

276

21/12-01

SRI LANKA ASSESSMENT

April 2001

Country Information and Policy Unit

The Country Information and Policy Unit conducted a fact-finding mission to Sri Lanka between 9-13 July 2001. The purpose of the mission was to verify and update information contained in the April 2001 assessment and to collect additional information to assist in the determination of asylum applications from Sri Lanka nationals in the United Kingdom. The report of the fact-finding mission, which will also reflect other material that has been available in the meantime, will be published on this site as soon as it is finalised. A comprehensive country assessment incorporating this material will be produced in the normal way in April 2002.

I SCOPE OF DOCUMENT

II GEOGRAPHY

III. HISTORY

IV INSTRUMENTS OF THE STATE

V HUMAN RIGHTS

ANNEX A: MAIN POLITICAL PARTIES AND ORGANISATIONS

ANNEX B: PROMINENT PEOPLE PAST AND PRESENT

ANNEX C: CHRONOLOGY

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I SCOPE OF DOCUMENT

1.1 This assessment has been produced by the Country Information and Policy Unit, Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Home Office, from information obtained from a variety of sources.

1.2 The assessment has been prepared for background purposes for those involved in the asylum determination process. The information it contains is not exhaustive, nor is it intended to catalogue all human rights violations. It concentrates on the issues most commonly raised in asylum claims made in the United Kingdom.

1.3 The assessment is sourced throughout. It is intended to be used by caseworkers as a signpost to the source material, which has been made available to them. The vast majority of the source material is readily available in the public domain.

1.4 It is intended to revise the assessment on a 6-monthly basis while the country remains within the top 35 asylum producing countries in the United Kingdom.

1.5 The assessment will be placed on the Internet (<http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/>). An electronic copy of the assessment has been made available to the following organisations:

Amnesty International UK

Immigration Advisory Service

Immigration Appellate Authority

Immigration Law Practitioners' Association

Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants

JUSTICE

Medical Foundation for the care of Victims of Torture

Refugee Council

Refugee Legal Centre

UN High Commissioner for Refugees

II GEOGRAPHY

2.1 The Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka, formerly known as Ceylon, lies in the Indian Ocean, south of India. The country covers an area of 65,610 square kilometres. It has a population of 19,144,875 (July 1999 estimate). The capital is Colombo. [30]

2.2 The population can be divided into the majority Sinhalese (74%), Tamils (18%), Muslims (7%) and Burghers, the descendants of colonialists (1%). The majority (69%) are Buddhist, 16% are Hindu, 8% are Christian, and 7% are Muslims. [6c]

2.3 Three languages are spoken: Sinhala, Tamil and English. [6c] Tamil was made the second official language in 1988. [1] Almost all Sinhalese are Buddhist and speak Sinhala; Tamils are mostly Hindu and speak Tamil. They are comprised of those Tamils who have a long history on the island, and "up-country" Tamils (roughly 30% of all Tamils) who are descendants of labourers brought from southern India to work on the plantations. Muslims speak mostly Tamil, but are distinguished by their religion. [6c]

See also Up-country Tamils: paragraphs 5.6.1 - 5.6.8

2.4 In most of the country the Sinhalese form the majority. Tamils are the largest community in the northern districts. "Up-country" Tamils live mainly in the hill country in the central part of Sri Lanka. In the east, Sinhalese, Tamils and Muslims are equally represented. In the rest of the country, there are substantial Tamil and Muslim communities, although they are in the minority there. [6c]

III HISTORY

Independence to 1994

3.1. The former British colony of Ceylon achieved independence in February 1948. Under the Constitution of 1972 the country became a republic with the name of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka. The government was headed by a Prime Minister accountable to a unicameral parliament. In 1978 a presidential system was introduced, with extensive executive powers being held by the president. [14a]

See also System of Government: paragraphs 4.3 - 4.9

3.2 Since independence, the political situation in Sri Lanka has been characterised by the conflict between the Sinhalese majority and the Tamil minority. Before independence, Burghers played an important role in the British administration, as did many Tamils because of their knowledge of English. After independence the various communities were able to work together. However the Ceylon Citizenship Act 1948 withheld nationality from up-country Tamils, who had come to Sri Lanka only relatively recently in its history, having been brought over from India by the British. [14a] An amendment to the Parliamentary Elections (Order in Council) 1949 removed the franchise rights of these Tamils. [19]

3.3 For Tamils, the political situation changed in 1956, when Solomon Bandaranaike set himself up as a champion of Sinhalese interests and won the elections with a promise to make Sinhalese the country's only official language, instead of English. [14a] The Official Language Act was duly passed in 1956. [19]

3.4 While the 1978 Constitution recognised Tamil as a "national language" for public administration and the conduct of legal proceedings, Tamils continued to feel discriminated against as a result of the restrictive admissions policy applied to them for university places and public office. Nothing subsequently came of the promise under the Bandaranaike-Chelvanayakam Pact to set up regional councils with powers of their own. [14a]

3.5 In Jaffna the situation deteriorated. In 1976, extremists, the Young Tigers, murdered the Tamil mayor of Jaffna, who had been working with the government, and in following years they murdered 38 police officers, 9 politicians and 27 others. [14a]

3.6 Communal disturbances between Sinhalese and Tamils led to the imposition of a state of emergency in the north for 5 days in June 1981, and throughout the country from August 1981 to January 1982. [1]

3.7 In July 1983, 13 Sinhalese soldiers were killed near Jaffna, reportedly by a group of Tamil extremists. Violence directed against the Tamil minority started immediately in Colombo, subsequently spreading throughout the country. Several hundred Tamils were killed by Sinhalese groups. In the following few days there were reports that unarmed members of the Tamil minority were being killed at random by the security forces in the north, apparently in retaliation for the killing of their own men, and that Tamil detainees held under the Prevention of Terrorism Act (PTA) were being killed in a Colombo prison. Later that year, the Sri Lankan Government acknowledged 51 killings. [4a] Between July 1983 and July 1985 nearly 100,000 Tamils fled to southern India, where some of them were housed in camps. [14a]

3.8 The Indian Prime Minister, Rajiv Gandhi, tried to bring about a settlement between the Sri Lankan Government and the various warring groups in the north, but Gandhi's devolution proposals were rejected at a conference in Bangalore in 1986 by the leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, Velupillai Prabhakaran, who returned to Jaffna and stepped up operations against the Sri Lankan army. In 1987 the Sri Lankan army launched an offensive, Operation Liberation, to regain military control of the Jaffna Peninsula. [14a]

3.9 Instances of human rights violations by the Sri Lankan security forces were reported, such as the massacre of 150 civilians, nearly all Tamils, who were killed by the Special Task Force (STF) after 13 STF personnel had been killed at Kokkaddicholai in January 1987. Between 1983 and the 1987 signing of the Indo-Sri Lankan Accord, 685 disappearances were recorded in northern and eastern Sri Lanka. [4b]

3.10 India once again resolved to mediate and the Indo-Sri Lankan Accord of 29 July 1987 was concluded between the Sri Lankan President, Junius Jayawardene, and Rajiv Gandhi. The peace plan included provision for the amalgamation of provincial councils in the north and east and for the repatriation of the 100,000 Tamils who had fled to India after the events of 1983. As part of the plan, an Indian Peace Keeping Force (IPKF) was despatched to the Jaffna Peninsula to oversee compliance with the provisions of the peace agreement. However the LTTE refused to disarm and fighting broke out. [14a]

3.11 On 25 March 1990 the IPKF withdrew from Sri Lanka. The LTTE held control of most of the Jaffna peninsula, and the army held an area in the north around Palaly and Kankesanthurai. [14a] In the early 1990s there were several incidents of the security forces responding to LTTE attacks by committing human rights violations against the Tamil civilian population. For instance in June 1991, at least 67 civilians, including women and children, were killed when local army personnel rampaged through the villages of Mahiladithivu and Muthalaikuda after 2 soldiers had been killed in a land mine explosion nearby. [4c] In August 1992, the day after 10 senior army and navy officers had been killed by the LTTE on Kayts Island, soldiers from Poonani camp killed 39 Tamil men, women and children in Mailanthanai, Batticaloa district, over 180 miles away, apparently in reprisal. [4d]

See also Section V: Human Rights

1994 to the present

3.12 The People's Alliance (PA), led by the Sri Lanka Freedom Party of Chandrika Kumaratunga, won the 1994 parliamentary elections. This ended the 17 year rule of the United National Party. Mrs Kumaratunga was appointed Prime Minister. [1]

See also System of Government: paragraphs 4.3 - 4.9

3.13 Presidential elections were held on 9 November 1994, which were won by Mrs Kumaratunga. The new President promised to abolish the executive presidency and to implement a programme of social, economic and constitutional change. The President's mother, Sirimavo Bandaranaike was appointed Prime Minister, the third time she had held that office. [1]

3.14 In the run up to the elections, Mrs Kumaratunga promised to bring peace by seeking a political solution to the Tamil conflict. In the autumn of 1994 talks were held with the LTTE, which led to a military truce on 8 January 1995. The LTTE unilaterally ended the truce in April 1995 and full-scale war broke out again in the north and east. [14a]

3.15 In July 1995, the Government launched a major military offensive, named "Operation Leap Forward", in the Jaffna peninsula. This was intensified in mid-October 1995 (under the code name "Operation Riviresa" [Sunshine]), and many thousands of civilians were forcefully exorted by the LTTE to leave the area. In retaliation for the army's offensive in the Jaffna peninsula, the LTTE carried out bomb attacks on the country's two largest oil storage facilities near Colombo in October 1995. In mid-November 1995, two LTTE suicide bombers caused 18 deaths and more than 50 casualties in Colombo. [1]

3.16 In October 1995 the army launched an offensive, as a result of which it seized control of the town of Jaffna on 5 December 1995. In May 1996 the army took control of most of the Jaffna peninsula. In the Eastern Province the army retained control of the coastal strip, while the jungle areas behind the lagoons remained largely LTTE territory. [14a]

3.17 The LTTE rejected the President's offer of an amnesty in exchange for disarmament. The retaking of the city of Jaffna precipitated an escalation in LTTE-organised terrorist activity. At the end of January 1996 100 people were killed and about 1,400 were injured as a result of a "suicide bomb" attack on the Central Bank in Colombo. This devastating attack appeared to be the LTTE's response to the Government's release of the legal draft of the devolution proposals earlier that month. [1]

3.18 The Government had put forward an initial devolution plan in August 1995, which would provide for the establishment of 8 regions, with elected regional councils being given powers of their own in a variety of fields. The Northern and Eastern Provinces would together make up one region, apart from those areas in which Sinhalese and Muslims are in a majority. Moderate Tamil parties were in general positively inclined towards the plan. [14a]

3.19 A slightly amended plan was published in January 1996, in the form of an amendment of the Constitution. This made allowance for Sinhalese objections to the previous version that it would undermine the unitary state and most Tamils found the new version disappointing. The proposed amendments to the Constitution would give greater autonomy for the regions, reduce presidential powers, transfer those powers to parliament, establish a second chamber to give minorities better representation, and give greater powers to the Supreme Court. The proposals met parliamentary opposition and the UNP produced counter-proposals in January 1998. [14a]

3.20 In early April 1996, against a background of continuing conflict between Tamil militants and government forces in the north and east of the country, the President extended the state of emergency to cover the whole of the country (since coming to power in November 1994, the People's Alliance administration had restricted the emergency provisions to the troubled northern and eastern regions, and Colombo). The opposition condemned this move as an attempt on the part of the Government to postpone crucial local elections due to be held later that year. [1]

3.21 In mid-May 1996, the Sri Lankan army announced that it now controlled the whole of the Jaffna peninsula. It also claimed that of the 300,000 Tamil civilians who had been displaced by the ethnic violence, about 250,000 had returned to government-held areas. On 4 July 1996 a suicide bomb attack in the centre of Jaffna, which killed over 25 people and injured 60, including the Housing Minister, again demonstrated the ability of the LTTE suicide commandos to wreak havoc. The LTTE was also reported to have conducted public executions of suspected informers and to have engaged in massacres and retaliatory killings of Sinhalese and Muslim villagers, torture and mistreatment of prisoners, forced conscription of children, and kidnapping. [1] & [16a]

See also Section V: Human Rights

3.22 In July 1996 the LTTE was suspected of planting a bomb on a crowded suburban train near Colombo which killed more than 70 people, and injured 500. In October 1996 the Government took legal action for the first time against the LTTE leader, Velupillai Prabhakaran, who along with nine other militants, was charged with more than 700 criminal acts of terrorism. [1]

See also Abuses by the LTTE: paragraphs 5.2.86 - 5.2.88

3.23 In March 1997 the Government was successful in local elections in which it won more than 80% of the contested councils. Voting did not take place in the northern and eastern provinces. However the Government's share of the total vote decreased to 48%, compared to the 62% it achieved in the November 1994 Presidential election. The Government viewed the results as a mandate to continue preparing its devolution plans offering limited autonomy to the Tamil secessionists. [1]

3.24 In March 1997 the members of the Human Rights Commission were appointed, 8 months after the Act establishing the HRC was passed in Parliament. In late June 1997, the Government announced that the function of monitoring the welfare of detainees which had until then been entrusted to the Human Rights Task Force would be transferred to the HRC as of 1 July 1997. [3b]

See also Human Rights Commission: paragraphs 5.2.60 - 5.2.63

3.25 In May 1997 the Government launched Operation Jayasikuru (Sure of Victory), with the aim of gaining control of the 75 km highway between Elephant Pass, the point of entry to the Jaffna Peninsula, and Vavuniya. [1]

3.26 Hundreds of civilians have also been the victims of human rights violations by both the LTTE and the security forces. [4e] In one of the few cases where official action was taken, on 1 February 1998 in Thambalagamam in Trincomalee district, officers from the Bharathipuram police post and local home guards reportedly arrested and killed 8 young men in retaliation for an attack by the LTTE on police in the area the night before. Police arrested 42 people, 39 of whom had been released on bail by mid-June 1998. [18] 4 were eventually charged with murder and 17 with unlawful assembly. [2d]

3.27 On 26 January 1998 the Government formally outlawed the LTTE, the day after an LTTE suicide squad crashed a truck through road blocks in the ancient capital of Kandy and set off a bomb outside the Temple of the Tooth (Dalada Maligawa), the country's holiest Buddhist shrine. A total of 13 were killed and 23 wounded in the attack, which occurred days before the 50th anniversary celebrations of Sri Lanka's independence, which were to be held in the city. [7c]

3.28 The Government suffered another set back in late January 1998 when the opposition UNP effectively rejected the proposed devolution package. The UNP disagreed with the Government's proposal to devolve wide ranging powers to regional councils, including a Tamil administered area, and favoured the concept of power sharing at the centre. [1]

3.29 LTTE violence continued. In early February 1998, 9 people were killed in Colombo as a result of another "suicide bombing", and the following month 38 people died and about 250 were injured when a suspected LTTE suicide bomber drove a bus laden with explosives into the capital's crowded business district. [1]

3.30 Elections for local councils in the areas recaptured from the LTTE were held on 29 January 1998. Four Tamil parties, EPDP, PLOTE, EPRLF and TELO, who in the past had all fought against the Sri Lankan Army, as well as the moderate TULF, contested the elections. The governing PA and the opposition UNP

3.31 On 12 March 1998, Sarojini Yogeswaram of TULF was sworn in as the first mayor of Jaffna since 1984 [71] but she was assassinated in May 1998. The Sangilliyen Force claimed responsibility. [7k] The new mayor, P Sivapalan, was himself killed in a bomb explosion in the Jaffna municipality office on 11 September 1998. The local army commander and several senior police officers were also killed in the blast. [71]

3.33 On 4 August 1998 the Government extended the State of Emergency to the whole island for a period of one month. [7m] The Emergency had been lifted in the south of Sri Lanka in July 1997. [3b] Parliament is required to vote to extend the Emergency each month. Later that day the President announced that the provincial council elections scheduled for 28 August 1998 were postponed, as the army could not provide security to candidates and polling stations, when the war against the LTTE was at a decisive stage. [7n]

3.35 The Defence Ministry announced at the beginning of December 1998 that Operation Jayasikuru, launched in May 1997, had been completed. Analysts have said that the Operation, during which thousands of soldiers and rebels had been killed or wounded, was one of the bloodiest in the 15 year civil war. A fresh offensive was launched, codenamed Rivi Bala (Sun Power), after the capture of the northern towns of Omanthai, Puliyankulam and Mankulam. The new offensive linked up the key towns of Mankulam, Oddusuddan and Nedunkerni in what was seen as a change of the Government's military strategy to inch closer to the LTTE base in the north eastern coastal town of Mullaitivu. [81]

3.37 The Supreme Court ruled on 27 January 1999 that the President's decision to postpone provincial elections under the Emergency Regulations in August 1998 was unconstitutional. The Election Commissioner was also wrong to have agreed to the delays. Elections for the Western, Central, North Central, Uva and Sabaragamuwa Provincial Councils were to be held on 1 April 1999 [8f], but were postponed for 5 days. The ruling PA narrowly won the 5 councils. There were some incidents of assault, intimidation and electoral malpractices during the polling. [7p] Elections to the Southern Provincial Council were held on 10 June 1999, and were won by the PA, although they fell short of a majority. The Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP) won 7 of the 55 seats. [8n]

3.39 After a period of relative calm at the beginning 1999, the LTTE began a long series of attacks, killing close to 100 civilians, including moderate Tamil politician Dr. Neelan Tiruchelvam. Tiruchelvam was the founder of the International Centre for Ethnic Studies and the Law and Society Trust, a human rights research and advocacy organisation. On 18 September 1999, the LTTE killed more than 50 civilians with machetes close to Amparai. This attack was allegedly in retaliation for the airforce bombing of Puthukkudiyiruppu. see 3.40 During 1999, at least 14 people were found guilty of offences by the LTTE's self-described courts, killed by public execution, and their bodies tied to lamp posts or otherwise left for public display. [2c]

3.40 In September 1999 an air force bombing of Puthukkudiyiruppu killed over 20 civilians and wounded 40 others. [2c] In 2000, the Government ordered payment of compensation to the victims. [2d] In November 1999 at least 37 civilians were killed in fighting at the Madhu Church during an exchange of shelling between Sri Lankan army and LTTE troops. About 3,000 internally displaced persons sought shelter at the church a few days before, as the fighting escalated. The circumstances of the shelling remain unclear. However, both the government forces and the LTTE knew that civilians were inside the church. [2c]

3.41 In November 1999, unknown assailants killed Ramesh Nadarajah, a Tamil Member of Parliament for the Eelam People's Democratic Party (EPDP) and editor of a weekly Tamil-language newspaper. [2d]

3.42 In November 1999 the LTTE counter-attacked and successfully pushed back government forces to new defensive lines, and recaptured most of the territory the Sri Lankan army had gained since 1997. In response, the President replaced several officials in the military and imposed a ban on press coverage of the war. It is estimated that 1,000 combatants on both sides were killed. [2c]

3.43 On 18 December 1999, shortly before Presidential elections, a woman suicide bomber detonated explosives strapped to her body at an election rally. The attack, which killed 21 people and injured 110, occurred shortly after President Kumaratunga had delivered a speech. The President suffered facial injuries from shrapnel, and it was later reported that she had been blinded in her right eye. Almost simultaneously a bomb at a rally elsewhere in Colombo, addressed by opposition leader Ranil Wickremasinghe, killed 12 people and injured 70. There was no claim of responsibility for either bombing, but both were widely assumed to have been the work of the LTTE. [23a]

3.44 Three days later, President Kumaratunga was re-elected, after securing 51.12% of the vote for the People's Alliance. Her nearest rival was Ranil Wickremasinghe of the United National Party, with 42.71%. M.D.Nandana Gunathilaka of the People's Liberation Front received 4.08%. The election commissioner D.M. Dassanayake said that the turnout was 73.31% of the country's 11.77 million eligible voters, and that the conduct of the polling had been generally fair despite some 500 complaints of fraud. [23a] & [24]

3.45 An unknown gunman assassinated Kumar Ponnambalam, a prominent Tamil politician, in January 2000. No group initially claimed responsibility, but Ponnambalam was known to openly support the Tamil Tiger rebels. His death came shortly after a suicide bomb attack outside the Prime Minister's office in Colombo. [21a] The attack, which killed 13 people, resulted in the arrest of hundreds of Tamil suspects, and the imposition of an all-night curfew in Colombo. [21e]

3.46 In January 2000, the Sri Lankan Government said it would discuss a devolution proposal, aimed at ending the lengthy civil war, with all political parties as well as Tamil Tiger rebels, and that a new constitution would be drafted containing the new proposals. The devolution plan was supported by the opposition United National Party. [21b] It also emerged for the first time that international mediators had been trying to broker a peace deal with the LTTE since 1997. The first attempt was made by Commonwealth Secretary General Chief Anyoku, and later by the Norwegian Government. [21c] Buddhist monks made clear their opposition to proposed constitutional reforms and to any possible dialogue with the Tamil Tigers, and hundreds of monks held demonstrations against peace talks in Colombo. They were also opposed to the Sri Lankan government inviting Norway to help bring the Tamil Tigers to the negotiating table. [21g]

3.47 However, Norway continued its role as a facilitator. Norwegian special envoy, Erik Solheim, was quoted as saying in May 2000: "We will try to find a solution both to the present situation at the [Jaffna] peninsula and also to the long time settlement of the Tamil aspirations within the context of the integrity of Sri Lanka". [21h]

3.48 A series of conflicting statements by the Sri Lankan Government followed. President Kumaratunga stated in June 2000 that Tamil Tiger rebels could still enter peace talks, but there was no question of holding unconditional negotiations with them. [21i] It was then announced that the Tamil Tigers would be barred from taking part in any interim council in the north east province. An official statement said the opposition and Government had discussed setting up an interim administration for the north east prior to holding a referendum, but did not mention a time frame. [21j] The main political parties then agreed to put the draft devolution plan to the Tamil Tigers. [21k]

3.49 On 8 August 2000, the Sri Lankan Government indefinitely postponed the vote on the reform bill, which if enacted, would have allowed the Tamil community in the north greater autonomy. Senior ministers said they had decided to delay the bill when it became clear they would be unable to muster the required two-thirds majority in parliament. [21t]

3.50 Despite efforts at brokering peace talks, the violence continued. On 27 January 2000, a bomb ripped through a post office in Vavuniya, killing at least 11 people and injuring 33. [25a] Then on 10 March 2000, an attempt to ambush a ministerial motorcade resulted in a gun battle between rebels and police that left 23 people dead and 80 injured. Amnesty International accused the LTTE of shooting indiscriminately. [21f] On 7 June 2000, Industry Minister CV Gooneratne was assassinated by a suicide bomber in Colombo. The attack, in which 21 others died, took place during celebrations honouring the country's war heroes. President Kumaratunga immediately called for restraint. Although there were reports of sporadic violence, the State media announced that anyone trying to provoke a backlash against Tamils would be severely punished. [21m], [21n] A further suicide bombing occurred on 15 September 2000. At least 8 people were killed and 21 others wounded in the blast outside an eye hospital in Colombo. [25h] Violence increased the following month, ahead of parliamentary elections. On 2 October 2000, a suspected Tamil Tiger suicide bomber killed 24 people, including a ruling party candidate, at a rally in the north east of the country. Three days later, a bomb attack at an election rally by the ruling party in the town of Medawachchi took the lives of 11 people. [21d]

See also Arrests of Tamils in Colombo: paragraphs 5.2.4 - 5.2.25

3.51 Fierce fighting again broke out in March 2000 between government troops and Tamil rebels. K. Shanmuganathan, the highest-ranking civil official in the Jaffna peninsula, said more than 12,500 civilians living near the Elephant Pass causeway were trapped as they tried to flee the fighting. [25b]

3.52 The forces of the LTTE inflicted one of the worst defeats of the 17-year civil war on 22 April 2000 when they forced the Sri Lankan Army (SLA) to retreat from the heavily fortified Elephant Pass base which commanded the narrow isthmus providing the only land route into the Jaffna peninsula. The SLA withdrew some 17,000 troops northwards from Elephant Pass and the nearby Yakachchi base after a two-day assault by LTTE fighters. LTTE forces continued their advance towards Jaffna city, and on 30 April 2000 captured the town of Pallai, some 15 km north of Elephant Pass. [23b] The rebels continued to push north, and by the middle of May 2000 the Sri Lankan Government admitted that its troops had been forced back on the outskirts of Jaffna. [21i] The Sri Lankan military contained the push, with newly acquired weapons, and there followed a lull in the fighting. The SLA then went on the offensive: a rebel position in the northern Jaffna peninsula was attacked and destroyed on 5 July 2000, killing at least 23 militants according to a government spokesman. [25c] Tamil Tiger rebels later admitted that they had lost 35 fighters, in the insurgents' worst defeat in three months. Independent confirmation of the battle situation could not be determined since neither side allows journalists into the zone of fighting. [25d] A further lull in fighting followed, before in early September 2000, the Sri Lankan military pushed to recapture lost territory. Military sources said that 118 soldiers were killed and more than 800 wounded. The rebels did not give figures for their own casualties but a military spokesman said 160 rebel fighters were killed. [25f] Later in September 2000, the SLA captured Chavakachcheri, the second-largest town in the Jaffna peninsula, 6 miles east of Jaffna city. A government spokesman said the battle had left 111 combatants dead on both sides. Tamil rebels responded by killing 24 soldiers in an attack on an army truck near Trincomalee. [25i]

3.53 A general election took place on 10 October 2000. The PA won the most number of seats but fell short of a simple majority in parliament. They reached agreement to form a coalition government, with the help of the Eelam People's Democratic Party (EPDP) and the National Unity Alliance (NUA). Prime Minister Ratnasiri Wickremanayake was sworn in for a second term. [8u]

See also System of Government: paragraphs 4.6-4.8

3.54 On 25 October 2000, a massacre of 26 Tamil inmates at the Bandarawela rehabilitation centre occurred. Reports from the area said that hundreds of men carrying machetes and knives rampaged through the camp. The government ordered an enquiry into the events. [21z]

3.55 Government troops continued their offensive against the LTTE in December 2000 when they re-established a road link between the Jaffna peninsula's two largest cities, Jaffna and Chavakachcheri. [25k] Fierce fighting continued into January 2001 with a major battle leaving more than 90 dead and at least 230 injured. [21x]

3.56 Meanwhile, Tamil Tiger rebels announced a unilateral month-long ceasefire to run from 24 December 2000. [21y] The government said it wanted talks with the rebels, but would not lay down its arms first. The truce was extended for a third time until 24 April 2001, but the LTTE said they would end it unless the government responded positively and stopped fighting. [25i] The LTTE announced an end to the ceasefire on 23 April 2001, blaming the government for the failure of peace efforts. The rebels said they had suffered more than 160 casualties and 400 injuries in government attacks while the ceasefire was in force. [25m]

3.57 On 28 February 2001, the British Home Secretary included the LTTE in the list of proscribed organisations under the Terrorism Act 2000. The Home Secretary's Draft Order contained 20 other organisations, and would come into force when approved by both Houses of the United Kingdom Parliament. The proscribed organisation or any person affected by the ban could appeal to the Home Secretary. If this application were rejected, an application for judicial review could be made to a tribunal known as the Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission. Concern was expressed that the ban would affect Norwegian-involved peace process. [10e] However, an LTTE statement followed, declaring that the peace process and co-operation with Norwegian facilitatory efforts would continue, irrespective of the proscription. [8w]

The Economy

3.58 Sri Lanka is a low-income country with a market economy based on the export of textiles, tea, rubber, coconuts, and gems. It also earns substantial foreign exchange from tourism and the repatriated earnings of citizens employed abroad. The gross domestic product (GDP) per capita is approximately US$850. Real GDP growth was 4.3 percent in 1999; because of increased exports and a surge in remittances from citizens abroad, growth by the end of 2000 reached 6.1 percent. In 1997 the Government intensified efforts to promote economic reform and liberalisation, including privatising public sector enterprises and promoting foreign investment and trade. These steps continued during 2000, although privatisation slowed due to the unsettled situation in the country. [2d]

3.59 Minimum wage rates average approximately 2,682 rupees per month in industry, commerce, and the service sector, and approximately 114 rupees per day in agriculture. The minimum wage in the garment industry is 3,225 rupees per month. These minimum wages are insufficient to provide a decent standard of living for a worker and the standard family of five, but the vast majority of families have more than one breadwinner. [2d] The approximate rate of exchange on 20 March 2001 was £1 = 122 Sri Lankan rupees. [33]

IV INSTRUMENTS OF THE STATE

The Sri Lankan Constitution

4.1 The Constitution was promulgated on 7 September 1978. It guarantees the fundamental rights and freedoms of all citizens, including freedom of thought, conscience and worship and equal entitlement before the law. [1] The Government generally respects these rights. [2d] Buddhism has the foremost place among religions and the State has the duty to protect and foster Buddhism. Sinhala and Tamil are the two official languages. [1]

4.2 The Constitution provides for equal rights under the law for all its citizens and the Government generally respects these rights. The Supreme Court regularly upholds court rulings in cases where individuals have complained about violations of their fundamental civil rights. The Human Rights Commission and the Committee to Inquire into Undue Arrest and Harassment are other mechanisms the Government has established to ensure enforcement of constitutional provisions in addition to access to the courts. Nevertheless, crucial safeguards built into the Emergency Regulations and the legislation establishing the Human Rights Commission were often being routinely ignored by the security forces. [2d]

System of Government

4.3 The President is Head of State and exercises all executive powers. The President is directly elected by the people for a term of 6 years, and is eligible for re-election. The current President is Mrs Chandrika Bandaranaike Kumaratunga of the People's Alliance, who was sworn in on 12 November 1994, [1] and re-elected on 21 December 1999. [23a]

4.4 The Sri Lankan Parliament consists of one chamber with 225 members, and Members of Parliament are directly elected by a system of modified proportional representation. [1]

4.5 General elections were held in Sri Lanka on 16 August 1994. The new Government was formed by the People's Alliance Party (PA), and ended the 17 year rule of the United National Party (UNP). [1] The PA is a coalition of around 10 parties. By far the most powerful party within it is the Sri Lanka Freedom Party of President Kumaratunga. The UNP is regarded as more right wing than the PA. [21u]

4.6 The last general election was held in Sri Lanka on 10 October 2000, [8u] at which time the Commissioner of Elections recognised 46 political parties. [2d] The PA won 107 seats in the 225-seat Parliament, falling six seats short of a simple majority. Following lengthy talks with two minor parties, the Eelam People's Democratic Party (EPDP) and the (mainly Muslim) National Unity Alliance (NUA), the PA reached agreement to form a coalition government with 116 members. The composition of the new PA government was to be its 107 members along with four members each from the EPDP and NUA and the single Independent Digamadulla District member. [8u] Of these members, 23 were Tamil and 22 were Muslim. [2d] The full results were as follows:

People's Alliance (PA)	107
United National Party (UNP)	89
Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP)	10
Tamil United Liberation Front (TULF)	5
Eelam People's Democratic Party (EPDP)	4
National Unity Alliance (NUA)	4
Tamil Eelam Liberation Organisation (TELO)	3
Sihala Urumaya (SU)	1
All Ceylon Tamil Congress (ACTC)	1
Independent	1

[8t]

4.7 At least 71 people were killed during the five-week long election campaign, according to the independent Centre for Monitoring Election Violence. Election Commissioner Dayananda Dissanayake annulled the results from 23 polling stations which officials identified had suffered from the forcible stuffing of ballot boxes. The results announcement was delayed by a day because of the irregularities. However, Mr Dissanayake, who met political leaders to inform them of the results, rejected calls from the opposition for fresh ballots to be carried out in these districts. [21v]

4.8 Chandrika Kumaratunga was sworn in as Prime Minister on 19 August 1994, a position she held until she became President in November 1994. [1] The current Prime Minister is Ratnasiri Wickremanayake. He replaced Mrs Kumaratunga's mother, Sirimavo Bandaranaike, who resigned in August 2000, at the age of 84 after four decades in politics. [21s] Wickremanayake was sworn in for a second term after the general election of 10 October 2000. Sirimavo Bandaranaike died on the day of the election, shortly after casting her vote. [8u]

4.9 Sri Lanka comprises 9 provinces and 25 administrative districts, each with an appointed Governor and elected Development Council. In November 1987, an amendment to the Constitution was adopted, providing for the creation of eight provincial councils (the northern and eastern provinces were to be merged as one administrative unit). A network of 68 Pradeshiya Sabhas (district councils) was inaugurated throughout the country in January 1988. [1] & [26]

Legal Framework

4.10 The judicial system consists of the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeal, the High Court, District

Courts, Magistrates' Courts and Primary Courts. The last four are Courts of the First Instance. Appeals lie from them to the Court of Appeal and from there, on questions of law, or by special leave, to the Supreme Court. The High Court deals with all criminal cases, and the District Courts with civil cases. There are also Labour Tribunals to decide labour-based disputes. [1]

4.11 The Judicial Service Commission comprises the Chief Justice and two judges of the Supreme Court, nominated by the President. All judges of the Courts of First Instance (except High Court judges), and the staff of all courts are appointed and controlled by the Judicial Service Commission. The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and not fewer than 6 and not more than 10 other judges. The Court of Appeal consists of the President, and not fewer than 6 and not more than 11 judges. [1]

4.12 The judiciary in Sri Lanka is independent and properly constituted. The authorities are required, by law, to inform an individual of the reason for their arrest, and to produce him or her before a magistrate within 24 hours of arrest. In practice, this usually occurs within a few days. [2d]

4.13 In criminal cases, defendants are tried publicly by jury. They are informed of the charges and evidence against them, and they may be represented by Counsel of their choice. They also have a right of appeal against sentence. The Government provides Counsel for indigent persons who are to be tried on criminal charges in the High Courts, and the Court of Appeal, but not in other instances; private legal aid organisations also exist. [2d]

4.14 Under the emergency provisions - the Emergency Regulations (ERs) and the Prevention of Terrorism Act (PTA) - the authorities may detain suspects for long periods without court approval [2d] - up to 18 months in the case of the PTA. [14a] The ERs allow pre-trial detention for a maximum of four consecutive 3 month periods. [2d] A magistrate must order further detention. [14a]

See also Arrests of Tamils in Colombo: paragraphs 5.2.4 - 5.2.25

4.15 Magistrates have key roles in relation to the prevention of torture, which they do not always fully perform. The ERs require magistrates to visit places of detention at least once a month, and that during the visit all detainees should be produced before the magistrate by the officer in charge. Officers in charge of places of detention are required to provide the local magistrate every 14 days a list of all detainees, and that the magistrate has to display the list on the court's notice board. These safeguards have never been fully implemented. [3e]

4.16 Under the Code of Criminal Procedure, magistrates have a duty to examine detainees brought before them. There are regular reports that magistrates do not carry out this duty rigorously. This failure erodes the chances of tortured detainees receiving justice at a later stage. [3e]

4.17 The present government has not interfered with the functioning of the judiciary and has respected its judgements. [16a] Impunity for those responsible for human rights abuses remains a serious problem. In the vast majority of cases where military personnel may have committed human rights violations, the Government has not identified those responsible and brought them to justice. [2d]

Security Forces

4.18 The Ministry of Defence controls all security forces (armed forces and police). The 60,000-member police force is responsible for internal security in most areas of the country and has also been used in military operations against the LTTE. The 120,000-member army (which includes the Army Volunteer Force), the 17,000-member navy and 18,500-member air force bear principal responsibility for conducting operations against the LTTE. The police paramilitary Special Task Force (STF) is also involved in the war. The more than 15,000-member Home Guards, an armed force drawn from local communities and responsible to the police, provides security for Muslim and Sinhalese village communities in or near the war zone. The Government also arms and appears to direct various Tamil militias opposed to the LTTE, although at times these groups seem to act independently of government authority. [2d]

4.19 Investigating agencies include the Operational Command of Colombo Security (OCC), the Directorate of Internal Intelligence (DII), the Directorate of Foreign Intelligence (DFI), the Criminal Record Department (CRD), the Criminal Investigation Department (CID) and the Terrorist Investigation Department (TID). The TID was set up in May 1998 as a new investigative agency of the police. The DII and DFI, until the summer of 1998, together formed the National Intelligence Bureau (NIB). [14b]

4.20 Some members of the security forces committed serious human rights abuses. According to the U.S. Department of State Report issued in February 2001, since April 1995, several hundred people have been killed extra-judicially by the security forces or have disappeared after being taken into security force custody and are presumed dead. With the exception of the 6 security force personnel convicted in the 1996 killing of Krishanthi Kumaraswamy and the 4 convictions for abduction involving 88 security force personnel, no member of the security forces has been convicted for any of these crimes. [2d]

See also Tamils: paragraph 5.2 and Prosecution of security force personnel: paragraphs 5.2.76 - 5.2.85

4.21 On 27 February 2001, the Defence Ministry declared an amnesty for army deserters for the period 6 - 14 March 2001. The government had announced similar amnesties in the past but the number of deserters returning to barracks was thought insignificant. [8v]

Medical Treatment

4.22 In a letter dated 30 March 2001, the British High Commission in Colombo outlined the standards of medical facilities in Sri Lanka. The traditional Western medical structure of general practitioners, specialists and hospitals with operating theatres and emergency units, co-exists with the traditional practice of ayurvedic (or herbal) medicine. The country has its own National Health Service, which is available to everyone. [15c]

4.23 In the Colombo area and one or two of the larger centres such as Kandy, there are many well-reputed hospitals, staffed by physicians most of whom are very experienced and internationally trained. There is an extensive range of specialist care found in Colombo, both in the private and government sectors. Specialist care would include treating such conditions as cardiac, gastro-intestinal, dermatological, urological, orthopaedic and general surgery. [15c]

4.24 Most medications are available in Colombo, under various generic and company labels. The prices for medications bought in Sri Lanka range widely, but as a comparison, most drugs would be cheaper than the United Kingdom for prescription and dispensing charges. On the whole, medical care is affordable for the average person, and government hospitals generally charge a lesser fee than private hospitals. [15c]

PART 1

Introduction

Freedom of Speech & of the Press

Freedom of Peaceful Assembly & Association

Freedom of Travel

Immigrants & Emigrants Act

Displaced People

Treatment of Returned Asylum Seekers

PART 2

Tamils

Arrests of Tamils in Columbo

Disappearances

Extra-Judicial Executions

Torture

PART 3

Government Action

The Human Rights Commission

The Human Rights Task Force

Committee to Inquire into the Undue Arrest and Harassment

Commissions of Inquiry into Involuntary Removal and Disappearances

International Committee of the Red Cross

Centre for the Study of Human Rights

Prosecution of Security Force Personnel

Abuses by LTTE

Abuses by Pro-Government Tamil Militants

The Home Guards

Other Groups

V HUMAN RIGHTS

5.1 Introduction

5.1.1 The Sri Lankan Government generally respects the human rights of its citizens in areas not affected by the conflict with the LTTE. However, the ongoing war continued to be accompanied by serious human rights abuses committed by both sides of the conflict. Security forces committed numerous extra-judicial killings. In the past, security forces almost certainly killed prisoners captured on the battlefield; however, there were no reports of this abuse happening during 2000. Impunity for those responsible for human rights abuses remains a serious problem. [2d]

5.1.2 The Government continues to impose censorship of domestic newspaper reporting and some foreign television broadcasts on military and security operations. Discrimination and violence against women, child prostitution and child labour are also problems. [2d]

5.1.3 In May 2000 the Sri Lankan authorities assumed sweeping new powers. The Public Security Act, introduced a day after the authorities put Sri Lanka on a war footing, allowed the Government to impound property, prohibit strikes, ban newspapers and censor foreign media. [21o] Any news story deemed by the government to contain sensitive information relating to the war was not allowed to be published. [21p] A relaxation of the laws occurred when on 2 July 2000 Sunday newspapers were published freely for the first time in three months, after the Supreme Court ruled that censorship was illegal. Reporting of the fighting was still controlled and journalists were still largely prevented from visiting war zones. [21q] Despite the relaxation, the following day the Government announced a new series of restrictions on local and foreign media. Under the terms of the new measures, the Government would strongly encourage reporters to submit news stories for official approval if they were deemed to compromise national security or the actions of the security forces. It was unclear how the regulations would be implemented, but the Government announced that it did not mean censorship had been reintroduced. [21r]

See also Freedom of Speech and of the Press: paragraphs 5.1.11 - 5.1.17

5.1.4 The new ER provisions also permit police to hold individuals for up to 90 days to investigate suspected offences, although the police must present detainees to a court within 30 days to record the detention. The court can order a further 6 months detention. [2d]

5.1.5 Amnesty International, in a report published in July 2000, expressed concern about the new emergency regulations. In particular they refer to issues related to arrest and detention procedures and the regulations governing post-mortems and inquests when deaths have occurred in custody as a result of the official action of the security forces. [3f]

5.1.6 The Government has taken steps to control human rights abuses. The Human Rights Commission has been established and is operating. However, crucial safeguards built into the ER and the legislation establishing the Human Rights Commission (HRC) were being routinely ignored by the security forces, especially those provisions requiring receipts to be issued for arrests and ordering the security forces to notify the HRC of any arrest within 48 hours. [2c] But according to the Danish Immigration Service Report on their fact-finding mission to Sri Lanka, published January 1999, the Human Rights Commission themselves noted that the rule requiring the police to inform it within 48 hours was in the main being observed and there had been improvements in this respect. [32] No members of the security forces are known to have been punished during 2000 for failure to comply with the ER. [2d]

5.1.7 Through its rulings the judiciary continued to exhibit its independence and uphold individual civil rights, during 2000 although the Supreme Court Chief Justice, in an attempt to reduce the court's workload, limited the fundamental rights cases that the court examined, preventing some torture victims from obtaining redress. [2d]

5.1.8 Pro-government Tamil militants have committed extra-judicial executions and been responsible for disappearances, torture, detentions, extortion, and forced conscription. [2d]

5.1.9 The LTTE have also been responsible for human rights violations, including attacks on civilians, extra-judicial executions, torture, arbitrary arrest, detention, disappearances, extortion and the killing prisoners taken on the battlefield. The LTTE control large areas of the north and east of Sri Lanka through authoritarian military rule which violates the civil liberties of the population. [2d]

See also Abuses by the LTTE: paragraphs 5.2.86 - 5.2.88

5.1.10 Generally, prison conditions are poor and do not meet minimum international standards because of overcrowding and lack of sanitary facilities. [2d]

Freedom of Speech and of the Press

5.1.11 The Sri Lankan Government controls the country's largest newspaper chain, two major television stations, and the Sri Lanka Broadcasting Corporation (SLBC, a radio station). There are a variety of independent, privately owned newspapers, journals and radio and television stations, most of which freely criticize the Government and its policies. However, some journalists practiced self-censorship due to fear of intimidation. There is also a privately owned newspaper published in Jaffna. The Government imposes no political restrictions on the establishment of new media enterprises. [2d]

5.1.12 Although the Constitution provides for freedom of speech and expression, the Government restricts these rights in practice, often using national security grounds permitted by law. During 2000, the Government limited the access of domestic and foreign media to information and censored news relating to the military and security situation. In June 1998, the Government imposed direct censorship on all domestic and foreign media reports relating to ongoing or possible future military and other security operations. Television stations practice self-censorship and some international news broadcasts which deal with the country specifically are blurred over. This censorship tightened after the publication of the new Emergency Regulations on 3 May 2000, although some restrictions had eased by the end of that year. Travel by foreign and national journalists to the conflict areas was restricted, but in September 2000 the Government began approving some requests for journalists (both local and foreign) to travel north and they organised transport for selected journalists to visit Jaffna; however, the Government did not announce a formal policy change. Both local and foreign journalists were still required to obtain advance permission from the Ministry of Defense for travel to conflict areas. The Government remains the only source of most news about security and defence matters that can be disseminated to the public legally. [2d]

5.1.13 During 1998 there were a number of attacks on Sri Lankan journalists, which prompted the Editors Guild of Sri Lanka to state that the climate for a free media was being stifled. [8a]

5.1.14 In July 1999, hundreds of Sri Lankan journalists protested against the alleged assault of colleagues by the presidential security guards while covering an opposition demonstration. The previous week, police had fired tear gas and used water cannons and batons to break up a demonstration by the opposition United National Party, while unidentified men assaulted protesters and snatched camera equipment from journalists. The Free Media Movement claimed that 12 journalists and photographers had been assaulted, and that they had been targeted so that there would not have been any evidence of the action against the protest. [8s]

5.1.15 The Sri Lankan Tamil Media Alliance was formed during 1999 to protect the interests of Tamil journalists, who allege that they are subject to harassment and intimidation by Tamil paramilitary groups and Sri Lankan security forces. [2d]

5.1.16 In September 2000, editor of The Sunday Leader Lasantha Wickremetunga, was given a suspended two year jail sentence for defaming President Kumaratunga. The sentence related to an article published in 1995. [25g]

5.1.17 In October 2000, Tamil journalist, Maylwaganam Nimalarajan, was shot dead in Jaffna. Nimalarajan, who worked for Colombo's Tamil language daily Virakesari, had reported on vote rigging and intimidation during the parliamentary elections that month. [25j]

Freedom of Peaceful Assembly and Association

5.1.18 The law provides for freedom of assembly and association, and the Government respects these rights in practice. Although the Prevention of Terrorism Act may restrict this freedom, the Government did not use the act for that purpose in 2000. The Government generally grants permits for demonstrations including those by opposition parties and minority groups. [2d]

5.1.19 The Government also respects the rights of workers to establish unions. Most of the larger unions are affiliated to political parties and together play a prominent role in the political process. Over 30 labour unions are politically affiliated although a smaller number remain unaffiliated. Sri Lankan law also provides the right to collective bargaining which is widely practised. The law prohibits anti-union discrimination. [2d]

Freedom to Travel

5.1.20 The Constitution grants every citizen "freedom of movement and of choosing his residence" and "freedom to return to Sri Lanka." The Government generally respects the right to domestic and foreign travel. However, the war with the LTTE has prompted the Government to impose more stringent checks on travellers from the north and the east and on movement in Colombo, particularly after dark. [2d] Every Sri Lankan must be able to identify him or herself on the street. To this end, all Sri Lankans are issued with a National Identity Card (NIC) on reaching their 16th birthday. [14b] In 1997 the Front Office was set up in Colombo with the task of assisting people from strife-ridden areas of Sri Lanka, including the northern and eastern areas, who have lost are unable to produce for example birth certificates, and are therefore prevented from obtaining a National Identity Card. The Front Office can also help people returning from abroad, including rejected asylum applicants, who could normally obtain a National Identity Card within two weeks of application. [32]

See also Treatment of Returned Asylum Seekers: paragraphs 5.1.38 - 5.1.41

5.1.21 Prior to 1996, the LTTE severely restricted the movement of Tamils under its control, often levying a large "exit tax" on persons wishing to move to government controlled areas, and requiring travellers to leave all their property in escrow. In addition, it would usually grant permission to only one family member to travel at a time. However, following the recapture of Jaffna, the LTTE began to allow people to move more freely into government-controlled areas. [2d]

5.1.22 The LTTE has also disrupted civilian air traffic to Jaffna; in August 1998 it began warning civilians and humanitarian workers not to use civilian flights servicing the peninsula. [2d] Passenger flights to the Jaffna peninsula were stopped in March 2000 when a transport aircraft was shot down by suspected Tamil Tiger rebels, with 40 fatalities. Civilian flights were resumed in November of that year, which in theory meant that the Tamil population of Jaffna were able to travel to the rest of government-controlled Sri Lanka by air as well as by sea. [21w]

5.1.23 Tamils from Jaffna who travel from the north to government-controlled areas must carry an LTTE travel pass. Passes are issued to people such as Tamil businessmen who are regarded as reliable and who are able to regularly travel back and forth. Permission to travel is also granted for family visits and hospital treatment in Colombo. Consent may be accompanied by a warning that remaining family members will face punishment if the traveller does not return. [14a]

5.1.24 Until May 1997, the start of the army offensive in the Vanni, the LTTE checked travel passes at its border crossing near Omantai on the road to Vavuniya. Further south, near Nochchimodai, there was another checkpoint manned by members of the People's Liberation Organisation of Tamil Eelam (PLOTE), which identified LTTE activists and handed them over to the army. The army checkpoint was a little further south, near Tandikulam, where the National Identity Card had to be shown. Travellers were questioned about their destination and then detained in a camp near Vavuniya while enquiries were made in Colombo concerning their stated destination. [14a]

5.1.25 The Refugee Council reported in December 2000 that citizens from Jaffna wishing to travel to southern areas of Sri Lanka were facing considerable difficulty in obtaining permits to leave the peninsula. An application form, costing 10 rupees, has to be obtained from the army's Civil Administration Office (CAO), but there are only two of these in Jaffna. Because of the lengthy subsequent procedure in obtaining these permits, local people say the process can take weeks and sometimes months. The Refugee Council state that more than 10,000 people had applied to the CAOs and were awaiting travel out of Jaffna. [10d]

5.1.26 The Danish Immigration Service has been informed that people could have their residence permits extended if they were able to convince the police that they had good reasons to remain in Colombo, and that all the interviewees they consulted (with one exception) had not heard of any instances of the police forcing people to leave Colombo. [32] If the permitted residence period is exceeded, no action is normally taken by the police. [14b]

5.1.27 Every Sri Lankan citizen wishing to travel abroad must have a valid passport issued centrally by the Department of Immigration/Emigration in Colombo. Passport application forms are issued by district offices (kachcheri) and forwarded to Colombo. Applicants must submit a birth certificate, which can be obtained in the Jaffna peninsula or from the office of the Registrar-General in Colombo, a National Identity Card, and photos certified by a justice of the peace. Passports are checked on exit at the airport. Photographs of wanted persons are normally kept at customs posts. [14a] & [32] Passengers departing from Bandaranaike International Airport, Colombo, currently have to pass through a series of 3 security checkpoints before reaching the departure terminal. They may be asked for their National Identity Card at any of these checkpoints. Even if accompanied by an agent through to the departure terminal, the passenger must submit to checking of documents whether the agent is present or not. [31]

5.1.28 Repatriated Tamils carry an "emergency certificate" from the Sri Lanka High Commission unless they have a valid travel document of their own. On production of this document, the holder may apply to the Registrar-General's Office in Colombo for a birth certificate, on the basis of which a National Identity Card can be issued. If a Tamil registers as having come from abroad, there is no reason for the authorities to regard him as coming from the north and consequently send him to Vavuniya. [14a]

See also Treatment of Returned Asylum Seekers: paragraphs 5.1.38 - 5.1.41

Immigrants and Emigrants Act

5.1.29 The Immigrants and Emigrants Act was passed in 1984. Section 45 lists various categories of people who are guilty of offences under the Act, which include anyone who forges, alters or tampers with any passport, or has in their possession any forged passport, or who uses such a document. The section sets out the punishment, which consists of a fine, or a period of imprisonment, or both. Section 45A provides punishments for those found guilty of facilitating illegal entry into Sri Lanka. [20]

5.1.30 The Immigrants and Emigrants (Amendment) Act was passed in July 1998. During the passage of the Bill the Sri Lankan Immigration Minister told Parliament that the amendment was designed to combat "the crime of illicit trafficking of persons from Sri Lanka." The Minister stated that the diplomatic missions of various western countries had made representations to the Sri Lankan authorities about organised groups engaged in the business of securing illicit entry of Sri Lankans to their countries. [20]

5.1.31 The Amendment Act increases the fines and the term of imprisonment which may be imposed on those found guilty under the Act, and makes the term of imprisonment mandatory. The Act disallows the imposition of a suspended sentence, and certain offences under the Act are non-bailable. [20]

5.1.32 According to the TULF MP Joseph Parajasingham, 100 Tamils are said to have been arrested for violation of the Immigrants and Emigrants Act, who had on these grounds to pay a fine and serve a one year sentence. This concerns Tamils who were caught when they left the country in possession of false documents. Contrary to what is stated in the Organisation Suisse d'aide aux Réfugiés report of 31 May 1999, the Immigrants and Emigrants Act has no retroactive effect. [14b]

5.1.33. According to the report produced by the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs, published 30 September 1999, prosecution on the grounds of illegal emigration is as a rule only pursued at the time of emigration. In the case of immigration, the Criminal Investigation Department in practice will only proceed to investigate the illegal emigration if the returning person is still in possession of the forged travel document or if there are other indications that the interested party has emigrated illegally (e.g. if the interested party declares this him or herself). A rejected asylum seeker who is returned to Sri Lanka does not always have to fear being prosecuted under the Immigrants and Emigrants Act unless he/she is entering on a false travel document. The immigration authorities can question someone on arrival about their outward journey, but they generally do not have access to sufficient means of proof regarding the emigration. [14b] It is not technically possible for the Sri Lankan authorities to determine whether someone has previously emigrated illegally: the registration of personal data for Sri Lankans is not computerised, nor is there a computerised database of the travel documents issued. Asylum seekers expelled by the Netherlands for example, are on arrival in Sri Lanka, in possession of a valid travel document, usually a recently issued laissez-passer from the Sri Lankan Embassy: thus such returnees are not in violation of the law. [14c]

5.1.34 With regard to the burden of proof in the Immigrants and Emigrants Act, the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs state that, unless otherwise specified, the general definitions of the Sri Lankan Criminal Code are applied (i.e. the Criminal Procedure Code, and the Evidence Ordinance). According to these general definitions, the burden of proof of a violation of a criminal law rests with the public prosecutor, thus not on the suspect. [14c]

See also Freedom to Travel: paragraphs 5.1.20 - 5.1.28; Treatment of Returned Asylum Seekers: paragraphs 5.1.38 - 5.1.41

Displaced People

5.1.35 Fighting between the Government and LTTE has displaced hundreds of thousands of people, with many displaced multiple times as front lines shift. Fighting in Jaffna from April to June 2000 displaced an estimated 150,000, most of whom sought shelter with friends or relatives. Another 340,000 displaced reportedly live in the Vanni. Since September 2000, 172,000 internally displaced persons (IDPs) have been living in welfare centers ranging from camps, where conditions vary considerably, to settlements with government social services and food aid. By the end of 2000, 500,000 displaced persons, including those in the Vanni, had registered for government food aid and were receiving medicine and other essential supplies from the Government. [2d]

5.1.36 During 1998 several thousand Tamils fled LTTE controlled areas to Tamil Nadu in southern India. An estimated 65,000 Tamil refugees lived in camps there, and another 100,000 refugees are believed to have been integrated into Tamil society in India. [2d]

5.1.37 According to a Médecins Sans Frontières paper issued 10 December 1999, the heavy fighting that broke out in November 1999 between the LTTE and the Sri Lankan army meant that the populations in the northern and eastern provinces had greatly reduced access to humanitarian assistance. This included shortages of medical supplies, food, shelter and other necessities. [28]

Treatment of Returned Asylum Seekers

5.1.38 UNHCR in their Background Paper on Sri Lanka published on 18 March 1999 for the European High Level Working Group on Asylum and Migration, stated that Sri Lankan asylum seekers whose claims have been through full and fair procedures and found not to fulfil the refugee criteria may be returned safely to Sri Lanka. They state that where the individual has no valid travel documents, he/she should be assisted to obtain relevant documentation from the nearest Sri Lankan diplomatic post as such documents would greatly facilitate the person's arrival, travel and stay upon return to the country. [16b]

5.1.39 The Border Police Directorate in Koblenz, Germany confirmed the collective deportation of 20 Sri Lankan nationals to Colombo on 16 March 2000. This event attracted a great deal of attention on the part of the Sri Lankan media and human rights organisations as well as Tamil politicians. Neither the claim of the Tamil deputy Selvarasa nor reports widely published claiming that the repatriation had ended with the deportees' arrest, torture and seizure of all personal documents were correct. Rather, two out of the 20 were arrested on remand for five days on the orders of a judge, for further investigation with regard to clarifying their identity and checking criminal records. The other 18 were freed on the day of their arrival and instructed to appear for a court hearing. Since only one of the deportees was in possession of a normal passport for entry into Sri Lanka, the remaining 19 emergency passports (issued only for the return trip) were confiscated. Regarding the torture allegations, one deportee claimed to have been hit, but later said this amounted to just a slap in the face. The other deportee held temporarily in custody denied that he had been treated incorrectly. Both were released on bail on 21 March 2000. [12]

5.1.40 Although UNHCR have been informed on a number of occasions by airport immigration authorities in Colombo that a temporary identification document and/or a photocopy is issued to returned asylum seekers when the documentation they travelled on is retained, they found that this was not always the case. However, such persons are able to collect an Emergency Certificate from the Immigration Head Office in Colombo on the following morning. UNHCR believe that it is extremely risky for such persons to be in Colombo without identification, but contend the immediate risk is at the airport itself. Officers from the Criminal Investigation Department sometimes detain Tamils leaving the airport to check their identification; some have been arrested, others have escaped by bribing officers. However, according to UNHCR, the chances of such persons being arrested in a round-up prior to obtaining an Emergency Certificate the next morning are slim; it would be considered a rare occurrence. [6h]

5.1.41 According to UNHCR, to the best of their knowledge, no Sri Lankan national returning from Europe has been regarded adversely by the Sri Lankan authorities merely on the assumption that they may have had contact with LTTE representatives in that European country. However, if the Sri Lankan authorities had received information to that effect about anyone returning from any country, then that person may be taken into custody for questioning by the Criminal Investigation Department and/or the Terrorist Investigation Department. [6h]

5.2 TAMILS

5.2.1 Since independence in 1948, the primary conflict has been between Tamils and Sinhalese, as ethnic and religious divisions emerged. Because of their majority, the Sinhalese became more dominant, while the Tamils became increasingly marginalised. The struggle for cultural affirmation, political representation, economic advancement and linguistic parity between Sinhalese and Tamils ended in violence and armed conflict. The overriding political issue in Sri Lanka became the demand by some Tamil groups for an independent Tamil state called "Eelam". [6c]

5.2.2 Tamils maintain that they have long been the victims of systematic discrimination in university education, government employment and in other matters controlled by the government [2d] and that they have been excluded from the benefits of economic development. [16a]

5.2.3 Tamils fleeing persecution or the war in the north east can generally find a safe haven in the areas under government control. There are large numbers of Tamils living in greater Colombo, the Puttalam district north of Negombo, and the central highlands. In Matale there is a long established community of "Up-country Tamils" as well as Tamils from the north east of Sri Lanka. [14a]

See also Arrests of Tamils in Colombo: paragraphs 5.2.4 - 5.2.25; Disappearances: paragraphs 5.2.26 - 5.2.35; Up-country Tamils: paragraphs 5.6.1 - 5.6.8

Arrests of Tamils in Colombo

5.2.4 There are estimated to be 150,000 Tamils from the north east in Colombo, in addition to the 250,000 Tamils who have been resident in the city for a long period. Tamils coming from the north usually seek accommodation with acquaintances or relatives, or in lodges. The Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs, in their Report dated 24 July 1997, state that the police and army periodically tighten up identity checks for Tamils in Colombo, partly on the street at checkpoints and roadblocks and partly through round-ups and searches of premises, especially at the lodging houses. This takes place in particular following bombings carried out by the LTTE in Colombo. The police search for LTTE infiltrators and especially the suicide squads. [14a] Identity checks are also intensified in the days preceding an important festival, for example "Heroes Week", on which the anniversary of the LTTE leader Prabhakaran falls. [14b]

5.2.5 Thousands of Tamils have been arrested, particularly in Colombo and the east, for suspected contact with the LTTE, and as part of security operations to prevent LTTE terrorists from infiltrating the city. Amnesty International [3a] and the Refugee Council regard mass arrests of hundreds of Tamils at a time during cordon and search operations as arbitrary and indiscriminate. [11b]

5.2.6 Cordon-and-search operations are often carried out in areas with high concentrations of Tamils, including Tamil lodges. These operations occur at irregular intervals and are intended to catch those missed by normal security measures. Whether people are detained or not is determined by how well they can establish their reasons for being in the area. [5a] UNHCR state that visits to the lodges appear to be planned, with the inherent belief that the security personnel may be able to benefit financially through the residents. [6h] However, the Dutch Foreign Ministry Report of 1999 concludes that permanent residents of these lodges who have an identity card are not usually arrested. [14b]

5.2.7 A combination of fixed and moveable checkpoints is used in Colombo, the type, number and location dependent on the prevailing security situation. The key issue at checkpoints is verification of identity and those who have Identity Cards with a Colombo address will pass more easily than someone whose ID Card shows a Jaffna address. Crossing checkpoints may be a protracted process for those Tamils who do not speak Sinhala. [5a]

5.2.8 More recent information from UNHCR indicates that round-ups are not and never have been a daily feature of life in Colombo, although their frequency increases at times of tension, such as the LTTE assault on Jaffna in April-May 2000. Rather, the round-ups are usually in the form of a cordon and search operation and on average take place four or five times each month. The persons so apprehended are usually released within 48 hours, but in some cases this could be after 72 hours. It is not now thought that suspects are taken randomly from the streets, unless the suspect raises suspicion at a checkpoint. It is difficult to estimate the number of Tamils taken in for questioning during cordon and search operations. However, the usual number would not normally exceed 100 unless there had been a security incident or suicide bomb attack, in which case the number would rise to 400-500. [6h]

5.2.9 A large majority of Tamils are released within 24 hours or at least within 2 or 3 days [3a] after their identity has been checked, but some have been held without charge or trial for weeks or months and, according to Amnesty, are at risk of being subjected to torture. [3d] According to information given to the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs, 90% of detainees are released within 48 hours, 6% within a week, 3% within 3 months and 1% have a 3 month detention order imposed. [14a] Information given to the Danish Immigration Service by the National Intelligence Bureau confirmed that from 20 to 30 people were arrested daily in Colombo in the course of identity checks. From 80 to 90% of those arrested would be released within 24 hours. Those who were detained for more than 24 hours were usually detained for 7 days with the possibility of this being extended to 21 days. [32]

See also Torture: paragraphs 5.2.38 - 5.2.49

5.2.10 The 1997 Dutch Foreign Ministry report states that the risk of being held under the Emergency Regulations for over 48 hours for further investigation is faced in particular by younger Tamils, who speak little Sinhalese, if they are not in possession of identity papers, if the papers produced show them to have been born in Jaffna or if they cannot give any valid reason for their presence in Colombo. The likelihood of further investigation is also high for those who have recently come to Colombo from the war zones, those who have a relative known to be an LTTE member or who are suspected of LTTE membership on the basis of police records or who are identified as being involved with the LTTE by another detainee [14a]; those who have recently moved to a new area of Colombo; and those who have visible scars. [13]

5.2.11 The UNHCR has indicated that Tamil asylum seekers with scars, should they be returned to Sri Lanka, may be more prone to adverse identification by the security forces and taken for rigorous questioning and potential ill-treatment. However, they also note that no particular distinctions can be made as to which type of scar may lead to potential ill treatment. This depends on the particular circumstances of the returned person and the significance an individual officer attaches to the types of scars in evidence. [6f] Recent advice from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, based on discussion with several Non-Governmental Organisations, journalists and MP's in Sri Lanka supports that view, and indicates that it would be difficult for individuals to obtain medical evidence to explain the cause of scars, especially from hospitals in the rebel-controlled areas, due to transport and communication problems. Although the British High Commission in Colombo assesses that Tamils with scars risk longer detainment and harsher treatment, they have no direct evidence to indicate that a Tamil bearing scars is more at risk of being tortured. [15b]

See also Torture: paragraph 5.2.48

5.2.12 All residents of Colombo, including Sinhalese are regularly stopped and checked. The frequency of this occurring depends more on the distance and routes travelled than it does on ethnicity, neighbourhood or newness to Colombo. [5a]

5.2.13 In Colombo the number of arrests has been particularly high in the aftermath of terrorist attacks attributed to the LTTE. [3a] For example, 965 Tamils were arrested after the October 1996 attack on the World Trade Centre in Colombo. [4e] Amnesty say that those most at risk of arrest are young Tamil men and women, especially those who had recently travelled from the north and east. Some have been detained more than once. [3a]

5.2.14 There are instances where the security forces have not adhered to the Presidential directives issued in 1995, in that "arrest receipts" are not issued, families are not informed of the place of detention, and the HRTF/HRC were not informed of the arrest. [3a]

5.2.15 Amnesty International refers to evidence that prisoners have been detained in unauthorised places of detention. Some 84 places of detention are authorised under the Emergency Regulations for the detention of prisoners held under the ERs or Prevention of Terrorism Act. Amnesty mention prisoners being held in Plantain Point army camp and Kallady army camp, which are not authorised places of detention. [3a] Amnesty is concerned that the government has not separated responsibility for custody from responsibility for investigation, one of the fundamental safeguards against torture and disappearances. [3c]

5.2.16 The Sri Lankan authorities maintain that people are arrested only on "reasonable grounds". These include recent travel from the north and east, having a relative who is known to be or have been a member of the LTTE, information provided by other prisoners, or not being able to substantiate the reason for being in the area. [3a]

5.2.17 After thousands of Tamils were arrested in March and April 1998 in Colombo and the surrounding areas, Tamil political parties demanded that arrest and detention should be strictly in accordance with the law and that the Presidential Directives providing safeguards to detainees should be observed. [10a] In April 1998 Tamil United Liberation Front (TULF) MPs raised in the Sri Lankan Parliament the matter of the arrests of Tamils. The MP Neelan Tiruchelvam stated that in the previous few days alone around 5,000 residents of Colombo had been rounded up and detained despite their production of valid documents which showed their legitimate presence in the city. The MP referred to mass arrests and indiscriminate and arbitrary treatment of Tamils. [8e]

5.2.18 TULF leaders in evidence to the Human Rights Commission stated that fundamental rights of Tamils in Colombo were being violated with impunity, and arrests were taking place, in many instances, despite individuals possessing all the necessary documents, solely on the basis of ethnicity. The Attorney-General met with security force chiefs and the leaders of Tamil political parties to discuss the arrests of Tamils during military operations in the capital. [8e] The Attorney-General advised the security forces in April 1998 to arrest only on the basis of reasonable suspicion based on reliable information. [10a]

5.2.19 The Anti-Harassment Committee decided to establish a separate police unit to carry out investigations on complaints of security force harassment and for liaison between detainees and their families. All arrests under the Emergency Regulations and the Prevention of Terrorism Act must be reported to the AHC (now the CIUAH). [10b]

5.2.20 The Committee of Inquiry into Undue Arrest and Harassment (CIUAH), issued guidelines on 7 September 1998 to security force officers on search operations, arrest and detention. Arrests are only to be made if evidence is available against the arrested person, who must be informed of the reasons for the arrest. Relatives should receive brief written reasons and informed of the place of detention. Observers pointed out that CIUAH's guidelines are already contained in the Presidential Directives under the Emergency Regulations but have rarely been followed. [10c]

5.2.21 The Sri Lanka Daily News reported in October 1998 that a cross-section of Tamils living in Colombo had told the Justice Minister, G Peiris, that the harassment that they had undergone had considerably reduced. This was because the security forces were conducting checks in houses and at roadblocks in a more polite and humane manner. The Justice Minister said that Tamil speaking police officers would be appointed to assist those Tamils taken to police stations. [17a]

5.2.22 Some human rights observers believe that the work of the CIUAH has acted as a deterrent to random arrests and has helped to alleviate some of the problems encountered by detainees and their families. [2d]

5.2.23 Under Regulation 20A of the Emergency (Miscellaneous Provisions and Powers) Regulations No. 4 of 1994, everyone in Colombo must be registered with the police. Every householder must provide the district police station with the names of every family member, tenant, guest or servant in his household. Household registration is the responsibility of the householder, not of individual residents, and is required of everyone, whether Tamil or not, and whether from Jaffna or another part of Colombo. Nationals of other countries must be registered with the police. [5a]

5.2.24 It is also possible that a Tamil in Colombo can be subjected to repeated brief arrests. The main reason for this is that the police force does not maintain a central register of earlier identity checks. Most are released again within 48 or 72 hours. [14b]

5.2.25 The Committee of Inquiry into Undue Arrest and Harassment (CIUAH) has urged expeditious disposal of applications for police registration, after seeing long queues of Tamils outside Colombo's police stations. Despite this request, the Inspector General of Police introduced a procedure on 22 September 1998, which requires the submission of 3 photographs of the applicant and a certificate from the village headman (Grama Savaka) to obtain a police registration application form. [10c]

Disappearances

5.2.26 Between 1980 and 1997, 12,208 cases of disappearance alleged to have occurred in Sri Lanka were reported to the United Nations Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances. Cases reported since 1990 have occurred mainly in the east and north east of the country. The UN Working Group report states that the persons most often reported detained and missing were young Tamil men accused or suspected of belonging to, collaborating with, aiding or sympathising with the LTTE. Displaced Tamils were at particular risk of detention and disappearance. [6b]

5.2.27 Amnesty refer to the bodies of at least 31 people abducted from the capital which were found in lakes and rivers in the vicinity in 1995 (the "Bolgoda killings"). President Kumaratunga ordered the Criminal Investigation Department (CID) to investigate the killings. The investigations resulted in a marked reduction in the number of such violations being reported from the capital. [3a] The case of the 22 STF members arrested on suspicion of the killings went to trial in June 2000. Since key witnesses did not appear, the prosecution asked for the case to be rescheduled to October, when another hearing was held. The next hearing was scheduled for March 2001. [2d]

5.2.28 The US Embassy in Colombo knows of no cases of disappearance in 1996 in government-controlled areas of the west, centre and south of the country, apart from 3 cases in Colombo. [14a]

5.2.29 During 1997 approximately 100 cases of disappearance were reported, again mainly from Jaffna, Batticaloa, Mannar and Kilinochchi. [3c]

5.2.30 Disappearances at the hands of the security forces continued in the north and east in 2000. However there were no reports of disappearances in Colombo or Jaffna. The exact number of disappearances was impossible to ascertain due to censorship of news about security force operations and infrequent access to the north and east. [2d]

5.2.31 In April 1999, 23 skeletons were located in a sewage pit close to a stadium in Jaffna. The site was close to Chemmani, where the bodies of some 300 Tamils who went missing after being arrested by the army are allegedly buried. [7u] Excavations at the Chemmani site started in June 1999, witnessed by observers from Amnesty International and Physicians for Human Rights. Two skeletons, one with hands tied with rope, were exhumed. A magistrate stopped further exhumations and ordered forensic reports to be submitted. [8p] These reports stated that the victims had been assaulted and killed. [8r] Five of those convicted in the Kumaraswamy killings claimed knowledge of mass graves in the Chemmani area where they had allegedly buried between 120 and 140 bodies on the orders of their superiors; during this phase of exhumations, 15 bodies were uncovered. In December 1999, the Government submitted its forensic report to a magistrate in Jaffna. The report stated that 10 of the remains showed physical assault and murder. Former Lance Corporal Rajapakse and others convicted in the Kumaraswamy case also disclosed the names of 20 security force personnel who were allegedly responsible for the killings in the Chemmani case. The case was still pending at the end of 2000. [2d]

5.2.32 On 19 December 2000, nine Tamil civilians were reported missing in Mirusuvil after being arrested by the Sri Lanka Army (SLA). One person escaped, and after checking himself into the local hospital for torture wounds, reported the incident to police and the local magistrate. The magistrate, accompanied by police, took the person to the site where he and the other eight had been arrested and tortured. The escapee identified two SLA soldiers as the perpetrators, and the soldiers admitted to torturing nine civilians and murdering eight. The soldiers identified the place of burial, and the bodies were exhumed. On 25 December 2000, an additional SLA commissioned officer and six additional SLA soldiers were arrested for the torture and murders. The army commander is monitoring the matter and has ordered a separate inquiry into the incident. [2d]

5.2.33 Pro-government militias and the LTTE have also been responsible for disappearances. However, it was impossible to determine the exact number of victims. [2d]

5.2.34 Amnesty International acknowledges that the Sri Lankan Government has taken positive steps to provide redress and prevent disappearances occurring in the first place, but there have been continuing reports of widespread human rights violations, including disappearances. Amnesty considers that the root causes must be tackled: the sense of impunity among the security forces and the powers of the Emergency Regulations and Prevention of Terrorism Act which allow people to be detained for long periods of time. Forensic expertise is under-resourced; few prosecutions are initiated against those allegedly responsible for disappearances; effective measures are required to protect witnesses and relatives of disappeared persons against any form of intimidation or reprisal; and the safeguards which have been introduced are not being implemented effectively. Amnesty have also called for the ERs and PTA to be brought into line with accepted international standards regarding due process and the treatment of prisoners. [3c]

5.2.35 The United Nations Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances visited Sri Lanka between 25 and 29 October 1999, and published their report on 21 December 1999. The Working Group acknowledged that it had continued to receive valuable co-operation from the Government of Sri Lanka, and that no obstacles were encountered by the members of the mission in receiving representatives of Non Governmental Organisations (NGOs), witnesses, and relatives of missing persons. The Working Group appreciated the variety of measures which the present and previous Governments of Sri Lanka had taken, in compliance with the Group's earlier recommendations for the purpose of clarifying cases of disappearances which occurred during the former Government, of providing justice to the families of disappeared persons, and of preventing future disappearances. However, notwithstanding all the encouraging facts, the Working Group stressed that Sri Lanka remains the country with the second largest number of non-clarified cases of disappearances on its list. In May 1999, a special "Unit for the Clarification of Cases of Alleged Forced or Involuntary Disappearances", was set up by the Cabinet of Ministers as part of the Rehabilitation of Persons, Properties and Industries Authority (REPIA). This new Unit has the specific task of establishing a database on disappearances in response to the cases transmitted by the Working Group to the Government of Sri Lanka. On the basis of this new (temporary) legislation, some 15,000 death certificates have been issued since 1995, and more than 12,000 families have received compensation. In almost 4,000 cases, suspected perpetrators were identified and criminal proceedings were instituted against some 500 members of the police and the armed forces. [6g]

See also Government Action: paragraphs 5.2.50 - 5.2.59; Commissions of Inquiry into Involuntary Removal and Disappearances: paragraphs 5.2.66 - 5.2.69; Torture: paragraphs 5.2.38 - 5.2.49

Extra-judicial executions

5.2.36 Amnesty International state that the police, army, and the Special Task Force (STF) have committed extra-judicial executions. Amnesty reports give details of the cases known to them. [3a] In some cases extra-judicial killings were reprisals against civilians for LTTE attacks in which members of the security forces were killed or injured. [2d]

5.2.37 In 2000 the exact number of extrajudicial killings was impossible to ascertain due to frequent censorship of news relating to military or police operations and to lack of regular access to the north and east. [2d]

Torture

5.2.38 The police, STF, the army and the navy have been responsible for incidents of torture. Amnesty International refer to the many testimonies obtained from victims of torture, corroborating medical certificates, Supreme Court judgements in fundamental rights cases and reports from Government inquiry commissions. [3d] Pro-government Tamil militants, directly responsible to the security forces, have also engaged in torture, as have the LTTE, who reportedly use torture on a routine basis. [2d] The prevalence of torture is intrinsically linked with other human rights violations, including disappearances. Many of the thousands of cases of disappearances reported from Sri Lanka since the early 1980s concern detainees alleged to have died under torture in police or army custody whose bodies were subsequently disposed of in secret. [3e]

See also Disappearances: paragraphs 5.2.26 - 5.2.35

5.2.39 As well as the use of torture in the context of the armed conflict, torture is also regularly reported to have been used to extract confessions from suspects in theft and other criminal cases. The police also use torture for the settling of personal disputes and this is closely linked with widespread corruption reported in the force and the nexus between the local police and local politicians. [3e]

5.2.40 There are several contributing factors to the prevalence of torture in Sri Lanka. The Emergency Regulations (ERs) and the Prevention of Terrorism Act (PTA) allow long term detention in police and army custody without having to bring detainees before a judicial authority. There are no standards in law setting out minimum detention conditions. The current safeguards laid down in law, such as the requirement that people arrested under the ERs and the PTA can only be held in authorised places of detention, are not effectively enforced. Those held in authorised places of detention receive regular visits by delegates of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and the Human Rights Commission, which reduce to some extent the risk of torture and disappearances. Although keeping a detainee in an unauthorised place is an offence under the ERs, no member of the security forces has been charged under these provisions. [3e]

5.2.41 According to the U.S. Department of State report issued in February 2001, the Sri Lankan authorities did not use the Emergency Regulations during 2000 to cover up misdeeds by the security forces such as extra-judicial killings and disappearances. This had happened in the past. [2d]

5.2.42 Sri Lankan law contains strong provisions to prevent the extraction of confessions under torture. However, provisions in the ERs and PTA make confessions to police officers above a certain rank admissible as evidence in court. This constitutes an incentive to interrogating officers to obtain such confessions by any means, including torture. Moreover the burden of proving that a confession was extracted under torture is upon the person making such an allegation. [3e]

5.2.43 Testimonies obtained from victims of torture speak of the security forces abusing them in the following ways: general physical abuse such as slaps and kicks; having petrol poured on their faces; chilli powder applied to parts of the body; being repeatedly plunged in barrels of water; electric shocks; near suffocation with wet rags; burning with cigarettes; beatings with cricket bats and PVC pipes filled with something heavy such as sand, stones or cement; being suspended upside down, and beatings on the soles of the feet. Further extreme forms of torture include burning with melted polythene, cutting with knives and bayonets, drilling into feet and inserting nails into feet or other parts of the body. In most cases testimony was corroborated by medical evidence. This treatment occurred while the victims were being interrogated about suspected involvement with the LTTE. There were also several reports of sexual abuse and rape by members of the security forces. [3a], [11a], [11b], [13], [2c] & [3e]

5.2.44 The Refugee Council refers to reports from Sri Lankan Judicial Medical Officers (Government appointed doctors instructed by the Supreme Court to investigate allegations of torture after petitions have been made by Tamil detainees), which document physical injuries and scars which are consistent with various methods of assault, including suspension, burns and beatings. [11a] The Supreme Court awarded compensation in 4 of the 10 cases of which the Refugee Council had details. No prosecutions were undertaken in any of these cases against the officials responsible for committing torture. [11b]

5.2.45 Reports of torture emanate from various parts of the country, including Trincomalee, Batticaloa and Jaffna as well as Colombo. [3a]

5.2.46 In Colombo, there are large numbers of arrests after explosions, assassinations and arms finds. A large percentage are released within 48 hours after their identity has been checked. There have been reports of ill treatment during this initial period, but there have been few reports of torture of people held for identity checks. However, people who are suspected of having links with the LTTE risk being subjected to torture. Tamils originally from the north and east of Sri Lanka are especially at risk of being held for longer periods as are up-country Tamils. [3e] The Danish Immigration Service Report, published January 1999, states that a number of interviewees were consulted, including UNHCR, the Association for the Protection of Tamils, the Action Group for Tamils and the Law and Society Trust, who said that torture or other forms of maltreatment did not occur in the course of identity checks. The Civil Rights Movement said that there had been an improvement in the treatment of people during identity checks. [32] If someone is freed on bail, this will mean they are not or no longer regarded as a serious suspect. [14b]

5.2.47 The Medical Foundation for the Care of Victims of Torture issued a report in June 2000 which sets out medical case studies of 49 Tamils (47 male, 2 female) who had been detained for varying lengths of time in Sri Lanka from January 1997 onwards. Medical evidence of torture was found in all of them. Most were in the age group 21-35 and had a range of occupations. Some of the Tamils had worked voluntarily for the LTTE, others had been conscripted by the LTTE, and others had assisted the LTTE but not voluntarily. The subjects of the case studies were detained either by the police in Colombo or by the army in the north. The Tamils described methods of torture similar to those set out in paragraph 5.2.43 above. [13]

5.2.48 Some of the Tamils were found by the security forces to have scars, which created the suspicion that they were involved with the LTTE. This led to arrest and torture. Some of the case studies described how they were made to put on masks and identify newly arrested young men as being Tamil Tigers. They pointed out several at random although they did not recognise them, because they would be assaulted otherwise. The Medical Foundation considers this to be a self-perpetuating cycle of abuse. [13]

5.2.49 In their 2000 report, the Medical Foundation point out the degree of involvement with the LTTE of their sample of 49 Tamils. 31% of the sample were forced to do occasional work for the LTTE, 16% worked voluntarily, 8% were forced to fight for the LTTE, and 4% were working full time for the LTTE. A further 4% were involved with other militant Tamil groups. This leaves 37% of the sample who had no personal involvement with the LTTE, but these may have been arrested because of family links to the LTTE. [13]

See also Government Action: paragraphs 5.2.50 - 5.2.59; Prosecution of security force personnel: paragraphs 5.2.76 - 5.2.85; Abuses by the LTTE: paragraphs 5.2.86 - 5.2.88;

Abuses by pro-Government Tamil militants: paragraphs 5.2.89 - 5.2.91; Women: paragraphs 5.3.1 - 5.3.7

Government Action

5.2.50 The People's Alliance (PA) Government which came to power in 1994, and in particular President Kumaratunga herself, are resolved to improve the human rights situation in Sri Lanka. [14a] There are several domestic NGO human rights groups, including the Movement for Interracial Justice and Equality (MIRJE), the University Teachers for Human Rights, Jaffna (UTHR-J), the Civil Rights Movement (CRM), and the Law and Society Trust (LST), that monitor civil liberties. There are no adverse regulations governing the activities of local and foreign NGOs and the Government generally co-operates with NGOs, with members of Parliament, and with other officials frequently participating in seminars and other events concerning human rights and humanitarian affairs. [2d]

5.2.51 Amnesty International has noted the marked improvement in the human rights situation in comparison with what it called the "widespread pattern of gross and systematic violations" of the past. Nevertheless Amnesty, in common with a number of other organisations, were concerned about continuing abuses, about the Government of Sri Lanka's apparent failure to live up to its stated commitment to human rights, and about signs that the Government may be renegeing on its commitment to bring to justice the perpetrators of past human rights violations. [3a]

5.2.52 Sri Lanka acceded to the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment on 3 January 1994, but has not recognised the competence of the Committee against Torture to consider communications made in accordance with Articles 21 and 22 of the Convention. The Convention Against Torture Act 1994 gives effect to the Convention in accordance with the Sri Lankan legal system. [6e] Several provisions in the UN Convention against Torture were not fully implemented in the Torture Act, which uses a more restrictive definition of torture than that contained in the UN Convention against Torture. [3e]

5.2.53 The 1994 Convention Against Torture Act (CATA) made torture a punishable offence and specific crime. The High Court has jurisdiction over violations, and criminal conviction carries a 7-year minimum sentence. The Government is developing regulations to prosecute and punish military and police personnel responsible for torture. The Inter-parliamentary Permanent Standing Committee and its Inter-ministerial Working Group on Human Rights Issues have begun tracking criminal investigations of torture. By the end of 2000, there were 146 cases under investigation. In addition the Government also ceased paying fines incurred by security force personnel found guilty in proceedings of the offence. Security force personnel have been fined under civil statutes for engaging in torture. According to the Attorney General's office, by the end of 2000, 8 members of the security forces and police had been prosecuted under criminal statutes, but none of the cases had come to conclusion. In November 2000, the Government also established the Prosecution of Torture Perpetrators Unit, under the direct supervision of the Attorney General, to prosecute torture cases. [2d]

5.2.54 Sri Lanka has acceded to the First Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR). [6e] The Government has followed a number of recommendations made by the monitoring committee under the ICCPR. [14a]

5.2.55 The Supreme Court and other courts have taken an unequivocal position on the question of torture and have awarded compensation to victims of torture. [6e] The Supreme Court can request the Inspector General of Police to initiate an investigation, and on completion, may refer the matter to the Attorney-General for prosecution. [6d] However the Supreme Court, which has granted compensation in scores of cases where people were found to have been tortured by agents of the state, has repeatedly expressed its frustration at the lack of follow-up by the relevant authorities (the Inspector General of Police and Attorney General) to its recommendations for further investigations and "appropriate action (by way of criminal proceedings and/or disciplinary action)" against members of the security forces involved in acts of torture. The Supreme Court has also commented on the prevailing climate of impunity in the police force in relation to torture. The Court attributed this to the failure on the part of the authorities to impose prompt, adequate and effective sanctions against offending officers. [3e]

5.2.56 The Government has taken steps to ensure that investigations in which the accused were police officers and that were dealt with by the police, were independent. New special units had been set up to carry out investigations and monitor investigations that were being conducted elsewhere. Special units of the Crown and State Counsel had been set up in the Attorney-General's Department to supervise the investigations that were being carried out. [6d]

5.2.57 The General Officer Commanding of the 51 Division of the Army in Jaffna introduced measures to prevent "disappearances" and torture. Amnesty reported that there was general agreement among the population in Jaffna that an improvement in the human rights situation had come about as a result of these measures. The GOC established a special investigative unit consisting of members of the Military Police to investigate 379 complaints of disappearances. [3b]

5.2.58 Amnesty was also encouraged by several human rights training programmes for the security forces, including courses organised by a Directorate of Humanitarian Law set up by the Commander of the Army in May 1997. [3b]

5.2.59 Amnesty International was invited in October 1998 by the Sri Lankan Attorney General to send an expert to attend the investigation of reports of a mass grave in Jaffna. [8c] Amnesty International and Physicians for Human Rights, who attended the exhumation at Chemmani in June 1999, praised the Sri Lankan Government for taking this first step in investigating human rights abuses by the security forces. [8q]

See also Prosecution of security force personnel: paragraphs 5.2.76 - 5.2.85

The Human Rights Commission

5.2.60 The Human Rights Commission (HRC) was established by Act of Parliament in 1996 [6c] and started work in March 1997 [6a]. The HRC has 11 offices around the country. [2d] It has monitoring, investigative and advisory powers in relation to human rights. There are no time limits for filing a complaint before the HRC. The HRC has 5 members: 3 Sinhalese, 1 Tamil and 1 Muslim. [6c]

5.2.61 The HRC is empowered to investigate an allegation of infringement of fundamental rights, and to recommend the prosecution of the person infringing those rights. The HRC may monitor the welfare of detainees by regular inspection of places of detention. All arrests and detentions under the Emergency Regulations and the Prevention of Terrorism Act must be reported to the HRC within 48 hours of arrest. [6c] The security forces often ignore these safeguards. [2d] However, according to the Danish Immigration Service Report on their fact-finding mission to Sri Lanka, published January 1999, the Human Rights Commission themselves noted that the rule requiring the police to inform it within 48 hours was in the main being observed and there had been improvements in this respect. [32]

5.2.62 The HRC visited over 2,000 police stations and over 500 detention facilities during 2000. [2d]

5.2.63 The HRC has over 4,000 cases of alleged human rights abuse pending. Human rights observers believe that the work of the HRC has been hampered by a lack of strong leadership within the organisation. The establishment of the Committee of Inquiry into Undue Arrest and Harassment (CIUAH) in 1998 strengthened claims of the HRC's ineffectiveness since the responsibilities of the CIUAH fall within the HRC's mandate. [2d] The powers of the HRC to receive and investigate reports of torture have been rarely used. [3e]

The Human Rights Task Force

5.2.64 The HRC took over the work of the Human Rights Task Force (HRTF). This had been established in 1991 as an independent organisation with the authority to conduct regular inspections of places of detention, maintain an accurate register of detainees and to ensure that fundamental rights of detainees were respected. HRTF officers were able to make unannounced visits to army camps and police stations and had unrestricted access to detainees. [6a]

Committee to Inquire into Undue Arrest and Harassment

5.2.65 This is a cabinet-level committee, previously known as the Anti-Harassment Committee, appointed by the President in July 1998. It includes senior opposition party members and Tamil representatives who are tasked with looking into complaints stemming from arrests and other security force actions and to take remedial action as necessary. [2d] The CIUAH, partly due to the inclusion of senior ministers among its members, appears to be effective in investigating complaints and bringing an end to specific human rights violations, including torture, brought to its attention. The CIUAH received 47 complaints of torture between July and December 1998. [3e]

See also Arrests of Tamils in Colombo: paragraphs 5.2.4 - 5.2.25

Commissions of Inquiry into Involuntary Removal and Disappearances

5.2.66 The Sri Lankan Government appointed 3 commissions in January 1995 to inquire into and report on involuntary removals and disappearances from 1 January 1988. The mandate expired on 31 May 1997. Each commission had jurisdiction over a geographical area and was responsible for examining allegations of disappearances and identifying the legal action which could be taken. Interim reports were sent to the President containing names of people responsible for disappearances. These findings were forwarded to the Inspector-General of Police for further investigation. The Inspector-General was directed to take action against offending police officers. [6c]

5.2.67 The final reports were submitted to the President in September 1997. [6c] The commissions investigated cases of disappearance, most of which occurred during the 1988-89 period of the JVP uprising. The commissions found evidence that 16,742 persons disappeared after having been involuntarily removed from their homes, in most cases by the security forces. [2d]

5.2.68 The reports have been published and submitted to the UN Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, which has been invited to visit Sri Lanka. A ministerial committee is looking into ways to implement the Commissions' recommendations, including those on compensation and prosecution. By May 1998, 188 cases had been referred to the Attorney-General's Department; specific action had been taken on 4 cases; there had been 20 indictments; and 14 cases had been dismissed. [6d] By the end of 2000, the Attorney-General had opened approximately 1,175 files and referred 262 indictments to the high courts and 86 complaints to magistrates involving 583 members of the security forces. Hearings and trials in at least 250 of those cases had begun. [2d]

5.2.69 In July 1998, a new commission with island-wide jurisdiction was appointed to investigate and report on about 11,000 complaints left uninvestigated by the earlier commissions. [18]

International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC)

5.2.70 The ICRC started humanitarian functions in Sri Lanka in 1990 to assist those affected by the war. The ICRC is granted free access to all places of detention, and may interview detainees in private. [6a] Amnesty International has testimonies of former detainees which confirm that an intervention by the ICRC resulted in detainees being provided medical treatment or being transferred out of the custody of the law enforcement officers responsible for torture. [3e]

5.2.71 ICRC personnel in Sri Lanka include 51 expatriate and 349 locally hired staff. Operations focus on areas where there is fighting, particularly the Vanni, the Jaffna peninsula and the Eastern Province. They assist internally displaced civilians and resident populations whose livelihood, access to medical care, or contacts with family members have been disrupted by the fighting. The ICRC also acts as a neutral humanitarian intermediary between the warring parties, works to persuade combatants to respect the rights of civilians, and visits persons detained in connection with the conflict. [34]

5.2.72 When the crossing point at Mankulam was closed at the end of 1999, the ICRC facilitated the negotiation of a new route near Madhu Church, and the daily presence of delegates at the lines has kept the passage open for the transport of essential goods, humanitarian personnel and civilians. The ICRC's shuttle service on the "Jaya Gold" (formerly "Java Gulf") vessel continues to provide the only humanitarian link between the Jaffna peninsula and the rest of the country, and protection has been extended to a vessel carrying civilians to and from the Jaffna peninsula. The ICRC opened an office at the end of 1999 in Madhu, and one in April 2000 at Tolpuram. [34]

5.2.73 Most ICRC assistance and tracing activities are carried out in conjunction with the Sri Lanka Red Cross Society (SLRCS). The Austrian Red Cross continues to run a delegated water and sanitation project in the Eastern Province, and the Canadian Red Cross maintains support to SLRCS medical activities in the Vanni. [34]

5.2.74 Between January and September 2000, the ICRC, among other activities, facilitated negotiations to allow cross-line transport, escorted food convoys across front lines, and protected a passenger vessel shuttling civilians between Trincomalee and Jaffna; collected allegations of abuse committed against the civilian population, submitting them in a confidential manner to the parties concerned in order to remind them of their responsibility to respect civilians and combatants who are hors combat; distributed 4,534 Red Cross messages written by people living in combat areas, located 199 persons who had been declared missing by their families, and organised 34 family reunifications for vulnerable individuals separated from their closest relatives; facilitated the return to both parties to the conflict the mortal remains of 322 combatants who had fallen on enemy territory; visited 2,783 detainees held under Sri Lankan authority, financing 702 family visits for them and helping released detainees return home; visited 33 persons held by the LTTE, organised a family visit for 15 of them and assisted in the release and return home of 5 of these detainees; distributed essential household items to over 18,000 vulnerable displaced persons in the Vanni and on the Jaffna peninsula; in the Vanni, provided an average of over 18,000 consultations monthly through 5 mobile health teams and 26 primary health centres run with the SLRCS in a project delegated to the Canadian Red Cross, and in the Eastern Province through 2 ICRC/SLRCS mobile health teams; on the Jaffna peninsula supported SLRCS medical teams treating over 5,000 displaced people; transported 1,400 patients by boat from Jaffna to Colombo for specialist medical care; made presentations on international humanitarian law to over 5,600 military personnel. [34]

Centre for the Study of Human Rights (CSHR)

5.2.75 The CSHR launched a programme in June 1993 to provide human rights education for the armed forces and the police with a view to sensitising them to the value of human rights and to point out the limits of their powers. Seminars and workshops were conducted for new assistant superintendents of police and for naval officers. [6a]

Prosecution of security force personnel

5.2.76 Amnesty International state that as of June 1999, no members of the security forces have been prosecuted under criminal law for committing torture, despite the fact that torture was made a criminal offence by the Convention Against Torture Act 1994. [3e] The Supreme Court has defined torture very broadly to include both physical and mental pain. [6a] Some personnel have been sentenced to long-term imprisonment for their involvement in disappearances and extra-judicial executions. [3e]

5.2.77 A report issued by the Geneva based Centre for the Independence of Judges and Lawyers in September 1998, stated that steps to punish those responsible for unlawful killings had been "manifestly inadequate" and that a culture of impunity had developed. At the date of the jurists' mission to Sri Lanka (1997) no member of the security forces had been convicted of murder. [7x]

5.2.78 A number of trials are underway. [2d] In February 1998, 21 homeguard troopers, 19 policemen and a civilian who were suspected of being involved in the killing of 8 Tamil youths were remanded in custody. [7t]

5.2.79 In July 1998, 5 soldiers and a policeman were sentenced to death, having been found guilty of the rape and murder of Krishanthi Kumaraswamy after she was detained at an army checkpoint in Jaffna in 1996. See also paragraphs 4.20 and 5.2.31. Her mother, brother and a neighbour who went looking for her were also killed. [7v] One of the convicted (former Lance Corporal Somaratne Rajapakse [2d]) stated that he was prepared to identify the mass graves of 400 Tamils who allegedly disappeared in Jaffna. [7w]

5.2.80 In August 1998, 5 senior police officers, including a Deputy Inspector General, were sent on compulsory leave after the report of the presidential commission established to investigate allegations of torture and extra-judicial executions at a government-run detention centre at the Batalanda Housing Estate near Colombo implicated them in the torture and disappearances of a large number of youths in the late 1980s. [18]

5.2.81 In February 1999 a retired school principal and 6 soldiers were sentenced to terms of up to 10 years imprisonment for abducting 25 students, mostly from Embilipitiya Central College in southern Sri Lanka. The students disappeared between August 1989 and January 1990 after the school principal gave the army a list of those he thought were members of the People's Liberation Front. A brigadier and a major were acquitted as there was insufficient evidence to convict. [8g]

5.2.82 The case against the 8 soldiers and 1 reserve police constable arrested in February 1996 in the Kumarapuram massacre of 24 Tamil villagers came to trial in September 1997. In November 1998, 6 of the soldiers were charged with murder. However, the case had not gone to trial by the end of 2000. [2d]

5.2.83 The trial of 21 soldiers accused of massacring 35 Tamil civilians in Mailanthani in 1992 was postponed until January 2001 after court hearings in June and October 2000. [2d]

5.2.84 In May 1999 around 400 policemen and soldiers were indicted for alleged involvement in the disappearance of more than 1,800 people during the late 1980s. It was also reported that the Attorney-General's department had recommended disciplinary action be taken by the relevant authorities in cases with insufficient evidence to initiate criminal proceedings. [8i] In July 2000, Major General Ananda Weerasekera was charged in relation to the deaths and disappearances of thousands of JVP supporters. Weerasekera and two of his subordinates were charged with murder, abduction and unlawful detention. [25e]

5.2.85 According to the United Nations Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances published in December 1999, officers of the armed forces that commit offences against civilians can be tried either by military or civil courts. In the case of a summary trial before a military court, the punishment is of a disciplinary nature, such as reduction in rank, or withholding of or delay in promotions. In the case of a court martial, the punishment can be imprisonment or discharge from service. If a prima facie case is established before a civil court, the officer has to be suspended from service. [6g]

See also Government Action: paragraphs 5.2.50 - 5.2.59; Sinhalese (and the JVP): paragraphs 5.8.1 - 5.8.5

Abuses by the LTTE

5.2.86 Members of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam have committed serious human rights abuses. These include:

- “ deliberate and arbitrary killings of Sinhalese civilians;
- “ summary executions of Tamils considered to be "traitors";
- “ torture and ill treatment of prisoners;
- “ boys and girls as young as 12 being forced to join the armed group;
- “ abductions for ransom; [3a]
- “ people being forced to provide guerrillas with food and money; [6c]
- “ routinely violating the civil liberties of the people in the areas of Sri Lanka which they control, operating an unfair court system, and discriminating against ethnic and religious minorities. [2d]
- “ use of excessive force in the war. The LTTE kill non-combatants, and are responsible for disappearances and detentions. [2d]

5.2.87 The LTTE have been responsible for a series of terrorist incidents and suicide attacks in Colombo. Among the more recent incidents are: up to 100 died when a truck laden with explosives rammed into the Central Bank building in January 1996; 57 were killed when 2 bombs exploded on a rush hour commuter train in July 1996; 18 were killed when an explosion damaged Colombo's business district in October 1997; fuel storage tanks were set on fire in November 1997; 9 were killed when a suicide bomber triggered an explosion in February 1998; and 36 were killed when a bomb on a bus exploded at a busy junction in March 1998. [7s]

5.2.88 Outside Colombo, in January 1998, a bomb exploded in Kandy, killing 16 and damaging the country's holiest Buddhist shrine. [7s]

Abuses by pro-Government Tamil militants

5.2.89 Former insurgent Tamil militant groups now aligned with the Government have committed extrajudicial killings in the eastern province and the Vavuniya area in the north. The military wing of the People's Liberation Organisation of Tamil Eelam (PLOTE) and the Razeek group were responsible for a number of killings. The security forces arm and use these militias to provide information, help identify LTTE insurgents and, in some cases, fight in military operations against the insurgents. The exact size of these militias is impossible to ascertain but they probably total fewer than 2,000 persons. Although the army in some instances takes steps to convert Tamil militia groups into regular army units, military oversight of these groups remains inadequate, and complaints about them continue, particularly in Vavuniya and Batticaloa. The militias gain access to internally displaced persons (IDPs) transit camps (mainly in Vavuniya) through a variety of means, including bribery and threats. It was impossible to determine the number of victims because of the secrecy with which these groups operated. Those killed by these militants included both LTTE operatives and civilians who failed to comply with extortion demands. [2d]

5.2.90 PLOTE and TELO have detained Tamils in the north and east, without handing them over to the police. PLOTE and TELO have also resorted to widescale extortion. [3a] The two groups are said to run more than 20 detention camps in the north and east of Sri Lanka. [7y] TELO and the Razeek group (which is affiliated to the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front) have been responsible for torture in the east of Sri Lanka, while PLOTE is reported to have inflicted torture on detainees in Vavuniya. PLOTE run at least 3 illegal places of detention where torture is reportedly routinely practised. [3e]

5.2.91 In May 1999, the Government forbade these groups from carrying arms in public and from stockpiling weapons, but this prohibition has generally not been effective. The killing of the military leader of PLOTE in September 1999 led to a reduced number of complaints against the group. [2c]

The Home Guards

5.2.92 Several paramilitary groups, referred to as home guards, and militia of political parties operate in the north and north east. They are Sinhalese and Muslim civilians recruited and armed by the police in order to take care of their own communities, and to defend themselves against extortion by the insurgents. They function mostly under the authority of the local police and in some areas they work alongside the army. Their functions are supposed to be purely defensive, but they often act as auxiliary forces. The security forces have never seriously attempted to restrain the activities of these groups or to dismantle and disarm them. In fact they have regarded them as useful allies in the fight against the LTTE. In some regions armed groups are said to be operating under the direct command of the armed forces. [6c]

OTHER GROUPS

5.3 WOMEN

5.3.1 Women in Sri Lanka have equal rights under national, civil and criminal law. However, individual issues relating to family law - such as divorce, child custody and inheritance - are adjudicated according to the customary law of each individual ethnic or religious group. This often results in discrimination against women. The minimum age of marriage for women is 18 years, except in the case of Muslims, who continue to follow their customary marriage practices. [2d]

5.3.2 Sexual assault, rape, and spousal abuse (often associated with alcohol) represent serious and pervasive forms of societal violence against women. The Government set up the Bureau for the Protection of Children and Women within the police force in 1994 to respond to calls for greater awareness and attention. In 1995 amendments to the Penal Code addressed sexual abuse and exploitation, and rape laws were modified to create a more equitable burden of proof and to make punishments more stringent. There are laws that cover sexual harassment in the workplace and sexual molestation. [2d]

5.3.3 There have been reports of rape by members of the security forces. For example, in July 1998, 5 soldiers and a policeman were sentenced to death, having been found guilty of the rape and murder of Krishanthi Kumaraswamy after she was detained at an army checkpoint in Jaffna in 1996. [7v] See also paragraphs 4.20, 5.2.31 and 5.2.79

5.3.4 The presidential directives for the welfare of detainees include special provisions to protect women. These include the provision that women taken into custody should be allowed to be accompanied to the place of questioning by a person of their choice and "as far as possible" should be placed in the custody of a women's unit of the relevant arm of the security forces. Nevertheless, each year a number of cases of rape by members of the security forces are reported, particularly from the north and east of the country. [3e] The United Nations Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances report that soldiers accused of sexual harassment of Tamil women have been reduced in rank, detained for up to 90 days and discharged from the army. [6g]

5.3.5 Amnesty International have referred to regular reports of ill treatment and torture of women in detention on suspicion of being members or sympathisers of the LTTE. [3e]

See also Torture: paragraphs 5.2.38 - 5.2.49

5.3.6 The Constitution guarantees equal employment opportunities to women in the public sector. At present, they have no legal protection against discrimination in the private sector where they are sometimes paid less than men for equal work and often experience difficulty in rising to supervisory positions. Women constitute approximately half of the formal work force. [2d]

5.3.7 Although there are no legal impediments to the participation of women in politics or government, the social mores in some communities limit women's activities outside the home. Nonetheless, Sri Lanka has a woman President. [2d]

5.4 CHILDREN

5.4.1 The Government demonstrates a strong commitment to children's rights and welfare through its extensive systems of public education and medical care. [2d]

5.4.2 There is a significant problem of child prostitution in certain coastal resort areas. The Government estimates that there are more than 2,000 active child prostitutes in the country and the Government has pushed for greater international co-operation to bring those guilty of paedophilia to justice. [2d]

5.4.3 The National Child Protection Authority (NCPA) Act was passed in 1998. Under this Act the definition of child abuse includes all acts of sexual violence against, trafficking in, and cruelty to children. The law also prohibits the use of children in exploitative labour or illegal activities, or in any act contrary to compulsory education regulations. The legislation further widened the definition of child abuse to include the involvement of children in war. The NCPA is composed of senior law enforcement officers as well as representatives from the education, medical, and legal professions and reports directly to the President. [2d]

5.4.4 In May 1998 Parliament passed amendments to laws protecting the rights of children in a bid to combat abuse. The use of children for begging, sexual intercourse and trafficking in drugs became offences punishable with a 5 year prison sentence. Courts will give priority to child abuse cases. [7q]

5.4.5 Regular employment of children occurs mainly in the informal sector and in family enterprises such as family farms, crafts, small trade establishments, eating houses, and repair shops. Children are also involved in the manufacture of coconut fibre products, bricks, fishing, wrapping tobacco, street trading and farming. Additionally thousands of children are believed to be employed in domestic service. [2d]

5.4.6 The minimum age for employment is 14 and children under the age of 16 may not be employed in any public enterprise in which life or limb is endangered. The law also permits the employment of younger children by their parents or guardians in limited agricultural work. [2d]

5.4.7 The LTTE recruits children for use in battlefield support functions and in combat. It has been confirmed that some of these children are as young as 13, and some are recruited forcibly. [2d] The United Nations Special Representative on Children and Armed Conflict, Mr Olara Otunnu, visited Sri Lanka in May 1998 to assess the impact of the conflict on children. He received a commitment from the LTTE that they would no longer enlist child soldiers, a pledge which would be monitored by the UN. [7r] In October 1998 a UNICEF official in Sri Lanka said there had been little progress in implementation. [8d] Amnesty International have reported that in late 1998, after hundreds of losses in fighting against the Sri Lankan Army in the Vanni region, the LTTE stepped up recruitment in an area of the Jaffna peninsula which they controlled. Scores of boys, some as young as 14 were forcibly recruited. [8m] In a report released on 3 February 2000, the Jaffna-based University Teachers for Human Rights (UTHR) claimed that the LTTE were continuing to pressure children to join their ranks. [22a]

5.4.8 The arrest and torture of children is not a common practice, but there have been several reports of torture of young Tamil children taken into custody on suspicion of being members of the LTTE, or in order to force a member of their family to hand him or herself over. Amnesty International's June 1999 report on torture details 2 cases of torture of girls. [3e]

5.4.9 In a report issued by Save the Children in August 1998, they estimate that 900,000 children living in the north and east of the country are directly affected by the continuing conflict, and that any embargo on humanitarian aid reaching the affected areas impacts hardest on children. [29]

5.5 RELIGIOUS MINORITIES

5.5.1 Discrimination based on religious differences is much less common in Sri Lanka than discrimination based on ethnic group or caste. In general, the members of the various faiths tend to be tolerant of each other's religious beliefs. [2d]

5.5.2 Buddhism is given the foremost position, but the Constitution also provides for the right of members of other faiths to practice their religion freely. The Government respects this right in practice and major religious festivals of all faiths are celebrated as public holidays. [2d] Theravada Buddhism is the predominant sect in Sri Lanka with an estimated 53,000 Buddhist Bhikkhus (monks) living in about 6,000 temples. The Sinhalese community, which is mainly Buddhist, is concentrated in and around Colombo and the south of Sri Lanka. [1]

5.5.3 Approximately 15% of the population of Sri Lanka are Tamil-speaking Hindus. [1]

5.5.4 Approximately 7% of the population are Muslims. In 1990, the LTTE expelled virtually the entire Muslim population, some 46,000 inhabitants, from their homes in the north of Sri Lanka. The LTTE expropriated Muslim homes, land and businesses, and threatened Muslim families with death if they attempted to return. They currently live in refugee camps. Other Tamil groups such as the EPRLF and the ENDLF have also launched attacks on Muslims from Trincomalee down to Batticaloa. Muslim communities continue to suffer from violence and displacement as a result of the civil war. [1], [2c] & [16a]

5.5.5 There is a sizeable Christian (mostly Roman Catholic) minority in Sri Lanka, which makes up approximately 8% of the population. It is scattered throughout Sri Lanka and consists of Tamil and Sinhalese converts, as well as the smaller Burgher community. Evangelical Christians, who constitute less than 1% of the population, have expressed concern that their attempts to proselytise are often met with hostility and harassment by the local Buddhist clergy, and others opposed to their work. The Methodists and the Dutch Reformed Church are also represented, as are Anglicans, Baptists and the Church of South India. [1] & [2c]

5.5.6 There is also a spiritual assembly for worshippers of the Bahá'í faith in Colombo. [1]

5.6 UP-COUNTRY TAMILS

5.6.1 There are approximately 1 million Tamils of comparatively recent Indian origin living in Sri Lanka. [2d] They were brought over from Tamil Nadu in India by the British colonial government to work on the estates in the central highlands. They are also known as "tea Tamils", [14a] "hill Tamils" or "Indian Tamils". [2d] The highest concentration of up-country Tamils is in the district of Nuwara Eliya, and they are also present in the districts of Matale, Kegalle, Kandy, Badulla, Ratnapura, Moneragala, Galle and Matara. [27]

5.6.2 The 1948 Ceylon Citizenship Act denied them nationality and stripped them of all civil rights. In 1964 (the Sirimavo-Shastri Pact) and in 1986, Sri Lanka and India agreed to extend citizenship to some of the up-country Tamils. Of the approximately 975,000 up-country Tamils, 422,500 received Indian nationality and moved to India, and 469,000 obtained Sri Lankan nationality. [14a]

5.6.3 There was a residue of 85,000 who opted for Indian citizenship, but remained in Sri Lanka. These people remain stateless and are unable to obtain a passport or own land. [14a]

5.6.4 This residue is one of the most neglected groups in Sri Lanka. They have been largely excluded from the political process and from employment opportunities in the government and private sector because of their statelessness and lack of National Identity Cards. They are unable to obtain passports, [16a] but a stateless Indian Tamil can obtain a temporary travel document (emergency certificate), with a limited period of validity, with which to travel to India and return to Sri Lanka. [14b]

5.6.5 They face discrimination, especially in the allocation of Government funds for education. Without National Identity Cards, they are also vulnerable to arrest by the security forces. However, the Government has stated that none of the up-country Tamils would be forced to leave Sri Lanka. [2d]

5.6.6 Up-country Tamils are at risk of being detained for prolonged periods by the security forces in the aftermath of LTTE attacks in Colombo and consequently of being subjected to torture. This is because they do not possess all the necessary identification documents, and because up-country Tamils are suspected of assisting the LTTE in their attacks on economic targets in the upcountry area. [3e]

5.6.7 During 1999, the Government introduced a programme to begin registering up-country Tamils. Some received identity cards, although the programme was reportedly not progressing quickly. [2d]

5.6.8 Politically, up-country Tamils are represented by the Ceylon Workers' Congress, which supported the previous UNP government and by the Up-Country People's Front, which supports the current PA government. [14a]

5.7 INDIGENOUS PEOPLE

5.7.1 The country's indigenous people, known as Veddas, number fewer than 1,000. Some prefer to maintain their isolated traditional way of life, and they are protected by the Constitution. There are no legal restrictions on their participation in the political or economic life of the nation. In August 1998, the Government fulfilled a long-standing Vemma demand when the President issued an order granting Veddass the right to hunt and gather in specific protected forest areas. The executive order granted the Veddass the freedom to protect their culture and to carry on their traditional way of life without hindrance. Under a pilot programme Veddass received special identity cards to enable their use of these forest areas. However, some Veddass still complain that they are being pushed off of their land. Although many Veddass continue to pursue a traditional way of life, visits by tourists have become an important source of income for the community. [2d]

5.8 SINHALESE (and the JVP)

5.8.1 The Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (People's Liberation Front) is a radical left wing party which in 1987 came out against the Indo-Sri Lankan Accord. It began a campaign of strikes, attacks and killings of public officials and members of the police and army. The violence reached its peak in 1988-90. A ruthless campaign to eliminate the JVP was launched, with death squads responsible for abductions and killings of suspected JVP supporters. The violence gradually subsided after November 1989 when the JVP leadership was eliminated. [14a] It has been estimated that the number of civilians killed in the lengthy struggle between the JVP and the Government might have been as high as 25,000 - 50,000. [1]

5.8.2 There was a brief revival of JVP activities in 1990, but the Government clamped down on this firmly. Reports of disappearances and extra-judicial executions of JVP members decreased after 1990, and ceased in 1993. [14a]

5.8.3 In the 1994 elections, the Sri Lanka Progressive Front, a party associated with the JVP, won one seat in Parliament. In the 1997 local elections the JVP won 101 seats on various local councils. [14a] In the Southern Provincial Council election of June 1999, the JVP won 7 of the 55 seats. [8n]

5.8.4 Since the PA Government came to office, there has been no further politically motivated prosecution of JVP members. JVP members are now only prosecuted under the ordinary law and only for serious offences punishable under the Sri Lankan Penal Code. [14a]

5.8.5 The rehabilitation programme introduced in 1990 brought a gradual reduction in the number of detainees. By 1996 all JVP members in custody had been tried and were serving their sentences, or had been released for lack of evidence. [14a]

ANNEX A: MAIN POLITICAL PARTIES AND ORGANISATIONS

ALL CEYLON TAMIL CONGRESS (ACTC)

Founded in 1944 and aims to secure Tamil self-determination. Won one seat in the general election of October 2000.

BAHAJUNA NIDAHAS PERAMUNA

Formed in 1990 and is a splinter group of the Sri Lanka Mahajana Party.

CEYLON WORKERS' CONGRESS (CWC)

Founded in 1939 and represents the interests of workers, mainly of Indian Tamil origin, on tea plantations.

COMMUNIST PARTY OF SRI LANKA (CPSL)

Founded in 1943 and advocates the establishment of a socialist society. It supports the national unity of Sri Lanka.

DEMOCRATIC PEOPLE'S LIBERATION FRONT (DPLF)

Has operated as a national political party since 1988 and is the political wing of the People's Liberation Organisation of Tamil Eelam (PLOTE). Won 3 seats in the 1994 general election.

DEMOCRATIC UNITED NATIONAL FRONT (DUNF)

Founded in 1991 by a dissident group of UNP politicians.

DEMOCRATIC UNITED NATIONAL LALITH FRONT (DUNLF)

Split from the DUNF in 1994.

DEMOCRATIC WORKERS' CONGRESS (DWC)

Formed in 1939 as a trade union and in 1978 as a political party. Aims to eliminate discrimination against the Tamil-speaking Sri Lankans of recent Indian origin.

DESHAPRIYA JANATHA VIYAPARAYA (DJV)

(Patriotic People's Movement) Militant Sinhalese group associated with the JVP. Now defunct.

DESHA VIMUKTHI JANATHA PARTY (DVJP)

(National Liberation People's Party) Has operated as a national political party since 1988. A constituent part of the People's Alliance.

EELAM NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC LIBERATION FRONT (ENDLF)

A Tamil group which supports the 1987 Indo-Sri Lankan peace accord. Has operated as a national political party since 1988. Now defunct.

EELAM PEOPLE'S DEMOCRATIC PARTY (EPDP)

A Tamil group formed in 1986. Supports the People's Alliance and won 9 of the 10 Parliamentary seats in Jaffna in the 1994 general election. Won 4 seats in the general election of October 2000, and agreed to help the PA form a coalition government, along with the NUA.

EELAM PEOPLE'S REVOLUTIONARY LIBERATION FRONT (EPRLF)

Founded in 1981, this is a left of centre Tamil rights group.

EELAVAR DEMOCRATIC FRONT previously known as the EELAM REVOLUTIONARY ORGANISATION OF STUDENTS (EROS)

A Tamil separatist group formed in 1975. Contested the 1989 and 1994 general elections. The EDF is also described as the political wing of EROS.

EKSATH LANKA JATHIKA PERAMUNA (ELJP)

Founded by former members of the UNP in 1985. Now defunct.

JANATHA VIMUKTHI PERAMUNA (JVP) (People's Liberation Front)

Formed in 1964 and was banned following a coup attempt in 1971. Regained legal status in 1977, but banned again in August 1983. Regained legal status in May 1988. A Marxist, Sinhalese group which has been effectively eradicated as a result of military action in 1989-90. Won the third highest number of seats (10) at the October 2000 general election.

LANKA SAMA SAMAJA PARTY (LSSP)

(Lanka Equal Society Party) Founded in 1935. Trotskyist. It is a constituent party of the People's Alliance.

LIBERATION TIGERS OF TAMIL EELAM (LTTE)

The main Tamil separatist terrorist organisation, commonly known as the "Tamil Tigers". Founded in 1974 and is currently led by Velupillai Prabakharan. The LTTE controls a large part of Sri Lanka's north and east. It is committed to establishing an independent state for Sri Lanka's Tamil minority, but in 1995 it agreed to accept something less than a separate independent state. The LTTE runs a parallel administration to that of the elected government.

LTTE FRONT ORGANISATIONS INCLUDE: -

World Tamil Association (WTA)

World Tamil Movement (WTM)

Federation of Associations of Canadian Tamils (FACT)

The Ellalan Force

The Sangilliyan Force

MAHAJANA EKSATH PERAMUNA (MEP)

(People's United Front) Founded in 1956. A left-wing party with Buddhist and Sinhalese support.

MUSLIM UNITED LIBERATION FRONT (MULF)

Operated as a national political party since 1988 and was set up to secure Muslim and Tamil rights under the Indo-Sri Lankan Peace Accord of July 1987.

NATIONAL UNITY ALLIANCE (NUA)

A mainly Muslim party that won four seats at the October 2000 general election. Agreed to help the PA form a coalition government along with the EPDP.

NATIONAL WORKERS' CONGRESS (NWC)

Formed after the 1994 general election.

NATIONAL WORKERS' UNION (NWU)

Founded in 1970 as a trade union party.

NAVA SAMA SAMAJA PARTY (NSSP)

(New Equal Society Party) A Trotskyist party founded in 1977.

PEOPLE'S ALLIANCE (PA)

Formed in 1993 as a left wing alliance which includes the LSSP, the SLFP and the SLMP. This is currently the ruling party in Sri Lanka.

PEOPLE'S FRONT OF THE LIBERATION TIGERS (PFLT)

Founded in 1989. Political wing of the LTTE.

PEOPLE'S LIBERATION ORGANISATION OF TAMIL EELAM (PLOTE)

Formed in 1980 as a breakaway group from the LTTE. A Tamil militant party which advocates a separate socialist Tamil state, but supported the former UNP Government's military operations against the LTTE. Its political wing is the Democratic People's Liberation Front (see above).

PODUJANA EKSATH PERAMUNA (PEP)

Now part of the People's Alliance, this party was formed to contest the 1993 provincial elections, in which it gained control of the western province.

SINGHALAYE MAHA SAMMATHA BHUMIPUTRA PAKSAYE

(Sinhalese Sons of the Soil Party) Formed by a former naval rating who attempted to assassinate the former Indian Prime Minister, Rajiv Gandhi, during a navy honour guard in Colombo in 1987.

SINGHALAYE NITHAHAS PERAMUNA (Sinhalese Freedom Front)

A nationalist, Buddhist party formed in 1994.

SRI LANKA FREEDOM PARTY (SLFP)

Formed in 1951. A democratic socialist party. It has been one of the two main political parties in Sri Lanka, the other being the United National Party.

SRI LANKA MAHAJANA (PEOPLE'S) PARTY

Founded by former members of the SLFP in 1984.

SRI LANKA MUSLIM CONGRESS (SLMC)

Founded in 1980 to represent the rights of Muslims in the Tamil eastern province. Operated as a national party since 1986, and won 7 seats in the 1994 general election.

TAMIL EELAM LIBERATION FRONT (TELF)

No record of any recent activity by this Tamil separatist group.

TAMIL EELAM LIBERATION ORGANISATION (TELO)

Formed in 1972 and is thought to be the second largest Tamil militant separatist group after the LTTE. Has operated as a national political party since 1988. It assists the Sri Lankan security forces in their fight against the LTTE. Won three seats in the October 2000 general election.

TAMIL NATIONAL ARMY (TNA)

Created by the Indian Peace Keeping Force in 1990. TNA cadres were drawn from the EPRLF, the ENDLF and the TELO. The TNA hunted down LTTE cadres, but after the withdrawal of the IPKF, the tables were turned and the LTTE began a hunt for members of the TNA. As far as is known, the TNA has not functioned since 1990.

TAMIL UNITED LIBERATION FRONT (TULF)

Founded in 1976 following the merger of the All Ceylon Tamil Congress and Federal Party, it has the declared aim of the peaceful creation of an independent Tamil state. It was the main Tamil political organisation and was the main opposition party in Sri Lanka after the 1977 elections. Its support has waned, but it won 5 seats in the 1994 elections and repeated the feat in the 2000 elections.

TAMIL UNITED NATIONAL FRONT (TUNF)

This is a combination of several parties including the TELO, EROS and PLOTE. The groups contested the 1994 elections under their separate titles. Now defunct.

TRI-STAR (or THREE STARS)

Formed shortly after the 1987 Indo-Sri Lankan Peace Accord. It comprised the PLOTE, TELO and the EPRLF. It supported the IPKF in return for a scheme of substantial devolution for the northern and eastern provinces. Now defunct.

UNITED NATIONAL PARTY (UNP)

Formed in 1946. A democratic socialist group and a mainly Sinhalese party. It has been one of the two main parties in Sri Lanka and had been in power for 17 years when it was defeated in the 1994 elections.

UP-COUNTRY PEOPLE'S FRONT

Represents the interests of workers, mainly of Indian Tamil origin, on tea plantations.

ANNEX B: PROMINENT PEOPLE - PAST AND PRESENT

CHANDRIKA BANDARANAIKE KUMARATUNGA

President of Sri Lanka. Daughter of Solomon and Sirimavo Bandaranaike. Appointed Prime Minister in August 1994 at the head of the People's Alliance Government. She contested the November 1994 presidential elections, which she won. Survived a suicide bomb attack in December 1999 and was re-elected President a few days later.

SIRIMAVO BANDARANAIKE

Widow of Solomon Bandaranaike, the founder of the Sri Lanka Freedom Party and former Prime Minister who was assassinated in 1959. Assumed the leadership of the SLFP after her husband's assassination and became Prime Minister. She was defeated in 1965, but was Prime Minister again between 1970 and 1977, and for a third term between 1994 and 2000. She resigned in August 2000, at the age of 84, citing ill health as one of her reasons. She died on 10 October 2000 shortly after casting her vote in the country's general election.

JUNIUS JAYAWARDENE

Appointed Prime Minister when the UNP won the 1977 general election. In 1978 he became the country's first executive President following a Constitutional amendment. In 1987 he signed the Indo-Sri Lankan peace accord with Rajiv Gandhi, the Indian Prime Minister. He remained President until January 1989.

VELUPILLAI PRABHAKARAN

Leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. In 1992 he was charged in absentia in Madras in connection with the assassination of the Indian Prime Minister, Rajiv Gandhi. In 1997 he was charged with other militants with more than 700 criminal acts of terrorism by the Sri Lankan Government.

RANASINGHE PREMADASA

UNP Prime Minister of Sri Lanka under President Jayawardene. He was elected President in December 1988 and sworn in the following month. He was assassinated by a bomb explosion in Colombo on 1 May 1993. The LTTE were blamed though they denied involvement.

RATNASIRI WICKREMANAYAKE

Became Prime Minister after the resignation of Sirimavo Bandaranaike in August 2000. Was sworn in for a second term after the general election of 10 October 2000.

RANIL WICKREMASINGHE

Minister of Industries, Science and Technology under President Premadasa, he was appointed Prime Minister following the latter's assassination in 1993. Leader of the UNP.

ANNEX C: CHRONOLOGY

1948

Ceylon gains independence from the United Kingdom.

1956

Sri Lanka Freedom Party wins the general election; Solomon Bandaranaike becomes Prime Minister.

1959

Sirimavo Bandaranaike succeeds her husband as SLFP leader and Prime Minister.

1971

A JVP uprising is suppressed.

1972

The country becomes known as Sri Lanka.

1976

Formation of the Tamil United Liberation Front, calling for a separate Tamil state.

1977

General election is held, won by the UNP. Jayawardene becomes Prime Minister. Civil unrest between Sinhalese and Tamils.

1978

New Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka comes into force.

Jayawardene becomes the country's first executive President. The Tamil language is recognised in the Constitution.

1979-83

Continuing ethnic violence and the imposition of a state of emergency.

1982

October: Jayawardene re-elected as President

December: referendum held to seek agreement to prolong the life of Parliament until 1989.

1983-4

State of emergency declared and mounting Tamil terrorist activity.

1986

Further violence in the north of Sri Lanka and bomb attacks in Colombo.

1986-7

Government offensives launched against the militant Tamils in the north and east.

April 1987: Terrorist attacks against the civil population.

29 July 1987: Indo-Sri Lankan peace accord signed. Indian Peace Keeping Force arrive.

October 1987: IPKF attack the LTTE and regain control of Jaffna. Re-emergence of the JVP which launched an anti-accord campaign.

1988

Presidential elections, won by the UNP candidate, Premadasa.

1989

State of emergency, in force since May 1983, repealed. The UNP win the February general elections. IPKF begins its withdrawal from Sri Lanka. State of emergency re-imposed in June in response to renewed JVP violence.

1989-90

JVP effectively destroyed as a political force by Sri Lankan security forces.

1990

March: the last troops of the IPKF leave Sri Lanka. LTTE hostilities renewed and Government offensive launched against Tamil strongholds in the Jaffna peninsula.

1991

Further violence and bomb attacks. Assassination of the senior cabinet minister, Wijeratne.

LTTE proscribed in India following the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi, the former Indian Prime Minister.

1992

Massacre of Muslim villagers by suspected LTTE guerrillas in the north east.

1993

Assassination of the DUNF leader Athulathmudali, and of President Premadasa.

1994

16 August: General election and defeat of UNP Government. Mrs Chandrika Kumaratunga appointed Prime Minister, leading the People's Alliance.

9 November: Presidential election. Mrs Kumaratunga is elected, and her mother, Sirimavo Bandaranaike, is appointed Prime Minister.

1995

Peace talks held with the LTTE, but soon break down. Major offensives launched in the Jaffna peninsula and the town of Jaffna is recaptured.

1996

Escalation in LTTE terrorist violence. 100 killed and 1,400 injured in a bomb attack on the Central Bank in Colombo. State of emergency extended to the whole country.

1997

March: The Government is successful in the local elections, which is seen as an endorsement of its devolution plans.

July: The state of emergency in the south of the country is lifted.

1998

26 January: The Government banned the LTTE after a bomb attack on the Temple of the Tooth in Kandy.

29 January: Local elections held in the recaptured Tamil areas.

4 August: State of Emergency imposed on the whole country, and the provincial elections are postponed.

December: End of Operation Jayasikuru and launch of Operation Rivi Bala.

1999

January: Provincial elections held in North West Province amidst violence and reports of fraud, vote-rigging and intimidation.

The Supreme Court rules that the President's postponement of the provincial elections in August 1998 was unconstitutional. Elections held on 6 April, and the Southern Provincial Council elections in June. The PA win 6 of the councils.

March: Operation Rana Gosa launched.

November: Heavy fighting between LTTE and Government forces. Hundreds killed and LTTE recaptures territory previously lost.

December: President Kumaratunga survives an assassination attempt and is re-elected President three days later.

2000

January-August: Efforts at brokering peace with the LTTE are discussed by the two main political parties.

April-May: LTTE capture the strategic Elephant Pass and close in on Jaffna.

May: Due to the precarious military situation, the authorities put the country on a war footing and assume sweeping new powers under the Public Security Act.

May-September: The Sri Lankan Army prevent the LTTE from capturing the whole of the Jaffna peninsula and go on the offensive.

10 October: General Election held. The PA retains power but falls short of a majority. The PA forms a coalition government after support from the EPDP and NUA. Sirimavo Bandaranaike dies on polling day, shortly after casting her vote. Ratnasiri Wickremanayake is sworn in as Prime Minister for a second term, having replaced Mrs Bandaranaike in August 2000.

24 December: The LTTE announced a unilateral month-long ceasefire. This is later extended for a third time until 24 April 2001.

2001

28 February: The LTTE are among 21 militant groups proscribed in the United Kingdom.

23 April: The LTTE announce the end of their four-month ceasefire, blaming the government for the failure of peace efforts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

[1] Europa World Year Book 1998, Volume II

[2] US State Department, Sri Lanka Country Report on Human Rights Practices

(c) 1999, issued February 2000

(d) 2000, issued February 2001

[3] Amnesty International

(a) Wavering Commitment to Human Rights, August 1996

(b) Sri Lanka: Government's response to widespread "disappearances" in Jaffna, November 1997

(c) Implementation of the Recommendations of the UN Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances following their visits to Sri Lanka in 1991 and 1992, February 1998

(d) Urgent Action, Torture, ASA 37/19/98, 6 August 1998

(e) Torture in Custody, June 1999

(f) New Emergency Regulations - erosion of human rights protection, ASA 37/19/00, July 2000

[4] Amnesty International, Annual Reports, Sri Lanka

(a) 1984

(b) 1988

(c) 1992

(d) 1993

(e) 1998

[5] Research Directorate, Immigration and Refugee Board, Ottawa, Canada

(a) Information from four specialists on current conditions in the North and East, the Vavuniya area and Colombo, 21 July 1997

[6] United Nations

(a) Consideration of reports submitted by states parties under Article 19 of the Convention against Torture, Initial reports of States parties due in 1995, Sri Lanka, 21 November 1997 (CAT/C/28/Add.3)

(b) Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, United Nations Commission on Human Rights 12 January 1998 (E/CN.4/1998/43)

(c) Report of the Special Rapporteur on extra-judicial, summary or arbitrary executions, United Nations

Economic and Social Council, 12 March 1998 (E/CN.4/1998/68/Add.2)

(d) Consideration of reports submitted by states parties under Article 19 of the Convention against Torture, Initial report of Sri Lanka, United Nations Committee against Torture, 25 May 1998 (CAT/C/SR.339)

(e) Consideration of reports submitted by states parties under Article 19 of the Convention against Torture, Initial report of Sri Lanka, United Nations Committee against Torture, 26 May 1998 (CAT/C/SR.341)

(f) Letter dated 4 January 2000

(g) Report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, United Nations Commission on Human Rights 21 December 1999 (E/CN.4/2000/64Add.1)

(h) Letter dated 2 August 2000 (with covering letter dated 22 August 2000)

[7] Reuters News Service

(b) Sri Lanka Army takes rebel area in new offensive: 7 March 1999

(c) Sri Lanka slaps formal ban on Tamil Tigers: 26 January 1998

(d) Battle of influence in northern Sri Lanka polls: 25 December 1997

(e) Sri Lanka Tamil party wins case to contest polls: 16 January 1998

(i) Sri Lanka Army recaptures areas in north west: 23 March 1999

(j) Sri Lanka swears in first Jaffna mayor after 14 years: 11 March 1998

(k) Sri Lanka rebels send strong message with mayor slaying: 18 May 1998

(l) Rebels explode bomb in Sri Lanka, kill 12: 11 September 1998

(m) Sri Lanka declares emergency, poll delay seen: 4 August 1998

(n) Sri Lanka delays crucial local elections: 5 August 1998

(p) Sri Lanka Government wins hard fought poll: 7 April 1999

(q) Sri Lanka strengthens laws to combat child abuse: 6 May 1998

(r) UN to monitor Sri Lanka rebel pledge on children: 9 May 1998

(s) Latest Sri Lanka blast bloodiest in two years: 6 March 1998

(t) Sri Lanka court remands 41 over Tamil killings: 18 February 1998

(u) Human skeletons found in pit in Sri Lanka's Jaffna: 12 April 1999

(v) Sri Lanka soldiers sentenced to death for murder: 3 July 1998

(w) Officials to visit Jaffna for Sri Lanka grave probe: 13 August 1998

(x) Jurists accuse Sri Lankan forces of killings: 9 September 1998

(y) Sri Lanka must shut illegal detention camps - Amnesty: 4 September 1998

[8] Reuters News Service

- (a) Editors say Sri Lanka drifting towards police state: 1 March 1998
- (c) Sri Lanka grave probe delayed, no security - Amnesty: 30 October 1998
- (d) Children still victims of Sri Lanka war - UNICEF: 26 October 1998
- (e) Sri Lanka lawmaker slams "mass arrests" of Tamils: 7 April 1998
- (f) Sri Lanka sets date for postponed regional polls: 8 February 1999
- (g) Sri Lanka jails principal, soldiers for abductions: 10 February 1999
- (h) Violence mars key Sri Lanka regional poll: 25 January 1999; Sri Lanka ruling coalition wins key poll: 26 January 1999
- (i) Sri Lanka defends decision to end key war campaign: 5 December 1998
- (j) Sri Lanka military says suffers big setback: 1 October 1998
- (k) Sri Lanka troops capture fresh rebel territory: 16 May 1999
- (l) Sri Lanka indicts policemen over disappearances: 26 May 1999
- (m) Amnesty says Sri Lanka rebels using children in war: 31 May 1999
- (n) Sri Lanka ruling coalition wins regional poll: 11 June 1999
- (p) Sri Lanka mass grave skeletons identified: 18 June 1999
- (q) Sri Lanka praised for exhuming mass graves: 22 June 1999
- (r) Sri Lanka set to exhume alleged mass grave: 15 July 1999
- (s) Sri Lanka journalists protest attack on colleagues: 21 July 1999
- (t) Final tally of votes in Sri Lanka's General Election: 12 October 2000
- (u) New coalition government formed in Sri Lanka: 14 October 2000
- (v) Sri Lanka declares amnesty for army deserters: 27 February 2001
- (w) Tamil Tigers say British ban is "severe blow to peace and justice": 1 March 2001

[9] BBC Monitoring Service: Asia-Pacific

- (a) Tamil party wins local elections: 2 February 1998
- (c) President makes concession on negotiating with Tamil rebels: 4 August 1998

[10] The Sri Lanka Monitor, The British Refugee Council

(a) April 1998

(b) August 1998

(c) September 1998

(d) December 2000

(e) February 2001

[11] Letters from the Refugee Council

(a) 5 February 1998

(b) 14 August 1998

[12] Information from the Federal Ministry of the Interior, Germany, 9 May 2000.

[13] Caught in the Middle: a study of Tamil torture survivors coming to the UK from Sri Lanka.

Issued by the Medical Foundation, June 2000

[14] Ministry of Foreign Affairs at The Hague

(a) Report, 24 July 1997

(b) Report, 30 September 1999

(c) Letter, 20 December 1999

[15] Foreign and Commonwealth Office

(b) Advice, 6 April 2000

(c) Advice, 30 March 2001

[16] UNHCR

(a) Background Paper on Refugees and Asylum Seekers from Sri Lanka, Centre for Documentation and Research, March 1997

(b) Background Paper on Sri Lanka for the European High Level Working Group on Asylum and Migration, March 1999

[17] The Daily News

(a) Colombo Tamils tell GL: harassment reduced: 22 October 1998

[18] Human Rights Watch, World Report 1999: Sri Lanka - Human Rights Developments

[19] Refusing Sanctuary: Ethical Ambiguities in Refugee Determination and Repatriation of

Tamil Refugees, Tamil Information Centre, January 1999 (extracts only)

[20] Extract from the Official Report of the Sri Lankan Parliament, 24 June 1998

Immigrants and Emigrants Act 1984 (extract)

Immigrants and Emigrants (Amendment) Act 1998 (extract)

[21] BBC News Online

- (a) Tamil politician shot dead: 5 January 2000
- (b) Sri Lanka devolution plan: 20 January 2000
- (c) Sri Lankan President partially blinded: 30 December 1999
- (d) Fresh fighting in Sri Lanka: 6 October 2000
- (e) Hundreds held during Colombo curfew: 7 January 2000
- (f) Arrests in Sri Lanka attack: 12 March 2000
- (g) Sri Lanka appeals to peace critics: 9 April 2000
- (h) Push for Sri Lankan peace: 24 May 2000
- (i) Sri Lanka talks 'with conditions': 5 June 2000
- (j) Tigers kept off devolution councils: 18 June 2000
- (k) Peace plan to include Tamil rebels: 21 June 2000
- (l) Sri Lanka army 'forced back': 12 May 2000
- (m) Bomb kills Sri Lankan minister: 7 June 2000
- (n) Sri Lankan president calls for restraint: 8 June 2000
- (o) Sri Lanka's tough laws condemned: 5 May 2000
- (p) Jaffna residents denied information: 28 June 2000
- (q) Free again: Sri Lanka's press: 2 July 2000
- (r) Colombo reimposes media restrictions: 3 July 2000
- (s) Veteran Sri Lankan PM resigns: 10 August 2000
- (t) Setback for Sri Lanka peace hopes: 8 August 2000
- (u) Q&A: Sri Lanka's election: 9 October 2000
- (v) Kumaratunga forms coalition: 13 October 2000
- (w) Jaffna civilian flights restored: 7 November 2000
- (x) Jaffna battle rages on: 17 January 2001
- (y) Sri Lanka rebels declare ceasefire: 21 December 2000
- (z) Annan urges Tamil massacre probe: 28 October 2000

[22] The Independent

(a) Tamil Tigers break UN pledge on child soldiers: 4 February 2000

[23] Keesing's Record of World Events

(a) Sri Lanka: December 1999

(b) Sri Lanka: April 2000

[24] <http://www.cnn.com/WORLD/election.watch/asiapcf/srilanka.html>

[25] CNN.com/asianow

(a) Sri Lankan blast kills civilians, security officials: 27 January 2000

(b) More than 12,500 civilians trapped, 78 killed in Sri Lanka: 3 April 2000

(c) Sri Lankan troops reportedly destroy rebel position: 5 July 2000

(d) Sri Lanka's Tamil Tigers admit 35 killed in major reversal: 7 July 2000

(e) Retired general to face trial for disappearance in Sri Lanka: 18 July 2000

(f) Hundreds killed as Sri Lanka troops, rebels clash: 4 September 2000

(g) Sri Lankan editor given two-year jail term for defaming president: 5 September 2000

(h) 8 killed, 21 hurt in suicide bombing in Sri Lanka's capital: 15 September 2000

(i) Tamil rebels make second attempt against Sri Lankan army position: 20 September 2000

(j) Gunmen kill Tamil journalist in Sri Lanka: 20 October 2000

(k) Sri Lankan troops link Jaffna Peninsula's two largest cities: 31 December 2000

(l) Tamil Tigers extend truce, issue warning: 22 March 2001

(m) Tamils end Sri Lanka ceasefire: 23 April 2001

[26] The Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka - First Schedule Article 5

[27] International Centre for Ethnic Studies Sri Lanka - Maternal Nutrition and Health Status

[28] Médecins Sans Frontières - MSF Concerns Regarding the Humanitarian Situation in Sri Lanka: 10 December 1999

[29] Save the Children - Children affected by armed conflict in north and east Sri Lanka: August 1998

[30] CIA World Factbook 1999

<http://www.odci.gov/cia/publications/factbook/ce.html>

[31] British High Commission Colombo - Advice - 16 February 2000

[32] Danish Immigration Service

Report on fact-finding mission to Sri Lanka: 16 November - 5 December 1998

[33] <http://www.xe.com/ucc/>

[34] Extract from ICRC Appeals document 2001: ICRC operations in Sri Lanka