platforms[138]. Among the main problems and challenges in complying with this recommendation, the State identified the need to improve interaction with society in general and to consolidate a community of followers who actively participate and comment on the legitimacy and independence of journalistic work[139].

[135] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 308, 314 and 322.

[136] The State reported communications posted on Facebook aimed at greeting social groups and informing them of dialogue actions conducted between political authorities and society, https://www.facebook.com/675215007971860/posts/965433532283338, , https://www.facebook.com/675215007971860/posts/789678133192213, https://www.facebook.com/reel/540044161679138.

[137] Passed on January 6, 2023.

[138] The State reported communications posted on Facebook expressing appreciation for journalistic work https://www.facebook.com/100064501013960/posts/858533289640030/?mibextid=WC7FNe&rdid=RSbudmlNXnA0ymmo#, https://www.facebook.com/675215007971860/posts/825294986297194.

[139] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

166. For its part, civil society reported that there is no knowledge of public campaigns designed to promote respect for the legitimacy and independence of journalism. In this regard, the UNITAS Observatory reported that there were 150 violations of press freedom in 2024, particularly in the context of social conflicts, committed by agents of the National Police and by groups of private individuals. This trend continued in 2025, with 39 cases recorded between January and April, including acts of intimidation, obstruction of access to information, criminalization, and physical assaults. In addition, the organizations pointed out that up to 11 of the 17 acts of violence recorded by the Public Ministry itself had not been investigated[140].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

167. The IACHR welcomes the implementation of strategic campaigns and the dissemination of informational material on social media with the aim of raising awareness about the legitimacy and independence of journalism. However, the IACHR considers that the State must improve its communication with civil society organizations. At the same time, the IACHR expresses concern that the campaigns are not known to the organizations with the most experience in these matters. Therefore, it stresses the need for these campaigns and communications to be shared with civil society in order to broaden their dissemination. The Commission also expresses concern about the violations of press freedom that have been reported during this period. This is consistent with the information compiled for the Report on Social Cohesion[141].

168. The high level of polarization and stigmatization faced by Bolivian society requires special efforts by the State to defend journalistic work. For this reason, the IACHR highlighted the need for the State to adopt a public stance that contributes to preventing public deliberation and violence against journalists[142]. In view of the above, the Commission considers it essential that every effort be made to disseminate the campaigns reported above. In this sense, it is concluded that this recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

169. The Commission requests further information from the State on the content of the communication campaigns and the strategies implemented for their dissemination. It is essential that these campaigns involve the media and journalists in order to improve their reach and adjust the messages to the diverse needs of Bolivian society.

Recommendation No. 20. Adapt domestic law so that the protection of honor and reputation does not occur through the use of criminal law, in such a way that, while guaranteeing freedom of expression and of the press, any liabilities arising from freedom of expression are addressed in a legal sphere other than the criminal sphere.

170. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR held that it had received information regarding the prosecution of journalists who report on matters of public interest, including via criminal complaints. In this sense, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights has already held that resorting to judicial proceedings to file complaints for crimes of libel or slander, not with the aim of obtaining a correction, but rather to silence criticism of their actions in the public sphere, constitutes an abuse of judicial mechanisms and must be regulated and controlled by States. Therefore, when it comes to matters of public interest or mere offenses and allegations of offensive acts, the punitive response of the State, through criminal law, is not conventionally appropriate to protect the honor of public officials. In this context, the IACHR also urged the protection of the confidentiality of journalistic sources[143].

[140] UNITAS, Follow-up questionnaire, ibid.
[141] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 309.
[142] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 322.
[143] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 323, 329 and 330.

Information on compliance

171. The State reported that it is in the process of drafting a proposal for legislation that would exclude the protection of honor and reputation in the criminal justice system[144].

172. For its part, civil society confirmed that no reforms had been made to criminal legislation. It thus reported that the Press Law remains in force[145], which regulates the practice of journalism and protects freedom of expression, guarantees freedom from prior censorship, and establishes penalties for crimes committed in the press, such as slander or defamation against public servants. However, according to this law, these cases must be tried by press courts in cases of alleged offenses against public officials, but these courts are not currently in operation. Likewise, civil society reported that the press workers' union has ethics courts[146].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

173. The IACHR thanks the State and civil society for the information provided and notes with concern that criminal protection of individuals' honor and reputation remains in place, which has led to the prosecution of journalists based on complaints filed by public officials with the aim of silencing criticism of their actions in the public sphere[147].

174. It should be noted that the Commission has stressed that, although it is not recognized by the Constitution or the Press Law, the protection of journalists' sources of information, notes, and personal and professional files is an essential guarantee that enables journalists to perform their role without fear of retaliation[148].

175. In view of the continuing absence of legislation to adapt the domestic criminal justice system so as to prevent the judicialization of cases related to the protection of honor and reputation, while guaranteeing freedom of expression and of the press, and ensuring that any liability arising from freedom of expression is addressed in a legal sphere other than the criminal sphere, the Commission considers that this recommendation is pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

176. The Commission requests that the State adapt its criminal framework by eliminating crimes that may be generating judicial proceedings that affect the exercise of freedom of expression by persons engaged in journalistic work. To this end, it expects the State to report on progress in the regulatory proposals being worked on by the Executive Branch, as well as on any bills that may be processed by the Legislative Branch.

Recommendation No. 21. Design and implement a stimulus plan for the media to voluntarily adopt measures aimed at self-regulation, such as codes of ethics, the formation of press councils, the adoption of principles for ethical coverage, and complaint systems, among others.

144 Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

145 Approved on January 19, 1925.

146 Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 12.

147 Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 329.

148 Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 328.

177. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR received information on the division among journalists, reflected in mutual accusations of bias, discrediting and stigmatization of journalistic work within the profession itself, as well as complaints about the lack of representativeness and plurality in the press, among other issues. Thus, the IACHR identified that this situation hinders dialogue on the sustainability of journalism, critical self-reflection within the profession, and the adoption of self-regulatory measures. Likewise, the IACHR stressed the importance of the media having mechanisms that can be activated to resolve controversies and respond to citizens' complaints about news information[149].

Information on compliance

178. In its SIMORE report, the State held that the "Protocol for the informational treatment of depatriarchalization" is in force[150], which sets out a series of rules for the appropriate use of language and images when creating content and reporting, with the aim of combating patriarchy and promoting gender equality[151]. In addition, the State reported on the existence of Bolivia's National Code of Journalistic Ethics, which incorporates the principles recognized in international treaties on self-regulation[152].

179. For its part, civil society stated that it is not aware of any stimulus plan to promote self-regulation of the media or policies aimed at encouraging codes of ethics[153]. In addition, civil society reported that, in coordination with the National Association of Journalists of Bolivia (ANPB), there had been progress in consolidating the Press Courts at the departmental level. It was also mentioned that, as established in the Code of Journalistic Ethics, there is a National Press Ethics Court and press courts appointed by municipal councils. In this sense, civil society reported that the courts of Sucre and Potosí were inaugurated in May 2025. In the case of the courts of the city of Cochabamba, the call for applications was launched in May and July 2025 and is awaiting consolidation[154]. According to civil society, commitments have been made by departmental press associations, press workers' federations, and municipal councils to consolidate the Press Courts; however, there is no information on progress in other municipalities.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

180. The IACHR takes note that the regulations mentioned in both cases predate the IACHR's on-site visit and the issuance of the Report on Social Cohesion and its recommendations. Furthermore, these regulations require specific measures to meet the objectives of the recommendation.

181. On several occasions, the Commission has held that the role played by the media as privileged channels for public debate implies a series of good practices, such as investigative journalism, editorial independence, and objectivity as a self-regulatory ideal of the profession[155]. This is particularly relevant in a context where there are challenges for citizens to have access to balanced, pluralistic, and comprehensive information, especially in contexts of escalating social conflict[156].

182. Therefore, noting that no actions have been reported aimed at establishing a stimulus plan for the media to voluntarily adopt self-regulation measures, the Commission considers that this recommendation is pending compliance.

[149] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 333 and 336.
[150] Approved on November 28, 2022.
[151] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.
[152] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September, 2025.
[153] UNITAS, Follow-up questionnaire, ibid.
[154] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 13.
[155] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., par. 334.
[156] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., par. 332.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

183. The Commission urges the State to submit information that allows for verification of the development of a stimulus plan aimed at the media, considering the essential principles of the human rights approach in the design and implementation of public policies, that is, considering the principles of participation of those who perform journalistic work, transparency of information, accountability, and the principle of equality; with an emphasis on those groups that, for social, economic, or political reasons, find themselves in a situation of greater vulnerability[157]. In order to move forward with the development of this plan, the State is urged to promote opportunities for participation by potentially interested parties.

Recommendation No. 22. Adopt a law to guarantee the right of access to information, binding on all State bodies at all levels of their organization.

184. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR acknowledged that the Bolivian State had made efforts to increase transparency in public administration. However, as of the date of issuance of the report, the State did not have a regulatory framework to guarantee and regulate the right of access to information in all branches of government. Thus, for decades, civil society organizations have demanded the adoption of a law establishing procedures for exercising the human right of access to information. For its part, the SRFOE has monitored preparatory studies of bills and even legislative proposals under consideration in the legislative body. However, as no substantial progress has been observed regarding these proposals, the IACHR exhorted the State to take immediate measures to develop a regulatory framework[158].

Information on compliance

185. The State reported on the development of the Plurinational Policy to Combat Corruption, entitled "Towards digitized and transparent public management"[159]. The aim of this policy is to work on the digitization of information, interoperability, and coordination with organized civil society, as well as on training in ethical values and transparency and the promotion of integrity and ethics among public and private servants[160]. Thus, the Citizen Transparency Observatory has been implemented, which publishes parameterized and systematized statistical data from the various transparency information systems[161].

186. Furthermore, with regard to public accountability, the State noted that the "Regulations on the use and operation of the RPC module" and the amendment to the "Methodological manual for public accountability" were approved[162]. Said module is in operation since 2022 and constitutes a technological tool of the "Public Accountability System" (RPC), in which State entities publish information that is available for social control and civil society in general. These updates also allow the population to access information on foreign services (embassies and consulates).

187. Regarding information transparency, the State reported that, through the State Portal, the information published by public entities on their websites and institutionalized social networks has been standardized to facilitate the exercise of digital citizenship through mechanisms that allow access to public information and online interaction with the State and the population. Likewise, since 2023, relevant statistical data has been generated and published through the periodic publication of quarterly bulletins with content

[157] IACHR, Report on Public Policies with a Human Rights Approach: approved by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, ibid., para. 61.
[158] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 349, 351 and 354.
[159] Approved by Supreme Decree No. 4872, of February 2, 2023.
[160] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[161] Citizen Transparency Observatory.
[162] Approved by Resolution No. 090/2024 of July 8, 2024.

related to procedures, investigation mechanisms, prosecution, and punishment of possible acts of corruption, as well as the results of criminal proceedings.

188. With regard to the regulatory framework, the State reported on the suspension of the processing of the draft Transparency and Access to Public Information Act. This bill sought to guarantee timely, complete, and accessible access to public information, for which it established clear management mechanisms. The draft bill regulated the system of exceptions, the procedures for requesting information, and the administrative and judicial remedies to ensure the effective protection of this right. Bolivia also referred to Supreme Decree No. 5340[163], which aims to facilitate access to public information, procedures, and services of public entities and institutions through the gob.bo digital platform, and Ministerial Resolution No. 067/2025[164], which contains the minimum content requirements for institutional websites and/or web pages. Finally, it was reported that Bill No. 160/2023-2024 on Access to Information and Public Documentation is currently being processed, which recognizes access to information as a fundamental right and incorporates the principles of active transparency, maximum disclosure, and free access. In addition, it sets out clear obligations for public entities and creates the Commission for Access to Public Information (CAIDP) as an independent guarantor body.

189. For its part, civil society held that no progress has been made in the debate over Bill No. 160/2023-2024 in the Chamber of Deputies. It also stressed that the UNITAS Observatory recorded cases of impediments to access to information requested from public entities. In turn, other civil society organizations held that, although access to public information is constitutionally protected, there is no specific law[165].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

190. The IACHR thanks the State and civil society for the information provided and observes that the reported measures and actions seek to address the problems of transparency and access to information raised in the Report on Social Cohesion. At the same time, it expresses concern about reports from civil society that are consistent with the information contained in the Report. Although it welcomes the adoption of Supreme Decree No. 5340 and Ministerial Resolution No. 067/2025, it notes the lack of progress in legislative measures relating to the recognition of the right of access to information and the suspension of the processing of the draft Transparency and Access to Information Act.

191. It should be noted that, the importance of having an adequate regulatory framework governing the right of access to public information in accordance with international norms and standards in this area was highlighted in the fourth cycle of the Universal Periodic Review of the United Nations Human Rights Council conducted in Bolivia in 2025[166].

192. This recommendation calls for consideration of the adoption of a regulatory framework that guarantees the right of access to information, binds all State bodies and levels, and complies with international standards. It is therefore essential that this regulatory framework provide adequate protection over time and be binding on the various branches of government, which means that it must have legal standing within the regulatory system. Therefore, the Commission considers that, despite the approval of regulatory standards, it is necessary to resume discussions for the approval of a legal standard, and therefore the recommendation is pending compliance.

[163] Approved on February 26, 2025.
[164] Approved on May 16, 2025.
[165] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 13.
[166] United Nations Organization (ONU), Human Rights Council, Report of the Work Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, A/HRC/59/7, March 19, 2025, paras. 122.59, 122.60.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

193. In order to advance in the implementation of this recommendation, the Commission requests that the State adopt a legal framework that guarantees the right to access information and establish the relevant powers of the different State bodies.

Recommendation No. 23. Adopt a comprehensive regulatory framework for the distribution of state advertising, without discrimination and without interference in media editorial policies, and which encourages media outlets to be independent of state advertising policy.

194. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR specified that, despite the existence of a bill to guarantee the equitable allocation of official advertising, complaints continue to be filed regarding the awarding of advertising without pre-established and objective criteria, through processes that do not guarantee openness and non-discrimination in contracting mechanisms. This situation is further aggravated by the absence of mechanisms allowing for external control of advertising allocation. Therefore, the State must establish policies and allocate resources to promote media diversity and pluralism through indirect aid mechanisms or explicit and neutral subsidies, separate from government advertising expenditures. In this regard, the IACHR also recommended that Bolivia guarantee the right of individuals to access all information on official advertising under the control of the State[167].

Information on compliance

195. The State reported that it is in the process of proposing a regulatory framework for government advertising[168]. Likewise, it reported that allocation is made within the framework of administrative provisions that regulate the actions of public servants and guarantee their democratization, without discrimination or interference in the editorial line of the media[169].

196. For its part, civil society reported that state advertising had been used to economically harm media outlets that are critical of the government, which affects the employment situation of journalists. In this regard, the report "Journalists and Job Insecurity" has been issued, prepared by CEDLA and the UNITAS network. In addition, civil society organizations pointed out that Bolivia does not have specific regulations governing the official advertising distributed by the central government and subnational governments. Furthermore, for several years, various media outlets and journalism associations have denounced the use of advertising to influence editorial lines and as a means of "punishing" media outlets that are critical of and independent from state power[170].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

197. The IACHR observes with concern that no concrete measures have been adopted to establish a regulatory framework governing the distribution of government advertising and helping to address criticism regarding the lack of clarity and objectivity in the criteria for distributing government advertising[171], as well as the impact this has on the sustainability of journalistic work.

[167] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 355, 362 and 364.
[168] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[169] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September, 2025.
[170] Human Rights Community, Response to the questionnaire of recommendations of the "Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia", August 25, 2025, p. 13.
[171] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 357.

198. In response to this, the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression of the IACHR has insisted that state policy must guarantee citizens' access to information of public interest[172]. Likewise, he has highlighted his concern about the possible impact that an allocation of official advertising contrary to inter-American standards could have on the deployment and sustainability of journalistic work, as well as on access to information of public interest and on the editorial independence of the media, insofar as public money may end up rewarding silence and punishing criticism[173].

199. In the absence of a comprehensive regulatory framework for the distribution of government advertising that is non-discriminatory, does not interfere with media editorial policies, and encourages the media to be independent of government advertising policy, the Commission considers that this recommendation is pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

200. The Commission requests that the State report on progress in adopting its regulatory framework, as well as on the measures that have been taken to strengthen external control of advertising distribution. In this regard, it is important to understand the regulatory framework that establishes the objective and transparent criteria that determine how these benefits are granted and which media outlets are granted access.

Recommendation No. 24. Implement a national public policy for universal internet access; digital literacy; and training on the impact of automated messaging tools, automated publishing, bots, and advertising on social media.

201. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR identified that, although the Bolivian State has made progress in promoting information and communication technologies (ICT), the digital gap and the lack of digital literacy policies between the Internet-using and non-Internet-using populations persist, marked by socioeconomic, geographic, educational, gender, and cultural inequalities. The report also includes complaints about the use of fake accounts to influence opposition groups or government websites. In response, the IACHR stressed that states must prioritize multisectoral internet governance and ensure the active participation of the private sector, technical experts, civil society, and academia. In this regard, it urged that efforts to increase internet connectivity should be accompanied by educational measures aimed at developing civic skills with a view to democratic coexistence and a human rights approach[174].

Information on compliance

202. The State reported the approval of the 2030 Digital Agenda[175], following a systematic study of the digital transformation needs of different sectors; and which has a pillar called "Infrastructure and Connectivity," whose objective is to promote universal access to telecommunications services in rural and socially important areas through the expansion of terrestrial and satellite infrastructure[176].

203. In this regard, according to the State, this instrument incorporates actions such as the installation of 29 Training and Technological Innovation Centers (CCIT) in the nine departments, training called "RobóTICas" in the areas of electronics, programming, and robotics, which has reached a total of 4,578 beneficiaries between 2021 and 2024; the Bootcamp Chicas Appventureras program, which is based on the development of applications and programming skills and trained 2,166 girls and adolescents between 2023

[172] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 361.
[173] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid. para. 363.
[174] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 339, 345 and 348.
[175] Supreme Decree No. 5367, approved on April 2, 2025.
[176] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

and 2024; the digital inclusion program for older adults, which seeks to develop skills in the use of digital tools for communication and to prevent isolation, and which has reached 222 older adults; the digital violence prevention workshop, which trained 751 women; and, finally, the First Global Bolivia program, which encourages Bolivian youth to develop robotics skills and in which, in 2024, a total of 3,496 students and five young people from rural and urban areas participated.

204. Similarly, the State reported on the implementation of academic and university outreach projects aimed at promoting universal access to the internet and digital literacy, especially in teacher training colleges located in rural areas. This includes training courses in Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) designed to develop teachers' technological skills, covering topics such as digital literacy, digital citizenship education, programming and robotics, and innovation, among others[177].

205. In addition, the State reported that the Plurinational School of Public Management (EGPP) is evaluating the incorporation of a short course on digital literacy into its regular academic offerings. The course is aimed at public servants and the general public, with an emphasis on those who lack knowledge about the use of digital technologies.

206. For its part, civil society held that the State is implementing a digital literacy plan that seeks to train more than 1.7 million people, mainly in rural and peri-urban areas, and certify 200,000 pre-military youths as instructors. In turn, it reported[178] that, according to the National Survey Connecting Bolivia [179], 90% of people in urban areas have access to the internet and 88% in rural areas[180].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

207. The IACHR thanks the State and civil society for the information gathered and welcomes the approval of the 2030 Digital Agenda, which seeks to address the digital divide and encourage digital literacy. It also welcomes the training programs for teachers in rural schools that have been reported. Likewise, it takes note of the statistical information reported that shows the digital gap in Bolivia.

208. The aim of this recommendation is to support the implementation of a policy designed to eliminate the causes of the digital divide, especially in areas or groups that are disconnected. At the same time, actions must be implemented to strengthen the capabilities of these actors. It is therefore important to note that the Digital Agenda 2030 was approved in May of this year and is currently in the process of being implemented. Recognizing the relevance of this measure and awaiting the results that may be obtained during its implementation, as well as receiving information on the other components of the recommendation, it is considered that this recommendation is partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

209. To advance compliance with this recommendation, the Commission requests that the State report on the progress of the actions contained in the 2030 Agenda, emphasizing the impact they have on the population with the greatest barriers, both in terms of access and capacity building. Likewise, the Commission will be on the lookout to learn whether the digital literacy course aimed at public servants at the Plurinational School of Public Management was successfully implemented.

[177] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September, 2025.
[178] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 13.
[179] UN Women, Connecting Bolivia National Survey, April 2025.
[180] Human Rights Community, ibid., p. 14.

F. Social protest and use of force

Recommendation No. 25. Investigate, prosecute, and, where applicable, punish, in an appropriate and timely manner, the excessive use of force by law enforcement officials in the context of social protests, including those responsible for the chain of command.

210. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR noted that in various situations of protest and social unrest, serious human rights violations occurred, such as excessive use of force and violation of the right to life and liberty, in a context of widespread sociopolitical violence characterized by polarization, hostility, and hatred in social relations, which were not adequately investigated or punished[181]. In this sense, the IACHR held that States must exhaust all existing measures for the peaceful resolution of conflicts, as well as dialogue and negotiation, complying with the principles of legality, legitimacy, absolute necessity, and proportionality in the use of force[182].

Information on compliance

211. The State reported that between January and September 2024, three cases were opened for non-compliance with established procedures for the use of force, considered disciplinary offenses under the Bolivian Police Disciplinary Regime[183]. It was also noted that the nine Departmental Directorates of Internal Police Investigation (DIDIPI) nationwide were instructed to take the necessary measures to comply with this recommendation[184]. These measures include regular training sessions and lectures for DIDIPI staff [185].

212. The Commission was informed of Draft Bill No. 343/2023-2024, which regulates the disciplinary regime of the Bolivian Police and is currently before the Chamber of Deputies.

213. On the other hand, civil society reported that the lack of investigation and punishment would follow a pattern of impunity in cases of police violence in contexts of social protest, especially against journalists and demonstrators, which would have been reflected in closed or ongoing judicial proceedings[186]. In addition, civil society mentioned that it would have difficulties accessing official information on adequate and timely investigations, proceedings, or sanctions related to the excessive use of force by law enforcement officials in contexts of social protest, including those responsible in the chain of command.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

214. The Commission appreciates the information provided and takes note of the internal measures that have been adopted by the police, as well as the ongoing judicial proceedings to determine responsibility in cases of human rights violations committed through the excessive use of force during social protests. However, it is concerned about the lack of information to determine whether these proceedings have made significant progress in recent months and whether they are significant in relation to the total number of cases involving serious human rights violations.

215. It is important to remember that the Inter-American Court of Human Rights has ruled in various cases on the role of state agents in the context of social protests, applying the contents of the Code of [181] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 8, 312, 370-374.

[182] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 382.
[183] Law No. 101, Disciplinary System of the Bolivian Police, approved on April 4, 2011.
[184] Deputy Ministry of the Interior and Police, Fax Memorandum 06/2024, issued on May 2, 2024.
[185] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[186] UNITAS, ibid., p. 5.

Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials (Code of Conduct).[187], and the contents of the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials (Basic Principles)[188]. In addition, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights held that States have an obligation to guarantee security and maintain public order; to which end, if necessary, they may use force[189]. In this way, States must comply with: i) adequately regulating the use of force; ii) training and educating their security forces; and iii) establishing adequate mechanisms to control and verify the legitimacy of the use of force[190]. Therefore, the regulatory framework must adapt its content to generate appropriate prevention and punishment mechanisms when there is disproportionate use of force, within the framework of due process, and guarantee transparency and civilian control over these actions.

216. Considering the need for more information to understand the scope of investigative and disciplinary measures regarding the excessive use of force by law enforcement officers in the context of social protests, including those responsible for the chain of command, the Commission considers that this recommendation is pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

217. In order to move forward with this recommendation, the Commission requests further information on the initiated, ongoing, and closed proceedings in the context of law enforcement officials being prosecuted for human rights violations in the scenario of social conflicts. In this sense, it is considered relevant to have a registry that collects complaints filed with administrative or judicial entities aimed at addressing situations related to the disproportionate use of force. For the IACHR, it is essential that mechanisms for registering and monitoring the use of force and the actions of security institutions be institutionalized. In this regard, coordination mechanisms can be created between civil society actions, such as citizen observatories, and the complaint mechanisms of entities such as the Ombudsman's Office.

Recommendation No. 26. Develop and implement a national public policy on conflict management by public officials and security forces, including training in the use of force; prohibition of illegal, arbitrary, or mass detentions; dialogue, negotiation, and peaceful resolution of conflicts in demonstrations; and development of plans to respond to possible disturbances with minimal risk to the life and safety of all persons involved.

218. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR noted the various structural changes that have taken place in Bolivia through mechanisms of freedom of expression and association, through which the population has organized to demand rights. However, in the context of citizen mobilizations, there have been reports of excessive use of force by state agents at different levels, arbitrary detentions, clashes between individuals and with the police, as well as attacks on the life and integrity of protesters, which affect the exercise of the right to protest. In this regard, the IACHR has reiterated to the State that it must guarantee, protect, and facilitate public demonstrations, even when they cause a certain degree of disruption to daily life, and that it must manage them from the perspective of dialogue[191].

Information on compliance

219. The State reported on the approval of the "National Retraining Plan No. 02/2024"[192], which constitutes a training and retraining tool for different General Directorates, National Directorates, and Departmental Commands. Thus, training and education have been developed in the undergraduate units of the [187] UN General Assembly, Resolution 34/169.

[188] Eighth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders. 1990.
[189] IHR Court, Case of Women Victims of Sexual Torture in Atenco vs. Mexico, Preliminary Exception, Merits, Reparations and Costs, Judgment of November 28, 2018, Series C No. 371, para. 159.
[190] Ibid., para. 161.
[191] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 369, 370 and 381.
[192] Bolivian National Police, Circular Memorandum Fax No. 02/2024, approved on March 7, 2024.

National Police Academy (ANAPOL) and the Higher Technical Faculty of Police Sciences (FATECISPOL), as well as postgraduate training at the Higher Police School. Similarly, the "Mcal. Antonio José de Sucre" Police University offers academic programs that integrate human rights and public order management issues. Practical simulations were also mentioned, which involve exercises to prepare students for real situations without escalating conflicts[193].

220. On the other hand, it was reported that there is an agreement between the Ombudsman's Office and the Bolivian Police to provide ongoing training to police officers on the following topics: human rights as applied to police work, gender perspective in the work of the Bolivian Police, prevention of violence and torture, and racism, discrimination, and decolonization[194]. In this context, between April 25 and May 31, 2024, a series of workshops on women's human rights and police action in conflict situations was held, with the participation of 100 police officers from different police units in the department of La Paz.

221. In addition, training workshops on conflict management and mediation have been organized with the aim of strengthening public servants' capacities to analyze and address social conflicts, in order to improve and ensure timely management of conflict transformation and resolution. In this regard, a workshop was held on "Improving technical skills for monitoring, managing, analyzing, and early warning of conflicts, based on experience"[195], with the participation of officials from several entities, such as the Ombudsman's Office, the National Institute for Agrarian Reform (INRA), and the Ministry of Justice and Institutional Transparency.

222. Civil society reported that there is no evidence that the State has developed or implemented a national public policy on conflict management. It also reported that, although fewer social conflicts were reported in 2024 than in other years, individuals were allegedly injured in social protests provoked by members of the Bolivian Police and Armed Forces during 2024 and 2025; these events would demonstrate the persistence of repressive practices by the Police and Armed Forces[196].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

223. The Commission takes note of the training and education opportunities reported, aimed at both members of the Bolivian Police and public servants. It also welcomes the development of cooperation agreements between the Ombudsman's Office and the Bolivian Police, aimed at strengthening the role of human rights within the institution.

224. In the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), the Bolivian State accepted recommendations aimed at strengthening the training of law enforcement officials on the legal limits to the use of force and at guaranteeing respect for and protection of the right to peaceful assembly and demonstration.

225. The IHR Court, using the Basic Principles on the Use of Force, established that the use of force by security forces in the context of social protests must comply with the principles of legality, absolute necessity, and proportionality, which implies a differentiated and progressive use of force[197]. These principles have also been highlighted by the IACHR in its thematic report "Protest and Human Rights," which argues that the approach to protest by law enforcement agencies should be aimed at facilitation rather than containment or confrontation; therefore, dispersal is justified only to protect people and constitutes a legitimate end in itself[198].

[193] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[194] Cooperation Framework Agreement between the Ombudsman's Office and the Bolivian Police, signed on April 2, 2024.
[195] Conducted on August 9, 2024.
[196] UNITAS, Follow-up questionnaire, ibid., p. 5.
[197] IHR Court, Case of Women Victims of Sexual Torture in Atenco v. Mexico, Preliminary Exception, Merits, Reparations and Costs, Judgment of November 28, 2018, Series C No. 371, para. 162.
[198] IACHR, Protest and Human Rights. Standards regarding the rights involved in social protest and the obligations that should guide the state's response, OAS/Ser.L/V/II.IACHR?RELE/INF.22/19, September 2019, para. 112.

226. In that sense, the Commission notes that, while strengthening institutional coordination mechanisms and capacity-building mechanisms as described above responds to the needs raised by the recommendation, it is essential to be able to meet its objectives by designing plans for responding to and managing social conflicts based on the protection and operationalization of the principles of legality, absolute necessity, and proportionality. Likewise, these mechanisms for dialogue, negotiation, and peaceful dispute resolution should be designed in a participatory and transparent manner, and their implementation should be strengthened. To this end, the design, approval, and implementation of a public policy that articulates these actions remain pending. Consequently, it is considered that this recommendation is partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

227. In order to comply with this recommendation, the State is requested to report on the adoption of a nationwide public policy involving the strengthening of the capabilities of the security forces, the prohibition of illegal detentions, the peaceful resolution of disputes, and the development of plans for intervention in situations of unrest. In addition, it is requested that the State provide details on the implementation of these capacity-building mechanisms that are being developed, in particular, the scope of these mechanisms, their content, the number and profile of the people participating in these spaces, and whether there are follow-up mechanisms to verify the implementation of their content. Likewise, measures to develop response plans for situations of unrest should be detailed, as well as the design and implementation of measures for negotiation and peaceful resolution of disputes, taking into account the principles of legality, absolute necessity, and proportionality in the use of force.

Recommendation No. 27. Design and implement a protocol on the management of social protest from the perspective of dialogue, involving the highest authorities of the State, and underscoring the duty of public officials and leaders to refrain from stigmatizing protests or those who participate in them.

228. The IACHR, in its Report on Social Cohesion, identified that the narratives of social leaders, public officials, and public figures have contributed to creating a general environment that is hostile to citizen participation and dialogue. These narratives tend to be amplified, becoming instruments that contribute to a climate of polarization and incitement to violence. In this sense, the IACHR has held that public leaders must take into account a series of obligations when expressing their opinions, especially in situations of greater social conflict. This obligation is reinforced in the case of public officials, as they are in a position to guarantee rights[199]. In particular, the IACHR urged the adoption of measures to promote dialogue and prevent public leaders from stigmatizing the exercise of protest and those who participate in it.

Information on compliance

229. According to information provided by the State, the Vice Ministry for Coordination with Social Movements and civil society is responsible for addressing and monitoring social unrest. To this end, it prepares reports based on analysis of news items that reflect latent conflicts or signs of future unrest. These reports are submitted to the competent authorities for analysis and action. In addition, the Office of the Ombudsman has a "Protocol for Ombudsman Intervention in Social Conflicts"[200], focused on dialogue and negotiation to peacefully settle social protests[201].

230. Likewise, the State reported that the Bolivian Police have a "Manual for operations to maintain and restore public order"[202], and has announced the implementation of Operations Plan No. 03/2024, entitled "Maintenance and restoration of public order," with the aim of managing political and social conflicts that may

[199] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 385 and 389.
[200] Ombudsman's Office, The Art of Managing Conflicts, Approved on 2020.
[201] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[202] General Command of the Bolivian Police, Administrative Resolution of No. 0266/17, approved on September 19, 2017.

threaten democratic order and citizen security. The plan's goal is to prevent, control, and restore public order, protecting the human rights and physical integrity of all those involved, including protesters, civilians, and law enforcement forces. The plan also seeks to guarantee respect for civil rights and prevent escalations of violence in order to maintain order and democracy in Bolivia.

231. In turn, information was provided on the creation of the "National Retraining Plan No. 02/2024," focused on maintaining and restoring public order. This plan stresses the importance of preparing police personnel to handle situations of social conflict and civil unrest. Continuous training aims to optimize police operations, ensure respect for human rights, the differentiated use of force, and the management of tactical and logistical resources. In this regard, 8,793 police officers of various ranks have received training in the differentiated use of force, negotiation, and mediation. In 2024, 37 training sessions were held, and 4,368 police officers were trained on the Manual for Operations to Maintain and Restore Public Order.

232. Finally, the Ombudsman's Office reportedly participated in the implementation of four multiparty dialogues, involving 400 representatives from various social sectors, with the aim of identifying issues of national and local interest and preventing conflicts through joint management with the competent authorities.

233. For its part, civil society pointed out that it is unaware of any protocol having been designed and implemented on the management of social protest from the perspective of dialogue, although it noted that in 2024 a bill regulating social protest was presented to the Chamber of Deputies[203]. This law seeks to regulate the exercise of the right to protest, establish the duties and rights of protesters and the general public, as well as the responsibilities of the competent authorities, and impose punishments on protesters in the event of excesses during social demonstrations[204]. It should be noted that this bill has not been discussed in either chamber of the Plurinational Legislative Assembly[205].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

234. The Commission appreciates the information provided by the State and civil society organizations on both regulatory instruments and capability-building mechanisms. However, the Commission notes that these instruments were approved prior to the Commission's on-site visit and the issuance of the Report on Social Cohesion.

235. It is important to remember that the purpose of this recommendation is to ensure that public servants, including the highest authorities of the State, can support the management of protests from a perspective of dialogue, which implies avoiding the stigmatization of protesters. To this end, mechanisms must be created to raise awareness among public servants and authorities and to avoid rhetoric that stigmatizes people exercising their right to protest. In this regard, it should be noted that the bill is still in its initial stages, as it is currently under review by the legislative body. Therefore, this recommendation is considered as pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

236. In order to advance in compliance with this recommendation, it is important that the Commission be informed of the progress of the bill or other bills aimed at strengthening dialogue in addressing social conflicts, urging high-level authorities, public officials, and leaders to refrain from stigmatizing protests or those who participate in them. The regulations that are promoted must guarantee the exercise of the rights of all persons participating in demonstrations and clearly establish the responsibilities of the authorities and public servants who play a role in them. Likewise, more information is requested on the awareness-raising and capacity-building mechanisms that are implemented, aimed at strengthening the dialogue skills of the authorities.

[203] Chamber of Deputies. PL-066/2024. Available at https://diputados.gob.bo/wp-content/uploads/2024/12/PL-066-2024-2025.pdf

[204] UNITAS, ibid., p. 6.

[205] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 16.

G. Administration of justice

Recommendation No. 28. Strengthen the legal framework to ensure the inclusion of objective criteria for the pre-selection, election, and appointment of judicial authorities in the courts and the Judicial Council, taking into account citizen participation and transparency, as well as independent external audits. The State must guarantee that selection processes are conducted within the timeframes and in the manner provided for in the Constitution, so as to avoid extensions of mandates. This is essential for building public confidence in the justice system and democratic institutions, as well as for safeguarding democratic institutional political processes.

237. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR noted that the selection process for senior judicial officials has faced a series of challenges due to political fragmentation, which has prevented the formation of consensus in the legislative body. Since the first electoral process, judicial elections have raised concerns and rejection among several sectors of society. Furthermore, these electoral processes have taken place in the context of deep political polarization in the country. Thus, the IACHR held that it is imperative for the State to ensure that appointments and selections, including pre-selection, are not made or perceived as decisions based on political motives. To this end, it is essential to comply with the principles of prior dissemination of calls for applications, deadlines, and procedures; to guarantee equal and inclusive access for candidates; to allow for the participation of civil society; and to evaluate candidates based on merit and professional capabilities[206].

Information on compliance

238. The State informed the IACHR that it had passed Law No. 1549[207], whose aim was to regulate the judicial elections held on December 15, 2024. Likewise, it stressed that Law No. 1513 had been approved in June 2023[208], which was declared unconstitutional by the Plenary Chamber of the Plurinational Constitutional Court through Constitutional Judgment 060/2023.[209].

239. For its part, civil society claimed that the judicial elections took place in December 2024, although they were originally scheduled for 2023 and then October 2024, due to the social unrest that arose during that period[210]. The judicial elections were held with the participation of 94 candidates, despite the challenges rejected after the elections. The election day was attended by national and international observation missions, such as the OAS and the Inter-American Union of Electoral Organizations, among others. Voter turnout reached 82%, and for the first time since 2011, valid votes (64.29%) exceeded blank and invalid votes (35.71%)[211].

240. Likewise, civil society emphasized that the Citizen Initiative for Monitoring Justice participated in the citizen oversight of the pre-selection process for candidates for judicial elections, which showed that the electoral processes and the establishment of criteria for the pre-selection of said candidates

[206] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras. 406, 428, 434 and 435.
[207] Plurinational Assembly of Bolivia, Law No. 1549, "Transitory law for the 2024 judicial elections", approved on February 6, 2024.
[208] Plurinational Assembly of Bolivia, Law No. 1513, "Transitory law to guarantee the pre-selection process of candidates for the formation of the Plurinational Constitutional Court, Supreme Court of Justice, Agro-Environmental Court, and Council of the Judiciary, approved on June 5, 2023.
[209] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[210] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 16.
[211] Supreme Electoral Court, Public information supplement N° 3, December 29, 2024.

have been strengthened in each of the calls. In addition, certain organizations held that the electoral process has not been fully completed, which has led to the extension of the terms of some magistrates, who continue to administer justice in high-level positions[212].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

241. The Commission takes note of the regulatory framework in place for the preselection, selection, and appointment of candidates. In that sense, the IACHR acknowledges the completion of the process, albeit belatedly, and highlights the high level of citizen participation. However, the Commission expresses its concern that this was only partially implemented, allowing four of the magistrates to continue exercising their functions through an extension granted by the court itself. In addition, the lack of a legal structure prior to the electoral process that clearly sets out the objective criteria for the election of magistrates was highlighted during the recent electoral process.

242. In its 2024 annual report, the IACHR noted that judicial elections were held on December 15, 2024, after several deferrals by the ALP and the TCP. However, it highlighted however, that the judicial election process was biased following the TCP's decision to declare the call for magistrates for the Plurinational Constitutional Court void in the departments of Pando, Cochabamba, Santa Cruz, Beni, and Tarija, as well as the call for magistrates for the Supreme Court of Justice in the departments of Beni and Pando, which extended judicial terms and generated public rejection.

243. The IACHR promoted a process of technical cooperation with Bolivia's Plurinational Legislative Assembly regarding the pre-selection procedure for candidates for the courts and the Judicial Council of the Judiciary. This process was based on inter-American standards for the formation of judicial authorities and involved the participation of the State through various institutions. The cooperation included the preparation and submission of a document systematizing the inter-American standards relevant to the justice sector, as well as the drafting of a technical note on the merit criteria for the evaluation of candidates, which was the subject of discussions between the ALP and the Country Rapporteur.

244. According to information from the Plurinational Electoral Body, citizen participation in the electoral process held at the end of 2024 reached 82% of the population. Unlike the judicial elections of 2011 and 2017, on this occasion valid votes exceeded blank and invalid votes, reaching 64.29% of the total. However, the partial suspension of the elections and the new extension of the terms of office of the TCP representatives from Pando, Cochabamba, Santa Cruz, Beni, and Tarija, and of the TSJ (Supreme Court of Justice) from Beni and Pando, generated public disapproval as they were considered a threat to the rule of law and confidence in the justice system. In this context, the TCP (Plurinational Constitutional Court) announced criminal and disciplinary sanctions against magistrates who judge against this ruling, which was pointed out by justice operators as a violation of their judicial independence. This situation has increased social mistrust in the instrumentalization of ongoing court cases.

245. In order to strengthen confidence in the judiciary, it is necessary that selection processes and terms of office comply with the deadlines and powers established in the legal system. It is therefore essential that elections to the courts and the National Council of the Judiciary be held on time and in full. The Commission therefore considers that this recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

246. In order to comply with this recommendation, the State must strengthen the legal framework to ensure the inclusion of objective criteria in the pre-selection, election, and appointment of judicial authorities in the courts and the Judicial Council. This should be done through laws that apply generally to all judicial candidate selection processes, without the need for immediate debate prior to each electoral process, as this encourages excessive politicization. Likewise, attention should be paid to the part of the recommendation that requires independent external audits of these processes and to the conclusion in paragraph 437 of the country report, which invites the State to review the processes for appointing senior court officials and the Judicial Council, in order to determine, within the framework of the constitutional order, any reforms necessary to guarantee election based on objective parameters; and to avoid the extension of the terms of office of authorities who should be elected through democratic processes.

[212] Civil society has held that the plenary chamber of the Plurinational Constitutional Court is comprised of nine judges, four of whom were elected in the 2024 judicial elections.

Recommendation No. 29. Initiate, in the immediate term, a comprehensive reform of the judicial system, with broad citizen participation, following up on the various summits that have been held on this issue, taking into account the structural demands that have been noted by the IACHR since 2006. This reform should include:
I) Strengthening the judicial career and the Public Ministry by allocating enough resources to address the temporary nature of judicial and prosecutorial positions within a reasonable time frame, as well as strengthening due process guarantees in disciplinary proceedings against justice operators.
II) the optimization of budget allocation and execution for the judiciary, taking into account parameters such as annual investment, equipment, infrastructure, and personnel needs, transparent accountability, and attention to deficiencies in execution.
III) Reviewing existing programs aimed at reducing procedural delays in order to identify deficiencies, optimize them, and ensure their sustainability over time.
IV) The effective implementation of a comprehensive policy involving the judiciary and the executive branch to reduce the excessive use of pretrial detention, in accordance with international standards, as well as to guarantee access to and the effective application of prison benefits and pardons, with attention to the situation of older persons deprived of liberty who may be eligible for such legal remedies.
V) Guaranteeing effective judicial remedies, with the support of an independent international mechanism that ensures the application of international standards against arbitrary detention and the application of due process in each of the criminal prosecutions that may have political motivations.
VI) Strengthening indigenous and peasant jurisdiction through a reform of the Jurisdictional Demarcation Law—after consultation with and consent of the peoples—; the allocation of sufficient budget for its operation; the effective implementation of the perspective of interculturality in all ordinary courts.
VII) Mitigation of barriers to access justice, including physical, linguistic, knowledge, and cultural obstacles.
VIII) Creation or reform of laws to optimize the justice system, including the adoption of a law on agro-environmental jurisdiction procedures and the adaptation of crimes of terrorism, financing of terrorism, and torture to objective criteria, in accordance with international standards for criminal typification.

247. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR held that Bolivia's justice system faces historical structural challenges that affect judicial independence. These challenges have been present throughout different administrations. Initial efforts by different state administrations have not been sufficient to address the causes of the structural problems, which has led to their worsening, and weakened their continuity[213]. Consequently, it urged the State to implement comprehensive judicial reform.

Information on compliance

248. The IACHR received information from the State corresponding to several bodies: the Judiciary, the Agro-Environmental Court, and the Plurinational Constitutional Court (TCP)[214], the Public Ministry and the Judicial Council.

[213] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 425.
[214] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

249. With regard to the judicial career (paragraph I), the State reported that the Judicial Council has the authority to regulate and supervise the judicial career, including the admission, tenure, evaluation, and dismissal of judges. To this end, in 2024 it approved the "Manual for the Evaluation and Tenure Subsystem in the Judicial Career"[215]. Thus, it was indicated that the judicial career is made up of qualified officials who applied at the time to the public calls for applications issued by the Council of the Magistracy or who were assessed for access to the position after graduating from the State School of Judges. Currently, the agro-environmental jurisdiction has a total of 63 career judges, representing 100%. As for the ordinary jurisdiction, there are 1,134 career judges throughout the country, equivalent to 97%. According to the State's report, the transitional situation of judges is an exception that does not require the extraordinary allocation of economic resources[216].

250. The State's General Prosecutor's Office (FGE) reported that, in order to have career prosecutors, public calls for applications have been implemented to recruit career prosecutors through selection processes conducted through internal and external calls for applications. The recruitment process begins with a preparatory online course, a merit-based competition, a written knowledge test, and a personal interview, and concludes with an initial training program run by the State Prosecutors' School (EFE). Performance evaluations and continuous skills updating through specialized training are also applied. From 2020 to 2025, seven initial training programs have been developed for entry into the prosecutorial career, with a total of 381 lawyers graduating. As of August 2025, 432 prosecutors were reported to be in office.

251. With regard to the optimization of budget allocation and execution (section II), the Supreme Court of Justice issued two plenary agreements[217] which expanded the powers of investigating judges, sentencing judges, and sentencing courts in matters of anti-corruption and violence against women, thereby optimizing human resources and leading to an effective reduction in procedural delays. For its part, the Public Ministry noted that, during the 2024 fiscal year, 95% of the allocated resources were used, all of which were destined to cover the operational and logistical needs of all the substantive areas that comprise the institution, the nine Departmental Prosecutor's Offices, the Forensic Investigation Institutes (IDIF), and the School of State Prosecutors.

252. With regard to procedural decongestion (section III), on May 9, 2024, Jurisdictional Agreement TCP-AJ-SP-04/2024 was approved for the "Optimization of Procedural Management for the Resolution of Freedom Actions." Likewise, the TCP noted that, through Institutional Strategic Action No. 1, the organization of jurisdictional processes and procedures was established as a priority in order to progressively move toward digital justice. In addition, the Public Ministry reported that instructions are issued to prosecutors to comply with due diligence and that, with the aim of modernizing and optimizing technological means (ROMA Ecosystem, the digital portfolio, digital citizenship, and electronic notifications), tools have been implemented that allow for monitoring from the receipt of complaints, criminal investigation, and technical-scientific analysis of evidence to the conclusion of the case. These digital tools allow prosecutors and other parties to the proceedings to monitor procedural deadlines, issue timely responses to requests, and streamline the processing of criminal proceedings, thereby contributing to the improvement of the judicial system.

253. With regard to indigenous and peasant jurisdiction (section VI), the State reported on the "Protocol for intercultural action by judges, within the framework of egalitarian legal pluralism" and the processing of the draft law on "Amendment of Law No. 73 on Jurisdictional Demarcation," which is still under discussion in the Legislative Assembly. In addition, it reported on the approval of the Strategic Plan for the Care, Protection, and Sustainable Development of Vulnerable Indigenous Nations and Peoples 2024–2026, as a [215] Judicial Council, Manual for the Subsystem for Assessment and Permanence in the Judicial Career,, approved in May, 2024.

[216] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.
[217] Plenary Agreement No. 22/2024 of February 28, 2024, on "Extension of powers to Criminal Investigation Courts in matters of anti-corruption and violence against women" and Plenary Agreement No. 28/2024 of April 30, 2024, on "Extension of powers to Criminal Sentencing Courts and Sentencing Tribunals."

methodological tool to promote the implementation of mechanisms and actions to protect Indigenous Peoples in Situations of High Vulnerability.

254. With regard to barriers to access to justice (section VII), the Judiciary's Policy on Access to Justice – Short Term 2024 and Projection 2025[218]- aims to improve access to justice, strengthen conciliation in court, and promote a culture of peace. Likewise, the Plurinational Constitutional Court reported on ruling SCP 0258/2024-S1, which urges the Public Ministry to guarantee access for persons with disabilities[219] to infrastructures.

255. Finally, the State noted that bills to amend various regulatory bodies are currently being debated in the Assembly[220], and undergoing the legislative process. As for the adoption of an agro-environmental procedure (section VIII), the Agro-Environmental Court drafted the "Agro-Environmental Procedural Code Bill," which is currently in the socialization phase. With regard to constitutional justice, the Plurinational Constitutional Court presented bills to strengthen its framework for action. Likewise, it noted that bills aimed at modifying the crimes of terrorism (Bill No. 292/2020-2021) and torture (Bill No. 042/2024-2025) are still pending.

256. For its part, civil society highlighted, regarding the judicial career (point I), the implementation of inspections in prosecutors' offices, with the aim of verifying compliance with procedural goals and deadlines, as well as decongesting criminal proceedings at the national level[221]. Civil society confirmed that the number of prosecutors nationwide had increased from 595 in 2023 to 701 in 2025 and reported the creation of 34 prosecutor's offices located in urban and rural areas. With regard to the Judiciary, in 2024, 107 calls for judges would have been issued and executed under the "Zero Vacancies" program, which would have strengthened the judicial service through the institutionalization of 99.82% of judges in the ordinary and agro-environmental jurisdictions[222].

257. As regards financial resources (section II), civil society noted that for the 2025 fiscal year, there was an increase in the budget for most institutions in the justice sector (Prosecutor's Office, SEPDEP, TCP, SEPDAVI, MJTPI), except for the judiciary, which saw a reduction despite having declared a state of emergency in March 2025 and requested an urgent budget adjustment from the State[223]. In this request, the Judiciary recognized the need for a minimum budget equivalent to 3% of the General State Budget (PGE) and that this should be established by law, so as not to depend on budget allocations and thus contribute to guaranteeing judicial independence[224].

Institution	A. Budget 2024 in Bs	B. Budget 2025 in Bs	Percentage of comparative increase 2024-2025 (B-A)/A
Judicial Body	1125494637	1054225817	-6,33%
General Prosecutor's Office	245223233	294486306	20,09%
SEPDEP	11143675	14299149	28,32%

[218] Plenary Chamber of the Judicial Council, Agreement No. 74/2024 of February 19, 2024.

[219] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, September, 2025.

[220] Civil Code and Commercial Code, Civil Procedural Code, Criminal Code, Law No. 1008 on Coke and Controlled Substances, Code of Criminal Procedure, Code of Families and Family Procedure, Code on Children and Adolescents, Law on the Judiciary, Code of Labor Procedure, Law on Social Enforcement Proceedings, and Law on Abbreviated Labor Proceedings for Reinstatement.

[221] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 18.

[222] 1201 male and female judges, leaving only one temporary judge.

[223] Supreme Court of Justice. Judicial Body declares budget emergency and demands immediate economic adjustment from the State.

[224] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 17.

Plurinational Constitutional Court	75616388	77500676	2,49%
SEPDAVI	5320582	6801239	27,83%
Ministry of Justice and Institutional Transparency	80758228	84003571	4,02%
State Judges' School	8139557	8557754	5,14%
TOTAL	1551696300	1539874512	-1%

Source: Report on the state of Justice in Bolivia 2024

258. Likewise, civil society held that most judges have a program to combat procedural delays (section III), such as the Civil Chamber, for example, which has had a management policy called "Zero Delays" since 2019, thanks to which cases have been managed without procedural delays for six years[225]. On the other hand, it held that there is currently no comprehensive policy to reduce pretrial detention (section IV)[226].

259. With regard to legislative proposals (section VIII), civil society mentioned that the Draft Environmental Procedure Code was presented in August 2022; however, it has not yet been processed by the legislature. Regarding the crime of torture, civil society explained that, through the Citizen Coalition Against Torture, it promoted the enactment of Bill No. 080/2023-2024, which was approved by the Senate and is currently being processed by the Chamber of Deputies[227].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

260. The Commission welcomes the measures that have been implemented following the publication of the Report on Social Cohesion. The IACHR has already emphasized that one of the main challenges facing Bolivia's ordinary justice system is the lack of a judicial career path that guarantees the stability and professional growth of civil servants. This is reflected in the temporary appointments that have affected job stability[228].

261. It should be noted that this recommendation is in line with those incorporated into the Universal Periodic Review of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, which emphasized the need for transparency mechanisms in the appointment of judges, the provision of sufficient resources for the optimal functioning of the judiciary, the implementation of a judicial reform plan to remove obstacles to access to justice, the intensification of oversight and public scrutiny to ensure judicial independence, impartiality, and integrity of the judiciary; adopting and implementing laws which guarantee equal access to justice and comprehensive support services for victims of violence, with particular attention to vulnerable groups, and having an updated legal framework to prevent, investigate, punish, and redress torture[229].

262. In that sense, the Commission welcomes the progress made in strengthening the judicial and prosecutorial careers, with significant percentages in the hiring of judges and prosecutors, and it is essential that 100% be achieved in the shortest possible time. Likewise, measures have been adopted to address procedural congestion in the various courts. On the other hand, the Commission expresses its concern about the lack of adequate budgetary allocation for the justice system, which has been highlighted by the judiciary itself. In addition to the above, no progress has been reported in the implementation of an independent international mechanism to ensure fair trial and due process in cases of arbitrary detention in political contexts. Furthermore, no concrete steps have been taken toward the approval of regulations that would help improve

[225] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 19.
[226] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 20.
[227] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 20.
[228] IACHR, Social cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, January 20, 2024, OAS/Ser.L/V/II, p. 158.
[229] United Nations Organization (ONU), Human Rights Council, Report of the Work Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, A/HRC/59/7, March 19, 2025, paras. 122.16 - 122.30.

the application of pretrial detention, strengthen indigenous justice, address barriers to access to the justice system, or optimize the justice system through the adoption of a law on agro-environmental jurisdiction procedures and the adaptation of the crimes of terrorism and financing of terrorism to objective criteria, in accordance with international standards for the classification of crimes. Therefore, the Commission considers that this recommendation demonstrates partial compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

263. With the aim of continuing to implement this recommendation, the State is requested to adopt the necessary measures and report on compliance with the following recommendations: I) progress in eradicating the transitory nature of judicial operators and prosecutors, and measures to strengthen disciplinary measures for such persons, taking into account due process guarantees; II) update the budget allocation for the justice system, considering the parameters of annual investment, equipment, infrastructure, and personnel needs, transparent accountability, and attention to deficiencies in execution; III) additional measures adopted to reduce the procedural burden and its sustainability over time; IV) measures to implement a comprehensive policy involving the judicial and executive branches to reduce pretrial detention and the application of prison benefits; V) measures to guarantee effective judicial remedies and to conduct cooperative actions with the aim of implementing an independent international mechanism that guarantees the application of international standards against arbitrary detention and due process in criminal prosecutions that may be politically motivated; VI) to report on the status of legislative proposals, in particular the bill to amend Law No. 73 on Jurisdictional Demarcation and the bill on the Agro-Environmental Procedural Code; VII) measures to mitigate barriers to access to justice, including physical, knowledge, and cultural barriers; and VIII) progress in the adaptation of criminal offenses, as well as in the advancement of Bill No. 080/2023-2024 on the crime of torture, among others related to these issues.

Recommendation No. 30. Investigate, prosecute, punish, and provide redress, with due diligence, for cases of serious human rights violations, as well as to adopt public policies and legal reforms that include measures to prevent recurrence.

264. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR stated that serious human rights violations remain pending prosecution, punishment, and redress. It therefore held that the State must adopt effective measures to end impunity for human rights violations. In addition, the State must promote channels for dialogue and active listening with organizations representing victims of human rights violations, in order to understand and adequately address their various demands through effective redress policies[230].

Information on compliance

265. The State held that the Public Ministry guarantees the course of investigations, deploying all necessary and essential actions to identify the alleged perpetrators and determine their involvement and responsibility, conducting this work independently and without external influence, in an impartial manner. It also emphasized that investigations are coordinated with the operational arm of the Bolivian Police, with experts and other entities, such as the Institute of Forensic Investigations (IDIF)[231].

266. With regard to ongoing investigations into human rights violations, the Public Ministry issued instructions to the departmental prosecutors' offices where the investigations identified in the GIEI's Final Report are being conducted. In this sense, reference was made to the Extraordinary Analysis Commission for Implementing the Recommendations of the GIEI Report, which holds regular meetings with departmental prosecutors and the commissions of prosecutors in charge of investigations related to human rights violations that occurred between September 1 and December 31, 2019. In addition, the President of the Supreme Court of Justice was sent[232] information on the cases included in the GIEI report so that prioritization measures can be adopted, and the continuous development of the oral hearings and the processing of the corresponding procedural appeals can be guaranteed.

[230] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras.476 and 483.
[231] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, August, 2025.

267. According to civil society, no measures were adopted to prevent recurrence, nor were specific public policies implemented to prevent serious human rights violations. In addition, the organizations held that there are still challenges to be addressed with regard to compliance with the recommendations of reports by international organizations and national mechanisms, such as the Truth Commission, which was responsible for investigating serious human rights violations during the period of military dictatorships. In this regard, it was held that, in the absence of a comprehensive system of reparations, the risk of impunity would persist, and therefore they consider it a priority to adopt measures to comply with this recommendation, as it remains an outstanding issue for the victims of the serious human rights violations of 2019 and the dictatorships[233].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

268. The Commission values the information provided by civil society and the State regarding the measures adopted by the Public Ministry to prioritize cases related to serious human rights violations, as well as those initiatives aimed at strengthening coordination with other relevant actors in the process. However, the IACHR stresses that the efforts of a single entity, such as the Public Ministry, are not enough to effectively guarantee people's right to a fair trial, particularly in cases of human rights violations. Therefore, it is necessary to know the efforts made by other entities of the Judiciary—such as the first instance courts, the public defender's office, the high courts—and, where appropriate, by other entities participating from the Executive Branch, the Institute of Forensic Investigations, or the Mechanism against Torture.

269. On this point, the IACHR recalls that there is a state duty to investigate the facts, which is an obligation of means and not of results, but which must be assumed by States as a legal duty in its own right and not as a mere formality doomed beforehand to being futile, or as a mere management of particular interests, depending on the procedural initiative of the victims or their relatives, or on the private contribution of evidence[234]. In other words, the analysis of compliance with this recommendation is not aimed at determining whether responsibilities were assigned in specific cases, but rather at analyzing whether the State has taken all measures consistent with its obligations in the context of human rights violations. Furthermore, such justice must be delivered in a timely manner, and therefore unjustified delays that prevent victims from accessing a mechanism for redress violates people's rights to a fair trial.

270. Based on the foregoing, the IACHR expresses its deep concern about the procedural provisions of August 2025 that have led to the annulment of the judicial proceedings for the serious human rights violations that occurred in Sacaba and Senkata in 2019. The IACHR considers that the annulment of these proceedings represents a dangerous setback in the search for timely and adequate justice for the victims of these serious human rights violations. This situation compromises compliance with the recommendations of the GIEI Report – Bolivia[235] and the Bolivian State's international obligations to investigate, punish, and provide reparations to victims, which also contributes to their revictimization.

271. Consequently, considering that the measures reported are timely but insufficient to address a complex problem that requires coordination among various entities, and given the impact that the lack of [232] Public Ministry, nota FGE/RRMM Nº 655/2025.

[233] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 22.
[234] IHR Court, Case of Maldonado Vargas and others Vs. Chile, Merits, Reparations and Costs, Judgment of September 2, 2015, Series C No. 300, para. 75.
[235] GIEI Bolivia, Final Report on the acts of violence and human rights violations occurred between September 1 and December 31, 2019, July 23, 2021.

comprehensiveness has on the development of judicial processes and victims' access to justice, it is considered as pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

272. This recommendation covers three actions on the part of the State. Therefore, in order to move forward with this recommendation, the State is requested to report on: a) the measures adopted by the Judiciary, the Public Defender's Office, the Bolivian Police, the IDIF, as well as other institutions that have an impact on the development of judicial proceedings. It is also requested that information be provided on situations that have led to disproportionate delays in judicial proceedings related to human rights violations; b) the design and implementation of public policies of non-repetition aimed at guaranteeing the State's obligations to investigate, prosecute, punish, and provide reparations in cases of serious human rights violations. These may be aimed at strengthening the justice system, coordination between entities, and access to adequate and timely information and evidence; c) the presentation, debate, approval, and implementation of legal reforms aimed at non-repetition, designed to adapt criminal offenses, strengthen the powers of public entities responsible for investigating, punishing, and providing redress to victims of human rights violations, and guarantee the functional and administrative independence of the justice system. With regard to reparations, a legal norm should be adopted which clearly establishes the right to reparation for victims of human rights violations, as well as the specific mechanisms and powers necessary to this end.

Recommendation No. 31. Create and implement a national public policy to reduce prison overcrowding, including unified and efficient information management to identify the status of sentence compliance and expedite release orders.

273. In the Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR held that, although concrete progress has been made, challenges remain in the area of prison conditions. In this regard, it stressed that the lack of attention to the increased use of pretrial detention and the challenges in accessing alternative measures have led to alarming rates of overcrowding that endanger the lives and integrity of persons deprived of liberty. In this regard, it urged the State to correct the excessive use of pretrial detention by reducing its use and duration and ensuring that this measure is used only in exceptional cases and is limited to the principles which govern it[236].

Information on compliance

274. The State reported on various measures taken to reduce prison overcrowding [237]:

- Decongestion days in prisons throughout the country with the aim of reducing the prison population of people in pretrial detention, offering alternatives to the judicial process, such as summary proceedings, conditional suspension of sentences, conciliation, and the criterion of opportunity. In 2024, 1,677 people throughout the country benefited from this initiative.
- Review of cases and implementation of measures to improve the legal situation of persons deprived of liberty, performed by the Departmental Courts of Justice, the General Directorate of the Prison System, and the Plurinational Public Defense Service (SEPDEP).
- Reform and expansion of prison infrastructure, including the construction of prison complexes in the cities of Santa Cruz, Cochabamba, and Beni. It is also foreseen that prison infrastructure be reformed and expanded throughout the country.
- Prison identification systems, such as the "ED-4 Digital State Prison System," will contribute to the automated and centralized management of information on persons deprived of liberty.

[236] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., paras 500 and 512.
[237] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.

This system has been implemented in several prisons throughout the country and allows for the identification of the status of sentences served and the expediting of release orders.

275. For its part, civil society held that in August 2025, Instruction No. 19/202 was approved, ordering the implementation of prison decongestion days nationwide to verify compliance with pretrial detention[238], in coordination with the Public Ministry, SEPDEP, and the Departmental Directorates of the Penitentiary System, among other public and private entities. It should be noted that this has been questioned by inmates, since initially it only benefited three prisoners who have a public profile[239].

276. Likewise, it was noted that on March 25, 2025, Presidential Decree No. 5137 was enacted, granting amnesty and pardon on humanitarian grounds, although there is no information on the prison population that benefited from this measure. Along the same lines, in August 2025, the Executive approved the Draft Bill on Pardon and Amnesty, which must be submitted to the Legislative Assembly for consideration. In this regard, civil society held that, although palliative measures were approved to reduce prison overcrowding, their results are unknown.

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

277. The IACHR thanks the State and civil society for the information reported. In that sense, the recommendation aims to create and implement a national public policy to reduce overcrowding of prisons. Therefore, it aims to improve the management of information on sentences and release orders, as well as to evaluate the pretrial detention system used in judicial proceedings, which increases the prison population without criminal convictions.

278. It therefore welcomes actions aimed at strengthening technology and infrastructure and improving information on persons deprived of liberty, although the Commission considers that these actions should be accompanied by the adoption of a public policy to organize and strengthen them, so as to respond to the needs of persons deprived of liberty. It observes that progress has been made toward achieving the objective of the recommendation. Likewise, it should be noted that the granting of pardons and amnesties is not a strategy capable of having a significant and sustainable impact on prison overcrowding. Therefore, considering the information provided, the Commission concludes that this recommendation has been partially fulfilled.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

279. The Commission requests that steps be taken to adopt and implement a national public policy aimed at reducing prison overcrowding. In this regard, this policy should include an information system that allows for monitoring changes in the prison population, defining the actions to be taken to achieve its goal, and establishing mechanisms to measure its impact. Furthermore, the Commission requests that the State report on how it has reconciled its obligations to investigate human rights violations with the measures of freedom and amnesty that have been approved.

Recommendation No. 32. Design and implement a public policy regarding the prison system that guarantees, under dignified conditions, access for persons deprived of liberty to food; safe drinking water; adequate, specialized, and quality medical care —including the regular provision of sexual and reproductive health services—; access to education at all levels; and a family life for children and adolescents.

[238] Supreme Court of Justice, Instruction 19/202, Approved on August 25, 2025.
[239] Construir Foundation, ibid., p. 23.

280. In its Report on Social Cohesion, the IACHR identified that the structural problem of overcrowding in Bolivia is particularly serious, with overcrowding rates exceeding 200% in several prisons, reaching up to 500%. This is mainly due to poor infrastructure, a lack of police personnel and security equipment, shortages of water and food, and inadequate medical care. In this regard, the IACHR urged the State to guarantee conditions of detention compatible with human dignity and respect for fundamental rights, ensuring dignified treatment of persons in State custody, pursuant to standards on deprivation of liberty and addressing the special risks that may arise from gender or other conditions of the detained population[240].

Information on compliance

281. With regard to compliance with this recommendation, the State reported that the General Directorate of the Prison System has the authority to guarantee basic services, as well as access to health care and education, through occupational therapy for the prison population. It also held that, in accordance with Law No. 2298 on Criminal Enforcement and Supervision[241], the work of maintaining family ties for persons deprived of liberty is guaranteed through conjugal and family visits[242].

282. In turn, the State stressed that persons deprived of liberty are allocated a "prediario," which is a sum of money (Bs. 8.00) intended for the daily survival of each person deprived of liberty in social detention centers, which is distributed on equal terms. Its payment is under the supervision of the departmental territorial entities.

283. In terms of healthcare, it was mentioned that medical and dental care is provided on a quarterly and biannual basis, and that health fairs with different specialties and vaccination campaigns are held for the prison population according to the season. It was also reported that medication is managed through donations. A national disability card is currently being developed.

284. With regard to access to education, information was provided on inter-institutional agreements with entities such as the Ministry of Education for the implementation of educational programs. For the 2024 management period, information was provided on the scope of the program, with a total of 491 people in university education and 197 in pre-university education nationwide[243].

285. For its part, civil society[244] held that, according to information requested from the General Directorate of the Prison System, during 2024, 94% of persons deprived of liberty were covered by the Unified Health System (SUS). With regard to social reinsertion, a Multidisciplinary Productive and Post-Care Center for Social Reinsertion has been set up in Santa Cruz, where persons deprived of liberty work in carpentry, crafts, and clothing manufacturing. At the Qalauma Social Reintegration Center for Young People, the Franz Tamayo Private University, El Alto campus, conducted an entrepreneurship training program with 85 young people. In terms of education and literacy, various programs, workshops, and agreements were implemented at the national level. Finally, with regard to infrastructure, civil society reported progress in the construction of visiting modules and improvements to the infrastructure of the prisons in Palmasola (Santa Cruz), San Pedro de Arani (Cochabamba), and Mocoví (Beni).

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

286. The Commission appreciates the information provided on the situation of persons deprived of liberty and access to basic services. In this regard, it considers that since the report was issued, measures have been maintained to ensure access to services such as food, education, and health care. However, it notes

[240] Report on Social Cohesion, ibid., para. 542.
[241] Law No. 2298 on Criminal Enforcement and Supervision, passed on December 20, 2001.
[242] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[243] Inter-American SIMORE, Report of the Plurinational State of Bolivia on compliance with the recommendations of the Report on Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia, December, 2024.
[244] Construir Foundation, ibid., p.s. 24-25.

that problems remain in ensuring that these services effectively respond to the diverse needs of persons deprived of liberty, particularly certain vulnerable groups.

287. In the fourth cycle of the UPR, Bolivia was recommended to intensify its efforts to ensure dignified treatment of persons deprived of liberty. The conditions of deprivation of liberty were also mentioned, and it was held that these should be brought into line with the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (Bangkok Rules) and the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (Nelson Mandela Rules)[245].

288. Nonetheless, the IACHR continues to express concern about the conditions of deprivation of liberty identified in the Report on Social Cohesion, which raised concerns about detention conditions affected by budget constraints. Added to this are limitations on access to sufficient and quality food and, in some cases, safe drinking water, which remain a cause for concern. Thus, the IACHR stresses that the development of public policy aimed at responding to the particular needs of certain groups and guaranteeing access to fundamental rights for human dignity is a persistent challenge; therefore, it considers that this recommendation is pending compliance.

Measures and information to move forward in the compliance of the recommendation

289. In order to advance compliance with this recommendation, the IACHR requests that information be updated on the measures adopted to design and implement a public policy aimed at guaranteeing access for persons deprived of liberty to food; safe drinking water; adequate, specialized, and quality medical care—including the regular provision of sexual and reproductive health services—; access to education at all levels; and a family life for children and adolescents. In this regard, such a policy should help to coordinate the provision of basic services for persons deprived of liberty, including: a) the content and scope of educational programs, as well as inter-institutional agreements; b) information on access to health care, ensuring that it is adequate, specialized, and timely; c) the protection of children and adolescents.

III. SUMMARY TABLE OF LEVEL OF COMPLIANCE WITH RECOMMENDATIONS

290. The following chart shows the level of compliance by the Plurinational State of Bolivia with regard to the 32 recommendations in the Country Report that were analyzed in this follow-up report:

Recommendation number	Level of compliance 2025
1	Partial compliance
2	Pending compliance
3	Pending compliance
4	Partial compliance
5	Partial compliance
6	Pending compliance
7	Partial compliance
8	Pending compliance
9	Partial compliance

[245] United Nations Organization (ONU), Human Rights Council, , Report of the Work Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Plurinational State of Bolivia, A/HRC/59/7, March 19, 2025, para. 122.20.

10	Partial compliance
11	Partial compliance
12	Pending compliance
13	Pending compliance
14	Partial compliance
15	Pending compliance
16	Pending compliance
17	Pending compliance
18	Total
19	Partial compliance
20	Pending compliance
21	Pending compliance
22	Pending compliance
23	Pending compliance
24	Partial compliance
25	Pending compliance
26	Partial compliance
27	Pending compliance
28	Partial compliance
29	Partial compliance
30	Pending compliance
31	Partial compliance
32	Pending compliance

IV. CONCLUSIONS

291. Full compliance with the recommendations of the IACHR by OAS member states is essential to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights in the region and strengthen the effectiveness of the Inter-American human rights system. In exercising its mandate to follow up on these decisions, the Commission prepares reports identifying progress, challenges, and setbacks in the adoption of compliance measures that it has requested from States through its different work mechanisms.

292. This follow-up report details the implementation of the recommendations issued by the Commission in the Report on Social Cohesion, approved on January 20, 2024, by the IACHR. The recommendations contained therein were formulated based on the findings and information obtained by the IACHR before, during, and after its on-site visit from March 27 to 31, 2023.

293. In the aforementioned report, the IACHR included 32 recommendations addressed to the State, in accordance with the following three thematic areas: (i) social cohesion, (ii) pending challenges in human rights, and (iii) strengthening democratic institutions.

294. Based on the General Guidelines for Follow-up on Recommendations and Decisions of the IACHR, this follow-up report identifies the compliance measures adopted, the progress made, and the challenges in implementing the recommendations analyzed[246]. In preparing the report, the IACHR received information from the State on December 12, 2024, through the SIMORE platform. Subsequently, on July 21,

[246] IACHR, General Guidelines for Follow-up on Recommendations and Decisions of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc.385/23 (second edition), November 20, 2023.

2025, the IACHR requested that the Plurinational State of Bolivia respond within 30 days regarding its compliance with the recommendations contained in the Country Report. The State provided the requested information on August 20, 2025. For its part, the IACHR also sent a questionnaire to civil society organizations in order to obtain information relevant to the follow-up of the recommendations. Some of these responses were published through the Inter-American SIMORE.

295. For this follow-up report, the Commission concluded that, of the 32 recommendations analyzed, one has achieved full compliance (3.13%); none has achieved substantial partial compliance (0%); 13 are partially fulfilled (40.62%); and 18 are pending compliance (56.25%). The IACHR reiterates to the State the importance of effectively complying with the recommendations that have not been entirely fulfilled. The following are the main findings of the IACHR regarding compliance with the recommendations, according to the following thematic areas.

296. With regard to the first thematic area, social cohesion, the IACHR welcomed the interest in creating spaces for dialogue between State entities and civil society actors. These dialogues should serve as the basis for building mechanisms that allow public problems to be addressed in a pluralistic and consensual manner. However, their organization, their inclusion, and the tools generated to strengthen the capacity for dialogue with their main actors are still far from meeting their aims.

297. On the second axis, the remaining challenges in the human rights field:

a) With regard to indigenous peoples, although progress has been made in mechanisms for recognition and land titling, as well as in the implementation of prior consultation processes, there are still challenges to adequately protect indigenous autonomies, their territories, and the exercise of the right to prior and informed consultation. Thus, the IACHR emphasized the State's obligation to strengthen public policies aimed at respecting and guaranteeing their rights, adapting internal procedures and institutions, and providing adequate spaces for dialogue and consultation for their protection.

b) In the case of women and LGBTI persons, the Commission recognizes that progress has been made in the adoption of executive branch regulations which promote access to rights and protection from gender-based violence for these two groups. However, the Commission highlights the need to adopt statutes that provide a higher level of protection and promote proper implementation for all affected persons.

c) With regard to measures to prevent and remedy the effects of pollution and protect drinking water, the Commission has identified measures to preventively address the effects of pollution. However, emphasis was placed on requesting the strengthening of participation mechanisms for the instruments and plans to be implemented, the creation of timely and adequate mechanisms for redress for those affected, and the identification and addressing of gaps in access to drinking water services on an equal rights basis.

d) In the case of education and health services for the population, as well as access to social security and decent working conditions for domestic workers, the Commission stresses the need to improve the current regulatory framework but, above all, to strengthen implementation mechanisms, considering the impact they have on vulnerable groups and the characteristics that such services must meet.

298. With regard to strengthening democratic institutions:

a) The Commission highlights the need to create conditions that improve trust in institutions, particularly by strengthening judicial independence, protecting electoral authorities by extending to them the same guarantees for the exercise of their work as those afforded to members of the courts of justice, and protecting human rights defenders with early warning systems that allow risks against them to be identified and prevented.

b) With regard to freedom of expression, the State must strengthen the protection of journalists, prevent them from being harmed or stigmatized for fulfilling their role, and guarantee the impartial and objective distribution of official advertising, without discrimination or interference in the editorial policies of the media.

c) The State implemented the National Population and Housing Census and published its results. The census was conducted taking into account the inclusion of categories disaggregated by ethnic-racial origin and disability.

d) Access to justice for those who have been victims of serious violations of their rights, as well as those affected by the disproportionate use of force, remains an urgent issue in Bolivia. Thus, although the Commission identified some management and investigation measures to strengthen such protection, the limited progress and setbacks in the judicial sphere highlight the lack of guarantees in relation to these events.

e) The Commission recognized actions aimed at strengthening the legal framework to ensure the use of objective criteria in the preselection, selection, and appointment of judicial authorities for the courts and the Council of the Magistrature. In this regard, it highlighted the technical cooperation between the IACHR and the State in the period leading up to the electoral process. However, measures still need to be adopted to ensure that judicial proceedings are conducted within the time frame provided for by the law, in order to prevent the justice system from suffering delays that could undermine public confidence in society at large.

f) The comprehensive reform of the justice system includes measures adopted by the State that have enabled progress in formalizing justice operators, both in the judiciary and in the Public Ministry. However, the State must allocate adequate resources for its effective functioning, and this must involve all entities that have an impact on the justice system.

g) The use of pretrial detention and the mismanagement of the prison system affect the rights of the prison population, hindering their adequate access to education, health, and food services, among others, and generating detrimental effects on the exercise of their rights.

299. Finally, the Commission expresses its gratitude for the information provided by both the State and civil society organizations for the preparation of this follow-up report. It also reiterates its willingness to provide technical assistance to promote the implementation of the recommendations analyzed, pursuant to applicable Inter-American standards.

REASONED VOTE BY COMMISSIONER CARLOS BERNAL PULIDO ON THE REPORT "FOLLOW-UP TO RECOMMENDATIONS MADE BY THE IACHR IN THE SOCIAL COHESION REPORT: THE CHALLENGE FOR THE CONSOLIDATION OF DEMOCRACY" IN RELATION TO BOLIVIA

With all due respect to my colleagues, and in accordance with Article 19.1 of the Rules of Procedure of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights ("the Commission" or "the IACHR") and in exercise of the right to freedom of expression, I submit this partially dissenting opinion in relation to the report "Follow-up to Recommendations Made by the IACHR in the Social Cohesion Report: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy" in relation to Bolivia, hereinafter "the Report." In this vote, I reiterate considerations made by the IACHR in the Social Cohesion Report that violate the Inter-American legal framework. Specifically, I will refer to: (i) the fact that the Report contains considerations that disregard the Inter-American legal framework and pose a risk to unborn persons; (ii) the scope of conscientious objection and women's access to information on matters related to their sexual and reproductive health; (iii) considerations related to the sexual and reproductive education of children and adolescents; and (iv) disregard for the vision incorporated by the ACHR on marriage and the scope for configuration in matters of adoption in relation to LGTBIQ persons.

1. El Informe contiene consideraciones que desconocen el marco jurídico interamericano y suponen un riesgo para las personas en gestación

Paragraph 63 of the report reads:

> "1. In the Social Cohesion Report, the IACHR took note of the State's training of public health personnel on women's right to access legal interruption of pregnancy, which was recognized by Bolivian law. However, despite these advances, multiple complaints about obstacles to accessing health services, particularly regarding ignorance on the part of health personnel, indicate that the ruling of the Plurinational Constitutional Court, which eliminated the requirement of judicial authorization to access legal termination of pregnancy in cases permitted by law, is not being fully complied with. Likewise, the absence of an educational and public health policy that prioritizes sexual and reproductive rights was noted.
>
> 66. For its part, the civil society reported that according to the report of the Coalition of Civil Society Organizations on Women's Rights for the Universal Periodic Review, the report of the Ombudsman's Office on "The situation of legal interruption of pregnancy as a human right of women" holds that there are still obstacles and impediments to accessing the service, since users who go to a health facility, even minors, are repeatedly subjected to questioning by medical staff, whether due to prejudice, ignorance of the law, or arbitrary decisions, even when they have been victims of sexual violence. Thus, the civil society held that although training is provided, there is no permanent national policy aimed at health services in a decentralized manner.

On this point, I will address the following issues: (i) the erroneous use of the concept of "legal interruption of pregnancy"; (ii) the non-existence of the right to abortion and the scope for state regulation; and (iii) the lack of protection for the unborn child.

1.1 Misuse of the term "legal interruption of pregnancy"

I highlight the importance of the IACHR using precise and appropriate language in its reports. This emphasizes the imperative of using accurate and rigorous language to ensure that decisions are based on clear understandings. In fact, on several occasions, the Commission itself has recognized the need for conceptual precision in the documents it issues[247] and has repeatedly emphasized the importance of correct use of language[248].

Language is, in fact, a fundamental element of human communication and the expression of thought, functioning as a dialectical unit in which both mutually condition each other[249]. It plays an essential role in decision-making, especially through its representative or referential function, which is aimed at conveying information, describing facts, and expressing ideas in a clear, accurate, and objective manner, so that they serve as a solid basis for the decisions that are adopted[250].

Therefore, the appropriate and rigorous use of language in IACHR reports ensures that the message is clear and understandable to all recipients. Beyond the simple transmission of data, this linguistic rigor legitimizes the technical-legal analysis and conclusions raised by the IACHR.

In light of the above, it is particularly problematic that the report uses the term "voluntary interruption of pregnancy" when these issues revolve around "abortion." However, it is essential to draw a clear conceptual distinction between the two terms.

I reiterate that abortion is a form of pregnancy termination performed with the direct intention of causing the death of the fetus, or in other words, of ending prenatal life[251]. Thus, it may involve termination before the fetus is viable or even the destruction of a viable fetus[252]. To that extent, an abortion will only be successful when it causes the death of the human being in gestation[253].

On the contrary, the expression "interruption of pregnancy" may suggest that the gestational process is likely to resume at a later date. However, as indicated, abortion necessarily involves the termination of pregnancy through the death of the human being in gestation.

I therefore consider it essential to use the appropriate terminology in order to avoid misunderstandings regarding the interpretation and the decision adopted by the Commission. Consequently, in my vote I will refer specifically to the conduct of abortion.

1.2 Inexistence of a right to abortion in the Inter-American Human Rights System

Without ignoring the regulatory changes adopted by some states, in this case Bolivia, which authorize access to abortion, I consider it necessary to highlight, as I have done in multiple votes[254], that there are no binding

[247] IACHR. Indirect violations of freedom of expression: The impact of concentration in media ownership; IACHR. Chapter IV. Report on access to information in the hemisphere: Access to information and economic development; IACHR. Guidelines for the development of indicators of progress in economic, social, and cultural rights. 2008.

[248] IACHR. The right of children to a family. Alternative care. Ending institutionalization in the Americas. 2013.

[249] Juan Alberto Mena Lorenzo, Noemí Sarracino Alum. Professional technical language in the training of future workers. Mendive, ISSN-e 1815-7696, Vol. 6, No. 4, 2008 (Issue dedicated to: October-December), pp. 234-241.

[250] Ibidem.

[251] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb;79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[252] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb;79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[253] Seeds JW. Direct Abortion or Legitimate Medical Procedure Double Effect? Linacre Q. 2012 Feb;79(1):81-87. doi: 10.1179/002436312803571546. Epub 2012 Feb 1. PMID: 30082962; PMCID: PMC6027086.

[254] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras – 2023, https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter vs. El sources in international law—and especially in the American Convention or other treaties that make up the Inter-American System—that contemplate (i) the so-called right to abortion or (ii) a corresponding obligation for States to provide abortion services. Within this context, States have broad discretion—by virtue of the principles of subsidiarity or complementarity and representative democracy—to take measures to protect prenatal life[255] which include, although not exclusively, the use of criminal law.

In light of the lack of abortion rights, former IHR Court judge Eduardo Vio Grossi made it clear in his partially dissenting opinion on the ruling in the case of Manuela and others vs. El Salvador:

> "And in this regard, it is indisputable that (...) there is no Inter-American or international legal norm, whether conventional, international custom, or general principle of law, that recognizes abortion as a right. There are only resolutions from international bodies, most of which are made up of international officials and not representatives of States, decisions that, in addition to not being binding, do not interpret current international law but rather reflect aspirations for it to change in the direction they suggest"[256].

In fact, it should be noted that the Inter-American Court recently heard the case of Beatriz vs. El Salvador, in which the IACHR and the victims' representatives alleged the existence of a "right to abortion." However, in its judgment, the Court did not establish the existence of such a right[257]. This is yet another example of the lack of a binding legal source from which a supposed right to abortion can be derived.

However, I would like to emphasize that this margin of configuration, derived from the absence of a right to abortion and the convergence of conflicting rights, is broadened by the competence of States to define punishable conduct and its consequences, and by the automatic referral that, according to the IHR Court, Article 7.2 of the American Convention makes to domestic law for matters related to deprivation of liberty—the principle of legal reservation—[258].

This is relevant when considering that, based on a systematic reading of Articles 31, 76, and 77 of the American Convention, only through consensus—expressed by the States through the signing and ratification of amendments or treaties—can international obligations arise that are additional to those already contemplated in the ACHR.

In conclusion, international human rights law—and in particular the Inter-American System—does not recognize abortion as a right, nor does it impose an obligation on States to guarantee, promote, protect, or provide it as a service. On the contrary, the American Convention expressly protects life as of conception and grants States a margin of discretion to adopt the measures they deem appropriate for its protection, within the framework of their democratic principles and legislative sovereignty.

The true response of the state to the violence, neglect, and inequality suffered by girls, adolescents, and women cannot be the elimination of a human life, but rather the implementation of effective and comprehensive policies for prevention, support, and justice.

Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024 - Chapter IV.A Development of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4A_ES.PDF, p. 201.

[255] ACHR. Article 4.

[256] Partially Dissenting Opinion of Judge Eduardo Vio Grossi, Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Case of Manuela and Others vs. El Salvador, Judgment of November 2, 2021, (Preliminary Exceptions, Merits, Reparations, and Costs) Paragraph 13.

[257] IHR Court. Case of Beatriz and Others vs. El Salvador. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of November 22, 2024. Series C No. 549.

[258] IHR Court. Case of Romero Feris vs. Argentina. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of October 15, 2019. Series C No. 391. Para. 77.

1.3 Lack of protection for the unborn in the Report

Thirdly, I note that in this report, as in others on which I have cast my vote[259], references to abortion ignore the other person whose right to life is also protected by convention: the unborn child. Thus, the necessary balance that must exist between the conflicting rights of all internationally protected persons is ignored. In this regard, it should be noted that unborn persons are also subjects of law and holders of the right to life. A ruling on abortion always implies a position on a practice that necessarily involves the termination of the life of a human being worthy of dignity and protected by Article 4 of the ACHR. It is therefore necessary to expressly recognize the rights of the unborn person as part of the balancing required in every case of abortion.

On this point, Article 1.2 of the ACHR clearly establishes that, for the purposes of the Convention, a "person" is any human being[260]. Thus, in light of the Convention, human rights are not only recognized for persons who have already been born, but protection must be afforded to all individuals from the moment of conception, understanding them as human beings. Furthermore, the IHR Court itself, in its Advisory Opinion 22, held that, without being a matter open to interpretation, the term "person" is equivalent to the term "human being" for the purposes of the ACHR[261].

It is biologically and materially indisputable that the developing fetus is a human being[262]. Furthermore, the Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights states that "the human genome is the basis of the fundamental unity of all members of the human family and of the recognition of their inherent dignity and diversity. In a symbolic sense, the human genome is the patrimony of humanity"[263].

The consequence of recognizing the unborn as a person insofar as a human being is that it becomes the holder of rights. Thus, the ACHR establishes in the Articles that develop rights the formula "Every person (...)".[264]. Likewise, human rights instruments generally recognize the entitlement of members of the human species to rights, in particular the right to life[265].

Even in the Artavia Murillo ruling, the IHR Court determined that "the protection of the right to life is not absolute, but gradual and incremental as the fetus develops." This implies that, without prejudice to the concepts of graduality and incrementality (from which I completely disagree), the Court has already established that unborn persons must be protected by the State in their "right to life." Similarly, in the ruling

[259] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras – 2023, https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter vs. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024 - Chapter IV.A Development of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4A_ES.PDF, p. 201.

[260] ACHR. Art. 1.2 "For the purposes of this Convention, a person is every human being."

[261] I/A Court H.R. AO-22/16. Ownership of rights by legal entities in the Inter-American Human Rights System. Advisory Opinion of February 26, 2016. Series A. No. 22. Para. 48.

[262] Kaluger, G., and Kaluger, M., Human Development: The Span of Life, The C.V.

[263] Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights. Article 1.

[264] American Convention on Human Rights. Articles 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 18, 20, 21, 22, 24 and 25.

[265] International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Preamble, para. 3; American Convention on Human Rights, para. 3. Preamble; African Charter on Human Rights. Preamble, para. 6; Geneva Declaration on the Rights of Children. Preamble, para. 1; American Declaration of the International Rights and Duties of Man. Art. 1; Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Preamble, para. 1; Declaration of the Rights of the Child. Preamble, para. 2; European Convention on Human Rights. Preamble, para. 2.

on the Cuscul Pivaral case[266], The IHR Court applied the ACHR to an unborn person and also applied Article 19 of the ACHR, thereby recognizing the legal status of the unborn person as a child.

In the same vein, I emphasize that the preamble to the Convention on the Rights of the Child states that children need protection and care both before and after birth[267]. This implies that, in light of the CRC, the unborn child is a child who requires special care. This was reiterated in the preparatory work for the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights[268].

In short, a comprehensive interpretation of the Inter-American System and international human rights law leads to the recognition of the unborn child as a subject of rights, particularly the right to life, protected from conception by Article 4 of the American Convention. Ignoring this protection means arbitrarily excluding a human being from the moral and legal community of persons, running counter to the principle of human dignity that forms the basis of the international human rights order.

Therefore, any decision or ruling on abortion requires a genuine balancing of the conflicting rights—not the suppression of one of them—ensuring that the protection of prenatal life is coordinated with comprehensive care and the guarantee of rights of pregnant women. Only a balanced and respectful approach to all conventionally recognized rights can be considered consistent with the American Convention.

2. Scope of conscientious objection and women's access to information on matters related to their sexual and reproductive health

Paragraph 70 of the Report stated:

> "In its Social Cohesion Report, the IACHR has noticed that women, girls, and adolescents, as well as their families, face stigmatization, harassment, and abuse by healthcare personnel and third parties when they go to health centers to undergo a legal interruption of pregnancy. In many cases, their privacy and confidentiality as users of a health service is also violated, as their data is leaked to the press or to religious groups and organizations that oppose legal interruption of pregnancy. In this regard, the IACHR has held that States must guarantee that women, girls, adolescents, and all pregnant persons have access to reproductive health services, even in situations of conscientious objection in the health field, since conscientious objection is an individual decision and not an institutional or collective one"

In turn Paragraph 73 holds:

> "The Commission appreciates the information sent by the State and the civil society. It also notes that there is still no bill or other measure aimed at regulating conscientious objection within the regulatory framework. The IACHR therefore expresses its concern about the negative impact this may be having on the exercise of individuals' rights to access legal interruption of pregnancy. It therefore considers that this recommendation is still pending compliance".

[266] I/A Court H.R. Case of Cuscul Pivaral vs. Guatemala. Judgment of August 23, 2018. "On the other hand, the Court has pointed out that extreme poverty and the lack of adequate medical care for pregnant women or women who have recently given birth are causes of high maternal mortality and morbidity, and therefore States must provide adequate health policies that allow for assistance with personnel adequately trained in childbirth care, policies for the prevention of maternal mortality through adequate prenatal and postpartum checkups, and legal and administrative instruments in health policies that allow for the adequate documentation of cases of maternal mortality. Likewise, the Court has recognized that, under Article 19 of the Convention, the State must assume a special position of guarantor with greater care and responsibility and must take special measures guided by the principle of the best interests of the child".

[267] Convention on the Rights of the Child. Preamble.

[268] "The main reason for stipulating in Paragraph 4 [now Article 6(5)] of the original text that the death penalty should not be applied to pregnant women was to save the innocent life of the unborn child. United Nations. General Assembly. Report of the Third Committee on the Draft International Covenants on Human Rights. A/3764. Page 40.

In this regard, I will refer to: (i) the scope of conscientious objection in the Inter-American Human Rights System and (ii) women's right to access information on issues such as abortion.

2.1 The scope of the right to conscientious objection in the Inter-American Human Rights System

With regard to conscientious objection in the field of health, I would like to make two observations. First, conscientious objection, like any right, can of course come into conflict with other fundamental guarantees. However, this must be analyzed on a case-by-case basis under criteria of proportionality in conflicts that arise between the exercise of conscientious objection and other rights[269].

An interpretation that seeks to generically annul conscientious objection in contexts such as abortion without taking into account the particularities of each case (i) would render freedom of conscience and religion meaningless; (ii) would imply consolidating a hierarchical view of rights—far removed from the foundations of international human rights law; (iii) would completely depart from the logic of balancing rights; and (iv) would therefore represent a very serious attack on one of the most important guarantees of every person's internal sovereignty.

On the other hand, recognizing the full exercise of conscientious objection on the basis of Article 12 ACHR would be consistent with the high value that the jurisprudence of the IHR Court has placed on pluralism and the protection of cultural identity[270].

Having said all of the above, I reiterate that conscientious objection is a means of protecting rights and not an obstacle. Interpreting it as such implies an intense and unjustified—and completely unwarranted—limitation on the exercise of freedom of conscience. I emphasize that the Commission's role is to protect and defend human rights, not to tacitly repeal them.

Secondly, with regard to institutional or collective conscientious objection, I reiterate[271] that although legal entities do not possess a moral conscience, in many situations, the rights and obligations attributed to legal entities are resolved in the rights and obligations of the natural persons who constitute them or who act on their behalf or in their representation. In this sense, it could be natural persons whose rights are violated in cases of institutional conscientious objection, which would make the study of international responsibility for the violation of this right completely valid. In this regard, the I/A Court H.R. has established that:

> "Although legal persons are not expressly recognized by the American Convention, as they are by Protocol No. 1 to the European Convention on Human Rights, this does not restrict the possibility that, under certain circumstances, individuals may turn to the Inter-American Human Rights Protection System to assert their fundamental rights, even when those rights are covered by a legal concept or fiction created by the legal system itself[272]" (Bold text not in the original text).

The Inter-American Court has considered that, on occasions, "the rights and obligations attributed to legal persons are resolved in the rights and obligations of the natural persons who comprise them or who act on their behalf or in their representation"[273]. Likewise, it has established that "the recognition of rights to legal [269] I/A Court H.R. Case Law Booklet No. 26: Restriction and suspension of human rights.

[270] Ibidem.
[271] Dissenting vote. Report on Religious Freedom Standards.
[272] I/A Court H.R. OC-22/16.
[273] I/A Court H.R. Case of Cantos Vs. Argentina. Merits, Reparations and Costs. Judgment of November 28, 2002. Series C No. 97.

entities may directly or indirectly imply the protection of the human rights of the natural persons associated with them[274]".

Furthermore, it is reductionist to consider that only individuals have the right to define their actions in accordance with their convictions or values. In this regard, it is clear that, although legal entities do not have a moral conscience, they are capable, as institutions, of adopting ideologies and institutional ethical instruments that guide the way they work and act[275]. Therefore, it is clear that there are convictions or values in institutions that are also subject to protection.

On the other hand, by virtue of the right of association, not only does one have the freedom to associate with other people freely without intervention by public authorities, but one also enjoys the right and freedom to seek the common realization of a lawful end, without pressure or interference that could alter or distort its purpose[276]. This issue is essential, since one of the ways of forming an association is through the establishment of legal entities, and in any case, the possibility of conscientious objection could materialize the pursuit or preservation of the association's aims.

That said, I emphasize that regardless of whether or not a legal entity's right to conscientious objection is recognized, expressions of convictions or beliefs must be protected in accordance with the implications that may arise for individuals, not only in terms of their right to religious freedom, but also their right to freedom of association. In any case, the provisions of domestic legal systems must be taken into account.

2.2 Failure to uphold women's right to comprehensive, accurate, and diverse information about their sexual and reproductive health

The report omitted women's right to broad, truthful and pluralistic information about their sexual and reproductive health which constitutes an essential dimension of freedom of expression and the right to health recognized in international human rights law[277]. As noted by the IACHR in its reports —including Merits Report No. 72/14[278] and the Beatriz case[279] —, access to information is an essential requirement for guaranteeing autonomy, personal integrity, and the possibility of making free and informed decisions regarding health. While the protection of personal data and medical confidentiality are guarantees that must be rigorously safeguarded, this cannot be interpreted or applied in a way that unjustifiably restricts women's access to comprehensive information about abortion procedures, risks, alternatives, and consequences.

In this sense, limiting the dissemination of or access to information on abortion affects not only the rights of women as recipients, but also the collective dimension of freedom of expression and, therefore, democratic debate on a matter of public interest. Although I do not fully agree with the rulings of the ECHR in the cases of Open Door and Dublin Well Woman[280] vs. Ireland and Annen vs. Germany[281], the Court emphasized that restrictions on the circulation of information or the expression of critical views on abortion must be subject to strict scrutiny, precisely because they concern the formation of public opinion on issues of high ethical and social sensitivity. Consequently, States have a positive obligation to ensure that women have access to diverse and verified information, so that the right to confidentiality does not become a barrier to the full exercise of autonomy and freedom of thought.

[274] I/A Court H.R. OC-22/16

[275] Scholarship I, Juan Pablo, & Astete A, Carmen. (2015). Conscientious objection in medical practice. Chilean Medical Journal, 143(4), 493-498. https://dx.doi.org/10.4067/S0034-98872015000400011.

[276] I/A Court H.R. Case of Cantoral Huamaní and García Santa Cruz Vs. Peru. Preliminary Exception, Merits, Reparations and Costs. Judgment of July 10, 2007. Series C No. 167. Paragraph 144.

[277] Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Access to reproductive health information from a human rights perspective, OAS/Ser.L/V/II. Doc. 61, November 22, 2022. Report 332/20.

[278] IACHR. Report No. 72/14.

[279] IACHR. IACHR Access to reproductive health information from a human rights perspective.

[280] European Court on Human Rights, case of Open Door and Dublin Well Woman vs. Ireland, complaints N° 14234/88 and 14235/88, judgment of October 29, 1992, Series A, No. 246-A.

[281] European Court on Human Rights, case of Annen vs. Germany, complaints N°. 3690/10, judgment of November 26, 2015.

3. Regarding sexual and reproductive education for children and adolescents

Paragraph 63 of the Report holds that "the absence of an education and public health policy that prioritizes sexual and reproductive rights was observed". In this regard, I will refer to: (i) the need to serve the best interests of children and adolescents and avoid their hypersexualization, and (ii) the exercise of parents' right to choose their children's education in these matters.

3.1 The need to serve the best interests of children and adolescents and prevent their hypersexualization

In light of the restrictions imposed on sexual and reproductive education, as well as education on sexual and gender diversity aimed at a children and adolescents, I reiterate[282] that it is essential to also recognize that it is vital to take into account the role of the family, society, and the State in protecting the rights of children, and therefore a broad dialogue must be opened that recognizes the needs of children according to their stage of development. Sex education without the recognition and mitigation of these risks can cause serious violations of the rights of girls and boys.

I emphasize that the best interests of children and adolescents are a guiding principle that should govern all government actions. Indeed, this principle is enshrined in binding instruments of the Universal Human Rights System (UHRS)[283], the Inter-American Human Rights System (IAHRS)[284] and the European System of Human Rights (ESHR)[285].

In the UHRS, the best interests of the child are enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Indeed, Article 3.1 of the CRC provides that "In all actions concerning children, whether undertaken by public or private social welfare institutions, courts of law, administrative authorities or legislative bodies, the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration." And the CEDAW, in Article 5.b, enshrines the obligation of States Parties to " To ensure that family education includes a proper understanding of maternity as a social function and the recognition of the common responsibility of men and women in the upbringing and development of their children, it being understood that the interest of the children is the primordial consideration in all cases".

In the Inter-American System, the ACHR recognizes this principle in Article 19, providing that "every child has the right to the measures of protection required by his or her status as a minor from his or her family, society, and the State".

This principle has been extensively developed by the Committee on the Rights of the Child in General Comment 14. In this Comment, the Committee held that the best interest of the child is an umbrella term which encompasses three dimensions, namely: (i) a fundamental right of the child, (ii) a basic and interpretative principle, and (iii) a procedural rule[286].

With regard to the content of this principle, the Committee held that it implies that any action involving a child must consider the child's best interest as a primary consideration[287]. Hence, according to the Committee, the application of this principle means that not only must the interests of the child be considered, but their interests must always take precedence when they clash with other principles or interests.

---

[282] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter V. ElSalvador. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF

[283] 37 Convention on the Rights of the Child. Article 3.1; Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Article 5.b).

[284] American Convention on Human Rights. Article 19

[285] TEDH. R.L y others vs Denmark

[286] Committee on the Rights of the Child. General Comment No. 14 (2013) on the right of the child to have his or her best interests taken as a primary consideration (art. 3, para. 1). CRC/C/GC/14.

[287] Committee on the Rights of the Child. General Comment No. 14 (2013) on the right of the child to have his or her best interests taken as a primary consideration (art. 3, para. 1). CRC/C/GC/14.

In accordance with the above, all public policies implemented by States within the framework of their functions must take into account the interests of children and adolescents as an essential consideration. As a public policy, Comprehensive Sexual Education must also be governed by the best interests of children and adolescents.

I would like to raise a growing concern in this regard regarding sex education policies, namely the hypersexualization of children and adolescents. Hypersexualization represents a risk that disproportionately affects children. This has been recognized by the Committee on the Rights of the Child in General Comment 20, which states that "the digital environment can also expose adolescents to risks, including, among others, (...) hypersexualization".[288] The Committee has reiterated this in several reports, arguing that hypersexualization is a problem that must be addressed by States, as it jeopardizes the rights of children and adolescents[289].

Sex education, therefore, should be a means of preventing the hypersexualization of children and adolescents[290] and not a mechanism to promote it. Consistent with this, the ECHR has established that for sex education to be in line with the Convention, it must aim to provide children with correct, precise, objective and scientific knowledge on the matter, presented in a manner appropriate to their age[291].

In light of the above, the ECHR has held that a sex education policy aimed at children and adolescents should: (i) be based on the principle of objectivity[292]; (ii) approach the issues in a neutral manner[293]; (iii) offer a precise and scientific approach to the subject[294] and (iv) make sure topics are presented in a way that is appropriate for the age and cognitive development of the child or teen[295]. In this context, the Committee on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights has held that sex education, "entails a right to comprehensive, non-discriminatory education on sexuality and reproduction", based on evidence, scientifically rigorous, and age-appropriate"[296] (Bold text not in the original text).

In this sense, the I/A Court H.R. has defined a goal that must be pursued and cannot be overlooked. In particular, it has stated that: "Such education must be capable of enabling girls and boys to adequately understand the implications of sexual and emotional relationships, particularly in relation to consent to such relationships and the exercise of freedoms with respect to their sexual and reproductive rights"[297].

However, the report completely omitted any analysis or consideration of the relationship and impact that this type of education may have on the best interests of children and adolescents, and the need for safeguards to prevent the hypersexualization of children and adolescents.

In short, sexual and reproductive education must be implemented with strict respect for the best interests of the child, ensuring an objective, scientific approach that is appropriate to their age and level of development. This means that States, in exercising their margin of discretion, must adopt measures aimed at protecting children and adolescents from hypersexualization and any practice that disregards their developmental maturity or their right to a comprehensive education. Likewise, educational policies must recognize the fundamental role of the family and foster values such as responsibility, self-control, and the protection of human life since conception.

[288] General Comment No. 20 (2016) on the effectiveness of children's rights during adolescence.
[289] Consideration of the reports submitted by States parties under article 44 of the Convention. Fifth periodic reports of States parties due in 2012; Committee on the Rights of the Child. Combined fifth and sixth periodic reports submitted by the Plurinational State of Bolivia under article 44 of the Convention, due in 2015.
[290] Universidad de La Sabana. La hipersexualización de la infancia. https://www.unisabana.edu.co/portaldenoticias/al-dia/la-hipersexualizacion-de-la-infancia/.
[291] TEDH. Case of Macatė vs. Lithuania.
[292] TEDH. Bayev and Others vs. Russia. 2018. Para. 72; Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen and Pedersen vs Denmark. 1976. Paragraph 53.
[293] TEDH. Macatė vs. Lithuania. 2023. Para. 68.
[294] TEDH. Macatė vs. Lithuania. 2023. Para. 207; Bayev and Others vs. Russia. 2018. Para. 72.
[295] TEDH. Macatė vs. Lithuania. 2023. Para. 68.
[296] ESCR Committee, General Comment No. 22 on the right to sexual and reproductive health (Article 12 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights), paras. 9 and 49.
[297] I/A Court H.R. Case of Guzmán Albarracín and others vs. Ecuador. Merits, Reparations, and Costs. Judgment of June 24, 2020. Series C No. 405, Para. 139.

3.2 The application of parents' right to choose their children's education in these matters

I reiterate[298] that in all discussions concerning the sexual and reproductive education of children, the right of parents to choose their children's education, as recognized in Article 12.4 of the ACHR, must be safeguarded. The aforementioned article provides that "Parents or guardians, as the case may be, have the right to provide for the religious and moral education of their children or wards that is in accord with their own convictions" (Bold type not in the original).

This same guarantee has been provided for in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights[299], the International Covenant on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights[300], the Convention on the Rights of the Child[301] and the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights[302]. According to the ECHR, the Parents' right to choose their children's education, including sex education, is an aspect of the right to respect for private and family life protected by the ECHR[303].

Thus, there is consensus in international human rights law with regard to the existence and recognition of this right of parents. The Inter-American Commission has understood that the right of parents to choose their children's education (i) must be interpreted in conjunction with the rights of children and adolescents, especially the right to education[304] and (ii) it must comply with the provisions of Inter-American instruments that establish that education should be oriented toward teaching children to respect human rights, civil liberties, and tolerance[305].

Of course, I agree with these criteria; however, it cannot be overlooked that: (i) all types of education must respect the best interests of children as a guiding principle, and (ii) the right of parents to choose their children's education is derived from the right itself to education for children; for which reason, there is a false dilemma in considering that both rights are incompatible.

Thus, the ECHR, within the framework of its interpretation of Article 2 of Protocol No. 1, has held that[306], it is the fundamental right to education on which the right of parents to respect for their philosophical and religious convictions is based. According to the European Court of Human Rights, although this right rests with parents, it also rests with children, who have the right to education and teaching[307].

This right undoubtedly has an impact on sexual and reproductive education, since, like any other type of education, it must come within the scope of protection of the conventional right, recognized by international human rights law, which grants parents the right to choose their children's education, pursuant to Article 12.4 of the convention.

Issues related to sexuality, reproduction, sexual diversity, and gender are closely intertwined and have a significant impact on people's value systems. Therefore, sex education is an integral part of the moral education of children and adolescents. The broad social discussions on the subject and the diverse views that may arise from different value systems in a region as pluralistic as ours cannot be ignored. Therefore, it cannot be [298] Reasoned vote on the report "Social Cohesion: The Challenge for the Consolidation of Democracy in Bolivia Bolivia". https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/informes/pdfs/2024/CohesionSocial_Bolivia_SPA.pdf; Reasoned vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras – 2023. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF.

[299] Article 18.4.

[300] Article 13.3.

[301] Article 14.2.

[302] Article 2.

[303] TEDH, Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen and Pedersen, Para. 53; Dojan and others, quoted earlier, Para. 78-83.

[304] IACHR. Study on Freedom of Religion and Belief | Inter-American Standards.

[305] IACHR. Study on Freedom of Religion and Belief | Inter-American Standards.

[306] The general principles set out by the ECHR are derived primarily from the judgments in Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen, and Pedersen vs. Denmark (ECHR 1976/5); Campbell and Cosans vs. the United Kingdom (ECHR 1982/1); Valsamis vs. Greece (ECHR 1996, 70); and Folgero and Others vs Norway (TEDH 2007/53).

[307] Case of Kjeldsen, Busk Madsen and Pedersen vs. Denmark (STEDH 1976/5, of December 7, para. 52).

interpreted that it is the State or the bodies of the Inter-American System who are called upon to choose the moral education of children, forgetting that it is the parents who are the holders of that right.

4. Same-sex couples: lack of awareness of the ACHR's view on marriage and margin of configuration in matters of adoption

Paragraph 82 of the Report states that "in order to advance on compliance with this recommendation, the Commission requests that the State provide information on the process for the approval of the law guaranteeing human rights, including DESCA, political rights, family rights, and the rights of transgender, non-binary, and gender-diverse persons to filiation. It also asks whether the bill has been submitted to the legislative body and whether any action has been taken on it. Likewise, it asks whether there are other bills that have been promoted or approved in this regard."

On this matter, without prejudice to States adopting legal measures to protect same-sex relationships, I reiterate[308] that there is no conventional provision obliging States to recognize same-sex marriages. As I have mentioned on several occasions, the treaties that form part of the Inter-American Human Rights System and grant jurisdiction to the Inter-American Commission to address contentious cases do not include any obligation with respect to the recognition of same-sex marriage. This absence of obligation stems from the literal wording of the American Convention, which clearly establishes that marriage is a right reserved for "a man and a woman":

> "The right of men and women to marry and found a family shall be recognized if they are of legal age and meet the conditions required by domestic law provided that such conditions do not affect the principle of non-discrimination established in this Convention"[309] (Bold type not in the original text).

Therefore, in accordance with the hermeneutic principle that calls for a literal interpretation in good faith[310], the State is only compelled to recognize the right to marriage for couples specifically mentioned in Article 17.2 of the American Convention.

It is essential to stress that, according to the jurisprudence of the International Court of Justice, the interpretation of a treaty in good faith should not result in changes to the literal wording of treaties or in inferring what is not expressly contained in the text. This approach implies that the interpreter must assume that the parties had the intention that is apparent from the ordinary meaning of the terms used in the international agreement[311]. The text-centered approach to treaty interpretation is not only accepted in

[308] Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.A. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4A_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter V. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_5_ElSalvador_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2023. Chapter IV.B. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2023/capitulos/IA2023_Cap_4B_Venezuela_SPA.PDF; Reasoned vote. Report on the Situation in Honduras – 2023, https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/informes/pdfs/2024/informe-honduras.pdf; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter IV.A. Venezuela. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4B_VEN_ES.PDF; Reasoned vote. Annual Report 2024. Chapter vs. El Salvador. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_5_SLV_ES.PDF; Partially dissenting vote. Annual Report 2024 - Chapter IV.A Development of human rights in the region - overview of the human rights situation by country. https://www.oas.org/es/IACHR/docs/anual/2024/capitulos/IA2024_4A_ES.PDF, p. 201.

[309] American Convention on Human Rights. Article 17.1.

[310] Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties. Article 31.

[311] International Court of Justice. Case concerning rights of nationals of the United States of America in Morocco. France v. United States of America. ICJ Reports 1952, pp. 196-199. International Court of Justice. Interpretation of peace treaties with Bulgaria, Hungary, and Romania (Second Phase). ICJ Reports 1950, pp. 229-230.

international law, but also highly recommended, as it is based on the only empirically verifiable evidence of the intentions of States: the text of the treaty itself[312].

Following these rules of interpretation, the European Court of Human Rights has considered marriage to be between a man and a woman— as established in the European Convention on Human Rights, in a provision similar to that of the ACHR[313]—. In that sense, the European Court supports the idea that there is no binding obligation for states to recognize same-sex marriage, which leaves ample room for states to regulate this matter[314]. Likewise, in terms of the European Court of Human R:

> "The Court reiterates that, in accordance with Article 14 in conjunction with Article 8, States are free to restrict marriage to opposite-sex couples only and have a certain margin of configuration to decide the exact nature of the legal status granted by other means of legal recognition".[315]

On this point, it is worth noting that this same approach is upheld by the European Court in the cases of Orlandi vs. Italy[316] and Fedotova and others vs. Russia[317]. In fact, in both cases, the European Court held that, although states must provide mechanisms to protect same-sex unions, this protection does not necessarily derive from the recognition of same-sex marriage.

Under this context, I fully agree that the margin of discretion available to States in this regard relates both to the form of recognition and to the content of the protection to be granted to same-sex couples, which, of course, cannot translate into a complete absence of protection for same-sex couples.

Secondly, I would like to note that there is no international instrument that establishes obligations regarding recognition of adoption by same-sex couples, which means that States have considerable leeway on this matter. However, it is essential to establish that any decision taken on this matter must consider the best interests of the child or adolescent[318].

With these reflections, I conclude my partially dissenting opinion, in which I express the reasons for my disagreement.

[312] International Court of Justice. Question of the Delimitation of the Continental Shelf between Nicaragua and Colombia beyond 200 Nautical Miles from the Nicaraguan Coast (Nicaragua vs. Colombia), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 2016, p. 116-123, paras. 34-38, 46. Although the International Court of Justice did not rely exclusively on the literal criterion of interpretation, it was one of the first criteria taken into account by the Court in rejecting the interpretation of the Colombian party.

[313] European Convention on Human Rights. Article 12: "Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right".

[314] ECHR. Oliari and Others vs. Italy. July 21, 2015. Para. 193.

[315] ECHR. Chapin and Charpentier vs. France. September 9, 2016. Para.48.

[316] ECHR. Orlandi vs. Italy. "The Court reiterates that States are still free, under Article 12 of the Convention as well as under Article 14 taken in conjunction with Article 8, to restrict access to marriage to different sex. The same holds for Article 14 taken in conjunction with Article 12 (see Oliari and Others, cited above, § 193)." The same applies to Article 14 in conjunction with Article 12.) Para. 192.

[317] In this case, the Court analyzed only the possible violation of Article 8 of the ECHR, which refers to the right of individuals not to be subjected to arbitrary interference by the State in their private lives. In the case of same-sex couples, the Court established that the lack of a legal framework allowing same-sex couples to have their relationship recognized and protected under national law can create significant obstacles in the daily lives of these couples. Notwithstanding the foregoing, it established that the State may enjoy a margin of appraisal in determining the form of registration of same-sex unions, which implies that such registration does not necessarily have to be through the institution of marriage.

[318] ACHR. Article 19.

V.

Follow-Up of Recommendations in Country or Thematic Reports

El Salvador

CHAPTER V FOLLOW-UP OF RECOMMENDATIONS ISSUED BY THE IACHR IN ITS REPORT ON THE STATE OF EMERGENCY AND HUMAN RIGHTS IN EL SALVADOR

I. BACKGROUND INFORMATION 949

II. FOLLOW-UP OF RECOMMENDATIONS 952

III. SUMMARY TABLE OF THE LEVEL OF COMPLIANCE WITH RECOMMENDATIONS 1012

IV. CONCLUSIONS 1013

CHAPTER V

FOLLOW-UP OF RECOMMENDATIONS ISSUED BY THE IACHR IN ITS REPORT ON THE STATE OF EMERGENCY AND HUMAN RIGHTS IN EL SALVADOR

1. This report presents the first follow-up diagnosis of the recommendations issued in the report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador" (Country Report), approved by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) on June 28, 2024[1]. The report is submitted in compliance with Article 59(9), of the Commission's Rules of Procedure. Pursuant to this provision, through Chapter V of its Annual Report, the Commission will follow up on the measures adopted by the Member States of the Organization of American States (OAS) to comply with the recommendations submitted in their Country or Thematic Reports.

I. BACKGROUND INFORMATION

2. On June 28, 2024, the IACHR approved the Country Report, in which it analyzed in detail the declaration of the state of emergency, decreed in March 2022 throughout the national territory of El Salvador[2] and its effects on human rights. In this Report, the IACHR recalled that, in accordance with Inter-American standards, the suspension of rights is an exceptional measure that must be necessary, reasonable, and proportional to the context of the emergency it seeks to address. Moreover, the Commission warned that States have an obligation to ensure that indispensable judicial guarantees are maintained in all circumstances, even under states of emergency[3].

3. In the case of El Salvador, the Commission recognized that maras and gangs are a serious problem that has gripped the country for decades. Nonetheless, it acknowledged the unprecedented rates of improvement in citizen security reported by the State, which would demonstrate that, in accordance with the requirements of the American Convention on Human Rights (hereinafter "American Convention" or "ACHR)", there is no emergency that justifies the continued suspension of rights and guarantees. Consequently, the Commission called on the State to reestablish the rights suspended by the emergency regime and to adopt measures for crime prevention, control and response crime as part of a citizen security policy, ensuring a human rights perspective[4] .

4. Regarding the citizen security measures taken to confront criminal groups, referred to by the State as "terrorist organizations", the Country Report considered, among others, the following measures[5]:

- The declaration of the emergency regime and its extension, mentioned by the State as one of the measures adopted in the field of citizen security[6].
- Legislative amendments in the fields of criminal law, criminal procedure and juvenile justice.
- 73,000 persons were detained between March 27, 2022, and early November 2023, most of whom were held in pretrial detention.

[1] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28.2024.
[2] The emergency regime was declared by Legislative Decree No. 333 on March 27, 2022, following a wave of violence that culminated in at least 92 deaths during 24-27 March 2022. This decree has remained in force through successive extensions.
[3] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 1 and 4.
[4] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 2, 3 and 4.
[5] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 5.
[6] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, 28 June 2024, para. 99.

- Construction of the Terrorism Confinement Centre (CECOT).
- Additional cross-sectoral efforts in the prevention of violence, mitigation of risks and damages to vulnerable groups, as well as the rehabilitation of social and community ties.

5. Country Report identified human rights concerns related to social participation and accountability in citizen security policy, in addition to the emphasis on a heavily punitive approach to citizen security through legislative reforms. It also referred to the insufficient knowledge of the Inter-American legal framework, as proven by the mandatory application of pretrial detention to certain crimes, the confidentiality of justice officials' identities during criminal proceedings, and the application of adult prison sentences to minors under 18.[7]

6. In turn, the IACHR received complaints regarding the following matters[8]:

- Alleged human rights violations perpetrated by security forces, including systematic and widespread, illegal and arbitrary detentions, unlawful searches of homes, excessive use of force and violations of children's and adolescents' rights.
- Challenges in access to justice posed by detentions and their impact on judicial guarantees and judicial protection, including those of children. Among these challenges, the delays in judicial reviews of detentions, ineffective habeas corpus proceedings, the lack of evidence supporting the charges, abuses related to pretrial detention, the holding of mass judicial hearings, restrictions on the right to defense and judicial guarantees, disregard for due process of law, among others.
- With respect to persons deprived of liberty, the already precarious situation of this population aggravated by deplorable conditions of detention, high levels of overcrowding in certain centers and excessive use of pretrial detention.
- Information regarding the possible deaths of between 189 and 200 persons deprived of liberty – in the absence of consistent figures- and concerns about shortcomings in investigations into such cases, the process of notifying families, and the treatment of corpses.
- Legislative reforms imposing limitations on freedom of expression, as well as limitations on access to information due to a range of obstacles, including an alleged rise in the classification of public information, and reports of a hostile environment for carrying out journalistic coverage and human rights advocacy in the country.

7. Based on its findings, in the Country Report, the Commission formulated 23 recommendations and requested the State to adopt measures to promote human rights, considering the challenges identified.

8. On June 28, 2024, the IACHR notified the State of the publication of the Country Report and asked it to submit information on the level of compliance with these recommendations within the following six months. In response, on January 29, 2025, the State of El Salvador requested the IACHR to hold an in-person meeting with El Salvador's Presidential Commissioner for Human Rights and Freedom of Expression to present a report on compliance levels[9]. In addition, on April 23, 2025, through Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, the State submitted the document "Report of the State of El Salvador to the IACHR on the Compliance with the Recommendations of the Report on State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador". (hereinafter "State Report" or "Report Submitted by the State") and reiterated to the Commission an in-person meeting to present this information.

9. On May 2, 2025, a delegation of the IACHR, headed by its President José Luis Caballero and Commissioner Carlos Bernal Pulido, Rapporteur for El Salvador, met with a delegation from El Salvador led by the then Presidential Commissioner for Human Rights and Freedom of Expression Andrés Guzmán. At this meeting, the State presented the written report that was provided to the Commission and outlined the main measures implemented to comply with the recommendations formulated in the Country Report.

[7] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 5 and 6.

[8] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 7, 8 and 9.

[9] El Salvador, Note No. MPOEA-OAS-007/2025, June 28, 2025.

10. For the preparation of this document, in addition to the information provided by the State, on July 21, 2025, the IACHR requested that the State of El Salvador submit their response, within 30 days, on compliance with the recommendations in the Country Report, through a questionnaire covering each recommendation[10]. On August 19, 2025, through Note Verbale MPOEA-OAS-090-2025, the State requested a 15-day extension of the original August 21 deadline. On August 21, the IACHR granted an additional period of 10 days through Note 254-25-IACHR-SE-GAB-CE. The State finally provided the information on September 5 2025[11]. The Commission values and appreciates and is grateful for the information received, which has been incorporated, as appropriate, into this document.

11. For its part, the IACHR also sent a questionnaire to civil society organizations so that they could provide information related to the follow-up of the recommendations. The IACHR appreciates the information provided by some organizations, which was considered for the follow-up of the recommendations of the Country Report and values their involvement in the follow-up processes of the Commission's recommendations[12] .

12. On October 28, 2025, the Commission transmitted a copy of the preliminary draft of this report to the State, following Article 59 (10) of its Rules of Procedure, and requested it to submit its observations. On November 28, 2025, the Commission received observations and comments from the State[13], which were incorporated, as pertinent, into this version and whose document is annexed to this Report. The final version of this Report was approved by the Commission on December 23, 2025.

13. This follow-up report assesses compliance with the recommendations in accordance with the IACHR's General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations and Decisions[14], in line with the thematic structure incorporated in the Country Report. Furthermore, the preparation of this document is consistent with the IACHR's recommendation follow-up practice.

14. With respect to each recommendation under follow-up, the report presents: (i) the reasons that led the IACHR to formulate them; (ii) the information that has been known since the publication of the Country Report, including that reported by the State and civil society organizations, as well as the information gathered in the monitoring of the general human rights situation in the country[15]; (iii) an analysis of the level of compliance with each recommendation, noting the main advances and implementation challenges; and (iv) a diagnosis of the information that the State has not yet submitted or of the measures that have yet to be adopted to determine progress in the level of compliance. Following the analysis for each recommendation, the IACHR presents its conclusions on the overall progress and challenges of compliance.

15. Full compliance with the recommendations of the IACHR is essential to ensuring the full enjoyment of human rights in the OAS Member States and strengthening the Inter-American Human Rights System (hereinafter "IAHRS"). The current international scenario demands that the actors involved not only actively participate by reporting information on measures to comply with the decisions adopted by

[10] IACHR, Note 229-25/IACHR/SE/GAB-CE, July 21, 2025.
[11] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[12] The organizations that responded to the IACHR questionnaire were: Cristosal, Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) and Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS).
[13] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the draft report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[14] IACHR, General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations and Decisions of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, OEA/Ser.L/V/II. 385/23 (second edition), November 20, 2023. (Available only in Spanish)
[15] To this end, the IACHR has made use of information gathered during public hearings, investigations conducted ex officio, input from petitions and cases and precautionary measures mechanisms, and responses to requests for information submitted under the authority established in Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights, as well as information gathered from other public sources, and the decisions and recommendations of specialized international organizations, among others.

international bodies, including the IACHR, but that these efforts translate into suitable, timely, and effective State measures that achieve the objectives of each decision.

16. The IACHR reiterates the importance that the State of El Salvador fully comply with the recommendations made in the report under follow-up. It also hopes that this tool will facilitate the establishment of a dialogue process to advance the implementation of El Salvador's public policies on human rights.

II. FOLLOW-UP OF RECOMMENDATIONS

Recommendation No. 1. Put an end to the suspension of the rights and guarantees curtailed under the state of emergency.

17. In the Country Report, the IACHR warned that the States do not enjoy unlimited discretion to establish an emergency regime, and the Inter-American bodies must exercise subsidiary and complementary control within their spheres of competence. It also took note of the information available on the current and unprecedented rates of improvement in citizen security in El Salvador reported by the State, which would demonstrate that there is no emergency that justifies maintaining in force the suspension in accordance with the requirements of the American Convention. Consequently, the Commission considered that this measure was no longer exceptional and proportionate and should be replaced by policies in line with human rights[16].

Information on compliance

18. In April 2025, the State justified the extension of the state of emergency by citing the persistence of illicit activities by criminal organizations, other than ordinary crime, and their serious threat to national public security, as well as a need to prevent serious human rights violations attributable to organized crime. It noted that this measure is supported by the American Convention on Human Rights and the Salvadoran Constitution and concluded that the regime will remain in force as long as the circumstances justifying its application persist. In addition, the State affirmed that it has complied with the elaboration and implementation of a comprehensive and multisectoral public policy on citizen security, guided by a human rights perspective[17].

19. Subsequently, in its second report of September 2025, the State reported that the state of emergency remains subject to continuous review through successive extensions approved by the Legislative Assembly, based on the Constitution of the Republic and on technical analyses by the competent authorities. It explained that the measure responds to the persistence of criminal structures with a high capacity for rapid deployment, requiring national-level implementation, and aims not to address common crime, but a criminal phenomenon of exceptional proportions. It also indicated that, in accordance with Legislative Decree No. 344 of July 31, 2025, the suspended rights are those provided for in Articles 12, paragraph 2, 13, paragraph 2 and 24 of the Constitution, concerning the maximum period of administrative detention, the immediate notification of reasons for detention and the inviolability of correspondence and telecommunications, noting that the freedom of assembly and association under Article 7 is no longer suspended, as it was in former Decree No. 333 of March 2022[18] .

20. It also stressed that these suspensions are applied in accordance with criteria of necessity, proportionality, reasonableness and temporality, and are strictly limited to what is authorized by the constitutional framework and to public security needs. Concurrently, a comprehensive public security policy is being implemented with an inter-institutional and human rights approach, based on technical evidence and social participation. As support, the State cited the U.S. State Department's 2024 report, which acknowledged the significant reduction in gang-attributed killings as a result of policies implemented under the emergency regime[19].

[16] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 3, 49, 67.

[17] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

[18] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

21. In turn, the State affirmed its recognition that the IACHR does not authorize the suspension of certain rights, even in exceptional situations. In this regard, it underlined that legislative decrees have precisely defined the scope of restrictions, applying them only to constitutional rights expressly permitted and excluding those which, by their nature, are non-derogable. Specific measures have been taken to guarantee the observance of these rights, including the maintenance of judicial and prosecutorial oversight to prevent irreparable violations, as well as the continuous legal assistance provided by the Office of the Attorney General (PGR), through its Public Criminal and Juvenile Criminal Defender Units, to guarantee the right to technical defense of persons deprived of liberty[20].

22. On November 25, 2025, the State notified that the Legislative Assembly approved a new extension of the emergency regime, based on criteria of necessity, proportionality, reasonableness and temporality. It noted that complex criminal structures continue to operate in both urban and rural areas, alongside persistent risks of gang resurgence and digital communication patterns involving adolescents, as well as transnational dynamics that would require extraordinary measures. In this context, the State argued that the continued application of the state of emergency allows for the anticipation and dismantlement of these threats, ensures coordinated operational actions and guarantees an effective state response to a criminal phenomenon that, in its view, retains exceptional nature[21] .

23. At the same time, the State highlighted operational indicators that it considers to reflect sustained improvements in public security, including reaching an accumulated of 1,000 days without homicides nationwide as of August 30, 2025, and the stabilization of communities formerly affected by gangs. It emphasized that territorial control, prevention and integration policies have contributed to a substantially safer and more predictable environment, consolidating the country as a family-friendly place and as the safest country in the hemisphere according to verifiable data. According to the State, the alignment between these results and the identified risks is seen as justifying the continuation of the regime while maintaining conditions that it considers exceptional[22].

24. In the field of international organizations, the Commission observes that, in the report of the Universal Periodic Review of El Salvador, published July 11, 2025, by the United Nations Human Rights Council, multiple States recommended lifting the state of emergency and restoring the suspended guarantees, in particular the right to liberty and due process[23].

25. The organizations Cristosal and CEJIL, for their part, pointed out that the State has not fully restored the suspended guarantees. According to the information provided to the Commission, the Assembly has extended the state of emergency 40 times, (the last extension having been adopted on July 31, 2025), thereby maintaining the suspension of rights to be informed of the reasons for detention; to remain silent; to be assisted by counsel; and to the inviolability of correspondence. They emphasized that the maintenance of the state of emergency is in breach of the recommendation[24]. At the same time, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) confirmed that there are no State measures to restore rights. On

[19] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[20] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[21] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[22] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[23] United Nations Human Rights Council, Report of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review - El Salvador. July 11, 2025.
[24] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

the contrary, the Assembly has extended the state of emergency more than 40 times and has approved legal reforms that entrench the concentration of power[25].

26. Finally, the Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) organization also reported more than 40 extensions of the state of emergency and more than 88,000 detentions. It stated that the rights to personal liberty, technical defense and inviolability of correspondence continue to be suspended. It added that the suspension has lasted for more than three years without any measures to restore rights, and that recent reforms have lengthened criminal pre-trial proceedings, extending pretrial detention to as much as five years[26]. Most recent public information indicates that El Salvador approved the 43rd extension of the state of emergency, which will remain in force until November 1st, 2025, and records a total of 89,500 persons detained[27].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

27. The IACHR appreciates the information provided to follow up on the recommendation. In this regard, it notes that the UPR of the Human Rights Council called for the lifting of the state of emergency and reinstating guarantees; civil society organizations, for their part, reported multiple extensions for more than three years.

28. It also observes that the State maintains the ongoing state of emergency through successive extensions by claiming the necessity, proportionality and constitutional basis of such a measure. In addition, it maintains suspended rights related to the deprivation of liberty and communication and that, according to the State, the state of emergency will remain in force "for as long as the circumstances that justify it persist". In turn, it warns that the State has reported the existence of indicators describing a broadly stabilized and predictable security context, including 1,000 days without homicides and the country as the safest in the entire Western Hemisphere. This coexistence between a context described as highly safe and the continuity of the suspension of rights does not translate into actions aimed at lifting the restrictions required by this recommendation.

29. The Commission recalls that, within the framework of the present follow-up Report, it is not appropriate to re-examine the relevance or necessity of the state of emergency, a matter already addressed in the Country Report. Rather the assessment is limited to determining whether the State has taken measures to comply with Recommendation No. 1: to lift the suspension of the rights and guarantees restricted under that measure. The information provided by the State confirms that, on November 25, 2025, a new extension of the state of emergency was approved and that the suspension of rights remains in force, which explicitly runs counter to the requested measure.

30. Based on the information reported, the Commission finds that the State has not taken action to end the suspension of rights, nor has it established a plan for the progressive restitution of guarantees. In accordance with the General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, when the State acts against the intent of the recommendation (here, to extend and consolidate the suspension of rights) and repeatedly asserts that the state of emergency will remain in force, no meaningful steps toward compliance can be observed. Therefore, the Commission concludes that this recommendation has not been complied with.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

31. In response to the determination of non-compliance, the Commission regards the specific follow-up to this recommendation as concluded for the purposes of this report. However, it reserves the right to resume its evaluation should the State, in the future, modify its stance or implement verifiable measures

[25] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

[26] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.

[27] Associated Press, El Salvador aprueba 43ra prórroga del régimen de excepción y reporta 89.500 detenidos (in Spanish), October 1, 2025.

enabling a new assessment of the level of compliance with the recommendation. Such measures could include, for example, the non-renewal and formal lifting of the state of emergency through the immediate and verifiable restitution of suspended guarantees; or the issuance of a court ruling that cancels the suspension of guarantees, accompanied by public and periodic information that allows verification of its implementation and results.

Recommendation No. 2. Elaborate and implement a comprehensive and multisectoral public security policy on the causes and consequences of crime, based on evidence, with a focus on human rights, establishing the participation of civil society bodies in its definition and implementation.

32. In the Country Report, the IACHR reiterated that public policies on citizen security should aim to prevent and control violent or criminal behavior that affect the exercise of rights, so that the members of a society can go about their daily lives with the lowest level of threat to their personal integrity, their civic rights, and the enjoyment of their property. In the case of El Salvador, it noted that it has been monitoring the State actions in the field of citizen security, particularly since the change of government in June in 2019, including the Territorial Control Plan, and welcomed the fact that a sum of efforts have been made in the prevention of violence, mitigation of risks and damages to vulnerable groups. Likewise, the Commission observed that no concrete mechanisms were identified to allow citizen participation in the design, implementation and evaluation of the citizen security policy at national and local levels and therefore requested that measures be adopted in this regard[28].

Information on compliance

33. In April 2025, the State reported having a citizen security policy grounded on comprehensive strategies that combine crime prevention, crime prosecution, and the reconstruction of the social fabric, highlighting the implementation of the Territorial Control Plan. In addition, the State indicated that its initiatives are founded not solely on sanctions, but also on social integration and restoration of the community fabric, in particular: (i) the creation of Urban Centers for Welfare and Opportunities (CUBO) for youth development; (ii) implementation of vocational education programs and extracurricular activities for young people at risk; (iii) promotion of initiatives for the social reintegration of individuals with no involvement in crime; (iv) the adoption of the Act on the National System of Integration - Phase VI of the Territorial Control Plan, which created the National Directorate of Integration (DNI)[29].

34. Regarding the human rights approach, the State reported that it has conducted training and implemented protocols to monitor the use of force by the authorities. It delved into what it describes as a "citizen security approach", stating that the Territorial Control Plan responds to a comprehensive security perspective, highlighting the Opportunities and Integration phases. It also reiterated the creation of the DNI, which conducts programs to reduce poverty and improve social, human, and economic conditions of the population, and reported the integration of a council with representatives of different ministries and the employment sector[30].

35. Regarding the participation of civil society in the Territorial Control Plan, the State mentioned the creation of Local Rights Committees, which are spaces for coordination between the State and civil society, through which it supports community projects, handles collective complaints, provides technical assistance, and coordinates with public and private institutions. In addition, it stated that the Territorial Activation Plan creates pathways for economic, social, and cultural development, aiming to reduce vulnerability among historically excluded communities. The State also referred to the promotion of community listening spaces by the Ministry of Local Development and other institutions, involving children, adolescents, adults, and the elderly. It mentioned an agreement between the Ministry of Culture and the Directorate of Social Integration and provided an update on ongoing dialogue with civil society, emphasizing the Presidential Commissioner for Human Rights and Freedom of Expression's policy of openness to dialogue with civil society organizations[31].

[28] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 89, 113, 114 and 115.
[29] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[30] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

36. Subsequently, in its second report of September 2025, the State reported that it has developed and implemented a comprehensive and multisectoral public security policy with a focus on human rights, based on evidence and aimed at addressing the structural causes of crime. It pointed out that this policy is mainly articulated through the Territorial Control Plan, and particularly its Phase VI, approved by the Act of November 14, 2023, on the National System of Integration. According to the State, the Directorate of Integration, an autonomous institution, was created and empowered to plan, regulate, and implement integration policies aimed at poverty reduction, social cohesion, and the consolidation of security. The State stressed that this strategy involves different ministries, autonomous institutions, mayors' offices, universities, and civil society organizations, promoting spaces for the active participation of communities, families, children and adolescents in the definition and follow-up of policies[32].

37. According to the reports, the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescence (CONAPINA) plays a central role in the implementation of this policy by developing preventive and support measures, such as monitoring the Integration Act, the development of technical guidelines with impact indicators and the implementation of territorial activation plans and psychosocial programs. Protection measures have also been implemented through the Protection Boards, interagency coordination with the Office of the General Prosecutor, the Office of the Attorney General and the National Police, and by addressing collective rights violations, particularly the prevention of the recruitment of adolescents into criminal structures. In addition, the active participation of children and adolescents is encouraged through consultations, awareness-raising campaigns and an Advisory Council made up of representatives of the country's fourteen departments[33].

38. The State reported that the Act on the National System of Integration is in force and has enabled the centralization and coordination of efforts from both the public and private sectors into a social development model based on the Culture of Integration. It indicated that the Directorate of Integration has implemented programs such as "ADN de la Pobreza y Cultura de Integración", "Ferias Integra", "Integrando Comunidades", "Continuidad Académica y Técnica", "Escuelas Integradoras", programs for the elderly, and Florecimiento de la Vivienda y Acceso al Crédito, among others, which in 2024 benefited over 330,000 people across social, educational, cultural and housing areas[34] .

39. The State pointed out that, in continuity with what was informed in the first report, progress has been made in the implementation of the social programs of the Directorate for the Reconstruction of the Social Fabric, with the emphasis being on the Urban Centers for Welfare and Opportunities (CUBO). It stated that, until January 2025, eleven centers had been built and that at least ten additional centers are scheduled to open during the year. It indicated that the CUBOs offer technical and vocational training, complementary education, sports and recreational activities, and the promotion of a culture of peace, serving 28,500 young people per month, with a retention rate of 95% and 2,400 technical certifications granted. According to the State, areas where the program has been implemented have seen a decrease in the number of young people recruited by criminal structures, positioning these programs as transformative spaces for community cohesion, citizen participation, and violence prevention[35].

40. Later, in November 2025, the State emphasized that security policy is, by nature, a human rights policy, as it restores territorial control and reduces violence, and is built on a comprehensive strategy that includes territorial control and the phase of "integration", aimed at removing barriers to access to education, employment, culture, sport, health and coexistence. The State explained that the Directorate of Integration is conducting nine integrative projects in fields such as employability, educational opportunities,

[31] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[32] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[33] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[34] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[35] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

youth participation, conflict mediation, mental health, social infrastructure and local entrepreneurship, all of which have publicly available reports and results[36]. Finally, it argued that the Act on Foreign Agents seeks to guarantee transparency in external financing and rejected any claim that it is used to intimidate organizations or to engage in practices of persecution against human rights defenders[37].

41. Cristosal and CEJIL organizations reported that the State had failed to create spaces for dialogue with human rights organizations or groups of victims, such as the Movimiento de Víctimas del Régimen de Excepción or the Bloque de Búsqueda de Personas Desaparecidas. On the contrary, they pointed out that since May 2025 the government pursued criminal charges against human rights defenders, which Amnesty International described as arbitrary detentions, and that the President delivered a speech in June 2025 stigmatizing these people and refusing international monitoring[38].

42. For its part, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) recalled that, after the presentation of the "Integration" phase of the Territorial Control Plan in 2023, the Assembly approved the Act on the National System of Integration, which created a Directorate of Integration responsible for implementing social programs that, according to official data, served 22,123 men and 36,566 women between June 2023 and May 2024. However, it warned that public information was insufficient to assess its impact and that there were no spaces for dialogue with organizations critical of state power, while regulations such as the Act on Foreign Agents, used to intimidate, had been passed[39].

43. In turn, the Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) reported that, in March 2025, the government launched Phase 6 of the Territorial Control Plan, called Integration, announcing programs such as "ADN de la Pobreza", "Integrando Abuelos" or "Ferias Integra", but noted the absence of public information on their implementation or on State efforts to establish a comprehensive, multisectoral citizen security policy. It also indicated that lack of transparency hindered the assessment of civil society's participation and that spaces for dialogue were reportedly closed.

44. Also, in November 2025, SSPAS noted that the State had taken a number of measures, including strengthening the operational capacity of the National Civil Police and investing in the modernization of that institution, as well as the National Academy of Public Security and the Ministry of Public Security and Justice (MSPJ). It also identified an increase in investment in infrastructure to support institutional modernization, exceeding the levels recorded for recreational spaces for crime prevention and reconstruction of the social fabric, according to the 2024-2025 MSPJ's Report on Activities. Finally, it mentioned as one of the main achievements reported by the 2024-2025 MSPJ, the creation of the Readaptation, Rehabilitation and Vocational Training Centre, aimed at providing training opportunities for the population deprived of liberty. However, SSPAS reiterated the need for greater transparency and consolidated and verifiable information on the implementation of the Territorial Control Plan and the security policy[40] .

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

45. The IACHR is grateful for the information provided by the State and civil society organizations. Drawing on the three State reports, including documentation submitted in November 2025, as well as contributions from civil society, the Commission notes that the State has adopted measures representing progress in the implementation of a comprehensive citizen security policy. These measures include the establishment and operation of the National Integration Directorate, which represents a positive step toward rebuilding the social fabric. Likewise, investment aimed at strengthening the police's operational capacity and [36] The State provided the following link: https://www.transparencia.gob.sv/documentos/462-5 (in Spanish).

[37] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report, November 28, 2025.
[38] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[39] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[40] The Human Rights Program of the Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Follow-up Report on the Recommendations made by the IACHR under the Emergency Regime in El Salvador, November 2025, p. 19-26.

advancing its institutional modernization constitutes a significant step forward in enabling the police to fulfill its citizen security responsibilities. The establishment of the Readaptation, Rehabilitation and Vocational Training Centre for Persons Deprived of Liberty further reinforces the preventive and social aspects of the security policy. In turn, the IACHR observes the information provided regarding the implementation of several educational, community and psychosocial programs under the Territorial Control Plan and the Act on the National System of Integration, reflecting progress in the programmatic dimension of the recommendation.

46. For their part, civil society organizations, despite having mentioned these actions and state programs, reported insufficient public information on their implementation and results, as well as a lack of effective opportunities for dialogue with critical sectors.

47. Although the IACHR values the information provided, this does not allow for concluding that a comprehensive and multisectoral public policy on citizen security has been adopted and implemented in accordance with the recommendation. In this regard, the IACHR considers that the information presented requires more consolidated evidence to allow a comprehensive assessment of how security policy is articulated across the territory in a coherent manner, based on interrelated rather than isolated measures, how it explicitly incorporates the human rights approach, how it is grounded on empirical evidence, and what effective mechanisms ensure the participation of civil society at its various stages. These elements represent areas of development that will strengthen the coherence, transparency, and overall effectiveness of public policy. In view of the foregoing, the IACHR concludes that the recommendation is partially complied with.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

48. To advance compliance, the Commission invites the State to provide information that will allow a comprehensive verification of how the citizen security policy explicitly incorporates a human rights approach, how it is grounded in evidence, and which bodies ensure the effective participation of civil society in its design, implementation and evaluation. It also invites the State to report in a consolidated way on how these dimensions are coherently articulated across the territory and within the various institutions responsible for their implementation.

Recommendation No. 3. Periodically publish data on the actions taken in connection with citizen security policy and the results obtained, including within the framework of the different stages of the Territorial Control Plan.

49. In the Country Report, the IACHR highlighted the importance of state measures to publicize the Territorial Control Plan and expressed concern about the lack of transparency surrounding the actual impact of the measures implemented in the field of citizen security. In this regard, the Commission emphasized the importance of this information for ensuring accountability and highlighted the need for public indicators to assess whether the measures fulfill objectives consistent with human rights[41] .

Information on compliance

50. In its April 2025 Report, the State provided IACHR with a Data Systematization Matrix of the Territorial Control Plan to facilitate a clear visualization and understanding of the plan's outcomes. The Matrix displayed 149 results from 2021 to 2025. Each result was assigned to a category and, in addition, included the applied indicator, the data, a corresponding summary, and the source referenced[42]. With respect to the categories of the results presented, the State reported the results disaggregated by year as follows[43]:

[41] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 91, 177 and 317.

- 2021: 2 results: 1 on economic impact and 1 on impact on public services).
- 2022: 62 results: 15 on crime reduction, 12 on reconstruction of the social fabric, 9 on economic impact, 7 on international perception, 6 reflecting impact on labor, 4 on tourism, 3 on citizen perception, 2 concerning impact on security, 1 related to impact on education, 1 on public security facilities, 1 concerning the dismantlement of criminal organizations, and 1 pertaining to prison control.
- 2023: 47 results: 8 concerning impact on security, 6 on crime reduction, 5 on economic impact; 5 on citizen perception, 4 on impact on public services, 4 on tourism, 3 reflecting impact on labor, 2 related to prison control, 2 on reconstruction of the social fabric, 2 on the protection of children and adolescents, 2 on the protection of human rights, 1 on the judicial system; 1 on international perception, 1 on social impact, 1 on the judicial system.
- 2024: 34 results: 5 on economic impact, 5 on reconstruction of the social fabric, 4 on protection of children and adolescents, 3 on tourism, 3 on social impact, 2 on social reintegration, 2 of international perception, 2 on crime reduction, 2 on international cooperation, 1 concerning impact on security, 1 on impact on public services, 1 on protection of human rights, 1 on technological development, 1 pertaining to protection of women, 1 related to impact on education.
- 2025: 3 results: 1 concerning impact on security, 1 on crime reduction, 1 related to impact on public services)[44].

51. In its September 2025 official report, the State reiterated the Data Systematization Matrix of the Territorial Control Plan as a measure of compliance. It explained that the Plan draws upon public records and news, which ensure transparency and accessibility of information. It further noted that, as the data originates from official, open-access sources, they are disseminated regularly, allowing citizens and the international community to learn and evaluate the Plan's progress and outcomes. However, in response to the IACHR's request for a public access link, the State indicated that the matrix provided is not publicly available and does not have a dedicated link, while clarifying that the information presented was compiled from databases and public news[45].

52. Subsequently, in November 2025, the State asserted that it had complied with this recommendation, noting that all competent institutions regularly publish information, results and updates related to the Territorial Control Plan on its websites and official channels. It argued that the Data Systematization Matrix cited by the IACHR does not constitute a standalone document intended for publication but rather serves as an internal tool that organizes and consolidates information already publicly available through open sources, institutional communications, and online repositories. According to the State, publishing it as a separate file would exceed the recommendation's scope, as the information is already accessible and verifiable through the various official portals[46].

53. Regarding the publicity of data on the actions taken in the framework of the citizen security policy, the civil society reported that over 73% of information requests are denied or ignored, while authorities'

[42] The cited sources include the Presidency of the Republic; the Central Reserve Bank; the Legislative Assembly; the Ministries of Economy, Justice and Public Security; Culture, Foreign Affairs, Tourism and Environment; the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents; the Directorate for the Reconstruction of the Social Fabric; the Salvadoran Institute of Women Development; National Civil Police; Supreme Court of Justice; UNICEF; UN Tourism; El Salvador Journal; Los Angeles Times; La Página journal; La Prensa Gráfica; the digital newspaper "Dinero"; El Mundo; AES El Salvador; Forbes Central America; Corporación Salvadoreña de Turismo; and the Argentinean media outlet "Expediente Público".

[43] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

[44] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

[45] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

[46] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.

excessive classification of public interest information, burdensome filing requirements, and a weakened oversight institute hinder access"[47]

54. In their reports to the IACHR, civil society organizations agreed that the State had failed to fulfill its obligation to periodically publish data on the actions and results of its security policy. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) noted the absence of a consolidated record: security institutions only released infographics with general figures on social networks such as Facebook or X; institutional websites provide limited and outdated information; and, until August 2025, the data were reported as unavailable, with the only official figures being the totals recorded in each decree extending the state of emergency[48].

55. For its part, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA)indicated that information, in general, is limited. It noted that the transparency portal of the National Civil Police has not been updated since 2022. In addition, the Office of the Attorney General, in its 2024-2025 Report on Activities, highlighted significant reductions in the homicide rate (1.4 per 100,000 inhabitants) and the impunity rate (reaching 98.2%), attributing these outcomes to inter-agency coordination and the state of emergency. However, it warned that these figures are not disaggregated by gender, age or other factors, and that other statistics, such as those on violence against women, have not been published since 2023[49].

56. Finally, Cristosal and CEJIL affirmed that the State remains noncompliant with the recommendation. They indicated that the few figures known are those disseminated in official propaganda format. In addition, they emphasized that the official document of the Territorial Control Plan has not yet been published, remaining classified as confidential despite the expectation that it should be made available informally. They also noted that this restriction is recorded in the 2023 index of reserved information of the Ministry of Justice and Public Security, which is the most recent one published on the transparency portal of its website[50].

57. Lastly, based on ongoing monitoring, the IACHR emphasizes that, in the same vein, other reports from civil society organizations indicate that all three branches of government systematically deny requests for public information regarding femicides, homicides, serious crimes, as well as prevention, reintegration and rehabilitation programs. This lack of transparency has led them to conclude that in the country, "the right to public information in the field of security is permanently violated," a situation that could also extend to other areas of democratic life[51].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

58. The IACHR appreciates the information provided by the State and civil society organizations. It expresses particular concern regarding the reports submitted by civil society on the difficulties and obstacles created by the State in accessing information of public interest about the citizen security policy, its outcomes, and the Territorial Control Plan. It highlights the high percentage of omissions or refusals of requests for information, as well as the overclassification of data. The IACHR recalls that access to information is a right protected by the American Convention on Human Rights and urges the State to guarantee its full exercise in accordance with applicable Inter-American standards.

59. Furthermore, the IACHR emphasizes that, in accordance with the principles of maximum disclosure, accessibility and integrity, information should be published in an organized and easily understandable manner, enabling interested parties to assess its content. While the State identified the Data Systematization Matrix of the Territorial Control Plan as a relevant mechanism for compliance with the [47] Human Rights Watch, World Report 2025: El Salvador Events of 2024, 2025.

[48] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[49] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[50] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[51] Artículo 19, El Salvador: reinvención del autoritarismo. Pasos hacia el fortalecimiento de un régimen autoritario, 2025.

recommendation and maintained that its content can be traced through information available on various institutional portals, the Commission observes that, because this data is fragmented across multiple portals and institutional sources, its accessibility and usefulness are limited. For the Commission, the mere existence of requested public data, scattered across different platforms and lacking clear, centralized, or systematic identification does not amount to effective compliance with the duty of disclosure. In addition, it recalls that its recommendation is based on a prior diagnosis, which identified structural deficiencies in publicity, transparency, and systematization of official data. Compliance therefore requires the adoption of new, specific, and verifiable measures that directly address these issues, rather than mere reference to existing fragmented or scattered information.

60. In accordance with its General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, and in the absence of evidence that the State has implemented measures to ensure the regular dissemination of reliable, disaggregated, up-to-date, and systematically compiled information on its security policy and its outcomes, the IACHR considers that this recommendation is pending compliance.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

61. The IACHR believes it is essential that the State adopt measures to strengthen transparency, accountability, and social participation in relation to the Territorial Control Plan and the citizen security policy. It is essential to ensure the availability of public, accessible, up-to-date, and verifiable information, so that both the general public and the international community are able to know, monitor and assess the actions undertaken and the outcomes achieved within the framework of the measures set forth in the recommendation. The IACHR also reiterates the importance of establishing public indicators that enable the assessment of whether the measures adopted are consistent with Inter-American standards and ensure respect for and protection of human rights.

Recommendation No. 4. Develop and implement a policy to assist victims of crimes perpetrated by gangs, ensuring the participation of victims and civil society throughout the process.

62. In the Country Report, the Commission emphasized the importance of ensuring proper attention to and reparation for victims of crimes perpetrated by gangs, including those who lost their lives, in accordance with relevant international standards. It also reiterated the importance of providing assistance to victims as a central element of its work in the field of citizen security, including material, medical, psychological, and social assistance, among others. In this regard, the Commission expressed its readiness to provide technical support in strengthening these attention-focused measures [52].

Information on compliance

63. In his first April 2025 report, the State indicated that it had requested technical assistance from the IACHR for specialized support in developing a comprehensive framework for assisting victims of gang violence, and requested a response to achieve progress in fundamental policies aimed at guaranteeing the rights of gangs victims and strengthening the human rights protection system in the country. In addition, it reported that the following measures had been taken[53]:

- Submission of more than ten written requests relating to areas requiring technical cooperation, specifying objectives and the expected scope.

[52] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 5, 93, 95 and 97.

[53] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

- Participation in thematic hearings and bilateral meetings with commissioners, reiterating the request for support and emphasizing the importance of involving international human rights experts in providing assistance to victims.
- Delivery of official documentation, encompassing specific requests.

64. It also stated that it has undertaken significant efforts to design and implement a comprehensive policy for assisting victims, without providing further details[54].

65. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State noted that it had adopted a comprehensive policy to support victims of gang crimes, aimed at ensuring an immediate, specialized, and coordinated response in line with the Constitution and international human rights standards. To this end, the State noted strengthening permanent complaint-filing and assistance mechanisms, such as Line 119 and the Protection Boards; improving coordination among entities of the National System of Comprehensive Protection; and creating specialized programs for relatives of victims to reduce psychosocial impacts and facilitate access to protection, health and legal assistance services[55] .

66. The State also highlighted the consolidation of the capacities of judges and technical personnel to address children's and adolescents' issues, as well as the implementation of inter-agency operations at the territorial level to reduce the exposure of children and adolescents to street situations, trafficking, and exploitation. It added that the active participation of civil society has been ensured throughout the definition and monitoring of these actions, which, in its view, strengthens the comprehensive and participatory nature of the implemented policy[56].

67. In November 2025, the State reiterated that it has taken multiple measures to provide comprehensive assistance to victims of gang crimes, including psychosocial and legal support, inter-agency coordination across health, education, and social protection sectors, and maintaining individualized victims' registers. It noted that these actions are coordinated through the Directorate of Integration and affirmed that they had previously been reported to the IACHR. It also reiterated that it had made formal requests for technical assistance before the Commission[57].

68. The civil society organizations that sent information related to compliance with this recommendation agreed that the State failed to design or implement a comprehensive policy to assist victims of gang crimes. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) reviewed publicly available documentation from National Civil Police and observed that the actions undertaken were limited to isolated activities of the National Directorate for Victim Assistance. In 2024, the local assistance offices served 5,736 people (61.7% women), while the Bureau for the Assistance of Victims of Forced Displacement assisted 1,161 people, primarily through the distribution of vouchers. The review found no evidence of dedicated programs for gang victims or of a comprehensive strategy. It further noted that the units responsible were constrained by limited staff and resources[58].

69. In the same vein, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) indicated that State actions target the mass detention of persons allegedly connected to gangs, rather than ensuring justice or reparation for the victims. Although the Office of the Attorney General noted in its 2025 Report on Activities that 102,820 victims received assistance and 107,368 persons were criminally charged, the organization warned that these figures were not disaggregated, and the characteristics of both the victims and the alleged perpetrators remained unknown, hindering the assessment of access to justice. It also denounced that, far from encouraging the participation of victims and civil society, the adoption of the Foreign

[54] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[55] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[56] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[57] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report, November 28, 2025.
[58] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.

Agents Act in May 2025 imposed restrictions on organizations and fostered a climate of intimidation and self-censorship[59].

70. For their part, Cristosal and CEJIL emphasized that the State has not introduced any new measures and has merely continued with existing programs, which remain clearly insufficient. To illustrate the lack of priority, they cited some budget figures: the general budget for 2025 allocated 589 million to the Public Security and Justice area, but only 428,840 (0.07%) to the category of "Comprehensive Attention to Victims", an amount that had even decreased compared to 2024, and by mid-year, only 12.8% had been executed. Against this backdrop, they concluded that the recommendation is still not complied with and that the participation of victims and civil society organizations in its design and implementation is non-existent[60].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

71. According to the information received, it is noted that the State has repeatedly expressed its willingness to develop a comprehensive policy to assist victims and has requested technical cooperation from the IACHR to this end. However, the information presented lacks specific details on the existence, design or implementation of such a policy and focuses on describing efforts to secure external support and on examining the operations of existing offices.

72. For their part, civil society organizations agreed that the State has not designed or implemented a comprehensive policy to assist gang victims. They noted that actions have been confined to pre-existing programs providing isolated assistance, characterized by limited resources and lacking clear mechanisms for the participation of victims or civil society. They also highlighted the absence of targeted programs for gang victims, the lack of disaggregated official data, which hampers the assessment of access to justice, and the limited budget allocated to victim assistance, representing only a minimal share of overall spending on security and justice.

73. Consequently, the Commission considers that, to date, no substantive progress has been demonstrated in the design or implementation of a comprehensive policy to assist gang victims in accordance with Inter-American standards. The level of compliance with this recommendation is therefore pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

74. To advance compliance with this recommendation, the Commission considers it necessary for the State to provide detailed and verifiable information on the design of a comprehensive policy to assist gang victims, including its regulatory framework, allocated budget, responsible institutional mechanisms, and the results obtained. It is also essential to substantiate the actual participation of victims and civil society organizations in the design, implementation, and evaluation phases of this policy. Lastly, information is needed on the measures taken to guarantee material, medical, psychological, and social assistance to victims, as well as on the remedies provided for reparation and access to justice.

Recommendation No. 5. Establish a register that identifies individually the victims of human rights violations perpetrated in the context of detentions and criminal prosecutions initiated under the state of emergency, ensuring the participation of victims and civil society throughout the process.

75. In the Country Report, the IACHR expressed its concern about the information available on alleged unlawful, arbitrary detentions as part of the security policy in the context of the emergency decreed by the State, as well as on challenges identified in access to justice and their implications for the guaranteeing of rights to judicial guarantees and judicial protection. In this regard, the Commission considered it necessary to identify the circumstances that generated this pattern of alleged violations, as well as the victims and damage suffered, in order to provide them with comprehensive reparation[61].

[59] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

[60] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

Information on compliance

76. In April 2025, the State affirmed that, prior to the issuance of the recommendation by the Commission, the Office of the Attorney for the Defense of Human Rights (PDDH) had already conducted an individualized register of victims of alleged human rights violations arising from detentions and criminal prosecutions. Based on the information provided, the PDDH has established a register that enables the individual identification of each case and incorporates follow-up mechanisms and objective evaluation procedures to ensure that victims receive the necessary assistance and reparation[62] .

77. The State also noted that it has implemented rigorous monitoring mechanisms throughout the application of the state of emergency, including internal and external control and audit procedures conducted in collaboration with human rights organizations and civil society. In addition, it indicated that it remains open to constructive dialogue with the IACHR and the international community to strengthen existing mechanisms and adopt new measures that foster a safer, more just, and respectful country in relation to human rights[63].

78. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State reported that the PDDH, as an autonomous body, had established an individualized register of victims of alleged human rights violations as early as 2019, including those associated with detentions and criminal proceedings under the state of emergency. It indicated that this register, supported by an Institutional Management Computer System (SIGI), enables the identification and follow-up of each case, the systematization of patterns, and the guidance of actions related to protection, investigation, monitoring and comprehensive reparation, maintaining strict confidentiality and data protection measures. It also noted that the documentation is prepared with rigor and a focus on the affected individuals, incorporating direct input from the PDDH and the participation of family members. As context, it referenced the 2024 U.S. State Department Report, which addressed the decreasing gang violence and the absence of "credible reports of significant human rights abuses."[64]

79. In addition, the State reported that mechanisms have been implemented to supervise the state of emergency, with a focus on children and adolescents, in response to the recommendation issued by the IACHR. It highlighted that, by August 8, 2025, the Technical Board for Referral and Case Management had been established between the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA) and the PDDH, formalized through a letter of understanding. According to the State, this team defined responsibilities and joint working procedures to ensure a coordinated and effective intervention, guaranteeing the direct participation of victims and civil society in the monitoring and follow-up of cases, in line with the objective of developing and maintaining the register of victims set forth in Recommendation No. 5[65].

80. In November 2025, the State reaffirmed its position that there is no systematic pattern to human rights violations under the state of emergency and therefore does not warrant the creation of a dedicated register of victims beyond the existing general register, emphasizing that all detainees are subject to judicial proceedings and that the competent institutions, including the PDDH, already maintain records in accordance with their respective mandates. It also reiterated that the register operated by the PDDH enables

[61] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 7, 10 and 148.
[62] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[63] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[64] U.S. Department of State, 2024 Country Reports on Human Rights Practices: El Salvador.
[65] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

the identification of victims, the provision of individual follow-up, the detection of patterns and the coordination of protection and support measures[66] .

81. The organizations Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) and the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) agreed that the State did not establish an official register of victims of alleged human rights violations during the state of emergency. SSPAS noted that, by February 2025, civil society organizations had identified 6,889 affected persons and recalled that the President had announced the release of 8,000 "innocent" persons. However, it underlined that those who were released remained subject to substitute measures and that the Government never recognized them as victims[67]. IDHUCA maintained that, as of August 2025, there was no verifiable information indicating the creation of a register, emphasizing that the releases announced by the Executive constituted neither recognition nor reparation. Furthermore, it stressed that reforms such as Decree 227 of 2025 facilitated the extension of pretrial detention, resulting in individual being held for more than three years without an initial hearing[68].

82. Cristosal and CEJIL also stated that no measures had been taken to design or create a register of victims of violations committed under the state of emergency and therefore considered the recommendation to be non-compliant. All four organizations concluded that the State neither provided official data nor recognized the affected persons as victims; as a result, no reparation process was initiated[69] .

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

83. The Commission notes that the State has cited the existence of a register administered by the PDDH since 2019, as well as coordination bodies such as the CONAPINA-PDDH Technical Board. However, the register did not demonstrate specificity regarding human rights violations committed under the state of emergency, which is the direct focus of this recommendation, nor did it provide verifiable, disaggregated data on the number of victims associated with these violations who have been registered, assisted, referred, or provided with reparation. Nor was there evidence regarding its methodology for registration (including minimum fields, eligibility criteria, and verification mechanisms), its traceability of cases (from registration to protection measures, investigation and reparation), or its interoperability with the Office of the Attorney General, the Public Defender Service, the Institute of Legal Medicine or other key institutions to facilitate access to justice and comprehensive reparation.

84. Similarly, the State failed to demonstrate that the register meets the two substantive criteria of the recommendation: (i) effective participation of victims and civil society throughout the process (design, operation, validation and monitoring of the register); and (ii) sufficient individualization to allow follow-up of each case and the public dissemination of statistical information in accordance with transparency standards. The Commission considers that merely referencing a prior institutional register of general scope does not fulfill the requirement for a specific register addressing the violations that occurred under the state of emergency, nor is it conceived to guide processes of recognition and reparation of the victims.

85. In view of the foregoing, the Commission concludes that the State failed to develop or implement a dedicated register, in collaboration with victims and civil society, capable of demonstrating verifiable results with respect to assistance and reparation. Consequently, the recommendation is still pending compliance.

[66] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[67] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[68] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[69] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

86. To advance compliance, the State shall establish a dedicated register for victims of human rights violations occurring under the state of emergency, separate from the existing general register, supported by a public protocol that defines its purpose, criteria for inclusion, minimum identification fields, confidentiality safeguards and referral mechanisms for protection, investigation and reparation. This register shall be designed and operated with the effective participation of victims and civil society throughout all phases. Likewise, it is necessary to ensure its interoperability with key institutions and publish, on a defined periodic basis, aggregated and anonymized statistics (high/low, types of violation, assistance mechanisms/reparations granted, response times), together with documentary evidence supporting its functioning.

Recommendation No. 6. Elaborate and implement a comprehensive reparation plan for the victims of human rights violations perpetrated in the context of detentions under the state of emergency, considering the gender perspective and the intersectionality of other factors of vulnerability and discrimination.

87. In the Country Report, the IACHR expressed its concern about complaints on human rights violations related to the criminal policy implemented during the state of emergency. This information concerned a significant number of allegedly illegal and arbitrary detentions affecting victims with diverse vulnerability profiles, as well as practices recorded during operations conducted by the security forces that involved acts of discrimination and criminalization. The IACHR emphasized that the State must adopt measures to remedy the harm suffered by the victims of these practices, ensuring full reparation and non-repetition of these acts[70].

Information on compliance

88. The State affirmed that, as of 2025, it provides mechanisms to ensure access to justice and comprehensive reparation in accordance with Article 245 of the current Constitution, drawing attention to those implemented by the following bodies[71]:

- Office of the General Attorney (PGR): Provides legal assistance and representation to people in vulnerable situations. It noted that this entity operates particularly in cases of human rights violations, offering free advice and support in judicial proceedings.
- Courts of Justice: They hold jurisdiction over matters in which the State can be held liable.
- General Prosecutor's Office (FGR): Competent to investigate and to employ the legal mechanisms necessary to clarify any circumstances that may give rise to State liability.
- Office of the Attorney for Human Rights' Defense (PDDH): It refers to an autonomous body that hears complaints, investigates alleged human rights violations, and formulates recommendations.

89. Regarding the enhancement of legislation and access to reparation, the State affirmed that the existing Salvadoran legal framework ensures access to comprehensive reparation mechanisms, without specifying the particular rules or mechanisms to which it refers[72].

90. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State reported that it has implemented a comprehensive reparation plan for victims of gang crimes, incorporating a gender perspective and addressing the intersectionality of vulnerability factors in a cross-cutting manner. It highlighted that the plan provides immediate and coordinated attention, psychological support, legal advice, and measures aimed at restitution and rehabilitation, as well as guarantees of non-repetition. It emphasized that the State policy is grounded in the principle of restitutio in integrum, as established by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, which entails both the reestablishment of the previous situation and the remediation of the effects of the violation[73].

[70] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 10, 95, 143, 144, 147, 148, 151, 152 and 399.
[71] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[72] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

91. Regarding gender-specific attention and access to justice for women, it highlighted the work of the Salvadoran Institute for Women Development (ISDEMU), which enhanced protection programs by providing support networks, interdisciplinary attention services, psychological support, and legal guidance in accordance with the Special Comprehensive Act on Violence-Free Life for Women (LEIV). It also mentioned PDDH's work in capacity-building, awareness-raising, providing gender-sensitive direct assistance, as well as convening roundtable discussions to strengthen public policies in this field. In addition, the Office of the Counsel-General of the Republic (PGR) provides free legal assistance to detained women and their families, including representation in judicial remedies and protective measures for families, with particular attention to dependent children and adolescents[74] .

92. The State also referred to community recovery initiatives implemented by the Directorate for the Reconstruction of the Social Fabric, such as the "Nuevos Paradigmas" programs, focused on mental health and therapeutic support, and "Yo Soy, Yo Puedo", aimed at women's empowerment and strengthening community leadership. For its part, the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA), through its Protection Boards, launched a Plan for the restitution of rights for children and adolescents, and participates in the Specialized Assistance Program for Families of Victims of Feminicide and other forms of violence, ensuring psychosocial support and comprehensive protection measures[75].

93. The State further emphasized that this comprehensive reparation plan is anchored in a robust legal framework. It noted that the Constitution of the Republic recognizes the right to compensation for miscarriages of justice and provides safeguards for the protection of rights, even under states of emergency. Among these, it referred to habeas corpus, as regulated by the Constitution and the Constitutional Procedures Act; the ordinary judicial mechanisms provided for under the Criminal Code; and the actions of institutions such as the FGR, which is responsible for the investigation and prosecution of criminal cases; the PDDH, which is mandated to investigate violations, recommend measures of reparation, and ensure the participation of victims and their family members; and the PGR, which guarantees free, legal representation and defense to persons in vulnerable situations. In addition, it highlighted specific norms, including LEIV, whose article 26 establishes immediate assistance measures for women and their families. According to the State, this normative and institutional framework guarantees that victims have effective access to justice and comprehensive reparations in accordance with national and international human rights standards[76].

94. In November 2025, the State argued that the Commission was requesting the adoption of a single, standalone instrument, designated as such, aimed exclusively at "victims of the state of emergency", which it regarded as unnecessary. It noted that there are no elements to presume human rights violations resulting from legal detention that warrant a dedicated reparation plan. It reaffirmed that the current reparations framework is intended for victims of gang crimes and is implemented through assistance, referral, legal representation, mental health services, community empowerment and differentiated restitution schemes[77].

95. Civil society organizations informed the IACHR that the State had not designed or implemented a comprehensive reparation plan for victims of the state of emergency. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) indicated that there was no State plan and that the initiatives arose from civil society. It mentioned that, in September 2024, movements such as the Movimiento de Victimas del Regimen (MOVIR), the Unidad de Derechos Humanos y Comunitarios (UNIDEHC) and the Bloque de Resistencia y Rebeldía Popular (BRP) submitted an "alternative and popular project" to the Legislative Assembly with the objective of increasing social investment and reducing military expenditures and propaganda, while noting that the

[73] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[74] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[75] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[76] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[77] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report, November 28, 2025.

authorities neither considered the proposal nor reported on any progress. It noted that, as of August 2025, no official reparation plan had been released, and no State institution had published information about victims through its official channels[78]. For its part, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) contended that there was no comprehensive reparation plan because the Government had not even established a register of victims. It noted that the State continued to label all detainees as "terrorists" and barred them from reintegration programs and any form of reparation, even though they had not been convicted[79].

96. Cristosal and CEJIL agreed that the State has not developed a reparation plan for victims of violations committed during the detentions under the state of emergency. They asserted that no investigations have been conducted into the reported abuses, and that the authorities insisted on maintaining the state of emergency without acknowledging the violations extensively documented by human rights organizations and the national and international press. Based on this position, they concluded that the recommendation was not complied with and that the State remained unwilling to recognize or compensate the victims[80].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

97. State information describes actions related to service provision, support, and reparation for victims of gang crimes. However, the recommendation specifically concerns the development and implementation of a comprehensive reparation plan for victims of human rights violations resulting from detention and criminal prosecution under the state of emergency, with the participation of victims and civil society. In this regard, the Commission warns that the State has not provided verifiable information demonstrating the existence of a plan pursuant to the stated objective, its formal adoption, budget, participation mechanisms, eligibility criteria, procedural steps, or any differentiated reparation measures applied to such victims.

98. Civil society organizations reported the absence of a reparation plan aimed at victims of the state of emergency, lack of official recognition of persons released as victims and lack of public information to verify measures of restitution, rehabilitation, compensation, satisfaction and guarantees of non-repetition applicable to these cases. Based on the above, no material progress has been made with respect to the specific scope of the recommendation, and it therefore remains pending compliance.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

99. To advance compliance with this recommendation, the Commission considers it necessary for the State to provide detailed and verifiable information on the existence of a comprehensive reparation plan specifically addressing the victims of human rights violations that occurred during the state of emergency. It is essential that the State identify the measures implemented to ensure reparation across its various dimensions (restitution, compensation, rehabilitation, satisfaction and guarantees of non-repetition), with particular emphasis on gender perspectives and intersectionality. It is also essential to demonstrate the participation of victims and civil society in the design, implementation, and evaluation of the plan, and to provide details on the budget and the results achieved.

Recommendation No. 7. Bring the criminal and criminal procedure legislation adopted or amended during the state of emergency into line with Inter-American norms and standards, in particular:

a. Repeal any provision that requires the mandatory application of pretrial detention or that prevents its substitution due to the type of crime, in particular Article 5° of Legislative Decree No. 339 of March 30, 2022;

[78] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[79] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[80] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

b. Repeal the provisions that allow for the confidentiality of the identity of justice operators in the context of their actions in criminal proceedings, in particular Article 2 of Legislative Decree No. 339 of March 30, 2022.

100. In the Country Report, the IACHR noted that, since the installation of the emergency regime, a series of legislative amendments have been approved in the areas of criminal law, criminal procedure, and juvenile justice, addressing issues of concern. In this regard, it noted that these reforms above all pursue a strongly punitive approach to address challenges to citizen security, highlighting the aspects contrary to the Inter-American legal framework and the standards developed by the Inter-American Human Rights System, particularly the mandatory application of pre-trial detention to certain offenses and the confidentiality of the identity of justice officials in the framework of their actions in criminal proceedings[81].

Information on compliance

101. In April 2025, the State justified the declaration of the state of emergency, which served as the basis for the enactment of the criminal law and criminal procedure legislation referred to in the Recommendation under follow-up. According to the information provided, the state of emergency is legal and necessary, insofar as it "responds to the best interests of the State, the protection and security of the Salvadoran population in the face of criminal structures that have undermined the peace and stability of the country for years."[82]

102. Thus, the State explained the validity of Articles 2 and 5 of Legislative Decree No. 339 of March 30, 2022, noting that these provisions are essential to prevent impunity, to guarantee the effectiveness of criminal proceedings, and to safeguard the physical integrity and life of justice officials. Furthermore, it noted that, although these rules —in particular Article 2— exist, they have been applied restrictively, and that, in practice, the defendants have had access to the identities of judges and prosecutors at every hearing[83].

103. At the same time, in September 2025, the State noted that Article 5 of Legislative Decree No. 339, which provides for mandatory pretrial detention for certain offenses, is still in force. However, it stated that detention "is not automatic" because the procedural rule requires the judge to provide reasoning and to evaluate other factors necessary for the application of precautionary measures, ensuring that each decision is ruled reasonably and in accordance with the Constitution and Inter-American standards. About Article 2 of the same decree, which provides for the protection of the identity of judges, prosecutors and other justice officials, the State affirmed that it has not been repealed and emphasized that it is intended as a preventive security measure against potential reprisals by criminal organizations. It highlighted that confidentiality of identity applies only to the information contained in communications and in the public versions of court rulings, without prejudice to the right of defense of the alleged offenders[84].

104. The State also outlined that legislative activity is conducted in accordance with the Constitution and the human rights treaties ratified by El Salvador, which enjoy superior legal status compared to secondary legislation. Accordingly, any law that has been approved is subject to review for compatibility with international standards[85].

105. Subsequently, in November 2025, the State affirmed that its actions have been oriented toward protecting the right to life and personal integrity of the population. In addition, it argued that "the Commission exceeds its mandate by attempting to direct the modification of domestic legislation, a matter that falls within the sovereignty of the State and its democratic process of deliberation, especially in the field of

[81] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 6, 123, 126, 188 and 219.
[82] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[83] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[84] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[85] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

criminal justice''. It reiterated that pretrial detention remains subject to specific procedural criteria, denying that its application is systematic or mandatory with respect to any particular criminal offense. It maintained that safeguarding the identity of justice officials is an essential security measure to prevent potential reprisals by criminal structures. Finally, it objected to the inclusion by IACHR of references to other legal reforms, including the Organized Crime Act, the Penitentiary Act and the Juvenile Criminal Act, on the grounds that this would unduly broaden the original scope of the recommendation[86].

106. For their part, the organizations Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) and the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) agreed that the State failed to adopt measures to bring criminal and procedural legislation under state of emergency into conformity with Inter-American standards. They pointed out that, instead, a number of regressive reforms were adopted in 2025: the Organized Crime Act extended indictment periods, permitted open hearings of up to two years, and allowed minors to be tried before adult courts; the Prison Act transferred powers from supervisory judges to special courts; and the Juvenile Criminal Justice Act allowed the transfer of adolescents to adult prisons. Both emphasized that Article 5 of Legislative Decree 339, which establishes compulsory pretrial detention, and Article 2, which permits the reservation of the identity of judges and prosecutors, remain in force[87].

107. The organizations Cristosal and CEJIL further noted that recent reforms neither harmonized legislation with the standards of the Inter-American system nor repealed the provisions on pretrial detention and the anonymity of justice officials, which constitutes a breach of the recommendation. They emphasized that, in the jurisdiction dealing with organized crime, pretrial detention was applied as a rule and judges operated under conditions of reserved identity; moreover, these practices extended to cases with no connection with gangs. As an example, they mentioned the detention of human rights defender Ruth Eleonora López, who was accused of illicit enrichment and subjected to an exceptional period of 15 days of administrative detention without a warrant or access to defense attorneys. They noted that this constitutes evidence of the use of the emergency-regime powers to criminalize opponents and dissenting voices[88] .

108. Based on available public information, the Commission was able to verify that, according to the Security Cabinet, as of August 2025, 88,600 persons had been arrested under the state of emergency, of whom at least 8,000 have been granted alternative measures to detention, although their judicial proceedings remain ongoing[89]. The Commission was also aware of the adoption of Decree No. 383, which introduced reforms to the Organized Crime Act[90]. This amendment allows for the further extension of pretrial detention periods, increasing the timeframe within which the Office of the Attorney General may file formal charges against certain persons under the state of emergency to three years (currently two). In addition, it establishes the figure of the “open hearing", which permits an active proceeding to be maintained for up to two years, allowing new defendants to be added as the prosecuting institution presents additional evidence. Finally, the decree provides for the removal of adolescents from the juvenile justice system, so that they will be prosecuted by ordinary courts.[91].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

109. The Commission observes that the State’s response serves only to justify the current legislation, noting that pretrial detention is not applied automatically and that the anonymity of judges and prosecutors is intended to protect them from reprisals. However, no legislative or administrative measures

[86] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[87] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025. Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[88] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[89]La Prensa Gráfica Notifican ampliación de detención provisional en casos del régimen de excepción hasta agosto de 2027, September 1, 2025 (in Spanish).
[90] El Salvador, Legislative Assembly, Decree No. 383 which enacts amendments to the Organized Crime Law, August 15, 2025 (in Spanish).
[91] La Prensa Gráfica, Assembly approves reforms to the Organized Crime Act, August 15, 2025 (in Spanish).

aimed at modifying these provisions have been identified, nor any review processes established to align them with Inter-American standards, as required by the recommendation.

110. With regard to the State's claim of an alleged exceedance of the IACHR's mandate, the latter recalls that issuing recommendations may entail regulatory adjustments and that monitoring compliance with international human rights obligations falls within its powers. These recommendations do not supersede the legislative authority of the State, but rather specify the international obligations undertaken and the measures necessary for their effective implementation.

111. Furthermore, in response to the content of its recommendation, the IACHR expresses concern regarding the adoption of regressive laws in 2025, such as the Organized Crime Act and Prison Act, which extend detention periods and authorize the trial of adolescents as adults, contrary to the mandate of the recommendation. Concerns are raised regarding the use of the state of emergency to criminalize persons expressing dissent and the preservation of judges' identities, which restricts transparency and the right to defense. Consequently, the Commission considers that this recommendation remains pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

112. To advance compliance with this recommendation, it is essential that El Salvador review and repeal the provisions imposing mandatory pretrial detention, starting with Article 5 of Decree 339, and ensure that such precautionary measures are applied solely in exceptional and justified circumstances, with the possibility of substitution according to the Inter-American standards. It should also amend Article 2 of the same decree and other provisions allowing the identities of judges and prosecutors to be preserved, so that anonymity may be authorized only in exceptional cases, subject to judicial oversight, and without compromising the right to defense or judicial transparency. Finally, it is recommended that reforms enacted during the state of emergency, including the Organized Crime Act, the Prison Act, and the Juvenile Criminal Justice Act, be reviewed to harmonize them with Inter-American human rights standards and to ensure that public security measures uphold due process, the presumption of innocence and the special protection afforded to adolescents in conflict with the law.

Recommendation No. 8. Bring the legislation on juvenile justice amended during the state of emergency into line with inter-American norms and standards, in particular:

a. Repeal any provision ordering the mandatory application of preventive detention or imprisonment or preventing its substitution due to the type of crime, in particular Article 3° of Legislative Decree No. 342 of March 30, 2022;

b. Repeal the provisions that allow application of adult prison sentences to persons under 18 years of age within the framework of juvenile justice, in particular Articles 1° and 2° of Legislative Decree No. 342 of March 30, 2022.

113. In the Country Report, within the series of legislative amendments adopted by the State as part of its citizen security policy, the IACHR examined those concerning juvenile justice and expressed concern over the substantial deterioration of measures applicable to children and adolescents in conflict with the law. Consequently, it requested that concrete measures be taken to ensure that this regulation is consistent with the applicable Inter-American standards[92].

[92] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador", OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 6 and 127.

Information on compliance

114. In 2025, the State highlighted the need for the state of emergency, and particularly the reforms to the Juvenile Criminal Law (Legislative Decree No. 342, March 30, 2022), which allows pretrial detention and adult detention to be applied to persons under 18 years of age. According to the State, "organized terror, extortion and homicide networks" exploited the protections afforded by the juvenile justice system, recruiting adolescents to commit crimes on the basis that their legal responsibility would be reduced. In this regard, while affirming its commitment to the protection of the rights of children and adolescents, it maintained its position concerning the regulations in force[93].

115. On pretrial detention (Art. 3 of Legislative Decree No. 342), the State noted that while its application in minors is not widespread, it is deemed justified in cases involving serious crimes linked to organized crime, particularly where there exists a risk of flight, reoffending, or interference with the judicial process. It justified this measure on the grounds of preserving public security and preventing the risks of flight and reoffending, provided that its application is proportionate, differentiated, and in accordance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child[94].

116. With respect to the application of adult-regime prison sentence to minors (Articles 1 and 2 of Legislative Decree No. 342), the State maintained that "minors have not been equated with adults," emphasizing that differentiated and specialized measures exist for adolescents involved in serious crimes within the context of organized crime. In this regard, it explained that the elements of this policy include a specialized juvenile justice system; the separation of juvenile offenders and gang members; guarantees of proportionality and mechanisms for the review of penalties; protection of adolescents not involved in organized crime; safeguards for juveniles; and alignment with international standards, including the "Beijing Rules" and the "Mandela Rules"[95].

117. Finally, El Salvador made extensive reference to the legislative authority vested in the head of State, noting that this authority includes the power to adapt legislation to the "realities of the country." However, it noted that the criminalization of youth has not been pursued; rather, measures have been implemented to facilitate the social reintegration of minors who are not affiliated with organized crime[96].

118. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State reported that the reforms to juvenile justice legislation, approved during the state of emergency, have not been repealed, but noted that they have been implemented in accordance with international standards. It noted that the legislative authority is empowered to enact reforms in exceptional circumstances, including situations in which minors participate in organized criminal structures, and emphasized that any such measures shall not affect the validity of ordinary juvenile criminal law. To guarantee the rights of this population, the administration of the Social Integration Centers (CIS) implemented measures including the separation of detainees by age, gender and type of detention; protection against cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment; access to face-to-face or virtual judicial proceedings; improvements in infrastructure, hygiene, food, and medical care; specialized facilities for teenage mothers and their children; and human rights training for staff, with a view to ensuring decent treatment, non-discrimination and the integration of a gender perspective[97] .

119. The State also reported that Article 3 of Legislative Decree No. 342 of March 30, 2022, has not been repealed, while clarifying that it does not provide for the automatic imposition of pretrial detention. It explained that the application of this provision requires individualized judicial assessments, conducted in accordance with the principles of proportionality, reasonableness, and adequate justification. It specified that,

[93] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[94] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[95] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[96] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[97] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

in the case of minors, pretrial detention may be imposed in felonies linked to organized crime only when there is evidence of a risk of flight, repeated offenses, or attempts to manipulate the judicial process[98].

120. In addition, the State indicated that the provisions allowing the imposition of penalties on adolescents do not render them equivalent to adults. It argued that minors continue to be prosecuted under the Juvenile Criminal Justice Act with due process and without changing the age of criminal responsibility. It added that specific centers have been established for adolescents associated with gangs, offering differentiated social reintegration programs administered by the Directorate-General of the Directorate-General of Prisons. It further noted that the sanctions imposed are proportionate, subject to periodic review and potential reduction, and that custodial measures comply with the UN Beijing Rules and Mandela Rules, prioritizing rehabilitation and minimizing exposure to negative influences[99].

121. At the same time, in November 2025, the State held that Legislative Decree 342 and its subsequent reforms do not equate adolescents with adults or establish automatic application; stating that preventive detention is imposed only through individualized judicial decisions, which are subject to review under proportionality criteria. It emphasized that juvenile justice continues to be governed by the Juvenile Criminal Justice Act, featuring institutional specialization, access to technical defense, and judicial oversight, and that centers for adolescents operate separately according to age and gender, applying comprehensive protection protocols and implementing reintegration programs. It added that the preservation of identity of justice officials is maintained only in the presence of real risks, without prejudice to the right of defense. Finally, it reiterated that these norms respond to the realities of the country and are grounded in its sovereign authority to promote peace and well-being[100].

122. For its part, civil society indicated that recent reforms to the Special Act on Organized Crime (LECO) would disproportionately affect young people, as they permit them to be tried by the same judges who handle adult cases in matters related to organized crime[101].

123. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) reported that, as of August 2025, the State had taken no steps to bring the juvenile justice legislation, as amended during the state of emergency, into compliance with Inter-American standards; it noted that Article 3 of Legislative Decree 342, which establishes compulsory preventive detention, and Articles 1 and 2 of the same decree, provide for the application of adult penalties to minors, remained in force[102]. The Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) agreed that no corrective reform had been adopted and further observed that, in 2025, even more regressive standards were implemented: Decree 225 amended the Juvenile Criminal Justice Act to enable the transfer of adolescents accused of organized crime to adult prisons, and Decree 383 curtailed the role of juvenile court judges, reducing their function to that of mere supervising judges. None of the provisions imposing compulsory detention or adult sentences on minors had been repealed[103]. In turn, the organizations Cristosal and CEJIL noted that the State had neither taken measures to harmonize juvenile justice legislation nor repealed the provisions in question and therefore concluded that the recommendation had not been observed[104].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

124. Based on information provided by the State, it is noted that the State has defended the validity of Legislative Decree No. 342 and other subsequent reforms, arguing that they do not equate adolescents with adults and that they are applied in accordance with proportionality criteria and with differentiated assistance measures. It also reported improvements in detention conditions and in reintegration programs at specialized

[98] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[99] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[100] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[101] Cristosal, Regime Legalizes Early Penalties in El Salvador, August 18, 2025 (in Spanish).
[102] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[103] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[104] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

centers for adolescents. However, the State acknowledged that the provisions mandating preventive detention and permitting the imposition of adult sentences on minors have not been repealed.

125. For their part, civil society organizations reported that none of the contested provisions have been amended and that, moreover, certain regressive measures have been adopted, exacerbating the situation. These include Decree 225 of 2025, which allows the transfer of adolescents accused of organized crime to adult prisons, and Decree 383, which restricts the functions of juvenile court judges. They also emphasized that the reform of the Special Act on Organized Crime establishes that adolescents are to be tried before the same judges who prosecute adult offenders. In this regard, civil society concluded that the recommendation has not been observed and that the reforms adopted further entrench setbacks in juvenile justice.

126. Considering this information, the Commission finds that the State has not adopted measures to repeal provisions incompatible with Inter-American standards on juvenile justice. On the contrary, the current legislation retains the contested provisions, and additional reforms have been adopted that further extend these restrictions. Therefore, this recommendation is still pending compliance.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

127. To advance compliance with this recommendation, the Commission considers it necessary for the State to report on the legislative measures undertaken with a view to repealing the provisions that impose mandatory pretrial detention on adolescents and that permit the imposition of adult sentences on minors. It should also be specified how sanctions are to be ensured to be differentiated, proportionate and oriented toward social integration, in line with the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Beijing Rules and the relevant Inter-American jurisprudence. Finally, information is needed on the mechanisms in place for judicial oversight of the implementation of these measures, as well as on the participation of civil society in the design and follow-up of any potential reforms.

Recommendation No. 9. Produce, and move ahead with implementing, the plan for the gradual withdrawal of the armed forces from citizen security tasks.

128. In the Country Report, as part of its monitoring of the State's actions in the area of citizen security, the Commission recalled that, since 2021, it has drawn attention to the importance of building police capacities in order to advance the implementation of the plan for the gradual withdrawal of the Armed Forces from citizen security tasks[105].

Information on compliance

129. In 2025, the State reiterated its commitment to the protection of human rights, recognizing the fundamental role that both the National Civil Police (PNC) and the Armed Forces of El Salvador (FAES) play in ensuring citizen security. Under this pretext, the State pointed out that, within a complex context shaped by the fight against organized crime, both institutions must act in a coordinated and complementary manner. Thus, they explained that the participation of FAES in security tasks is not limited solely to the state of emergency context but has been part of the comprehensive public security strategy of the State in accordance with Article 168 of the Constitution of the Republic. Therefore, according to the State, the Territorial Control Plan empowers the Armed Forces to act in a complementary way to the PNC to maintain public order and safeguard citizen security[106].

130. However, the State acknowledged the "importance" of the PNC assuming exclusive responsibility for citizen security functions, noting that, over time, the operational and technical capacities of that institution will be progressively strengthened. According to the State, the gradual withdrawal of the Armed Forces from these functions must be preceded by a thorough technical analysis that accounts for both the evolution of the security context and the institutional strengthening of the PNC. It further explained that the Salvadoran State maintains a continuous and systematic evaluation of these measures[107].

[105] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, par. 92.
[106] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

131. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State reiterated that the participation of FAES in citizen security tasks is not confined exclusively to the state of emergency context, but has been part of the comprehensive security strategy implemented by successive administrations and enshrined in the Constitution. It further explained that the use of the Armed Forces constitutes an exceptional and transitional measure designed to complement the work of the PNC in the face of serious threats. It also noted that, pursuant to Executive Decree No. 27 of December 2024, this support was extended until December 31, 2025, within a legal and constitutional framework intended to strengthen state capacities. It clarified that military participation follows a gradual transition strategy, aimed at its progressive withdrawal as territorial control is consolidated and citizen security institutions are strengthened[108].

132. The State also reported on progress in strengthening the operational and technical capacities of the PNC, with the aim of facilitating the gradual withdrawal of the Armed Forces from citizen security tasks and in accordance with Inter-American human rights standards. It highlighted the implementation of the "ONI" artificial intelligence platform under Phase III of the Territorial Control Plan, which enables real-time identification of gang members with outstanding arrest warrants, analysis of criminal patterns and optimization of resource deployment. It assured that the use of this tool adheres to the principles of legality, necessity and proportionality in the use of force[109].

133. It also noted the expansion of the use of Information and Communication Technologies (ICT), such as surveillance centers, license plate recognition cameras and the Police Information System (SIP), which collects and analyzes data to enhance investigative and operational efforts. According to the State, these innovations have reduced crime, increased the efficiency of the PNC, and allowed its agents to focus on territorial work by relieving them of administrative tasks. Accordingly, it confirmed that the Police have taken a leading role in restoring citizen security and is increasingly capable of assuming the responsibilities previously held by the Armed Forces[110].

134. In turn, in November 2025, the State held that the participation of FAES in public security tasks is exceptional, temporary and under civilian command in accordance with Article 168 of the Constitution. It reiterated that the continued military deployment responds to persistent risks arising from organized crime, and that Executive Decree 27 of December 4, 2024, established both a time frame until December 31, 2025, and a mechanism for continuous evaluation to support a potential gradual withdrawal. It also noted that progress has been made in strengthening the National Civil Police, including technological capabilities, training, and operational reorganization, which provides the essential foundation for a gradual and enduring transition[111].

135. The Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) observed that, contrary to expectations of a withdrawal from security tasks, the State has further increased the Armed Forces' presence. Based on monitoring conducted by the University Observatory of Human Rights, it reported that by December 2024 there were ten active military fences across various areas of the country, supported by a deployment of 64,230 troops, of which 64% were from FAES and 36% from the National Civil Police. San Salvador reportedly concentrated almost half of the agents. It further noted that in June 2025 a new siege was established in Ilopango, involving 500 police officers and 1,500 military personnel, and that no public reports were available regarding the results of these operations or their impact on violence or on the rights of affected

[107] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[108] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[109] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[110] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[111] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report, (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.

communities. It also highlighted that a captain of the armed forces had been appointed Minister of Education in August 2025, which it considered indicative of the militarization of civilian-designated positions[112].

136. For its part, the Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) also indicated that the Government has not take measures for a gradual withdrawal of FAES. It also noted that, as of September 2022, there were already 20,237 military personnel assigned to public security, and that the Executive Decree of December 27, 2024, extended for an additional year the deployment of the Army in the streets to safeguard borders and prisons. It argued that these broad decrees not only increased the scope of responsibilities of FAES but also signaled a shift toward authoritarianism. It added that Ministry of Defense's budget reached 314.3 million dollars in 2025, an increase of 169.17 million and ten times that of the Ministry of Environment, and that between 2024 and 2025, it grew by 53 million. It further noted that, together with the reform of Article 39 of the Criminal Code, which equated military and police officers as security agents, these developments demonstrated the strengthening of the military role in citizen security[113].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

137. Based on information provided by the State, it is noted that the State has recognized the need to strengthen the PNC and has indicated that military participation is exceptional, transitional, and part of a broader strategy aimed at possible gradual withdrawal. However, to date, no specific plan has been presented with a timetable, define objectives, or verifiable criteria to allow for the monitoring of progress toward the gradual replacement of FAES in citizen security tasks. On the contrary, the State reported that military support has been extended through an Executive Decree until the end of 2025.

138. For their part, civil society organizations emphasized that, rather than diminishing, the Army's engagement in citizen security tasks has expanded. They indicated that military fences are present in various parts of the country with significant numbers of troops, that the defense budget has grown substantially, and that recent legal reforms have broadened the range of tasks entrusted to FAES. They also stressed the lack of public reports on the results of these operations and considered that these developments reflect a trend toward the militarization of security and civilian-designated functions.

139. In light of the foregoing, the Commission warns that the State has not only failed to present a plan for gradual withdrawal but has also adopted and extended measures that perpetuate and expand military involvement in citizen security, contrary to the intent of the recommendation and impeding compliance during the period under review. Pursuant to the General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, and considering the State's conduct, which obstructs the required implementation, specifically the gradual replacement of FAES by the PNC, it must be concluded that the recommendation has not been complied with.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

140. In response to the determination of non-compliance, the Commission concludes the specific follow-up to this recommendation in the framework of this report. However, the IACHR reserves the right to resume its assessment at a future stage should the State modify its position or adopt verifiable actions that would allow for renewed examination, including the development of a clear and verifiable plan for the gradual withdrawal of FAES from citizen security tasks, with defined timelines, measurable objectives, and monitoring mechanisms.

Recommendation No. 10. Urgently conduct diligent and impartial investigations in all cases that occurred within the framework of the state of emergency where civilians were injured or killed by police or military forces, or in state custody, while also investigating possible acts of torture, to establish the facts and determine the corresponding criminal or other responsibilities.

[112] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[113] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.

141. In the Country Report, the IACHR highlighted the State's obligation to investigate crimes that consist of human rights violations, including deaths, allegations of torture and ill-treatment of persons deprived of liberty, effectively seeking the truth about what happened, and prosecute and punish those responsible. In addition, it noted the importance of due diligence in the conduct of investigations, particularly with respect to persons in state custody[114].

Information on compliance

142. In 2025, the State categorically rejected the widespread allegations of torture or ill-treatment in State custody, stating that contrary to such allegations, there are no systematic patterns of human rights violations in the country's prisons. It stated that each complaint has been investigated in a transparent and strictly legal manner. In addition, the State provided the following information concerning the implementation of oversight and transparency mechanisms[115]:

- International Monitoring: It stated that international organizations such as the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) and human rights officials from the US embassy in El Salvador have been granted unrestricted access to detention centers, enabling them to carry out inspections and verify compliance with relevant prison protocols.
- Adherence to international standards: It emphasized that El Salvador's prison system has been rigorously adapted to the Nelson Mandela Rules.
- Investigation of complaints: According to the State, although complaints have been filed, none has been corroborated as constituting a systematic practice of abuse under the state of emergency.

143. Additionally, the State reported that all competent institutions have received the complaints submitted and duly process them, while initiating thorough investigations. However, it further stated that no civilian deaths have been recorded in clashes with the security forces and that, to date, there are no investigative or judicial determinations establishing responsibility for acts of torture or for deaths occurring while in state custody. In addition, it argued that the State has responded diligently to the complaints filed by non-governmental organizations and pointed out that precise operational intelligence, the prioritization of non-violence, and the peaceful containment of criminal structures are pillars of its security policy[116].

144. In turn, the State commented that it has a solid institutional framework, comprising independent and effective bodies for investigating any abuse or violation of human rights, including the Office of the Attorney General (FGR), the Office of the Attorney for the Defense of Human Rights (PDDH), the Judiciary, civil society organizations, international organizations, and access to international mechanisms[117].

145. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State reported that it is actively conducting an impartial and diligent investigation into all incidents occurring under the state of emergency that could amount to human rights violations, including instances of civilians wounded or killed by security forces or while in state custody, as well as potential acts of torture. It pointed out that these investigations involve the FGR, the PDDH, the Judiciary and international verification bodies[118].

[114] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 5, 93, 95, 180, 183, 291, 298, 299 and 307.
[115] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[116] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[117] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[118] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

146. The State indicated that, as of August 15, 2025, the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA) had not received any reports of civilians being wounded or killed in State custody, nor any complaints amounting to acts of torture. For its part, the PDDH reported a total of 11,482 complaints filed in 1,498 cases related to the state of emergency, of which 909 remain pending and 589 have been concluded, which, according to the State, demonstrates the existence of an ongoing investigative process[119].

147. In addition, it reported that the National Civil Police (PNC) referred 171 complaints to the FGR, imposed disciplinary sanctions on 14 officers, and dismissed 12 of them. It clarified that no judicial or administrative investigation has established the existence of a pattern of torture or ill-treatment in prisons, thereby refuting the widespread allegations to that effect. It emphasized that each case has been subject of individualized analysis, which serves to prevent any practices of impunity[120].

148. The State reiterated that it has permitted international oversight by bodies including the International Red Cross, OHCHR and human rights officials of the United States Embassy, who have been granted access to prisons. According to the State, the verification findings confirm that the security strategy has been directed toward safeguarding the lives and dignity of persons, with no verified deaths of civilians in confrontations with security forces, and no proven cases of torture occurring in State custody[121].

149. It is important to note that, in November 2025, the State questioned the reliability and verifiability of the information used by civil society organizations concerning deaths in State custody and alleged torture. It stated that any death of a person deprived of liberty is, without exception, formally investigated. It reiterated that international verification had uncovered no evidence of human rights violations and urged the IACHR to conduct a balanced assessment of the State's official statements.[122]

150. For its part, Amnesty International reported that, as of August 2024, it had documented more than 300 deaths of people in state custody. In this regard, they noted the lack of effort by the State to investigate such deaths and to implement measures of non-repetition[123].

151. Cristosal and CEJIL affirmed that the State had entirely disregarded the recommendation to investigate incidents in which civilians were injured or killed by police or military forces, or while in State custody, as well as to investigate allegations of torture. They emphasized that there is no public record of investigations into arbitrary deaths in prisons or of abuses perpetrated by security agents during the state of emergency, reflecting a complete unwillingness to clarify these events[124].

152. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) and the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) agreed that no judicial investigations had been initiated, nor had anyone been held accountable for the reported incidents. The SSPAS noted that the State had neither recognized the deaths caused by security forces nor those occurring in custody, thereby preventing any legal action. It recalled that Cristosal had recorded the deaths of 261 adults and four children and adolescents in prison between March 2022 and April 2024, and that the authorities did not release any information regarding these cases. It also cited data from the Office of the Attorney for of Human Rights' Defense (PDDH), which recorded dozens of complaints of ill-treatment, torture, disproportionate use of force and extrajudicial executions between 2022 and 2024, although it was unclear whether the PDDH had reached any final resolution regarding these cases. Both organizations noted that neither the Office of the General Attorney nor the Office of the General Prosecutor

[119] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[120] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[121] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[122] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[123] Amnesty International, El Salvador: A thousand days into the state of emergency. "Security" at the expense of human rights, December 20, 2024.
[124] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

had reported any investigation into potential acts of torture, and that the authorities stated they had not received any related complaints[125].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

153. Information provided by the State indicates that it denies the existence of torture or deaths in custody, while outlining the procedures for receiving and addressing complaints, applying administrative sanctions, and granting international mechanisms access to detention facilities. However, it did not provide verifiable evidence of effective criminal investigations, including the initiation of individualized cases, the conduct of proceedings (such as autopsies, forensic examinations, and witness interviews), the filing of formal charges and accusations, the publication of judgments, or the implementation of reparation measures. Consequently, based on information provided by the State, it is not possible to establish compliance with the standards of enhanced due diligence, impartiality, and independence in the investigation of deaths, injuries, and potential acts of torture under the state of emergency.

154. Information received from civil society organizations shows numerous cases of deaths in custody and allegations of torture or ill-treatment without evidence of effective criminal investigations or determination of responsibility. In the absence of official public data documenting concrete procedural progress, such as investigative measures, prosecution, and outcomes, it cannot be concluded that the facts have been investigated diligently and impartially, in accordance with applicable standards.

155. Based on the foregoing, the Commission does not validate empirical research findings that conform to Inter-American standards, including timeliness, comprehensive investigation (including adherence to expertise under the Istanbul and Minnesota Protocols), independence, public disclosure consistent with investigative confidentiality, prosecution, and punishment. Under these circumstances, the recommendation is pending compliance.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

156. To advance compliance, the State is required to provide comprehensive and substantiated details regarding current and concluded criminal and disciplinary inquiries, categorized by timeframe, location (detention centers or security force operations), responsible entity, and procedural phase. It should also ensure the independence and impartiality of investigations, including the preventive separation of officers under investigation; the protection of victims and witnesses; and public disclosure compatible with investigative confidentiality through accessible periodic reports. Finally, it is essential to establish binding investigative deadlines, ensure reasonable access to files for family members and representatives, and implement measures of non-repetition in detention centers and security forces, including operational protocols, training and effective supervision.

Recommendation No. 11. Prepare a diagnosis on the current needs of the following institutions, regarding their competencies in criminal cases, as well as a road map with concrete actions for them to carry out their work effectively:

a. Office of the Attorney General;
b. Office of the General Prosecutor;
c. Judiciary.

157. For 2025, the IACHR highlighted the importance of ensuring that these institutions have sufficient resources to perform their functions, considering the specific challenges identified within the justice system considering the arrests made and their implications for the rights of Salvadoran people. In this regard, the IACHR noted the relevance of the fact that, at the present time and in light of the measures adopted in the area of citizen security, these entities should have the capacity to respond to current demands for services, both in terms of the legal defense and in the investigation and conduct of proceedings related to alleged violations of human rights, as well as the exercise of constitutional actions such as habeas corpus[126].

[125] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.

Information on compliance

158. In 2025, the State emphasized its authority to design and implement public policies, indicating that any proposal for diagnosis or strategic planning in the field of justice "must constitute a sovereign initiative, originating from and led by the State itself." In short, it did not provide information on the conduct of a diagnosis of the referred institutions[127].

159. However, the State did refer to the "concrete and substantive actions" it has taken "to consolidate the justice system in El Salvador." It highlighted the modernization and optimization of resources in the Judiciary, including the establishment of specialized courts for the prosecution of organized crime; the reform of the Judicial Career Act to strengthen meritocracy within the service; and the digitalization of judicial processes. Regarding the strategic strengthening of the Office of the General Prosecutor, the State highlighted the establishment of specialized units for the investigation of organized crime and the advancement of forensic investigation capabilities. Finally, with respect to the Attorney General's Office, the State referred to citizen-oriented reforms, including the strengthening of free technical defense and the implementation of Alternative Dispute Resolution Mechanisms[128].

160. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State reported that the Attorney General's Office (PGR), the Office of the General Prosecutor (FGR) and the Judiciary conducted comprehensive internal assessments to identify needs arising from the increase in criminal cases associated with the state of emergency, on the basis of which they implemented measures to strengthen, modernize, and optimize their institutional capacities[129].

161. Regarding the Office of the Attorney General, the State indicated that the sharp increase in demand for public defense led to a strengthening plan, which includes the expansion and adaptation of infrastructure (new offices and spaces ensuring confidentiality), the hiring of criminal public defenders under a professional services modality, the acquisition of computer equipment to expedite case management, and the implementation of continuous training programs for complex cases related to organized crime. As a guide, it stated that its actions are governed by Article 194.11 of the Constitution, the Criminal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code, special laws, its Organic Act and the Instruction for the Public Criminal Defense (RV 07, 28 May 2024), ensuring a comprehensive and efficient defense in accordance with access to justice and due process[130].

162. As for the Judiciary, it reported structural measures based on its diagnosis aimed at decongesting and modernizing criminal justice. These include: the creation of the Digital Judicial Management System for Courts against Organized Crime (Agreement 1-P, 13-Feb-2025); the implementation of a unique file number (NUE) (Agreement 6-P, 27-Mar-2025) for traceability and standardization; the implementation of the platform "Judicial Edicts - El Salvador" (Agreement 3-P, 25-Feb-2025) for digital publication with legal validity; and the restructuring of the Integrated Judicial Center of Soyapango into the Judicial Center against Organized Crime with six specialized courts (Agreement 8-P, 22-Apr-2025). It further noted the establishment of a

[126] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 182, 215 and 216.
[127] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[128] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[129] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[130] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

Specialized Coordination of Cases against Vulnerable Groups and Hate Crimes, attached to the Criminal Chamber, to enhance analysis through a gender and human rights perspective[131].

163. About the FGR, it stated that in response to the increase in organized crime cases, it has established a roadmap aimed at strengthening investigative capacities. This includes creating and consolidating special groups addressing offenses committed by criminal structures, hiring additional prosecuting officers, establishing special training programs with a human rights approach, and establishing inter-agency coordination mechanisms with PDDH and PNC for effective criminal prosecution upholding due process. As a cross-cutting component, it reported the following inter-institutional training measures: 304 activities at the national level within the PDDH-PNC Working Group on the proportional use of force and the guarantees for persons deprived of liberty, with particular attention to children, women and the elderly, as well as 99 training programs offered by the Human Rights School of the PDDH for the PNC, FAES and representatives of the Judiciary[132].

164. The State reported results attributable to these measures, such as the acceleration of judicial proceedings for specialization and digitalization, the technical and legal strengthening of investigations through continuous training and standardization of operational activities (NUE, digital system, electronic edicts), and the improvements in respect for human rights by enhancing the quality of evidence and institutional traceability. According to the State, these advances have improved the effectiveness of investigating and prosecuting organized crime, while upholding procedural guarantees or human rights standards[133] .

165. In November 2025, the State reiterated that it has steadily strengthened the Office of the General Attorney, the Office of the General Prosecutor and the Judiciary. It highlighted once more that these institutions receive continuous training in international human rights standards, have their own budgets and are guaranteed constitutional funding for the Judiciary. As part of the new information, it highlighted the inauguration of the new central building of the Office of the General Prosecutor, funded with support from the Central American Bank for Economic Integration (CABEI), which is expected to improve operational efficiency, optimize internal coordination, and reduce costs for the institution. According to the State, these actions demonstrate the structural strengthening of the judicial system[134] .

166. The Commission emphasizes that it did not receive information from civil society organizations on compliance with this recommendation. On the other hand, it was able to verify from public information that, in response to the increase in criminal cases under the state of emergency, successive extensions of procedural periods were adopted (Decree 547 of 2022, Decree 803 of 2023 and Decree 383 of 2025) which, rather than reflecting an effective strengthening of institutional capacities, have delayed judicial response. According to several reports, trials arising in the context of the state of emergency could begin only in 2027, and the deadlines established by the Organized Crime Act were again extended, with notifications issued for extensions of provisional detention until August 2027. There are also serious delays in the processing of habeas corpus actions: thousands of pending applications and resolutions taking up to three years are reported, heightening concerns about the lack of material effectiveness of the justice system to deal with the situation created by mass arrests[135].

[131] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[132] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[133] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[134] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[135] La Prensa Gráfica, Juicios del régimen de excepción en El Salvador empezarían en 2027, January 8, 2025 (in Spanish); La Prensa Gráfica, Asamblea aprueba reformas a la Ley contra el Crimen Organizado, August 15, 2025 (in Spanish); La Prensa Gráfica, Notifican ampliación de detención provisional... hasta agosto de 2027, September 1, 2025 (in Spanish); La Prensa Gráfica, Corte Suprema de Justicia tarda tres años en responder habeas corpus en favor de capturados del régimen de excepción, September 28, 2025 (in Spanish); El Mundo, Más de 3,200 demandas de habeas corpus en Sala por régimen de excepción, según SJH, September 7, 2025 (in Spanish).

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

167. Based on the information provided by the State, it is noted that, although no specific diagnosis was initially reported, it was later indicated that the PGR, the FGR and the Judiciary carried out internal diagnoses and, on that basis, adopted measures to strengthen institutional capacities. However, this submission is limited to general reformulations and modernization measures, without providing verifiable documentation of diagnoses or roadmaps detailing objectives, goals, timetables, budget, and indicators. In addition, publicly available information indicates successive extensions of procedural deadlines (Decrees 547 of 2022, 803 of 2023 and 383 of 2025) and prolonged delays in the resolution of habeas corpus, suggesting that structural bottlenecks persist in the justice system in the face of the volume of cases and extended pretrial detention, and that the measures outlined have not been sufficient to ensure timely access to defense, effective judicial oversight and constitutional protection.

168. Considering the foregoing, the Commission notes that, while the State has announced initiatives aimed at strengthening and modernizing, it has yet to demonstrate the development of a comprehensive and participatory diagnostic assessment or the definition of a roadmap with concrete actions tailored to address the current needs of the PGR, the FGR and the Judiciary in this exceptional situation. Accordingly, this recommendation is still pending compliance.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

169. To advance compliance with this recommendation, the Commission deems it necessary that the State provide verifiable documentation of the diagnoses carried out by the PGR, the FGR and the Judiciary, as well as the roadmaps designed with goals, timetables, indicators and allocated budget. It is also essential to demonstrate how these measures have effectively strengthened the capacity of these institutions to meet the demands arising from the state of emergency, including access to legal counsel, the impartial investigation of human rights violations and the exercise of constitutional actions. Finally, information is needed on mechanisms for civil society participation in the development and follow-up of these initiatives.

Recommendation No. 12. Adopt measures to guarantee due process for all people arrested in the context analyzed. In particular:

a. Immediately inform the person under arrest and their family and representatives of the motives and reasons for which they are being held.
b. Safeguard exercise of the right of the accused to defend himself or herself personally or to be assisted by counsel of his or her own choosing, and to communicate freely and privately with that person.
c. Cease the practice of mass judicial hearings.

170. In the Country Report, the IACHR expressed its concern about the information received regarding a significant number of complaints of violations of due process by persons detained under citizen security policies, as well as specific challenges in access to justice, including the holding of mass hearings that do not allow for individualized knowledge of the cases and guilt of each individual[136].

Information on compliance

171. In 2025, the State emphasized that, as a matter of sovereignty, it alone possesses the authority to structure its judicial system and formulate its own public security policies. Furthermore, about immediate and accessible information on detention, it noted that strict protocols have been established to ensure immediate notification to the detained person of the reasons for their detention, and that information channels have been implemented so that the family members and legal representatives of the detained persons are informed and know the whereabouts of their loved ones. According to the State, this includes the creation and maintenance of detailed public records that facilitate the timely location of persons under State custody[137].

[136] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 7, 142, 146-161, 198-216.

172. Regarding the exercise of the right to defense and legal assistance, the State affirmed that it has strengthened the system of free, public defense through the PGR, as well as ensured the provision of legal assistance to all persons detained through the Presidential Commission on Human Rights and Freedom of Expression. It further noted that it has guaranteed, without restriction, the right of detainees to appoint legal counsel of their choice and to communicate freely and privately with their defense attorney[138].

173. Finally, regarding the mass judicial hearings, the State indicated that this exceptional measure is being implemented under strict judicial supervision, pursuant to regulations in force and due process, highlighting the hearings optimization and the judicial system capacity. Therefore, it did not address the recommendation to cease this practice[139].

174. Subsequently, in its second report, dated September 2025, the State reported that it has implemented several measures to ensure that detainees, their families, and their representatives are promptly informed of the reasons for detention. It noted that the Office of the Attorney General (PGR), through its Public Criminal Defender's Unit, provides legal assistance from the initial interview and uses the Public Criminal Defense Information System (SIDEP) to grant real-time access to case data. It also highlighted the creation of the Virtual Attention Center (CAVAL), which provides information to family members through digital platforms, thereby reducing the need for mobility. It indicated that the Office of the General Prosecutor (FGR) complies with Articles 12 of the Constitution and 82 of the Code of Criminal Procedure by informing the detained person at the time of the arrest, and by notifying family members of the place and reason for detention, as well as the name of the human rights counsel. It also mentioned the involvement of the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA), which provides comprehensive support and guidance on the rights of adolescents in custody[140].

175. The State, in turn, reported that it has guaranteed the conditions necessary for the exercise of the right to a defense, either personally or through a defense counsel. The PGR has provided adequate spaces to ensure privacy and confidentiality between detainees and their defenders, thereby enabling free and secure communication for the preparation of legal strategies. It added that the technical defense explains to the detainees their legal situation and represents them in hearings and proceedings, in-person or virtually, upholding due process of law[141].

176. Finally, the State noted that substantial changes have been implemented to stop mass judicial hearings. It argued that the decrease in arrests during 2025 reduced the number of individuals charged simultaneously and that the creation of the Specialized Courts for Organized Crime enabled a more efficient distribution of hearings, thus avoiding an excessive concentration of defendants in a single proceeding. According to the State, hearings are currently conducted with a much smaller number of defendants, which ensures a more individualized handling of each case and strengthens the guarantees of due process[142].

177. In November 2025, the State reiterated the measures previously reported and highlighted the operation of the CAVAL as a mechanism for family members and representatives to access information on detained persons. It reported that this system provided 99,549 services between June 2024 and May 2025. It

[137] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[138] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[139] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[140] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[141] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[142] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

also noted that CAVAL facilitates coordination with technical defense and ensures private communication, including accessibility for persons with hearing impairments[143].

178. For its part, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) emphasized that no action by the State had been ascertained to promptly inform detainees or their families about the reasons for detention, nor to uphold the right to a defense. On the contrary, it highlighted that the Government expanded the purview of the state of emergency such that it encompasses common crimes and resorted to administrative detentions surpassing the constitutional limit of 72 hours. It reported that human rights advocates were detained without access to legal counsel and transported to unknown locations and noted that mass dismissals in the Office of the General Attorney in 2024 exacerbated challenges in securing public defense[144]. In addition, it indicated that the practice of mass judicial hearings continued[145].

179. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) agreed that no measures are taken to promptly notify relatives and legal representatives of detainees or to facilitate contact with their counsel. It highlighted that, according to its records, there is no separate, accessible mechanism in place to determine who is being detained, under what charges and where. It also emphasized that persons deprived of liberty remain entirely cut off from all forms of communication, including being denied visits from lawyers and family members, which constitutes a form of torture. It further stated that mass hearings continue to occur as a result to amendments to the Organized Crime Act, which extended the statutory deadlines for indictments[146]. Cristosal and CEJIL, in turn, added that the State has not taken any action to comply with recommendation 12. On the contrary, they denounced that, on August 15, 2025, the Legislative Assembly had approved the Decree 383, which violates procedural guarantees and rights enshrined in the Constitution and the American Convention and further confirms the inobservance of the recommendation[147].

180. The Commission recalls its press release of June 6, 2025, in which it expressed concern over measures that restrict the defense of human rights and civic space. In that occasion, it reaffirmed its concern regarding the excessive prolongation and inappropriate implementation of the emergency regime in El Salvador, specifically citing reports of arbitrary detention, widespread and prolonged use of pretrial detention, trials under reserve, restrictions on contact with the defense and family, and mass judicial hearings without individualized analysis. It therefore urged the State to limit the application of the state of emergency to lawfulness and necessity, to guarantee immediate judicial oversight, to make proceedings public except in duly justified exceptions, to permit private communication with the defense, and to avoid incommunicado or disproportionate restrictions. It also called for an assessment of the lawfulness of the arrests, the liberation of individuals detained without legal basis, the investigation of any abuses, the non-application of the state of emergency to unrelated cases or against human rights defenders[148].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

181. The State claims to have implemented mechanisms to guarantee immediate notification, contact with family members and defenders, and private communications. It also claims to have reduced the number of defendants in hearings, which would consequently limit the holding of mass hearings. However, it did not provide verifiable information on the effectiveness of these measures, nor any concrete evidence to confirm that detainees are able to fully and systematically exercise their rights in practice. Nor has it specified

[143] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[144] They mentioned: Alejandro Henríquez, José Ángel Pérez, Ruth López and Enrique Anaya.
[145] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[146] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[147] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[148] IACHR, Press Release No. 115/25 El Salvador: IACHR expresses grave concern over measures that restrict the defense of human rights and civic space, June 6, 2025.

whether the mechanisms it claims having adopted have been adapted or tailored to the context of arrests carried out under the state of emergency, which is the one assessed by the recommendation.

182. For their part, civil society organizations reported that the measures indicated by the State have not been effectively implemented. They have recorded instances where human rights defenders were detained without access to legal counsel or timely information, the lack of a distinct system for publicly registering detainees, and the continued practice of mass judicial hearings. They also noted that the incommunicado detention of persons deprived of liberty continues to amount to a form of torture and denounced the adoption of regressive legislative reforms that further restrict due process.

183. In conclusion, there is no verifiable evidence of substantive progress in any of the three areas addressed by the recommendation in the context of the arrests carried out under the state of emergency: (a) no operational or auditable system was established to provide immediate notification to detainees, family members and defenders; (b) effective and sustained guarantees of unrestricted and private communication with the defense were not demonstrated; and (c) the cessation of mass hearings was not proven through comparative data or the application of established guidelines. Since the actions reported by the State do not demonstrate verifiable results and the information provided by civil society corroborates the continued existence of the practices in question, the level of compliance remains pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

184. To advance compliance with this recommendation, the Commission deems it necessary that the State provide verifiable and disaggregated information on the measures implemented in the context of the state of emergency, to ensure immediate notification of arrests to family members and defenders, including accessible public records. It is also essential that it demonstrates the existence of effective guarantees of private communication between detainees and defenders, and that it reports on the number of hearings held, specifying whether these are mass or individual hearings. Finally, information is needed on the measures implemented to ensure that no legislative reform restricts the basic procedural rights recognized in the American Convention and the Salvadoran Constitution.

Recommendation No. 13. Maintain a registration system for all persons deprived of liberty, including those detained in penitentiary centers as well as in places of temporary housing, in the terms indicated in paragraph 273 of this report, updated and easily accessible by the competent authorities, representatives, and persons in charge of the defense and/or protection of rights, as well as their relatives.

185. In the Country Report, the IACHR referred to the situation of persons deprived of liberty in the country, considering that, according to the State, as of June 27, 2023; 63,114 adults had been detained since the implementation of the state of emergency, of whom 6,296 people were subsequently released. This group included adults, children and adolescents. The Commission also noted that it lacked information on the total number of persons deprived of liberty at the national level, disaggregated by police detention centers, prisons and detention facilities for children and adolescents, or by population groups, and did not have the official data necessary to assess the real situation of prison overcrowding[149].

Information on compliance

186. In April 2025, the State affirmed having implemented a comprehensive system to ensure that family members, legal representatives and competent authorities can access verified information about persons in state custody in a timely manner. In this regard, it indicated that the following mechanisms are in place[150]:

[149] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 243 and 253.

- Specialized attention centers were set up in prisons where family members and legal representatives can submit requests for information directly; additionally, clear and rigorous protocols were established to ensure that every person detained is fully identified and their location known from the moment they enter the prison system.
- The PGR has developed and implemented the digital platform "CAVAL 24/7", a system that allows ongoing and real-time consultation on the current location and procedural status of persons deprived of liberty.
- Regular and systematic updating of prison registers, which are fully accessible to the competent authorities[151].

187. The State subsequently emphasized that the Directorate General of Prisons administers the Prison Information System (SIPE). This system compiles information on the legal status of each detainee, including their location, authorized visits, legal counsel data and the record of transfers between different facilities. In addition, the SIPE is linked to the National Registry of Natural Persons, which facilitates the identification and location of individuals within the system[152].

188. For adolescents, the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA), together with other institutions, maintains a comprehensive register of those subjects to criminal responsibility. This system is designed to ensure the traceability of each case and protect the rights of adolescents. Access to this information is confidential and restricted to competent authorities, legal representatives, rights defenders and family members[153].

189. Finally, it highlighted that communication channels have been established to ensure the immediate verification of the location and legal status of detainees, allowing the authorities to follow up on each case effectively. According to the U.S. Department of State Human Rights Report, the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Office of the Public Defender, adequate mechanisms are in place to allow citizens to locate their detained family members[154].

190. The Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA) reported, by March 2025, a total of 110,000 people in prison, of whom 85,000 have been detained since the implementation of the state of emergency in March 2022[155].

191. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) found that, as of August 2025, the State had not established a public and updated register of all persons deprived of liberty in both prisons and temporary detention facilities. It noted that the General Directorate of Prisons keeps this information confidential and therefore relied on its own projections: it estimated 118,373 persons deprived of liberty, of whom 39,538 were detained before the state of emergency and 78,835 were arrested under this regime; it estimated that only 8,000 had been released. The SSPAS warned that the lack of official data on who is being detained, under what charges and where, leads to short-term forced disappearances: it recorded 540 cases of families who remained unaware of the whereabouts of their relatives for prolonged periods. It also indicated that the number of detained children or adolescents is uncertain: official figures from 2023 reported 2,826, but organizations such

[150] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[151] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[152] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[153] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[154] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[155] WOLA, Mass Incarceration and Democratic Deterioration: Three Years of the State of Exception in El Salvador, March 27, 2025.

as Human Rights Watch and CONAPINA reported more than 3,000 and 3,319 arrests, respectively, without the State having updated these figures[156].

192. In the same vein, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) corroborated that a system for the comprehensive registration of persons deprived of liberty has not been implemented, and consequently, no updated and accessible list is available for authorities, defenders and family members to consult[157].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

193. The recommendation entails the establishment of a comprehensive, up-to-date and easily accessible register of all persons deprived of liberty, including those held in temporary facilities, which shall ensure traceability from apprehension through custody. The State reported the existence of attention mechanisms, the "CAVAL 24/7" platform, the SIPE and CONAPINA registers, as well as verification channels available for authorities, defense and family members. However, it failed to demonstrate: (i) the adoption of operational protocols that ensure full identification and location from the very moment of detention (according to para. 273 of the Country Report); (ii) an effective interoperability between PNC, FGR, DGCP/SIPE and CONAPINA including real-time updating and a unique identifier per person; and (iii) verifiable accessibility mechanisms, such as auditable records or queries or standardized access methods, that enable checking of the register's content.

194. Furthermore, the information provided by civil society organizations serves to corroborate these structural deficiencies, noting the absence of an updated and accessible list for family members and defense, as well as the existence of reservations concerning prison data. This raises doubts about the comprehensive scope and practical efficacy of the mechanisms described. In summary, although some progress has been observed, such as the existing platforms and sectoral registers, it remains insufficient to meet the required standards of comprehensiveness, continuous updating, interoperability, and accessibility. Consequently, the level of compliance is considered partial.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

195. To overcome the gaps identified, the operational protocols shall be formalized and submitted to ensure the identification and location from apprehension, including temporary facilities, with minimum fields specified in para. 273 of the Country Report and traceability rules. In addition, interoperability among PNC, FGR, DGCP/SIPE and CONAPINA, integrating real-time updating, a unique identifier, and a comprehensive registration of transfers or any change in legal situation, shall be substantiated. Finally, accessibility for family members and defense must be ensured via both in-person and remote channels, with a maximum response time established, in addition to the publication of disaggregated statistics on a regular basis.

Recommendation No. 14. Regarding the use of pretrial detention as a measure of last resort and justified by the procedural purposes of each specific case:

a. Modify the legislation by incorporating more alternative measures to pretrial detention;

b. Adopt a protocol or guidelines addressed to judicial authorities on pretrial detention that:
(i) prioritize the application of less burdensome measures than pretrial detention;
(ii) address the gender perspective; the best interests of children and the impact on persons belonging to groups at special risk when deciding on precautionary measures in criminal investigations or proceedings.

[156] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[157] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

c. Adopt a system of periodic review of both the validity of the circumstances that led to the initial application of pretrial detention in each case and compliance with the maximum periods of detention, allowing for the immediate release of persons held in pretrial detention when such circumstances are no longer in force, the maximum periods established have been met, or the reasonable period of time that allows a person to be held under this precautionary measure has expired.

196. In the Country Report, the IACHR recalled that, in accordance with Inter-American standards, pretrial detention is an exceptional procedural measure that must be maintained for a reasonable period of time and shall not be extended beyond the period for which the State can provide adequate justification for its necessity and shall therefore be subject to periodic review. In this context, it stated that, according to public information, among the 65,795 persons arrested up to March 2023 in El Salvador, approximately 90% were held in pre-trial detention. The Commission reiterated the need to consider the precautionary and exceptional nature of this measure in this context, urging the State to ensure its rational application and to give priority to the use of less burdensome alternative measures[158].

Information on compliance

197. In April 2025, the State clarified that the legally used term to refer to pretrial detention is "provisional detention," and that it is based on Article 13 of the Constitution of the Republic. In addition, it explained that its imposition is exclusively within the competence of the courts, provided that the procedural conditions established in articles 329 and 330 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are met. The State pointed out that the duration of the measure is limited to the "time strictly required to serve this need [to ensure the conduct and results of the trial]" and that the mechanism includes the review of the measure by the judge, with the primary objective of preventing these measures from being disproportionate or arbitrary. Furthermore, the State failed to address the legal amendments intended to incorporate alternative measures to pretrial detention, to adopt a protocol or guidelines for judicial authorities concerning pretrial detention and establish a mechanism for periodic review. Finally, it should be noted that the State, in its response, expressed categorical rejection of any attempt by the Commission to assume legislative functions[159]. In its comments on the draft report, the State did not report recent legal reforms to expand the catalogue of alternative measures, nor the adoption of a specific protocol for judicial authorities, nor operational parameters for periodic review with public indicators[160] .

198. Then, in September of the same year, with respect to subparagraph (A), the State indicated that the "Crecer Juntos" Act provides for the application, in the case of adolescents, of socio-educational measures promoted and supported by the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA), with a view to ensuring the protection of rights, comprehensive development and social reintegration. However, it did not report any recent modifications aimed at expanding the range of alternative measures to pretrial detention in relation to adults[161].

199. With respect to subparagraph (b), the State noted that it has not adopted a new protocol or specific guidelines for judicial authorities concerning the use of pretrial detention as a measure of last resort, as it considers that the existing criminal procedure rules already contain adequate principles and provisions. It highlighted that the Code of Criminal Procedure (CPP) establishes that pretrial detention is not automatic and must be exceptional and subsidiary, subject to judicial evaluation as to its suitability, necessity, and adequacy. It explained that Article 329 of the CPP sets out the conditions for its imposition, including the existence of evidentiary elements regarding the act and the individual's participation, as well as the applicable

[158] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 7, 121, 122, 123, 218, 219.
[159] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[160] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[161] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025, and El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report, November 28, 2025.

penalty threshold, and that Article 331 further allows for the application of less burdensome measures when there is no reasonable risk of flight, even in cases involving offenses punishable by more than three years of imprisonment. It added that the authorities should assess personal circumstances (e.g. pregnancy, serious illness or other vulnerable conditions) when deciding on precautionary measures, which, in their view, incorporate a gender perspective, the best interests of the child and assistance to groups at special risk[162].

200. With respect to subparagraph (c), the State reported that the system for the periodic review of precautionary measures is already regulated under Articles 343 and 344 of the CCP in the form of a review of precautionary measures, which may be requested at any stage of the proceedings. It explained that any request must establish both a legal basis (the cessation or unreasonableness of the budgets that gave rise to the measure) and a factual basis (change in circumstances), and that the judge is required to provide reasons for the continuation, modification or termination of the measure. According to the State, this mechanism seeks to avoid unjustified prolongations and ensures immediate release or replacement by less burdensome measures when detention is no longer justified, keeping preventive detention as exceptional, proportional and necessary[163].

201. On the matter, the IACHR has expressed concern regarding the use of provisional detention in cases involving human rights defenders. In his Press Release No. 115/25 (June 6, 2025), it stated that, according to information received, detained defenders were placed in pre-trial detention without regard to their particular circumstances, being held incommunicado and subject to confidential proceedings[164]. Similarly, in Press Release No. 162/25 (August 14, 2025) reiterated its concern about the excessive prolongation and improper application of the emergency regime, with direct effects on the guarantee of procedural rights[165].

202. For its part, civil society has pointed out that, because of the reforms to the Special Act on Organized Crime (LECO) issued on August 15 by the ruling party in the Legislative Assembly, persons detained under the suspension-of-rights regime may remain in detention for more than five years without being formally charged. It also indicated that this deadline is unjustified and unreasonable, and it is inconsistent with the Political Constitution of El Salvador and relevant international human rights standards[166].

203. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) noted that, as of August 2025, the State had not amended its legislation to include alternative measures to pretrial detention, nor had it adopted protocols to guide judges in applying detention as measure a last resort. It noted that pretrial detention was applied extensively and for prolonged periods without periodic review or individual hearing having been conducted. It stressed that detainees were released under alternative measures, mainly through review hearings (33.3%) or, in many cases, without knowing the reason (30.6%) or after passing a polygraph test (22.2%). In addition, it condemned the release process as being marked by ill-treatment, humiliation, and psychological coercion, and noted that some individuals were re-arrested upon their release from prison and subjected to further prosecutions[167].

204. In turn, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) affirmed that no alternative measures or guidelines had been adopted to restrict pretrial detention and emphasized that no system of periodic review would be established. On the contrary, on August 15, 2025, it reported that the Legislative Assembly had approved Decree 383, which permits the extension of provisional detention for up to an additional 24 months for persons tried under the state of emergency, allowing the precautionary measure to be maintained for up to five years in the absence of a judge's final decision[168]. Cristosal and CEJIL added that

[162] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[163] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[164] IACHR, Press Release No. 115/25, El Salvador: IACHR expresses grave concern over measures that restrict the defense of human rights and civic space, June 6, 2025.
[165] IACHR, Press Release No. 162/25, El Salvador: IACHR reiterates concern over prolonged and improper use of state of emergency in El Salvador, August 14, 2025.
[166] Cristosal, Regime Legalizes Early Penalties in El Salvador, August 18, 2025.
[167] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[168] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

none of the provisions consolidating pretrial detention as a standard practice had been repealed and that the State still failed to comply with the recommendation[169].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

205. The State described the current framework on "provisional detention" (Constitution and CPP) and, for adolescents, the socio-educational measures of the "Crecer Juntos" Act. However, it did not report on reforms incorporating new alternatives for adults (subparagraph A); it has not adopted a new protocol or specific guidelines for judicial authorities with a focus on exceptionality, subsidiarity and differentiated perspectives (subparagraph b). Instead, it merely stated that the revisions are already reflected in the CPP (arts. 343 and 344) without proving criteria of periodicity, operational deadlines, or verifiable results to ensure immediate release upon cessation of precautionary measures or when limits are exceeded (subparagraph c).

206. For its part, civil society reported regressive measures (among them, reforms to the LECO and Decree 383 of August 15, 2025) that allow for the extension of provisional detention for up to five years in the absence of a judge's final decision and the extension of the measure for an additional 24 months under the state of emergency, as well as the extensive and prolonged application of pretrial detention without periodic review or individual hearing having been conducted. Overall, it indicated that no measures have been taken to comply with Inter-American standards and, on the contrary, practices and norms incompatible with the principles of exceptionality, subsidiarity, and periodic review of the measure have become entrenched.

207. In turn, these concerns have also been reflected by the IACHR itself in its Press Releases from June and August 2025, in which it warned about the use of provisional detention in respect of human rights defenders and the excessive prolongation associated with the state of emergency.

208. On the other hand, the IACHR notes that the State has "categorically rejected any attempt by the IACHR to assume legislative functions." In this regard, as previously clarified in the present Report, the IACHR recalls that its recommendations fall within the scope of the powers conferred under Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights, pursuant to which it is authorized to make observations and recommendations to promote the full observance of human rights. When such recommendations call for the adoption or reform of regulatory provisions, this reflects the identification of areas requiring adjustments to ensure the compatibility of the domestic legal framework with Inter-American standards. These recommendations therefore constitute a tool for cooperation aimed at supporting States in the fulfillment of their international obligations, without entailing the exercise of legislative functions.

209. Lastly, the actions described on the part of the State run counter to the purpose of the recommendation, as they extend and prolong pretrial detention without ensuring its exceptional and subsidiary nature or providing for periodic oversight. The State itself has expressed its refusal to introduce the necessary legal reforms to incorporate a broader range of alternative measures. Pursuant to the Commission's General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, the State's indication that it will not implement the recommendation constitutes grounds for determining that the recommendation has not been complied with.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

210. In response to the determination of non-compliance, the Commission concludes the specific follow-up pertaining to this recommendation in the present Report. However, the IACHR reserves the right to resume its assessment at a future stage should the State modify its position or adopt verifiable actions that would allow for a renewed examination, including the public presentation of a draft reform incorporating an operational catalog of alternative measures; the adoption o judicial protocols or guidelines that prioritize less burdensome measures and incorporate a gender perspective, the best interests of the child and differentiated approaches; and the establishment of a periodic review system with defined intervals, maximum deadlines, automatic triggers for hearings, and release when the precautionary need ceases or limits are exceeded, with results duly documented.

[169] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

Recommendation No. 15. Immediately remedy any overcrowding situation. To this end, issue an order from the justice sector and the penitentiary system prohibiting the entry of new detainees into facilities already occupied beyond their official capacity.

211. In the Country Report, the Commission recalled that, since 2021, it identified alarming levels of overcrowding in the prison system in El Salvador, the excessive use and duration of pretrial detention being a contributing factor, as well as the lack of alternative measures to deprivation of liberty. Furthermore, in the context of the state of emergency, the Commission noted that it continued to receive worrisome information about high levels of overcrowding, considering that the number of persons deprived of liberty has tripled in recent years[170].

Information on compliance

212. In its first report submitted to the IACHR in April 2025, the State indicated that it had adopted measures to ensure that persons deprived of liberty are accommodated in decent and safe conditions, free from critical overcrowding, and stated that "this recommendation has been fully implemented, reflecting a comprehensive and sustainable approach in prison administration."[171]

213. First, the State noted the expansion of prison capacity, including the construction of new facilities and the enlargement of existing infrastructure at centers such as the Terrorism Confinement Centre (CECOT) and the Tonacatepeque Social Inclusion Centre, the latter of which currently operates at 15.6% of its designed capacity. On the other hand, the State explained that it has implemented a strategy to monitor and reallocate the prison population, including transfers and releases, to ensure that the centers operate within their authorized capacity[172].

214. Regarding the prohibition on admitting new prisoners to facilities at maximum capacity, the State affirmed that it has effectively implemented this measure and has planned the relocation of persons deprived of liberty to facilities with greater capacity, in order to prevent overcrowding[173]. In addition, it added that it has prioritized improving living conditions in prisons, ensuring compliance with the Nelson Mandela Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, including the provision of quality food, access to safe drinking water for personal hygiene and consumption, and comprehensive healthcare services[174].

215. In September and November 2025, the State indicated that no provision or order had been issued by the judicial sector or the prison system prohibiting the admission of new detainees to facilities exceeding their official capacity, as the prison population was deemed not to surpass the installed capacity[175].

216. Furthermore, with respect to capacity and population beyond the CECOT and the Tonacatepeque Social Inclusion Centre, the State reported that, since 2024, the Social Integration Centers (CIS), under the administration of the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA), has classified the population by age and type of detention, ensured gender separation within designated modules (Ilobasco, Tonacatepeque, El Espino and female-only CIS), and organized subsections according to

[170] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 238, 244, 245, 250, 253 and 255.
[171] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[172] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[173] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[174] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[175] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025. El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.

both age and level of adaptation of adolescents, in accordance with the objectives of detention and the guarantee of rights. No additional consolidated figures were provided on capacity and occupancy of all detention centers[176].

217. Finally, in its observations dated November 2025, the State held that there was no "critical overcrowding" necessitating a formal order to prohibit admissions. It also stated that its structural strategy, encompassing the expansion of infrastructure, technical redistribution, releases as per legal requirements, and the improvement of conditions, would have ensured that occupancy levels remain "within reasonable operational limits"[177].

218. Moreover, according to data reported by civil society, the latest population census carried out in El Salvador would indicate that 3 out of 100 men are in prison, and that this "has generated a crisis of extreme overcrowding in most prisons, whose capacity, in some cases, exceeds 300% since the beginning of the state of emergency".[178.]

219. In the same vein, recent news reports indicate that El Salvador would have the highest rate of detainees globally, and that, three years after the state of emergency, CECOT remains the only prison free from overcrowding, while other centers continue to face persistent capacity challenges[179].

220. In turn, the Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) reported to the IACHR that no measures had been taken to alleviate overcrowding and described inhumane conditions in the detention centers: cells intended for 30 individuals but accommodating more than 100, overcrowding up to five times the capacity, lack of ventilation and water, and people being forced to sleep while seated or standing. It indicated that, pursuant to the latest extension of the state of emergency in force since August 4, 2025, more than 88,000 detainees prosecuted for affiliation with gangs had been recorded. It also estimated that the prison system was overcrowded by 380.5%, while the CECOT is operating at only 36.4% of its full capacity. It estimated that El Salvador has a ratio of 1,867 persons deprived of liberty per 100,000 inhabitants, the highest in the world, and that almost 2.6% of the adult population is in prison. Finally, it was indicated that, as of August 2025, there was no judicial or prison order prohibiting the admission of new persons in centers exceeding their capacity[180].

221. IDHUCA agreed that the authorities have not taken measures to alleviate overcrowding and estimated that, by August 2025, 324% pre-CECOT prisons were overcrowded, accommodating 110,095 persons, while CECOT holds 14,538 prisoners (36% of its capacity). It added that the reform of the Juvenile Criminal Justice Act, which allows children under 18 to be transferred to adult prisons, would increase the prison population, and that El Salvador had even received individuals transferred from prisons in the United States. It also noted that no orders had been issued prohibiting the admission of new detainees to overcrowded centers, insofar as they extended pretrial detention, have hindered efforts to reduce overcrowding[181].

222. Finally, press releases have reported recent deaths linked to extreme heat conditions and alleged lack of water within specific centers, reinforcing concerns about risks associated with overcrowding and material conditions of detention[182].

[176] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[177] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[178] Amnesty International, El Salvador: A thousand days into the state of emergency. "Security" at the expense of human rights.. December 20, 2024.
[179] Swissinfo.ch, El Salvador tiene la tasa de presos más alta en el mundo, alertan organizaciones, March 26, 2025 (in Spanish).
[180] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[181] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[182] La Prensa Gráfica, CECOT es el único reclusorio en El Salvador sin hacinamiento, a tres años del régimen de excepción, March 26, 2025 (in Spanish).

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

223. The IACHR takes note of the information provided by the State and the contributions made by civil society. However, it acknowledges that some substantial gaps persist, preventing the implementation of the recommendation's operational provisions: (i) the State itself confirmed that it has not issued an order prohibiting admission to centers beyond its capacity, even though the recommendation expressly requires it; (ii) it failed to provide public, updated and consolidated information by center (beyond specific references to CECOT and Tonacatepeque), which would enable verification of official capacity and actual population, or assessment of the outcomes of the announced measures (extensions, transfers, releases); and (iii) the information corroborated by civil society organizations indicates widespread overcrowding and the absence of admission ban orders, reinforcing the view that the reported measures do not constitute an immediate or verifiable remedy.

224. In this context, the measures invoked by the State (expansion of capacity, reallocation and improvement of conditions) are merely instrumental and, in the absence of a specific prohibition order and verifiable center-level data, they fail to meet the requirement to promptly address overcrowding or to prevent admissions to facilities that exceed capacity. Accordingly, the Commission considers that the level of compliance with the recommendation is pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

225. To assess objective progress regarding this recommendation, the State shall provide publicly verifiable documentation demonstrating that no establishment exceeds its capacity or, if it does, the immediate remedial actions taken. To do so, it should submit a consolidated inventory per center with official capacity and actual population, the methodology for calculating capacity and the actual ratio of occupation, in accordance with the Nelson Mandela Rules and the Principles and Best Practices on the Protection of Persons Deprived of Liberty in the Americas, in particular Principle XVII, which mandates publicity, accessibility and regular updating of these data. This statistical component shall be public, accessible, and regularly updated, to allow independent verification by the competent supervisory bodies.

226. In addition, the State shall demonstrate the existence and effective enforcement of a provision prohibiting the admission of additional individuals to any center that exceeds its official capacity, specifying the issuing authority, date of issuance, scope, notification procedures, and certification of implementation. In cases where an establishment has exceeded 100% occupancy at any time during the period, it is appropriate to specify the immediate remedial measures adopted (e.g., transfers, expenses, infrastructure adaptations), with measurable results reflected both in the ratio of occupation and in material conditions, including living space, ventilation, access to water and sanitation, and time out of cell, as well as the implementation schedule and the responsible authorities. The implementation of a continuous monitoring mechanism, with regular updates disaggregated by center and external verification, will allow the Commission to assess objectively any progress in the level of compliance with the recommendation.

Recommendation No. 16. Design and establish a plan of action to remedy the deficiencies identified in this report with respect to the minimum conditions of detention of persons deprived of liberty, especially in the areas of shelter, hygiene conditions, food, drinking water, and access to medical treatment, taking into account the gender perspective and the special risk situation of specific groups.

227. In the Country Report, the IACHR expressed its concern over information received indicating the worsening of the inhumane conditions of detention of persons deprived of liberty in the country, as a result of situations such as total confinement in cells with no air circulation or with humidity and filtration problems; restrictions on access to toilets and water for personal hygiene, consumption, and cleaning; critical and poor sanitation and food conditions, as well as serious impacts of these factors on the health and physical, mental and emotional integrity of detainees. Considering the above, the Commission reiterated its call to ensure minimum conditions of detention compatible with human dignity and respect for fundamental rights[183].

Information on compliance

228. In its first report to the IACHR, in April 2025, the State affirmed that it had implemented this recommendation by ensuring that all prisons across the country have dignified conditions in infrastructure, food, drinking water, medical care and differentiated services for vulnerable groups, as well as for their families, noting that OHCHR Reports "support and verify these developments"[184]. The State also referred to various aspects of the conditions of detention:

- It stated that it has undertaken substantial improvements to the prison infrastructure, expanding the capacity of the centers and modernizing the facilities to ensure decent conditions for persons deprived of liberty. As an example, it presented the cases of the Tonacatepeque Social Integration Centre and the Zacatecoluca Penal Centre, places where OHCHR had verified that the designed capacity was "kept under control"[185].
- It assured that a continuous supply of drinking water is maintained in all prisons, ensuring adequate access for both daily consumption and personal hygiene. According to the State, prisoners even receive personal hygiene kits that include soap, toothpaste, toothbrush, and deodorant. As examples, it again presented the centers of Zacatecoluca and Tonacatepeque.
- It stated that food has been provided in all prisons, with access to three meals per day and menus designed to meet the nutritional needs of the prison population.
- Regarding medical care, the State affirmed that the Salvadoran prison system is staffed with qualified medical personnel 24/7, including general practitioners, dentists, psychiatrists, and access to specialized consultations through telemedicine. It also indicated that protocols have been adopted for immediate transfer to public hospitals in cases of medical emergencies.

229. About the gender perspective and consideration of the situation of special risk of specific groups, the State explained that it has implemented differentiated assistance mechanisms for women deprived of their liberty, ensuring adequate conditions in women's centers. In addition, it stressed that specific areas have been established in all prisons for groups in vulnerable conditions, guaranteeing their physical integrity and access to specialized services[186].

230. In its second report to the IACHR, dated September 2025, the State noted that it has designed and implemented a comprehensive plan of action to remedy the deficiencies identified by the Commission in relation to minimum conditions of detention. This plan includes measures in the areas of shelter, hygiene, food, access to safe drinking water and medical care, and incorporates a differentiated, gender-responsive approach as well as consideration of the specific risks faced by vulnerable groups[187].

231. In particular, it indicated that actions have been carried out in all prisons through the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA) and the General Directorate of Prisons. With regard to infrastructure, it reported adaptations to dormitories, clinics, schools and psychological and social care facilities, as well as the establishment of dedicated areas for adolescent and pregnant mothers. With respect to hygiene and nutrition, it reported permanent access to drinking water, the distribution of hygiene kits, the organization of periodic cleaning and fumigation days, and the provision of balanced meal plans, including specialized menus for early childhood and for individuals with specific needs. Finally, in relation to

[183] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 244, 256, 258, 259, 264 and 265.
[184] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[185] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[186] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[187] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

medical care, it stated that it maintains specialized personnel, established transfer emergency protocols, and multidisciplinary technical teams dedicated to the physical and mental health of persons deprived of liberty[188].

232. Finally, in November 2025, the State held that the failure to adopt certain documentary formats for recording the measures taken does not imply the absence of action and stated that prison modernization has been verified by accredited bodies, such as the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. In this regard, it stated that the failure to adopt specific measures identified by the IACHR to comply with the recommendation does not indicate that the State is not taking action to comply with the recommendation[189].

233. On the other hand, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) emphasized that no measures are known to have been taken by the State to remedy the deficiencies in the minimum conditions of detention indicated by the Commission. It noted that, according to Socorro Jurídico Humanitario (SJH), as of August 2025, at least 433 people had died in state custody, and the institutions do not indicate whether any improvements have been implemented across all prisons[190].

234. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) added that, as of August 2025, no actions had been taken to remedy the deficiencies, and that the testimonies collected by civil organizations reflect the continued existence of inhumane conditions. It cited cells intended for 30 individuals but crowding more than 100 together, lack of ventilation and access to clean water, people sleeping while seated or standing, proliferation of skin diseases due to unsanitary conditions and lack of adequate medical care or medicines. It further noted that 86.5% of the interviewees reported receiving insufficient food, with a single ration being shared among several inmates, and that water shortages necessitated the use of improvised buckets for basic physiological needs, including, in some cases, the consumption of urine. Only 53.8% of those with pre-existing conditions were able to obtain their treatment; the rest saw their health deteriorate seriously. It mentioned that the only documented health campaign treated 75 people only and concluded that there was no indication of improvements or of measure taken by the State to ensure decent conditions in detention centers[191].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

235. The IACHR notes that the State claims to have "designed and implemented" a comprehensive plan of action and of the measures described (adaptation of infrastructure, water supply, hygiene kits, meal plans and medical care, with a differentiated approach). In the opinion of the State, the Commission would be rejecting effective actions on the grounds that they do not conform to a specific format or do not align with the measures suggested in an indicative manner. The IACHR recalls that the General Guidelines do not impose a unique way of implementing a recommendation, but rather verifiability criteria and outcomes in accordance with Inter-American standards. Therefore, any alternative proposed by the State may be considered in order to raise the level of compliance, provided that it is consistent with the fundamental objective of the recommendation and is accompanied by publicly available, clear, updated, and verifiable information on the formal measures adopted, their coverage and scope, outcome indicators, timelines, independent monitoring mechanisms, and any other relevant information. In the absence of such substantive information, it is not possible to amend the assessment of compliance with this recommendation.

236. Reports from civil society organizations confirm that the conditions motivating the recommendation persist (severe overcrowding, water use restrictions, insufficient food, barriers to access to health and reports of deaths in custody). This suggests that, without verifiable support, the actions cited by the State do not allow the identified deficiencies to be considered remedied. In these conditions, no material progress is observed in ensuring the minimum standards in accommodation, hygiene, food, water and medical

[188] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[189] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[190] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[191] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

care with a differentiated approach. Consequently, the Commission considers that the level of compliance with this recommendation is pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

237. The Commission observes that, pursuant to its recommendation, the State is requested to "design and implement an action plan to remedy the deficiencies identified in this Report." To assess compliance with this recommendation, the State is invited to submit updated, verifiable, and comprehensive information concerning the content of the action plan, including, but not limited to, its scope, responsible persons, budget, timeline, and indicators. The Commission further suggests that the State provide any additional information concerning the action plan that it deems relevant for the purpose of fulfilling the core elements of the recommendation.

238. In this context, the consent to a working visit of the IACHR with full, confidential and unrestricted access to all detention facilities, including maximum security areas and juvenile modules, to registers and private interviews with persons deprived of liberty, would be a fundamental step in verifying in situ the implementation and results of the plan and, where appropriate, guiding immediate corrective actions.

Recommendation No. 17. Guarantee regular visits by family members, representatives, and competent authorities in all penal centers and repeal all provisions prohibiting family visits contained in Article 79-A of Decree 93 - Reforms to the Penitentiary Law.

239. In the Country Report, the IACHR observed information on the prolonged incommunicado detention of persons deprived of liberty, including the suspension of visits during the pandemic (at least from April 2020 to December 2021), and its continuation under the state of emergency, as well as a lack of effective communication mechanisms with families and legal representatives, as corroborated by received testimonies. The Commission recalled the obligation to guarantee regular visits in all prison facilities and to review the prohibition contained in Article 79-A of Decree 93 (Amendments to the Prison Act), emphasizing that incommunicado detention must be strictly exceptional and that prolonged isolation and coercive incommunicado detention constitute cruel and inhuman treatment and, in certain circumstances, would amount to acts of torture. In addition, the absence of contact with the outside world undermines the exercise of other rights and places detainees in particularly vulnerable situations[192] .

Information on compliance

240. In its first communication of 2025, the State noted that, prior to the execution of the Territorial Control Plan, El Salvador's prisons served not merely as facilities for detention, but as hubs for the operation of organized criminal activities. According to the State, the state of emergency made it possible to restore prison control by dismantling criminal networks operating from within and reestablishing order, discipline and security in the prison system. Based on the provided statements, the State reported a decrease in reoffending, a contribution to society through prison labor, and an improvement in order and discipline within the prison system[193].

241. Regarding the prohibition of family visits, the State noted that no instrument of the Inter-American System or international treaties expressly prohibit imposing restrictions on visits in situations of extreme security. Therefore, according to the State, access to visits may be restored only under conditions that ensure national security and the protection of citizens, preventing them from serving as channels of communication for organized crime. In addition, the State considered that the Commission has no authority to order the repeal of domestic regulations, noting that the recommendations must respect the sovereignty and ability of each State to administer its own security and judicial system[194].

[192] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 270, 272 - 274.

[193] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

242. However, subsequently, the State reported that, in order to guarantee regular visits by relatives, legal representatives and competent authorities, family visits are arranged upon direct request submitted to the Director-General of Prisons. In addition, it reported initiatives designed to promote communication, with an emphasis on children and adolescents. These include a virtual program for minors (currently in the launch phase) that enables contact with their relatives through verified links, and a Family Outreach Plan, implemented as of July 24, 2025, which integrates video calls and prior face-to-face meetings to foster emotional connections, in accordance with the principle of the best interests of the child[195].

243. According to the State, these measures are intended to preserve the connection of persons deprived of liberty with their families and to support their psychosocial well-being, ensuring that physical separation does not impede the development of healthy family relationships and emotional support, without prejudice to the prison security protocols[196].

244. With respect to the regulatory component, the State indicated that the provisions of Article 79-A of Decree No. 93 (Amendments to the Prison Act) have not been repealed or revised, noting that they constitute an essential instrument for the proper functioning of the prison system and public security. It stated that their application has enabled the establishment of control mechanisms permitting to reduce crimes orchestrated from within prisons, while upholding, as stipulated, the dignity and fundamental rights of persons deprived of liberty[197].

245. The Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) stated that no measures had been implemented to reinstate regular visits from relatives, legal representatives and competent authorities in prisons. It explained that, since the implementation of extraordinary measures by prior governments, intensified during the state of emergency, there is no communication whatsoever between detainees and their families and lawyers. This has resulted in the emergence of corrupt networks, within which lawyers and public officials demand payment for facilitating visits, correspondence, or calls[198].

246. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) agreed that, as of August 2025, the provisions restricting family visits had not been repealed. It noted that since the 2020 COVID-19 pandemic, families have been unable to see or talk to their loved ones in prison for five years now and that widespread uncertainty exists regarding their health and survival. It reported that lawyers have condemned arbitrary restrictions on contact with their clients, noting that the General Directorate of Prisons centralizes the authorization of visits and frequently obstructs court-ordered medical inspections, thereby infringing upon the right to health of detainees. It also identified an illicit system where intermediaries charge between 100 and 1,500 dollars for facilitating visits or communications, which indicates a correlation between non-compliance by the State and the emergence of corrupt practices, particularly impacting women and families of persons deprived of liberty[199]. Cristosal and CEJIL argued that the State has implemented neither measures to ensure the occurrence of visits nor amended the provisions prohibiting them, and for this reason, they concluded that the recommendation had not been fulfilled[200].

247. The Commission was able to verify recent news reports describing the obstacles referred to by civil society organizations and identified in the Country Report concerning visits and communication between detainees and their families. In this regard, several relatives reported that, when they sought

[194] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[195] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[196] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[197] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[198] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[199] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[200] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.

information at certain detention centers, they were subjected to intimidation and warnings associated with the state of emergency, as well as refusals to provide basic information regarding the condition of their detained relatives[201]. Similarly, the existence of an illicit system of fees charged to individuals for managing visits or communications with persons deprived of liberty has been substantiated, thus underscoring the continued prevalence of discretionary practices and material obstacles impeding family contact[202].

248. In 2025, the IACHR granted four precautionary measures to persons in El Salvador who were alleged to be incommunicado and at serious risk, reinforcing concerns about the persistence of barriers to contact with family members and defense, as well as the lack of early traceability. These decisions, available in the IACHR's public repository of precautionary measures, are considered additional input for the analysis of compliance with this recommendation, insofar as they reflect current risks and the need to adopt effective guarantees for communication and general visits throughout the prison system[203].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

249. The recommendation requires, concurrently: (i) ensuring the occurrence of regular visits from relatives, legal representatives and competent authorities in all prisons; and (ii) repealing the provisions prohibiting them (art. 79-A of Decree 93). The State reported a series of requests addressed to the Director-General of Prisons, the existence of a virtual program for minors in the launch phase, and the establishment of the Family Outreach Plan since July 24, 2025, which integrates video calls and prior face-to-face meetings. However, it failed to demonstrate the widespread resumption and occurrence of regular visits to all facilities. Furthermore, independent sources and media outlets have described instances of intimidation, refusal to provide basic information, and illegal fees, which hinder effective family contact.

250. On the other hand, the State confirmed that Article 79-A remains in force and expressly defended it as an "essential tool" for public security, adding that the IACHR would not be authorized to "order the repeal of domestic regulations". This constitutes a clear declaration that the prohibition established by law, which forms an explicit component of this recommendation, will not be repealed. In this regard, the IACHR reiterates that, in accordance with Article 41 of the American Convention on Human Rights, it is authorized to make recommendations, including those of a normative character, with a view to ensuring that States align their legislation and practices with Inter-American human rights standards.

251. In turn, civil society reported prolonged incommunicado detentions, centralization and denial of visitor access, limitations on defense attorney's access, and the illegal fee-charging for managing communications. These elements were also reflected in recent media coverage and international statements, reinforcing the lack of material compliance with the recommendation.

252. The IACHR recalls that, in accordance with its Resolution 2/25 on Inter-American Standards Applicable to Persons with Affective Ties of Persons Deprived of Liberty, all incommunicado measures must be strictly exceptional, temporary, and proportionate. In the cited Resolution, the Commission reiterated that widespread restrictions on family or legal representatives visits violate the right to personal integrity and may constitute cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment It also urged States to ensure that communication and arrangements for visits are regular, transparent, and accessible, and to review any domestic regulations that impose absolute or indefinite restrictions on contact with the outside world.

253. Given that the recommendation includes a specific mandate to repeal, and the State has communicated its refusal to adopt it, the General Guidelines support the conclusion that the recommendation has not been complied with.

[201] ElSalvador.com, Uno llega a pedir información y le dicen que nos van a aplicar el régimen': familiares de reos del penal de Izalco, January 14, 2025 (in Spanish).
[202] Swissinfo, Denuncian corrupción en cárceles salvadoreñas, como el pago a particulares para las visitas, September 2, 2025 (in Spanish).
[203] IACHR, Precautionary Measures granted in 2025 in El Salvador.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

254. In response to the determination of non-compliance, the Commission concludes the specific follow-up to this recommendation in the framework of this report. However, the IACHR reserves the right to resume its assessment at a future stage should the State modify its position or adopt verifiable actions that would allow for a renewed examination, including the repeal of Article 79-A of Decree 93, or an equivalent regulatory amendment that removes the general prohibition of visits, and the public and verifiable accreditation of the regular visits of relatives, representatives and competent authorities in all prisons, in accordance with Inter-American standards.

Recommendation No. 18. Design and implement an accessible, available and safe complaint system for all persons deprived of liberty where they can receive free assistance and file the corresponding legal actions to stop the violation of their rights.

255. In the Country Report, the IACHR acknowledged becoming aware of troubling information since the application of the state of emergency in El Salvador. This information pertained, among other cases, to deficiencies or omissions within the mechanisms for reporting instances of torture and ill-treatment involving persons deprived of liberty[204].

Information on compliance

256. In 2025, the State affirmed that it fully complied with the recommendation issued, ensuring that all persons deprived of liberty have accessible, available and safe mechanisms for filing complaints. Firstly, it noted the existence of direct access to complaints mechanisms for persons deprived of liberty, who may present individual complaints to prison authorities, judicial bodies or to the Office of the Attorney General (PGR), as well as to the Office of the Attorney for the Defense of Human Rights (PDDH). It also stated that the relatives of persons deprived of liberty can file complaints and requests directly with the Directorate-General of Prisons, the PGR, the Office of the General Prosecutor (FGR) and the PDDH. In addition, it emphasized that the platform "CAVAL 24/7" (Virtual Attention Center) allows users to channel complaints and requests for information. Finally, it stated that, in every judicial hearing, inmates are guaranteed to have the opportunity to maintain free and direct communication with their defense attorneys[205].

257. In its second communication to the IACHR, the State reported that it has adopted specific measures to establish and operate an accessible, available, and secure complaints system, with particular emphasis on providing comprehensive attention to children and adolescents in the Comprehensive Security Centers (CIS) and in the Prison Farm, through the support of the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA). Among these measures cited, it emphasized the implementation of secure exit routes to ensure safe departures, swift response mechanisms to address threats or violations of rights involving mothers deprived of liberty, regular inspections of collective conditions in the Farm Prison and in the CIS, and the establishment of a specific notification or complaint mechanism at the CIS, accessible to adolescents and providing an institutional response[206].

258. With regard to free and secure access to assistance and the filing of legal proceedings, the State indicated that persons deprived of liberty can file a complaint directly with the prison authorities, judicial bodies or the PGR, and that the PDDH intervenes pursuant to its mandate to investigate alleged violations. It added that family members and legal representatives have access to channels through the General Directorate of Prisons (DGCP), the PGR, the Office of the Attorney General (FGR) and the PDDH, as well as CAVAL 24/7, to submit complaints and requests for information online, which, according to the State, enhances transparency and expedites responses. It also emphasized that, according to the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Public Defender Service, sufficient mechanisms are in place to enable most citizens to locate their detained relatives[207].

[204] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, 28 June 2024, para. 291.
[205] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[206] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

259. The State further affirmed that the right to communicate with technical defense is guaranteed: at each court hearing, persons deprived of liberty may meet with their defense attorneys, and both public defenders and private counsels would have unrestricted access to their represented clients, which, in its view, enables the filing of complaints without limitations. Finally, it emphasized that the participating inmate count exceeding 21,000 in the "Zero Leisure Time" plan, which encompasses supervised, off-premises activities, would corroborate the absence of limitations on communication with the outside world. It further added that such a set up allows for the reporting of any irregularities in a free and timely manner and affirmed that these mechanisms offer protection against reprisals and ensure prompt resolution of complaints[208].

260. In November 2025, the State reiterated that its channels are in place and fully operational, including the Office of the Attorney for the Defense of Human Rights, the Office of the General Prosecutor, Office of the General Attorney, the judicial system, the CAVAL 24/7 platform and mechanisms specifically established for adolescents in CONAPINA custody. It pointed out that they constitute a functional framework that provides both direct reporting and access to judicial and administrative avenues for the protection of rights. In addition, it emphasized that the guaranteed access to both private and public defense confirms the diversity of operational channels within the system[209].

261. On the other hand, organizations noted that the State has not established an accessible and secure complaints system for persons deprived of liberty. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) reported that no State institution has implemented a dedicated mechanism. Instead, entities such as the Movement for Regime Victims and the Human Rights Defense Unit recorded 175 cases and referred them to the Presidential Commissioner, who did not respond; following his resignation, the initiative was left in a state of uncertainty. In addition, SSPAS emphasized that the Office of the Attorney for the Defense of Human Rights (PDDH) encounters restrictions in gaining access to penal facilities. Consequently, there is a lack of publicly available information or official plans to enhance reporting mechanisms, leading family members to perceive that current procedures rely on external institutions, such as Legal Medicine, which may reflect an institutional weakening[210].

262. For its part, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) indicated that the government had not adopted measures to establish a complaints system. On the contrary, it denounced the arrest of human rights defenders such as Fidel Zavala in February 2025, who lodged complaints of torture against the prison authorities and was subsequently transferred to the same prison. It also denounced the absence of a dedicated mechanism for the investigation of complaints of sexual violence against women deprived of liberty. IDHUCA emphasized that, given the restrictions on access to prisons under the state of emergency, the PDDH employed alternative strategies, including calls, requests for reports, guidance, and support. Although these methods allowed for 1,243 complaints of arbitrary detention and 9,108 consultations to be filed between May 2023 and April 2024, they are deemed insufficient to ensure secure filing of complaints by detainees and the achievement of justice without fear of reprisal[211].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

263. The recommendation calls for the development and execution of a complaints system that is accessible, available, and secure for all persons deprived of liberty, at no cost, which enables them to receive assistance and initiate legal action to address violations, with effective safeguards against retaliation. The State

[207] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[208] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[209] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[210] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[211] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

reported the existence of general channels, including prison authorities, the judicial system, the PGR and the PDDH, as well as the CAVAL platform 24/7. It further reported the availability of opportunities to communicate with the defense during hearings and the implementation of specific measures for adolescents in CIS and the Prison Farm through CONAPINA, including secure exit routes, notification and complaint mechanisms, and supervisions. State information is supported by existing regular channels and targeted measures for adolescents.

264. For their part, the organizations underlined the absence of a dedicated mechanism, the restrictions on access to prisons imposed upon the PDDH, incommunicado detention, and well-founded fears of retaliation, as exemplified by the denunciation of the arrest of a human rights defender following complaints of torture. They further noted the absence of a dedicated channel for complaints of sexual violence against women deprived of liberty. In this regard, civil society organizations are of the view that these elements call into question the actual availability, security and effectiveness of the channels described by the State for seeking to activate legal assistance and pursuing legal actions, without exposing complainants to risk.

265. Based on the information provided, the Commission identifies that the State has reported some relevant measures seeking to implement complaints mechanisms for persons deprived of liberty. However, according to the information received, the Commission lacks information on structural aspects of the implementation of the recommendation. Considering the context in which this recommendation was made, the avenues proposed, by their nature, do not necessarily ensure effective accessibility from within the centers or continuous availability. Moreover, the measures provided for adolescents, while valuable, do not obviate the need for a unified, specialized and operational mechanism within the relevant institutions. In conclusion, the information submitted by the State fails to evidence the existence of a self-structured and operational system capable of safeguarding the right to report human rights violations in an effective manner in contexts involving deprivation of liberty. Such a system should also enable these mechanisms to effectively facilitate access to legal aid and initiate judicial proceedings aimed at halting the violation of rights. Based on the above, the level of compliance is considered partial.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

266. To demonstrate in advance in compliance with this recommendation, the Commission invites the State to provide information on how the compliance measures previously mentioned allow for a complaints system that is accessible, operational and secure for all persons deprived of liberty. According to the recommendation, the State shall report that this system operates free of charge, that assistance is available, and legal actions may be initiated through it. It further invites the State to submit any additional information it deems appropriate.

Recommendation No. 19. Ensure the socio-educational purpose of the juvenile justice system, developing educational, professional training, and recreational programs for children and adolescents in the custody of the State authorities; likewise, that the educational programs comply with the same content and time requirements established by the educational authorities for children who are not deprived of their liberty.

267. In the Country Report, the IACHR addressed the situation of the administration of juvenile justice and the treatment received by children and adolescents involved in criminal proceedings during the state of emergency. Although the Commission observed that it had received little information, it emphasized that it had acknowledged information regarding the disproportionate impact on children and adolescents of the measures adopted during the state of emergency. In this regard, the IACHR recalled that juvenile criminal justice systems ought to ensure to children and adolescents every right and legal principle acknowledged for individuals accused of criminal offenses, as well as those stemming from the special protection afforded to their age and stage of development[212].

Information on compliance

268. In April 2025, the State affirmed that it had complied with this recommendation, ensuring that the juvenile justice system is geared toward the social reintegration, education and comprehensive development of children and adolescents in State custody. This indicates that juvenile detention centers provide educational, technical and recreational programs[213].

269. According to the State, formal education in youth centers has been guaranteed, providing basic, secondary and technical education programs, alongside the implementation of vocational training programs in areas such as carpentry, gastronomy and sewing. On the other hand, the State affirmed that all inmates have access to recreational and sports facilities, including spaces for artistic, cultural and training activities. In addition, access to psychological and social care has been guaranteed, with specialized technical teams addressing the comprehensive rehabilitation of prisoners. In support of these allegations, the State cited the report of the visit to the Tonacatepeque Social Inclusion Centre by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) on December 11, 2024, which is said to corroborate these allegations[214].

270. On the other hand, the State argued that El Salvador participates in the "Promotion and Strengthening of Restorative Juvenile Justice Across the Member Countries of SICA" project, which seeks to strengthen juvenile justice in Central America through restorative justice, with a focus on conflict resolution and social reintegration of young people "in conflict with the law". This project, promoted by the General Secretariat of SICA and financed by the Italian Agency for Development Cooperation focuses on strengthening institutions, changing the paradigm in the approach of adolescents deprived of liberty, promoting conflict resolution through dialogue and negotiation, and articulating social reintegration and prevention of reoffending[215].

271. Later, in September that same year, the State also reported that the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescents (CONAPINA) had devised a juvenile justice system incorporating a socio-educational approach, aimed at facilitating the reintegration of adolescents in conflict with the law. Among the measures implemented, it mentioned the adoption of the Protocol on Respect for Dignity, which seeks to guarantee decent and discrimination-free treatment, providing regular training on gender and human rights to personnel. It also emphasized that, within detention centers, there are schools approved by the Ministry of Education that operate under regular, flexible and accelerated modalities. In addition, vocational workshops, including carpentry, electricity, mechanics and cooking, as well as agricultural workshops, covering agriculture, poultry, beekeeping and fish farming, are provided, with their production marketed to support the sustainability of the program. The State added that musical, sports and cultural activities, as well as board games and participation in external social projects, are promoted to foster social integration and the comprehensive development of adolescents[216].

272. In its communication dated November 2025, the State referred to the measures outlined in its previous reports, affirming that it had complied with the recommendation by ensuring that the juvenile justice system has a socio-educational purpose and is oriented toward reinsertion. It reiterated that the youth centers provide formal education at basic and middle levels, technical training and vocational workshops, with their production marketed to support the sustainability of the program, as well as recreational, sports, artistic and cultural spaces and activities, and the provision of psychological and social attention, with protocols for transfers to hospitals when necessary. It referred again to its involvement in the "Promotion and Strengthening

[212] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, 28 June 2024, para. 229.
[213] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[214] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[215] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[216] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.

of Restorative Juvenile Justice Across the Member Countries of SICA" project, and to the visit of OHCHR to the Tonacatepeque Social Inclusion Centre[217].

273. The organizations agreed that the State does not guarantee the socio-educational purpose of the juvenile justice system. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) noted that, in February 2025, the Legislative Assembly approved a reform that allows for the accommodation of adolescents convicted of crimes linked to organized crime in prisons for adults, although in separate areas. This constitutes a regression from the differential treatment mandated by the American Convention and which, according to Human Rights Watch, endangers the health and reintegration of children[218].

274. For its part, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) reported that CONAPINA had addressed cases involving 700 juvenile offenders in 2024 by providing education and vocational workshops at four Social Integration Centers, with international support. It outlined initiatives such as the "Success Academy", which conferred 76 qualifications in English and computer science to young people, as well as tailoring, bakery or carpentry workshops. However, it emphasized that the legal reforms permitting the transfer of minors to adult prisons increase their vulnerability and impede access to information regarding their situation, thereby indicating continued non-compliance with the recommendation[219].

275. In addition, UN agencies, including the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC), UNICEF, OHCHR and UNFPA issued a joint statement concerning the February 2025 reforms to the Juvenile Criminal Justice Act and the Prison Act. The statement expressed concern about provisions allowing the transfer of adolescents to adult prisons and called for a review of those provisions on the grounds that they contravene international standards on comprehensive protection and juvenile justice based on a socio-educational approach[220].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

276. The Commission considers that, although the State reports the existence of educational and technical training programs in specialized youth centers, the adoption, in February 2025, of legislative reforms permitting the transfer of adolescents to adult prisons fundamentally contradicts the socio-educational purpose of the juvenile justice system, which the recommendation seeks to guarantee. In particular, the reported actions lack sufficient capacity to ensure the socio-educational purpose of juvenile justice, as they coexist with legal and practical arrangements that create environments incompatible with education, comprehensive development, and the special protection that the recommendation seeks to guarantee. These regressive measures violate Inter-American standards for the special protection of children and directly undermine the objectives of social reintegration and comprehensive development that define a juvenile justice system guided by a socio-educational approach. This concern has been reiterated by United Nations agencies (CRC, UNICEF, OHCHR and UNFPA), which have called for a review of the reforms due to their incompatibility with international standards applicable to the juvenile justice system.

277. Civil society organizations agree that these reforms constitute a setback, exposing children to greater vulnerability and hindering the effective implementation of the recommendation. The implementation of measures treating adolescents as adults within the prison system constitutes an irreconcilable contradiction of the mandate to ensure the socio-educational purpose of the juvenile justice system. In the absence of public documentation demonstrating equivalence, comprehensive coverage and results, and considering the validity of legal measures that impede the purpose of the recommendation, the Commission concludes that there has been no substantive progress and that the recommendation remains pending compliance.

[217] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.
[218] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[219] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[220] UNICEF Latin America and the Caribbean, Joint Statement by CRC, OHCHR, UNICEF and UNFPA on reforms to the Juvenile Penal Law and Penitentiary Law in El Salvador, February 13, 2025.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

278. To advance compliance with this recommendation, the Commission notes that the State must prioritize the repeal or amendment of the legislative reforms adopted in February 2025 that permit the transfer of adolescents to adult prisons. The implementation of these measures constitutes a fundamental obstacle to ensuring the socio-educational purpose of the juvenile justice system, and it is essential that all adolescents remain within the specialized system without exception. In addition, the State must provide information on the curriculum equivalence of educational programs implemented in juvenile detention centers, ensuring that they meet the same content and time-load requirements established for children who are not deprived of liberty. This includes official certification of programs and specialized training of teaching staff.

Recommendation No. 20. Guarantee compliance with the principle of maximum disclosure of public information held by the State and ensure that the classification of information as confidential is carried out in accordance with Inter-American standards on the subject and is subject to periodic review to assess the relevance of the restriction.

279. In the Country Report, the IACHR emphasized that access to information is central to the right to freedom of expression and that, in the context of a state of emergency, access to information promotes accountability and transparency in public administration, in addition to fostering the active participation of citizens. In the case of El Salvador, the Commission and the Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression (SRFOE) received information regarding alleged restrictions on the right of access to information, which has been a cause for concern even prior to the installation of the regime in March 2022. Among other matters, the IACHR and its Rapporteurship identified a concern, based on information from civil society, indicating a drastic increase in the withholding of public information by State institutions, without adherence to applicable international norms and standards. In this context, the IACHR called for the adoption of measures that ensure compliance with international standards applicable to the principle of maximum disclosure of information[221].

Information on compliance

280. In April 2025, the State indicated the existence of the Access to Public Information Act (LAIP, which establishes the principle of maximum disclosure and unrestricted access to information held by the State, except in duly justified exceptional circumstances. It also stated that in El Salvador, the Institute for Access to Public Information, an autonomous entity, is responsible for ensuring that the classification of confidential information is reviewed in accordance with established procedures. Finally, it explained that the information classified as "reserved" is not permanent and is subject to periodic review in accordance with current regulations. Furthermore, the State argued that the classification of, and access to, public information falls within its exclusive competence, exercised in accordance with its constitutional framework and principles of transparency, and that it does not allow external interference in this matter[222].

281. In September, the State reported that LAIP and its regulations enshrine the principle of publicity as a general rule and establish that any limitation must be exceptional, temporary, and duly justified. The State affirmed that the LAIP recognizes the maximum disclosure of information held by public institutions and that exceptions are justified only for reasons of national security, due process, or protection of third-party rights. It indicated that the Office of the General Prosecutor (FGR) upholds this principle when handling information requests, responding in a reasonable manner and restricting access only in exceptional cases provided for by law. Similarly, the National Council for Early Childhood, Children and Adolescence (CONAPINA) ensures that the information it safeguards is accessible to the public and applies periodic review mechanisms to information classified as "reserved"[223].

[221] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28, 2024, paras. 345, 346, 347, 355-364.

[222] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

282. The State also explained that the classification and withholding of information are based on the principles of legality, reasonableness, proportionality and temporality. In accordance with Article 35 of the LAIP Regulations, the classification is subject to periodic review, and confidential information must be declassified when the reservation period expires, when the causes that justified the restricted status no longer exist, or as provided by the IAIP, the autonomous body responsible for implementing the LAIP Act. Furthermore, it pointed out that citizens may seek administrative and judicial remedies, including the contentious-administrative procedure, to challenge any restrictions, thereby reinforcing accountability. Finally, it emphasized that the determination and application of the rules on access to information falls within the exclusive competence of Salvadoran institutions, in line with the domestic constitutional and legal framework[224] .

283. In turn, civil society organizations agreed that the State had not taken measures to ensure the maximum dissemination of public information and that significant restrictions remain regarding security statistics and government plans. The Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) indicated that official information is provided at the discretion of public officials and is limited to aggregate data published at events or shared with allied journalists. It emphasized that the Ministry of Justice and Public Security is withholding the Territorial Control Plan and information related to the Rewards Act, and further noted that the FGR keeps databases derived from court files under restriction for seven years, while the National Civil Police (PNC) similarly withholds its statistics on crimes, victims and detainees for the same period, in contradiction of the principle of full access to public data[225].

284. In addition, extensive restrictions on information were reported in criminal cases of high public interest, including those brought against human rights defenders in 2025, which restricted public scrutiny and access to procedural information by legitimate third parties. The IACHR highlighted this situation in its press releases 115/25 (June 6, 2025) and 162/25 (August 14, 2025), emphasizing that the general rule should be the publicity of criminal proceedings, in accordance with Article 8.5 of the American Convention on Human Rights (ACHR), and that any restriction must be exceptional, justified, and temporary[226].

285. In its November 2025 report, the State noted that it maintains a regulatory and organic framework that guarantees the principle of maximum disclosure, in particular the LAIP Act and its regulations, as well as the Institute for Access to Public Information, an autonomous entity responsible for implementing the above-mentioned Act and reviewing the classification of information. It stated that publicity is the general rule and that restrictions on disclosure are exceptional, temporary, justified, and subject to periodic review, with declassification when the term expires or the underlying causes no longer exist. It also indicated that institutions such as the Office of the General Prosecutor and CONAPINA apply these standards when processing applications, and that classification is governed by legality, reasonableness, proportionality and temporality. It also argued that administrative and judicial remedies are available to challenge restrictions, including the contentious-administrative procedure, and emphasized that the determination and management of access to information fall within the exclusive competence of the Salvadoran authorities, exercised in accordance with the constitutional framework and the principles of transparency[227].

286. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) added that the IAIP resolved only 35% of the requests in 2024, and that only 11% of the resolutions were favorable to citizens, demonstrating the lack of institutional

[223] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[224] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[225] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[226] IACHR, Press Release 115/25, El Salvador: IACHR expresses grave concern over measures that restrict the defense of human rights and civic space, June 6, 2025. IACHR, Press Release 162/25, El Salvador: IACHR reiterates concern over prolonged and improper use of state of emergency in El Salvador, August 14, 2025.
[227] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report (in Spanish), November 28, 2025.

will to ensure transparency of information. The SSPAS also noted that security forces publish homicide figures on social networks without a verifiable methodology, and that the PNC's transparency portals lack disaggregated data, demonstrating the absence of state action to comply with the recommendation[228].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

287. The State merely describes the existing regulatory framework (LAIP, Regulations, and IAIP) and states, in abstract terms, that reservations are exceptional, temporary and subject to review; it does not provide evidence of new and verifiable measures after 2024 to guarantee the principle of maximum disclosure, nor of specific actions to review and reduce existing restrictions in sensitive areas (public safety, criminal statistics, government plans). Furthermore, it insists that the matter falls within its internal "exclusive competence", without explaining how this position is harmonized with the applicable Inter-American standards.

288. Information from civil society organizations corroborates the lack of material progress. They note that extensive and long-term restrictions on access to information persist (e.g.: Territorial Control Plan; databases of FGR and PNC for seven years), along with opacity in key statistics and weak institutional performance of the IAIP, reflected in a low resolution rate and a low proportion favorable to applicants. These elements call into question the effective periodic review and the observance of the principle of maximum disclosure in practice. Added to this is the widespread use of "judicial secrecy" in relevant criminal proceedings, including cases involving human rights defenders, which limits public access to essential proceedings and information and is at odds with the principle of publicity of criminal proceedings provided for in Art. 8.5 of the ACHR. The lack of strict controls on necessity, proportionality and periodic review of these restrictions undermines the effectiveness of the principle of maximum disclosure required by this recommendation.

289. In short, the State's submissions do not demonstrate the adoption of new substantive measures, following the publication of the Country Report, aimed at implementing the recommendation, while the findings of civil society reinforce evidence of the continued practice of excessive secrecy in the absence of effective controls and proactive transparency. Lacking new, verifiable measures and public results demonstrating review and declassification, the recommendation remains pending compliance.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

290. To advance compliance, the IACHR requests that the State provide information on updated measures implemented since the publication of the Country Report. These measures should clarify how existing mechanisms have been used to guarantee the principle of maximum disclosure of public information and to ensure that the classification of information as "reserved" is carried out in accordance with Inter-American standards and is subject to periodic review.

Recommendation No. 21. Within the framework of the ongoing training provided by the State, ensure the implementation of programs aimed at:

a. security forces on human rights and Inter-American standards on deprivation of liberty, use of force, gender perspective, and differentiated approaches.

b. justice officials on Inter-American standards on access to justice, pretrial detention, juvenile justice, gender perspective, differentiated approaches.

c. prosecutors, penitentiary agents, and personnel of the Forensic Medical Service on the application of the Istanbul Protocol, as well as the Minnesota Protocol for the case of extrajudicial executions or suspicious deaths in detention.

[228] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.

291. In the Country Report, the IACHR noted the importance of the State taking effective action to address and eradicate organized crime, tailored to the scope and severity of the country's particular situation. It emphasized that these measures must be in line with the legal and international obligations that must govern state action. It further argued that, in all cases, the guarantee and protection of human rights must remain at the center of any effort undertaken in the field of citizen security. Following the concerns expressed by the IACHR in its report regarding the use of force, the imposition of deprivation of liberty, and the application of criminal law under the state of emergency, this recommendation calls on the State to ensure that its civil servants possess the skills and knowledge necessary to apply the relevant Inter-American standards, as well as the international obligations for which they are responsible[229].

Information on compliance

292. The State emphasized that human rights training is not a standalone measure, but a transversal and mandatory component of both the initial and ongoing training of the National Civil Police, the Armed Forces, justice officials, the Office of the General Prosecutor, prison staff and forensic medical specialists. It indicated that this national training system permanently incorporates content on Inter-American standards applicable to deprivation of liberty, use of force, access to justice, pretrial detention, juvenile justice, gender perspective and differentiated approaches, as well as on the implementation of the Istanbul Protocol and the Minnesota Protocol when investigating deaths in custody. According to the State, the model meets the required structural elements, namely mandatory and permanent incorporation, technical relevance, a human rights approach, and specialization by institutional role; therefore, its evaluation should consider both institutional results and the current legal framework, rather than relying solely on the methodological metrics suggested by the Commission. It further added that certain verification requirements, such as submitting instructor profiles, would exceed the minimum standards requested by the Inter-American Court regarding training[230].

293. In addition, the State noted that this institutional human rights training for security forces and justice officials is provided in response to recommendations from the IACHR and decisions of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (including El Mozote, Rochac Hernández, Ruano Torres), which mandate permanent and compulsory programs with differentiated approaches, including gender perspective, children, enforced disappearance, conventions oversight, among others[231].

294. In relation to subparagraph (a), the State reported that permanent programs on human rights and proportional use of force exist in the National Civil Police (PNC) and the Armed Forces of El Salvador (FAES), delivered through the National Academy of Public Security (ANSP)[232]. Subsequently, the State detailed the course "Rights and fundamental guarantees of the person in the police function"; periodic performance evaluations; a new curriculum at the ANSP, covering a police service model, the Territorial Control Plan, the use of ONI/CIR technologies, emotional intelligence, and English; as well as self-training courses on human rights and lawful and legitimate use of force, and diplomas in data intelligence and AI applied to public safety[233].

295. Regarding subparagraph (b), it highlighted continuous training for justice officials, covering updates on access to justice, pretrial detention, and juvenile justice; as well as specialized training for criminal enforcement judges and juvenile court judges on alternative measures and reintegration[234]. The State then detailed trainings conducted by the National Council for Early Childhood, Childhood and Adolescence (CONAPINA) ("Crecer Juntos" Act, human rights, and gender and differentiated approaches for Comprehensive Security Centers (CIS) and prison farm staff); a national plan from the "Dr. Arturo Zeledón Castrillo" Judicial

[229] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, 28 June 2024, para. 396.
[230] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report, November 28, 2025.
[231] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[232] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[233] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[234] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

Training School of the National Council of Justice (CNJ) in juvenile criminal justice, including restorative and socio-educational models, social law and gender, criminal law and criminal procedure, family, children and adolescent law; and twenty-four training procedures carried out by the Central Technical Unit[235].

296. With respect to subparagraph (c), it reported programs relating to the Istanbul Protocol and Minnesota Protocol: The Training School for Prosecutors (ECF) of the FGR is reported to have incorporated specific modules into their annual programs. The Institute of Legal Medicine (IML) "Dr. Roberto Masferrer" reported that it had conducted training activities using manuals and technical guides, with an emphasis on independence and impartiality, and had promoted the international accreditation of laboratories, in addition to providing complementary training in bodily injury and forensic traumatology, DNA analysis and forensic anthropology[236]. In general, the State had already reported that prison staff were trained in accordance with the Nelson Mandela Rules, and that IML staff received training in assistance protocols and expert procedures with a human rights approach[237].

297. Finally, as further initiatives, it mentioned the Training of Trainers course on the judicial reasoning and evidence evaluation, with a focus on the rights of women and children, conducted with the International Justice Mission (IJM), and the II Regional Congress for the Prevention and Combating of Violence against Women (9–10 December 2024), aimed at facilitating the exchange of good practices in justice with a gender perspective[238].

298. In turn, both the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) and Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) agreed that the State had not promoted training programs in human rights, gender perspective or differentiated approaches required by this recommendation. IDHUCA noted that, under the state of emergency, policies focused on militarizing public security and strengthening criminal legislation. However, no training was provided for security forces, justice officials, or prison personnel to ensure respect for due process and Inter-American standards[239]. For its part, Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) did not record any state initiatives addressing law enforcement officers, prosecutors, judges or medical personnel with respect to the Istanbul Protocol, the Minnesota Protocol, or other applicable standards. It also stressed that the authorities maintain a repressive approach, demonstrating a failure to comply with the recommendation[240].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

299. The recommendation calls for permanent, mandatory programs with differentiated approaches for: (A) security forces (deprivation of liberty, use of force, gender perspective and differentiated approaches); (b) justice officials (access to justice, pretrial detention, juvenile justice, gender and differentiated approaches); and (c) prosecutors, prison officers and medico-legal personnel (Istanbul and Minnesota Protocols). The State reported the formal establishment of training within state bodies and described the various programs and courses offered, including the PNC course, the new ANSP curriculum, activities of the Judicial School/CNJ and CONAPINA, and modules offered by FGR/ECF and IML).

300. However, in accordance with the General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, the information presented lacks verifiable accreditation on key elements, including the mandatory nature and scope of the training (i.e., the target population and participation rates per institution), frequency and duration, curricular content aligned with Inter-American standards (including a gender perspective and differentiated approaches), training methodologies and assessment of learning, budgeting, and measurable outcomes or

[235] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[236] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[237] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to the IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.
[238] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[239] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[240] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

changes in practice (i.e., indicators on the use of force and documentation of torture or deaths in custody under the Istanbul and Minnesota Protocols).

301. In turn, civil society organizations (IDHUCA and SSPAS) noted the absence of training programs that comply with the recommendation, particularly with respect to the Istanbul and Minnesota protocols, and highlighted a punitive approach under the state of emergency, which contrasts with the claims of the State. In the absence of public and verifiable documentation that demonstrates comprehensive and effective implementation of the core elements of each subparagraph of the recommendation, the Commission notes unverified progress and significant gaps in relation to the required standards. Based on the above, the level of compliance is considered to be pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

302. To advance with the implementation of the recommendation, the IACHR considers it appropriate for the State to submit public and verifiable documentation demonstrating the effective, mandatory, and permanent implementation of the programs referred to in the subparagraphs of the recommendation. In particular, it is suggested to include the regulations establishing mandatory training, minimum frequency and duration, curriculum plans with a gender focus and differentiated approaches aligned with Inter-American standards, the target population by institution, coverage and attendance rates, instructor profiles, the allocated budget, and the assessment mechanism.

Recommendation No. 22. Ratify:

a. the Inter-American Convention on Forced Disappearance of Persons;
b. the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance;
c. the Convention on the Non-Applicability of Statutory Limitations to War Crimes and Crimes Against Humanity;
d. the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment; and establish the National Mechanism to Prevent Torture.

303. In the Country Report, the IACHR expressed concern regarding the information it received indicating a set of alleged situations under the state of emergency, which include ill-treatment, cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment, and torture, among others, in the context of the implementation of citizen security measures. In this context, the Commission has called on the State to adopt international instruments as a concrete measure to fulfill its commitment to preventing, investigating, and punishing these actions[241].

Information on compliance

304. In April 2025, the State affirmed its commitment to the protection and promotion of human rights and reiterated its adherence to existing international treaties. However, it argued that the ratification of new instruments should follow a rigorous internal analysis, taking into account their compatibility with the constitutional framework. It emphasized that progress in investigating serious human rights violations, such as enforced disappearance, has been significant and is independent of external accessions. It further noted that the recommendations of the Inter-American Human Rights System (IAHRS) are not binding and that any decision regarding new ratifications will be taken sovereignly, in consultation with relevant State organs[242].

305. In September 2025, the State reaffirmed its commitment to human rights and acknowledged the importance of treaties on enforced disappearance, crimes against humanity, and torture. Without prejudice to this, it reiterated that the decision to ratify and implement these instruments is a sovereign prerogative, subject to a thorough analysis of legal feasibility and compatibility with the Constitution. It added that the absence of ratification does not result in a protection gap, since concrete measures have been implemented and the judicial system strengthened, as reflected in follow-up reports submitted to the IACHR[243].

[241] IACHR, Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," OEA/Ser.L/V/II, Doc. 97/24, June 28,2024.
[242] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-030/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, April 23, 2025.

306. In its observations presented in November 2025, the State reiterated that, while it recognizes the importance of treaties relating to enforced disappearance, crimes against humanity and torture, the recommendations of the ISHR serve as guidance and do not impose any obligation to ratify them. It indicated that any potential accession to the Inter-American Convention on Forced Disappearance of Persons, the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, the Convention on the Non-Applicability of Statutory Limitations to War Crimes and Crimes Against Humanity and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, as well as the establishment of a National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture, is a sovereign decision subject to an internal procedure involving the Legislative Assembly, the Executive Branch and the Judicial Branch, including an analysis of legal feasibility, constitutional compatibility, and consideration of national needs. Finally, it reiterated that the absence of ratification does not result in a protection gap, as domestic measures have been adopted and the judicial system strengthened to investigate, punish and redress serious human rights violations[244].

307. Civil society organizations agreed that the State had made no progress in ratifying international treaties relating to enforced disappearances, war crimes and torture, nor in establishing a National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture. Cristosal and CEJIL remarked that the Salvadoran government did not promote initiatives to accede to these treaties and continued to maintain a confrontational discourse toward international human rights organizations[245].

308. The Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) confirmed that no bills or administrative actions were introduced to ratify these instruments and that the Legislative Assembly did not address these matters during the reference period[246]. In turn, the Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) observed that no steps were taken to establish a National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture and that the hostile environment toward human rights advocates hindered any space for dialogue, thereby demonstrating a failure to comply with the recommendation[247].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

309. The recommendation calls for specific policy and administrative actions: promoting the ratification of four international instruments (subparagraphs a–d) and establishing a National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture (NPM). The State reiterated its overall commitment to human rights and stated that any potential accession will be decided sovereignly, following an analysis of feasibility and constitutional compatibility, emphasizing that the recommendations of the ISHR are not binding. However, it did not report any verifiable steps toward ratification, nor did it provide information on preparatory measures for the NPM, such as institutional design, establishing legislation, budget, mandate, or operating protocol. The reference to internal "progress" in investigating serious violations does not substitute for the specific purpose of the recommendation, which is adherence to the listed treaties and the establishment of the NPM.

310. For their part, civil society organizations reported the absence of legislative or administrative initiatives to ratify the above-mentioned instruments and create the NPM. Moreover, these matters were reportedly not discussed in the Assembly during the reference period, and a climate of hostility toward human rights defenders was described as hampering dialogue. In the light of the General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, the Commission notes that no substantive measures were taken to ensure compliance;

[243] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[244] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-155-2025, Observations to the Draft Report, November 28, 2025.
[245] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[246] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.
[247] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.

however, nor was there any express and unequivocal refusal by the State to ratify the relevant instruments or to establish the NPM. Accordingly, the level of compliance is considered pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

311. The Commission warns that, to assess objective progress, the State should submit public and verifiable documentation demonstrating concrete internal steps toward the ratification of the four instruments. At the same time, with regard to the establishment of the NPM, it would be appropriate to submit the draft bill or establishing act, including its proposed institutional design, ensuring functional and budgetary independence, a pluralistic composition and suitability criteria, as well as powers to conduct unannounced visits to any detention facility, access to information and persons, guarantees of confidentiality, protection against retaliation.

Recommendation No. 23. Agree to a working visit by the IACHR.

Information on compliance

312. In 2025, the State expressed its willingness to maintain channels of communication with the IACHR to address issues of interest, stating that a productive dialogue should not be conditional upon a working visit. The State indicated that, on July 2, 2025, it held a high-level meeting with the Commission, led by the Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs and composed of senior officials, during which it reiterated its commitment to human rights and highlighted its ongoing communication with the IACHR and other international organizations[248].

313. Following the State's oral statement at the July 2 meeting indicating that the possibility of conducting a working visit remained open, the Commission reiterated its interest in undertaking such a visit specifically and requested the State's consent to that end. It indicated that the main objective of the visit would be to observe the situation of persons deprived of liberty and that it hoped to examine cross-cutting issues such as access to justice and citizen security, as well as differentiated impacts on historically marginalized groups such as women, children and adolescents. On that occasion, the focal point of the Commission for the organization of the visit was also noted[249].

314. Subsequently, through Note Verbale MPOEA-OEA-076/2025 of August 1, 2025, the State expressed its willingness to consider a visit, provided that a methodology is defined and that the terms and agenda are jointly agreed. It requested, prior to granting consent, that the specific objectives of the visit, its participants, the locations to be visited, and meetings to be held be provided, proposing that the planning be carried out through a private and constructive dialogue, culminating in a detailed work plan. However, it reiterated that any visit must be conducted in an atmosphere of objectivity and mutual respect and expressed its willingness to agree on a subsequent date to continue the process of jointly developing the agenda for a possible visit[250].

315. Civil society organizations emphasized that the State has not authorized a working visit by the IACHR. Cristosal and CEJIL recalled that, despite the importance of on-site monitoring, the Salvadoran Government has not granted its consent for the Commission to directly verify the human rights situation. They noted that this refusal contravenes the recommendation and hinders international monitoring[251]. The Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS) added that the authorities have not only blocked the IACHR's visit but also denied it

[248] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[249] IACHR, Letter 312-25/IACHR/SE/MPCT-VT, Ref.: Working Visit to El Salvador, July 10, 2025, IACHR Archive.
[250] El Salvador, Note MPOEA-OAS-103/2025, Response to IACHR Questionnaire, September 5, 2025.
[251] Cristosal Foundation and Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

access to information, further exacerbating the lack of transparency[252]. For its part, the Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA) agreed that the State has maintained a confrontational stance toward international human rights organizations and has not undertaken diplomatic efforts to facilitate the visit, demonstrating a failure to comply with the recommendation[253].

Analysis and level of compliance with the recommendation

316. The Commission values the opportunities for dialogue held in 2025, in particular the High-Level Meeting on July 2, as well as Note Verbale MPOEA-OAS-076/2025 of August 1, through which the State proposed continuing the exchange to clarify the scope and objectives of a possible visit, including methodological and planning aspects. However, to date, formal consent has not yet been granted. In accordance with the General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, these preparatory steps represent progress in coordination, although they do not substitute for the specific action recommended, namely, granting consent. In this regard, and pending the completion of such a formal act, the level of compliance is considered pending.

Measures and information to advance compliance with the recommendation

317. To consolidate the progress of dialogue, it would be appropriate for the State to provide formal written consent for the working visit, specifying a timeframe and high-level focal points for operational coordination. On the basis of such consent, a work plan could be agreed with the IACHR detailing objectives and methodology, acknowledging the scope proposed by the Commission and ensuring: (i) access to locations of interest as determined by the IACHR (including maximum security prisons, police cells, and juvenile and women's centers); (ii) private interviews with persons deprived of liberty, their family members, and officials; and (iii) access to relevant files and information. This approach would facilitate an orderly and collaborative progression toward the effective implementation of the visit and full compliance with the recommendation.

III. SUMMARY TABLE OF THE LEVEL OF COMPLIANCE WITH RECOMMENDATIONS

318. The following table shows the level of compliance by the State of El Salvador with respect to the 23 recommendations of the Report on State of Emergency and Human Rights that were analyzed in this follow-up report:

Recommendation number	2025 Level of compliance
1	Not implemented
2	Partial
3	Pending
4	Pending
5	Pending
6	Pending
7	Pending
8	Pending

[252] Servicio Social Pasionista (SSPAS), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 28, 2025.
[253] Institute of Human Rights of the Central American University (IDHUCA), Response to the Request for Information Questionnaire, August 26, 2025.

9	Not implemented
10	Pending
11	Pending
12	Pending
13	Partial
14	Not implemented
15	Pending
16	Pending
17	Not implemented
18	Partial
19	Pending
20	Pending
21	Pending
22	Pending
23	Pending

IV. CONCLUSIONS

319. Full compliance with the IACHR's recommendations by OAS Member States is essential to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights in the region and to strengthen the effectiveness of the Inter-American Human Rights System. In the exercise of its mandate to follow up on these decisions, the Commission prepares reports in which it identifies the progress, challenges and setbacks in the adoption of the compliance measures it has requested from States through its various working mechanisms.

320. This follow-up report analyzes the implementation of the recommendations that the Commission issued in its Country Report "State of Emergency and Human Rights in El Salvador," approved on June 28, 2024. In the aforementioned Country Report, the IACHR included 23 recommendations.

321. A consistent pattern emerges from the comprehensive analysis of the information submitted by the State, the contributions of civil society organizations, and the IACHR's own monitoring: pre-existing regulatory frameworks, policy guidelines, and ongoing actions are reported, but in most cases, they are not accompanied by verifiable public documentation, demonstrating effective implementation, national coverage, results, and measurable impacts. This lacks of evidence spans critical areas during the state of emergency (due process, precautionary measures, registration and traceability of detainees, conditions of detention, transparency and access to information, juvenile justice, training of civil servants and international cooperation) and coincides with recent policy decisions that, in several respects, run counter to the recommendations formulated in the Country Report.

322. In terms of quantitative balance, of the 23 recommendations analyzed, none were considered fully or substantially implemented, three partially implemented (13%), 16 remained pending (70%), and four were deemed not implemented (17%). This result indicates that, although specific or preparatory actions exist, there is insufficient evidence of implementation or tangible outcomes to justify higher levels of compliance.

323. Regarding due process, the State describes tools and protocols that, in principle, could strengthen immediate notification, access to legal defense, and private communication; however, it does not provide disaggregated data or performance indicators (coverage, response times, usage rates, and results) that would allow verification of systematic improvements. The IACHR notes with concern that human rights defenders have been arrested without access to legal counsel and transferred to unknown locations, in violation of fundamental guarantees of due process and effective judicial protection.

324. Regarding precautionary measures, gaps remain between the domestic legal framework and Inter-American standards. There is no evidence of the development of alternatives to pretrial detention, the adoption of specific judicial guidelines incorporating a gender perspective and differentiated approaches, or the establishment of a periodic review system with defined parameters, timelines, and public indicators. Recent reforms also extend pretrial detention as a rule under the state of emergency, which conflicts with the principle of exceptionality and the periodic monitoring that should govern its application.

325. Regarding the prison system, the authorities report expansions of infrastructure, population redistribution, and service improvements; however, they do not provide evidence of an operational order prohibiting new admissions to facilities exceeding capacity, nor do they present consolidated inventories for each facility that would allow verification of capacities, actual occupancy, and results. The available information indicates severe overcrowding pressures and repeated alerts regarding material conditions that are inconsistent with Mandela Rules and the applicable international human rights standards.

326. This is compounded by the continued restrictions on contact with family members and access to legal representation. Although mechanisms for requesting visits, online initiatives, and family communication schemes are mentioned, there is no evidence that they have been consistently and widely reinstated, nor that they have been adequately regulated to remove broad prohibitions, despite their central role in mitigating incommunicado detention and vulnerability of persons deprived of liberty.

327. Traceability of detentions remains a critical point. Although platforms, service desks, and coordination mechanisms (including those for the youth) are presented, there is no evidence of a unified, interoperable, and up-to-date register established from the moment of arrest, with timely access for authorities, defense and family members. The lack of publicly available protocols, standardized minimum data fields, and periodic statistical reporting makes it impossible to verify real-time location and the effective follow-up of each case.

328. About transparency and access to public information, the State invokes the existing legal framework and the supervisory authority but does not demonstrate the adoption of new measures to review and reduce restrictions in sensitive areas, such as criminal statistics, security plans, and databases, nor does it present a declassification schedule with defined goals and timelines. This opacity weakens accountability, especially in a prolonged state of emergency. In addition, although the implementation and results of the Citizen Security Plan and the Territorial Control Plan have been made public, there are significant shortcomings in compliance with the principle of accessibility and transparency regarding this public information.

329. Regarding juvenile justice, educational and vocational programs are reported to be held in specialized centers; however, reforms persist that allow adolescents to be transferred to adult prisons, which undermines the socio-educational purpose and compromises the standards of enhanced protection and the observance of the best interests of children and adolescents. In addition, legislative changes were observed that contravene this principle by subjecting adolescents to the ordinary justice system instead of the specialized system.

330. With regard to the training of security, justice, prison system, and medico-legal officials, courses and initiatives are listed, but no documentation is provided regarding their mandatory nature, coverage, duration, content alignment with Inter-American standards (including a gender perspective and differentiated approaches), or measurable results. In particular, there is no evidence of effective training under the Istanbul and Minnesota Protocols that ensure case traceability and professional development of experts.

331. Regarding international cooperation, there are no verifiable steps toward the ratification of pending instruments or the establishment of a National Mechanism for the Prevention of Torture with adequate independence, mandate and budget.

332. Furthermore, the continued extension of the state of emergency, with cumulatively high numbers of detainees, not only directly contradicts the recommendations issued in this regard but also undermines the institutional capacity to ensure timely judicial oversight, review precautionary measures, maintain conditions compatible with human dignity, and guarantee transparency of essential information. In this context, the vulnerability of human rights defenders is a matter of concern.

333. Considering this scenario, and in accordance with the General Guidelines on the Follow-up of Recommendations, the Commission concludes that the overall level of compliance with this report is pending. Most components lack concrete and verifiable results; several steps that were initiated have not produced material effects; in some areas, the State has indicated it will not adopt the requested legislative changes; and there remain areas for which insufficient information was received to support a different conclusion.

334. The Commission reiterates that compliance with recommendations requires a transition from general statements and administrative instruments to substantive, verifiable and results-based measures. This involves adopting specific regulatory and administrative acts, including the necessary legal adjustments and clear operational guidelines, establishing interoperable registers and disaggregated statistics for public and regular access, enabling independent monitoring in all places of deprivation of liberty, and publishing timetables for the review and declassification of information with defined objectives, deadlines, and indicators.

335. The Commission stresses that these steps are fully compatible with the international commitments assumed by the Salvadoran State as a party to the American Convention on Human Rights and the Inter-American System of Human Rights, and reiterates its willingness to provide technical assistance in developing road maps that will allow, within a reasonable timeframe, to objectively increase the level of compliance with all recommendations.

336. Finally, the Commission is grateful for the information provided by both the State and civil society organizations for the preparation of this follow-up report.

VI.

Institutional Development

CHAPTER VI INSTITUTIONAL DEVELOPMENT

I. IACHR STRUCTURE AND STAFF 1017

A. Consultants, interns, Trainees, Scholarship Holders and Associate Personnel 1020

B. Work environment plan collectively developed and in the process of implementation 1021

II. FINANCIAL RESOURCES AND BUDGET IMPLEMENTATION 1022

III. PLANNING, FUND MOBILIZATION, AND PROJECT MANAGEMENT 1028

A. Projects implemented in 2025 1028

B. Proposals submitted 1031

C. Suspension of projects 1032

IV. TECHNOLOGICAL ADVANCES 1032

CHAPTER VI
INSTITUTIONAL DEVELOPMENT

I. IACHR STRUCTURE AND STAFF

1. As of December 31, 2025, the Executive Secretariat of the IACHR is made up of 142 people (77 staff members, 59 consultants and six associate staff members). In addition, the ES/IACHR has four fellows.

2. The following table shows the distribution of the workforce by source of funding, as of this same cut-off date.

Workforce by Source of Funding
Category	Regular Fund	Specific Funds	ICR Fund	No Cost to the IACHR	Specific Funds Trust	Total
Executive Secretary	1					1
Assistant Executive Secretaries	2					2
Special Rapporteurs		2				2
Professionals	35	21				56
Administrative personnel	11	4	1			16
Subtotal Personnel	49	27	1			77
Human Rights Consultants	20	15			1	36
Administrative Consultants	9	6				15
Consulting in Other Professions	6	2				8
Subtotal Consultants	35	23			1	59
Associate Staff				6		6
Subtotal	84	50	1	6	1	142
Fellows		4				4
Grand Total	84	54	1	6	1	146

3. In terms of geographical representation and diversity, the 142 people mentioned in paragraph 1 (staff members, consultants, and associated personnel) come from 21 different countries, 69% of the staff members are women and 31% are men. The following table shows the distribution of staff by nationality and type of contract.

Type of contract	Country	Nationality upon joining the OAS	Current Nationality
Staff	Argentina	5	4
	Barbados	1	1
	Bolivia	2	1
	Brazil	9	8
	Canada	1	1
	Chile	3	3
	Colombia	16	14
	Costa Rica	2	2
	El Salvador	2	1
	United States of America	10	20
	Guatemala	1	1
	Mexico	7	7
	Panama	1	0
	Paraguay	1	1
	Peru	9	7
	Dominican Republic	1	1
	Uruguay	1	1
	Venezuela	5	4
Total Staff		77	77
CPR	Argentina	6	6
	Bolivia	4	3
	Brazil	6	6
	Colombia	12	12
	Costa Rica	2	2
	Ecuador	1	1
	El Salvador	2	2
	Spain	2	2
	United States of America	1	3
	Mexico	8	8
	Panama	3	3
	Peru	3	3
	Trinidad and Tobago	1	1
	Uruguay	3	3

	Venezuela	5	4
CPR Total		59	59
Associate Staff	Argentina	2	2
	Brazil	4	4
Associate Staff Total		6	6
Grand Total		142	142

4. During 2025, the Executive Secretariat of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (ES/IACHR) carried out strategic actions in the areas of institutional leadership, personnel management, and response to a complex financial situation.

5. Tania Reneaum Panszi's term as Executive Secretary of the IACHR was renewed until May 31, 2029. This decision, adopted by an absolute majority of the Commissioners and formalized by the Secretary General of the OAS in accordance with the Statute of the IACHR, was preceded by a performance evaluation that supported the continuity of her administration. The second term began on June 1, 2025.

6. Twenty-four positions corresponding to competitions held in 2023 and 2024 were filled, strengthening the organizational structure of the ES/IACHR. Likewise, the selection processes for three additional positions were completed, closing a critical phase of staff recruitment.

7. During the year, the ES/IACHR faced a significant financial crisis due to the temporary suspension of funds from PADF and the United States Government between February and March. This situation created operational and contractual instability, affecting approximately 40% of the staff. As contingency measures, 33 consulting contracts were terminated and the implementation of leave without pay for permanent staff was considered, a measure that was ultimately not applied. In addition, there were seven additional resignations (two staff members and five consultants). The areas most affected were Precautionary Measures, Follow-up of Recommendations and Impact, Monitoring of Human Rights, and Technology and Systems. In March, after the suspension was lifted, 26 consultants were rehired.

8. Subsequently, as part of efforts to keep the institutional structure operational, two competitions were opened for P02 positions of Human Rights Specialist, both resulting from the resignations of officials who held those positions. One of these vacancies, in the Follow-up of Recommendations and Impact Section, received 491 applications, a record number. The selected candidate was appointed on December 16, 2025. The open competition for the second vacancy, assigned to the Assistant Executive Secretariat for Monitoring, Promotion, and Technical Cooperation, was canceled because the donor decided to focus its funding primarily on the petitions and cases system.

9. A P04 level position as Senior Officer was opened for competition, whose main functions will be to advise Caribbean Member States. The appointment is expected to take place in the second quarter of 2026.

10. The mandate of the Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights, Javier Palummo, was renewed until August 31, 2026. This decision, adopted by an absolute majority of the Commission and formalized by the Secretary General of the OAS in accordance with the Statute of the IACHR, was preceded by a performance evaluation that supported the continuity of his tenure.

11. The processes for conducting audits of two positions in the Office of Administration and Institutional Affairs, carried out by a United Nations expert classifier, were completed.

12. On October 1, ES/IACHR workforce resumed in-person work three days a week at the Washington, D.C., office. Starting on January 1, 2026, workforce will work in person four days a week at that office.

A. Consultants, interns, Trainees, Scholarship Holders and Associate Personnel

13. During the year, three processes were completed to call for resumes for the selection of consultants in various areas, contributing to the strengthening of capacities and services within the ES/IACHR.

14. As part of strategic efforts to strengthen the organizational structure, the external consultancy responsible for conducting an assessment to review and define a basic workforce structure that would enable the mandate to be fulfilled with efficiency, excellence in performance, and financial sustainability was completed. The resulting report offers proposals and scenarios for adjusting the staffing structure to current and future needs, based on criteria of operational rationality and responsiveness. The documentation derived from the study is being analyzed by the management team to define concrete actions.

15. The policy of hiring consultants from their countries continued, optimizing resources and providing services to the different sections of the ES/IACHR. As of December 31, 2025, the ES/IACHR had 59 consultants. 71% of consultants work outside headquarters.

16. Three remote internship sessions were held, coordinated by the Department of Human Resources of the GS/OAS, in which a total of 81 interns joined the ES/IACHR.

17. With the support of various institutions, the ES/IACHR welcomed 13 fellows recipients who worked remotely or at headquarters during the year:

No.	Nationality	Fellowship	Assignment
1	Mexico	University of Coahuila	Monitoring Section I
2	Brazil	Caribbean - CARICOM	Monitoring Section II
3	Trinidad and Tobago	LGTBI - ARCUS	Monitoring Section II
4	El Salvador	Canada Project - Women and Girls	Monitoring Section II
5	Costa Rica	Both Ends Believing	Monitoring Section III
6	Barbados	Caribbean - CARICOM	Monitoring Section III
7	Germany	UCLA School of Law	Monitoring Section III
8	Colombia	Orlando Sierra Fellowship	Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression
9	Brazil	Orlando Sierra Scholarship	Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression
10	Brazil	Orlando Sierra Scholarship	Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression
11	Mexico	UNAM	Assistant Executive Secretariat for Petitions and Cases
12	Mexico	UNAM	Cases Section I

13	Chile	Elizabeth Abi-Mershed Scholarship	Follow-up on Recommendations and Impact Section

18. During 2025, thanks to the support of various institutions, the ES/IACHR hired nine people as Associate Staff:

No.	Institution	Assignment
1	Public Prosecutor's Office of the State of Sao Paulo (Brazil)	Monitoring Section II
2	International Work Group for Indigenous Affairs (IWGIA)	Monitoring Section II
3	National Council of the Public Prosecutor's Office of Brazil (Brazil)	Monitoring Section III
4	Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)	Monitoring Section III
5	Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)	Monitoring Section III
6	Public Defender's Office of the State of Rio de Janeiro (Brazil)	Precautionary and Provisional Measures Section
7	Federal Public Defender's Office (Brazil)	Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights (REDESCA)
8	Brazilian Public Ministry of Labor (Brazil)	Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights (REDESCA)
9	Federal Public Defender's Office (Brazil)	Special Rapporteur on Economic, Social, Cultural, and Environmental Rights (REDESCA)

B. Work environment plan collectively developed and in the process of implementation

19. In response to the financial crisis, measures were implemented to ensure continuity of service and minimize disruption to essential functions. These included:

20. Reinstatement of four additional consultants working remotely from their countries of origin as of July 1, optimizing the available budget and offering greater contractual stability.

21. Temporary reassignment of a CPR3 level consultant to the Precautionary Measures Section to reinforce response to the sustained increase in requests.

22. These decisions posed challenges in terms of team morale, operational coordination, and technical supervision. During this period, priority was given to maintaining direct, constant, and transparent communication with all staff, both permanent and consultant, to ensure access to clear information about events and decisions taken. This strategy was key to mitigating uncertainty and preserving an environment of respect, support, and collective commitment to institutional continuity.

23. Due to the temporary suspension of funding for US government grants, the activities scheduled for the first half of 2025 under the Co-Labora Program were postponed. Actions resumed between July and October, coinciding with the third anniversary of its implementation.

24. During this phase of the Co-Labora Program, actions were developed to accompany staff on their return to the office, scheduled for October 1. Priority was given to strengthening key competencies such as productive resilience, adaptability, and cognitive flexibility, necessary to cope with organizational changes and contexts of instability. Coaching sessions were also held for the leadership team to reinforce management skills in scenarios of uncertainty and consolidate a collaborative, empathetic, and results-oriented style.

25. Highlights included:

- "Back to the Office" session: Open webinar to reflect on expectations and experiences of returning to work.

- Individual coaching: Third cycle of professional development focused on emotional management, decision-making under pressure, and adaptive leadership.

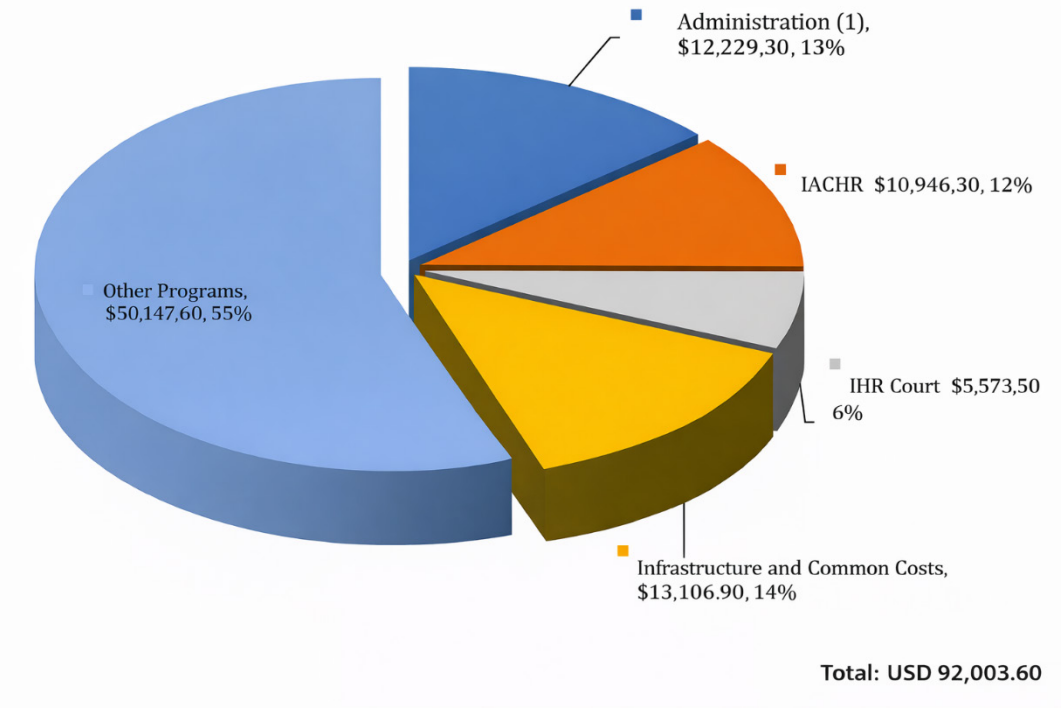
- Leadership team workshop: Training in adaptability and key competencies for managing change processes.

26. Two strategic alignment sessions were held:

- Second coordination team session: A space to review agreements and strengthen cohesion.

- Third session of the extended management team: Aimed at anticipating complex scenarios, encouraging collective and disruptive thinking, and developing skills to quantitatively prioritize essential functions in each area, consolidating a comprehensive and collaborative vision in decision-making.

27. Finally, two training modules were conducted for staff: the first on Productive Resilience: Resilient Communication, Managing Difficult Conversations, and Positive Feedback. The second on Cognitive Flexibility: Creative Thinking, Innovation, and Tools for Effective Priority Management.



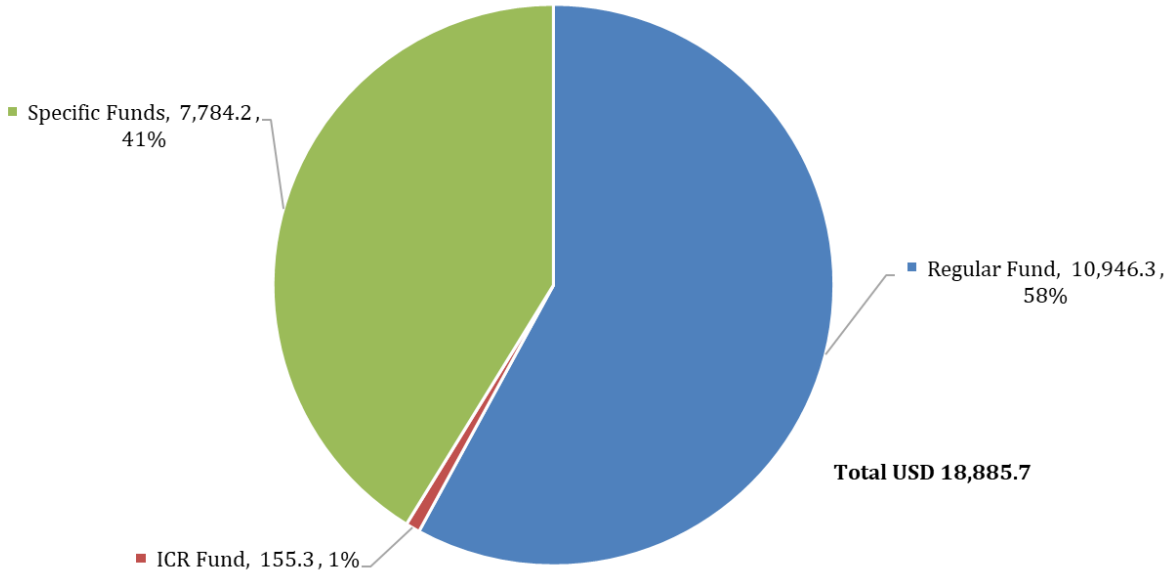
II. FINANCIAL RESOURCES AND BUDGET IMPLEMENTATION

28. On November 1, 2024, during its 55th special session, the General Assembly approved a regular fund budget for the IACHR of $10,946,300 for 2025, of which $7,849,800 is for personnel expenses and $3,096,500 is for operational expenses.

29. The General Assembly also approved a budget of $141,800 for the IACHR's Indirect Cost Recovery (ICR) fund for 2025, of which $82,400 corresponds to personnel expenses and $59,400 to operational expenses.

30. The following figure shows the distribution of the approved budget for the regular fund within the OAS for 2025. The IACHR was approved 12% of the annual amount.

Figure 1. Distribution of the approved budget of the OAS regular fund for 2025 (Amounts in thousands USD) [1]



31. By December 31, 2025, the modified appropriation of the original regular fund budget was $10,946,300, distributed as follows: $7,683,300 for personnel expenses and $3,263,000 for non-personnel expenses. The portion corresponding to personnel expenses appears to be under-executed because, during 2025, the ES/IACHR had various vacant positions which are still in the process of being filled. In turn, the portion corresponding to operating expenses appears to be higher than the approved amount because the General Secretariat approved transfers (known as reinforcements) from the budget item for personnel expenses to the item for operating expenses due to the vacant positions.

32. On the same date, the modified appropriation for the indirect cost recovery (ICR) fund was $155,254, of which $95,854 was allocated to personnel expenses and $59,400 to non-personnel expenses.

33. With regard to the raising of specific funds, as a result of the resource mobilization strategy and thanks to the trust placed in the IACHR, contributions totaling $7,784,157 had been received by December 31, 2025. The following chart shows the distribution of funds received by source of financing.

[1] The distribution of the program budget for the period from January 1 to December 31, 2025, was approved by the General Assembly at its 55th special session in November 2024 through AG/RES 1 (LV-E-24). The amount indicated under Administration corresponds to the Secretariat of Administration and Finance (Chapter 11).

Figure 2. Funds received by the IACHR as of December 31, 2025, distributed by source of funding (Amounts in thousands of USD, preliminary and unaudited)

34. The following table shows the contributions of funds received by the IACHR by source of funding.

Table 1. Contributions received by the IACHR as of December 31, 2025
By funding source and special topic
(Amounts in USD, preliminary and unaudited) [2] [3] [4] [5]

Source of Funding	ES/IACHR	RELE	REDESCA	Total	%
Regular Fund	10,946,300.0	-	-	10,946,300.0	58.0%
ICR Fund	155,253.7	-	-	155,253.7	0.8%
Specific Funds
Member States
Canada	566,211.3	-	-	566,211.3	3.0%
Costa Rica	9,852.7	3,071.3	-	12,924.0	0.1%
Chile	16,000.0	2,000.0	2,000.0	20,000.0	0.1%
Guatemala	349,722.0	-	-	349,722.0	1.9%
Honduras	300,000.0	-	-	300,000.0	1.6%
Mexico	335,000.0	-	15,000.0	350,000.0	1.9%
Panama	20,000.0	-	-	20,000.0	0.1%
United States	3,832,724.1	1,787.0	-	3,834,511.1	20.3%
	5,429,510.1	6,858.3	17,000.0	5,453,368.4	28.9%
Permanent Observers
European Union	509,322.9	-	-	509,322.9	2.7%
France	107,222.5	-	230,520.1	337,742.6	1.8%
Monaco	10,000.0	-	-	10,000.0	0.1%
Netherlands	299,980.0	-	-	299,980.0	1.6%
Spain	138,748.7	-	170,170.0	308,918.7	1.6%
Sweden	-	266,050.7	-	266,050.7	1.4%
Switzerland	-	59,975.0	-	59,975.0	0.3%
	1,065,274.1	326,025.7	400,690.1	1,791,989.9	9.5%
Institutions and Others
Arcus Foundation	55,000.00	-	-	55,000.0	0.3%
Centre for Security Sector Governance (DCAF)	-	25,197.0	-	25,197.0	0.1%
Ford Foundtaion	250,000.00	-	-	250,000.0	1.3%
New Venture Fund	-	75,000.0	-	75,000.0	0.4%
Pan American Development Foundation (PADF	107,394.96	-	-	107,395.0	0.6%
United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)	26,207.2	-	-	26,207.2	0.1%
	438,602.1	100,197.0	-	538,799.1	2.9%
Total Specific Funds	6,933,386.3	433,081.0	417,690.1	7,784,157.4	41.2%
Grand Total	18,034,940.0	433,081.0	417,690.1	18,885,711.1	100.0%

[2] It includes an assistance agreement with the United States worth USD 26.1 million for the period 2021-2027. This agreement is implemented through disbursements against the financial implementation of the project. The Special Rapporteurship for Freedom of Expression has an allocation of USD 2 million (direct costs) within this agreement.

[3] It includes an assistance agreement with Norway for NOK 10.2 million for the period 2024-2027, of which REDESCA has an allocation of NOK 6,197,550.8 (60.76%), the Special Rapporteurship for Freedom of Expression has an allocation of NOK 3,422,585.6 (33.55%), and the IACHR has an allocation of NOK 579,863.6 (5.69%).

[4] This report is organized by funding source and by Special Rapporteurship/sections within the IACHR.

[5] The information reported corresponds to preliminary and unaudited financial information for 2025.

35. The following table shows the change in the balance of funds for projects financed by specific IACHR funds as of December 31, 2025.

Table 2. Report on Changes in the Balance of Specific Funds by Project. Information as of December 31, 2025 [6] [7] [8] [9]
(Value in USD, preliminary and unaudited)

Project Name	Beginning Balance	Contributions.	Transfers.	Interest.	Returns & Other Income.	Expenditures.	Net Change.	End of Cash Balance.	Obligations.	Fund Balance
Enhan.Inst.Cap.IACHR.Ind.Pow	1,400,000.00	-	(45,200.00)	-	-	368,073.21	(413,273.21)	986,726.79	179,232.00	807,494.79
Fort.Prom. J.S. Envment.DESCA	14,544.51	-	(9,911.01)	-	899.00	5,532.50	(14,544.51)	-	-	-
Freedom of Expression 2018-2021	8,228.72	-	-	-	-	-	-	8,228.72	6,021.18	2,207.54
Freedom of Expression 23-26	396,366.05	433,080.95	(1,664.29)	3,069.38	(11,307.10)	515,609.64	(92,430.70)	303,935.35	65,552.80	238,382.55
HR Def./Just. Operators	128,489.00	-	66,300.00	-	-	106,332.00	(40,032.00)	88,457.00	9,450.00	79,007.00
Human Rights Women Girls LAC	860,424.00	566,211.34	-	15,280.53	28,865.74	704,852.39	(94,494.78)	765,929.22	254,747.69	511,181.53
Inc. Prom. Def. IACHR 2021-2023	(3,104,612.96)	3,832,724.07	-	-	2,390.44	3,925,704.76	(90,590.25)	(3,195,203.21)	894,603.11	(4,089,806.32)
Inc. Prot/Def. HR in Americas	461,307.89	509,322.86	-	-	-	1,084,705.67	(575,382.81)	(114,074.92)	24,942.32	(139,017.24)
Increasing protection of HR	127,958.34	299,980.00	-	4,827.48	(2.60)	373,121.52	(68,316.64)	59,641.70	37,620.00	22,021.70
Legal Assistance Fund I-A Humam Rights System	134.69	-	-	-	-	-	-	134.69	-	134.69
Mec. Seg. Rec. GIEI Bolivia	150,166.86	-	-	-	-	128,972.67	(128,972.67)	21,194.19	-	21,194.19
MESENI Monitoring 2023-2025	109,324.17	-	-	-	-	63,817.37	(63,817.37)	45,506.80	9,945.30	35,561.50
Obj 1. Promote justice	(272.26)	-	-	-	272.26	-	272.26	-	-	-
Obj 2. Monitoring Capacity	10,135.52	-	(21,481.37)	-	-	-	(21,481.37)	(11,345.85)	-	(11,345.85)
Obj 4. Strenghten Coop. ISHR	(17,022.42)	-	-	-	-	-	-	(17,022.42)	-	(17,022.42)
Obj 5. Inst. Mngt. IACHR	2,334.90	-	(554.09)	-	(272.26)	8.48	(834.83)	1,500.07	-	1,500.07
Obj 6 - Recommendations IACHR	32,904.97	-	-	-	-	-	-	32,904.97	-	32,904.97
Optimize GAIA System Phase II	-	-	31,236.00	-	-	4,060.68	27,175.32	27,175.32	-	27,175.32
Pillar 1 SP 2023-2027	832,821.57	380,602.68	43,133.82	-	7,851.00	926,124.97	(494,537.47)	338,284.10	212,558.49	125,725.61
Pillar 2 SP 2023-2027	793,411.75	621,094.76	59,684.79	7,669.08	(68,634.90)	817,192.45	(197,378.72)	596,033.03	181,698.54	414,334.49
Pillar 3 SP 2023-2027	75,438.27	434,322.00	(1,921.10)	-	(899.00)	82,138.77	349,363.13	424,801.40	23,486.20	401,315.20
Special Mecanism MC-409-14	1,150.02	-	-	-	-	-	-	1,150.02	-	1,150.02
Strategic Plan - General Funds	-	397,900.00	(51,080.19)	-	-	52,455.00	294,364.81	294,364.81	-	294,364.81
Stre. Cap. of IACHR in region	453,888.80	-	-	-	-	403,821.50	(403,821.50)	50,067.30	3,944.00	46,123.30
Stren.Prom.Fisc.Pol.	-	-	170,170.00	-	-	62,762.10	107,407.90	107,407.90	59,133.73	48,274.17
Strength. Environ. Protec.	220,000.00	-	(119,340.93)	-	-	100,659.07	(220,000.00)	-	-	-
Grand Total	2,957,122.39	7,475,238.66	119,371.63	30,846.47	(40,837.42)	9,725,944.75	(2,141,325.41)	815,796.98	1,962,935.36	(1,147,138.38)

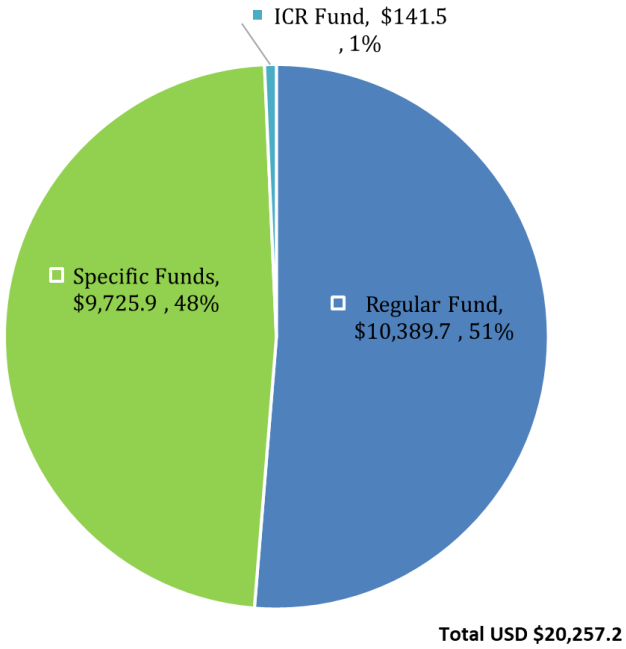
36. The following figure shows the distribution of IACHR expenses by source of funding as of December 31, 2025. Expenses financed through the regular fund account for 51%, those from specific funds account for 48%, and those from ICR account for 1%.



[6] This table summarizes the report "Statements of Changes in Fund Balances" by activity and donor, published by the Department of Financial Services of the GS/OAS until December 31, 2025.

[7] The final negative balances are due to the fact that donors' disbursements are made against implementation.

[8] This table shows the Oliver Jackman Fund.

[9] The information reported corresponds to preliminary and unaudited financial information published by the Department of Financial Services of the OAS General Secretariat.

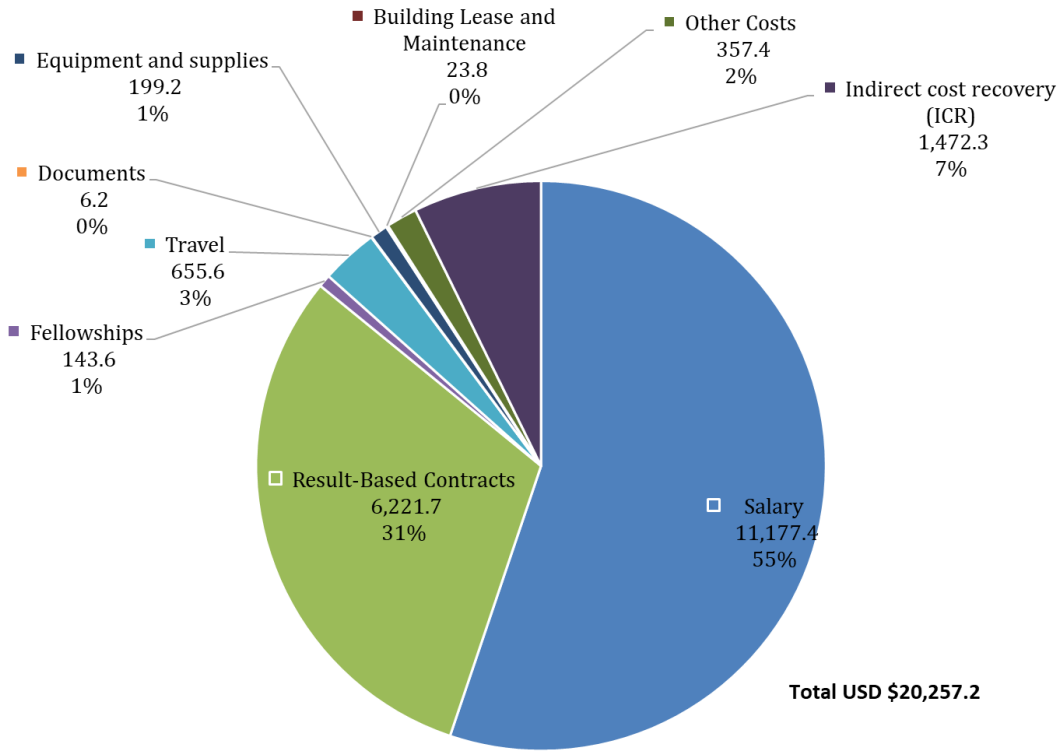


Figure 3. Breakdown of IACHR expenditures by funding source as of December 31, 2025 (Amounts in thousands of USD)

37. The following table and graph show the distribution of IACHR expenses by source of funding and item of expenditure.

Item of Expenditure	Regular Fund	Specific Funds	ICR Fund	Total (thousands)
Salaries	7,415.2	3,679.8	82.5	11,177.4
Non-recurring salary costs	-	-	-	-
Result-Based Contracts	2,436.4	3,763.7	21.6	6,221.7
Fellowships	-	143.6	-	143.6
Travel	233.2	422.4	-	655.6
Documents	2.3	3.9	-	6.2
Equipment and supplies	124.8	63.5	10.9	199.2
Building Lease and Maintenance	14.7	9.1	-	23.8
Other Costs	163.2	167.7	26.5	357.4
Indirect cost recovery (ICR)	-	1,472.3	-	1,472.3
Total	10,389.7	9,725.9	141.5	20,257.2

Figure 4. Total Distribution of IACHR Expenditures by Expenditure Item as of December 31, 2025 (Amounts in thousands of USD)

III. PLANNING, FUND MOBILIZATION, AND PROJECT MANAGEMENT

A. Projects implemented in 2025

38. The Executive Secretariat prepared and submitted a total of 37 narrative reports on the implementation of 29 projects in progress during 2025, consisting of 10 final reports, 7 annual reports, 6 semi-annual reports, 9 quarterly reports, and 5 progress reports. In addition, 4 annual work plans were submitted to the respective donors. Five other projects have reports scheduled for submission in 2026, in accordance with their contractual timetable.

39. Below is a list of projects completed and in progress during 2025, with their respective donors and prepared reports:

Table. Projects implemented in 2025

Donor	Project name	Project's final amount USD /EU	Status	Number of
ACNUR	Support for the Rapporteurship on Human Mobility (2024).	$65,517USD	Implemented	1 Final report
ARCUS	Protection and promotion of the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and intersex persons (2021–2024)	$150,000 USD	Implemented	1 Final report
ARCUS	Protection and promotion of the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and intersex persons (2024-2027)	$160,000	Ongoing	1 Annual report
United States	Increasing the protection and defense of human rights in the Americas for the period 2021-2026 (CDH2101)	$19,745,000 USD	Ongoing	4 Quarterly reports
European Commission	Increasing the protection and defense of human rights in the Americas (2023-2025)	1,75 million Euros (approx. 1,76 million USD)	Implemented	1 Annual report
Spain	Monitoring the Human Rights Situation in Nicaragua II (2023-2025)	$206,308 ($97,174 + addition $109.134) USD	Ongoing	2 semiannual reports
Spain	CDH2201 Support for follow-up on the recommendations of the GIEI Bolivia (2023-2024)	$234,100 + addition 108,992 USD	Implemented	1 Progress report, 1 Final report
The Netherlands	Increase the protection and guarantee of human rights for human rights defenders and other vulnerable groups (2022-2026)	$1,200,000 USD	Ongoing	1 Annual report, 1 Annual Work Plan
Italy	Strengthening governance and human rights in Central America.	240,000 Euros	Implemented	Final report to be submitted in 2026
Ford Foundation	Strengthening the IACHR's capabilities to address the human rights situation in the region	$1,000,000 USD	Ongoing	1 Annual report
Canada	Enhancing the protection and defense of the human rights of women and girls in Latin America and the Caribbean (2023-2027).	$5 million CAD (approx. 3,6 million USD)	Ongoing	1 Annual report, 1 Annual Work Plan
Norway	Climate justice and economic, social, cultural, and environmental rights in Latin America and the Caribbean.	$156,029 USD	Implemented	1 Final report
PADF	Central America Regional Program	$177,000 USD	Early Termination	1 Quarterly reports, 1 Final report, 1 Work Plan
PADF	Training on the Inter-American System of Human Rights, investigations, and documentation of testimonies in Nicaragua and Venezuela	$100,000 USD	Implemented	1 Final report
PADF	Labor rights of Cuban medical personnel	$410,000 USD	Ongoing	4 Quarterly reports, 1 Work Plan

Donor	Project name	Project's final amount USD /EU	Status	Number of
Spanish Fund for the OAS (SFO)	CDH2205 - Strengthening and promoting Inter-American legal standards on the environment, with a focus on climate change, the human right to water, and other DESCA rights in the Americas.	$234,278 USD	Implemented	1 Final report, 1 semiannual report
Spain (Basque Agency for Development Cooperation)	Increased protection for individuals at risk of irreparable violations of their rights, expansion of precautionary measures, and development of training in protection mechanisms.	110,000 Euros	Implemented	Final report to be submitted in 2026
Norway	Protecting freedom of expression and environmental rights in Latin America and the Caribbean in the context of the climate emergency and threats to democratic governance.	$978,886 USD	Ongoing	1 Annual report 1 Work Plan (2025)
Foundation for the Americas	Support for the work of the IACHR Rapporteurship on the Rights of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, and Intersex Persons Phase IV.	450,000 USD	Ongoing	1 Annual report
Spanish Fund for the OAS (SFO)	CDH2308 Protection and defense of human rights defenders and justice operators in the Americas.	$221,000 USD	Ongoing	1 Progress report
Spanish Fund for the OAS (SFO)	CDH2309 Strengthening and promoting Inter-American human rights standards in the context of fiscal policies to guarantee and improve access to DESCA.	$243,100 USD	Ongoing	1 Progress report
Spain	Voluntary contribution (policy window) for follow-up on recommendations to the Guatemala report.	$41,212 USD	Ongoing	1 Progress report
France	Voluntary contribution report for the preparation of a report on enforced disappearances in Mexico.	$64,068 USD	Ongoing	Final report to be submitted in 2026
France	Strengthening the capacity of State agents and civil society organizations to promote, respect, and ensure the rights of LGBTI persons.	$100,000 Euros	Implemented	Final report to be submitted in 2026
Ireland	Expanding the use of friendly settlements as an alternative mechanism for redressing human rights violations.	$100,000 Euros	Implemented	Final report to be submitted in 2026
Sweden	Freedom of Expression and Media Independence in Venezuela (Component VI – IACHR/Office of the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression).	$50,000 USD	Implemented	1 Progress report 1 Final report
Switzerland	Increasing the observance, protection, and defense of human	$244,500 USD	Ongoing	1 Progress report

Donor	Project name	Project's final amount USD /EU	Status	Number of rights defenders and justice operators in Central American countries.
United States	Improving the IACHR's institutional capacity for timely and efficient analysis of threats to the independence of powers and the rule of law.	$1,400,000 USD	Ongoing	1 Progress report
United States	Strengthening access to IACHR mechanisms for the protection of the environment and environmental defenders, especially those belonging to historically marginalized groups in the context of the climate emergency.	$ 100,659 USD	Early Termination	2 semiannual reports 1 Final report

B. Proposals submitted

40. The Executive Secretariat of the IACHR prepared and submitted 16 funding proposals to donors for the development of strategic projects aligned with the 2023-2027 Strategic Plan, of which a total of six proposals were approved. Four proposals are under review toward the end of December 2025.

a) Strengthening the protection and defense of human rights in the Americas – proposal SE/CIDH-RELE-REDESCA submitted to the European Commission (1,750,000 EUR / 1,955,000 USD). (Approved)
b) Strengthening the capacity of state actors and civil society organizations in OAS member states in the Caribbean – Caribbean Development Bank (USD 1,207,230).
c) Strengthening the capacity of State actors and civil society organizations to promote, respect, and guarantee the rights of LGBT persons – France (USD 100,000). (Approved and implemented).
d) Broadening the capacity of the IACHR to effectively monitor and raise international awareness of the human rights situation in Haiti – France (USD 500,000).
e) Enhancing the protection and defense of human rights defenders and justice operators in the Americas – Italy (USD 250,000).
f) Strengthening the institutional capacity of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights through the optimization of the GAIA System (additional funding) – Spanish Fund for the OAS (SFO). (Approved)
g) Promotion of respect for and protection of ESCR and the rights of the most vulnerable communities in Latin America and the Caribbean in the context of the energy transition – submitted to AECID/SFO (US$290,300). (Approved)
h) Strengthening of the capability of state agents and civil society organizations to promote, respect, and guarantee the rights of LGBTI persons – submitted to the Government of France (USD 164,578).
i) Fighting illegal mining in the Guiana Shield and promoting environmental, social, economic, and cultural rights – submitted to the Government of France (€100,000). (Approved)

j) Addressing the structural factors underlying discrimination and violence against children, adolescents, persons with disabilities, and LGBTI persons – submitted to the Government of France (USD 117,250).
k) Support for the work of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights in the areas of access to justice, protection of persons at serious, imminent, and irreparable risk, and monitoring of human rights in the Americas – submitted to the Ford Foundation (US$1,000,000). (Approved)
l) Proposal to extend and add funds to the project "Increasing the protection and defense of human rights in the Americas, 2021-2027 USA (CDH2101), funded by the USA.
m) Public policies to guarantee human rights in the context of renewable energy projects—including green hydrogen supply chains—in Colombia and Peru—submitted to the Ford Foundation ($200,000). (Under review)
n) Promotion of Inter-American standards on equality, non-discrimination, and intersectionality – submitted through the Foundation for the Americas (USD 150,000). (Under review)
o) Project: Strengthening mechanisms for the protection of human rights defenders in Central America for the Catalan Agency for Development Cooperation (€300,000). (Under review)
p) Project to strengthen Inter-American child protection standards to prevent recruitment in contexts of territorial violence and mobility in Central America. (EUR 100,000). (Under review)

C. Suspension of projects

41. At the end of January 2025, the IACHR was severely affected by the suspension of three projects caused by the government's executive order on US foreign aid. One of these projects received direct funding from the US Congress. This directly affected the financing of 28 staff members and 33 consultants, representing approximately 32% of the IACHR's workforce.

42. In order to reduce the impact of staff losses and the suspension of activities, the ES/IACHR conducted an intensive review, rescheduled other available project sources, and reassigned staff to other projects. However, given the size of the financial impact and the effect on morale, it was not possible to retain all of the affected staff. Some contracts were left without a source of funding, and others (two staff members and five consultants) chose to resign. Although two of the projects were reinstated after a little over a month, the Commission suffered a major impact on all its mechanisms, which weakened its ability to fulfill its mandate during the period of suspension and afterwards, due to the consequences of the aforementioned staff reduction. In March, after the suspension was lifted, 26 consultants were rehired.

IV. TECHNOLOGICAL ADVANCES

43. Over the past year, the Commission has consolidated more technological transformation processes that digitally modernize, increasingly strengthen its operations, and ensure and enhance institutional responsiveness. Each initiative implemented contributed to creating a more robust and resilient digital ecosystem, aligning technology management standards, which reinforced the Commission's commitment to implementing modern solutions that promote accessibility, transparency, and sustainability at the IACHR.

44. Significant progress was made in the maintenance and support of the GAIA central system, aimed at optimizing its performance, ensuring information security, and facilitating its institutional use. During this period, 15 functional and technical improvements were implemented, along with an optimization of the programming logic, which prepared the platform for more robust exception management while maintaining its operability. Likewise, the first architectural adjustments planned for a future code update were made. This process seeks to prevent obsolescence, improve the user experience, and ensure long-term technical sustainability. Additionally, in line with the commitment of the Executive Secretariat of the IACHR (ES/IACHR) to promote the efficient use of its technological tools, several training and resource-building activities were conducted, such as the creation of a training model combining self-learning materials (e-learning), live practical sessions, and the production of bilingual institutional videos highlighting the technological advantages implemented in GAIA, facilitating its understanding and promoting technical cooperation with other institutions. The system's official technical documentation was also updated, incorporating innovations derived from new tools and technologies. In addition, GAIA's access controls were strengthened and updated in order to reinforce data protection, in full alignment with institutional information security policies. During the year, 55,972documents were successfully notified through GAIA, using fully automated processes.

45. Progress was made in formalizing GAIA Phase II, which will expand the IACHR's central system with new modules, enhancing its scope, automation, and institutional performance in a second phase of development. The functional requirements of the modules were consolidated, and criteria were harmonized with the relevant technical bodies, paving the way for the software development procurement process. The preparation incorporated key inputs such as evaluation criteria and operational guidelines, with a focus on scalability, security, and sustainability, raising the technical quality of the file. This work integrated planning, methodological review, and risk management, maintaining consistency between objectives and deliverables. The result is a project with solid foundations, a focus on service, and institutional traceability for its next phase, prepared for orderly implementation, with robust standards and an architecture aligned with the strategic needs of the OAS, laying the groundwork for the progressive implementation of this Phase II and its future technological sustainability.

46. eVote, an electronic system for consultations with the Commission, positioned itself as a permanent institutional technology platform by replacing a licensing component with a more efficient alternative, reducing costs while maintaining quality and stability. This strategic decision liberated resources and reaffirmed a pragmatic approach to innovation, where each adjustment is aimed at optimizing results and protecting technological autonomy. Specialized technical support ensured continuous operation in sensitive processes, eliminating the risk of interruption and strengthening confidence in the tool. eVote was consolidated as a robust, reliable system capable of sustaining critical demands.

47. The Early Warning project advanced steadily, strengthening its technical, methodological, and organizational dimensions and establishing a solid technological foundation focused on preventing risks to democratic institutions in the Americas. In order to develop the system, a dedicated infrastructure with a virtual environment and integration services was promoted, in coordination with the OAS Department of Information Technology and Services, preserving compatibility with the organization's guidelines and information security. The system definition document was also validated, detailing technologies for machine learning. Likewise, the conceptualization of ARGOS was presented, specifying its architecture, operation, and strategic goals. At the same time, the project incorporated the evaluation of language models with API availability for state-of-the-art synthesis and deep research, accelerating analysis and reducing response times. In addition, progress was made in the development of the ARGOS Knowledge Portal, with a focus on e-learning, centralizing content and promoting the autonomous adoption of tools by the ES/IACHR teams. With this set of milestones, the project establishes a robust, scalable foundation that is aligned with institutional goals and ready for operational implementation. To sustain its value, it is essential to ensure the continuity of the system and the constant learning of the models, guaranteeing their updating and adaptability to new contexts and challenges.

48. The Commission used high-performance technological strategies during the 192nd, 193rd, and 194th session periods, integrating end-to-end digital planning, administration, and logistics. The deployment included audiovisuals, online streaming, real-time platform monitoring, and compliance with accessibility standards, expanding reach and public participation and providing stable sessions with wide visibility. During the 192nd session, the simultaneous operation of rooms enabled 33 public hearings, setting a benchmark for efficiency for subsequent cycles and guiding the operational maturity applied to the 193rd session and the preparation of the 194th session, with a total of 70 hearings broadcast live. The combination of state-of-the-art technological infrastructure and multidisciplinary coordination standardized flows and reinforced transparency for diverse audiences, creating the necessary synergies and positioning the Commission as a referent in the management of technology-supported multilateral events.

49. Through the collaborative digital tool used in the secretariat, the system developed for intelligent management was consolidated, centralizing key processes, automating procedures, and strengthening institutional traceability. Its growth continued with configurable views, precision filters, and integrated notifications that streamlined coordination between areas and increased transparency in decision-making. Within this framework, in order to maintain continuous technological renewal, the use and implementation of artificial intelligence applied to the platform is being analyzed, identifying priority use cases and a roadmap for AI-assisted integrations aimed at simplifying manual tasks, improving information classification, and anticipating needs. All of this is executed with the responsible adoption of emerging technologies and adherence to security and governance standards, a strategy that keeps the organization at the forefront, with faster and more consistent processes.

50. Broadening its impact by offering users of the ES/IACHR the possibility of modifying the urgency level of requests already sent and adding new categories of procedures that facilitated previously fragmented processes, the tool developed to manage the requirements of the central systems marked a new cycle of growth, allowing for more precise and flexible management, capable of adapting to institutional priorities in real time. Likewise, the functionality of announcements to users of the IACHR's central system was automated, enabling institutional communications with full reach in a single flow. The improvement expands coverage and communication opportunities, reduces manual workloads, standardizes content, and improves traceability, providing consistent and timely information for all users. A total of 479 requests were handled in nine areas of the ES/IACHR. In turn, the system for logistics and administration of technological resources expanded its capacity to handle a high volume of requests, reflecting not only the maturity achieved in terms of process standardization, but also its strategic importance in responding immediately to the needs of the Secretariat. A total of 528 requests were handled for the entire Secretariat. Both tools were strengthened as fundamental channels for digital resource management and as an indispensable part of the Secretariat's technological ecosystem.

51. The technological modernization process resulted in the updating, redistribution, and incorporation of additional computer equipment and devices, strengthening the institutional infrastructure of the ES/IACHR with state-of-the-art tools. This strategic investment not only optimized processing times and operational efficiency but also ensured the continuity of digital services in line with the organization's high standards. In addition, storage solutions were implemented which significantly expanded the ability to back up and protect critical information, providing greater security amid growing data demands. These actions helped ensure that staff had modern, robust, and secure tools at their disposal to perform their duties.

52. From the Individual Petition System Portal, with a focus on user service, more than 8,519 queries about the use of the platform were answered; the ecosystem grew with 4,710 new user registrations and four activations by states; 76,995 additional information documents were processed automatically through the system.

53. With the aim of expanding access to information and speeding up the operational response times of the SE/IACHR, in line with the standardization and automation of processes, the digital publication of public calls for applications in multiple languages was enabled. These include: requests for hearings and meetings for the 192nd, 193rd, and 194th Period of Sessions (in the four official languages); the prioritization of cases for the development of inter-American public policy (four languages); the Caribbean Dialogue Network; public consultation questionnaires for the development of a practical guide on human rights and borders (two languages) and on access to justice with a gender perspective (four languages); as well as calls for a Human Rights Consultant, a Fellowship from the Rapporteurship on the Rights of LGBTI Persons, and an Applications Systems Developer. This process strengthened transparency, standardized the publication experience, and expanded the reach of the various calls for applications.